Senate approves landmark nuclear arms treaty

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - Six and a half years after negotiations began, the Senate Friday approved the landmark medium-range missile treaty with the Soviet Union, marking history's first cutback in offensive nuclear weapons.

After systematically rejecting a last flurry of amendments, a whopping bipartisan majority voted 93-6 to approve the first nuclear arms accord between the superpowers since the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty signed by Richard Nixon and Leonid Brezhnev.

The vote came just in time for the ratification documents to be completed at the White House and rushed to Moscow where President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev will conclude the agreement at the summit next week.

As the final tally was announced, crowds filling the visitors galleries above the Senate floor stood in prolonged applause.

Moments later, Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., telephoned news of the vote to Reagan in Helsinki, Finland, and were promptly invited to join the presidential party in Moscow. In a statement released in Helsinki, Reagan said the overwhelming vote "clearly shows support for our arms-control objectives."

White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr. is expected to depart for Moscow Saturday (with the ratification documents, to be on hand when Reagan arrives in the Soviet capital Sunday. Plans call for the two Senate leaders to go to Moscow early next week.

"This is really America's treaty," Dole declared after talking with the president. "It's in the best interest of the American people."

Byrd called the treaty's approval a testament to "the steadfastness of NATO" and to bipartisan cooperation in U.S. foreign policy.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said that while it eliminates only 4 percent of the superpowers' nuclear warheads, it "lays the foundation (to) enable us to move on ... to other treaties that can substantially reduce the scale, cost and dangers of this arms race."

The margin of approval surprised even optimistic supporters, who had expected perhaps 10 senators to oppose the final resolution of ratification.

In the end, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who led efforts to tack killer amendments to the treaty text, was joined only by Republican Sens. Gordon Humphrey of New Hampshire, Steve Symms of Idaho, and Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming, and one conservative Democrat, Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina.

Despite the resounding endorsement, some Republicans remained angry over an amendment that asserted the Senate's right to interpret treaties, as well as over a late-night clash with Byrd Thursday. The Senate majority leader accused some Republican senators of bogging down ratification with "Mickey Mouse amendments" and implied he would block a vote if they persisted with proposals that threatened the interpretation provision he sponsored.

The fight arose over an amendment, sponsored by Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., that would have declared that the United States would be bound by no treaty interpretation that did not equally apply to the Soviet Union.

Friday, Wilson called Byrd's criticism of Republicans "a temper tantrum" and "one of the most outrageous dema-

Symms, McClure split Idaho vote

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Idaho senators James McClure and Steve Symms split Friday on the vote to ratify the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces (INF) treaty, with McClure favoring it and Symms one of five senators voting against it.

But even McClure said he had his reservations. In a news release issued after the vote, McClure said he was disturbed by the Senate's unwillingness to ratify the treaty.

Soviet rights record weak, says Reagan

The Associated Press

HELSINKI, Finland - President Reagan, underscoring a key theme for the superpower summit, said Friday reforms championed by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev are "new and good" but that the Kremlin still falls short of meeting international standards on human rights and freedom.

Two days before his arrival in Moscow, Reagan said, "Soviet practice does not - or does not yet - measure up to Soviet commitment" under the 1975 East-West agreement known as the Helsinki Final Act.

The Senate gave Reagan a big pre-summit boost Friday when it ratified the treaty outlawing medium-range nuclear missiles which the president and Gorbachev signed at their Washington summit last December.

Reagan issued a statement saying he was "very pleased" with the Senate vote, which he said "clearly shows support for our arms reduction objectives."

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., who telephoned the president in Helsinki at their final Act.

Another aide leaves Justice Department

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Assistant Attorney General Charles J. Cooper, a central figure in the Justice Department, announced his resignation Friday and said his departure is "wholly unrelated to the controversy surrounding Attorney General Edwin Meese III."

Cooper, the head of the department's Office of Legal Counsel, told Meese in a letter that it was his "longstanding plan to leave the Department of Justice this summer to pursue the private practice of law. The calendar is unyielding, and the time has come for me to act on that plan."

Department sources said Meese failed to persuade Cooper to postpone the announcement. His resignation, effective July 8, follows the departure of a number of high-ranking officials - the deputy attorney general and head of the criminal division, who resigned; the head of the public affairs office, who was fired; and the associate attorney general, who became a federal appeals court judge.

Cooper told Meese that he was "justly aware ... that this is a

Voters should receive tax break, official says

The Associated Press

BOISE - In the wake of the worst voter turnout for any statewide election ever, an Idaho income tax credit is being proposed to spur more voters to the polls.

Unofficial turnout in Tuesday's lackluster primary was less than 25 percent of Idaho's 520,000 registered voters. Initial checks by state officials showed turnout running about 22 percent in the larger counties, and it was 15 percent in Ada, the state's largest.

When 15 percent of the people are dictating to the other 85 percent, who their leaders are voter tax credit.

Syrian forces advance into Beirut slums

The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - Hundreds of Syrian soldiers wearing bulletproof vests over combat fatigues moved into the south Beirut slums Friday, halting a three-week war between rival Shiite Muslim militias that killed nearly 300 people.

The intervention, under a Syrian agreement with Iran, is expected to increase pressure for the release of the 13 foreign hostages in Lebanon, who include nine Americans.

Most are believed held in the slums by extremists linked to the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God, which gained control of nearly all of south Beirut in the battle with the Amal militia that began May 6.

Hezbollah and Amal, a mainstream group, allied with Syria, stopped shooting as the soldiers began moving in at 11 a.m.

A few hours earlier, Syria's four top generals in Lebanon escaped harm in an ambush in a south Beirut neighborhood controlled by Hezbollah.

Dozens of bullets hit the generals' Mercedes, but its armor plating saved them. "Otherwise, there would have been no survivors," a police spokesman said.

About 900 Syrian infantrymen in three groups advanced on foot into the 16 square miles of tin-roofed huts and cement-block apartments next to the Beirut airport.

They carried machine guns and shoulder-fired grenade launchers. Following the first group of Syrians were 52 Lebanese policemen with automatic rifles.

Syrian soldiers set up five checkpoints along a disengagement line between the Shiyah neighborhood, held by Amal, and the Hezbollah-controlled Ghebeins district, where the generals were ambushed.

The line stretched through two miles of gutted shops, smoldering wrecked cars and bullet-scattered cement-block shanties. Broken power cables dangled on streets littered with glass shards and spent cartridges.

Young Hezbollah fighters on the slum's fringes aimed intently at a group of 20 American and British journalists, who traveled from Damascus with Syrian escorts to cover the deployment.

"I feel like a juicy T-bone steak in front of a hungry man," said one reporter.

Construction boom fuels state economy; tax receipts are up

The Associated Press

BOISE - The resurgence that started Idaho's journey out of the economic doldrums a year ago is being driven now by a major construction boom that analysts believe will fuel a relatively robust but short-term surge.

The new burst of economic activity is even padding state tax receipts to the point that Andrus administration analysts now concede a number of developments have probably made their revenue estimates last winter too conservative. They predict the state will have a significant surplus at the end of the current budget year. But the government's new "three-year" economic forecast, offering the first look at projections for 1990, also indicated Idaho's overall prosperity could well bypass the rural areas of the state, widening the gap between what has become known as the Two Idahos.

The forecast shows building activity and the financial impacts the finished projects will have should keep the state growing overall well into 1989. Analysts said the boom is the reason for the larger-than-expected state tax surplus when the budget year ends June 30.

Instead of the $663.5 million originally expected from the tax system, the Division of Financial Management said it now appears the budget year will close out "very positively with several million dollars more."

But the continued upbeat outlook for Idaho after more than a half decade of economic decline and stagnation seemed centered on the state's handful of urban areas. The agriculture-driven rural economy could be hit with a significant blow this year, the forecast said. Farm proprietors' income this year is expected to take its biggest dive since 1981, largely due to the drought.

A rising livestock market and timely rains, coupled with judicious use of limited irrigation water, allowed farmers to survive the 1987 drought in substantially better financial shape than expected. Farm income, augmented by government payments, exceeded $460 million.

But 1988 farm income is projected to plummet by 9.5 percent to under $420 million, slapping hard at small communities relying on the state's largest industry for their economic survival.

"A drought this summer would not only impact yields and plantings, but it would also make long-term acreage-reduction programs look more attractive," the analysts said. "Livestock producers will also be impacted if a drought materializes because grazing on federal lands would be restricted."

For the state as a whole, however, the spring forecast was generally brighter than what many believed was a relatively optimistic forecast five months ago.

Unemployment, which averaged below 6 percent last year for the first time in the 1980s, should plunge to an average of 5.3 percent this year while the total workforce expands by more than 1 percent to nearly 430,000, the forecast said.

That means expanding job opportunities with the nonagricultural employment growing by nearly 1.5 percent this year to strations of arrogance. I've ever seen on or off the Senate floor," the statement released in Helsinki, the president himself indicated he is not ready to let the interpretation dispute drop.

"I continue to have concerns about the constitutionality of some provisions of the resolution of ratification," he declared, "particularly those dealing with interpretation, and I will communicate with the Senate on these matters in due course."

In a dispute over the 16-year-old anti-ballistic treaty, the administration has attempted to reinterpret the terms to allow testing of Reagan's "Star Wars" missile defense system. Senate Democrats have insisted that the stricter interpretation understood by the Senate at the time of ratification be honored.

The new medium-range missile pact, signed by Reagan and Gorbachev in Washington last December, requires the destruction of some 2,611 missiles with the capability of delivering nearly 4,000 nuclear warheads.

All missiles with ranges between 600 and 3,000 miles when deployed on launchers or in storage must be destroyed.

Completion of the Senate debate before the opening of the Moscow summit gave a boost to a meeting whose importance has waned with the acknowledgment of a new accord covering long-range missiles is beyond reach.

In an unusual turnaround, Senate Democrats were largely responsible for the timely approval by overriding conservative Republicans willing to drag debate on in Washington while Reagan met Gorbachev in Moscow.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., who led the fight against the declaration of Senate authority in treaty interpretation, contended that the Senate action is both unconstitutional and contradictory to international law.

He offered two amendments Friday seeking to temper the measure authored by Byrd, but was defeated by votes of 67-30 and 64-33.

Besides defeating Specter's two amendments in the final hours of debate, senators rejected an amendment by Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., requiring the president to certify to the Senate whether the Soviet Union is in compliance with the 1976 Helsinki agreement on security and cooperation in Europe.

Although the small band of opponents was buried beneath the massive support for the agreement, the Senate's five-month examination showed the pact to have flaws the administration had not realized.

Final debate was delayed several days while Secretary of State George P. Shultz returned to Geneva for a follow-up meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze to resolve questions raised by the Senate Armed Services and Intelligence committees.

As a result, all efforts to amend the text of treaty were defeated, although senators added amendments to the resolution of ratification correcting technical errors, directing the president to inform the Senate of initiatives toward a new strategic arms agreement, and requiring the president to assert to the Soviets the U.S. concerns on human rights in that nation.

U.S. and Soviet inspectors will begin monitoring the removal of the banned missiles 30 days after the treaty goes into effect.

Within 90 days, all Soviet short-range missiles and all launchers must be removed from operational areas to their destruction sites, and U.S. inspectors will have the right to visit the facilities in East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

In addition, to making as many as 20 short-notion inspections at designated sites per year during the first years of the treaty, U.S. inspectors will be based at an SS-20 assembly facility at Volknak, near the Ural Mountains, and a Soviet team will be positioned at a Pershing facility at Magma, Utah.

Besides the precedent-setting arrangements for on-site inspection, the Soviets agreed in the treaty that they will open shelves so that American satellites can photograph SS-25 missile facilities.

The long-range SS-25 poses special verification problems, for it is manufactured in the same facility and is outwardly very similar to the banned triple-warhead SS-20.

ingress to show the Soviets they are expected to abide by its terms.

"On balance, I think there is more good than bad in the treaty," McClure said.

Some issued a brief statement saying they hope the treaty does not undermine ongoing arms limitation negotiations. But he said he wanted to remind everyone that the United States got to the position it is in now from a position of strength, not weakness.

By violating every past treaty agreed to by the two entities, the Senate chose to ignore such past digressions in its ratification of resolution, said McClure.

"The Senate repeatedly, instead of taking strong positions, took positions saying, 'Well, we really don't expect the Soviet Union to be bound by this treaty, we expect the United States to be.' I'll never understand why the Senate did that," McClure said.

When acting on a treaty, the Senate agrees to what is called a resolution of ratification. If the Senate decides to make advice and consent conditional, the conditions are listed in the resolution.

McClure said the provisions he found objectionable were in the resolution.

"The resolution is changeable; the treaty is not. Maybe when we get into the debate on the merits of the issue, not affected by whether a treaty will or will not be ratified, maybe better sense will prevail."

finally push the off-farm jobs above the peak set as the 1970s boom drew to a close.

Growth in personal income should nearly match the inflation rate, says the buying power of Idahoans will not be eroded, the forecast said. And in the coming two years, personal income should grow by 6 percent or more annually, well in excess of anticipated inflation so buying power will actually increase.

The building activity, highlighted by a regional mall and major highway projects in Boise, a dog track in Post Falls and multimillion-dollar road and motel projects in Idaho Falls, was in large measure the force behind the revenue surplus unanticipated by Andrus.

Revenue from the personal income tax, which accounts for over 40 percent of all general state revenues, is expected to hit the target for the current budget year.

The boost in sales tax revenues was fostered by the building boom, the analysts said, and will not be sustained.

"But the commercial projects under construction should pick up some of the slack once the boom ends, suggesting the chronic weakness in Idaho's sales tax that has been experienced for the past several years may be behind us," they predicted.

At the same time, the slide in Idaho's per capita income in relation to national per capita income should finally end in 1988 and stabilize the Idaho rate at just under 75 percent of the national level.

The lack of an impact from last October's stock market crash, kept the recovery alive in Idaho.

Many economists feared the crash not only would stall the recovery, but also plunge the nation into the kind of recession that put a chokehold on the Idaho economy in the early 1980s.

But, the government analysts said, "The many studies... The potential for consumer retrenchment following last October's stock market crash did not materialize, and the long-term effect of the construction activity under way will boost the state's economy."

The building activity, highlighted by a regional mall and major highway projects in Boise, a dog track in Post Falls and multimillion-dollar road and motel projects in Idaho Falls, was in large measure the force behind the revenue surplus unanticipated by Andrus.

ki with the news, accepted Reagan's invitation to fly to Moscow on Tuesday to witness a ratification ceremony the following day.

Reagan made his human rights speech during an investigation of about 1,200 people in the water-tightly designed marble auditorium of Finlandia Hall, where the Helsinki accords were signed by 35 nations, including the Soviet Union and United States.

Under the agreement, the Soviets pledged to provide more liberty for their people and those in Eastern Europe. And yet, 13 years later, Reagan said, the cases of divided families and blocked marriages remain on the East-West agenda, while Russians trying to emigrate are subjected to artificial quotas and arbitrary rulings.

chuev's twin campaigns of "glasnost," or openness, and "perestroika," the restructuring of the economy, are "words that to our ears, have a particularly welcome sound."

time of controversy for you and for the Department, and thus is not the most opportune moment for members of the Department's leadership to be departing. I am no less mindful that some will be tempted to characterize my resignation in ways that suit their purposes.

"For these reasons, I hasten to stress that... I am carrying through with plans formed in a calmer time and based on a host of personal and national considerations wholly unrelated to the controversy of today," he added.

In his "Dear Ed" letter, Cooper, who started at the Justice Department in 1981 as an aide to Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Huelskamp, had become head of the Office of Legal Counsel, praised Meese for his focus on original intent, federalism and opposition to race- or sex-based quotas.

Meese in turn cited Cooper for his "keen intellect and sound judgment," adding that his "loyalty, support and special vote of confidence are greatly appreciated."

Cooper, 36, said in an interview that he had "just begun" looking for a position with a private law firm. "I have no plans. I don't even have any material," he said. "I'm just eager to survey the opportunities that may be available to me."

He had initial discussions with King & Spalding, an Atlanta-based firm with an office here, and McLean, Woods, Battle & Boothe, a Richmond-based firm that also has a Washington office.

Asked why he would leave a job he described as "the best job for a lawyer," Cooper said, "I don't plan to try to catalogue the personal and professional considerations that have played on my mind in this, but I'm sure it will not come as any kind of surprise that among them is a desire to reacquire myself with my wife and two young sons and also to provide for them."

A former law clerk to Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, Cooper has been at the center of some of the department's most interesting and controversial issues.

"There's just no job which has the range of legal issues and issues many of which are issues of extraordinary national consequence and importance," Cooper said, "from the Iran-Contra staff to Gramm-Rudman (budget law) to the independent counsel statute to matters relating to Mr. Noriega, there's just extraordinarily fascinating work for any lawyer."

Dukakis Idaho support grows

BOISE (AP) — Following his strong showing in Tuesday's nonbinding primary election, Democratic Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts has picked up more support among Idaho's previously uncommitted super delegates to the national convention.

In a letter made public Friday, National Committee-woman Diane Peavoy of Carey told Dukakis she was endorsing him, and earlier Congressman Richard Stallings joined two dozen of his Washington colleagues to back Dukakis on what has become a certain road to the party's presidential nomination.

The endorsements followed by three weeks the announcement by Gov. Cecil Andrus, another previously committed super delegate, that he would support Dukakis and all other uncommitted Democrats should do the same.

Dukakis claimed 73 percent of the vote in this week's Idaho primary, far outdistancing his remaining challenger, the Rev. Jesse Jackson. Jackson polled 16 percent.

Police enforce seat belt law

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho State Police say troopers plan to strictly enforce Idaho's mandatory seat belt law this summer.

"We want everyone to wear their seat belts this summer," Sgt. Dwain Sammons said.

In the last 14 months the state police has issued nearly 600 seat belt violations, he said.

"You have to continue to re-emphasize it," Sammons said. "I think we'll see the compliance rate and use increase."

The announcement was made at a press conference held Wednesday by the Idaho Safety Restraint Coalition across from the Capitol Building. The coalition also announced its new mascot — Buckle Spud.

The overgrown potato strapped with a yellow seat belt is to remind people of the coalition's new slogan: "Don't Get Mashed, Use Your Seat Belt."

Ma Bell disconnects sex line

DENVER (AP) — Mountain Bell officials have announced the company will begin disconnecting 976 information programs that offer illegal or sexually explicit material in late June.

"This action will improve the overall quality of information services available on 976," said Jim Smith, Mountain Bell Colorado's vice president and chief executive officer, on Friday.

"And with our blocking charges, parents and businesses still have the option of controlling access to programs at no charge," he said.

In January, Mountain Bell announced it would move all programs "harmful to its reputation" to a separate prefix, 980, and refuse to bill for them while providing the information necessary for them to do their own billing.

Bell officials reported Friday that the Justice Department ruled a local Bell company does not have to provide access to programs that are unlawful or sexually explicit.

"Now we can exclude sexually explicit material from both 976 and 980," Smith said.

INEL union rejects contract

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Members of Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Local 2-852 have rejected a contract offer proposed by EG&G Idaho Inc., leaving them without an agreement.

The current contract ended May 20, John Walsh, an EG&G spokesman, said Friday. The union represents 450 workers at EG&G, the prime contractor at the U.S. Department of Energy's Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

OCAW workers include health physics technicians, crafts workers, cafeteria workers, photographers, mail-room personnel and laboratory technicians. The union local also represents 403 workers at Westinghouse Idaho Nuclear Co., which operates the Idaho Chemical Processing Plant and similar personnel at Argonne National Laboratory-West.

Negotiations with WINCO and Argonne were continuing with OCAW. WINCO's contract was scheduled to end Friday night and Argonne's ends June 7.

Timber flap raises issues

WASHINGTON (AP) — A reduction in freight rates by Canadian National Railway may violate a 23-year-old agreement to end subsidies of Canada's timber industry and stem a flood of low-priced wood products into the United States, Northwest lawmakers say.

"At every opportunity the Canadians seem to be trying to undercut our market," Oregon Democratic Rep. Ron Wyden said. Wyden and other lawmakers from timber states have asked the Commerce Department to investigate.

"This could affect our national wood product markets dramatically," Wyden said, adding that Canadian National is a "Crown corporation" the Canadian government essentially controls.

Dave Layton of the Commerce Department said the Reagan administration has asked the Canadians to explain the drop in rail freight charges for lumber.

"I can't really comment," Layton said. "We are waiting for an answer."

Singer youth returns home

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Benjamin Singer, the 15-year-old son of polygamist cult matriarch Vickie Singer, has returned to his family's ranch after being released from court-ordered foster custody, his sister said.

The youth had been under house arrest and then transferred to a foster home after he refused to testify before the federal grand jury investigating his family.

However, he testified before the panel on Wednesday, KSL-TV reported Friday. Prosecutors said Singer was not asked questions about his blood relatives specifically, apparently meeting with his refusal to incriminate them.

Continuing, his attorney plans to ask the U.S. Supreme Court to hear the boy's appeal that the government should not be allowed to compel him to give evidence against his family.

The lawyer, Steven Kuhnhansen, said he remained under court order not to discuss the boy's present custody.

Peregrine falcons find nest

BOISE (AP) — Five peregrine falcons are scheduled to be released in June atop the Idaho First Plaza in downtown Boise as part of an effort to re-establish the endangered species.

At first, the peregrines will lead a pampered life, dining on fresh quail and roosting at a prime hunting spot on the 19-story bank building.

Later, the birds — the first to be released in an urban setting in the Northwest — may scatter to Idaho's wilds, the nearby Snake River Birds of Prey area, or they may seek out similar quarters atop other downtown buildings.

Meanwhile, his attorney plans to ask the U.S. Supreme Court to hear the boy's appeal that the government should not be allowed to compel him to give evidence against his family.

"The birds release of peregrines has a dual function, Idaho Fish and Game officials said Thursday — boosting the number of nesting pairs, and offering close-up views of peregrine nesting and hunting.

"The more birds you can get out there the better," said Wayne Melquist, state manager of non-game wildlife. "This also serves as an educational tool. People will learn about an endangered species and watch them in action."

City dwellers should particularly enjoy watching peregrine falcons hunt because of their extraordinary flying abilities, Melquist said. Peregrines cruise at 40 to 60 mph and can dive at speeds exceeding 200 mph.

Engineer overcomes his guilt

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Former Morton Thiokol engineer Roger Boisjoly says he has stopped blaming himself for the destruction of the space shuttle Challenger and the deaths of its seven astronauts.

After two years of therapy and "the positive catharsis" of lectures on the disaster, Boisjoly is ready to reclaim the career that was shattered when the Challenger exploded in 1986.

"For a long time, I bore the burden of guilt because I hadn't done more to stop it," he said. "But I've resolved it now. I did everything I could."

Like several other Morton Thiokol engineers, Boisjoly argued fiercely the night before the Jan. 28, 1986, launch that temperatures of 53 degrees Fahrenheit or less could result in a failure of a rocket joint seal, imperiling the craft and its seven astronauts.

But after a second caucus with officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Boisjoly said, company managers "perceived pressure from NASA... there was no other justification for the launch. I felt the pressure, others felt the pressure."

With just six months left of the disability benefits obtained when he left Morton Thiokol, Boisjoly plans to use his remaining time and income "to get my life back together."

But at 60 years old and unemployed since September 1986, Boisjoly is realistic about his prospects.

"Changing jobs after 40 is bad enough," he said in a recent interview. "Under my circumstances, it's not going to be a cakewalk."

Boisjoly likely will return to engineering, although not in the aerospace business. A Tampa company tentatively offered a job after a lecture at the University of Southern Florida.

Boisjoly said it was NASA, not Morton Thiokol, that forced the launch.

"A lot of people think (Morton Thiokol) management argued with the engineers," he said. "It didn't happen that way. Management made the proper decision originally — they declined to launch below 54 degrees."

The following morning, Boisjoly and others at Morton Thiokol's Utah plant watched on television as the shuttle, rising above Cape Canaveral after a night of subfreezing temperatures, blew apart 73 seconds after liftoff.

For Boisjoly, the guilt and frustration sparked a brutal emotional upheaval from which he only now is recovering. After testifying before the presidential commission that investigated the disaster, he felt ostracized by Morton Thiokol.

On July 21, 1986, Boisjoly took disability leave and he quit for good in September. His benefits expire at the end of the year.

Diagnosed as suffering from post-traumatic stress syndrome, Boisjoly declined to discuss his therapy.

Instead, he talks about his recent series of lectures to college students and professional societies, where he recounts Challenger-related events from Jan. 25, 1986, to the present.

"I dwell on the final chart, the decision-making chart that came out of the caucus. There's not a single statement on the chart that supports the launch," he said. "That's when my audience just looks horrified. They can't believe anybody would launch."

INS sets resident rules

BOISE (AP) — Newly legalized Idaho immigrants may have to pass oral English and civics tests or enroll in a U.S. government class if they want to become permanent legal residents.

That is a requirement of the preliminary second-step guidelines released by the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"These folks are asking for the impossible," said Camilo Lopez, a Caldwell attorney involved in immigration affairs. "They're just being unrealistic about the whole thing."

INS now has available for public comment preliminary draft copies of implementing regulations for this second phase.

"Making the draft regulations available for public comment is an extraordinary step taken by INS," Commissioner Alan C. Nelson said. The intent is to maximize public participation in writing the final regulations, he said.

The regulations affect nearly 7,000 Idaho immigrants who applied for temporary legal residency under the general amnesty program created by the 1986 Immigration Reform Act. The general application deadline was May 4, and agricultural workers have until Nov. 30 to apply.

"Everyone thinks it's over, but the biggest hurdle is yet to come," Lopez said.

"I don't think it's right," said Joanne Gouger, director of the legalization program for the Idaho Diocese of the Roman Catholic Church. "It's just an extra burden."

Teachers' union calls for more security Groups raise $60,000 to repair war memorial

NEW YORK (AP) - After a week in which New York City teachers were bludgeoned, slashed, pummeled and blasted, their union leader called Friday for increased security and tougher sentences for teacher assaults.

"One attack against a teacher is outrageous and to have four in one week is just intolerable," said United Federation of Teachers President Sandra Feldman. "And we're afraid that this is just the tip of the iceberg." Though school officials insisted the number of attacks on teachers had actually decreased in three years, Mayor Edward I. Koch said the city was concerned about teacher safety and he called a "summit meeting" Tuesday of the chancellor, union leaders, the five district attorneys and police commissioner to discuss the problem.

The latest act of violence occurred Thursday afternoon when a physical education teacher came upon an intruder rifling through students' gym bags outside a Bronx school and was beaten unconscious with a baseball bat.

Gary Smith, 37, who remained unconscious Friday, was the fourth teacher assaulted. Douglas De Marco was knifed more than a dozen times by a mugger in the bathroom of a South Bronx grammar school.

The other incidents included a teacher who was beat up by a student, the student's brother and sister, and a 71-year-old teacher who was injured when an M-80 firecracker was tossed into her classroom.

"There's something seriously wrong here," said De Marco, who added that the attack on Smith made him even more "angry and frustrated."

The need for increased security has long been evident to De Marco, who said he teaches in "a neighborhood that's known for two things: heroin and crack."

De Marco, speaking from his hospital bed, said his attacker was "some young crazed guy, looking to make a quick score."

The assailant got a few subway tokens and a couple of dollars; De Marco got kicked in the ribs, abdomen and groin and stabbed in the ear, neck, shoulder, side and back.

"A few more inches and it could have been my eye or an artery and we wouldn't be having this conversation," said De Marco, who is expected to recover.

Yet the Board of Education said the number of assaults in city schools have decreased, mainly because of an increase in security guards in elementary schools.

There were 1,322 assaults in the city's 1,000 schools in 1985-86 and 969 this year, said board spokesman Bob Terte.

That included 337 teachers assaulted in 1985-86 and 198 so far this year, he said. The rest were on students or other personnel including custodians and cafeteria workers. An assault could be anything beginning with a shove against a wall, Terte said.

In addition, Terte said 350 security guards have been added in the last two years, and the operating budget for school safety increased from $31.8 million to nearly $43.2 million. There are currently 2,061 guards in schools.

But the UFR insists there were about 1,000 physical attacks against teachers both last year and this year.

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - More than $60,000 has been raised during the last month by veterans organizations and radio stations across the country to help remove scratches from the Vietnam Veterans Memorial and to encourage someone to identify the vandals.

National Park Service officials acknowledged on May 2 that two of the memorial's 140 highly polished granite panels had been damaged. Since then, a third panel also was found to be scratched with numerous vertical lines.

Jan Scruggs, founder and president of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, called the contributions "gratifying." He said that neither the fund nor the Park Service asked for contributions and that the money was raised by individuals and organizations that decided to do so on their own.

"It surprised me that there were so many people interested in contributing money," Scruggs said. Scruggs and John Wheeler, now chairman of the fund's board, were responsible for having the memorial built. "After the repairs are made, we will use the extra money to buy more granite so we will have panels ready to make replacements if the need arises," said Scruggs.

He said a granite expert in Vermont is testing various methods of removing scratches from polished granite. He said he wouldn't know the final cost of the repairs until the expert determines which method should be used.

Meanwhile, a stone expert hired by the Park Service has made temporary repairs by filling the scratch marks with a synthetic resin that closely matches the original mirror-like surface, said Park Service spokesman Earle Kittleman.

New York City radio station WNSR raised the largest amount of money, about $26,000.

House Demos back long-term research on SDI

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - House Democrats have backed a policy of steady, long-term research on U.S. anti-missile defenses but are strongly opposed to any deployment of space weapons soon.

Twenty-six Democratic House members, at a Capitol Hill news conference Thursday, said they have agreed on a party consensus that opens the way for a Democratic Party platform plank sharply opposed to the Reagan administration's deploying a first stage of a proposed "Star Wars" missile defense in the 1990s.

Rep. Charles E. Bennett, D-Fla., said the recommendations show "that Democrats support all necessary SDI (Strategic Defense Initiative) research... (but) will not throw the rest of the Navy, Army and Air Force overboard to pay for a crash program to develop space weapons."

The recommendations, based on a five-month Democratic staff study, reflect a Congressional Budget Office estimate that planned Reagan missile defense deployments may cost $249 billion to $462 billion in the first decade, excluding repair and operating expenses. SDI officials estimate that research leading to any deployment will cost another $57.5 billion.

The Democrats, sensitive to Republican charges that they oppose defense spending, noted in the report that these funds could instead buy dozens of jet fighters, armored divisions and aircraft carrier battle groups. They added that a negotiated U.S.-Soviet reduction in strategic arms, and deployment of new mobile, land-based missiles, "could enhance deterrence and lower the chances of nuclear war at far less cost and considerably less risk than... proposed" missile defenses.

The recommendations, requested by the House Democratic Caucus and officially presented to a meeting of the party's platform committee, did not reflect requests by some members that SDI research be eliminated or sharply cut. Instead, the study said such research at "a reasonable and stable pace" is "appropriate" for the U.S. defense effort.

The signers include Thomas S. Fe

ley, Wash., House majority leader; Tony Coelho, Calif., House majority whip; Les Aspin, Wis., chairman of the Armed Services Committee; Jack Brooks, Tex., chairman of the Government Operations committee; and Dante B. Fascell, Fla., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Sawtooth National Forest open for business

By ADRIENNE TOOMEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If you're planning to clear the winter cobwebs from your head by escaping to the Sawtooth National Forest for the weekend, you're in luck.

The Sawtooth National Forest Information Center reports that the outlook for weekend activities is "very good."

"We had a relatively light winter, snow-wise, and that has allowed us to open up many of our recreation areas," Forest Supervisor Roland Stoleason said.

While many campgrounds are open, Memorial Day visitors may have to "rough it" a bit more than people who camp later in the summer. Campers should bring their own drinking water since some of the site's water systems will not be operational by this weekend.

In addition, some campgrounds' garbage hauling contracts will not yet be in effect. Campers should come prepared to haul their own garbage from the site.

Visitors who camp in areas without operational water and sanitation systems will not be charged camping fees.

Some people consider pitching tents, roasting marshmallows, and sleeping in sleeping bags to epitomize a weekend of fun. Less adventurous folks, however, may

Gas prices increase since Easter

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Retail gasoline prices in Idaho are up an average of five cents per gallon since Easter, the Idaho American Automobile Association reports.

AAA's Memorial Day weekend fuel survey found the average retail price for a gallon of gas is $1.062, up from $1.011 at Easter and $1.001 a year ago at this time. Gasoline price averages include self-serve and full-serve prices of regular leaded, unleaded and premium unleaded gasoline.

Three and a half cents of the five cent per gallon average increase can be attributed to the state gasoline tax increase which took effect on April 1 to help finance highway construction and maintenance. The Easter fuel survey did not reflect the increase.

Twin Fall's Lynwood Chevron Station currently sells regular and unleaded gas for 98.9 cents per gallon. According to Veit Yergansen of Lynwood Chevron, this price is an increase of "about nine cents since May."

"Our costs have risen too, so we are hardly making a profit. For awhile, we were only turning a profit of seven-tenths of a cent," he said.

Jerry's 66 Service Station is currently charging 99 cents per gallon. Jim Gasser, an employee of Jerry's, says, "People coming in don't like to see the increase. All of us want to prefer an afternoon hike. Many trails in the Sawtooth National Forest are cleared of snow and are waiting to be enjoyed.

Other people may choose to take advantage of the mountain air while cutting firewood. Permits are required and can be purchased at Sawtooth Forest offices. The minumum permit fee is $20. In the Fairfield Ranger District and north of Galena Summit, this basic permit allows the purchaser to cut four cords of wood. In the remainder of the forest, the permit allows the cutting of two cords of wood.

Visitors should remember that the Forest is not indestructible. In fact, Forest Dispatcher Bob Powers says the condition of "large, dead fuels" is a month and a half ahead of normal, making the forest especially vulnerable to fire. Visitors should make sure they completely extinguish their campfires and cigarettes.

People should also avoid driving on wet roads. Ruts made by vehicle wheels concentrate rainfall runoff, causing considerable damage.

The Sawtooth National Forest is divided into five districts. Each district will have numerous sites open for holiday camping.

All campgrounds in the Ketchum Ranger District are open this weekend and have operational water systems. Trails are open up to the 8,500 foot level although some wet spots may be encountered. Above 8,500 feet, trails are covered with considerable amounts of snow. Most high lakes are still frozen.

Many campgrounds in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area District will be open. In the Wood River Valley, campers may go to the North Fork, Murdoch, Cougar, Garibou, Easley and Wood River campgrounds.

In the Sawtooth Valley, both the Chemeketa and Smokey Bear campgrounds will be open.

Judge OK's delay in Jesse Jagger's preliminary hearing

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magistrate Judge Melvin Edwards pushed Jesse Ray Jagger's preliminary hearing back four weeks Friday, accepting the public defender's request for extra preparation time.

"The state has employed experts to examine physical evidence that it's going to take me awhile to obtain and prepare to confront," Public Defender Michael Wood said. "Also, there are witnesses spread out over two states from here to Las Vegas."

Twin Falls Deputy Prosecutor Joel Horton cited the "strong interest in prompt disposition of cases" in opposing Wood's request. A preliminary hearing is normally supposed to be held within 14 days of a defendant's first appearance.

"The length of time he's asking for would have more value if Mr. Wood wasn't planning on taking a vacation in (that) time frame," Horton said. "Quite frankly, another of our problems is that we have witnesses that we may have difficulty keeping our fingers on."

Edwards mentioned the crime's gravity and the fact Jagger was denied bail in granting the continuance. Court officials Friday moved the preliminary hearing from June 9 to July 6.

A preliminary hearing is designed to determine whether a case should proceed to trial. To push the case into district court, the prosecution must show that a crime probably occurred and that the defendant probably committed it.

Prosecutors have charged Jagger, 18, with first-degree murder in connection with the Virginia Westergren stabbing May 13. The Twin Falls resident, also charged with second-degree burglary and two counts of grand theft, made his initial court appearance Thursday.

The case's potential complexity and the specter of scientific evidence also factored into the morning scheduling conference. Wood said he needed additional time to sift through the prosecutor's evidence and is considering obtaining his own expert and an independent investigator.

"The state isn't anticipating putting on the volume of scientific evidence that the defense is referring to," Horton countered. "At this point, the state frankly doubts whether we would have the scientific evidence available at the time of preliminary hearing."

Horton, senior trial attorney in the Twin Falls office, said that evidence has not yet been returned from FBI laboratories.

Westergren, 79, was killed in her Buchanan Street home. Her husband, Al, was in Portland visiting relatives when the slaying occurred.

At the crime scene, police recovered several items which they believe "Westergren's killer touched, including a 18-inch knife used to stab her. But police did not have Jagger's fingerprints on record, so during one of two searches at his home they seized glasses, dishes and other items from which they hoped to lift his prints.

Jagger was staying in a room at the Cactus Inn on Kimberly Road. Police searching that room also seized samples of his handwriting.

Investigators found a hand-drawn map linking Idaho and Mexico in a kitchen trash can at the Westergren home. Handwriting accompanied the map, drawn on the back of paper listing college prerequisite courses.

Jagger's younger brother told police he had previously seen that paper in Jagger's hotel room. He also identified the handwriting as that of his brother.

Police additionally found on Westergren's body a single hair which apparently did not belong to the victim.

Other evidence which could be produced includes possible testimony from two men in Las Vegas who were arrested in the gray Buick Century believed stolen by Westergren's killer. James Langham and James Williams told police they bought the car from Jagger and did not know it was stolen.

NOVA shines TV spotlight on Twin Falls

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The public-television series NOVA is shining a national spotlight on Twin Falls School District's debate on teaching creationism in science courses.

But don't go running to "TV Guide." The program isn't expected to air until late 1989. Co-producers Tom Lucas and Larry Engel said they are chronicling the debate nationwide, including how this community deals with the subject.

"This is really a profile of Phil (Gerrish) as much as anything else," Lucas said. "But this is also a profile of a community as it looks at this controversial issue." Gerrish is an O'Leary Junior High School science teacher who taught creationism this year.

Times-News Managing Editor Steve Hertzgen stirred the issue to life when he and his wife complained to the district administration about Ger-

Want to get out of this world? Try Craters of the Moon

Spinner cones dot the lunar landscape of Craters of the Moon National Monument

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

CRATERS OF THE MOON — A one-day visit to this 69,000-acre national monument is not enough to see it all.

Located about 100 miles from Twin Falls, 67 miles from Sun Valley and 18 miles from Arco, Craters of the Moon offers 23 square miles of unusual geological daily entertainment for a Memorial Day weekend jaunt.

Some come for just a single, short visit. Others return time after time, still amazed by the geologic story to be told here.

But any visit, however long, will be rewarding at this extraordinary volcanic landscape.

First stop should be at the visitor center to see displays and view a short film about erupting volcanoes. The film explains how lava flows from fissures in the earth to create cinder cones, lava flows and other volcanic features in the park.

Geologists walk, display many samples of the many lava formations and explain the giant evidence of the molten eruptions. The geology lessons start at prehistoric times 16,000 years ago when volcanic activity began here, and explain eight major periods of eruptions, up to the most recent crater activity 2,000 years ago.

Other displays help visitors recognize and appreciate the wildflowers and wild animals living in the park.

Climson monkey flowers, yellow buckwheat flowers, white beard-tongue and mock orange carpet Craters of the Moon from early May until August, particularly in wet years.

Park Interpreter Dave Clark says the best time to see the wild flowers in bloom is mid-June to late June, depending on the weather. Lichen grows on rocks in bright red, yellow, white and lime green. Limber Pines spring out of the rich volcanic soil and that are stunted into strange shapes because the soil is so shallow. Aspen trees and sagebrush grow from narrow cracks in the black rock.

In all, more than 200 species of plants are native to this apparently desolate landscape.

A display case of the park's animals shows golden-mantled squirrel, bobcat, yellow bellied marmot, long-tail weasel, pika, yellow pine chipmunk, horned lizard, gopher snake, deer mouse, violet-green swallow, mountain bluebird and Clark's nutcracker, all mounted and shown in their natural habitat.

On this moon-like landscape are no less than 2,000 insect species, 140 birds, 26 mammals, six rattlesnakes and a lone amphibian. The western toad. Male deer are sometimes seen around the outlying cones.

Other displays are historical.

Army looks for contamination

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — At first glance, it looks like a scene from a B-grade science fiction movie. Figures in hooded protective suits move busily about, excavating an old toxic chemical dump. Helicopters swoop in with high-tech monitoring equipment and supplies.

Officials in charge of the operation request that the work site be kept secret for security reasons despite their statements there is no danger to environment or personal health. It's the kind of stuff rumor mills thrive on — a scenario where you half expect Godzilla to rise from the pri-ordial slime to take on Rodan or Mothra. But a Defense Depot Ogden spokesman gives assurances that the excavation of chemical burial Site No. 3, on the south west section of the base near the Ogden Nature Center, is standard operating procedure when searching for environmental contamination.

A team of Army specialists from Dugway Proving Ground is digging for possible deposits of Mustard, a debilitating blistering agent used in chemical warfare, and other contaminants that may have been buried in a dump that has not been used for years.

Earlier this past week, the depot confirmed that some glass vials and stoppered jars had been found and disposed of as though they contained chemical agents. However, because none of the containers were opened and the contents analyzed, nobody is sure whether the vials and jars contained chemical agents.

Fenci said the burial site, one of six identified around the depot, apparently was used sometime between the early 1940s and the end of World War II.

INEL workers unite to improve image

BLACKFOOT (AP) — Stung by criticism during recent Special Isotope Separation project hearings, a group of Idaho National Engineering Laboratory workers has united to improve the federal nuclear research laboratory's image. "At the SIS hearings it was pretty apparent that a lot of people don't understand what we do at (INEL)," said Steve Walters, an electrician who works at the site. "What we're trying to do is improve that image."

The Partners in Progress Community Task Force was formed after a two-day seminar in Idaho Falls. INEL workers discussed the site's image problems. The task force is made up of volunteers from labor and management.

During the group's first two meetings members decided to undertake community projects to improve the image of site workers. In the second week of June, volunteers will pick up trash at INEL bus transfer lots and areas where site workers who car pool to work park their cars.

Finishing their daughter-creationism. The school board is studying a creationism policy and they are expected to act at their next meeting June 14, said Assistant Superintendent Keith Tolzin. He summarized the draft policy as allowing the teaching of all theories, including creationism and evolution, while not forwarding religious tenets.

A committee of science teachers will then decide specifically how to implement the policy, Tolzin said.

Cerviah expects the definition of "religious tenet" to become the crux of the issue. He said that as evolutionary Darwinism becomes extinct, scientists are gathering evidence of an abrupt beginning of life.

Since the board is still developing its policy, NOVA did not interview Twin Falls district administrators. But NOVA is also looking at communities in Louisiana and Texas, as well as staging a debate between a creationist and evolutionist.

"We were looking at communities on both sides of the fence," Lucas said. "In this case the school administration is looking at it, at least initially being against it — creationism — being taught."

During their visit Wednesday to Sunday, the NOVA crew interviewed Gerrish, the Hartgen family, Magistrate Judge Michael Redman and planned to meet with the Rev. Tom Tucker of First United Methodist Church.

The NOVA crew followed Gerrish's class out to Craters of the Moon, not so much for creationism as to illustrate his teaching. The crew also conducted random on-the-street interviews to gauge community reaction to the debate.

Engel said the program will not air before spring of 1989, and probably not until fall of that year.

NOVA is produced at television station WGBH in Boston.

Both men are fighting extradition to Twin Falls on grand theft charges.

Horton said the prosecution would probably need no more than one day to present its evidence at the prelimi-

Jaggers was arrested in Las Vegas Monday. He chose not to fight extradition and was returned to Twin Falls Wednesday.

The flowing lava engulfed the trees in a river of molten rock and the trees burned, releasing their stored water as steam. The steam cooled the surface of the lava enough to leave impressions of the charred surfaces of the trees.

In the Twin Falls Ranger District, Schipper, Birch Glenn, Steer Basin, Lower Penstemon, Pettit, Porcupine and Bear Gulch campgrounds will be open. Boettger and Father and Sons campgrounds are open but must be reached through Oakley rather than by the Monument Peak Road.

At each stop, asphalt hiking paths through the broken crusts of lava make walking easy. Clark says the shortest walks are about a quarter-mile long, round trip. One walk is near North Crater, where lava flowed at more than 80 miles an hour, then quickly cooled into ropes and folds with a purplish-blue tint from hundreds of tiny crystals that produce the color when struck by light.

Most roads and trails in this district's South Hills are open. In some places, however, snow drifts continue to block the road. Many roads and trails have not been traveled by Forest Service maintenance crews, and some hazards may exist.

Another short walk for casual strollers is at Devil's Orchard, where jagged towers of lava stand like islands in a sea of cinders. Here, springtime floral displays are said to be gorgeous, and weird rock formations are landscaped with gnarled trees.

Other good hikes are to the tops of North Crater and Inferno Cone. Both are a little steep but not long and the views at the top are well worth the effort of getting there. For avid explorers, the vast Wilderness Area is full of striking volcanic features, all left in their primitive forms. In 1970, this area was established by Congress as part of the National Wilderness System.

At another scenic spot, big craters and spatter cones are just a few steps from the edge of the parking lot. The cones look like miniature volcanoes and were formed by clots of pasty lava that stuck together where they fell and cooled.

"The biggest part of the park that people don't see is the Wilderness Area," says Clark. "There are a lot of really nice features down there."

Clark says visitors need to bring flashlights to see the caves, which are all natural inside and have no artificial lighting. Indian Tunnel, about 800 feet long, has a stairway leading into it. It is wide with a few large holes in the ceiling, so flashlights are not needed.

For an all day trip into it, hikers need to take water, lunch and hats for protection from the sun, says Clark. Permits — free at the visitor center — are required for overnight or extended travel in the harsh but beautiful Wilderness Area.

Clark, one of nine permanent employees at Craters of the Moon, says it takes "most of two days" to see all the developed areas. The visitor center is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. year-round except for holidays in winter. The campground is open from May to October. During winter, the loop road makes an excellent trail for skiers or snowshoe buffs. At an altitude of 6,000 feet, the park has snow every year. Call ahead (627-3257) for a skiing report.

From mid-June until Road Day, the park staff provides three tours a day through the cave area. A nice intermediate hike, two miles roundtrip, is to tree molds, where molten lavas advanced on a living forest.

Market slides as holiday approaches

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market drifted lower Friday in a meandering preholiday session.

A late downturn in interest rates, which left bonds mixed on the day, failed to stir much enthusiasm for stocks.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 10.31 to 1,956.44, finishing the week with a net gain of 3.6 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 6 to 4 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 618 up, 777 down and 506 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the NYSE came to 133.59 million shares, down from 164.26 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trading at regional exchanges and on the over-the-counter market, totaled 151.48 million shares.

After rising sharply on Thursday, interest rates moved up again in the credit markets in early trading Friday.

Analysts cited a spreading belief that the Federal Reserve was tightening credit further in response to evidence of continuing strength in the economy.

On Thursday the Commerce Department made a sharp upward revision in its figure for economic growth during the first quarter of the year.

As the session passed, bonds attracted some buyers. "The bond market was comforted by the notion that policymakers are attempting to snuff out inflation fears," said analysts at Salomon Brothers Inc.

But stocks apparently still suffered from neglect, with many participants getting an early start on the long Memorial Day weekend.

Texas lost 7 1/2 to 4 1/2% in active trading as the company's directors rejected a $60-a-share takeover proposal by financier Carl Icahn.

Japanese stocks ran into selling following a down day in the Tokyo market. Matsushita fell 8 1/2 to 200, Honda Motor 2 1/2 to 133 1/2, and Kyocera 3 1/2 to 83.

Duquesne Light, unchanged at 14 1/4, and Texas Utilities, down 1/4 at 25 1/2, were the day's most active issues, in trading dominated by strategists focused on the companies' forthcoming dividends.

Those two stocks, in fact, accounted for nearly one-third of the day's overall volume.

Huffy Corp. fell 3 1/2 to 21 after a delayed opening apparently prompted by an adverse report from a brokerage house. Later in the day the company said it expected lower second-quarter earnings, citing a slowing of retail bicycle sales.

Maxus Energy jumped 1 1/2 to 8 1/2 on a 1/2-point gain Thursday. The company declined to comment on the activity, which was evidently stirred by takeover rumors.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $8.40 billion, or 0.33 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped .57 to 1,423.66.

Standard & Poor's industrial index fell 1.76 to 292.55, and S&P's 600-stock composite index was down 1.21 at 253.42.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market slipped .63 to 368.66. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 290.60, off 1.56.

Arab girl killed by tear gas

JERUSALEM (AP) — A 3-year-old Arab girl died Friday after Israeli troops fired tear gas to quell Palestinian protests in the occupied Gaza Strip. Relatives claimed she died of tear gas inhalation.

The army command and a doctor said the cause of Dina Sawaf's death could not immediately be determined.

Also Friday, two Palestinian teenagers who were shot by Israeli troops during earlier clashes in the West Bank died.

The deaths brought to 198 the number of Arabs killed since the Palestinian uprising in the occupied territories began Dec. 8. Two Israelis have died.

In Gaza City, hundreds of Moslem worshippers waving black flags of mourning marched from a mosque to the house of Ahmad Wazir, the cousin of slain Palestinian Liberation Organization military chief Khalil Wazir.

The PLO leader, better known as Abu Jihad, was assassinated last month in Tunisia. Palestinians have accused Israel of responsibility.

Soldiers fired tear gas grenades and rubber bullets to quell other Gaza protests that broke out after Friday's Moslem prayers.

Demonstrations and marches were reported in the Jabalya and Shati refugee camps and in the towns of Khan Yunis and Rafah.

Soviets claim U.S. is violating peace agreement

MOSCOW (AP) — An adviser to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev said Friday that the United States is violating a peace accord by continuing to ship arms to Afghanistan's anti-communist Mujahideen guerrillas.

"They are arming, and, obviously, those who want to go on their civil war," said Yevgeny Primakov, who has advised Gorbachev on arranging the Soviet troop withdrawal from Afghanistan.

Primakov, head of the Institute of the World Economy and International Relations, did not specify when the United States sent its most recent arms shipment to the Mujahideen.

No did he say whether continued U.S. shipments might halt withdrawal of the estimated 105,500 Soviet troops who are still in Afghanistan.

"This means that the United States will jeopardize the situation," Primakov told a news conference for reporters covering next week's summit talks between Gorbachev and President Reagan.

"It means they will push Pakistan into a corner," he said. "It destroys the Geneva accords."

(In Washington, State Department officials had no immediate reaction to Primakov's charges.)

Under the peace accord, the Soviet withdrawal is supposed to be completed by early 1989.

Primakov's charge appeared to be part of a pattern of protests aimed at pressuring Pakistan and the United States to stop aiding the Mujahideen.

On Thursday, the Afghan government lodged its fourth protest with a U.N. observer mission, accusing Pakistan of continuing to channel arms to the guerrillas.

The guerrillas have said they will continue to fight the Soviet-backed government in Kabul and will ignore the Geneva accords signed by Pakistan and the Kabul regime.

The United States and Soviet Union agreed to act as guarantors of the agreement. In an exchange of letters, each side agreed to stop arming its allies in Afghanistan if the other followed suit.

Aggressive Iraqi attacks jolt Iran

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — In five weeks, Iraq has dramatically turned the tables on Iran with two major battlefield victories that have aggravated Tehran's military and political troubles.

The military defeats have badly jolted Iran, which already was beset by economic woes, a political power struggle between radicals and conservatives, and growing international isolation.

"There's a lot of confusion in Tehran now," said a Western diplomatic source with contacts in the Iranian capital. "But the Iranians will not take this lying down. They'll retaliate."

"They may be on the ropes, but they're not on their knees yet," said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The unexpectedly aggressive tactics of the Iraqis, who for the last six years have been content to fight a static war behind their formidable defense lines, appeared to catch the Iranians flat-footed twice in just a month.

The Iraqi 3rd Army Corps, spearheaded by brigades of the elite Presidential Guard, drove the Iranians out of marshlands east of Iraq's southern port city of Basra on Wednesday. The 7th Corps, again led by Presidential Guard units, recaptured the Faw peninsula south of Basra in a 34-hour assault that ended April 18.

For Iran, the loss of that territory was a major psychological and political blow. Iraq took back the most significant gains it had in bargaining for an Iraq-Iran cease-fire.

Iran also stole Iranian bargaining chips in any future peace talks in the Persian Gulf war.

Moreover, Tehran was suffering

South Korean riots threaten Olympics

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Riot police kicked and clubbed anti-government protesters Friday and fired tear gas grenades after that all measures be taken to crush violent demonstrations.

Roh, presiding over a meeting of the National Security Council, said the dissident protests threaten the safety of the Olympic Games, which begin Sept. 17 in Seoul.

"As part of tightened security preceding the Games, a Cabinet minister ordered police to maintain surveillance on foreigners spending long periods of time in South Korea without a definite purpose.

In downtown Seoul, angry passers-by shouted "Shame!" as some of an estimated 7,000 riot police fired tear gas and repeatedly charged about 3,000 radical students.

Police chased protesters into subway and forced tear gas grenades at passers-by who protested. Several officers lifted a protesting businessman in a blue suit above their heads and carried him away. Police broke up an attempted sit-in at City Hall and an attempt by about 500 students to march toward the U.S. Information Service library. They arrested dozens of students, beating and hitting them with clubs as they were dragged away.

L.M. Boyd What's what

THE BEER IN CHINA
Report out of China says people there today are drinking seven times as much beer as they drank a decade ago.

Q. Isn't something odd about people who talk to their flowers?
A. Not if they don't argue. No flippancy intended. Those who purport to know say flower talkers are numerous and nice. Nicer, for example, than drivers who talk to traffic lights.

The first platypus taken from Australia to England stirred up a lot of argument. Most onlookers thought it was a hoax. What they wanted to know was how the odd parts of different animals had been patched together that way without killing the basic beast.

TANGO

Q. Can you deny that Bonnie Glass introduced the tango in this country in 14?
A. No, sir, the record shows she was the dancing partner of one Rudolph Valentino and they introduced the tango. He became famous as a movie star a decade later. Name of the romantic short-lived Valentino lives beyond his 1920s. Even as the name of the romantic short-lived James Dean lives beyond his 1950s.

That Irishmen make good trial lawyers has long been the claim of those who believe in such penchants of nationality. But according to a legal statistician, it is the attorney of Greek origin who merits the most recognition as a trial winner.

Q. How much gold goes into this country's class rings in any given year?
A. Nine tons, last year.

LONGEVITY
Say you're a small person who doesn't eat much. Does that mean you'll live longer than average? Don't know, don't know. But Japanese researchers say their studies suggest something of the sort. At least, they say, the societies in which a lot of people live to be very old seem to be made up mostly of smaller people who eat and avoid strangers.

run your life. A message from far off will bring you good news.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): This is a good day to focus your attention on family matters. A friend who has helped you in the past now needs your assistance badly.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Don't let a new acquaintance lead you in the wrong direction; take all advice with a grain of salt. This is not a good time for travelling.

Daily Horoscope

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Don't allow a financial expert to rush you into any hasty decisions. Study the matter well first, and rely on what you think is best for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): If you go out for recreation with friends, don't try to run the show. Listen to the advice of friends who have your best interests at heart.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): If you work more harmoniously with your mate, you can get a great deal accomplished. Avoid arguing with anyone today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Listen to the suggestions of others, but don't let anyone tell you how GENERAL TENDENCIES: You would be well advised to avoid any confrontations or controversies today, otherwise you will get yourself and others into trouble. Pay particular attention to the details of an important financial matter.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Think carefully and make sure you have not forgotten about a promise you made some time ago. Listen to the advice of your mate.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): A co-worker is as stubborn as you are, but a little compromise can bring a meeting of minds. Don't let anyone cause you to lose temper.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): If a family friend is irritable, don't argue with this person. Forget personal affairs for now, and pay more attention to financial matters.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): You can best get your ideas across to others by speaking quietly and reasonably. Make sure you drive carefully,

Six women will star in movie version of 'Steel Magnolias'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Academy Award winners Shirley MacLaine, Sally Field and Olympia Dukakis will come to terms with life, death and marriage in a small Southern town in the movie version of "Steel Magnolias."

The film, based on the acclaimed off-Broadway play about six women in a small Louisiana town, also will star Holly Parton and Daryl Hannah, the movie's producer, Ray Stark, said. One of the six major female roles is yet to be cast.

Shooting is to begin July 12 in Natchitoches, La., and should be completed by early September, said Stark.

"Herb Ross (who will direct) and I have put together what I think is the most exciting ensemble cast since George Cukor did 'The Women' in 1939, Stark said.

That cast included Jean Crawford, Norma Shearer, Rosalind Russell, Paulette Goddard, Jean Fontaine, Marjorie Main and Hedda Hopper.

"Steel Magnolias" focuses on life at a small-town beauty shop owned by Ms. Parton's character.

Burt, Loni said the vows but can't prove it ... yet

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Burt Reynolds and Loni Anderson are officially married. They just can't prove it.

Reynolds built a special chapel for the April 29 wedding, and hired a special caterer and a motorized stage-coach. But he forgot where he put the marriage license.

"He called us the day before the wedding and said he couldn't seem to find it," said John Dunkle, Palm Beach County clerk of courts. "He says he'll find it."

Dunkle had delivered the license application to Reynolds at his Jupiter ranch March 2.

Tom Selleck's new film will shoot in Baltimore

BALTIMORE (AP) — If this is New York, it could be Baltimore to Tom Selleck.

His new movie, "Her Alibi," is to begin shooting June 27 in Baltimore, though it's set in New York and Connecticut.

Location crews won't reveal much about the Marty Einfeld movie, but Selleck, 43, is expected to be here for much of the eight to 10 weeks of shooting, said Drew Friedman, international account executive for the film commission.

Quacking visitor will find new pond at Thatcher's

LONDON (AP) — A visitor who regularly waddles into the garden at No. 10 Downing St. won't leave without a swim and a drink in the future if Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has her way.

Mrs. Thatcher said Friday she plans to build a pond for a duck from a nearby park that has turned up at the back door of her official residence and laid some eggs.

June Jam VII for charity won't be Alabama's last

FORT PAYNE, Ala. (AP) — Randy Owen, lead singer of Alabama, is tired of hearing people say the group's seventh annual charity bash, June Jam, will be its last.

"I don't know how all of that got started. But none of it's true," he said.

Owen said the concerts "will continue as long as the people of the state of Alabama — from the governor's office on down to the people in Fort Payne who volunteer to work with us every year — want it to go on."

Business faux pas is subject of book

NEW YORK (AP) — Peel back the carpet in the executive suite, and you'll need a shovel to dig through what's been swept underneath.

At least that's the tone of the rollicking "Misfortune 500," a 210-page catalog of Corporate America's "worst bosses, dumbest strategies and most disastrous products."

Authors Bruce Nash and Allan Zullo's guiding premise is that business blunders don't get the attention they deserve thanks to "upright execs" who are basically humorless — except when it comes to the faux pas of their competitors.

"We have a great respect for big business because it is the backbone of America, but they have to learn to lighten up a little bit," Nash said.

From the Adams Naval Beverage Co. to Zale Corp., these two irreverent business bashers dug for the dirt and found it.

Among the biggest blunders, they roast the Mars candy company for passing up the chance to have M&M's featured in the 1982 box-office blockbuster "E.T." The movie's lovable alien devoured Reese's Pieces instead, boosting sales for rival chocolate maker Hershey Food Corp.

And speaking of chocolate, from the products that didn't get off-the-ground (thank God) department is chocolate styling gel for hair. The category also includes parsnip chips.

Nash and Zullo, both 40 and both residents of Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., say they met at a party five years ago and soon began building a "cottage industry of shame."

Since then, they have published five different sports-oriented "Hall of Shame" books, starting with "The Baseball Hall of Shame."

In their book, Nash and Zullo question Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca's sincerity in urging everybody to "buy American" when he appears in ads clutching a cigar rolled in the Dominican Republic.

The duo even counted up the many ways corporations say "Layoffs." ITT Corp. once called them "headcount reductions"; the accounting firm Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. used the phrase "requested departures"; and Control Data Corp. called them "workforce adjustments."

Woman again breaks into Letterman's home

NEW CANAAN, Conn. (AP) — A woman who apparently set up housekeeping in David Letterman's home while he was out of town and took his sports car for a spin has been re-arrested after returning to his home, authorities said today.

A woman identified variously as Margaret or Mary Ray, 36, of no known address, was charged with burglary Thursday night, police said.

The arrest came a day after she was released by New Jersey authorities because Letterman said he didn't want her prosecuted.

Authorities said the woman initially identified herself as Margaret Ray, but then said she referred to herself as Mary Ray. New Canaan police said today they had documentation that the woman's name is Margaret M. Ray.

Letterman, host of NBC's "Late Night with David Letterman," was not home at the time Thursday, police said.

Ray was jailed on $15,000 bail, said police Capt. Michael Angelastro.

Ms. Ray was first arrested Sunday at the Lincoln Tunnel on a charge of receiving stolen property as she was driving into New York from New Jersey with a 3-year-old passenger. She didn't have the $3 toll, authorities said.

"I'm Mrs. David Letterman and this is David Jr.," Ms. Ray was reported by authorities to have told the toll collector. "Don't you think David Letterman is good for the toll?"

The 1988 Porsche was registered to Letterman, who was contacted and said the woman was not his wife and did not have permission to drive his car, said Armando Arrastia, a spokesman for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey.

Sgt. Harold Pipher of the Port Authority Police said that Letterman, a bachelor, said he didn't know the woman.

Sgt. Paul Wadleigh at the Hudson County Jail said earlier today that the stolen property charge had been dropped and that Ms. Ray had been released.

After her first arrest, New Canaan police discovered that someone had broken a living room window to enter Letterman's modest three-bedroom home, Angelastro said.

Texaco rejects Carl Icahn's buyout bid

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc.'s board today rejected a $60-a-share buyout offer from takeover activist Carl C. Icahn and denounced the bid as a pressure tactic.

The directors also called on Icahn to abandon his costly and disruptive proxy contest, in which he is seeking five seats on the oil giant's board. Icahn launched the proxy battle before the board formally gathered to consider the offer, which values Texaco at $14.6 billion. Spokesman Neil

Call said Icahn did not want to waste time and decided to mail ballots for his slate of candidates before Memorial Day weekend began.

In rejecting the offer, the Texaco board cited a number of factors it claimed undermined the seriousness of the bid. It echoed management's sentiments in questioning whether Icahn could arrange financing and said the 48-hour deadline he imposed on the offer indicated he was not serious.

The board said it was confident Texaco's restructuring program would enhance shareholder value.

Earlier, many stock analysts had questioned whether the bid, which would be the biggest corporate buyout ever, would succeed and suggested he wait to drive up the stock price.

"I would be flabbergasted if Texaco's board agreed to Icahn's merger proposal," said Michael Young, who follows Texaco for Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co.

He joined others in suggesting that the offer was doomed from the start and that Icahn, Texaco's largest shareholder, knew it.

Wall Street showed a lack of enthusiasm Thursday for the bid. On the New York Stock Exchange, shares in the nation's third-largest oil company opened about $4 higher but eased to close at $50, up $3.12 1/2 for the day but far below the $60 bid.

Heading to Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five old trucks and buses, driven by U.S. veterans, left the capital Friday as part of the nationwide "Veterans Peace Convoy" bearing food, medical supplies, clothing and toys for the children of Nicaragua.

The contingent will merge June 5 in Austin, Texas, with several other convoys that originated in northern cities a week ago. Then the entire group, involving 50 vehicles and 100 drivers, will begin the drive through Mexico, Guatemala and Honduras to Nicaragua.

Robert Livesey, a Dorchester, Mass., veteran who hatched the project and heads the group that started in Boston, said a total of about 40 tons of humanitarian aid will be delivered by the convoy to private relief agencies in Nicaragua.

Pentagon budget bill is passed by Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate untied a 2-week-old knot Friday and passed a Pentagon budget bill that grants the Pentagon wide-ranging new powers to enter the war against illegal drug smugglers.

The nearly $300 billion bill was approved on a voice vote in a mostly empty Senate chamber after Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., dropped his amendment that would have permitted the death penalty to be imposed on drug dealers who are convicted of killing someone.

That amendment had stalled the measure for two weeks because supporters of the bill said the proposal would never be accepted by the House. D'Amato's proposal will be considered as a separate bill after the Senate returns next month from its Memorial Day recess.

Friday's vote sends the bill to a House-Senate conference committee to reconcile differences between the Pentagon budget measures passed separately by each chamber.

D'Amato had offered his plan as an amendment to the Pentagon bill because Senate opponents had previously threatened to filibuster his proposal if it was offered as a separate piece of legislation.

For two weeks, D'Amato refused to drop his amendment, arguing that tacking it onto the Pentagon bill was the only way to get a vote. D'Amato's plan is popular, as evidenced by an earlier 68-27 vote rejecting a move to kill it. But Senate rules protect the rights of the minority, meaning D'Amato's opponents could have filibustered.

Senate Democratic leaders pressed D'Amato to withdraw his amendment, arguing it was delaying the conference consideration of the Pentagon bill and could thus damage national security.

The bill authorizes $299.5 billion in Pentagon spending, the same total proposed by the House bill. The current defense budget is $291 billion.

The $299.5 billion figure was approved by President Reagan last December as part of the agreement between the White House and Congress to put together a budget package aimed at reducing federal budget deficits.

That was $33 billion less than the Pentagon had expected to receive in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, and Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci ordered wide-ranging cuts to meet the lower figure. The reductions include laying off 34,000 civilian personnel and the early retirement of 16 aging Navy frigates.

The most controversial provision of the Senate bill was an amendment giving the military new authority to help the fight against illegal drugs, including arrest powers for Navy officers aboard warships which stop suspected drug boats on the high seas.

The Senate bill, as does the House measure, contains money for a vast array of weapons. Among those in the Senate measure are another Trident missile-firing submarine, two more 688-class attack subs, the first of the new "Seawolf"-class of attack subs, three destroyers, 72 F-19 fighters, 36 F-15s, 180 F-16s and 72 Apache attack helicopters.

CSI to open today against a newcomer to juco World Series

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. — The athletes at Lake Land College don't get out much. In fact the Lakers are making their first-ever appearance in the National Junior College Athletic Association World Series here this week. Lake Land, which is located in Mattoon, Ill., a Twin Falls-sized community 175 miles southwest of Chicago, will provide the first-round opponent for the College of Southern Idaho when the juco national championship tournament gets under way at noon at Boise College.

"Our kids are pretty excited about being here," said Lake Land Coach Gene Creek on Friday. "In fact, we had to stop (the bus) coming over the Rockies and have a snowball fight." Lake Land won the championship of the NJCAA district — actually a combination of juco Regions 4, 12 and 24 — that includes Illinois, Michigan, Indiana and Ohio, an area traditionally dominated by Triton College of the Chicago suburb of River Grove and more recently by Grand Rapids Community College of Grand Rapids, Mich. Lake Land has not sent a team to a national juco men's tournament since the Lakers made successive appearances in the NJCAA tournament in Hutchinson, Kan., in 1975-76, the latter year losing to the Boyd Grant-coach CSI team that was en route to the national championship.

"I've been watching Southern Idaho from afar for a long time, and they're a familiar name on the national sports scene as far as junior colleges are concerned," said Creek, who also serves as Lake Land's athletic director. "We approach this game as a team with no national tournament experience going against a program that has had a lot of exposure." The Lakers are 63-20 for the season and beat both Triton and Grand Rapids, teams which were ranked nationally this year, to earn to right to go to Grand Junction.

"We're pretty deep in pitching and we have 13 players who start for us in other positions, depending upon whether we go against a right-handed or a left-handed pitcher," said Creek. "But we're an awfully young team and we're a team without one dominant hitter."

CSI will see the only sophomore on the Lakers' pitching staff, right-hander King Gagnor, this afternoon. Gagnor is 10-4 with a 2.83 earned run average and has won his last 10 decisions. Today's scheduled CSI starter, sophomore right-hander Don Emery, is 10-3 with a 1.98 ERA and has won seven of his last nine.

"Our pitching has been effective because of Gagnor and because our freshmen have done a good job for us," said Creek.

It was Gagnor who beat Grand Rapids, a team ranked as high as fifth this season by the NJCAA, in the Great Lakes regional tournament final.

Offensively, the Lakers carry a .311 team batting average (CSI's is .338) and are led by Sean Martin, a right-handed hitting left-fielder who is hitting .364. Other top batters for Lake Land are sophomore shortstop Brad Stuart, a right-handed batter who is hitting .345, and sophomore center-fielder Steve Fisher, who is hitting .332. Creek has several platoon players hitting over .300, led by outfielder Rich Wallace, a left-handed batter who is hitting .338 and plays only against right-handed pitching.

"We don't have one guy who can carry the team, but we're solid," said Creek. "We also seem to have one guy who does the job one day, another guy who comes through the next day. I think almost all of our regulars have had at least one game-winning RBI this year."

Creek said Lake Land struggled defensively earlier in the season, but has been consistent since all of the Lakers' different regulars became accustomed to their roles. Lake Land has a .645 team fielding average; CSI's is .931.

The Eagles, 40-14, will go into tonight's game with a 1-0 lead.

Blocker waits for NBA draft

By COLIN MULDOON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Chris Blocker will be waiting for a phone call in the next month to see what direction his career will take as a result of the upcoming NBA draft.

Blocker, who helped lead CSI to a Region 18 championship and a fourth-place finish in the National Junior College Athletic Association basketball tournament in 1986, was declared academically ineligible at Texas-El Paso early last March, just 10 days before the start of the Western Athletic Conference tournament.

UTEP was beaten in the WAC tournament, but qualified for the NCAA tourney, losing to Seton Hall in the first round of the NCAA Western Regionals in Los Angeles.

"I've already talked to several teams. There's a few (who are interested)," said Blocker, who is in Twin Falls visiting friends. "But I was advised not to say anything until the draft."

Blocker, who transferred to CSI in 1985 after spending a redshirt year and his freshman season at Idaho State University, moved on to UTEP after his sophomore season at CSI. In 27 games last year at UTEP, the 6-foot, 5-inch guard averaged 15 points and shot 41.4 percent from three-point range. He also averaged 3.7 rebounds and 3.9 assists per game and had 30 steals.

The prospect of playing in the NBA has long intrigued Blocker, but the Philadelphia native hasn't ruled out the possibility of basketball in Europe. He is entertaining the notion of playing with an AAU-sponsored team in Europe this summer.

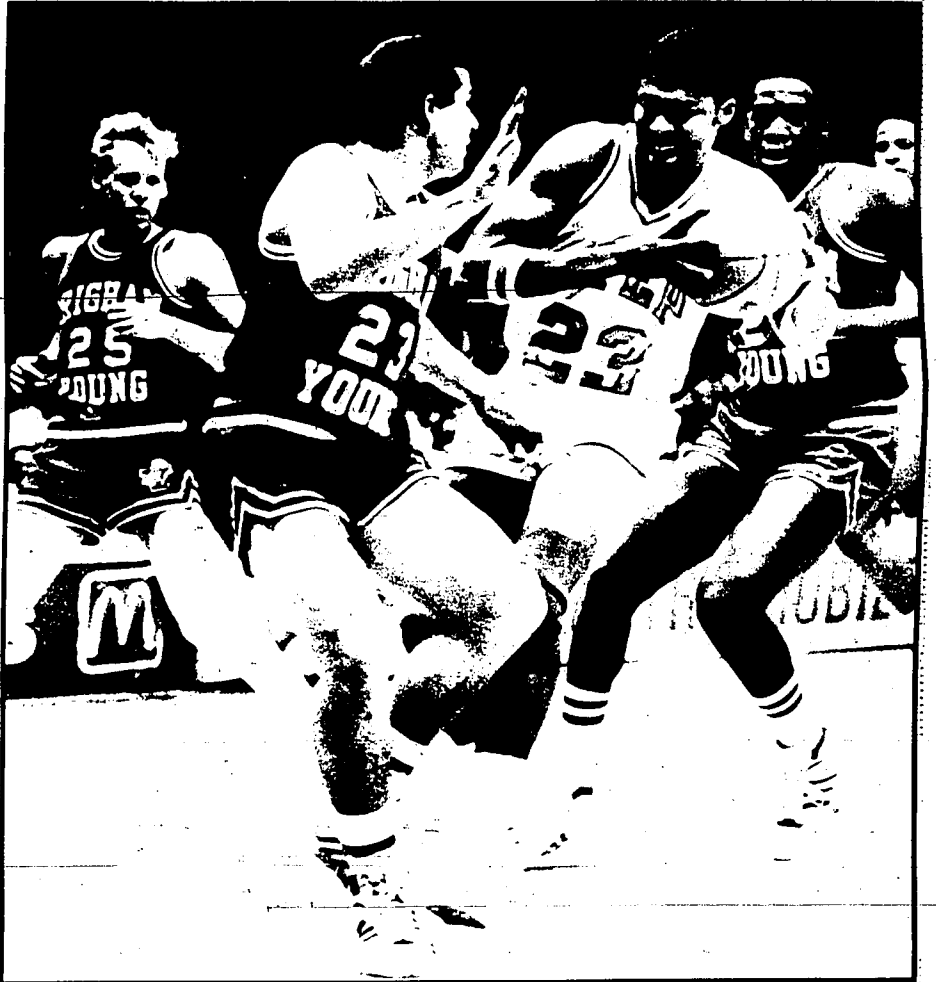

"I would only consider it if I thought I needed more seasoning," he said.

Blocker added that there are advantages for an American playing in Europe. He cited that in some situations, a player may live tax-free for the first two years and that fringe benefits can include a car, driver and translator.

"I've always wanted to go overseas anyway," he said.

There is little doubt that had Blocker been eligible to play the entire season, UTEP's chances in the NCAA tournament would have been greatly enhanced. He played a key role in a string of WAC victories that kept the Miners near the top of the conference standings until the end of the regular season.

But Blocker said his academic problems were only part of the trouble. The Miners' basketball program went through last season.

"We were going through so much adversity," he said. "I didn't feel as bad for myself as I did for them. There was a lot of uncertainty."

Blocker said the UTEP program began the season with 15 players and at season's end that number had dwindled to nine.

"Quite a few guys transferred," he said. "We had a lot of free spirits. You have to have some sort of cohesion."

Blocker said that had he and former teammate Antonio Davis had been able to play in the postseason tournament, "we would have beaten Seton Hall and maybe Arizona."

Arizona, the top-ranked team in the final Associated Press poll, won the Western Regionals.

Dallas stops Lakers cold in Game 3 of NBA series

By MICHAELA LUTZ
The Associated Press

DALLAS — Dallas coach John MacLeod realized it was either get back on defense or get run over by the Los Angeles Lakers in the NBA Western Conference finals.

The Mavericks got back — and got themselves back into the series in the process.

Mark Aguirre scored 23 points and Roy Tarpley had 21 points and 20 rebounds as Dallas defeated the Lakers 106-94 in Game 3 Friday night.

"I think this is the first time in seven games against these people that we've outbounded them this year," MacLeod said. "When you play the Lakers, it's get back or get cracked."

The Mavericks, the NBA's top rebounding team during the regular season, outbounded Los Angeles 62-40.

The Lakers' 7-foot-2 Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was held four rebounds. Magic Johnson led Los Angeles with eight.

"Tonight the total difference was simple effort," Tarpley said. "It wasn't necessarily adjustments."

"The key was to be aggressive, and we were totally different than the first two games. I could sense that they were frustrated."

The Lakers led 76-75 entering the fourth quarter, but the Mavericks worked their way to an 85-84 lead, then used a 17-3 spurt to put the game out of reach.

The Lakers still lead the best-of-seven series 2-1, with Game 4 scheduled for Reunion Arena Sunday afternoon.

"They killed us on the boards," said the Lakers' Byron Scott, who scored 30 points in Game 2 but was held to 11 points Friday. "That was the key. They were getting second and third shots, something that wasn't happening in the first two games. They showed tonight why they were the best rebounding team in the NBA."

Los Angeles coach Pat Riley said he could find no fault with his team's effort.

"They (Mavericks) were committed tonight," Riley said. "They got up on us and did a good job denying the ball. They just took over physically. I had no problem with my team's effort. Hey, Dallas is a great team. They didn't get here by chance."

Aguirre began the game-clinching spurt when he was awarded a basket on a goaltending call. Derek Harper's 3-point basket with 2:19 to go put the Mavericks in front 100-87.

James Worthy led six Lakers in double figures with 19 points.

Although the Mavericks slowed down the Lakers' fast-breaking attack, which led to victories in the first two games, Dallas led only 62-61 at the half. Both teams came out running in the third quarter, with the Lakers taking the lead on Worthy's basket to start the quarter.

The Lakers led going into the final period after the fast-paced third quarter that included six lead changes and six ties.

Aguirre scored 11 first-quarter points as Dallas took an early lead.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"The power which makes a man able to entertain a good impulse is the same as that which enables him to make a good gun; it is imagination."
— G.K. Chesterton.

South drew some compliments for an active imagination after his startling play of today's slam. Actually it was some simple counting that did the job. Any one who can count up to 13 is capable of doing the same.

South won his spade ace and ruffed a spade in dummy. He led a low trump to his nine and ruffed his last spade in dummy. Another trump lead to his queen drew East's last trump, and South was ready to dazzle the kibitzers.

He cashed his club king and then led a low club, finessing dummy's nine. When this held, he cashed dummy's ace and queen, discarded a diamond and charitably conceded a diamond. Making six hearts.

Should West have split his J-10 of clubs to prevent the finesse of dummy's nine? It would have done no good. South would then have returned to hand to take the confirmed finesse against West's remaining honor.

Why did South play as he did? After the play of three spades and two trumps, South knew that West had started with 11 cards in the minors. Since he never had bid, it was reasonable to assume that his most likely distribution was 6-5, with little or nothing in high cards. And since East's butt-in promised good distribution, it was odd-on that East was dealt a singleton, and that singleton rated to be in clubs.
