Gem court voids initiative on lottery

The Associated Press

BOISE — With another vote on a state lottery just five months away, the Idaho Supreme Court on Tuesday voided the 1986 voter initiative on a lottery that finally spurred state lawmakers to act.

In the 4-1 decision, the high court's majority reiterated its holding from a lottery case more than a third of a century ago.

"All the people of the state are bound by constitutional limitations," the court said in affirming the 1987 ruling of 4th District Judge Gerald Schroeder.

Schroeder held that the initiative, which was ultimately approved by 80 percent of the voters in November 1986, violated the constitutional provision against enactment of a state lottery. Critics of the initiative called it an end run around the constitution, which also bans amendments to its provisions by citizen initiative.

The ruling had been expected because of statements Justices Robert Bakes and Robert Huntley made in a procedural ruling two years ago that allowed the initiative to be submitted to voters. They predicted that if challenged the initiative would fail a constitutional test.

Justice Stephen Bistline was the lone dissenter, decrying the fact that two of his colleagues had prejudged the case.

The validity of the initiative had been clouded from the moment it won ballot status in 1986. But after its overwhelming voter endorsement, state lawmakers finally relented in the 1987 session and approved a proper amendment to repeal the lottery ban in the constitution. That amendment will be voted on this fall.

In addition, lawmakers this year passed legislation actually setting up a lottery. It will take effect upon passage of the pending constitutional amendment, and officials said with voter approval the first lottery tickets could be available in Idaho in early 1989.

The legal challenge to the initiative was brought by Associated Taxpayers of Idaho and two anti-lottery groups, which had unsuccessfully campaigned against voter adoption and have begun new anti-lottery campaigns in preparation for this fall's balloting.

Lottery defenders claimed the initiative was valid because the constitution only specifically prohibited the Legislature from enacting a lottery. They maintained that since the citizenry was not specifically mentioned, a lottery could be authorized by an initiative that did not involve the Legislature.

But the high court majority agreed with the initiative's critics. Bakes, writing the opinion, held that there was no legal difference between legislative enactments and citizen initiatives and that both must comply with the same constitutional requirements.

He said to hold otherwise would run counter to the state's long-running anti-lottery policy and open the way for initiatives to be used to elude other prohibitions in the constitution.

Recalling the decision in the 1953 lottery case, Bakes wrote, "Lotteries are unconstitutional and prohibited, not merely that the Legislature cannot authorize them."

Dukakis nails Demo banner

By The Associated Press

Michael Dukakis clinched the Democratic presidential nomination with a four-state flourish Tuesday night, sealing his triumph in California on the final night of the 1988 primary campaign.

George Bush said he would stress "prosperity and peace" in his fight to hold the White House for the Republicans.

Dukakis was defeating Jesse Jackson by a margin of 30-1 in New Jersey's primary, and his victories in New Mexico and Montana were almost as commanding. The Massachusetts governor led convincingly in California and was favored to win there, as well.

He began the night needing roughly 150 delegates to achieve a mathematical lock on the nomination. He was winning more than 125 in New Jersey, Montana and New Mexico combined — leaving him only 25 short in the Associated Press count. Early returns from California showed him ahead for 195 delegates and he was likely to end up with dozens more.

Dukakis thus emerged as the winner of the grueling Democratic primary marathon — and with a lead over Bush in the nationwide public opinion polls as the two men pointed toward the Nov. 8 election. Even so, the vice president will begin the fall campaign with formidable Electoral College advantages in the South and West.

Thus, the prospect is for a close general election campaign, and both nominees-in-waiting sounded eager to begin.

"My friends, what a golden opportunity this is for us," Dukakis said as he savored his nominating triumph in California. He pledged to use his campaign to stand up for factory workers thrown out of their jobs with no warning, to ease the burden of families hit by medical bills and to "share the rage" of those living in neighborhoods threatened by drugs.

"Every day between now and November, the American people will want to hear how we intend to build a strong and vibrant future for our country. They aren't interested in slashing attacks. They want to judge our positive ideas for change," he said.

Bush agreed there was no need for a negative, nasty campaign.

In a television interview, he also likened Dukakis to Walter F. Mondale, the landslide Democratic loser in 1984, for refusing to rule out a tax increase. "I'll rule it out," Bush said in an interview with CBS, and rely on a spending freeze to reduce the deficit.

The vice president conceded that he begins the fall race behind in the polls, but said that would change as he begins to establish his own political identity. "When we get through in the fall talking about opportunity and peace and numbers of jobs and how much better things are and what I'll do to keep it that way, I think I can

Police claim Jagers admitted May slaying

By CRAIG LINCOLN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls police claim that Jesse Ray Jagers said he killed Virginia Westergren, according to a court affidavit filed Tuesday.

Police made the claim to support a request to collect hair from Jagers and samples of his handwriting, saliva and blood to compare with evidence, police believe, is connected to the Westergren murder.

"The reference to 'Jagers' admission, buried in a court document filed Monday and never before mentioned by police or prosecutors, says Jagers admitted to the killing shortly after being arrested in Las Vegas.

"After being advised of his constitutional rights, Jesse Ray Jagers agreed to talk to officers," said Police Commander Garry Corder in the affidavit. "During the interview, he admitted to having intentionally killed Mrs. Westergren."

No further information on the circumstances surrounding the interrogation was included in the court document.

Deputy Prosecutor Joel Horton, Public Defender Michael J. Wood and police officers all declined to comment on the affidavit. The attorneys cited professional ethics codes prohibiting out-of-court comments on pending cases.

Wood, who is defending Jagers, hasn't had an opportunity to challenge the admissibility of police claims of a confession at trial. A judge

OSHA drafts lower chemical exposure limits

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal regulators on Tuesday proposed reducing workplace exposure limits for 234 toxic chemicals and bringing 168 others under government regulation in what was called the largest action of its type ever taken.

In making the announcement, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration estimated the proposed regulations would reduce job-related fatalities among some 17 million workers now exposed to the chemicals by 500 a year and illnesses by another 55,000 annually from cancer, respiratory, cardiovascular and liver and kidney diseases.

Approximately 3.6 million workers are now exposed to concentrations of the chemicals above the proposed new ceilings, OSHA officials said. They estimated the cost to industry of meeting the new standards at $900 million a year.

"This is a 20-year technological leap that brings the country's basic occupational health regulations up to date," said John A. Pendergrass, who is OSHA administrator and assistant labor secretary. "The project is the most significant workplace exposure action taken by OSHA in its 17-year history.

The OSHA plan calls for reduced exposure limits for widely used chemicals such as chloroform, carbon monoxide, hydrogen cyanide, ammonia and trichloroethylene.

Employers would be required to meet the new standards six months after the final regulations are approved. • See TOXIC on Page A2

Study says American students fail to add up in math

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A government-sponsored study concluded Tuesday that American students are doing miserably in math, and experts laid some of the blame on the redundant, slow-paced way math is taught in most schools.

The National Assessment of Educational Progress reported that almost half the 17-year-old students tested in 1985-86 proved incapable of handling math commonly taught in junior high, and nearly 27 percent of 13-year-olds were stumped by basic computations.

"Our ninth graders are taking what other people's seventh graders are taking," Chester Finn Jr., the assistant U.S. secretary of education for research and improvement, told a news conference. "We've got to get it going faster, repeated less and make sure that it's learned more."

The study was based on exams given to nearly 15,000 students ages 9, 13 and 17 in 1985-86, and to a total of nearly 35,000 students in grades 3, 7 and 11. It was the fourth national assessment in math since 1972-73.

The average score for 9-year-olds tested in 1988 was 221.7; for 13-year-olds, 269; and for 17-year-olds, 302. For white students, the average scores for the three ages were: 226.9, 273.6 and 307.5. For black students, 201.6, 249.2 and 278.6.

For Hispanics, 205.4, 254.3 and 283.1.

In separate grade-level scores, Asian-American students trailed whites in grade 3, but were far ahead in grades 7 and 11. The Asian-Americans averaged 211.3, 288.6 and 330.6.

The study, "The Mathematics Report Card: Are We Measuring Up," said all three age groups made modest improvements in recent years, but mostly on low-order skills. Fewer were capable of advanced work in 1986 than in 1978.

"Despite signs of their progress across time, the 1986 performance of 17-year-old students was dismal," the report said. "Only half the high school students demonstrated an understanding of even moderately complex mathematical procedures," usually introduced in junior high. The report said math classes are "dominated by paper-and-pencil drills on basic computation."

Both men will spend the next several weeks doing what they can to assure they only plan their nominating convention and select vice-presidential running mates. Dukakis can expect a possible floor fight from Jackson on a handful of issues, but said earlier in the day the Democrats are united for the coming campaign.

Bush already has been endorsed by the men he defeated for the nomination, and will attend the first of five GOP unity dinners later this week in Denver.

The vice president, who has lost ground in the polls since wrapping up the Republican nomination more than a month ago, posted uncontested victories in New Jersey, New Mexico, Montana and California. He said the political momentum would swing his way once his campaign brought the issues of peace and prosperity into focus for the voters.

"The Democrats are out there tearing down the administration, and in many areas things are going to make this country click," he said in an NBC interview.
Jackson, routed in the four final primaries of the year, already was turning his attention to the "next phase of a remarkable" campaign. Talk of the vice presidential nomination, convention platform issues and changes in party rules affecting future campaigns was in the air even before the polling places opened to voters on the final primary day of the year.

In New Jersey, with returns from 85 percent of the precincts counted, Dukakis had 360,165 or 65 percent. Jackson had 175,350, or 31 percent. Republican returns lagged far behind. With 21 percent counted, Bush had 58,922 votes for 95 percent.

Toxic

OSHA officials said immediate compliance with most of the proposed standards could be achieved through the use of personal respirators. However, they added that they agency envisions requiring the adoption of more expensive engineering controls such as ventilation systems within four years.
Pendergrass said approval of the regulations could come as early as next November.

However, he acknowledged there is likely to be opposition to many of the changes in hearings that the agency has to conduct on the 400-page proposal and possible court challenges later.
The proposal sets limits on a total of 428 chemicals. It lowers the limits on 234 substances already subject to federal regulation and sets exposure ceilings for the first time on 168 other chemicals.
Current exposure limits would be reaffirmed for 25 more chemicals, and a 10-fold increase in the exposure limit would be allowed for one — fluorine — based on recent data, the agency said.

The agency estimates they're are now more than 550,000 potentially toxic chemicals and chemical compounds in the workplace.
Most of the current federal exposure limits are based on 1968 census standards established by the American National Standards Institute for threshold values established by the American Conference of Governmental Industrial Hygienists.

Pendergrass said most of the proposed new ceilings are based on 1987-88 data provided by the ACGIH with backup from the NIOSH, an agency of the Department of Health and Human Services.

The NIOSH recommended exposure limits actually are lower than the proposed new ceilings in many cases. But unlike the ACGIH limits, NIOSH does not consider feasibility in its recommendations on permissible exposures.

Senate panel approves $28 million for SIS work

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — A Senate appropriations subcommittee has approved $28 million in construction for the Special Isotope Separation facility, scheduled to be constructed at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Sep. James McClure, R-Idaho, a member of the subcommittee, called it "another step in keeping the project on schedule."
The Department of Energy requested $10.4 million for the facility.

Most of the funding goes to the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory in California for continued development of the Atomic Vapor Laser Isotope Separation process to be used at SIS.

The funds are included in the Energy and Water Development Appropriations bill for fiscal 1989. It goes to the full Senate Appropriations Committee for approval. Funding in the Senate subcommittee is the same as already approved by the House of Representatives.

Shots end man's road grader rampage

CHINO, Calif. (AP) — A man went on a rampage Tuesday in a road grader and badly damaged at least three planes at the airport here before he was shot by police and sheriff's deputies, authorities said.

The man, identified as Randy LaComb of Anaheim, was shot several times below the waist, said Jim Bryant, spokesman for the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department. No other injuries were reported.

Jaggers

Must decide whether to admit evidence at trial.

The 18-year-old Jaggers is accused of the first-degree murder of Virginia Westergren, 73. Westergren died in Twin Falls home May 13 of multiple stab wounds while her husband, Al, was in Portland visiting relatives. Ten days later, Corder and Twin Falls Police Detective Dennis Chambers arrested Jaggers in Las Vegas.

In the affidavit, police said they had evidence including hand-written notes, a document that is purportedly a bill of sale for an automobile, a soda pop can scrapings and a fingerprint under Westergren's fingernail, and two light-brown hairs found on her body.

All fingertips on one of Westergren's hands were bruised, police said, and scrapings of material under her fingernails will be compared to Jaggers' blood sample.

The soda pop can being used as evidence, was found in the Westergren living room. Police want to compare saliva obtained from it to Jaggers'.

Police claim that the bill of sale was for Westergren's stolen car. Two men were arrested in Las Vegas while driving her car. The two, James Langham and James Williams, told police they bought the gray Buick Century from Jaggers.

Handwritten numbers, including "100" and what police say is Jaggers' Social Security number, were on the bill of sale, the affidavit says. The document also included the words "James Babbs, Lori Marges, Jesse Ray Jaggers," according to the police affidavit.

Police also found a piece of paper in the Westergren kitchen trash cans with the hand-printed words "I am sick of this."

Corder and Chambers got the samples Monday. The affidavit says the evidence may help identify the person who committed the homicide.

A preliminary hearing is set for July 8.

Billstone conceded that during the procedural matters before the court two years ago he might have been inclined to agree with the prediction of Bakes and Huntley about the initiative's ultimate fate had he not felt such a declaration improper.

But, he wrote, "when the instant case was laid before us, complete with briefs-and-oral-argument—a whole new aspect of the case materialized."

He said it became clear that citizen initiatives are not bound by the same limitations as legislative enactments because "political-and-governmental power comes from the people."

"Simply put, 'the people' when they choose to act where their representatives in the form of the Legislature have not acted, are not a second Legislature, but are the people," Billstone wrote.

Citing the constitutional provision in which "the people reserve to themselves the power to propose laws and enact the same at the polls independent of the Legislature," Billstone said that was exactly what voters did two years ago.

"The plain and simple remedy for those who do not approve of this initiative legislation — if there need be a remedy — is for the Legislature to repeal the people's enactment," he said.

The lottery campaign two years was prompted by repeated defeats of a lottery constitutional amendment in the Legislature. Supporters claimed the state was losing hundreds of thousands of dollars, if not millions of dollars, to the lotteries in Oregon and Washington — money they claimed could be used for needed government services in Idaho.

But critics contended a lottery would produce little in the way of revenue for the state while preying on those who could least afford playing the game.

Today's weather Another verse of June's melody

Board selects warden for new prison

BOISE (AP) — Warden Arvon Arave will spend the next year preparing for the opening of the new maximum security prison while his successor at the main penitentiary moves toward accrediting that facility, prison officials said Tuesday.

"It's not very often you get the opportunity to start with nothing and build it up," Arave told a press conference Tuesday after the Idaho Board of Correction announced he would head the $22 billion maximum security prison being built next to the main penitentiary south of Boise.

Arave, who has headed the main prison since 1984, said it was the challenge of making a new prison that prompted him to seek the warden's position for the maximum security facility. Dave Paskett, superintendent of the Boise Community Work Center, will succeed Arave as warden of the Idaho State Prison. Both assume new duties June 26.

Corrections Director Al Murphy said Paskett would be charged with bringing the main prison, which opened in the early 1970s, under accreditation by the American Correctional Association.

"There aren't a lot of prisons accredited, but you don't find them under court order," Murphy said.

The new prison was authorized by the state after U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan ordered reductions in the inmate population to ease overcrowding. Inmates ordered to prison have been housed in county jails, and Paskett said as of Tuesday 130 were waiting to get into prison with the state paying the counties $25 a day per inmate.

Murphy said becoming accredited involves bringing the old prison up to fire and safety codes and implementing certain guidelines for prison operation. The initial fire and safety improvements will cost $500,000, he said.

As Paskett begins on what would be a two-year project, Arave will be seeking accreditation for the new facility. "I think what we're doing will be a lot easier," Arave said, explaining plans for the new maximum security facility already have been approved for accreditation.

The facility under construction is scheduled to open in May 1989, and Arave said he will spend the next year preparing a budget, setting up operational guidelines, hiring and training a staff, and deciding which inmates will be moved first.

Arave said the new prison will create more than 100 jobs. Death Row will be moved to the new prison, although executions would be held in the trailer behind the main prison.

Murphy said questions were raised about holding executions in the maximum security prison because state law requires inmates put to death at the state's main prison.

Arave, 45, was selected from 16 candidates and will start at $43,000 a year. He was deputy warden before succeeding Darrol Gardner in February 1984.

Office construction underway

SANDPOINT (AP) — A lease has been signed here for construction of a 9,700-square-foot office building to be used by the state Department of Health and Welfare.

Sandpoint businessman Ken Pearlstein will erect the building under a 10-year lease with the department. Completion is expected in October. The contract was awarded after 10 competitive proposals were submitted to the department last year. Gov. Cecil Andrus stopped the negotiation process after others involved in the bidding complained that too much vacant office space already existed in Sandpoint to warrant new building construction. City officials and others became involved in that controversy. Eventually it was decided to proceed with the work.

Attorney tells of difficulties of trying child abuse cases

POCATELLO (AP) — Marc Haws recalls the frustration he felt when one juror of 12 held out against conviction two years ago of a Blackfoot man on trial for incest and related charges.

"He was adamant from the moment they went into deliberation that he wasn't going to vote for any form of conviction. There was no way to persuade him otherwise," Haws said Tuesday.

He was keynote speaker at the Current Issues in Sexual Abuse seminar here. The three-day conference is sponsored by the FBI and the Idaho State University Department of Psychology.

Haws, assistant U.S. attorney for the Justice Department in Boise and former state deputy attorney general, said despite the hung jury, the victim had the strength and courage to see the 11-1 deadlock as a victory.

"She saw it as a positive result because she saw it as 11 people believing in her at the time when her own mother had denied that the abuse could have taken place," Haws said.

The case was later retried in another part of the state and the man was convicted.

Haws said child abuse cases are difficult to bring to trial. The legal challenges are many and the results aren't always good. At root of the problem is a court system which puts a child in the role of witness against a defendant who may be a father or other close relative.

Courts can do much to safeguard abused children's rights, but Haws said legislatures, especially in Idaho, can also take positive measures. They include requiring speedy trials in cases where children may be put under undue strain, by expanding the Child Protection Law to give authorities more discretion to remove children from an unsafe home, requiring central registration of convicted child molesters and endorsing a bill to allow hearsay evidence at preliminary hearings.

No motives discovered in Nampa shootings

NAMPA (AP) — After two days of investigation, Nampa police still had no suspect or motive in the pre-dawn shootings of a Nampa couple delivering Sunday newspapers.

Police Chief Marshall Brisbin said the killings appear to be random. "Everyone should be concerned and cautious, but not paranoid," he said.

Police on Monday released a composite sketch of the killer, based on descriptions from people at a nearby convenience store. And autopsies conducted Monday revealed that each victim was shot in the head and neck by a large-caliber revolver.

A team of officers from three police agencies is searching for the man who shot to death Eugene Morey, 41 and his wife Shirley, 40. They were shot through the windows of their car about 3:25 a.m. Sunday, police said.

Two people who saw the shooting from the nearby Circle K store told police the man approached the Moreys' car, which was parked in a dirt lot about 35 yards to the west, fired into the driver's window, killing Eugene Morey, and then circled the car and fired into the passenger window, killing Shirley Morey.

Though his department has received several phone tips, Brisbin said Monday that the investigators "including officers from the Canyon County Sheriff's Department and Idaho Department of Law Enforcement" had found no motive or substantial leads.

"We've looked at two or three people during the day," based on the tips, Brisbin said. Those people are "not entirely cleared, but we haven't got any substantial suspects."

Boise schools receive new bus contract

BOISE (AP) — The Boise School Board has voted unanimously to cancel its contract with Boise School Bus Co. and have Mayflower Contracted Services Inc. of Corvallis, Ore., start busing students this fall.

The action to cancel the contract was taken Monday night after a closed meeting of the board with Boise School Bus owner Terry Kirkman, that lasted almost 1 1/2 hours.

"The key to it all is safety of the children," Boise School Board member Leon Grisham said after the hearing.

Cancellation of the contract caps a year of safety-related problems for Boise School-Bus.

Man who filed false police report required to serve 90-day jail term

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A man who made a false report to police last summer that he saw warning "biker" gangs and bodies stacked next to a mass grave near Twin Lakes has been ordered to serve 90 days in jail.

Magistrate John Luster sentenced George William Lane, 26, to one year in jail here Tuesday, but then suspended all but 90 days of the term and all of a $1,000 fine.

Lane was ordered to pay Kootenai County $25,500 in court costs and $2,500 for his court-appointed attorney. In addition to two years on probation, Lane, who is unemployed, also can work off the attorney fee by performing 500 hours of community service.

In May, a jury found Lane guilty of obstructing an officer by filing a false report. On Aug. 28, 1987, Lane told police officers he was in the Twin Lakes area and saw several "biker types" carrying rifles and burying dead bodies. His grisly account sparked a general alarm among law enforcement agencies.

More than 80 law officers converged on the area from Kootenai County, Idaho State Police, Post Falls police, the FBI and other agencies.

Prosecutors alleged Lane falsely reported seeing up to 45 bodies stacked near a grave, surrounded by gun-toting bikers. Kootenai County Deputy Prosecutor Bob Burton said it cost law enforcement agencies $8,000.

Reduction in charge brings guilty plea

LEWISTON (AP) — A second-degree murder trial scheduled to begin Tuesday in Lewiston was canceled when Douglas J. King pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of voluntary manslaughter in the stabbing death of his stepfather.

King, 37, of Clarkston, Wash., was accused of killing Charles R. Triplett by stabbing him in the chest. Lewiston police found a large kitchen knife and a barbecue fork near where Triplett, 62, was found dead in his bed Jan. 8.

Fatal attraction in nation's wetlands

The United States needs a strong, comprehensive ocean and coastal protection program because, in effect, Americans are loving their coast to death.

In testimony to a Senate committee, Deputy Administrator A. James Barnes of the Environmental Protection Agency said: "In our desire to be close to the water we are slowly destroying some of the marvelous habitats and living resources that make it valuable to us."

By 1990 an estimated 75 percent of all Americans will be living within 50 miles of a coastline, including the Great Lakes. In a recent year nearly a third of the nation's productive shellfish waters were restricted or closed to harvesting because of contamination. Beach areas have been shut down because of health hazards. Wetlands are being destroyed by development. Marshes are being dredged, drained and filled. Some waters are succumbing to the same sort of oxygen starvation that recently has decimated marine life in the North Sea.

The losses are not just ecological. The degradation of coastal areas threatens economic losses to the fishing, recreation and tourist industries.

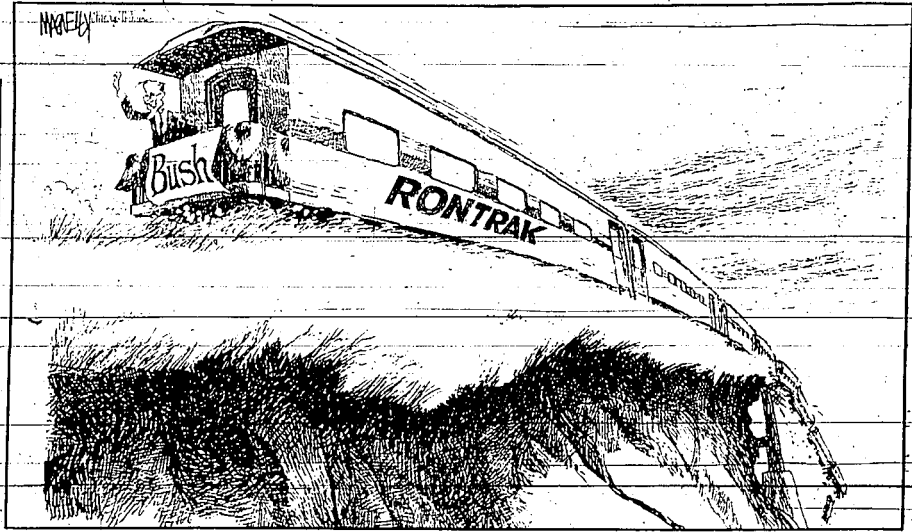

Barnes' eloquent comments highlighted inconsistencies within the Reagan administration's attitude toward the coast. Secretary of the Interior Donald P. Hodel repeatedly has scoffed at Californians' concerns about the aesthetics and visual pollution of offshore oil platforms. The Department of the Interior has glossed over possible damage to the tourist industry by oil activities.

Over at the Department of Commerce, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration has dragged its heels in establishing a marine sanctuary program as directed by Congress in 1972. Much of the delay has occurred over the question of whether oil drilling should be allowed in some sanctuaries.

In his Senate testimony Barnes said that critical coastal land-use decisions have to be made by state and local government and not by Washington. But the Department of the Interior, allied with the oil industry, has challenged the authority of state agencies and local governments to put conditions on oil activities that affect their shorelines.

A new Santa Monica-based organization called the American Oceans Campaign is at work drafting a proposed national oceans and coastal waters protection policy. Congress should give this and other ideas serious consideration, if for no other reason than as a means for the reconciling of development-protection differences within the federal establishment.

More to it than voting

As an American, I have taken seriously my right to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness. I have also taken the responsibilities that go along with those rights. I have always believed that our will, will be done on earth and God's domain is heaven. Our will is expressed through voting -- and here is where we have gotten off track!

We think that that is all there is to it. We send our politicians to Washington where they sniff the ratified air and they get a rush of power and they become addicted. And we place our faith in the decisions of addicts. Here is an example of a powerful life -- I've never worked so hard for anything in my life -- and it was all over in two minutes. (The vote for SIS). The vote took two minutes -- radioactive waste in the plutonium separation process and waste disposal are there forever. They will be done on Earth -- Bye, good luck friend -- I'm going to spend the rest of my life meditating on the zen of goof (oops) goofing!

Devil has way of moving in

There has always been much controversy over the First Amendment that divides church from state. Some say it was to protect our government from religious domination. Others claim it was more to protect the church.

They claim the framers of our constitution were religious men, that is why we have "In God We Trust" on our money. This is just another myth -- the framers of our constitution had nothing to do with putting this motto on our money.

"In God We Trust" first appeared on a two cent U.S. coin in 1864 and was not put on our paper money until much later and was not made law until July 11, 1955.

The great designer, often called the devil, has a way of creeping in. The world is full of myths, many humorous and harmless, but in our nuclear age, some have become very dangerous, and if we don't destroy the myths, they could destroy us.

The myths that are so dangerous, are those that are contained in Prophecy, for they are the ones that have caused so many superstitious people to err and destroy themselves.

One of the greatest achievements man can do, is to advance truth whenever possible, for only truth can do away with superstition and bring harmony and unity amongst all people.

Rejection found intriguing

Open letter to Eugenie C. Scott, Executive Director
National Center for Science Education, Inc.

I was pleasantly surprised by your letter to our newspaper in which you agreed with my legal analysis of the evolution-creation argument.

On the other hand I find your rejection of my conclusions intriguing. You agree with me that a teacher may not teach religion as science in the classroom, and then you go on to say that the reason scientific creationism may not be taught is because it is not science, but religion. Your conclusion is based not upon your expertise as a scientist, but rather your incorrect reading of a court decision. The decision in McLean v. Arkansas Board of Education did not "firmly reject scientific creationism on first amendment grounds" as you state. It rejected scientific creationism as defined in Act 550 of 1981 on the basis of content and the purpose of the regulations that passed it.

This issue will never be decided in courtrooms because each case will depend upon the specific facts of what is being taught, how it is being taught, under whose supervision, by what requirement or lack thereof, and so forth. The issue belongs in the scientific community not in the courts. Apparently, the failure of either side to succeed in convincing the other has resulted in attempts by each to use the legal process as a club. I think the Supreme Court made it clear in Edwards v. Aguilar that that had no intention of playing that game. It pointed out that any scientific theory can be validly taught in classrooms and avoided defining

"scientific." It pointed out that Louisiana law already allowed for the teaching of any scientific theory, and I suspect intentionally failed to say whether that did or did not include scientific creationism: Just as you argue that scientific creationism is not science, many capable, qualified, and highly respected scientists argue the opposite.

I am at a loss to understand why you and others of like mind allegedly committed to a search for truth, wish to silence those who disagree with you. If Phil Gerrish, also a scientist, has concluded that scientific data currently available supports the possible conclusion that life appeared abruptly and in many different forms, why are you offended by his desire to offer that perspective as an alternative theory in his classroom? If his conclusions are unscientific, then what do we make of the "hopeful monster" theory, panspermia, the genetic seeding theory, the evolutionary mind theory, the magnetic field theory, or for that matter the evolutionary theory of punctuated equilibrium? Although I no longer claim to be a scientist, my understanding is that all those theories are attempts to explain the lack of evidence in the fossil record to support the gradualism of Darwinian evolution.

I am not asking that creationism or abrupt appearance or any of the other alternative theories explaining the appearance and change in life forms be a required part of the curriculum of all science classes. I simply point out that Mr. Gerrish has every right to continue to teach that which he, as a teacher and a scientist, believes to be scientific theory.

Finally, in closing, I would admit that I am one who loves to use hyperbole to make a point. I am a bit surprised to find, however, that you would say that I ignored "a great deal of case law" and prove that by citing a single decision by a federal district court, the lowest level in the federal court system. As I suspect you know, there is no "great deal of case law" which firmly rejects scientific creationism on first amendment grounds. If there was, we really wouldn't have much to argue about, would we?

Fancy footwork is puzzling

It's frustrating to figure out politicians' fancy footwork. I'm referring to the City of Rocks National Reserve (S1335) and the Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument legislation (S1675).

Both bills passed the Senate with flying colors and now seem to be buried in the House Subcommittee of National Parks and Recreation, Ch. Bruce Vento, (D) Minn.

Two of the Gems in Idaho's Treasure Chest will be lost, unless protected by this legislation. Both sites are important parcels of our National Heritage! All America is entitled to see the beauty, learn the history and knowledge, through accessibility to the sites. Our state screams the economic boom of "tourism", yet can't find political "clout", or workable solution with the environmentalists.

If water is the issue -- that's ridiculous! You'd be hard pressed to fill a cup at the fossil beds. Beside, if there was any, it would have been filed on by fish farmers -- long ago! No cascading waterfalls at those granite sentinels that guided our pioneers, either.

In the Times News last week an AP statement from Idaho Falls, headlined: Controlling Water Overflows Need to Preserve Area. It read that Rep. Stallings now supports water rights language proposed by Senator McClure -- hooray, finally they're agreeing! But, and I quote, "Rep. Stallings admitted that the language designed to ensure that no additional federal reserved water rights are provided in the bills, could prevent passage this year." Rep. Stallings, the ball is in your court...the House. You'll need the support of Magic Valley come this November, or you too might go the way of the Fossil Beds!

get some action -- and in the house, this session!

A message filled with irony

A young man lived with his parents in a public housing development. He attended public school, rode the free school bus, participated in the free lunch program, played in the state parks, swam in the city pool. He entered the army and upon discharge kept his national life insurance. He then enrolled in the state university, working part time in the state capitol to supplement his G.I. check.

Upon graduation he married a public health nurse, and bought a farm with an FHA loan, and then obtained a Small Business Administration loan to go into business. A baby was born in the county hospital. He bought a ranch with the aid of another G.I. loan and obtained emergency feed from the government.

Later he put part of his land into the soil bank. His parents live comfortably on the ranch with their social security and old age assistance checks. RFA lines supply electricity. The Department of Agriculture helped clear the land. The County Agent showed him how to terrace it. Then the government paid part of the cost of a pond and stocked it with fish. He was guaranteed a sale for his farm products by a federal agency. Books from the public library were delivered to his door. He banked money which a government agency insured.

Then one day he wrote his Congressman: "I wish to protest excessive government spending and high taxes. I believe in rugged individualism. I am opposed to all socialist trends and demand a return to the principles of our Constitution."

Public transport necessity

I would like to know when will they have "public transportation" in this valley? Do you know if you did have that (public transportation) you would have no stores moving out of any town or city in Magic Valley, and you would have work for street-car, and railroad conductors, motormen and women, repair, track rail personnel and workers and bus operators, because this valley needs that now to keep going!

Have them from Twin Falls to Wendell, Gooding, Shoshone, Jerome to Twin Falls and from Buhl to Twin Falls or even to Paul, Buhl and Twin Falls.

Many of we people come from parts of the U.S. where they have street cars and buses and if anyone says that street cars are noisy then take a ride on the streamliners they have had on city streets since 1936 and you can find out how smooth they are and some of the new buses that do accept handicapped people are smooth riders, too!

Do not let another store or factory close out because of slow business or robberies.

There is another business that really would be excellent in this valley. The Eddie's Ice Cream trucks in Boise and one day in 1986 one truck driver came to Shoshone and when he came down our street, with that Music Box I flew out the door to stop him first and I thought "The Good Humor Man came to Idaho."

Yes, I bought 2 ice cream bars and I told him to tell his boss he has the whole valley full of routes, streets, parks, shopping sections and also they could have the push carts with bells on them to use in shopping car lots and parks as they do this in Los Angeles that I know of, this also gives people jobs and good ways to make honest money and I never heard of any streetcar conductor or motorman or woman being robbed or change box taken off the street cars or buses in the 1930s, 40s, 50s or 60s in Los Angeles and very seldom a Good Humor Ice Cream truck driver to be robbed.

Now if it is too expensive for tracked street cars ever hear of the trackless trolleys? I rode them, too! And they run by electricity only, no gasoline!

I still remember Shreveport, Louisiana in 1941 had all 3 modes of transportation and many cities that gave up street cars 30 years ago are now getting them back as they realize they should never have given them up.

Focus on the teaching of 3 R's in the schools

I watch TV and listen to the radio news, some of it really makes me wonder. Lately there has been much said about the teaching of creationism in the schools.

As many different churches as we have and with each one having a different idea on each thing, I think it would take up the whole school day just for this one subject. If we gave each church equal time to teach their own idea.

Maybe some folks would say I am from the old school, but I think we should leave the teaching of creation to the church and home, and keep reading, writing and arithmetic in the schools.

Theft of a memorial wreath is saddening

It is very sad that someone is clever enough to steal a wreath off a grave. This was the first Memorial Day after my husband's death. I went out in the rain on May 30th. It was a wreath with wire legs that stuck in the ground, so I know it did not blow away. I went back today, June 4th, to put fresh flowers and pick up the wreath, but it was gone. Maybe I'll see it next year. This was at the Filer Cemetery.

Failure to salute flag shows lack of respect

I must say that I am dismayed at the people of Twin Falls. Are you blind or do you simply fail to recognize the flag of our great country? I had thought it was common practice, at a parade, to stand and salute the flag of the United States when it passed by at the beginning. Obviously most of the people of Twin Falls have never heard of this, for when the flag went by last Saturday at the Western Days Parade, I only noticed myself and two gentlemen standing and saluting. I simply fail to understand why no one else stood. Could it be that I was sitting among foreigners, or people who don't believe in pledging their allegiance? Maybe the sun blinded everyone for a moment and they did not see the flag pass by. Or it could have been that they forgot, and plan to remember what the flag is by the Fourth of July. I hope this is the reason for this was the first. I hope the last, parade I've attended where those around me failed to recognize one of the greatest symbols of our freedom.

Tricky mock landing ends shuttle launch rehearsal

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) -

Three-space shuttle astronauts made a tricky mock emergency landing Tuesday during a comprehensive launch rehearsal that tested hundreds of changes resulting from the Challenger disaster.

The practice for the nation's first shuttle mission in 24 years, scheduled Aug. 31, exercised the launch team here and flight controllers in Houston through the final three hours of a countdown and the harrowing minutes of a failure requiring split-second decisions.

Airman Bob Crappen, deputy director of shuttle operations, will make the final decision on whether a shuttle should be launched, said the test pointed up a few areas in problem-solving that needed to be improved, but all in all it was an excellent rehearsal.

Challenger's seventh astronaut died when a faulty booster rocket caused their spaceship to explode.

Jan. 28, 1986. With the two boosters still attached and burning, the crew had no chance to escape; that is still the case.

The simulated failure Tuesday of two of the three main engines occurred seconds after the boosters "burned out" normally and were jettisoned, enabling the three astronauts, operating in a Houston simulator, to execute an abort maneuver called "return to launch site," or RTLS.

"We think we've lost the left engine," astronaut Loren Shriver, the simulator commander, told mission control slightly more than two minutes after the pretend liftoff.

"Discovery, we confirm the left engine is down. Abort RTLS," the control center radioed.

Shriver and his crew members, James Webber and Franklin Chang-Diaz, "flew" the simulator to an altitude of about 75 miles and 300 miles out over the Atlantic Ocean to exhaust hundreds of thousands of gallons of fuel.

With a second engine now "knocked up and useless," the astronauts pitched around, went through the motions of jettisoning their huge external fuel tank into the ocean, and battling hydraulic and other difficulties, glided to the make-believe touchdown on a runway three miles from the launch pad. Landing occurred 21 minutes after the abort maneuver began.

Observing in Houston were commander Rick Husband and the four members of his crew who will fly the four-day Discovery mission in August.

Because of the Challenger accident, NASA has introduced hundreds of changes, most aimed at safety, into the launch process. The changes include new procedures, management responsibilities and ground and flight hardware and software.

Court upholds cut-in fuel-economy rules

WASHINGTON (AP) - The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration acted responsibly in lowering mandatory fuel economy standards to 26 miles per gallon, a federal appeals court ruled, 2-1, Tuesday.

NHTSA lowered the corporate average fuel economy, or CAFE, standard automakers must meet in 1986 from the 27.5 mpg set by Congress to 26 mpg, asserting the higher standard was not economically practical.

The state of California, the cities of Los Angeles and New York and four citizens groups, led by Washington-based Public Citizen, filed petitions requesting a court review of the order.

Soviet rockets, own computers could leave Star Wars useless

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Soviet Union could launch nuclear-tipped rockets that would threaten to knock out the proposed early-mid version of President Reagan's Star Wars anti-missile system, a scientific study said Tuesday.

The U.S. system also would be threatened by the possibility that the enormously complex software needed to run its computers might fail the first and only time it would be used, the congressional Office of Technology Assessment said.

The conclusions are part of a 2-year-long OTA study that raises new questions about Reagan's program, known formally as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

The Strategic Defense Initiative Organization, in a statement, said the report "reflects a decidedly more constructive and balanced assessment than previous reports by OTA."

But the statement disputed OTA's comments about computer software, claiming the study failed to acknowledge the positive achievements and the real operating record of such systems as the Safeguard ballistic missile defense, which operated for a 10-month period early in the last decade.

The OTA study was publicly released despite the fact that the Pentagon had refused to declassify three chapters dealing with ways the Soviets could counter the American system.

When Reagan announced his program in 1983, he proposed that it should be aimed at making nuclear weapons obsolete. SDI officials have been overseeing research into a wide variety of futuristic technologies, including lasers and beam weapons.

But in the past two years, SDI officials and supporters of the program have been pushing for a less comprehensive "phase one" SDI system which could be started in the mid-1990s. The second and third phases of such a system would be constructed later.

Last year, the Pentagon told Congress that a phase one SDI system costing $75 billion to $150 billion could be deployed using a combination of ground-based rockets and space-based rockets that would be parked in orbiting "garages," ready to fire at attacking Soviet missiles.

But the Soviets could attack such a system with anti-satellite (ASAT) rockets using nuclear-tipped weapons, the OTA study said. The Soviets now have an operational ASAT system.

The Soviet ASAT "would pose a significant threat to all three defense system phases," but particularly to the first two, OTA said.

The Soviet ASAT "would pose a significant threat to all three defense system phases," but particularly to the first two, OTA said.

Shuttle sale OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) - A federal appellate court on Tuesday lifted an injunction barring Eastern Airlines from selling its Northstar shuttle operation to another subsidiary of its parent company, Texas Air Corp.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here lifted a contempt citation issued against Eastern that gave a union challenging the deal 10 days to seek an order to stop it.

Chlordane under test

WASHINGTON (AP) - In what watchdog groups says is an experiment on humans, the Environmental Protection Agency is allowing a banned termite-killer to be tested at inhabited dwellings around the nation.

Under the plan, at least 150 residences will be treated with chlordane, a pesticide, that the EPA says had been used for 40 years of provide termite protection for about 30 million homes in this country.

The pesticide would be applied to the test homes at no expense to the owners, but the owners would have to sign a liability waiver that would make them shoulder legal responsibility for any damage from the tests.

This amounts to EPA-sanctioned human testing of a pesticide, said Jay Feldman, national coordinator of the National Coalition Against the Misuse of Pesticides.

Last August, sale of chlordane for residential applications was halted under an agreement between EPA and Velocel-Chemical Corp., the Illinois-based manufacturer of the pesticide.

What's what

Lovers apart

Q. Ask your Love and War man if absence really does make the heart grow fonder.

A. Depends. That renowned Frenchman Francois De La Rochefoucauld said: "The same wind snuffs candles, yet kindles fires. So, where absence kills a little love, it fans a great one."

Understand there's a kind of

A. They were. There is no Melba herring. She didn't like herring.

Q. That gadget to tell you when to add antifreeze, who invented it?

A. The hydrometer? A woman named Hypatia of Alexandria: Goes way back. To about A. D. 400: She wanted to measure the specific gravity of liquids. Don't know what liquids. Not antifreeze.

Q. How did the seating capacity of the Coliseum at its prime in old Rome compare to that of modern stadiums?

A. Not bad. About the same as Houston's Astrodome, 47,055. But the Coliseum also had standing room for another 20,000.

Q. Does the temperature of beer have anything to do with how well it relieves thirst?

A. Not a thing, experts say. Britain's warm quench, just as well as Colorado's cold, evidently.

Q. Do any restaurants with dress codes prohibit plunging necklines?

A. Know of none. But some hotel restaurants in Hawaii and elsewhere stipulate: "Blouses must be reasonably buttoned."

Q. Does the temperature of beer have anything to do with how well it relieves thirst?

A. Not a thing, experts say. Britain's warm quench, just as well as Colorado's cold, evidently.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A considerable number of delays could cause you some aggravation early today, but everything will be as you like later in the day. This evening would be an ideal time to enjoy some social activities.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Don't do anything which could raise the ire of a superior today. Get together with friends for some much-needed recreation this evening.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Don't go off on any crazy tangents this morning, and you can get much accomplished. This is not a good time to make new acquaintances.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): This is not a good day to make any important decisions, and avoid arguing over finances. Have a happy evening with your mate at home.

MOON-CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't let an argumentative co-worker ruin your good mood this morning. Go over written agreements, and check for errors.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Your work may seem too difficult today, but persevere and you will find it was all in your mind. This is a good time to plan a trip with a friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Although you may be in the mood to have some fun, you would be wise to stick to your work. Be cautious in all business dealings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Calm down before you resort to an unpleasant situation at home. Do whatever you can to cheer up an associate who is feeling blue.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Instead of running around aimlessly, it would be best to handle important business matters which require your immediate attention.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Forget the suggestions of a new acquaintance, and rely on your own fine ideas. This is not a good day to handle important financial matters.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): You are not thinking very clearly today, and your hunches are not helpful either, so make it easy and avoid making any decisions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Playing hunches would not be a good idea today, so stick with practical matters. Arguing with your mate would yield very bad results.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): An older person could make your life very difficult, so avoid this person. Don't try to force your opinions on any of your friends this evening.

If Your Child Is Born Today: He or she will be very receptive to new ideas and trends, and will have a highly progressive nature. Your progeny may have a tendency to lack confidence, however, so be sure to provide plenty of praise and encouragement. Success can be achieved with just a little effort.

Mayor's son will help March of Dimes at 1st birthday party

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Mayor Henry Cisneros' son, nicknamed "miracle baby" after developing normally despite a malformed heart and no spleen, will help raise money for the March of Dimes, his parents said.

John Paul Anthony Cisneros celebrates his first birthday Friday with a Mass and a party at Sacred Heart Catholic Church. His family is asking for contributions to the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation rather than gifts.

"We are looking ahead 10 to 15 years so that we can say, 'Even as a baby I helped raise money for good causes,'" said George Cisneros, the baby's grandfather.

The Cisneroses have been surprised by the health of the child, born with a heart that has only two chambers, no spleen and a malformed stomach. But he has been given medication and has grown from under 6 pounds at birth to 18 pounds.

The mayor and his wife, Mary Alice, are shopping for the child's birthday present, a dog.

"When I get home the first thing he says to me is 'Dah,' which is for dog," the mayor said Monday.

Winfrey to film novel

NEW YORK (AP) — Talk show host and actress Oprah Winfrey says the three major TV networks at first rejected her idea to film the novel "The Women of Brewster Place" because "they said it was too womanish."

But Winfrey, who's not known for her reserve, said in the June 13 issue of People that she wouldn't take "no" for an answer. She delivered copies of Gloria Naylor's book, which won the 1982 American Book award, to five executives at ABC.

Irish castle dedicated

ENNISKILLEN, Northern Ireland (AP) — The 88-year-old Queen Mother Elizabeth flew into Northern Ireland on Tuesday to dedicate a restored castle near the scene of a terrorist bombing that killed 11 people last year.

Scores of soldiers and troops patrolled 18th-century Castle Coole as the mother of Queen Elizabeth II arrived at the 1,370-acre estate.

Reopening the castle following a $6.3 million restoration, the queen mother recalled the Irish Republican Army bombing of a war-memorial service in Enniskillen, a mile away, last Nov. 8.

Singer makes debut

LONDON (AP) — Singer Eartha Kitt will make her London musical debut next month in Stephen Sondheim's "Follies," the show's publicists said Tuesday.

Ms. Kitt, 50, replaces Dolores Gray on July 4 in the supporting role of Carlotta.

"Follies," the musical about soured marriages set at a reunion of Follies showgirls, swept the critics' awards for best musical-of-the-1987-88 season.

In the other major cast change as the show enters its second year at the Shaftesbury Theater, Millicent Martin will take the starring role from Diana Rigg. Co-stars Julia McKenzie, Daniel Massey and David Healy extended their contracts.

Travis begins new tour

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Randy Travis, a major winner of recent country music awards, says he's not sure what to expect from audiences during his first European tour.

The million-selling performer leaves Wednesday on a 12-day tour. On Monday, he was voted entertainer of the year at the 22nd annual Music City News country awards. Among the stops are Paris, Amsterdam, Dublin and London.

"I'm a little nervous. I'm not sure what the response will be," he said.

At Monday's show, Travis also was voted male performer of the year, won single of the year for "Forever and Ever, Amen" and earned album of the year for "Always & Forever."

Travis, 29, a former short-order cook, also won a Grammy award this year and was voted No. 1 male vocalist, single of the year and song of the year by the Academy of Country Music.

Nude magazine sells out quickly near headquarters of Swaggart's ministry

DEBRA MURPHEE
Featured in nude magazine.

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A magazine featuring nude photographs of the woman who said she had sexual liaisons with evangelist Jimmy Swaggart was sold out soon after going on sale in the city where his ministry is headquartered.

In addition to the 15,000 copies of Penthouse Magazine circulated in Baton Rouge, 19,000 of what the magazine called its $4.50 "Debbie Does Swaggart" edition also sold out within hours Monday in New Orleans, according to distributors and newsstand operators.

The North Boulevard branch of City Newsstand in Baton Rouge usually gets about 50 copies of Penthouse each month, but Monday it got 2,000 copies and sold them at a rate of 238 copies an hour or four copies every minute for eight hours.

The Sherwood-Forest Boulevard branch of City Newsstand reported selling 800 of its 1,000 copies within eight hours. That branch's normal allotment of 250 magazines usually lasts an entire month, said spokeswoman Sheila Steen.

The Jimmy Swaggart Ministries and Family Worship Center are based in Baton Rouge; admitted prostitute Debra Murphee said her liaisons with the television evangelist occurred in New Orleans' western suburbs.

According to Penthouse, the poses struck by Murphee in its current edition are the ones Swaggart paid her to assume when they met in 1987 at various motels.

Though Murphee at first said Swaggart paid her only to pose for him, she says in the Penthouse article that he did have sex with her.

At a news conference today in New York City, Murphee said she plans to return home to Indiana and finish high school after promoting the magazine.

Murphee, 28, said she had no particular ambitions for the future, but might try "interior decorating" or something like that.

Murphee characterized Swaggart as "just another customer to me. All I wanted was the money." She said he paid her $20 a visit and saw her once or twice a month.

Penthouse reportedly paid Murphee between $75,000 and $100,000 for the pictorial and interview.

Wealthy couple faces more federal charges

NEW YORK (AP) — Harry and Leona Helmsley, wealthy real estate operators who "already" faced twin tax fraud indictments, could receive more bad news: additional charges for allegedly using a corporate aircraft for private use, a federal prosecutor has revealed.

"There's a lot of money involved" — several hundred thousand dollars, Assistant U.S. Attorney James DeVita told U.S. District Judge John Walker Jr. on Monday in discussing the chance of a superseding indictment against the Helmsleys.

DeVita, at a pre-trial hearing in Manhattan, said the extra charges against the Helmsleys — one of the world's wealthiest couples — will be filed by July 31 or not at all.

DeVita told Walker he would be issuing grand jury subpoenas regarding the plane use. Defense lawyers indicated they would try to quash the subpoenas and block the indictment. DeVita refused to discuss the grand jury probe outside the courtroom.

Helmsley, 79, and his 67-year-old wife were indicted April 15 on federal and state charges that they hid about $4 million in renovations to their Greenwich, Conn., mansion as business deductions.

Drunken driver must pay for other's funeral

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A drunken driver has been ordered to pay for the funeral of a passenger in his car who was killed when it crashed into a tree.

Brett R. Pinnell, 25, of Columbus, was sentenced Monday to 18 months in prison for aggravated vehicular homicide, had his driver's license revoked for life and was ordered to pay for the funeral, including the grave stone. The bill is expected to be about $7,000.

Pinnell pleaded guilty before Franklin County Common Pleas Judge Richard Letts, who imposed the sentence.

"Your honor, I'm very sorry it happened," Pinnell said. "I haven't had anything to drink since then. I haven't had one drop."

DeVita, at a pre-trial hearing in Manhattan, said the extra charges

Nuclear bomb factories create contamination crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) - Mismanagement of the nation's nuclear bomb factories has resulted in a massive radioactive contamination crisis, an international watchdog group said Tuesday.

The International Waste Campaign, a self-styled public interest group based in New York City, released a 150-page report, which charged that there are dangerous levels of radioactive pollution at all 16 of the Energy Department's major production facilities for nuclear weapons.

"It is one of the great ironies of our age - in the name of national security, we are poisoning ourselves," said the group's director, Minard Hamilton.

The two-year study by nine researchers concluded there is a pattern of gross mismanagement by the department, which is allowing radioactivity to leak out of the sites through soil, water and air - in many cases intentionally.

Many of the problems cited by the report have long been acknowledged by the Energy Department and have been the subjects of several blistering reviews by the General Accounting Office. But the independent study is the most wide-ranging compendium published to date on the issue and suggests the cleanup costs will exceed the Energy Department's estimate of $100 billion.

"The scope of the contamination is clearly enormous and has been hidden by government secrecy," said Marvin Icenikoff, the group's research director.

The Energy Department referred calls on the subject to the office of an official who was not immediately available for comment Tuesday.

Among key examples of contamination cited by the report:

- At the Hanford Reservation in southeastern Washington, billions of gallons of radioactive water are routinely pumped into the ground each year. An underground plume of radioactivity stretches six miles to the Columbia River, one of the world's premier salmon runs and an irrigation source for two states.

- At the Savannah River Plant in South Carolina, millions of gallons of radioactive fluids are poured into seepage basins actually designed to leak at a steady rate.

Strontium-90.

Anti-gay violence increasing

WASHINGTON (AP) - The AIDS epidemic has made America's lone society seem only more vitriolic to anti-gay violence, a study reported Tuesday that said reports of incidents of anti-gay violence rose 44 percent last year.

A report of 200 incidents, ranging from verbal abuse to murder, were reported in 1987 to the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force and David Berill, director of the group's Anti-Violence Program.

The statistics were included in the report, "Anti-Gay Violence, Victimization & Discrimination in 1987," the third in an annual study by the gay rights advocacy group.

"We are a community under siege," Berill said at a news conference in Washington battling "AIDS and anti-gay violence."

AIDS, a supposed immune deficiency syndrome, has made the gay community more visible, Berill said, and the disclosure of lesbian and gay visibility is one you're more visible, some more of it.

The report said that all incidents reported last year and 5 percent of the physical assaults involved verbal references to AIDS by the perpetrators or were directed against people with the disease, the study found.

In 1987, nearly two-thirds of the total group reporting anti-gay incidents that year believed that "a social disease" associated with AIDS had increased anti-gay violence in their communities, according to the report.

The overall statistics represented a small percentage of the actual number of anti-gay incidents occurring in the U.S., Berill said.

Quartz cancer treatable, doctors say

The 45-year-old operation, Duarte's operation, physicians, including the oncologist, are continuing to the statement released by Walter Reed Army Medical Center, where Duarte, 62, tolerated the surgery well, doctors said.

After undergoing a certain incision in Duarte's stomach, the surgical team cut off the diseased portion of Duarte's stomach, the statement said.

But, as the doctors did not remove the cancer, it is expected in both Duarte's stomach and elsewhere in the body of the cancer. Following Duarte's operation, the disease will probably be treated with chemotherapy, the statement said.

Physicians removed an intravenous catheter and a 42-hour return to the hospital room for Duarte. The surgery followed a procedure used on Duarte's wife and life partner, the statement said.

Hazelton retains Van Sickle by 4-to-1 vote

Councilman Ervid Van Sickle cuts a celebration cake after Hazelton residents voted to retain him on the council

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

HAZELTON — By more than a four-to-one margin, Hazelton residents voted Tuesday to retain Councilman Ervid Van Sickle in the face of a threatened recall.

Van Sickle, speaking while celebration cake was being cut, expressed surprise at the overwhelming margin of his victory.

"They've kind of tied together and didn't let this happen," Van Sickle said. "And I don't believe it was just get behind me, it was get behind the city."

The final tally showed 172 votes against recall and 36 for. City Clerk JoAnn Wolf said. The number of votes cast represented the largest total in the history of Hazelton, population roughly 530.

The town, politically energized by the recall election, saw its number of registered voters soar, from 135 in the last election to 237 as of Tuesday.

"I guess about all we can say is that the people have decided what they want," said Lonnie Brutke, the recall movement's leader. "We provided the opportunity that was available by law. And if that's what the people want, I think that's what they should have."

Van Sickle said he personally didn't take any measures akin to a campaign in fighting the recall, which stemmed from the February firing of Supervisor-Marshal Clinton Watson.

"I just did what I do every day," Van Sickle said. "I went to work and worked."

But he added that some of his supporters in town "took the bull by the horns and did what needed to be done."

The City Council next meets Monday night at which time it will recount the votes and make the outcome official, Wolf said.

In weeks leading up to the election, Brutke said that he and other detractors would probably try to recall every one of the council's five members if their initial effort succeeded. Brutke discarded that possibility Tuesday night.

"Well, I think that would probably be a waste of time, that would be my opinion right now," he said.

Brutke, Watson's former lawyer, said he could offer no definite explanation for the stiff margin of Van Sickle's victory. But he did mention a letter, signed only by "concerned citizens of Hazelton," which was mailed Monday to those voters who signed the petition requesting Van Sickle's recall.

The letter asked recipients to reconsider their vote because other city council members and fire department officials were threatening to quit should the recall succeed, Brutke said.

"So it worried a lot of people," he said. See RECALL on Page B2

3 new administrators in offing Gooding schools

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Gooding native Jim Cobble will take over as superintendent of Gooding schools July 1, replacing Lester Diehl, who will retire June 30 after 36 years in education, the last six in Gooding.

Diehl says he and his wife Joyce will return to their ranch in Genesee when he leaves the Gooding position.

The Gooding School Board honored Diehl by naming the new vocational education shop at Gooding High School in his honor. The facility was constructed under Diehl's administration.

Two new principals will also join the Gooding administrative team this summer. Robin Winklow of Boise will take over for Cobble at the elementary school and Rich Thompson from Kimberly will take the top spot at Frabry Junior High School. Thompson will replace Wayne Thompkins, who resigned earlier this year to pursue other business interests. The two principals will earn $31,000 a year.

Cobble will earn $40,000 as superintendent. He has served the past two years as principal of Gooding's Gibbons Elementary School. Cobble says he and his wife will move from their current home in Jerome to Gooding, where they were raised.

Cobble taught for five years and has been an administrator for five. He also worked for 13 years in the family business in Jerome.

Cobble also served for six years on the Jerome School Board. He did not seek re-election to that position in May's school trustee election and his term ends June 30.

Cobble says the Gooding district has operated in a fiscally conservative and responsible manner and as a result is "not operating in the red." He says he will continue such fiscally responsible policies, but adds "Gooding is perhaps more dependant on student enrollment than some districts because of the tax base here."

State funds are based, in part, on the number of students in a district. Gooding has lost more than 50 students in the past two years, showing a total enrollment of 1,057 for the 1987-88 school year. Early projections showed a possible drop to 1,035 for the 1988-89 school year, but Diehl said this year's enrollment numbers remained fairly constant.

"If we see additional drops in enrollment, it could mean cuts in school programs," Cobble said, but added the district would continue to work to meet community expectations, and state and federal guidelines.

He said one of his priorities is maintaining Gooding's "good education program."

"I don't expect any major changes, we can evaluate and build on our strengths," he said.

Pondering his departure, Diehl says he feels Idaho schools do a good job of educating the state's young people. He says he gets annoyed when people complain that Idaho's relationship with the state is not as good as it should be.

Coors plans major move to Burley

By ADRIENNE TOOMEY
Times-News writer

BURLEY — In spite of what brawny athletes on commercials say, it takes more than Rocky Mountain spring water to give Coors its distinctive taste. It also takes the scientific research that will soon be done in Burley.

Adolph Coors Co. plans to make Burley a nucleus of beer research and development. The company is moving its primary barley research facility from its Golden, Colo., headquarters to Burley.

"We chose Burley because its climate is very favorable to our strain of barley," said Barry Treat, Coors' senior plant scientist. "It's a reliable site in terms of low wind and hail damage."

The decision came after a lengthy investigation of possible sites in Idaho, Colorado and Wyoming.

According to Treat, barley grown in Burley has a rapid germination speed, good color, and sturdy composition. "Some of our best barley growth has been done in Burley," he said.

For 15 years, Coors has been breeding barley in its Golden greenhouse and transporting the seed to a Burley production farm.

Construction of the new Burley facility, set to begin June 9, will enable Coors to consolidate barley breeding, research and growth into one area.

"We decided it was time to spend the money to combine the two locations into one," said Fin Knudsen, director of brewery research and development.

Coors expects the transition into Idaho to be relatively smooth. "We already have relationships with growers in the area," said Nancy Manion, Coors public relations officer. "We also have great faith in the Idaho Coors Management and distributors."

The new Burley facility will be comprised of two greenhouses and a research laboratory. The laboratory will be the site of herbicide, pesticide and fertilizer research.

"Screening various chemicals is a major part of our research," Treat said. "We are very concerned with making sure chemicals don't show up in our beer."

Barley breeding research will be conducted in two 30-by-60-foot

Symms optimistic over fossil bill OK

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Despite local fears that a battle over water rights language will doom hopes for an economic boost, Sen. Steve Symms is predicting ultimate passage of legislation declaring the Hagerman Fossil Beds a National Monument.

"It won't kill it," Symms said Tuesday of the battle over the water rights provision. "It's just a matter of time. We'll eventually get that bill passed, but there are some issues you just can't compromise on and one of those is Idaho's water rights. ... We can't give away control of Idaho's water."

The bill is in pending in the House, where Symms maintained environmentalists were trying to win additional provisions that would effectively subordinate Idaho's rights to control its water.

"Water is not a major issue in the Hagerman Fossil Bed bill, but Symms said the fear is the precedent it would set in other areas of the state."

"Sen. (James) McClure thinks, and I agree, it should not be accepted," Symms said. "We'll have to continue to fight that battle until the House of Representatives comes along with the Senate language and accepts the Senate language."

In an attempt to bolster chances for the national monument designation, the state Legislature this winter declared the Hagerman Horse, a 3-1/2 million-year-old fossil, the official state fossil.

Magic Valley officials hope the national recognition of the fossil beds will increase tourist activity in the Hagerman area.

On other issues in the telephone news conference from Washington, Symms said he had confirmed that the FBI has made a decision about the location of its Montana-Idaho office, now in Butte, but that he does not know what the decision is. He said he would be contacting Justice Department officials on the issue soon.

While originally opposed to the American flagging of Kuwaiti oil tankers to protect them in the troubled Persian Gulf, Symms said he would not support legislation to end the reflagging.

"The command and chief made the decision in the first place, and I'm not sure it would be wise to pull out now," Symms said.

He predicted a "fairly amicable" state Republican convention next week in Coeur d'Alene, contending the potential party rift between moderates and conservatives has been exaggerated.

On the political front, Symms said it would be pure speculation to try predicting Vice President George Bush's running mate this fall. But while ticking off a long list of possible candidates, he said the "most likely person" would be former presidential candidate Bob Dole. The Kansas senator was the party's vice presidential candidate in the GOP's unsuccessful 1976 campaign to retain the White House.

New study moves MVRMC cancer center much closer

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Quality, convenience and cooperation.

Those are the key factors to success of a Magic Valley Regional Medical Center cancer center, according to a recently completed feasibility study.

The hospital's board of directors Tuesday night gave another go-ahead to the center, which elicited controversy and opposition when it was proposed late last year. The board voted to re-affirm its approval of the plans, but at a cost $400,000 more than originally planned.

The $2.5 million center is planned for the southwest corner of the hospital and will provide chemotherapy and radiation therapy to area residents. Even though it will cost more, the center should be breaking even by 1992, the study concludes.

The study was prepared by Jack Dobson and Robert Walcher of San Diego-based Oncology Planning and Technology.

Part of the increased cost came from the board's decision to buy a more expensive and versatile radiation machine to provide better quality service; allow more patients to be treated and make it easier to recruit a qualified oncologist.

While Dobson said at the Monday meeting that the center was feasible and needed, he cautioned the hospital to work hard on getting cancer patients referred to the center from other hospitals in the Magic Valley area.

"MVRMC is seen as a hospital which needs to learn to be a regional referral center, rather than a direct competitor of other area hospitals, if its future cancer center is to be successful in attracting distant referrals," the study said.

Much of the success will come if the oncologist the hospital is recruiting actively solicits referrals from other hospitals by developing programs and talking to physicians in outlying areas, Dobson said.

"Any kind of relationship can work — it doesn't need to be formal," he said.

Except for distance problems, area physicians are satisfied with cancer treatment centers in other areas, particularly Mountain States Tumor Institute (MSTI) in Boise, Dobson said.

Several local citizens protested MVRMC's decision to open its own cancer treatment center, especially after MSTI said it had planned to open a satellite clinic in the area. MSTI withdrew its plans when it heard the county hospital intended to build a center.

Even with the higher cost, Dobson said the center will break even in a few years and start showing a modest profit.

Assuming the center is on line and operating in 1990, the first, $3,425 profit will materialize in 1992, the report said. By 1995, the center will be showing a $55,150 profit on $1.2 million of expenses.

"We're talking more or less a break-even situation," he said.

Nevertheless, a population growing older will have higher rates of cancer. By 1994, the center should be seeing

Officials pass on city water

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city says the lead content of the water it delivers is within safe levels, but warns that each home and building has its own piping system that could be a health hazard.

Water Superintendent Joe Koon said lead pipes in older homes could lead lead into drinking water, resulting in contamination.

"Even though there is no evidence of contamination in water from the Water Department, lead can be introduced into the water supply through domestic plumbing," Koon said.

However, Gary Burkett, water quality engineer for the state Division of Environmental Quality, said water in the Magic Valley is almost entirely noncorrosive and does not cause lead poisoning.

Twin Falls recently released the results of a study required by the Safe Drinking Water Act.

The city's water supply contained one-tenth the maximum level allowed for lead, Koon said.

He said the city is also required to warn its customers about the potential for danger when their plumbing includes lead piping, connections or solder.

An Environmental Protection Agency report said lead in the body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidneys, nervous system and red blood cells.

"The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure, is to young children and pregnant women," the report said.

Burkett said he does not know of any cases of lead poisoning in Magic Valley stemming from lead leaching into water systems.

He said if people suspect they have a lead problem they could have their water checked for lead content by sending it to a private laboratory. There are several in Boise.

"If they know they have lead pipes in their plumbing they'll want to recommend that they have them checked," Burkett said.

If pipes exceed EPA standards, the health hazards of using them can be reduced by waiting a few moments after turning on a faucet each morning to flush the settled water run out, using only cold water for drinking and cooking, and replacing lead pipes.

Burkett said water in the area usually forms a layer of calcium carbonate on the pipes, protecting them from erosion.

He said the city does not have any lead pipes in its system.

Koon also said the city tests its water on a yearly basis for several chemicals, including nitrate, chromium and mercury, that are harmful in large doses.

He said the city is within safe levels for all of those chemicals.

Koon said the city is not required to test its water for some chemicals, including zinc, copper and cyanide, because they do not commonly occur in the area.

Coors officials say the expansion in Burley should provide a positive influence on area agriculture. "Idaho is trying to attract new businesses and expand old ones, and this is an example of expansion," said Dick Burwell, president of Adolph Coors Co. of Magic Valley Districting.
"A lot of farmers grow Coors barley in this area," he said. "I think it says something really positive that Coors is obviously pleased with what they've been producing."

Coors has contracted for 40,000 acres of barley in Idaho this year. About 15,000 are in the Magic Valley. The construction site is four miles west of Burley next to the current Coors receiving elevator. According to Treat, the new facility will be completed in September.
Three employees will transfer to Burley from Golden to start the research center. More employees might be added later, Manion said.

Angry residents started talking recall when council members unanimously fired Watson, a lifetime Hazelton resident—the recall petition, filed in April, stated that Van Sickle motioned for Watson's dismissal after having been on the council for only 34 days.
The petition further charged that Van Sickle cost the city money when he motioned to hire an attorney to handle a threatened lawsuit.
Van Sickle, a first-term council member, would not say Tuesday whether he plans to run for reelection, adding, "This was too tough as it was."

Felony driver escapes

BURLEY — Police Tuesday obtained an arrest warrant for the man who fled after his car fatally struck a Burley motorcyclist, but were unable to locate the suspect.

Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal identified the suspect Tuesday as Jaime Alvarez, 21. The warrant was issued on felony charges of vehicular manslaughter and leaving the scene of an injury accident.

The last known residence for Alvarez, a Mexican national, was in Logan, Utah. Crystal said authorities have sent a teletype to several regional states requesting them to look for Alvarez.

Alvarez allegedly hit and killed Basilio Garcia, 47, a Burley resident who was riding a Honda motorcycle. The accident occurred Sunday night in the intersection of a Burley residential area.

Alvarez and three passengers in a Ford LTD allegedly fled the scene on foot after the car hit a house and fence about 200 feet from the initial collision. Authorities located and questioned two of the passengers later that night and obtained a description of the car's driver.

No results from search

TWIN FALLS — About 10 days after he disappeared, Twin Falls sheriff's officers are giving up the search for an 80-year-old man who wandered away from a Twin Falls care center.

William Marshall Briggs has been missing since May 28, when he presumably left the Magic Valley Living Center on foot.

Twin Falls Sheriff Jim Munn said Tuesday that searchers have been scouring nearby canals without success. On Thursday 17 searchers combed the Low Line Canal, located about a quarter mile north of the Living Center.

Deputies have also flown at least one aerial search mission for Briggs, who has Parkinson's disease and is mentally impaired.

Munn said searchers will still make periodic checks on canals near the center, but any kind of official search is completed. He added that the sheriff's office will still appreciate notice of any sightings of Briggs.

Briggs has a stunted back and walks with a shuffle, according to authorities. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighs 150 pounds, has brown and gray hair and blue eyes.

He was last seen wearing a black and brown sweater, brown pants, brown shoes and no coat.

Cattle convention set

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Cattle Association's mid-year convention begins today and runs through tomorrow at the Twin Falls Holiday Inn.

A golf tournament will be held this morning, from 8 a.m. to noon at the Blue Lakes Country Club.

Committee meetings begin at 1:30 p.m. at the Holiday Inn. The Public Lands Committee will be discussing the wilderness lands issue from 1:30 to 5:30 p.m. The Public Affairs Committee will consider whether to create a political action committee, and will take a position on the investment tax credit.

Other committees will hold simultaneous meetings. The dinner will be at 7 p.m. tonight. For more information call Gary Glenn at 343-1615.

Regulators to review complaint

BOISE (AP) — State utility regulators have taken under review a proposal from their staff and attorneys for Mountain Bell Telephone Co. to dismiss a consumer complaint for a formal investigation of the telephone company's rates and profits.

Public Utilities Commission President Dean Joe Miller effectively forced Tuesday's delay in reaching the decision, saying he could not support dismissal of the complaint from the Idaho Citizens Coalition until he had a clear idea what alternative action the commission planned.

Commission Perry Swisher, citing the fact that most of the claims in the complaint are no longer at issue, said, "It's a rather thin thread on which to hang a complaint."

But while coalition attorney Scott Burnum agreed, he said the coalition's overall request for an investigation into Mountain Bell's rates and earnings was still legitimate, and Miller seemed to agree.

He pointed out that Mountain Bell's 1987 operating report filed with the commission staff showed that it was earning in excess of its allowed rate of return on its investment. The allowed return is 14 percent, and the report showed the rate last year running from 14.5 percent to 15 percent.

The coalition, led by Al Featherhill, filed the investigation request last winter during the legislative debate on telephone deregulation after Mountain Bell published an advertisement saying Idaho customers paid $18 million more for service since 1983 than they would have had lawmakers enacted deregulation then.

Mountain Bell called the complaint potentially merited and intended to affect the deregulation debate.

Blaze forces firms, homes to be cleared

MIDVALE, Utah (AP) — Businesses and homes were evacuated for several hours as flames destroyed three warehouses and threatened to ignite nearby fuel tanks.

No injuries were reported in the blaze, which sent a thick pillar of black smoke billowing over the Salt Lake Valley and forced the closure of main traffic arteries.

Police evacuated a 1,500-foot radius around the fire, but began allowing residents and employees back into the area about 5 p.m., 2½ hours after the fire was reported at 2:35 p.m.

Firefighters had worried flames would ignite a 250-gallon propane tank and 500-gallon gasoline tank near the adjoining, wood-frame warehouses.

Deary man loses appeal

MOSCOW (AP) — A Deary man convicted of pilfering his elderly mother's estate after being named her legal guardian and conservator has lost his bid to have the verdict reversed.

Second district Judge John Bengtson refused to overturn the April 12 jury verdict against Gerald Boag on Monday, and denied his request for a new trial.

Boag is scheduled for sentencing next Monday. He was convicted of grand theft after spending tens of thousands of dollars from his mother's savings on cars, a logging truck, horses and satellite dishes, as well as gambling and bar tabs.

Boag's trial attorney argued that the spending was stupid, but not criminal. But Latah County Prosecutor Craig W. Mosman characterized Boag as a greedy man who squandered his mother's estate, which was once valued at $100,000.

Violet Boag suffers from Alzheimer's disease and lives at a Moscow nursing home.

OPEC members discuss quotas

LONDON (AP) — OPEC members are gathering again this week, but the oil ministers are expected to devote little attention to their effort to form an alliance with non-cartel members and focus instead on whether to overhaul output quotas.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is to convene its regular mid-year meeting in Vienna, Austria, on Saturday, six weeks after failing to work out an agreement with six non-cartel nations for cutting oil production to bolster world oil prices.

Industry analysts predict that approach will be on the backburner at this meeting as OPEC ministers grapple with the cartel's own production quota system.

OPEC currently has an agreement to limit production by 12 of its 13 members to 15.06 million barrels of crude oil a day. Iraq is the only member that refused to go along with the agreement, which was extended last December and is due to expire June 30.

Israelis and Soviets meet

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel will hold his first meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze on Thursday, an Israeli spokeswoman said.

Genine Stauber said no exact time and place for the meeting had been set.

The Soviet Union broke diplomatic relations after the 1967 Middle East war but appears to be departing from its policy of not restoring them until the Israelis give up Arab territories occupied in the war.

Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev has indicated in several recent speeches that the Soviet Union might resume normal relations after an international peace conference on the Middle East is convened.

Car bomb explodes in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A car bomb exploded Tuesday near a Syrian military checkpoint in south Beirut and touched off fighting between Syrian troops and pro-Iranian militiamen, police said. At least six people were killed.

The blast in the seaside district of Ouzai killed four people and wounded 39, including two Syrian soldiers and two Lebanese policemen, police said. Two more people died and another was injured in the gunfight.

Heat wave falls on Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Warm air from Central Asia settled over Moscow on Tuesday, driving the temperature to 95 degrees and setting a record for the month of June.

Office workers shed coats and ties and long lines formed at kiosks selling ice-cream and kvass, a cool drink made from brown bread and sugar or honey.

Soviets launch first space flight of 1988

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Soviet cosmonauts and a Bulgarian rocketed into space Tuesday on the first manned flight of 1988, riding a column of orange flame on live television, courtesy of Mikhail S. Gorbachev and "glasnost."

Alexander Alexandrov, 36, from the Bulgarian town of Omurtag, had waited more than nine years for the flight. The Soyuz TM-5 space capsule lifted off at 6:03 p.m. from the Baikonur Cosmodrome in Soviet Central Asia.

The broadcast on state television showed flames spewing from a Vostok rocket booster to lift the capsule into a nearly cloudless blue sky.

"I feel excellent," Alexandrov said from inside the capsule seconds after the launch. The shot, in black and white, showed him in cramped quarters.

Before Gorbachev became the Soviet leader, with his "glasnost" policy of openness in selected areas, launches customarily were broadcast only when successful and only on tape, after the fact.

Tuesday's live coverage lasted more than an hour, and other media also featured the story.

Tass carried 10 reports on the launch and the Soviet manned space program.

Violence increases during general strike in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Widespread violence and night deaths were reported Tuesday, the second day of a nationwide general strike that organizers claimed involved 2.5 million people.

Employers and transport companies said support for the strike had dwindled and that more workers were on the job in many areas.

In Durban, however, the Federated Chamber of Industries said the strike had intensified around the nation's third-largest city.

Black labor unions and anti-apartheid groups called the three-day protest, which the government says is illegal, to oppose the 2-year-old state of emergency and proposed legislation to restrict the rights of unions to strike.

The Congress of South African Trade Unions, the largest black labor federation, said at least 2.5 million people were staying away from jobs and schools. It called the strike the most significant to date.

General secretary Jay Naidoo denied government claims that the protest was being sustained by intimidation.

He told reporters the strike was a reflection of the wide-scale resentment and anger" about orders issued in February that barred his organization and other anti-apartheid groups from political activity.

President P.W. Botha's government imposed the emergency June 12, 1986, to combat a black uprising against apartheid, the policy of race discrimination that preserves privilege for South Africa's 5 million whites and denies the 26 million blacks a voice in national affairs.

In Lusaka, Zambia, the exile headquarters of the outlawed African National Congress guerrilla movement declared "unequivocal support" for the strike. The ANC is the main group fighting white domination in South Africa.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said: "The strike appears to enjoy the overwhelming support of the disenfranchised majority in South Africa and has so far been peaceful.

"We hope all parties will continue to avoid violence. The strike underscores the urgent need for negotiations among South Africans to replace apartheid with a democratic constitutional order."

The three-day strike is the largest black protest under the emergency. A report by state-run South African Broadcasting Corp. said participation declined by 45 percent Tuesday but gave no estimate of the number of people involved. It said in an editorial that the strike represented the strategy of "radical activists who want to make South Africa ungovernable."

Authorities reported more than two dozen incidents of violence Monday night and early Tuesday, including fire-bombings and stonings of homes, buses and trains. Twenty-one arrests and 23 injuries were reported.

Mayor in West Bank stabbed in the heart

EB BIREH, Occupied West Bank (AP) — The Israeli-appointed Arab mayor of this West Bank town was stabbed in the heart outside his office Tuesday in an apparent assassination attempt by Palestinian militants.

The attack on Hassan Tawil, 74, came as leaders of the Arab uprising issued a new list of directives, including renewed demands that all Israeli-appointed Arab officials resign.

Officials at Ramallah Hospital said Tawil was in serious but stable condition after surgery. He was stabbed once with a "very long-knife" that pierced his heart, diaphragm, liver and stomach, a doctor said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The PLO-led United Leadership of the Uprising demanded in a new leaflet that all Israeli-appointed mayors and Arab employees of the military government step down.

It called for protests and a general strike Thursday in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, captured by Israel in the 1967 Middle East war.

Since the rebellion began Dec. 8, 201 Palestinians have been killed and more than 5,000 injured. Two Israelis have died.

Israeli Police Minister Chaim Bar-Lev, who visited El Bireh after the attack, said he hoped the stabbing would not lead to resignations.

Israeli-appointed mayors serve in about a dozen West Bank towns and cities. Heads of about 85 village councils also are appointed by the military government.

Sanctions in Panama hurt companies

Los Angeles Times
PANAMA CITY, Panama — New regulations governing U.S. economic sanctions against Panama are putting American companies in a bind between the rule of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega and the Reagan administration.

The 82 pages of regulations, which were delivered to American companies here last Wednesday, are likely to lead to a crackdown against firms that the U.S. government says are violating the law, according to U.S. officials. The sanctions were officially imposed April 8 as part of a plan to force Noriega to surrender power and go into exile.

The "pretty restrictive" American Chamber of Commerce official said of the long-delayed regulations, "It's going to be harder now for American companies to do business here."

The prospect of stricter application of the sanctions adds to a growing sense of alarm in Panama's business community. Despite an outward appearance of normalcy, the economy is steadily deteriorating, and a mood of depression and resignation has spread among Panamanian businessmen who have been in the forefront of the movement to oust Noriega.

Up to now, Noriega has been able to bank on the surprising resilience of the economy, defying U.S. predictions that a cash crunch would topple the strongman's figurehead and civilian government, and force him to quit as commander of the Panama Defense Forces.

Minister quits in Sweden to avert vote

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Justice Minister Anna-Greta Leijon resigned Tuesday over a secret investigation she authorized in the Olof Palme murder case, averting a confidence vote that threatened to bring down the government.

Mrs. Leijon, 49, was the highest-ranking woman in Swedish politics and a leading figure in the Social Democratic Party. Critics accused her of overstepping her authority by approving the secret probe of Prime Minister Palme's assassination, which has stumped police.

Palme was shot to death on a downtown street the night of Feb. 28, 1986, while walking home from a movie with his wife. The killer has not been found and no motive has been established.

The resignation forestalled a no-confidence motion in Parliament that Ingvar Carlsson, Palme's successor, appeared certain to lose. It was an embarrassing setback for the Social Democrats, who lead a minority government, three months before general elections.

She authorized a friend to look into allegations that he ordered the killing because Palme had stopped illegal Swedish arms sales to Iran.

Try these beat-the-heat main dish salads

Easy preparation will keep you cool

When the temperature soars and no one feels like eating, much less cooking, main dish salads come in handy. Fast and fuss-free to prepare, they wake up warm-weather appetites and keep the kitchen and the cook cool.

Creating beat-the-heat main dish salads can be an easy act of improvisation. Start with deli-cooked meat or poultry, or convenient canned tuna. Add a colorful combination of the season's finest salad fixings, toss with a zesty dressing and chill to allow flavors to mingle. What could be easier?

THAI-STYLE BEEF SALAD

- ½ cup picante sauce
- ¼ cup chopped cilantro
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce, as desired
- 1-2 teaspoons shredded fresh ginger, as desired
- ¾ pound deli-sliced roast beef, cut into ¼-inch strips
- 4 cups shredded romaine lettuce
- 1 cup halved cucumber slices
- 1 small red or yellow bell pepper, cut into short thin strips

- ½ cup sliced radishes
  - ½ cup thin red onion rings
- Combine picante sauce, cilantro, oil, soy sauce and ginger; mix well. Toss ½ cup of the picante sauce mixture with meat. To serve, toss remaining picante sauce mixture with lettuce, cucumber, yellow pepper, radishes and onion rings. Arrange lettuce mixture on serving platter; top with beef mixture. Serve with additional picante sauce. Makes 4 servings.

TEX-MEX TUNA SALAD

- 2 cans (6½-ounce each) OR 1 can (13-ounce) solid white tuna in water, drained and flaked
- ½ cup sliced ripe olives
- ½ cup sliced green onions with tops
- ½ cup thinly sliced celery
- ¾ cup picante sauce

With beef, it's good news, bad news

America has been bullish on beef for 25 years, but lately we've been chickening out.

Since 1976, consumption has fallen by almost 20 percent according to Jane Slickers' "Nutrition Book." When pot bellies on middle-aged men started outnumbering those in country stores, and our arteries ran yellow with fright and cholesterol, we cut down.

Now beef is claiming a new look and magazines are proclaiming that "Beef is Back." So I decided to give beef another look, too.

Beefeaters, the ones who favor meat, not gin, claim beef is loaded with protein. One cup of lean diced cooked beef chuck contains 90 percent of the recommended daily allowance of protein. But do we need that much protein from one source and all one meat?

Remember vegetables, dairy products and grains also contain protein. According to a United States Department of Agriculture survey, the average middle-aged man consumes 60 percent more than the RDA for protein, the average woman about 25 percent more and children about two times the RDA. A mere 3 percent of our population does not get enough protein.

Beef is considered a better quality protein than vegetables because it contains all the amino acids our bodies need, even the ones we can't make ourselves, to reconstruct protein. But by combining different kinds of plants, we can get all the amino acids we need without eating meat at all.

Jane Slickers
Food and Health

Nutritionists are critical of meat's high fat and cholesterol content. That cup of lean chuck, besides packing protein, contains 270 calories with 30 percent fat — actually not a bad fat bargain since 30 percent of calories from fat is the American Heart Association recommendation.

But nobody eats diced lean chuck very often. More than likely we indulge in a juicy T-bone with 80 percent of its calories coming from fat and only 20 percent from protein. These numbers apply to a 3-ounce serving.

However there is some good news: a 16-ounce T-bone before cooking weighs in at 5.5-ounces after it is cooked and the bone and fat are eliminated. This portion contains approximately half a day's allowance of cholesterol and 400 calories.

But this is not ordinary fat, this is beef fat, the 54 percent saturated kind (compared to safflower oil which is 11 percent saturated). That 6-ounce lean only portion of T-bone also has 40 percent of your daily saturated fat allowance. That doesn't leave you much calorie allotment left for blue cheese dressing on your salad or butter and sour cream on your baked potato. It should be noted that polyunsaturated fats are not harmless and are associated with free radicals which are cancer promoters.

The fat content of meat is changing. Sunset magazine claims beef cattle today have 40 percent less fat than they did 30 years ago giving us meat that is 8 to 10 percent leaner. A survey of 10 metropolitan cities done by Texas A&M University found that 60 percent of the ground beef sold today is lean or extra lean. If you can find it, beef labeled "lite" is 25 percent leaner than a similar "regular" cut.

In the "Goldbeck's Guide to Good Food," the authors claim that American beef is tender from fat rather than tasty and lean. They point out that raising bulls, which is common in Europe, is unheard of in the U.S. My local source of information scoffed at the idea of raising bulls in an American feedlot operation. It would resemble picking O'Leary's gym with 15-year-old boys, telling them to sit still, chew gum and forget about

Nutritional values interest consumers

Would you eat a food item that came unsolicited through the mail? We wouldn't, even if it had all the appearances of being on the up and up.

This topic came up at our house with the arrival of three sample cookies from a magazine a couple of days ago. There were just too many chances for some unknown evil-minded person to have done something to them as the cookies came only in one of those puffy brown mailing envelopes.

Yep, I'll try the soap and detergent samples, but not anything to eat.

It's sad to have to be suspicious of so many things, but that's the life of a consumer in the late 80's.

What are the things that concern consumers most these days?

In compiling the results of various recent studies, it was found that consumers check for nutrition. That's pretty broad but it would seem that more than half of you

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

(and us) look at labels and check the content of fat and protein for an overall calorie count. You also check the salt or sodium tally of individual items.

You're getting smarter, too. You are learning that you can tell the difference between propagandas and bonafide facts and figures. For example, a recent "Potato Board Spotlight" reported that in a 1973 consumer survey, 32 percent thought that the potato was starchy and fattening. However, in 1985, using the very same wording, this number had fallen to only 7 percent.

The dairy industry seems to be reacting to late trends and con-

JoAnn Irwin makes bridge and food a winning combination

JoAnn Irwin tries out new recipes

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — JoAnn Irwin finds bridge club dinners and luncheons fun occasions to try out new recipes.

"This is especially true for recipes designed to serve quite a few people. Because she cooks mostly for herself and her husband, Dick, these days, preparing a large dish usually means too many leftovers.

Once a month, the Irwins attend a dinner bridge club. It is customary for the hostess to prepare the main dish and for the other five couples to bring something to go along with it.

Irwin says she loves to cook, and that after many years of experience, she can read a recipe and get a pretty good idea of what it's going to taste like and how the dish is going to look.

When preparing a meal for guests, Irwin says she likes to have things that can all be done ahead of time, "so I can enjoy the guests, too, and not have to worry about when it is going to be done, or leaving them and going into the kitchen and all that sort of thing."

She avoids leftovers by entertaining with dishes prepared ahead of time

She says this is one of the things she likes about the following recipe. It can be made ahead of time and then frozen.

- #### SPINACH AND MUSHROOMS
- (Serves 6)
- 2 packages frozen chopped spinach
  - ¼ cup chopped onion
  - ¼ cup melted butter
  - 1 teaspoon salt
  - 1 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
  - 2 tablespoons butter
  - 1 cup grated cheddar cheese
  - Garlic salt
- Cook spinach according to package directions, and drain it very well. Place in the bottom of an 8- or 9-inch-square or round shallow casserole. Sprinkle with the salt, onion and melted butter. Layer ½ cup of the grated cheese over the spinach. Wash, dry and slice the mushrooms. Sauté them in the 2 tablespoons of melted butter. Add to the casserole. Add salt and remaining cheese, and sprinkle with a little garlic salt. Bake 30 minutes at 350 degrees. She says this goes well with ham along with wild rice.

"It's really been very popular with the family," she says, and with almost anybody most of the places I've taken it. A lot of people have asked for the recipe. People who think they don't like spinach very well often like this one."

Another recipe that she says is both easy to do for company, and is "a little bit special" is...

CHICKEN AND MUSHROOMS

(Serves 4)

- 6 tablespoons butter or margarine (she prefers the butter)
  - ¼ teaspoon thyme
  - 1 teaspoon paprika
  - 1 teaspoon salt
  - ¼ teaspoon pepper
  - 1 broiler fryer (2½-3 pounds)
  - 2 cups sliced fresh mushrooms, skinned, or a package of four half-breasts, skinned
  - About ¼ cup flour
  - ½ cup dry white wine
- Melt the butter in a baking dish, about 7x11-inches. Stir in the thyme, paprika, salt and pepper. Dredge each piece of chicken in flour; then swirl around in the butter and spice combination, until well coated. Arrange the chicken in baking dish, meat side down. Bake in a

Here's a salad of stripes

Our egg salad of the week features feta cheese and yogurt

Each week during the summer, the Times-News will feature a cool salad for the hot days ahead. If you have a salad recipe you'd like to share, send to: "Salad of the Week," Times-News, Box 548, Twin Falls, Id. 83303.

This week's "A Salad of Many Stripes" is easy to make.

A SALAD OF MANY STRIPES

- ¾ cup lowfat yogurt
- ½ cup mayonnaise
- 4 cups torn romaine lettuce
- ½ cup chopped red onion
- 1 cup diced red or green bell pepper
- 1½ cups crumbled feta cheese (6-ounces)

- 2 cup sliced celery
- 2 cups sliced mushrooms
- 1 cup halved cherry tomatoes

In small bowl, whisk yogurt and mayonnaise; set aside. In 2-quart clear glass bowl, layer half the lettuce, the onion, bell pepper, half the cheese, the celery, mushrooms and the remaining lettuce. Drizzle top with the yogurt mixture. Arrange a wreath of tomatoes around edge of bowl; sprinkle the remaining cheese in center. Dast with pepper. Makes six servings.

the dance Saturday night. Sunset Magazine claims it's not the fat that makes meat tender, but where it comes from on the animal. The least used cuts of the back are tender, while those of the shoulder and leg are tougher. Sunset also claims marinades of wine and citrus are ineffective tenderizers because they penetrate only the surface fibers. In defense of meat, "The California Nutrition Book" relates the story of Bill Walton's well-documented injuries and his vegetarian diet. Blood tests revealed that he had a zero level of manganese as well as copper and zinc levels at one third normal levels. He had a foot fracture that would not heal and a bone condition that resembled osteoporosis. Within six weeks of taking supplements, his foot healed. "California Nutrition" points out that we absorb manganese from plants at half the rate we absorb it from red meat.

Meat is also the best source for copper and zinc of which small but essential amounts are necessary. Iron is another bonus in red meat. The type of iron in meat is absorbed at three times the rate we absorb it from grains and dried beans and six times the rate we absorb it from spinach. Today is undoubtedly watching Wimpy's hamburgers behind the scenes. Nine out of 10 women do not get the RDA for iron, and lack of iron is considered the number one nutritional deficiency in the U.S. today. In comparing equal amounts of chicken and beef, beef contains 2-3 times the iron as chicken. Beef is also a good source of the vitamins B12 and Niacin. But in 1983, in a widely publicized case in Minnesota, an outbreak of salmonella bacteria made 18 people seriously ill. The resistant strain responsible was traced to a herd of cattle in South Dakota. This scenario had been predicted by scientists due to the routine use of antibiotics in animal feed. According to local feed suppliers, this practice is still common in Magic Valley, as well as the rest of the country. Penicillin and tetracycline may someday be useless in treating human illness because we have allowed them to be used to fatten cattle.

Treating sick cattle with antibiotics is a whole different prospect. This residue is checked at packing plants by inspectors and referred to the Food and Drug Administration if any antibiotic residue is found. The Pocatello office has seen two violations in four years and the Boise office reports one violation in three years.

I've chosen to continue eating beef, but I try to follow the rule of three: 3-ounce portions no more than three times a week — lean cuts only. The leanest cut is eye of round, and of the three grades — prime, choice and select — select is the leanest.

Jane Slickers is a registered nurse with a special interest in nutrition issues. She lives in Twin Falls with her husband Randy, and two sons, Matt 13, and Brad 11. Her column, "Food and Health," appears once a month in The Times-News.

corns of consumers. They introduced 537 new dairy products during 10 months alone in 1987. I'll bet most of them were in the low to no-fat category.

By the way, the cookies I received were accompanied by this recipe. I tried it out and it does make a chewy cookie that has 76 calories each.

OATMEAL-RAISIN COOKIES
 2 cups uncooked quick-cooking oats
 2 cups whole wheat flour
 ¼ cup wheat germ
 ¼ cup oat bran (my addition)
 1 teaspoon baking soda
 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
 ½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
 ¼ teaspoon salt
 ¼ cup firmly-packed brown sugar
 1 cup reduced-calorie margarine (if you omit the oat bran, cut this back to ¾ cup)
 2 tablespoons reduced-calorie mayonnaise
 1 egg or 2 egg whites
 1 cup raisins
 ½ cup chopped pecans, preferably toasted

Spray on cooking oil. Combine the oats, flour, wheat germ, oat bran, soda, cinnamon, nutmeg and salt and set aside.

Now cream the brown sugar, margarine and mayonnaise in a large mixing bowl until fluffy. Add egg and beat well.

Now add the mixed dry ingredients and blend thoroughly. Stir in raisins and pecans. Drop dough by level teaspoonfuls onto cookie sheets that have been sprayed with the cooking oil. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven for 10 to 20 minutes (test first batch often.) Cool completely. This makes about 55 cookies — Enjoy!

Salads

- ½ cup dairy sour cream
- 1 teaspoon ground cumin
- Lettuce leaves or shredded lettuce
- 12 taco shells
- Combine tuna, olives, green onions and celery in medium bowl. Combine picante sauce, sour cream and cumin; mix well. Pour over tuna mixture and toss lightly. To serve, line taco shells with lettuce; layer spoon tuna mixture into shells. Or, line individual serving plates with shredded lettuce; top with tuna mixture and surround with tortilla chips. Drizzle with additional picante sauce; top with additional sour cream, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

SPICY-SWEET CHICKEN SALAD

- ¾ cup picante sauce
- ¼ cup mayonnaise
- 1 tablespoon honey
- 2-2½ cups diced cooked chicken or turkey
- 1 cup thinly sliced celery
- 1 cup seedless grapes, halved
- ½ cup chopped toasted pecans
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¾ cup sliced green onions with tops

Combine picante sauce, mayonnaise and honey in medium bowl; mix well. Stir in chicken, celery, grapes, pecans and salt. Cover and chill. Sprinkle with green onions and serve with additional picante sauce. Makes 4 servings, about 4 cups salad.

ARTICHOKE AND CHICKEN SALAD

- 1 jar (6½ ounces) marinated artichoke hearts
- ½ cup picante sauce
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 cups diced cooked chicken or turkey
- ¼ cup thinly sliced red onion rings
- ¼ cup sliced radishes
- 6-8 cherry tomatoes, halved or quartered, as desired
- 1 large ripe avocado
- Lettuce leaves (optional)
- Drain artichoke hearts, reserving marinade; half or quarter, as desired. Combine picante sauce, salt and reserved marinade in large bowl; mix well. Add chicken, artichoke hearts, onion and radishes; toss lightly. Cover and chill. To serve, peel and seed avocado; cut into ½-inch lenthi-wise slices. Cut each slice crosswise into thirds. Add to chicken mixture with tomatoes; mix lightly. Serve on lettuce, if desired, with additional picante sauce. Makes 4 servings.

SOUTHWESTERN COBB SALAD

- ¾ cup picante sauce
- 2 tablespoons bottled Italian dressing
- ¾ teaspoon ground cumin
- 3 cups shredded lettuce
- 2 cups diced cooked turkey or chicken
- 1 can (8-ounces) red kidney beans, rinsed and drained
- 1 ripe avocado, peeled, seeded and diced
- 1 medium tomato, chopped
- 1 cup (4-ounces) diced monterey jack or cheddar cheese
- 6 slices crisply cooked bacon, crumbled

Combine picante sauce, dressing and cumin; mix well. Chill. Line large platter with lettuce. Arrange turkey, beans, avocado, tomato, cheese and bacon in rows over lettuce. To serve, pour picante sauce mixture over salad; toss. Serve with additional picante sauce. Makes 6 servings.

Tomatillos are widely available but a mystery to consumers

By JOAN DRAKE
The Los Angeles Times

Q: What is a tomatillo and where are they sold?

A: The following information on tomatillos is excerpted from "Uncommon Fruits & Vegetables — A Commonsense Guide" (Harper & Row, 1986, $25) by Elizabeth Schneider.

"This star of Mexican salsas is one of about a hundred Physalis species, among which the best-known edibles are the ground cherry and Cape gooseberry. Commonly called Chinese lantern plants, because of their unusual formation, this group has fruits that are enclosed in papery calyxes that cover them like Oriental lampshades. Dry as antique leaves, parchment-colored, the weblike enclosure is easily peeled off to reveal the fruit. The tomatillo (toe-mah-'TEE-yo), which ranges from an inch in diameter to plum-sized, resembles a green cherry tomato (both are members of the Nightshade family) but is more lustrous and firm. Although it may be purplish and may ripen to yellow, it is commonly used green.

"SELECTION AND STORAGE: Look for tomatillos year round, with no predictable season. It is one of those foods that you must ask for to create a regular demand, as it is widely available and well distributed in many areas — in supermarkets, green grocers, or Latin shops. Choose fruits that are firm and dry with clean, close-fitting husks that show no blackness or mold. They should be hard; they do not have give like tomatoes.

"Tomatillos can be stored in the refrigerator for an astonishing length of time; I have kept good ones for close to a month with no signs of deterioration. Place them in a paper-lined dish or basket and simply let them be.

"For longer storage, tomatillos freeze extremely well, once cooked. Husk, wash and stem them. Combine with water to barely cover, keep at under a simmer until softened, but not squishy. Cool in the liquid, then freeze in cooking liquid in one-cup containers for handy sauce-making (use both fruit and liquid for this; do not drain).

—USE: Although traditionally the tomatillo is not used raw, you might like to try it chopped in salad, in gachapcho or guacamole, or sliced or diced as a garnish for cold soups and a sandwich ingredient. You can make the tomatillo into a spectacular garnish by merely pulling back the husk, which will give the effect of a missile in motion, a comet's tail.

"Like red tomatoes, tomatillos have great sauce-ability. Chopped or pureed, they make a tart dressing; cooked and pureed, the flavor is fuller, more mellow, and takes to all kinds of spicing and herbings.

"The traditional uses for tomatillos are hard to beat: In salsa cruda the barely cooked fruits are combined with chili-peppers, onion, garlic, cilantro, and optional seasonings for an all-purpose sauce that seems to go with everything that can be dipped or dressed. The cooked sauce enlivens tacos, cheese dishes, potatoes, huevos rancheros, or chicken enchiladas. Blended with herbs, or pumpkin seeds, stock, or other sauce components, tomatillos are the basis for a wealth of green sauces in which chicken, turkey, fish, or vegetables are simmered.

—PREPARATION: Tomatillos must be husked before use. Peel off the crackly husk, then thoroughly wash the fruits to remove the sticky resinous material near the stems (also removed, obviously).

"To cook or pre-cook the tomatillo, choose one of these methods, depending upon whether you wish a liquid, saucy result (the first method) or a firmer, drier one.

—Barely cover husked tomatillos with cold water; poach gently.

Subpart W of Part 2054 of Title 7, Code of Federal Regulations requires that all voters for FmHA county or area committee elections meet the following eligibility requirements: (a) be farmers; (b) derive the principal part of their income from farming (that is more than 50 percent of their gross income must come from agricultural production); (c) have their principal farming operation within the county or area for which the election is being held.

By submitting this ballot, I attest that I meet the criteria to vote.

Irwin

hot oven of 400 degrees until browned, about 35 minutes. Then reduce heat to 350 degrees. Turn the pieces of chicken over. Add the wine and spread the mushroom over the top. Cover the dish with foil, and continue baking about 35 minutes longer, or until tender. If crispness is desired, put dish under broiler a few minutes.

With this, she says she might serve a broccoli dish with toasted almonds and perhaps a sauce.

And next, a delicious salad.

SONORAN SALAD

- 1 large head of romaine lettuce, chopped or coarsely shredded
  - 1 large tomato, chopped
  - 1 medium red onion, chopped
  - 1 large avocado, chopped
  - 3-ounces blue cheese, crumbled
  - 6 slices bacon, fried and crumbled
  - The dressing:
    - 1/4 cup vegetable oil
    - 1/4 cup vinegar
    - 1 clove garlic, minced
    - 1 teaspoon salt
    - 4 teaspoons sugar
  - Pepper, to taste
- Combine dressing ingredients in a jar, and shake well. Place romaine on bottom of an oval or rectangular bowl. Add all of the vegetables to the salad bowl. Add dressing just before serving.

and toss it.

Irwin says the way she prepares it she has all of the ingredients ready ahead of time. She puts the salad into the bowl and covers it well; then mixes the dressing. When she is ready to serve it, she puts it all together.

"It's pretty and it's good," she says, "especially if you like a blue cheese-type dressing."

She says she has probably taken all of these recipes to bridge club. Here is one that serves eight.

POTATOES SAVOYARD

- 2 1/2 pounds potatoes (approximately 6 medium)
  - 2 tablespoons butter
  - 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
  - 1 teaspoon salt
  - 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
  - 1 1/2 cups grated Swiss cheese
  - 1 1/4 cups boiling beef broth
- Peel the potatoes and slice thinly (or use food processor). Keep them covered in cold water until ready to use. Preheat oven to 425, or if desired, they can be cooked a little longer, at 350 degrees. Rub inside of a shallow 2 quart baking dish generously with butter, using about 2 tablespoons. Drain potatoes and dry thoroughly between paper towels. Put a layer of potatoes in baking dish, using half of the slices, and overlapping them. Dot with 2 tablespoons of the butter, salt, pepper and half of the cheese and parsley. Add a second layer of potatoes, again overlapping them. Sprinkle on the remaining parsley, salt, pepper and cheese, and dot with the last 2 tablespoons of butter. Pour on the boiling broth. Bake until potatoes are fork tender, top is browned and the broth has been absorbed — about 1 hour at 425 degrees and about 1 1/2 hours at 350 degrees.

And, for dessert...

MERENGUE PIE (Serves 8)

- 4 egg whites at room temperature
  - 1/4 teaspoon salt
  - 1 cup sugar
  - 1 tablespoon cornstarch
  - 1 teaspoon white wine vinegar
  - 1 teaspoon vanilla
  - 1 pint heavy cream, or large package Dream Whip (she uses the Dream Whip)
- Beat egg whites and salt. Add sugar gradually, one tablespoon at a time, and beat for 1 minute after each addition. This is very important — make sure the sugar dissolves. Blend the last 1 tablespoon of sugar with the cornstarch, and beat well. Grease and moisten a shallow 10-inch pie pan or oven pan. Pour in the merengue and mound it in the center. (She says sometimes when making a merengue-type shell you mound it to the side of the pie pan so that it has an indentation in the center — do not do that with this. Be sure it's rather mounded.) Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Put the merengue into the oven, and immediately reduce the temperature to 250 degrees, and bake for 1 1/2 hours.

Swirl the merengue with the Dream Whip, and then top each piece with...

RED RASPBERRY SAUCE

- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
  - 1/2 cup sugar
  - dash of salt
  - Blend these well and stir in:
    - 1/2 cup water
    - 2 teaspoons lemon juice
    - 1/4 teaspoon vanilla
  - 1 package (10-ounces) frozen raspberries or 2 cups very ripe, fresh raspberries
- Cook until thickened. Cool. Just before serving, spoon the sauce over each individual piece of pie.
- "It's sweet and it's good, and yet it's fairly light. I think a merengue, even though it is sweet, is not a heavy dessert at the end of a meal," she says.

Ease weeding chores using appropriate chemical checks

You don't have to pull or hoe very many weeds to realize that this is one of the hardest gardening jobs. Fortunately there are several chemical weed killers and weed preventers which can greatly reduce weeding and pulling.

The weeds around trees and shrubs can be prevented by applying herbicides containing Casoron. Although Casoron is primarily a weed preventer, it will kill some small weeds. Although it is safe to use around most woody plants, it will damage herbaceous plants such as flowers and vegetables. So it cannot be used where flowers are planted among, or in front of shrubs or under trees. It can cause damage to some trees and shrubs also, so it is important to read the label for the names of plants on which it can be used safely. Casoron granules are easy to sprinkle around trees and shrubs.

Garden weed preventers containing Dacthal are also available in granular form. Dacthal can be used around flowers and vegetables as well as woody plants. It kills only newly germinating weeds, so any existing weeds must be removed before it is applied. Since Dacthal cannot distinguish between weeds and desirable plants, it cannot be used until seeded vegetables and flowers are up. It can be applied safely immediately after transplanting started plants.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

One of the newest weed killers is Fusilade, which selectively kills grass growing among shrubs, fruits and flowers. The most readily available brand of Fusilade is Grass-B-Gon spray. If you have ever pulled perennial grass out of shrubs or berries, only to have it grow back from the roots in a couple of weeks, you know what a welcome tool this new chemical is.

Fusilade is just the reverse of another group of chemicals we have had for years which selectively kill broadleaf weeds growing in lawns. 2,4-D and many related chemicals such as MCPP and Banvel can be applied in either liquid form or combined with fertilizer.

Glyphosate, sold under several brand names such as Roundup and Cleanup, is the most widely used non-selective weed killer available. It is great for driveways, sidewalks and other places where you do not want plants to grow. I also use it to create a circle of grass and weed free area under trees. You must be very careful in spraying Glyphosate around desirable plants since a few drops on a leaf or green bark can be very damaging. I sometimes screen desirable plants with a piece of cardboard or wrap them in newspaper so I can spray near them.

Weed killers such as Glyphosate and Fusilade work best when weeds are young and growing vigorously. They are much more effective when applied in early summer rather than waiting until weeds are mature and have gone to seed.

If you would like the benefits of these weed killers and weed preventers without handling them yourself, you can hire a professional pest control, lawn or landscape maintenance company to apply them for you.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College.

Garden basics help beginner

Newsday

This is for people who've never gardened before and find themselves seduced one fine spring day by a couple of Kentucky Wonder peppers and Early Girl tomatoes at the local nursery.

A few vegetable plants growing in containers on the porch steps or in a small plot by the kitchen can truly enhance a summer's pleasures. Cherry tomatoes cascading over an old wooden post, a cucumber vine growing up a trellis can be as eye-catching as a clematis. To say nothing of the joys of a simple summer dinner of chopped basil and tomatoes, tossed with a bit of garlic, olive oil and parmesan cheese, over pasta.

But even if you bought these plants on a whim, don't just throw them in the ground. Take the time to learn each one's basic needs, and you'll be rewarded with a healthy, prolific crop. All vegetables need about six hours of sun, remember, and you'll need some kind of watering system. A simple hose and sprinkler will suffice. Don't water during the heat of the day, for short periods. This will just scorch the leaves and encourage shallow root growth. Instead, water deeply, soaking the soil to a depth of about 6 inches. Watering in the morning will allow foliage to dry off and prevent mildew. How often to water, depends upon soil conditions, the amount of rain, heat and sun, so learn to judge from the feel of the soil and the condition of your plants.

Don't plant without preparing the site. Dig in some compost and aged cow manure. Add some peat moss if the soil is too heavy, or too sandy. Peat will lighten up a heavy soil and help a sandy one retain moisture. Test the pH of the soil. Most vegetables do best in the slightly acid range, between 6 and 6.8. Add lime if the soil is too acid, or sulfur if it's too alkaline.

If you go the container route, use a mixture of equal parts garden soil, peat moss and sand (or perlite). You can also just use a soilless mix purchased from a garden center. Make sure the container has drainage holes in the bottom, and if it's large — such as a half whiskey barrel — place it where you want it before filling it with heavy soil.

Letters of thanks

Soccer team thanks Coach Ted McKecher

The Twin Falls U-19 girls' soccer team deeply thanks its coach, Ted McKecher, for his encouragement, tenacity and for all the time he spent with us. We also wish to express our gratitude for the assistance of the Lucich family, Mrs. Smith, and Mrs. Good—for seeing us through our games, driving us to and from game sites, smiling through teen-age pratfalls and keeping us supplied with snacks at half-time. We also wish to recognize the anonymous supporters who have consoled us at our games and gave us a needed lift.

with their children who helped and we're sorry to say that we did not get their names.

It is a relief to know there are still people out in the world like you. Thank you and God Bless you.

WAYNE AND TRESSA LARIBUM
 Boise

U-19 GIRLS' SOCCER TEAM Twin Falls

Seniors had good time at all-night grad party

The Senior Class of Wendell High School would like to thank all those who helped make the Senior Class all-night graduation party such a big success. Out of a class of 56, 47 students were present for an evening of fun, food, games and entertainment. A special thank you to the merchants of Gooding, Jerome, Twin Falls and Wendell for making our Senior Class Party an alcohol-free, memorable event. Thank you!

Home Health, Hospice provided caring service

Although our contact with Home Health and Hospice Service was short, they provided us with a means for adhering to our loved one's wishes and allowed self respect, dignity and togetherness to prevail.

A caring staff helped through the end.

YANDA AND HAROLD JOHNSON
 Filer

Some unselfish people helped folks in need

We'd like to say thank you to all the people who helped us and the many other people like us who were stranded trying to get out of Murphy's Hill Springs to Rogerson Memorial weekend.

Ambulance, paramedic workers do good job

Are we in Magic Valley as ungrateful as we appear to be? In reading "Letters to the editor" we read many complaints, most are legitimate, but on the bright side we have so much for which to be grateful.

Our ambulance and paramedic service is top. I wish to publicly thank and give tribute to our paramedics, who day or night are called to serve us, who are in need of immediate help. With haste, to hard-to-locate places, say at 3 a.m. efficiently taking charge with compassionate care. You are to be commended for your service. Certainly you will never get wealthy, moneywise; but hopefully, it lives you help save and the heartfelt thanks we extend to you may be of some reward.

Thank you for serving and caring.
 M. TEUSEHER
 Twin Falls

Some of these unselfish people were: Griz, owner of the Moon Bar in Filer, and the funny guy we nicknamed the "Weatherman" from Boise who helped keep our spirits up. There were many other people out there

A sadistic lover needs more than a few kind suggestions

DEAR ABBY: Tony and I have been married for nine years. We are both in our early 50s, and it's the second marriage for both of us. Tony is not a violent man, but Tony is too "sensitive" in affection, intimate, too, when he shows affection, he gets so rough he bruises black and blue marks all over me.

Dear Abby

He is not demanding and squeezing me out of the house from work, and he will not let up until he gets me. He wants me near him all the time, and he physically punches or grabs me.

He says he loves me as much as me, but I do not feel the same. I have thought of leaving the marriage, but he says he will not let me go until he can't help himself. He says he was never in love with his first wife.

until he agrees to get some professional counseling and learns how to show his love less sadistically.

DEAR ABBY: When our son was diagnosed as being "in an acute stage of schizophrenia" and was admitted into the special-care unit of a psychiatric hospital, many friends and relatives asked me how he was doing, what they could do to help, etc.

I thanked them for asking, gave them a brief but honest answer concerning his condition, and added, "You could send him a get-well card."

When our insurance coverage ended at the private hospital, he took those get-well cards to the state psychiatric hospital with him; when he was released from there, he carried that little bundle of cards home to keep near him.

He is functioning normally now, and he's never forgotten the thoughtfulness of those people who sent him cards when he was ill.

— CLEVELAND COMMUNICATOR

DEAR COMMUNICATOR: You communicated a valuable message to pass along to my readers: Those who are hospitalized for any kind of illness desperately need to know that friends and relatives wish them well.

It takes so little effort to send a card or a note, and the joy it can bring is incalculable.

DEAR ABBY: We live in New York, and my husband and I plan to move to Florida in July. We have a 90-pound German shepherd and a full-grown domestic cat.

How do we make a worry-free move for our family of four and the pets? I have already been told that pets do not travel well, but I would hate to have to find a new home for them and leave them behind for this reason.

We have considered buying a small station wagon, but I don't know how this will work out for our dog. Any ideas will be a great help.

— T.R. IN N.Y.

DEAR T.R.: My pet consultant, Dr. J. Isaacs, informs me that there is a medication that will alleviate motion sickness and stress for traveling pets.

Also, all pets crossing state lines must have an interstate health certificate to ensure that they are in good physical condition, have the proper vaccinations, etc.

Take your pets to your vet for physical examinations, appropriate medications, shots, etc. Your vet can answer any and all questions, including the name of a competent vet when you get to Florida.

Experienced Indians stand out in B Legion baseball crowd

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

American Legion Baseball

A few years ago, B-division American Legion baseball was an endangered species in southern Idaho. Now it's thriving.

"We have so many kids who want to play on the B team this year that we're going to have to cut a few," said Twin Falls Cowboys' Coach Mike Federico. "There are some kids whose parents didn't want them to play on the A level, so they're on the B team."

The sprawling Southern Region now includes nine B Legion teams, including second-division squads from all four of the A programs in the district. Turnout is up this spring in the self-sustaining B programs at Buhl, Jerome, Wood River and Malad, and even Shoshone — the smallest community in Idaho to support a B Legion team — is holding its own.

Those nine teams will compete for two berths in the state B Legion tour-ament in St. Maries next month, but the 1989 state tournament will be played at Twin Falls' Frontier Field, meaning that for the next two years southern Idaho will have three spots at state.

Here's a look at the six Magic Valley teams:

Buhl
Buhl, which has played second-fiddle to Pocatello and Idaho Falls for the past six seasons in the Southern Region, emerges as a definite favorite this year.

Buhl return virtually intact from last year's 18-22 ballclub which went to state for the second straight year and is a stronger team than the Buhl High School squad which won the consolation trophy at the state Class B prep tournament last month.

"We don't have any real hopes for this year," said third-year coach Tom Fleming. "We're good in the outfield and deep in the infield and we have a little depth everywhere. And we have seven or eight guys capable of hitting the home run for a change."

Fleming has virtually all of the Buhl High team in addition to three college players: outfielder Derrick Brinkman, who played the last year at Marymount College in LaCrosse, Wis.; third baseman-pitcher Cornelio Hernandez, who played at Treasure Valley Community College in Ontario, Ore.; and catcher Kelly Atkinson, who redshirted last season at North Idaho College.

won three games for the Buhl High team in the district and state tournaments; 16-year-old Brian Hansen, a right-hander who is a three-year starter for the Indians; 16-year-old right-hander Brad Herd, who won four games this spring for Buhl High; and 17-year-old right-hander Jeremy Schabot, a spot starter at Buhl last summer.

Brady and Hernandez are both top-line pitchers," said Fleming. "(Shortstop) Casey Boyer and Brady are both hitting .350 to .370, (outfielder Darryl) Lierman is around .340 and Corrie is still in school up at Treasure Valley.

The Indians are off a 4-0 start this summer, with three 10-run run victories.

"As you can see we're ready to play," said Fleming. "With four or five second-stringers out there we're still running over people."

"Having high school baseball in Buhl really helps the program," he said.

While the experience is a plus, Fleming pointed out that playing time is more limited for newcomers.

"The others may not see as much playing time because we have some 18-year-olds for the first time."

Herd, a Fies High School junior-to-be, may be an exception.

"He's almost a starter," Fleming said. "I don't really look at him as a newcomer although most of his time playing time will be on the mound."

Although the Indians have returning starters in eight different positions, Fleming doesn't regard Buhl as the team to beat in the Southern Region this year.

Jerome
There's a new look in Jerome Legion baseball this summer — a new coach, new sponsors, new uniforms even a new name.

"The program was close to being folded last year," said incoming coach Randy Beamer of the newly christened Running Reds. "But we were able to generate enough support this winter from the (United) Dairymen (of Idaho), the Kiwanis and the Optimists that I feel good about the future of the program. Turnout is much higher than it was last year, we were able to get a team bus and expand our schedule."

Attrition has historically been high in the Jerome program because so many players are involved with summer football and basketball camps and with the Basketball Congress International tournament in mid-July. The team was unable to field nine players for its last game at the district tournament last summer.

"The players we have, I think will play all summer," said Beamer. "There will be some kids who will be gone for various reasons, but I think basically everybody on the team is committed to baseball."

Jerome has seven players back

Detroit begins NBA finals with shocker

By BILL BARNARD
The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — The Detroit Pistons upset the defending champion Los Angeles Lakers 105-93 in the opener of the NBA championship series on Tuesday night and used a familiar formula to do it — solid defense on the road.

Detroit, fresh off a series victory over the Boston Celtics, held the Lakers to 39.8 percent shooting, while Adrian Dantley scored 22 of his 34 points in the second half and Isiah Thomas led a 35-17 second-quarter spurt that lifted the Pistons to their fifth victory in their last six road playoff games.

"It's hard to imagine we could have come out with any more intensity, particularly in the first half on the defensive end," Pistons coach Chuck Daly said. "Obviously, they had a poor shooting night."

"All the press had us being beaten in four or five games and that fired us up," said Dantley, making the first finals appearance of his 12-year career. "We're very relaxed. When we were playing Boston, we couldn't sleep."

"There was pressure to get to the finals. The Lakers are favored, so what have we got to lose."

"People say we've been winning ugly," Dantley said. "But the way we've been playing makes the other team look bad."

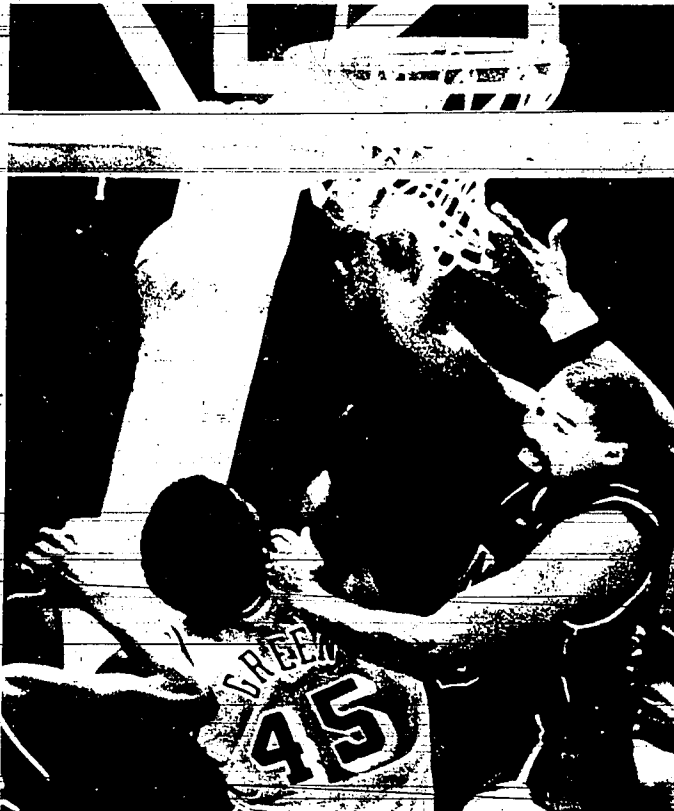

The Lakers hit 34 percent of their shots while falling behind 57-40 at halftime, their biggest midway deficit of the season.

Dantley then scored 10 points in the third period and 12 in the fourth, helping the Pistons stay in front. Thomas had 19 points and 12 assists, while Byron Scott had 25 points and James Worthy 19 for the Lakers, who must win Game 2 at the Forum, Thursday to avoid becoming the first team in finals history to lose the first two games at home.

The Lakers led 23-22 in the first minute of the second period before a 16-5 Pistons spurt, capped by a 3-point by Thomas, put them ahead 38-28 with 4:56 left in the period.

Two minutes later, Dantley hit two fast-break layups for a 46-34 advantage, and Thomas made it 51-38 with a three-point play.

After Scott closed the gap to 51-40 with 25 seconds left, Bill Laimbeer 2:18 span to give the Pistons their hit a 3-point and Thomas stole the largest lead, 94-75, with 5:30 left. Inbounds pass and hit another long-range shot at the buzzer.

The Lakers got within 65-57 with 5:23 left in the third quarter. But Dantley and Vinnie Johnson, who by the had seven points in the last 2:30 of the third period, helped the Pistons increase the margin to 80-68 after this decade — in 1980, 1982, 1985 and 1987 — but has struggled in the three quarters.

Poky sweeps regional twinbill from Minico

By COLIN MULDOON
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — Mini-Cassia Sage Coach Cay Bridges knew he would have his hands full when his team came here Tuesday to take on the Southern Region "A" leading Pocatello Rebels in an American Legion double-header.

The Rebels, coming off twinbill sweep of Twin Falls on Monday, rolled to an 18-8 rout in the opener and then outlasted the Sage 7-6 in the nightcap.

"They might be the best team in the state," Bridges said of the 6-1 Rebels, who lead the regional standings with a 4-0 record.

While the first game was fiasco for the Sage punctuated by eight Minico errors, the nightcap was a classic pitching duel between the Sage's Eric Miller and Pocatello right-hander Jim Hallinan.

Miller, while giving up six runs and nine hits, earned high praise.

"Eric Miller threw probably one of the finest ballgames of his entire life," said Bridges of his 17-year-old right-hander. "It was a super effort."

After an overworking performance in the second inning, Hallinan walked the first Minico batters and before it was over 11 Sage hitters had gone to the plate. Minico led 6-3, thanks to singles by Brett Horner, Mike Price and Jason Krutchett and a triple by Kent Schow.

But Hallinan managed to get away with seven hits over the next

Dunne, area track athletes set China trip

By The Times-News

JEROME — Jerome High School boys' track coach Tim Dunne and seven Magic Valley high school athletes will travel to Beijing, China, later this month for an international track meet.

The Magic Valley group will part of a track team from the Northwest that will compete against a Chinese junior track team. The American delegation will include athletes from Idaho, Oregon and California.

"Those invited to participate are Jerome sprinter John Gourley, Jerome pole vaulter Kevin Thompson, Jerome long jumper-triple jumper Susan Fredrickson, Jerome distance runner Stan Neis, Jerome shot put-discus thrower Tanya Vogel, Twin Falls

Decision due soon on where TFHS teams will compete next season

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — Trying to accommodate the fallout from Twin Falls' movement from the Gem State Conference to the Southern Idaho Conference will again come before the Idaho High School Activities Association board of control at a meeting here Friday.

"One situation that apparently hasn't been cleared up as yet is how the Bruins might qualify for the state football playoffs if things fell their way."

The football schedule problem encompasses the greatest change the Bruins will find in their switch from east to west. Only Rigby of the Gem State Conference remains on the slate, that being a one-year contract that Twin Falls renewed when the Trojans were unable to find an opponent on the date the Bruins were trying to vacate.

According to Twin Falls Athletic Director Andy Barron, that spot in the schedule will be taken by Nampa in another year. It means Twin Falls has Jerome, Mountain Home, Minico, Burley, Boise, Borah, Capital, Meridian and Centennial this fall.

None of them was in the Bruins' qualifying football pool last year.

The other sports also will take a careful scrutiny if reports of a Gem State Conference state-qualifying plan are correct.

The report indicates that the Gem State would like to become a qualifying entity unto itself, making the usual postseason district or regional tournaments pass.

In that vein, there has been a move in Magic Valley to return the A-1 qualifying in basketball, track, etc. to the old District 4 format that would include Twin Falls, Minico and Burley.

"The trick here is basketball where the unwieldy but competitive three-team playoff amounted to a lot of spring sports funding."

Twin Falls took that proposal to the state association board earlier this year without success, but it appears that Minico and Burley have warmed to the idea now and the Gem State Conference proposal would cover the matter of Pocatello and Highland's in postseason situation.

From last year's 11-17 team, including the top three pitchers from year's ball club...

Other returnees are Glenn Levitt, an 18-year-old outfielder; Mike Ardenma, an 18-year-old shortstop; and Jay Ostler, an 18-year-old second baseman and catcher.

We have three very solid returning pitchers and five pitchers up from the Babe Ruth program...

Our starting rotation right now will be Bos, Lamb, Turner and Burton, but Pedrow and Dixon will get some work and we'll try the other kids too...

We have a great group of athletes, so we have a lot of flexibility at different positions this year...

Wood River The numbers are also looking better this year for first-year Wood River Legion coach Jim Jaquet...

There are six incumbents off last year's 11-11 team, including Mike Kluge, a left-hander who saw six games for the Wolverines last summer...

Joining them will be 18-year-old Brad Jaques, an all-state basketball player at Wood River High who will play the infield or the outfield for Jaquet...

We really need to play a few games before we'll know how good we can be, said Jaquet. We have so many new players in some many positions that it's going to take awhile...

In addition to Kluge and Sanders, the returnees from last year are second-handed pitcher Justin Hayes, right-hander Dan Morris, outfielder Scott Smith, catcher Jeff Rust...

The Wolverines will be playing their biggest schedule in years, 28 games, including for the first time regional Joe Poestello.

The Cowboys B-Division program dided aborning a year ago for lack of turnout, but that isn't a problem this spring...

There are some pretty ballplayers in our B program, said Federico. It's so early in the season, though, that it's hard to say what kind of ballclub they're going to develop it.

led by 15-year-old right-hander Jason Pearson, a 6-2, 185-pounder with a good fastball, according to Federico. He'll join a pitching staff that includes Chris Culp, a 6-2, 160-pound right-hander, with similarly good stuff.

There are a lot of big, strappy pitchers in this program, said Federico. In a couple of years, this program is going to have a great pitching staff.

Federico is also impressed by what he's seen of 15-year-old infielder Riley Boyd, whom he describes as having good speed and a good bat.

Others on the roster include pitchers John Keen and Jeff Ames, outfielder Victor Thompson, catcher Tim Suran, infielder Mike Horner, infielder Sam Wormsbaker, infielder Rhett Latham, outfielder Arusha Gordon and outfielder Jeff Castro.

I feel pretty good about the future of the B program, said Federico. We're hosting the state tournament here next year, which means we get an automatic berth to state in 1989 and 1990 that should generate some interest.

Mini-Cassia There has been no B-level Mini-Cassia program for the past two years - and indeed no Legion baseball in Burley, where this team is based, since 1985...

The Sage B teams include players from both Rupert and Burley, including several off the Burley High School varsity team. They include 17-year-old first baseman Marshall Tilley and 16-year-old pitcher-third baseman AD Williams...

Numbers are a problem for second-year Shoshone Coach Tony Bozotto, whose Legion program draws from the small high schools of Lincoln County and from Gooding.

If we had everybody here, we'd have 13 players, but that hasn't happened in a season schedule, have, he said. Bozotto, who finished 6-24 last year but narrowly missed qualifying for the state tournament...

Our biggest problem this spring has been getting everybody together, said Bozotto. If we could ever do that, I think we would improve.

The cast has been so small this spring that the Braves, who played an eight-game preseason schedule, have been using a couple of foreign exchange students with no previous baseball experience, British outfielder Mike Armstrong and Norwegian third baseman Tom Erikson.

We've been spending a lot of time on fundamentals, quipped Bozotto. In addition to Wallace, Tackett, Arrazo, Vaughn and Messick, the other incumbents are Doug Gonzales, an 18-year-old from Gooding who hasn't played yet this spring, and 18-year-old Cory Smith. Smith is an outfielder...

The newcomers include 16-year-old outfielders Casey Kelly and Chris Lowe and 15-year-old outfielder Justin Gray.
