Judge rules against Western utility merger

WASHINGTON — An administrative law judge recommended Monday that the Federal Energy Regulatory. Commission reject the proposed $2.2 billion-merger between two major Western utilities in a case some analysts have said could be a litmus test for restructuring of the utility industry.

Analysts discount long-term impact on tobacco industry

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Anti-smoking forces hailed a federal jury's decision Monday to hold a cigarette company partially responsible for the death of a smoker but analysts discounted any long-term impact for the industry.

"Mighty Casey has struck out," and Dr. Alan Blum, a teacher at the Baylor Calege of Medicine in Houston who founded the anti-making group Doctora Oughte Gare.

However, because the jury did not find the tobacco industry conspired to mislead the polic about the dangers of smoking, analysts said the verdict could be considered a victory—the $35 billion tobacco industry.

"I think it's probably the second-best decision they could have hoped for," said analyst Lawrence Pidgeon of Goldman Sachs & Co.

New York.

"The decision in the case-of-Rose Cipollone who died of lung cancer after 40 years of smoking, exonerated the Liggett Group inc., Loril." by a did in the Liggett it's quite serious," he controlled the constitution of the control of t widower Antonio Cipollone from Liggett, which faced separate charges because It made pended the brand of cigarettes Mrs. Cipollone smoked before Congress required health warnings on cigarette packs in 1966. The two companies that were exonerated have "a bit of breathing room," while body's trying to assess the news, "Ms. o'Dounor said. The only offer was a bid of $80 per share with the buyer seeking to sell at $84

Financial markets were closed when the jury made its decision but Allan Kaplan, a Merrill Lynch tobacco analyst, said he expects only short-term damage to industry stocks. "It's a loss but not a major loss," Kaplan said. The only way this would be considered a negative is if the award made it exciting for other flaw firms to sue. I don't think that hap—found the flaw firms to sue. I don't think that hap—found the substitution of the substitut ment on the case.

Liggett attorney James Kearney said he was pleased by the verdict and thought it would discourage further liability suits.

"The jury specifically rejected any claims of damages," he said. "The flood gates have been closed even firmer than they were before."

Marc Z. Edell, the attorney for Cipollone, said he saw a partial victory in the jury's conclusion that "that the eigerette companies should have warned people as early as the 1940s about the health hazards of eigerette

Richard Daynard, whose Tobacco Products Liability Project in Boston supports lawsuits against the industry, went further:

"It's the first time tobacco companies have been held accountable for the death and diseases their products cause. ### Independent hands must get Wright case

In deciding unanimously not merely to open the conduct of Speaker Jim an inquiry into the conduct of Speaker Jim Wright, but to broaden it beyond the matters previously raised, the House ethics committee did the right thing. Now it must take the further step of putting the inquiry in independent hands.

That may delay the process and entangle it in the fall campaigns. But the stakes for all concerned, including Wright, justify this move. The pace of this investigation is far less important than its quality.

than its quality.

When it has been completed, there must be no reasonable grounds for charges that it was anything less than thorough or fair, or, if the speaker comes out well, that it was a whitewash. The committee was formally asked by an unlikely combination of House Republicans and Common Cause to examine whether Wright violated House rules:

1. In interceding with government agencies in the 1970s in two disputes involving Texas oil companies. The question is whether he took either action partly for personal gain, which he hotly denies.

2. In interceding last year with federal regulators on behalf of certain Texas savings and loan ciations.

3. In the publication of a book, "Reflections of a Public Man," through a longtime member of his entourage who was also paid more than half a million dollars over the years to do campaign work for Wright. One issue is whether the book work for Wright. One issue is whether the book—a paste-up of past writings, sold mainly to interest groups and friends—was in part a contrivance for returning some of these campaign funds to Wright in the form of generous royal-

The committee said that it would also look into the speaker's use of a member of his staff to help produce the book in part at public expense, and intothe circumstances under which he had the use of a Fort Worth condominium.

The speaker says the charges against him are politically motivated. To some extent they no doubt are. But they may also be true. The one doesn't rule out the other.

His critics say that the activities of which he is accused expose the wide gap between what is countenanced on Capitol Hill and what Capitol Hill sees as sleazy behavior when it occurs in the executive branch

Whether the charges against Wright are true whener the Charges against wright are true or not, there is surely something to this: one cringes with embarrassment from time to time watching certain of the most compromised hustlers and corner-cutters in Congress railing against the improprieties that are committed by members of the administration.

members of the administration.

The problem is that so much of the proper daily activity of a legislator involves making representations on behalf of constituents, supporters et al., and otherwise engaging in transactions that are 1) forbidden members of the execution behalf of the constituents.

tions that are 1) forbidden members of the execu-tive branch and 2) right at the edge of what ap-pears to be ethical and honest that the lines tend to get blurred in everybody's mind.

But this is no excuse for misbehavior, espe-cially on the part of one who knows his way around the House as well as Wright does, and who has a special obligation to be scrupulous in such matters. such matters.

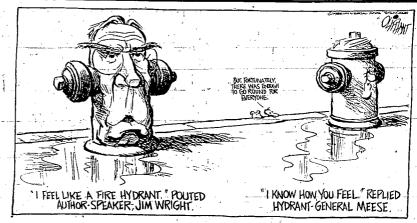

It is, however, certainly an argument for the appointment of an independent investigator who will be able to take a fresh and clear look at the moral, legal and institutional factors involved. The reason for resort to independent counsels in the executive branch is that the Justice Department cannot be relied on to stand in judg-ment on itself. Neither can Congress in a matter such as this.

Conceivably an independently run inquiry will have the additional benefit of not just establishing the facts about Wright's activities, but shedding some much-needed light as well on where the boundaries lie between acceptable and unacceptable conduct of this kind on Capitol Hill.

Billions needed to control thrifts crisis

Within days, depositors in two southern California thrift institutions liquidated last week will receive $1.3 billion from the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

After disposing of the Unrit's assets, the FSLIC estimates that the total cost of shutting down the institutions will be $931 million.

Where do these two thrifts and their large cost to the FSLIC fit into the national thrift industry crisis? More important, what does their condition suggest for a solution?

For insured depositors in thrifts and banks, there is no problem. The problem arises for taxpayers, who must bear the ultimate responsibility for the growing FSLIC costs. The Orange County thrifts — American Diversified Savings Bank and North America Savings and Loan — are two of approximately 500 thrifts that are insolvent, based on the most commonly used accounting principles. These thrifts have about $146 billion in assets; based on the FSLIC's cost to close thrifts in 1987, it will cost the FSLIC's 50 billion to close them this year.

Often overlooked are the additional 515 thrifts

Often overlooked are the additional 515 thrifts with $255 billion in assets whose accounting net worth is nearly, but not quite, zero. Accounting net worth is based on the value of assets when they are acquired — not on their current market

Based on market values, these thrifts are al-Based of market values, these thritts are al-most certainly insolvent. Because these thrifts' market-value insolvency is not as great as those that are insolvent by both techniques, it should cost FSLIC less to close them. But if the cost is as little as 10 cents per dollar of assets, the cost could be $25.5 tillion, raising the total to an estimated

5 billion. In truth, no one knows precisely what the cost will be, because market value estimates are figure perfect. The experience of the 1980s suggests strongly, however, that by leaving insolvent institutions open and in the control of the managers and directors who are responsible for the insolventy, the admittedly large cost — whatever it is — will grow at an alarming rate.

To remedy the problem, Congress and the next president must take direct control of the government's response. The federal regulator is the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which also directs the FSLIC. And the bank board also verwhelmed. Despite transparent claims to the contrary, the bank board and the FSLIC do not remotely have the financial and human resources to close insolvent hirlifs or to control their risk-taking until they can be closed.

Palhting the rosiest picture, the bank board Palhting the rosiest picture, the bank board says that the PSLIC will have approximately $22 sillion available to it over the next three years from premium income and from the borrowing authority given to it by Congress in 1987. Partially because the bank board has said that its funding is adequate, it is also simultaneously said that the insolvencies are limited primarily to the Southwest is in the worst condition, the 1,000 deeply troubled thrifts exist throughout the country.

The two Orange County thrifts are prototypical of many that are in trouble. They were controlled and managed by inexperienced people, and in one case, fraud is allegedly a factor. They were allewed to grow rapidly and were left apen after. they were market-value insolvent. Gambling with TSLIC meeps, they took great risks. Their deterioration was rapid and irreversible, imposing huge cousts on FSLIC.

Congress and the next president must realize

Congress and the next president must realize that FSLIC's current funding is weefully inade that FSLU's current funding is woefully inade-quate. The current strategy of taxing healthy thrifts for additional revenues is both inequitable and futile. Healthy thrifts did not cause the fail-ure of other thrifts, and taxing them with addi-tional insurance premiums threatens their income and net worth. and net worth.

Congress can minimize the ultimate costs by making adequate funds available to the bank board so it can get control of the risk-taking of in-solvent thrifts. The number of federal examiners solvent thrifts. The number of federal examiners-and supervisors, for example, could double and-still be too few and too inexperienced.

The program in which the two Orange County thrifts were among the 50 being managed under direct bank board control should be greatly ex-panded. Complaints about the program reflect the FSLIC's lack of funding and, hence, its ability to close high rate-paying thrifts, not an inherent flaw in the program.

close high rate-paying thrifts, not an inherent flavin the program.

Inadequate FSLIC funding, too few closures and inadequate damage control spell higher future costs. The Orange County thrifts cost the FSLIC nearly 70 cents per dollar of assets in the thrifts. A recent Texas closure cost $2 billion, or 50 cents per dollar of assets, These costs are higher than the 1987 average of 35 cents per dollar of assets and may represent escalating costs.

News accounts of costly thrift closures in Orange County and in many other areas of the country between now and November, and the complete selence in the presidential campaign about the

Nation can wait on SIS

Recently $28 million was approved in commit-tee for planning, design and a little construction for the SIS plutonium process facility at the INEL, the money to become available on October-In-Still-in effect is a requirement for feasibility and safety studies next March for Congress and the new ad-ministration to consider with regard to the future of the SIS.

However, test results of laser technology ordi-narily needed for planning and design and con-struction will not be available any sooner than -late next year. Even this schedule for the Livermore Laboratories to perfect the laser porcess w probably slip, as seems likely for a project under environmental and technical scrutiny.

This concurrency of basic research, proof of pro-cess, definition and analysis of production requir-ments, planning and designing, and some prelimi-nary construction may have been justified in building the nuclear (atom) bomb, but our na-tional security is not under such compelling circumstances today.

Furthermore, the Criticality Safety Analysis, by whatever name, is still in unfinished draft and when published will be classified info nished draft for not subject to review by the general public

Idaho and the nation can afford to wait for the DOE answers to the 1437 written responses to the initial Environmental Impact Statement. The Department of Energy should not proceed directly from a draft to a final EIS. To do so would tell Idahoans that the hearings were really window dresing and would do an injustice to the excellently conceived and evenly conducted sessions—un by—Mr. Figures.

The signed and ratified INF Treaty allows us to salvage the plutonium-containing warheads of otherwise dismembered missiles. Bonneville County has one of the lowest unemployment rates, if not the lowest, of any in Idaho. These are roalfactors and should be taken into account in determining timely expenditures beyond basic research and prototyping of the SIS.

Clear information sought

To the gentlemen responsible for the Idaho State employees pay scale:

I have been following the ongoing debate between the female employees and the State of Idaho for the past 2 months. It is laughable that out of 300 women the state could only find one that had been receiving equitable raises with the men in higher job classifications. If their intent was to convince people not working directly for the state that all the women employees have received the same it didn't work.

It seems to me the State of Idaho could set an example to the employers in private industry that they respect and compensate their female employthey respect and com ees for their services

Secretaries walk a fine line in their jobs. They Secretaries walk a fine line in their jobs. They ner really assistants rather than secretaries as they are expected to know when to offer advice, who the person they worker wants to see, remind them of appointments, cover for them when the situation requires it, pass on information but not be a snitch, know insurance programs, retirement programs, policies and procedures for their staff and, of course, always be loyal, and on and on ... In these times when women are often the only family provider they should receive equal pay for their services.

How about releasing information that shows ex-ctly where the State of Idaho stands on this issue stead of innuendos and half truths. MARY WEIGEL

Traffic signal needed now

How long do we have to wait at the corner of Washington and Falls Avenue? To cross the intersection during normal times is bed enough, but to do so during rush hours is ridiculous. You can find yourself waiting for quite some time, while facing discells and a string of cars speeding into town. The turn laine indication arrows are weathered away and unless the driver knows from memory the direction of them, they end up turning from all different laines. There isn't a week that goes bythat an accident doesn't happen there.

We keep being promised a stop light will be put up there to replace the blinking light ... but when? The subdivision west of Washington is growing leaps and bounds, with an elementary school nearby, the use of this intersection has increased dramatically. It is time to put the much promised, much needed light up before there are more accidents and deaths at this corner.

of their denomination.

The moderate wing has suffered defeats for the last nine years at the hands of fundamentalists who have gradually increased their power. If the fundamentalists win this time, it would complete their loyeer actical timetable for achieving control of institutions and agencies of the 14.7 million-member denomination.

The convention of the country's largest Profestant body formally opens Tuesday after two days of preaching, politicking and meetings of auxiliary groups.

I think 'II the moderates lose this time, they might just go into retreat, giving up this useless political battling, commented the Rev. Stan Hastey of Washington, D.C. However, some signs were seen

However, some signs were seen that this convention might mark a reversal of the long fundamentalist march, mainly because of some controversial policies backed by the fundamentalist forces.

"People are becoming alarmed,"said the Rev. Albert Mc-Clellan, of Nashville, Tenn., the de-nomination's former associate ex-

"They're definitely moving away from the extremes that have been going on." he said. While the battle lines initially were drawn over fundamentalist insistence on literalistic views of the Bible, that wing lately has pushed socio-political policies iden-tified with the religious right.

This included open backing last, year for confirmation of Judge Robert Bork to the U.S. Supreme Court, contrary to a long-time denominational rule against endorsing or opposing specific candidates.

Bork later withdrew under fire.

With their growing institutional out, fundmentalists also have clout, fundmentalists also have tightened rules against women clergy, divorced pastors and abor-tion, and pressed for prayer in pub-lic schools and other right-wing causes.

Stiffer screening of personnel over their interpretations of the Bible and forcing out of some seminary personnel also have heightened the conflict.

It comes to a decisive point in the election Tuesday of a new pre-sident, whose appointive authority reaches into trustees of all the de-nomination's 20 national agencies and institutions.

The current fundamentalist-backed president, the Rev. Adrian Rogers of Memphis, Tenn., is step-ping down after two years in office. He won the office a first time in 1979, "launching the fundamental-ist streak of victories.

The two opposing candidates expected to be nominated were the fundamentalist-backed Rev. Jerry Vines of Jacksönville, Fla., and the moderate-backed Rev. Richard. Jackson of Phoenix, Ariz.

Both take a fundamentalist view of the Bible as being inerrant, without error, but Jackson opposes demanding blanket adherence to that view. Vines wants it upheld throughout denominational per-sonnel.

Breast-jed babies can contract AIDS

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Breast-fed babies are at high risk of getting infected with AIDS if their mothers catch the lethal virus shortly after giving birth, several new studies described Monday show. Six cases of AIDS being spread through breast milk were reported at the Fourth International Conference on AIDS.

Broast-feeding women should be aware that if they become infected, their baby is likely to be infected as well, "said Dr. John Ziegler of Prince of Wales Children's Hospital in Westmead, Australia. He said the risk of breast-feeding is probably substantially greater if mothers are infected after birth than if they carried the virus before they got-pregnent.

Ziegler described two of the cases, while a third in Australia was reported by Dr. Marion Bucens of Princess Margaret Hospital in Perth.

"We don't know how often this happens," Bucens said. "In the Third World countries, this is of great importance because of the enormity of heteroscual transmission" of the AIDS virus. There are so many women who are infected."

However, several experts said that the new findings should not deter women from breast-feeding, even in parts of the world where AIDS infection happens frequently. They said the hazards of bottlefeeding are probably higher than the chance of passing the AIDS virus-through-breast-milk.

Awad was the 21st Arab to be expelled since the Dec. 8 start of the Palestinian uprising in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Awad was kept away from reporters in an airport halding cell, but his letters to supporters from prison were distributed and shown to journalists.

"Even after my departure, my efforts will continue," Awad wrote. "We have no choice but to continue with the uprising for our liberation."

He vowed in the letters to return soon, Awad, a Christian, has said he might convert to Judaism as a means to return to Israel.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir ordered Awad deported, suying he played a key role in organizing the uprising. Shamir on Monday rejected U.S. condemnation of the order, saying if the United States were confronted with a similar case, "the person, would be expelled immediately with no second thoughts."

"We think it is unjustifiable to deny Mr. Awad the right to stay and live in Jerusalem where he was born, "White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Monday.

care of the more nut-and-boits matter of approving a budget for next school year.

The board has been wrestling with a policy on teach-ing creationism in science classes for several months. A preliminary report from a committee formed to study the issue was modified by the board.

That committee recommended forbidding the teaching of creationism in schools. But the board modified the policy, and is now considering a recommendation allowing creationism to be mentioned but not taught.

The policy now on the table encourages the teaching of alternative theories on the origin of life, but won't allow any representing a religious tent. Creationism falls into that category, Superintendent Carl Snow said when the policy was proposed.

However, theories like creationism or Buddhism could be taught in other classes, such as history or social studies.

Even that recommendation, which was presented at last month's meeting, has been presented to teachers for input prior to adoption. Any changes will be made to-night, if the board decides to act.

If the policy is adopted, implementation will be left to the administration. Administrators will write specific policies on its science classes, board members say. The issue has been heated, with supporters liobying the board and showing up in droves at meetings. Although supporters of creditionism overwhelmed opponents with letters and phone calls to the board, the school district said it felt-compelled by U.S. Supreme. Court rulings to knock creationism out of its science curriculum,

Times-News Managing Editor Stephen Hartgen and his wife, Jan, raised the issue with a letter last year-asking the board to clarify its creationism policy Jan is a reading teacher at Morningside Elementary School.

Their daughter was taking a seventh-grade science course where teacher Phil Gerrish was teaching creationism as an alternative to evolution.

The school board also plans to approve a $17 million budget for next-year, a 0.18 percent increase over last year. In the budget, salaries and benefits will increase 5.2 percent, from $10.8 million to $11.4 million.

Man charged with battery, DUI

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man doubled the number of charges filed against him Monday when he allegedly kicked two jailers, according to court reports.

At approximately 3 a.m. Monday, John James Gutches, 21, kicked one jailer in the groin and another in the chest, according to reports. Police earlier arrested Gutches on charges of driving under the influence of alcohol and driving without privileges.

Gutches was arraigned Monday on the driving violations and two counts of battery upon a law enforcement officer, all misdemeanors. He pleaded not guilty and total bond was set at $3.000.

The kicking incidents occurred in the county jails booking area, according to court reports. James Baker, a jailer, alleged in court records that Gutches kicked him without provocation in the groin, then kicked James Clawson in the chest.

Treaty is 'worthless', fishers say

The U.S.-Canada salmon treaty will remain 'worthless' to much of the flishing industry in Weshington state until Canada reduces its coho catch, a Westport charter fisherman who helped write the document says.

Mark-Cedergreen, former director of the Washington State Charterboat Association, said the Canadian commercial catch of coho salmon off the west coast of Vancouver Island must be reduced to allow more salmon escapement to Washington and

are benefitting.

Some experts say up to 70 percent of the color Canadians take off Vancouver Island are from streams along the Washington and Orogon coasts and in-Puget Sound. Those spawning runs are being "decimated" because of overfishing by Canadian commercial fishermen, said Cedergreen.

ldaho grocery price war rages on

BOISE (AP) — Southern Idaho's long-running grocery-price war has abated somewhat, but one of the survivors believes the industry is still working through its wrench-ing transformation.

The price war in southern Idaho is not over," contact William Long, president and chairman of Boise-based Waremart Inc. "It's very difficult to make a profit right now in grocery stores in Idaho."

In the long run, he said; "you have to get-rid of the dead-wood."

"That's one reason we're building stores over in Oregon rather than here," he said. "The economy is better. It's a lot more upbeat and less dependent on agriculture."

Bought out by its employees in December 1985, the more austere Waremart does no advertising and its customers bag their own groceries. Its "niche marketing" has proven popular among oest-conacious shoppers.
While Buttrey Foods has closed most of its stores and Farmer Jack is trying to unload its remaining outlets in Idaho, Waremart has managed to survive the state's vicious grocery-wars, sometimes slugging it out toe-to-toe with Albertson's.

Morton Thiokol to test rocket motor

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — Morton Thiokol plans to test-fire a production model of the redesigned space shuttle rocket motor today in a new test bay that simulates actual launch conditions, ollicials say.

"The test; capheduled for 1 p.m. MDT, is the fourth in a series of five required to qualify the major design features of the solid fuel booster before the shuttle program, grounded after the 1986 Challenger disaster, can resume.

NASA officials have set a projected liftoff date for the shuttle Discovery on Aug. 31, but they've cautioned the schedule is tight and many milestones remain to be passed.

However, testing of the redesigned motor has gone so well that Discovery's two boosters were hooked up Friday with a huge external fuel tank at Cape Canaveral. Fla, and the stack was to be joined with the shuttle on Thursday.

"It's getting more exciting here," said Morton Thiokol spokesman Rocky Raab. "But we also had a big wave of excitement when we shipped the first flight hardware."

The company has shipped NASA about half the hardware for the second shuttle launch and is preparing to send the hardware for the third. Today's teat, at the company's Wasatch Operations marks the first time the booster will be free of planned flaws introduced to determine whether the redesigned joint can withstand the intense heat and pressures of launch, Raab said. It is also the first use of a new $22 million test boy, which has 1,216 channels of instrumentation and uses hydraluic strusts to duplicate steering, flight turbulence and other stresses the motor will endure during launch. Raab said. The building also can heat an entire motor to 110 degrees Fahrenheit or cool it to 20 degrees. For today's test, the motor's 1.1 million pounds of propellant has been heated to a uniform $90 degrees, our about 20 degrees warmer thair the usual launch temperature of about 70 degrees.

March draws little attention

SPOKANE (AP) — A peace march drew relatively few participants as or-ganizers kicked off the 947-mile walk across Washington state.

The Washington Peace March will end at Blaine, near the Canadian bor-der, on Labor Day, Mike Harburg of Seattle, one of the organizers, said Sunday. "We expect to raise aware-ness about peace, especially nuclear disarmament," he said. "We want to educate people to work for peace."

Although the group hopes to bring its message to thousands, fow people appeared to notice as 22 members of the march joined hands, sang and danced at Riverside Park. "The uniqueness of the march is that we engage thousands of people in one-to-one dialogue where they can talk about their concerns and move into acting for positive change," said Jean Mayes, a Seattle therapist who is taking three months off work to join the march.

'Tax-free swaps' can amass a fortune

A move that's especially attractive to real estate investors is called the "Tax-Free Swap."

If you exchange your real estate for someone else's — and the properties are like-kind properties — you may not have to pay a penny in tax. It's that simple.

With the assistance of Eli J. Warach, chief consulting editor at Prentice Hall Professional Newsletters; I have outlined this device below. You can use tax-free waps time after time to create a tax-free real estate for tune. With a sharp eya and some ingenuity, you could pyramid one original investment into multimillion-dollar holdings.

What are like-kind properties? You get a real break here because "like-kind" includes all kinds of real property held for investment or business. For example, you can exchange investment real estate for business realty or exchange buildings for land. But, you say, suppose Seth's office building is worth $1,000,000. Each worth $1,000,000. Each would like to do the deal. Here's the problem. Seth's basis (generally cost minus depreciation) for the office building is

Sulvia Porter

$600,000, while Dan's basis is only

$200,000.

If the swap goes through, won't the difference in busis between the two-destroy the tax-free aspect? And won't Dan be getting a big edge?

Dan be getting a big edge?

No to both questions. Here's why, Seth and Dan each carries over his old basis to the new building. And each gots a building equal in value to the other. For example, Seth would have a $600,000 basis in the factory and Dan would have only a $200,000 basis in the office building. $50 both 1) pick up their new buildings; 2) carry over their old bases; and 3) pay no tax on their profits. Everybody comes out a winger, except the tax collector. winner, except the tax collector.

Now, though, suppose Seth comes up with a bright idea.

up with a bright idea.

He currently has a $200,000 mortgage on his building (before the swap) and Dan also has a $200,000 mortgage. Seth refinances, and gets an.
$800,000 mortgage. Now he has the cash plus the new building, right? Wrong, It's a good try, but it just doesn't work.

1) Dan would be getting a building worth $500,000 less than the one he's trading away. He gets a $1,000,000 building with an $500,000 nortgage on it. So there's a $200,000 value. Seth would be getting a $1,000,000 building with a value of $800,000 (there's a $200,000 mortgage). Who would make a swap like that?
2) Seth would be taxed on $600,000 cash.

cash.

3) Dan would have a basis of $800,000 - but so what? He still has to pay off the debt.

$\frac{1}{2}$ that to do? They both can refinable beforehand or both wait until after the swap.

Does that mean you can't have an even swap with disproportionate mortgages?

mortgagos? __Not at all, You cortainly can, if the market value of the buildings is disproportionate.

Consider another tax-free benefit:

Consider another tax-free benefit:
You also can step up your deprecia.
You also can step up your deprecia.
You also can step up your deprecia.
Example: Rachel owns a $60,000
building with a $10,000 mortgage.
She swaps it for Sarah's $100,000
building with a $50,000 mortgage.
Since there are equal equities, and no cash changes hands, it's a tax-free swap. But Rachel gets $40,000 more to write off.
Here's why it's an even-up deal. If Here's why it's an even-up deal. If Rachel had sold her building and paid off the mortgage, she would wind up with $50,000 in hand; if Sarah sold her building for $100,000 and paid off the $50,000 mortgage, she'd also have

Rachel's new basis for depreciation includes the $40,000 difference in the mortgage liabilities. Reason: She must pay off the bigger mortgage. She can use this technique whenever this mortgage on the building she gets is greater than the mortgage on the property she gives up. Say the person who wants your building doesn't own property you want in exchange, or vice versa. What then? If you seoul around a bit, you may be able to work out a three-way tax-free sway.

tax-free swap.

Example: You want to buy Ken's building: You own unimproved land chasis: $30,000) that a third party. Corbett, is willing to buy for $75,000. But if you sell to Corbett to get the funds to buy Ken's building, you have to pay current tax on your $25,000 gain. To sidestep the tax, you have Corbett buy Ken's building and then you transfer the land to Corbett in oxchange for the building.

Boyult. No great tax

Result: No current tax, assuming it's an even exchange. And if there is additional cash, only that additional cash is taxable.

Deferred exchanges: In a deferred

Deferred exchanges: In a deferred exchange, you transfer your property to a buyer and give the buyer a specified period of time to come up with suitable exchange property. However, in order to qualify as a tax-free swap:

1) The exchange property must be identified within 45 days after you relinquish your property and a 2) You must take title to the new property within 180 days after you give up your old property or by the due date of your tax return, which ever is earlier. Otherwise, you lose the tax-free break.

The Dow started off the week about eight points shy of its post-crash high, and traders began the session by cashing in on the previous weeks igains. The Dow fell about 10 points before turning upward and continuing its flirtation with the 2,100 mark. Tuesday's report on merchandise trade figures for April is probably not enough to singlehandedly boest the Dow beyond the 2,100-point celling, analysts said. But the trade report is only the first in a flutry of counomic indicators due to be released this week.

Roesler ends Naylor's reign at Grand Prix

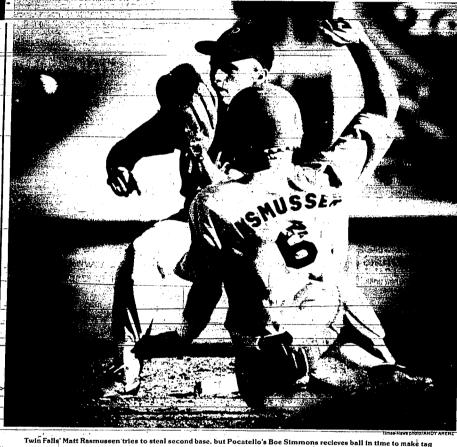

By COLIN MULDOON

Halley — Californian Larry Rossler overtook three-time defending champion Ron Naylor midway through the fourth and final lap to win the Sun Valley Grand Prix Motoross Competition here Sunday. Rossler, from Bloomington, Calif., rode his Kawasaki 250KX to a slim 45-second victory over the 25-mile cross country course.

Both Naylor and Rossler had started in the third row, which meant they had 20 other cyclists in front of them as the race began. ### Scarce dollars limit weekend tourneys

TWIN FALLS — Depite low numbers, Twin Falls Women's Softball Association President Nancy McNew said that the insociation's annual Binvitational held here at Frontier Field last weekend was an overall success.

Boise's Chicago Connection took the tourney's championship trophy by defeating Gary's Carpets of Cald-well twice, 7-2 in Sunday's semifinal and 11-7 in the championship conwell twice, 7-2 in Sunday's semitimated 11-2 in the championship contest later that day.

JazzHarison-Frank, also of Caldwell, captured third place by defeating E&R Transport 15-6 and the hattle- for fourth place pitted tryin Falls teams — Cafe Ole and The CoveMagic Valley Radiation.

Cafe Ole won that game 15-14.

The tourney's sportmanship trophy was awarded to JazzHarrison-Frank, Tami Brasheries of Gary's Carpets captured the best infielder honers, Cafe Ole's Sheri Burns took the best outfielder title and Jazz Harrison-Fank's Marci Sobia was yeth a 643 average.

In addition to dropping numbers in team participation in tourna-ments, is an ever-increasing decline in weekend tournaments. McNew said that over the past five years, said that over the past live years, the women's association has gone from hosting four tournaments yearly to just one, a trend she attrib-

"Sponsors don't want to give the money (that) they have in the past," McNew said. "Even if you limited the tournaments to once a month, that's $125 to $150 a month (for tournament fees).

In a sense, long-time softball spon-sor Bob Donnelley of Donnelley's Sports agreed with McNew.

The entire community (including businesses) is evaluating how their recreational dollar is going to be spent," he said, adding that today there are more and more sporting activities that warrant business sponsorship, such as tennis, rodeo and golf.

sorship, such as comparities golf.

The decline in team participation in tournament is not isolated only to the Twin Falls softball associations.

Basketball, Association. He relishes the reunion.

Brown, 47, who led the Kansas Jayhawks to the NCAA title last season, resigned Monday to accept a five-year part that is expected to pay him $3.5 million, perhaps the highest salary ever paid an NBA coach.

Brown, whose ABA teams played the San Antonio Spurs in the mid-1970s, said he will do everything he can to make the Spurs exciting.

"I think the important thing is the, fans supported the team before and hopefully well put the type of team out there that they!! want to come back. That's my goal, "Brown said.

Brown coached the Carolina Cougars and Denver Nuggets of the ABA and recalls the games against San Antonio were tough.

People don't kill gun laws

Congressmen do

WASHINGTON — When it was an-nounced over the television that a very troubled lady in Winnetka used three handguns to shoot several schoolchildren, Esterhary grabbed his coat and hat and headed for the door. "What are you doing?" I asked him. He said, "I'm a volunteer gun lobby-ist and I have to get down to the office because the shrappel is going to hit the fan."

because the saraphe is going to hit the fain."

The Winnetta story has nothing to do with guns, "I told him."

"Don't you believe it. Every nut who wants us to register firearms is going to be out tonight demanding legislation to stop the sale of handguns in the United States. The shooting in Illinois couldn't have come at a worse time. We just started a big TV advertising campaign telling everyone how great guns are."

"They can't blame the American gun lobby for what a deranged woman did."

"Yes, they can They'll do anything."

did."
"Yes, they can. They'll do anything to disarm this country. Something like this happens and people start asking all sorts of questions about how guns are obtained."

how guns are obtained."
"It seems to me I heard that the lady who did all the shooting had a gun permit. How did she get one if she had a history of mental illness?"
"I don't know, but you can't keep an eye on every gun sold in the United States. That's why I'm going down to the office. This is the kind of news story that has people calling their congressmen."

"What do you intend to do?"
"We have to get out wires to all our

"You're a good man, Esterhazy. You have a cause that you believe in, no matter how many people are shot."

"If we don't speak out against hand-gun control now, when do we?"

"How is the gun lobby going to ex-plain the shooting in Winnetka?"

"We intend to counter the bad pub We intend to counter the bad plub-licity by showing celebrities who shoot their hundguls just for pleasure. We plan to hand out press releases that say for every person who shoots some-one with a handgun, there are 10 who would rather hit a tin can."

"You've certainly got your work cut out for you," I said.

"We haven't lost a battle yet. You really scare the hell out of a shooter hen you threaten to take away his guns. Once we get the word out that the big bad wolf is at the door, every member will send us 20 bucks. Then it's up to the lobbyists to defeat those congressmen who are tilting toward an anti-handgun law."

"I'd hate to be a congressman on the wrong side of you guys," I said.
"Of course, you would — people don't kill gun control laws, congress.

Three weeks after Laurie Dann killed a young boy, police are still asking why. Why did she explode? According to an attorney who represented her in her divorce she 'wasn't this ghoulish person all her life. She wasn't the monster she turned out to be.

when she ate, ran her shower for hours and rode an elevator day and night in her dormitory where she was called "psycho" and "elevator lady."

"She was definitely a very, very confused woman," Sumner said.
Dangerous, too, her ex-husband and others feared. But even as they were contacting the FBI, prosecutors and police, several North Shore families were unwittingly hiring Dann as a babysitter.

It can't be put on the back burner any longer," Corcoran said in a telephone interview Monday. This isn't something like drugs or AIDS. This is something we can do something lobut." Corcoran came to the city over the weekend to promote Project Literacy L.A., an effort to "make other people aware of the slavery of illiteracy in America." There's a chaos that goes on whon you're illiterate in America, he said. "There's a worldout there that functions with the written word, and you don't know that. All you cand ois orally communicate." He learned to read after enrolling in the Carlsbad City Library Adult Learning Program in Septembers. 1986. For more than 14 months. On Sunday, Corcoran demonstrated his new, skills by reading during services /a the First Congregational Church of Los Angeles. "There's a real desire in mot do everything I can to try to make other-people aware of the slavery of illiteracy in America," he said. "We have a problem that we can selve. That means reform. It means change." Corcoran, now 50, said he attended many schools as a youngster because his parent changed jobs often. He was never at one achool long enough for teachers to realize he couldn't read. "If you tell somebody you can't read, you're telling someone you're dumb," he said. "I couldn't really reach out for help."

To compensate, Corcoran said he made friends with people who had good vocabularies, and he used a lot of analogies and metaphors when he spoke. He said his wife Kathy was the oly lone who knew about his illiteracy. He received a buchelor's degree in education from Texas Western College, now University of Texas, at El Paso, where he was the captain of the basketball team. Corcoran won National Science Foundation grants to study in graduate schools at San Diego State, Louisiana State University and University of Santa Clara. He said he avoided reading by misbehaving in grade school, and in high school he cheated on tests by preparing answers beforehand or refusing to turn in tests. In college, he faked or cheated his way through general education courses, then chose classes where take-home tests were assigned, or accounting classes where tests involved numbers, which gave him no trouble. As a teacher, he said he relied on students in his social studies, business and math classes to call roll and to readto the others.

After 56 years, rejected scholar gets his Ph.D.

- WASHINGTON — Nearly a half-century ago, Frank P. Rourgin was forced to relinquish his plans for an academic carreer when his mentors at the University of Chicago told him his doctoral thesis on the roots of the New Deal wasn't good enough for a degree.

Now, at the agy of 77, Bourgin has received an uncommonly personal lesson in revisionist history.

In a rare occurrence, sourred here.

In a rare occurrence, spurred by the intervention of the noted historian Arthur Schlesinger Jr., the university has belatedly decided it made a mistake.

The political science department re-read his dissertation and concluded that Bourgin, who retired five years ago from an episodic career in business and the federal government, descrated a Ph. D. deserved a Ph.D

And so last week the Chevy Chase, Md., resident traveled to the Chicago campus for the first time in 43 years. He donned a marcon robe with velvet bands and a black doctoral hood, rode into the Rockeller Chapel on the motorized scooter he relies on to get around and, at last, collected his de-

It was a moment to savor for Bourgin, whose activities are now limited by the after-effects of point to reading and a daily swim. But the real joy, he said, has already come.

L is "the satisfaction, the vindication, the fact I am some-body," he said in an intérview. "I feel I am a different person than I was a year ago. A Ph.D. counts for something."

The Bourgin affair, as the Chicago faculty have dubbed it, attests to this man's relentless faith in the worth of his ideas. It attests, too, to a willingness by a rigorous university to look into its past and admit that perhaps it had been wrong.

"I don't think anything like this has ever happened before," said Gary. Orfield, one of the three Chicago-political scientists who re-evaluated Bourgin's thesis last year.

"Imagine if something had been on your mind for 40 years, and it gets worked out," smd Orfield. "It's a very happy story."

It wasn't the only paradox in Dann's life.
Children she tended adored her, but adults came to fear her.
She was raised in a world of wealth-and-elegant-homes-but she left rotting meat behind in one apartment with urine-stained floors.
Still, some say they detected no hint of growing fury.
"She really-was a-pleasant---quiet-person ... She wasn't this ghoulish person all her life," said Peter Solber, one attorney who represented her in divorce proceedings. "She wasn't the monater she turned out to be." For most of her 30 years, Laurie Dann lived an unremarkable life.
Laurie Wasserman (who had an older brother, Mark) graduated from prestigious New Trier East High School. Her father, a successful accountant, and mother live in Glencee on the North Shore, where $500,000 maneions, private beaches along Lake Michigan and three-car garages are not uncommon.

No charges were filed. "There was just no case there," Waller said.

According to divorce records, Dann was to receive a lump sum of $125,000 and $1,250 monthly for three years.

After the shootings, Russell Dann appeared on "Nightline" at his request and phoned a radio talk show to urge tougher gun control. Since then, he has declined further comment.

He did acknowledge to The Associated Press, however, that "some people think I was the bad guy."

Laurie Dann's life began unraveling faster and faster in 1986.

That summer, she dated John Childs, whose mother, Alexandra, lived near her parents. She was "very prety". Luvy prepty. "Luvy prepty", Mrs. Childs said adding Dann had unnot uncommon.

"The story begins in the heart of the Depression when Bourgin, a merchant's son from the tiny town of Ely, Minn., decided he could never make a living as a lawyer and found another field instead. "I are not slept political accinene," he said." expected to get a 19h. D. and go on teaching college."

He won a fellowship to graduate-school at Chicago, where he became captivated by the idea of Inational planning that formed the ore of President Roosevelt's New Dral. For his thesis, Bourgin sought to 'trace whether FDR's notion of an activist federal government had roots in the early years of the nation.

The central idea of his 624-page dissertation contradicted the prevailing 19th and early-20th-century view among historians that Thomas Jefferson and other framers of the Constitution had favored a laisser-laire government. that promoted "uncontaminated free enterprise."

Bourgin found that Jefferson's land-settlement policies and his plan to build a network of canals, for instance, reflected an activity vision of government similar to that of Roosevelt.

"I feel I had something very important of say that had never hear and referent to say that had never hear and referent to say that had never hear and referent for the first production to the production of government similar to that of Roosevelt.

"I feel I had something very impor-tant to say that had never been said," Bourgin recalled. "To me, this was dy-namite in terms of undermining the kind of claims the conservatives have had on our Constitution for 200 years ... It made Jefferson something of a New Dealer."

Yet throughout his career, his frustration with his failed dissertation lingered. "In government, you'd meet some jerk with a Ph.D., and he was a somebody and I was a nobody."

Two years ago, as the bicentennial of the Constitution approached, he decided to reopen the black box. He found the paper clips rusty, the paper yellowed and the type faded. But the ideas, he sensed, were still fresh.

"I said, 'Dann it, I was right from Bourgin distilled his work into a 22-page synopsis, which he sent out for reviews. He mailed copies to U.S.

senators, to leading political journalsists and to Daniel Boorstin, then librarian of Congress.

Among the recipients was, Alan Saunders, a political scientist who had been Bourgin's mentor as an undergradunte at the University of Minnesota. Now 90 and living in Hawaii, Saunders replied to Bourgin, pointing out that his ideas resembled those in Buoyed by the news, Bourgin fired

The department agreed to re-read the thesis and rejected it at first. After Bourgin made some changes, the three-member committee decided in February that it was acceptable.

said Joseph Cropsey, distinguished something important to say then, and 'it does now."

In offering Bourgin the degree, the university made certain accommodations. It waived his tuition and the oral exam required of doctoral candidates. And to permit his children and grandchildren to attend the ceremony, the department appealed all the way to the central administration to secure for him "an absolutely incredible, unheard of number" of scarce commencement tickets, Cropsey said. Bourgin has hired a literary agent to try to get his dissertation published. He'd love to lecture on his ideas, if anyone asks.

And he teases his wife, Dorothy, although he doesn't really mean it, that he will launch his belated academic career. "My next book," he said, "is going to be called 'Sunrise at 77."

"Isn't it enough for them to have our family in jail? What else do they the neighbors want?"

The neighbor said he recently diverted the irrigation water from the Marion farm, contending he owns the legal rights to it and needed the water elsewhere. The Singer-Swapps have rights to the culinary water but not the irrigation water, he said.

"Me dan't hate. We aren't violent people. We just want to be left alone and have water for our farm," said Charlotte. "That doesn't seem too much to ask."

Mailman gives route his personal stamp

OGDEN, Utah — There was a rising roar, a loud Ka-WHAM! and the middle of the garage door, just 2 feet, away, bulged out a couple of inches. Black shining eyes and sharp teeth flashed by the window. The door rattled a few more times, a low growing and howling sceping through the cracks.

and howing seeping through the cracks.

Mike Lujan just smiled. It happens to him every day, he said, but it does take strangers by surprise.

Lujan takes Boss, the large mass of canine fury inside the garage, in stride. He takes everything in stride on his northeast Ogden mail route.

Stride is the word: Stride over flower beds, up steps and, when the occasion requires, stride airborne over a low hedge or wall. Anything to knock a few feet off the route. Lujan has measured the route at him emiles on foot, and every inch counts.

On this particular day, the car Ma.

athine miles on foot, and every inch counts.

On this particular day, the ex-Maride has more than 3,000 pieces of mil to deliver; piles of a food chain's ada, bills, magazines, TV Guides, advettisements promising the recipient millions of dollars, income tax refunds and, occasionally, a real letter written by someone to someone else.

Real letters are rare in these days of telephones, he says.

Lujan is on intimate terms with histients mail. He's also just about got their lives down pat — a result of secting them and their mail every day.

As he walks his route he gives a running account of who's home, who's on vacation, whose ki dis back in Boston studying to be a surgeon, whose husband is living somewhere else and on and on.

on and on.
And he's not that unusual, he said.
All 149-mail carriers in Ogden know the same things about their custom-the same uning crs.

Lujan, who has been walking his route-for four years, said it's hard not to learn what people are up to. Knowing, in fact, helps him get them their roal more day.

ning, in fact, nelty sing get upon their mail every day.

Lujan's day starts at the Ben Lomond Station at 7 a.m. where he is greeted by several large trays heaped with mail for the 433 homes along his route.

He has until 9 a.m. to get it sorted, and until 3 p.m. to get it delivered.

Sorting involves putting each letter in a slot of his sorting bin. Each slot is labeled with an address on his route and is lined up in the order he walks the route.

the route.

It's a bewildering job, kind of like doing a jigsaw puzzle.

You'll see it all makes sense when You'll see'lt all mukes sense when we get out here," he said.

But first the individual sorting problems must be taken into account. For example, postal regulations say that if a letter is addressed to "Mr. and Mrs. Whoever," but the couple is divorced and the husband is moved out with his mail forwarded, he has to get the letter, even if the sender really meant if or the woman.

"One lady got divorced and said, I don't-want-any-of-his-mail," Lujansaid. You gotta do what the customer wants, but that included the utility bills. I tried to tell her, but she said she didn't want his mail, so they shut

But letters are the easy part. It's the bulk items that make his day tough.

As he sorted his pile, behind him A8-ne sorted his pile, bening him were heaps of a supermarket's advertisement filers. On es tack of ads was direct mail, each addressed to a home on his route. Another pile, this one unaddressed, was the same food store ad, but with instructions to deliver one to each home on his route along with a little card advertising a missing-child.

with a little card advertising a missing child.
So everyone on the route got two identical filers from the food chain. Logic says one would be enough, but-regulations say he has to deliver two. "People will think that carrier messed up again," he smiled. Lujan has been a postal worker for 19 years, walking a route all that time. When he started he was freshout of the Marines, fresh out of Vietnam and needed a job.

out of the Marines, fresh out of Viet-nam and needed a job.

"I don't know why I took it, to be honest with you," he said. "I was sin-gle, bumming around, wanted a little beer money."

gle, bumming ground, wanted a name beer money.

He got to love it, though, and now says he wouldn't do anything else. His route is in the northeast section of Ogden-between-Ninth-Street-and-12th Street. It's a winding tangle of suburbia.

Like every business, there are good mail routes and bad ones. His is a good one: middle and upper class families, nice yards and a lot of fenced dogs. He stays in great shape and lots of people say hello to him every day.

Areas of town with lower income people and a lot of welfare recipients are worse, he said.

Knowing the customers helps them get mail each day

"Nothing against welfare recipiests, but they tend to have big dogs that run losse and a lot of people get... with some-sweet rolls on a summer food stamps, and you, gotta knock on:... duty, when he was wearing Bermuda every door, he said.

Dogs, of course, are a biggie.

Lujan's been bitten five times, once

Mail delivery people don't have to take that sort of thing though, he said. They won't deliver to a house where they know a bad dag is loose, and will cut off a whole block if they have to.

His is a good route, "a super route,"

he said, with customers who put little steps in their gardens so he can cut through them more easily. In the win-ter they even shovel him a path across the lawn.

He cuts across lawns to save time, but won't if someone doesn't want him

He gives them little attentions in

He gives them little attentions in return.

"This one old gal has MS (multiple sclerosis) so we have a signal," he scid, referring to the flag on her mailbox. "If she has any mail to go she leaves it up, and if I leave any mail leaves it halfway down. And if I don't have anything I put it down, because it's hard for her to go walking out there if she don't have anything."

Tsk, tsk. Despite considerable news coverage and publicity, the truth is lots of folks haven't quite woken up to the fact that those handy inter-est deductions we've all enjoyed for years are diffting away.

Realities of man's job crush woman's dreams of marriage

DEAR ABBY: I am truly in love

DEAR ABBY: I am truly in love with a man who is in training to be a police officer. We've gone together for three years and I am ready for marriage, but "John" says at doesn't want to get married — ever. He tells me he loves me, but because of the risks involved in his job,

Dear Abby
he doesn't want to bring sorrow to a wife and family in case something happens to him in the line of duty.
The tried to tell him that if anything happened to him, it would still cause the same amount of sorrow whether we were married or not. I tryto reason with him, but he refuses to discuss the subject, and gets upset every time I bring it try.
I want to get married, have a family and spend the rest of my life with John, but none of this seems to matter to him. He is even against the idea of living together!
Abby, the thought of not being able to marry the man I love is very depressing. Different friends are giving me advice.
One says, "Give him a scare by making him think there is somebody else in the picture and if the doesn't marry you, he could lose you."
Another friend says, "Don't give up hang in there and eventually John will change his mind."
Another friend has advised me to forget him. What do you say, Abby?
DEAR LOVES: I vote with the friend who advised you to forget him.

DEAR LOVES: I vote with the friend who advised you to forge thim. John deserves high marks for acknowledging that he doesn't want to get married—ever.

Accept it as a clear message that if you want marriage, you can't count on John.

John.

DEAR ABBY: Please offer suggestions to this problem. There are many ex-spouses in similar situations who could benefit from your advice. When a divorced person has remarried, should that person and his former spouse continue to phone each other? (I am told it's about the kids, but the "kids" are in their 203 and 30s.) Is it considered ethical and proper for a remarried person to visit the ex-spouse alone in that person's house? I always believed it was common-courtesy, out of respect to the present spouse, never to meet alone with the ex-spouse. Am I wrong?

— WONDERING IN SAN DIEGO DEAR WONDERING: Your "questions" indicate a great deal of insecurity on your part. You obviously feel threatened when your spouse.

meets alone with his ex-spouse.

Straight talk with your spouse about your feelings (and suspicions) will do more to clear the air than my answers to questions regarding: "ethics and propriety."

one is always collecting for a birthday, wedding, baby or get-well gift for one-person or another. I have always been more than happy to participate be-cause I know when we all go in togeth-er, we can buy one gift that will be ex-from $2 to $15 per person. Now my roundant of one occasion, we sent a get-well floral arrangement. I happen to know it cost $19.95, delivered, and $15 was collected.

So what happened to the leftover $5.05? We are never shown the bill, and no one mentions how much it.

cost. If there's a party, the gift is opened and we all see it, but we n see the bill.

Would I be out of line if I asked the collector to show us the bill? Please print this, Abby. There must be many other offices where this is going on.

DEAR RIP-OFF: When collections are made, the collector usually circu-lates the bill among the contributors, and if this is not done in your office, it's time to suggest it.
