Pentagon bribery probe keeps on spreading

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The dimensions of the Pentagon procurement bribery investigation are "beyond the wildest imagination," Sen. Charles Grassley told this colleague Friday while another senator called the matter the "most serious case in the history of the Department of Defense."

President Reagan said investigators waited until this week to tell him about the two-year investigation of the alleged sale of confidential Pentagon information to defense contractors through their paid consultants so that there would be no leaks. The affair came to light when search warrants were issued and telephone taps disclosed.

Reagan, in an interview on Public Broadcasting Service's "Nightly Business Report," said, "I think all of that was part of the need to keep it so absolutely secret that there wouldn't be any tipping off that then might allow some wrongdoers to escape and take cover."

Reagan said he was informed "the minute they had something to tell." Meanwhile, Rep. Bill Chappell, D-Fla., characterized as "a bunch of bunk" a report that he had come under scrutiny in the investigation. The Los Angeles Times reported Friday that Chappell, who oversees the Pentagon budget as chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee on defense, was identified by sources as one of two congressmen under scrutiny.

Federal law enforcement sources speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press that no one in Congress is under investigation in the probe at this time.

The voices of several congressmen turn up on the wiretaps, which are a central part of the investigation, said other government sources, but they emphasized that the inquiry at this point has zeroed in on strong evidence of wrongdoing which has nothing to do with the probe at this time. • See PENTAGON on Page A2

Light rain keeps Iowa hopes alive

The Associated Press

Parched farmland soaked up moderate rain in parts of Iowa on Friday, Ohio officials warned of the possibility of mandatory water conservation, and barges sat idle near shallow sections of the busy Mississippi and Ohio rivers.

"I don't think the public understands the gravity of this problem," Ohio Lt. Gov. Paul Leonard said Friday. "They think this is a great summer. From the beach point of view, this may be a great summer. But from a water availability point of view, this could be a dangerous summer."

In the South, reservoirs on the Savannah River in South Carolina are at low levels comparable to their status during the severe droughts of the 1930s and 1950s; the Army Corps of Engineers said.

Several points in northwestern and north-central Iowa received half an inch of rain or more Friday, but other areas got nothing more than clouds when a warm front made its way southeast through the region.

"This is probably our last chance for rain for a week," said Chuck Myers, forecaster for the National Weather Service in Iowa. He said weather patterns would shut off any moisture from the Gulf of Mexico; Friday's rain came from a weak weather system that came all the way from the Pacific.

Iowa State extension climatologist Elwyn Taylor said Friday's rain barely made a dent in the amount of moisture needed. He said dry counties in northeastern Iowa need five inches of rain to get back to normal growing conditions. The rest of the state needs between two and four inches.

In other developments, Iowa ordered irrigators and other heavy water users along the Winnebago, English and Little Cedar rivers and a section of the Cedar River to stop pumping, with officials saying similar action is being considered to protect other low-flowing streams.

The weather service has predicted a continuation of the unusually dry Midwestern weather through at least July 16, raising the possibility of a 20-25 percent loss in corn yields as opposed to the 10 percent loss suffered to date.

Futures traders on Chicago, Kansas City and Minneapolis commodities exchanges have been bidding up prices for future delivery of grains and soybeans. On the Chicago Board of Trade, corn futures have risen about 40 percent since May 1 and soybeans have advanced about 35 percent, and cash prices have followed suit.

In Ohio, the lieutenant governor was named by Gov. Richard Celeste to head a special state agency task force being created to draft recommendations for gubernatorial and legislative action in response to the drought.

Leonard said that while dry farms have gotten most of the public's attention, "in my opinion, an equally serious risk is facing Ohio communities in terms of potential water shortages or eventual contamination of water supplies in Ohio communities.

Leonard would not rule out the possibility of mandatory restrictions. That would certainly be a last result, but at this point in time you can't rule anything in, or rule anything out, until you get a good assessment of the problem," he said. About 1,000 barges were halted on the Mississippi near Greenville, Miss., while nearly 700 barges were stranded on the Ohio near Mound City, Ill., authorities said, with water down to 7 feet deep in spots.

Anti-bias AIDS law wins nod

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House AIDS Commission gave final approval late Friday to a recommendation for federal legislation to prohibit discrimination against people infected with the deadly virus.

"Although all commissioners expressed support for the sentiment during informal discussions last week, when the final vote was taken, only seven of the 12 present backed the proposal being pushed strongly by retired Adm. James D. Watkins, the panel's chairman.

The action came in the eighth hour of what was expected to be an even longer session as the commission put the finishing touches on the 269-page report due at the White House next Friday.

After dealing with the anti-discrimination recommendation, the commission turned to the last remaining item of controversy — what, if anything, to recommend in the way of administrative changes to deal with AIDS and other epidemics in the future.

Watkins favors giving the office of surgeon general vast new powers to deal with present and future health emergencies proclaimed by the president.

However, several commissioners are on record opposing that approach.

Among the options up for consideration as the panel wound up its work was a suggestion from one member, Kristine M. Gebbie, of the Oregon state health officer, calling for legislation that would enable the surgeon general to request the president to declare public health emergencies.

But rather than give the surgeon general the primary role once such a designation is made, Ms. Gebbie said

Soviet historian takes bold step, proposes exoneration for Trotsky

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — A leading Soviet historian said Friday that revolutionary Leon Trotsky should be exonerated of criminal charges nearly 50 years after he was driven from the Soviet Union, revived as a traitor to socialism and murdered.

"We have to rehabilitate all those people who were repressed and who were accused on false evidence, and all those accused must be rehabilitated," said Yuri Afanasyev. "And in line with those people is Trotsky."

Afanasyev, in one of the boldest proposals to date in the campaign for greater openness, also called for publication in the Soviet Union of Trotsky's works, which have been banned.

Exonerating Trotsky of criminal charges would be another major step toward the rehabilitation of early Soviet leaders who were purged and killed by Kremlin leader Josef Stalin.

Publishing Trotsky's work and revoking the criminal charges against him would continue an intensifying campaign against the legacy of Stalin, who died in 1953.

It could also lead to reexamination of the key role that Trotsky played in the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution, creating the Red Army and leading the Communists to victory against counter-revolutionaries in the ensuing Russian Civil War.

That might lead Soviet historians to reevaluate and possibly diminish the role played by Vladimir I. Lenin, the founder of the Soviet state; who relied heavily on Trotsky during the early years of Bolshevik rule.

The Soviets have already taken several steps in this direction, even publishing an article mildly critical of Lenin.

At Magic Reservoir, Kanaka Rapids Power projects move closer

By MARK PRATTER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A business associate of J.R. Simplot is eyeing hydro projects in the Magic and Wood River valleys.

Jay Jackson of Boise recently purchased a multi-million power sales contract at Magic Reservoir from Cook Electric of Twin Falls.

This allows Jackson's Magic Hydroelectric Co. to proceed with the $8 million project on public lands at Magic Reservoir in Blaine County.

Construction at the south end of the reservoir begins next month and will take six months to complete. The Magic project will produce an annual average of 27,700,000 kilowatts, enough to supply the annual power requirement of 1,978 homes.

Jackson's A&J Construction also is seeking a federal permit to study a hydro project near Buhl, a project once considered by Idaho Power Co. Jackson says he knows of no competition for this permit.

But IPC says it will oppose the application, a routine move for the Boise-based utility.

The 12-megawatt Kanaka Rapids project will cost about $10 million, says Jackson.

The project consists of a 50-foot-long concrete dike extending from the north banks of the Snake River to an island in the center of the river. The project also entails construction of a 3,100-foot-long canal and a power • See POWER on Page A2

Prospects brighten for $10 million Idaho revenue surplus

The Associated Press

BOISE — Continued strong May tax collections have solidified prospects for a multimillion-dollar state revenue surplus at the end of this month, government analysts say.

General account revenue collections through May, 1988, strengthened further with a year's positive cash position now a virtual certainty," Idaho administration analysts said in their latest economic and budget update issued on Friday.

The outlook adopted Gov. Cecil Andrus' non-committal "positive cash position" code phrase for a budget surplus. But the analysis itself provided strong evidence that receipts by the end of the budget year on June 30 will run about $10 million more than the administration and lawmakers estimated last January.

Instead of the $663.6 million the government expected to get this year, total revenue will likely run between $673 million and $674 million, the analysis indicated. State spending will total just under $661 million.

There has been some discussion about use of the surplus since prospects for it surfaced earlier this spring. But no state officials have made any commitments on spending the extra money.

Government economists continued to caution that much of the surplus may be one-time windfalls that will not recur in future years. In fact, some analysts remained worried that excess corporate tax collections may actually be early payments on next year's liability that will reduce anticipated revenues from the corporate tax in the new budget year.

According to the new economic outlook, state sales tax receipts, which account for over 40 percent of total general account revenues, slipped somewhat in May from the strong performance of previous months.

But collections, spurred by the building boom, were still above expectations, and administration analyst said it now appeared that receipts for the year will run about $3.5 million over the administration's projection.

Corporate tax revenues surged again last month and were expected to remain strong through June to end $3 million or more over the administration estimate.

State Treasurer Lydia Justice Edwards has already said receipts from state investments will run $3 million higher than originally expected, analysts said, and insurance premium tax collections should end the year $1 million and probably more above earlier estimates.

With individual income tax collections now virtually certain to hit their target of just over $286 million for the year, total receipts were closing in on the $674-million mark despite some slippage in minor tax collections and miscellaneous receipts, the analysis indicated.

Officials contain 2 fires

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Fire officials expected to bring under control Friday two range fires burning in the Arbon Valley south of Pocatello.

Both fires, which started Thursday morning, were located near the town of Pauline on the Fort Hall Indian Reservation, said Scott Powers, public affairs specialist for the BLM's Idaho Falls District.

The first fire burned 3,500 acres of juniper and brush by Friday morning. Powers said 120 firefighters had a line two-thirds of the way around the blaze, which was expected to be contained by 6 p.m. Friday.

The second blaze, located about three miles to the north, remained at 1,500 acres Friday morning. About 35 firefighters had the blaze three-fourths contained, and the line was expected to be complete by 4 p.m. Friday, Powers said.

Governor appoints councils

BOISE (AP) — A sheriff and a county prosecutor have been named to the Idaho Council on Domestic Violence by Gov. Cecil Andrus. Madison County Sheriff Lionel Koon will succeed Patricia Day-Hartwell of Idaho Falls, and Latah County Prosecutor Craig Mosman will replace Betsy Thomas of Moscow.

Boise attorney Kathleen Brooks will assume the seat now held by Mary Lou Hamill of Boise. All three terms will run through mid-1991.

In other appointments, Andrus renamed R. W. Hermann of Boise to the Board of Tax Appeals for a term through mid-1993, and William Fate of Lewiston and Larry Downer of Emmett to the Board of Optometry. Fate succeeds John Head of Rupert, and Downer replaces Kenneth Cameron-of-Sandpoint. Their terms run through mid-1990.

Idaho crop prices may rise

BOISE (AP) — The drought that is withering crops in the Midwest's grain belt may increase the prices for Idaho's wheat and corn farmers, state agricultural officials say.

Prices paid for Idaho wheat and corn could climb if Midwest harvests are curtailed, said Dave Loos, statistician with the Idaho Agricultural Statistics Service.

No dollar value can be put on the economic benefit to Idaho from the Midwest drought, Loos said. "It's awfully early to tell ... but all it can do is probably help Idaho farmers."

Idaho's estimated 790,000-acre winter wheat crop is in good condition and estimated to produce 56.9 million bushels at harvest, he said.

Teton council to seek loan

TETON (AP) — The Teton City Council has canceled a $220,000 sewer bond election scheduled for next Tuesday and will seek a loan from the state to finance its share of a proposed central sewer system.

The council had been depending on the outcome of the election to indicate whether residents favored the project, indicating it would not pursue the project if the revenue bond was defeated.

But city officials were notified earlier this week the city might be placed on a priority list allowing it to borrow money from the state Water Pollution Control Fund at 4 percent interest — cheaper than the interest on a revenue bond.

Employee dies in accident

SODA SPRINGS (AP) — A Monsanto employee died here when heavy equipment he was operating drove off the edge of a molten slag pile.

Rod Weeks, 32, of Montpelier, died at 8:45 p.m. Thursday while running a "pot carrier" that "unloads molten slag from Monsanto's three electric furnaces into a pile."

Weeks had worked at Monsanto's large elemental phosphorus plant here for two years.

An investigation is under way, but there were no witnesses at the remote area of the plant, Roger Grigg, Monsanto personnel superintendent, said.

Workers agree to contract

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Representatives of Westinghouse Idaho Nuclear Co. and the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International reached a contract agreement Friday just minutes before a strike deadline.

OCAW's negotiating committee will recommend ratification to its rank and file when it meets Wednesday.

Duane Allen, president of OCAW Local 2-652 and Ray Frankoski, chief negotiator for Westinghouse Idaho Nuclear Co., said in a joint press release, "Both parties worked very hard to hammer out this agreement and avert a work stoppage. We are very pleased to have reached this point."

OCAW's contract with WINCO expired May 27. Since then, both parties have agreed upon an extension of the terms and agreements of the prior contract.

The contract agreement was reached shortly before 4 p.m., when 400 workers were prepared to walk off the job.

Man discovers wife's body

BOISE (AP) — Boise police said a man who returned from a business trip Friday discovered the body of his wife, who was believed shot to death almost a week ago in their home where other family members have been living.

Sgt. Jim Tibbs said an autopsy showed that Miao Hong Lee, 25, died of a single gunshot wound to her head.

An arrest warrant alleging first-degree murder was issued for her brother-in-law, Bing Ho Lee, who authorities said is believed to have fled to his homeland, the People's Republic of China, according to Tibbs.

Tibbs said her body was discovered Friday morning by her husband, Bing Lee, who just returned from a business trip to China. Authorities believe she died June 11.

George Bush phones Idaho convention

Republicans re-elect Hall

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Idaho Falls attorney Blake Hall has been re-elected the state Republican Party chairman.

Hall, 34, was named chairman over two years ago after the death of Dennis Olsen of Idaho Falls.

Only one change was made in the party hierarchy in elections at the state GOP convention Friday. Elaine Martin of Ketchum was selected party secretary to replace Celia Gould of Buhl, who stepped down.

Re-elected to their party posts were First Vice Chairman Chuck Lempsis of Post Falls, Treasurer John Taylor of Lewiston, National Committeewoman Janet Miller of Boise and National Committeeman Richard Bauer of American Falls.

Second Vice Chairman Ann Rydahl, a state senator from Idaho Falls, said she had not yet decided to seek another term from the party's executive committee. That decision will be made this weekend.

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Vice President George Bush should at least consider a woman as a running mate on the Republican ticket this fall, Maureen Reagan, daughter of the president, and co-chairwoman of the GOP National Committee, said Friday.

Speaking with reporters before addressing the Idaho Republican state convention, Reagan said there were "three or four women who should be on a list" for vice presidential consideration.

She named Kansas Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, Nebraska Gov. Kay Orr, former Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole and U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

She did not include former United Nations Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, indicating she thought Kirkpatrick had effectively taken herself out of consideration by rejecting the idea that she run as a state's "favorite daughter" candidate for president.

Despite her statement, however, Reagan said she would not press the issue with Bush.

"I didn't impose my opinion on Ronald Reagan in 1980, so I don't think I ought to impose my opinion on George Bush in 1988," she said.

Her comments came shortly after Bush, in a telephone hookup to the Panhandle convention center, whipped the Idaho delegates into frenzy, declaring the GOP ready to defeat Democrat Michael Dukakis this fall.

"Our party is unified and strong and ready to go and win in November," the party's certain standard-bearer said.

Bush told the convention he was prepared to "lay to rest the myth that Michael Dukakis is some kind of a conservative."

Interior Secretary Donald Hodel, considered a possible running mate for Bush, said earlier in the day he did not expect to be offered the ticket's second spot.

"I haven't crossed that bridge yet, and I really doubt that I'll have to," Hodel said.

In an animated speech of her own, Reagan urged state GOP leaders to avoid characterizing themselves, or other Republicans as conservative or liberal. She said they should focus on the party's common philosophy.

That philosophy, she said, includes a sense of self-responsibility and a determination to avoid seeking government solutions to problems better solved in the home or community.

"I've decided the Republican Party is a giant tent, and there's plenty of room for all of us if we just start calling ourselves Republicans," Reagan said.

She called on the delegates to renew their commitment to the ideals that have characterized her father's two terms "by enthusiastically supporting Bush for president."

"The fact is that Ronald Reagan is a very tough act to follow," she said. "But keeping faith with the Reagan revolution of these last eight years is the job of our entire party."

In the opening address to the convention, Hodel echoed Reagan's declaration, calling for rejection of the "looney left" ideas of Dukakis.

He said Bush was the nation's best hope for preservation of the conservative, family-oriented principles that have been revived by President Reagan.

"We are the party, and it is our candidates, who came to restore family values and stop destroying the American family through government action," he said.

Idaho lab manager denies allegations

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Idaho National Engineering Laboratory Manager Don Olte is denying allegations he and other top Energy Department officials tried to cover up and then squelch a drug investigation at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in California.

"There certainly was no cover-up intended or done," Olte said in response to the claims made by House Energy and Commerce Committee Chairman John Dingell, D-Mich.

In a memorandum to members of his Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations, Dingell said Olte was among top ranking Energy Department officials who quashed the 1986

Livermore drug probe even though there was evidence of massive drug involvement among the workforce. The memo also said Olte allowed the subcommittee to be misled that there was no investigation under way at the time.

Olte, who was the department's principal deputy assistant for defense programs at the time of the incidents, maintained there was simply a disagreement between the department and the committee on when the investigation should have been ended. He said six people were arrested and 10 other laboratory employees forced to leave as a result of the probe.

There is a reasonable case to be made it should have been continued, and there is an equally reasonable case that it should have been terminated at that time," Olte said.

But Dingell claimed there was evidence that widespread drug use, including a theft-for-drug ring, was still plaguing Livermore today, 21 months after the probe was terminated.

He made his comments in an interview with the Idaho Falls Post-Register.

Olte said he and then-deputy assistant secretary for security affairs Edward Badolato and then DOE-San Francisco manager Richard DuVal initially approved the investigation and these three along with then Assistant Secretary for Defense Programs Sylvester Foley made the decision to end it.

Lab and DOE officials, while admitting some mistakes, said they shut down the probe because it had run its natural course. But they denied Dingell's charges that they engaged in a cover-up to avoid embarrassment over the drug problem.

"We were trying to send as strong a signal as we could that we just would not tolerate drugs in our workplace in California, Idaho or anywhere else," Olte said.

Commission for blind fires Barton as director

BOISE (AP) — Howard Barton Jr., who took over the Idaho Commission for the Blind four years ago amid a firestorm of protest, was fired Friday as executive director.

The commission's board took the action during a meeting in Boise.

A call to Barton's home went unanswered, and he could not be reached for comment.

Board member Marjorie Ruth Moon said James Monroe, chief accountant for the agency, was named interim director. A national search is under way for a permanent administrator, she said.

Moon said that she and Walt Hine voted to terminate Barton, while board chairman Jack Ugaki voted to retain Barton.

Since being named to the commission a year ago, Moon said Barton has been a frequent topic of discussion in board meetings. "The situation has come up at every meeting I've been at," she said.

Moon, who said she also has received numerous letters and phone calls calling for Barton's resignation, said there was a perception among many of the state's blind that Barton was unable to help them function independently.

Members of the National Federation of the Blind have called for Barton's resignation for years.

In February 1984, Barton replaced Ramona Walhof after then Gov. J. Pin Evans directed her firing. That triggered pickets of the state capitol, lawsuits, the disappearance of agency records and even an order for the Idaho State Police to seize agency headquarters to restore order.

Board members at the time said Walhof was fired in part because her ties to the national federation of the blind.

Walhof filed a lawsuit that named the commission, Barton, Evans, and the board members who voted for her dismissal.

Supreme Court rules newsracks protected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court made it more difficult Friday for communities to regulate the placement of newspaper boxes on public sidewalks.

By a 4-3 vote, the court said placement of the boxes, called newsracks, is a form of expression in a public forum protected by the Constitution's First Amendment.

The decision struck down an unconstitutional Lakewood, Ohio, ordinance because it gave the suburban city's mayor too much discretion in deciding which newsracks would be allowed.

Writing for the court, Justice William J. Brennan said the ordinance could allow a mayor to deny permits for newsracks based on a newspaper's content.

Nothing in Friday's decision, however, necessarily prevents a community from banning all newsracks.

Such a ban would not be based on content, Brennan noted, and if challenged could be upheld if found to be a reasonable restriction on the time, place or manner of constitutionally protected expression.

Three justices voted to uphold the Lakewood ordinance, and said communities should be free to ban newsracks from all public property.

But Brennan said the court's majority was not going to discuss the validity of such a ban.

About Lakewood's ordinance, Brennan said "a law or policy permitting communication in a certain manner for some but not for others raises the specter of content and viewpoint censorship."

The Lakewood controversy began in 1982 when The Plain Dealer, a Cleveland newspaper, was refused permission to place copy-operated newsracks in various locations throughout the suburban city.

The newspaper sued, and a federal trial judge and the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals invalidated the ordinance. The appeals court, however, ruled that Lakewood could charge rent for newsracks placed on public property, and could ban newsracks from residential neighborhoods.

Plain Dealer Publisher Thomas Vail said Friday, "the Supreme Court has recognized that improper restrictions on newsracks are subject to prompt constitutional challenge. This is an important application of First Amendment principles to the public interest in convenient and effective access to the nation's newspapers."

The decision produced a lively exchange between Brennan and Justice Byron R. White, author of a combative, 27-page dissenting opinion.

"The First Amendment does not create a right of newspaper publishers to take a portion of city property to erect a structure to distribute their papers," White wrote for himself and Justices John Paul Stevens and Sandra Day O'Connor.

Japan's beef trade limits may end soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's top trade negotiator left Friday for talks with Japanese officials, saying agreement appeared near on resolving a dispute over Japan's beef import restrictions.

"We certainly have not yet reached any agreement, but I'm persuaded that the news is sufficiently encouraging to justify a trip," U.S. Trade Representative Clayton K. Yeutter told reporters.

Before boarding a plane for Tokyo, Yeutter refused to discuss details and said that some issues "have not yet been fully resolved."

Yeutter's office announced the trip before an international business breakfast and he went further when a visitor from Australia asked him if there was anything he could do to help ease her nation's farm trade problems with the United States.

"Within the next 72 hours or so, I hope that our Australian friends will say good things about what we've been doing with regard to the beef situation and Japan," Yeutter said. "So to our Aussie friends I would say this an opportunity to freeload — so enjoy it."

He clarified later that he meant that opening the Japanese market would enable Australians to compete there with U.S. beef exporters.

"That's assuming we reach an agreement," he said.

The Agriculture Department says the Japanese market for high-quality or restaurant grade beef is $2 billion a year. But the United States gets only a small fraction of the sale because of an import quota of 58,400 tons of that grade imposed by the Tokyo government.

Japan's overall quota for beef imports is 214,000 tons a year.

An agreement between the two nations under which the Japanese maintained the quota expired April 1 and for two months there was no resolution as the United States continued to insist on an end to the restriction.

The two countries also are at loggerheads over Japanese import restrictions on citrus products.

American efforts to have the matter settled by a panel in Geneva under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade were vetoed by Japan.

Device Increases Gas Mileage

A device called Platinum GasSaver, patented by National FuelSaver Corp., increases the efficiency of your combustion so effectively that your mileage is guaranteed to increase significantly in gasoline engines.

The theory behind the GasSaver is the same as its government mandated cousin, the catalytic converter. Both cause unburnt fuel to burn. Their differences, however, are important. The catalytic converter burns unburnt exhaust gases in the tail pipe by exposing them to the platinum. Platinum GasSaver introduces platinum into the engine instead of the tail pipe. Platinum entering the engine increases the percentage of each gallon burning from the normal 68 to 90 percent.

Without the GasSaver, that 22 percent would only burn in the tail pipe when it came in contact with the platinum-coated surfaces of the catalytic converter. With the GasSaver, that 22 percent can now burn in the engine where the release of heat and energy is used to drive the vehicle.

With 22 percent more of each gallon burning in the engine, 22 percent fewer gallons are required. (Actual figures may vary.)

The injector itself takes only minutes to install and works on both leaded and unleaded gasoline.

Platinum GasSaver is cost effective and passed C.A.R.B. in 1983. In addition, increasing the octane rating 4 points eliminates the need for premium gasoline.

Probably the most valuable asset offered by the GasSaver is the extending of engine life by removing carbon deposits. Carbon deposits are simply another form of unburnt fuel responsible for two detrimental phenomena: engine knock or ping, and dieseling or run-on.

Documented test results conducted on 27 municipal vehicles accompany every GasSaver.

Over 100,000 already in use. Retail, wholesale or distributorship calls welcome.

Social security exempt from order in Panama

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. government agencies and private firms operating in Panama will be allowed to pay social security payroll taxes to the Panamanian government for their Panamanian employees, the State Department said Friday.

Department spokesman Charles E. Redman described the decision as an exemption to an April order by President Reagan halting all payments to the Panamanian government by American citizens.

Another official, who asked not to be identified, said the exemption will provide about $3 million a month to the Panamanian government.

But he said the exemption would not necessarily be a net gain for Panama, pointing out that the taxes are used to provide health care to Panamanian workers and their families.

Redman said the exemption was made for humanitarian purposes. He said that ousted President Eric Arturo Delvalle, whom the United States continues to recognize as the legitimate authority in Panama, had expressed concern about the possibility of severe hardships for Panamanians who might otherwise have been denied medical care at state facilities.

Another official said some Panamanians already had been turned away from the facilities because their U.S. employers had not been contributing to the social security system.

Redman said the exemption in no way reflects a softening of the U.S. policy of bringing economic pressure to bear on the Panamanian government. The administration's objective is to force Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega to surrender power.

Veto still possible on new welfare bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration on Friday refused to endorse a landmark Senate welfare bill said a veto still was possible due to potential welfare demands in the House "far out of line with our judgment."

The Senate bill, passed 93-3 on Thursday, carries a five-year price tag of about $2.8 billion, while the House plan, passed narrowly in December, is much more generous and would cost $7 billion.

"It is a case of Sisyphus having to push the rock up the mountain at this point," White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater told reporters Friday. "We will try to get changes in the conference (between House and Senate negotiators), but it's going to be very tough to reconcile with the House bill that is so far out of line with our judgment."

Both the Senate and House bills are designed to turn the country's Depression-era welfare system into a jobs program with a rigorous child support collections component. Government assistance would be a last and temporary resort.

Negotiators from each chamber will start meeting in two to three weeks to try to reconcile the two bills. They expect to have a compromise measure on the president's desk by Labor Day.

Rep. Tom Downey, D-N.Y., sponsor of the House plan, which gives more money to the jobs program, said he would try to retain a higher spending level than called for by the Senate.

"If you're going to have a meaningful work program, you have to be prepared to help finance it," Downey said.

U.S. moves toward treaty with Japan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States would be happy to consider negotiating a free-trade agreement with Japan along the lines of the treaty reached with Canada, Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III said Friday.

"While there are no current discussions about such a treaty, it would fit into this country's overall strategy to break down trade barriers wherever they exist," he said.

"We have a major trading relationship with Japan," Baker said. "It (a free trade agreement) would be something that the United States would be pleased to consider if it were something that the government of Japan wanted to consider."

JAMES BAKER III
Wants trade agreement

Baker's comments came in a television interview with foreign journalists for broadcast outside the United States by the U.S. Information Agency. The session was a preview of the seven-nation economic summit opening Sunday in Toronto.

President Reagan, addressing the annual conference of the USIA International Council, meantime, reiterated his belief in free trade while saying trade barriers of other countries are generating protectionist pressures in America.

"It damages the entire world economy when foreign countries fail to offer the same opportunity to American exports that America offers to their products," Reagan said. "It is this basic sense of fairness that has helped generate protectionist pressures in America. Let me repeat protectionism, the closing of America's markets, is the wrong response; opening markets, that, I firmly believe, is the answer."

Meanwhile, there appeared to be movement on another contentious trade dispute between Japan and the United States.

U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter announced Friday that he was leaving immediately for Japan, saying a deal may be near on ending that nation's restrictions on beef imports.

"We certainly have not yet reached an agreement, but I'm persuaded that the news is sufficiently encouraging to justify a trip," Yeutter said.

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said, "We remain hopeful," but added, "Until there's a deal, there's no deal."

The Agriculture Department has placed the overall value of the Japanese beef market at $2 billion.

A U.S.-Japan free-trade agreement would presumably be of substantial benefit to this country because U.S. officials for years have pressured the Japanese to open their markets to American products as a way of reducing the huge trade imbalance between the two nations.

The Japanese ran up a trade surplus with the United States last year of $59.8 billion, more than one-third of America's overall trade deficit of $170.3 billion.

The U.S.-Canada pact now being considered by Congress and the Canadian Parliament would end all trade barriers within 10 years.

Some critics have charged that specific trade pacts such as the U.S.-Canada agreement or the plan to eliminate all barriers between the 12-nation European Economic Community by 1992 pose risks of returning the world to the trade cartels of the 1930s, which worked to shrink trade rather than expanding it.

OSHA tightens rules to save workers' lives

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Occupational Safety and Health Administration on Friday tightened its regulations on concrete and masonry construction, saying its new standards will save the lives of 120 workers a year.

The new regulations, in the making since 1982, require additional bracing of concrete and masonry walls and more thorough testing of concrete to assure that it has hardened sufficiently before braces are removed or loads are put on it.

The changes were prompted by a 1978 accident in which 11 construction workers plunged to their deaths when scaffolding anchored in uncurd concrete collapsed on a power plant cooling tower being built at Willow Island, W. Va.

A similar accident occurred in 1973 when 14 workers were killed and 34 were injured because of the premature removal of forms supporting the 23rd floor of an apartment building under construction in Fairfax County, Va.

However, the new OSHA regulations do not address the controversial "lift-slab" construction practice involved in the collapse, last year, of the half-built L'Ambiance Plaza apartment complex in Bridgeport, Conn., which killed 28 workers.

Navy picks top enlisted man

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 26-year Navy veteran who is the command master chief of enlisted men on the aircraft carrier Theodore Roosevelt has been tapped to become the next master chief petty officer of the Navy, Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost announced Friday.

Trost, the chief of naval operations, said he had selected Master Chief Avi-onics Technician Duane R. Bushey to become his top adviser on all issues involving enlisted personnel.

The new top enlisted man for the Navy will assume his duties in September. He will replace Master Chief William H. Pickett, who has held the post for the past two years and who is retiring after 32 years of active service.

Former N.Y. congressman dies of cancer

WOODSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Robert R. Barry, a former three-term U.S. congressman from New York state and a representative to NATO, has died of cancer. He was 73.

Barry died Tuesday in Sequoia Hospital in Redwood City. He was an executive of several businesses before his election in 1953 as a Republican congressman from Westchester and Putnam counties, north of New York City.

While in the House, he was a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, and represented the United States at NATO parliamentary conferences. He was also a U.S. delegate to UNESCO.

Barry, a one-time member of the International Seaman's Union, organized the International Chamber of Commerce.

Active in California Republican politics since the 1960s, Barry was a former president of Calicopia Corp., which had timber and copper holdings in the Sierras. In 1982, President Reagan named him to the Peace Corps Advisory Council.

Photographer believes Earhart shined above other stars

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — A Hollywood photographer who spent decades shooting pictures of glamorous stars says his favorite subject was a shy, adventurous pilot he thought of as a sister.

When Albert Brennik signed on as Amelia Earhart's personal photographer in 1932, he was accustomed to subjects with more flash and charisma than the aviation pioneer. Eventually, he learned Earhart's inner beauty outshined the luster of his Hollywood subjects.

"She was a fantastic woman who didn't have what we call charisma. She had an inner loveliness, a gallant nature. She wanted to prove that women should be as good as men in flight," Brennik, 74, said during an interview Wednesday.

"I have photographed the biggest stars, actresses that had a lot of beauty and talent. But Amelia has shone up above them all."

As part of the Friday's 60th anniversary of Earhart's first trans-Atlantic flight, Brennik is displaying rarely seen photographs of the aviator in this northern California city near San Jose. The photographs were taken during the five years before Earhart disappeared in the South Pacific.

On June 18, 1928, Earhart became the first woman to fly across the Atlantic as a navigator. She flew with pilot Wilmer Stultz, and an airplane mechanic, Lou Gordon, from Trepassey, Newfoundland, to Bury Port, Wales.

Although Earhart later made a solo flight across the Atlantic, the 1928 flight is hailed as a major aviation victory for women and was celebrated with a ticker tape parade in New York City.

Earhart met Brennik four years later and hired him to accompany her to public events and help her prepare a book. Her husband, publisher George Putnam, approached Brennik in 1932, while Brennik was a photographer for CBS.

"She liked me very much, right off the bat. She called me her little brother. We just joked and got along very well. She didn't want anyone else to shoot her picture," said Brennik, who lives in the Los Angeles area.

Several months before her mysterious disappearance they began shooting photographs for a book Earhart wanted to call "World Flight." Originally, Brennik was to accompany Earhart and her navigator Fred Noonan and her radio control operator Harry Manning on their last flight.

However, Brennik was replaced by Earhart's flight technician Paul Mantz.

"I was supposed to go only because I would take pictures when she would stop and meet the heads of state. During the last 2,500 miles, I was to wait for her in Oakland and photograph her arrival."

The crew of four flew to Hawaii, but they returned to Oakland after the plane had mechanical problems. Earhart and Noonan then recommenced their historic flight attempt, heading east without Mantz and Manning.

"The preparations changed daily. She finally said to me, 'Well, I'm leaving,' and I said, 'I had a ticket to go and somewhere along the way I lost the ticket.' And she said, 'Well, that's the way the wind blows when she disappears.'"

"I said, 'God bless you. Have a nice trip and I'll see you when you get back.'"

Several years after the disappearance, the book was published as "Last Flight." It features many of Brennik's photographs — of Earhart — and her Model 10E Electra "Flying Laboratory," the aircraft she was flying when she disappeared.

Most of Brennik's Earhart photos were stored away after her disappearance. He didn't bring them out until last year, the 50th anniversary of Earhart's last flight.

Many of the details surrounding Earhart's disappearance are unknown. It is known that she completed about 22,000 miles of the flight, and it is believed she went down within 100 miles of the Howland Islands in the South Pacific.

Over the years, there have been claims that Earhart is alive and living on an island in the South Pacific or that she and Manning were actually spies who were kidnapped by the Japanese.

While Brennik dismisses most of these claims, but he does have one bizarre story of his own.

The day before Earhart was reported missing, a man walked into Brennik's Hollywood shop and identified himself as a doctor, Brennik said. He stared at one of Brennik's photographs of Earhart and said, "The lightness in the picture is gone, she's crushed and drowned." Brennik said.

FBI finds escaped murderer in Idaho

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Escaped Pennsylvania murderer Jon Evans Yount has been arrested in the Idaho Panhandle based on information generated by a recent television report on his case, the FBI announced Thursday.

Yount, 50, who escaped from the Rockview State Correctional Institution 26 months ago, was taken into custody without incident late Wednesday as he was working in the garden of his rented home in Coeur d'Alene, FBI Agent T. C. Brock said.

His companion, Diana Brodbeck, 45, was arrested when she returned to the house from her job at a chimney sweep company in nearby Spokane, Wash.

The pair was being held in the Kootenai County Jail on a federal charge of unlawful flight pending an initial court appearance and return to Pennsylvania, Brock said.

Yount, who was living in Coeur d'Alene under the alias James Marvin Forsgren, was sentenced to life in prison for his conviction on first-degree murder and rape charges in the 1966 slaying of Pamela Sue Rimer, a student in his high school mathematics class in Luthersburg, Pa.

While walking home from her school bus stop, the teen-ager was beaten, stabbed and raped before her throat was slit.

Spreading of syphilis, gonorrhea among migrants concerns officials

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Prostitutes are spreading syphilis and gonorrhea among migrant workers in Washington County, and the problem will escalate as the harvest season continues, health officials say.

Seven cases each of syphilis and gonorrhea have been reported, most of them in April and May, to the Virginia Garcia Health Center in Cornelius, where most migrants living in the county are treated.

"We are looking at this as an epidemic. It is very unusual," said Dr. Harold Osterud of Oregon Health Sciences University in Portland. Osterud predicted the number of cases among migrants in the county west of Portland will double or triple in the next two months.

Osterud and Dr. Lila Aflatoni, his research assistant, said Thursday that they compiled the statistics during an 18-month study of the relationship between migrant workers and sexually transmitted diseases in the state.

There were 10 other cases of syphilis among the general population in the county from January through May, according to the county health department.

Osterud said the seven cases of syphilis reported at the Garcia clinic in April and May lead him to believe many other cases of the disease may not have been reported or were just in the initial stages. Those cases may be active in July.

Aflatoni said the number could double because the strawberry harvest started last week and the migrants would have earned money that they could spend on prostitutes.

"There are almost no cases of syphilis and gonorrhea going on in the migrant camps in Eastern Oregon," Osterud said. "That's a reflection that organized prostitution is not going on in Eastern Oregon."

Dick Ginsburg, a Hillsboro attorney who represents some migrant workers in labor disputes, said growers, labor organizers and workers have told him that prostitutes were brought into the camps. "That's nothing new at all. It has been going on since labor camps began in the late '60s and early '70s," he said.

Ginsburg said the prostitutes were brought in by three sources: labor contractors, a few farm growers and pimps. Police, he said, have ignored the problem.

"The law enforcement folks know in general what is going on, but they don't know what's going on specifically. They don't have the informants or contacts," he said.

Gooding hospital produces a profit

By JANE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING - Gooding County Memorial Hospital is alive and well and operating in the black, Administrator Mike Piper told the hospital taxing district board of directors at its meeting last week.

"We've been in the black for the past eight months," Piper said, following Finance Director Mark Bjelland's standard two-month financial report to the board, which showed an approximate $10,000 profit from operations in April.

The news comes in the wake of last week's decision by the Gooding County Commissioners to borrow from $372,000 to $380,000 to pay off past hospital debts and tax property owners about $400,000 to repay the loan.

Piper said the board and management is concerned about possible negative public reaction to the hospital because of the coming tax increase. The debt has always been the responsibility of the county and in no way reflects the hospital's current operating position, Piper said.

The county-owned hospital came under the jurisdiction of the taxing district in October 1987. The taxing district was formed by Gooding County voters in 1986 to collect an annual $150,000 in tax support for the facility.

County voters were asked to form the taxing district two years ago to keep the hospital open. The Board of County Commissioners told voters in the spring of 1985 that the county had no way to collect regular tax revenues to support the facility without the district. The hospital was in serious financial trouble with mounting debts when the matter was taken to local voters.

The taxing district leases the hospital building and equipment from the county and is responsible for the daily operation of the facility. When the county agreed to transfer hospital control to the district, the county agreed to retain responsibility for the debt accrued through Oct. 1, 1987.

CGMH is licensed as a 25-bed, acute-care facility and began operation in Gooding in 1981. The current facility was built in the mid-1970's. Piper said 16 beds are immediately available for patient care at present, and the hospital has an average daily patient census of 13 to 14 patients.

Piper said several changes have taken place since the taxing district took control of CGMH. The district in January hired a management team from Lutheran Health Systems to operate the hospital; Piper and Bjelland are LHS employees and came to Gooding in February.

The board has also changed its operating agreement with the Walker Center alcohol and drug treatment facility, currently owned and operated by Hospital Corporation of America. Piper said Thursday he continuing ne-

Commission permits rezoning

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY - The Twin Falls County Commission has approved a rezoning application, approving the way for an exclusive subdivision overlooking Dierkes Lake.

The commission rezoned the land from agricultural to agricultural-residential to allow landowner Gary Stone to develop about 120 acres five miles north of Kimberly.

The commissioners passed the action with the stipulation that Stone must begin development within a year.

Commissioner Judy Felton said the land is now under the jurisdiction of Kimberly.

Stone, a woodcarver, said the project is part of a lifetime plan to draw attention to the area.

"I want to develop it to a degree, but mostly I want people to come and see it and enjoy it," he said.

Stone said the first phase of the plan includes nine 2+ acre plots and five 5 acre plots.

He said he is unsure how much the lots will cost, but added that home plans must be in the $150,000 range to build there.

He said he is also planning to clean up the old dump east of the development and construct a theme trail to old Shoshone, a ghost town on the canyon floor.

Stone said the lots are in a remote area, but are also only five miles away from Twin Falls and a few miles from Kimberly.

He said he plans to run electricity and build a road to the site in six months and construction of homes could begin within a year.

Felton said if Stone's development does not show any progress in a year, the county's action will become void.

"After a year we would like to see if there are any sales," she said.

Felton said the time limits are necessary because in the past several businessmen had their land changed from agricultural zones to residential, but never developed the properties.

"It's not smart for the land to be zoned one way and used another," she said.

Felton said in some cases landowners have sought to rezone their property back to agricultural to conform with the existing use of the land and because taxes on residential land is higher.

However, she said the best use for Stone's land, which is rocky and covered with sagebrush, is for a residential development.

"I think it's a good idea to put houses in the area," Felton said.

SIS enemies fail to sway convention

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

POCATELLO - Twin Falls County delegates to the state Democratic Convention were blown out of the water Friday with their argument the party platform should oppose the Special Isotope Separator.

"It was a total farce," said delegate Don McMurrain.

The six-member Platform Committee chaired by Rep. Patricia McDermott, of Pocatello, announced it had earlier unanimously decided to include only state and local issues - not national ones - in the platform.

"We tried to evolve and articulate—some of the foundational principles that people, if they were Democrats, would agree," McDermott said.

"It's broad enough to encompass the entire state Democratic party," echoed J.D. Williams, a Preston lawyer on the committee.

McMurrain and fellow Twin Falls County delegates Garry Nielsen and Alvie Johnson proposed a plank rejecting SIS, a $1 billion plutonium processing project slated for construction at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Democratic Party official predicts victory in the fall

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

POCATELLO - Counting minorities, women and all others naturally leaning toward the Democratic Party, a national party official Friday predicted a November presidential win.

"There are simply not enough white males (for Republicans) to win the election," said Lynn Cutler, with tongue only slightly in cheek.

The vice chairman of the Democratic National Convention and voting blocs for about 400 people, on opening day of the three-day state Democratic Convention—only one in 20 blacks vote Republican, she said, together with one in three Hispanics and a majority of women.

"Furthermore, women don't like George Bush," the likely Republican nominee for president, Cutler said, unholstering the sharp wit that punctuated her 30-minute speech.

With that widespread support behind Democrats, Cutler focused on the needs of children that aren't being met under the incumbent Republican Reagan Administration—and Vice President George Bush.

And she woke up the convention, through satire and commentary, that otherwise became bogged down in platform and rules negotiations.

Cutler leveled both barrels of criticism at the current administration's handling of a $2 trillion federal deficit, while cutting social programs.

"They have literally picked the pockets of our children clean," Cutler said. "If we don't hold George Bush accountable, one of the grossest economic crimes in the history of our nation - a fiscal felony - will go unpunished."

She said Democrats have much to be proud of in either remaining presidential candidate, front-runner Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis or the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Cutler, a former commissioner from Blackhawk County, Iowa, is now vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, specializing in local government.

She also proved equally talented at ridiculing Bush and the Reagan Administration, in addition to simply criticizing it.

"Did you see that George Bush wants to be the education president?" Cutler said to laughs already erupting. "That's like sending Moammar Gadhafi to Geneva to run the peace talks."

She criticized the amount of federal funding for education, which garners less than 2 percent of the budget, while defense spending tops $300 billion, or $100 per second for 95 years.

In addition, she lamented the political solution of cutting spending for immunization programs.

"Is the question how do we bring back polio and aid diphtheria?" she asked.

"Against this backdrop of spending shortfalls, Cutler blasted the federal deficit by borrowing Bush's money for cutting taxes while increasing spending - 'voodoo economics.'"

"No amount of black magic, astrology or economic statistics—and sometimes I think they're one and the same—can obscure the government record of red ink," Cutler said.

Drought-ridden farmers gain program extension

The Associated Press

BOISE - Farmers in Ada, Canyon, Elmore and Lincoln counties have been given another option in coping with Idaho's second-straight water-short year. Agriculture Director Dick Rush said the federal government's so-called 0-92 program is being made available to producers in those four counties even though the normal cutoff for signing up was May 15.

Under the program, farmers can receive 92 percent of their normal farm program benefits without raising any of the crop. In the four Idaho counties, farmers growing water-intensive grains under current production programs can abandon those fields and still obtain most of the farm support benefits.

"What this really means for these counties is that those farmers with inadequate water supplies can ration that water for high value crops," Rush said.

Although recent rains have eased the second straight year of drought in Idaho, officials estimate there will still only be about half the normal amount of irrigation water available this season due to the low winter snowpack and last summer's drawdown of reservoir supplies.

Rush also announced that the four counties plus Washington County have been declared eligible for the Emergency Conservation Program. That federal program

Winner of coin toss joins board

By CHERI FORSYTH
Times-News correspondent

HAZELTON - David Kohtz sat in on his first Valley School Board meeting since winning a coin flip last month to decide a tie vote. Kohtz and Janet Bingham, past president of the Valley chapter of the Save Our Schools, each garnered 28 votes in school board elections May 17. The superintendent flipped a coin the next day to decide the winner.

Kohtz takes the seat of his cousin, Delbert Kohtz, who decided not to run for re-election after having served nine years on the board. Kohtz will officially become a member at the board's July 11 meeting.

In other action, the board hired Debbie Stone, who will teach Chapter 1 students, fourth through sixth grades, Chapter 1 is a federally funded program for disadvantaged students with math and reading difficulties. Stone earned her degree at Idaho State University and lives in Hazelton with her husband and two children.

In other business:

Board Chairman Keith Huetting recommended the board make a decision to select a company to do the asbestos inspection required by federal law. The school must submit the plan for state approval by Oct. 12, 1988, and the plan must be implemented by July 1989.

"The board has been waiting to see if the requirements and time limits might change. The school had previously received a clean bill of health under earlier asbestos removal requirements. Snake River Company of Boise was selected to make the inspection and write an asbestos removal program that would meet federal requirements.

Retiring board member Kohtz and SOS President Leigh Bell volunteered to represent the Valley School District at a proposed task force on school consolidation. The formation of the task force will be announced Aug. 11 at a state-wide meeting of school superintendents.

The board hired assistant varsity football coach Rod Malone as head football coach to replace Scott Tingey, who resigned last month. Malone has been with the district for three years and has also coached girls basketball and JV football. Malone will continue as basketball coach and, as head football coach, will coach a new JV coach.

Fishermen spend months afloat

HONOLULU (AP)—Five Costa Rican fishermen set foot on land Friday after five months afloat in a 30-foot boat, surviving on rain-water, fish, turtles and sharks.

"We were never starving," said Gerardo Obregon Obando, captain of the 30-foot fishing boat Cuero III, "and we never gave up hope because we have a great faith in God."

A Japanese tuna boat spotted the boat 700 miles southeast of here Wednesday and brought the crew to Oahu. The men told the Coast Guard their boat ran out of gas off the Central American coast and had been adrift since, Coast Guard spokesman Jeff Crowley said.

The Cuero III set out Jan. 19 from Puntarenas, Costa Rica, for an eight-day fishing trip, but was driven from land by a storm and ran out of gas before it could reach port. It dried 5,600 miles across the Pacific Ocean.

The men collected rainwater and caught enough food to stay healthy, Crowley said.

"We lived on sharks, fish—seven little fish—and whatever also got near the boat," Obando said through an interpreter. "We had containers which we had ready all the time to catch rain-water."

"We were surprised to find them in such good condition after five months," said Coast Guard Dr. Martha Hawk, who examined the men before they left the hospital on May 128. "They just look so good it's amazing."

The five were examined at Tripler Army Medical Center, where doctors said the men were in good shape.

Mecham may seek office again

Los Angeles Times

PHOENIX—One day after his acquittal on felony charges regarding a campaign loan, former Arizona Gov. Evan Mecham pledged to work to rid the state of a "corrupt political power structure" and said that he may even run again for the office he lost by impeachment just two months ago.

"As a result of our experience, we are now even more concerned about the corruption in our state," Mecham, 64, told a packed press conference at his Glendale, Ariz., headquarters.

"We have been subjected to a very real conspiracy. For that reason, I hope none of you will misinterpret our actions in the future to help rid Arizona of a corrupt political power structure as any kind of a personal vendetta."

The feisty former governor said that he will support appropriate political candidates and a recall election against the attorney general through his right-wing Forward Arizona Political Action Committee.

"We expect to have a measurable effect in election of a legislature that represents the people and not the hidden power brokers," he said.

When asked if he would consider running for governor again in 1990, Mecham replied, "That's certainly a possibility."

Mecham, who was impeached and later convicted in a state

Senate trial and removed from office on April 4 on other charges, said that he is also considering starting an "alternative newspaper" because the city's two major daily newspapers' "actions are (sic) not that which gives the true information to the public."

Mecham, a former car dealer, and his brother and former campaign manager, Willard, were found not guilty Thursday in Maricopa County Superior Court of fraud and perjury charges in connection with allegations that they deliberately failed to disclose a $350,000 campaign loan during 1986 Mecham's bid for the governorship.

The Mechams maintained that the failure to report the loan was purely a bookkeeping mistake.

getations with Walker Center to set up an operating agreement that incorporates the changes outlined by both facilities in an earlier tentative agreement.

Walker Center was built on state-owned land, and is physically connected to GCMH in 1980 by St. Benedict's Hospital of Ogden, Utah. Originally the center operated on GCMH's acute-care license, and the two facilities shared a variety of record keeping, medical support, laundry and food services.

This previous arrangement led to some difficulties, including a $286,000 judgment against Gooding County that was paid to St. Benedict's with a special tax levy in 1986-87.

Piper says under the current agreement, both facilities maintain separate licenses. Each facility provides its own records, bookkeeping and billing procedures, as well as its own building maintenance and laundry service. The Walker Center rents the GCMH kitchen, and the hospital purchases patient meals as needed.

"Having both facilities in Gooding is very good for the community," Piper says. He said the two organizations are working out an agreement that will more clearly define which employees work for which facility and what is expected of both operations.

He says he hopes to do some joint advertising with Walker Center and looks for a continued beneficial association between the two facilities.

and 40 minutes of haggling on the convention floor seemed to justify Bill Chisholm's prediction that nothing substantive would emerge from the platform.

Chisholm, of Buhl, is a veteran of past conventions and candidate for state Senate who chose not to attend the convention this year.

The Twin Falls County arguments fell prey to a platform criticized for being bland enough for even a Republican to love.

"A Republican could vote on this," McMurrin said to wide applause from the committee audience of about 200 people as the SIS message was rejected.

Even as the platform draft became mired in fractious debate for excluding topics from reprinting South Africa to encouraging recognition of Idaho's Hispanic population, the prohibition against national topics remained fuzzy.

The platform included such topics as the federal budget and national security.

McDemott said that since the state Legislature allocates federal money—that was a legitimate subject.

The committee later deleted the national security plank. But the same committee member who suggested ridding the platform of national topics, Sen. Claire Wetherell, also was the lone supporter of keeping national security on the platform.

Lincoln County has also been approved for the Emergency Feed Program.

The Mountain Home Democrat said later that she was maintaining support for the Air Force Base in her hometown.

"We are for security and we always want to ensure peace," Wetherell said.

Asked why her plank was included while the platform remained silent on the subject of SIS, which would help create nuclear weapons, she said, "I'm kind of pansychical."

But McDemott said the platform did address SIS in its environmental plank.

"We support protection for Idaho's citizens from the danger of hazardous materials and policies to ensure clean air and water," the plank reads. "We support policies that will provide a sensible balance between the development of natural resources and the protection of our way of life."

McDemott said dealing with specific environmental concerns would have been unworkable.

Gooding man dies in crash

Gooding County authorities said Gerard Trevizo, 24, was pronounced dead at the scene according to Gooding County Sheriff's Office reports.

Urie-Espinosa Garcia, a 30-year-old passenger, was transported to St. Benedict's Family Medical Center in Jerome where he was listed in good condition.

Hispanic leader warns of confrontation

CALDWELL (AP) — Idaho Hispanic leader Camillo Lopez is warning of a confrontation with city officials over their decision to postpone events for the Hispanic community scheduled at the Caldwell Events Center.

"It seems to me that the council is not familiar with the letter and intent of the law regarding discrimination on the basis of race or they're ignoring it, and we're going to have a confrontation," Lopez said.

Mayor Pete Cowles decided to review use of the center for eight Hispanic events tentatively scheduled for later this year after a riot at the Caldwell Multi-Purpose Center last Sunday when a band scheduled to play failed to show up before a predominantly Hispanic crowd of up to 800. Three arrests were made during the disturbance, and some officials have blamed the consumption of alcohol during the event.

Cowles said he told Events Center manager Doug McConaughy that a written contract between the city and promoter Roman Reyna, who was not involved in last weekend's event, would be honored for a concert this weekend. But he said verbal commitments on eight other events at which alcohol would be sold or consumed would be reviewed.

view was being conducted for the Caldwell Night Rodeo or a dart tournament, both scheduled for later this summer, even though alcohol will be sold.

"It looks to us that the council has secretly set up a different procedure for a segment of the community regarding the use of this public facility," Lopez charged.

City Attorney C.A. Smyser, a Republican state senator, said only that Cowles and Police Chief Bob Sobba were trying to handle what they considered to be a potential problem in view of last weekend's disruption.

"I'm not discouraging the Hispanics to have a dance," Cowles said.

"They're an owner of the Caldwell Event Center just as much as anyone else, but ... I don't think 20,000 taxpayers should have to pick up the tab every time there's a Hispanic dance in town."

"These people have to demonstrate to me that they're responsible, and so far they haven't done that," the mayor said.

Sobba said his force cannot ensure security at those events, and Cowles said a proposal for private security was inadequate.

But Reyna pointed out that two events earlier this spring at which alcohol was available both occurred without incident.

Wife breaks silence to defend Mecham

GLENDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Winning acquittal on charges that former Gov. Evan Mecham concealed a $350,000 campaign loan was better than winning the election, his wife says.

Florence Mecham had kept silent publicly throughout her husband's months-long ordeal that included his removal from the governorship through conviction on two impeachment charges.

But Thursday, Florence Mecham said she was relieved when a jury found him innocent on all six charges dealing with how he and his brother and campaign treasurer Willard handled the loan in required campaign and personal financial disclosure forms.

"Winning this is better news than winning the election, because if he lost the election he wouldn't have gone to jail," she said. Had he been convicted on all six charges, he could have faced 22 years in prison.

Regulators seek new standards

SPOKANE (AP) — The Northwest Power Planning Council must find ways to protect the region's fish and wildlife without banning hydroelectric development, utility representatives say.

The council's plan to restrict dam construction on 40,000 miles of Northwest rivers and streams would be "an absolute prohibition on hydroelectric development," said Garth Jackson, Tacoma's power supply superintendent, who attended Thursday's planning council hearing in Spokane.

The council, composed of two representatives from each of the four Northwest states, sets regional energy policy.

Under the plan, none of the Tacoma utility's projects could proceed, including an inflatable dam proposed for an Olympic Peninsula stream that could be raised or lowered to improve fish passage, Garth said.

Garth said the best way for the power planning council to ensure environmental protection while allowing hydroelectric development is to adopt standards that put the burden of proof on developers that no harm would come to fish and wildlife.

Man calls drugs root of actions

CALDWELL (AP) — A Nampa man accused of conspiracy to murder a confidential police informant is blaming his actions on his abuse of drugs.

"I don't feel bad that I'm in jail," Richard Holmes said. "In a way, I'm thankful."

Holmes faces trial later this year on charges of conspiracy to commit first-degree murder and first-degree kidnapping in connection with the disappearance and alleged slaying of informant Denise Williams, whose body has yet to be found. Holmes, 35, could receive the death penalty upon conviction.

But during sentencing hearing on an unrelated second-degree kidnapping charge, Holmes said his abuse of drugs beginning after his home burned down last summer was at the root of his problems.

Woman sues Suzuki after being injured

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A 22-year-old Spokane woman is suing Suzuki over injuries she received when her Samurai rolled over last November.

The lawsuit filed Thursday in U.S. District Court in Spokane on behalf of Lonna E. Ryan follows a Consumer Reports magazine recommendation that all Samurais in the United States be recalled because they are prone to rolling.

Ms. Ryan "is seeking unspecified damages to be determined at trial."

The magazine rated the Samurai as "not acceptable" after tests showed it could tip over at speeds of less than 40 miles an hour if a driver made a sharp turn.

UN chief meets with delegates about assessments owed

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - Secretary-General Javier Pérez de Cuellar met Friday with U.N. delegates about the nearly $700 million that member countries owe the United Nations, a debt that U.N. officials said could close the organization.

The secretary-general consulted with Eastern European delegates on Friday. Earlier in the week, he met with Western European, Asian and Latin American delegates and is expected to meet with African delegates next week. Pérez de Cuellar and U.N. staff officials have said the United Nations could become insolvent by late October if members don't pay what they owe. The United States is responsible for most of the debt. It owes $167 million of the $691 million outstanding. Most of the U.S. money has been withheld in the past few years due to congressional disagreements with U.N. policies and operations and in an attempt to influence Soviet personnel policy at the world body. The Soviet Union has launched a campaign over the past year to increase its influence and standing at the United Nations.

UN seeks clemency for 6 men

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - The Security Council on Friday appealed to the South African government to grant mercy to the Sharpeville Six, who have been sentenced to hang for the death of a town councillor.

The United States, which sometimes vetoes measures against South Africa, joined in the plea. It was a clear signal to the Pretoria government of Washington's displeasure with plans to carry out the death sentences.

The resolution was adopted unanimously without debate. The 15-member council said it was convinced the executions would further inflame an already grave situation in South Africa.

It called "once again upon the South African authorities to stay execution and commute the death sentences imposed on the Sharpeville Six." It was the second time in three months the council has passed such a resolution.

South African Ambassador A. Willie Manley criticized the action. "This is blatant interference in the internal affairs of a member state of the United Nations," Manley said.

South Africa has ignored the divide appeals for clemency for the six blacks, who were convicted in the 1984 death of a Sharpeville town councillor killed during a riot. They were not found guilty of physical involvement in the slaying but were convicted on the basis of their involvement with the rioters.

This council decision was taken in contravention of the charter of the U.N. This is entirely an internal matter which is the subject of due process of law in South Africa," Manley said.

China signs launch pact for satellite

BEIJING (AP) - China and a Hong-Kong based consortium signed an agreement Friday to launch China's first commercial communications satellite.

The satellite will be launched into orbit late next year by a Chinese three-stage rocket, the Long March 3, and will be the first domestic communications satellite for Asia, said Peter J. Cott, chief executive officer of Asia Satellite Telecommunications Co. Ltd.

During the past two years, China has signed six or seven agreements to launch other national communications satellites. We-Hsi, vice president of Great Wall Industry Corp.

However, only Sweden has signed a formal contract, and agreements with the U.S. firms Telesat Inc. and Pan American Pacific Corp. have fallen through.

We said the main reason for the failure of the Telesat agreement was the American company's shortage of funds.

The agreement was signed by China's Great Wall Industry Corp., an affiliate of China's Astronautics Ministry, and the consortium AsiaSat, which is made up of China's CITIC Technology Corp., Britain's Cable and Wireless, and Hong Kong's Hutchison Whampoa.

Once launched, AsiaSat-1 will provide coverage of China, Korea, India, Pakistan, Thailand, Hong Kong and the Philippines.

World leaders at economic summit hear optimistic forecast

TORONTO (AP) — Leaders of the world's seven biggest industrial democracies began arriving Friday for their annual economic summit, with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney forecasting progress on dismantling farm subsidies and alleviating Third World debt.

Several downtown streets were fenced off and a police robot was used to check one parking lot for explosives as a security cordon enveloped the Metropolitan Toronto Convention Center, where the heads of state and government will meet for three days, starting Sunday.

Mulroney told some of the 1,300 accredited media that the principal objective of the summit is "to maintain the ongoing pattern of increased growth in a non-inflationary climate."

Canada's annual inflation rate rose Friday to 4.1 percent from 4.0 percent last month.

Mulroney said summits will be "much poorer" without President Reagan, attending his eighth and last gathering.

The Canadian leader looked for "modest but very important progress" in solving the "global escalation in farm subsidies, estimated at $150 to $200 billion a year."

"It is very important that all of us, including Japan, recognize that these subsidies to agriculture are trade-distorting in nature (and) eventually protectionist," he said. They cost treasuries more money than any of us can legitimately afford and ultimately they're very harmful to the farmers," he noted that Canada and France canceled $580 million worth of debt from African nations last year and if other summit countries do likewise, it would wipe away 14 percent to 15 percent of the debt owed by "the poorest of the poor."

"Some of these countries are so crippled by this oppressive debt that they couldn't pay it if they lived forever," he said. "It's uncollectable."

The summit site was sealed off by 15-foot-high fences, and a 3,000-member security force was on full alert following the recent arrests of suspected Japanese Red Army terrorists in the United States and the Philippines.

Japanese terrorist groups were urged to rocket and bomb attacks during the last two summits in Tokyo and Venice.

"We're equipped to deal with anything that might happen," said Metropolitan Police Superintendent Bernard Nadeau.

Security was especially tight at the six-downtown-hotels-hosting Presidents Reagan and Francois Mitterrand of France; Prime Ministers Margaret Thatcher of Britain, Mulroney, Noboru Takeshita of Japan and Chirac de Mita of Italy; Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany and European Community Commission President Jacques Delors.

Kohl visited the University of Toronto, where he received an honorary doctor of law degree and announced a five-year program enabling Canadian scientists to study at the West German research institute of their choice.

He spent Friday evening with a group of German-Canadians in Kitchener, Ont.

Takeshita arrived here Friday after a one-day stopover in Vancouver.

Mrs. Thatcher, De Mita and Delors arrive Saturday, and Reagan and Mitterrand go straight to Sunday's official welcoming ceremony.

The British prime minister is the senior leader, having taken office in May 1979, but Reagan gets preference in protocol since he is head of state, as well as head of government. Queen Elizabeth II is head of state in Britain.

In a pre-summit interview with the Toronto Star, published Friday, Reagan said he will ask his partners for help in resettling 5 million Afghan refugees back into their country following the withdrawal of Soviet troops.

Toronto police guard area near the Economic Summit

"They literally come home with nothing," he said.

Reagan also looks for action on reducing the burden of farm subsidies, which has drained treasuries while producing vast food surpluses. But he said: "We must do it in a way that does not suddenly pull the rug out from under farmers in any of our countries."

Palestinian dies after Israeli soldiers open fire

NABLUS, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Israeli soldiers fired on stone-throwing Palestinians who tried to stop them from blowing up an Arab's home Friday, killing one and wounding 18; hospital officials and witnesses said.

Army officials confirmed the death but said only four Arabs were wounded. They said two soldiers were injured by stones in the confrontation before dawn at Beit Furik, five miles southeast of Nablus in the occupied West Bank.

At least 209 Palestinians have been killed in the rebellion that began Dec. 8 in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel captured from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 war. An Israeli soldier and a Jewish settler also have been slain.

Troops demolished seven other homes in the West Bank and sealed 10 during a 24-hour period ending Friday. Most belonged to Palestinians suspected of throwing firebombs.

Increased use of firebombs in recent weeks prompted army officials to order harsher punishments, including house demolitions and sealings.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said this week the army considers firebombs lethal weapons to which soldiers and Israeli civilians could respond with gunfire.

Israeli soldiers entered Beit Furik at about 4 a.m. to destroy the home of Ahmed Hanani, an alleged member of a gang that assassinated Nablus Mayor Zafar Maari in March 1986 and carried out attacks on Israelis, the army said.

Rafaq Yusef Masoud, a 25-year-old villager, said young men guarding the village alerted residents with portable loudspeakers and about 700 armed with rocks and bottles rushed into the streets to face about 100 soldiers.

He said the troops opened fire and the ensuing street battle continued for about four hours. Masoud, who was shot in the right leg, spoke to The Associated Press from his bed at Al Ittihad Hospital in Nablus.

Five Arabs were detained, the army reported. Masoud said he saw soldiers taking 20 villagers away.

A doctor at Al Ittihad said five of the 18 people wounded by gunfire were in serious condition. They said the victims, a 22-year-old woman who was shot in the throat and paralyzed from the chest down,

Dispute over republic hits deadlock in USSR

MOSCOW (AP) — The parliament of Azerbaijan refused Friday to give up a region of the southern republic that Armenia has voted to annex. A Soviet official said the dispute was at a deadlock.

The decision by the Supreme Soviet of Azerbaijan was expected because the republic's presidium, or executive committee, already rejected Armenia's demand that Nagorno-Karabakh be made part of Armenia. Soviet parliaments rarely go against the wishes of their presidiums.

The Tass news agency reported the decision and said the parliament session was broadcast live on the republic's television and radio stations. Western reporters have been barred from Armenia and Azerbaijan since the dispute erupted earlier this year.

The ethnic unrest led to bloodshed in February, when 37 people, mostly Armenians, were killed in riots in the Azerbaijani city of Sumgait.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady I. Gerasimov told reporters that the dispute has taken the form of a "collision" between two articles of the Soviet Constitution.

One article requires that any territorial changes be approved by the republics involved and be ratified by the Supreme Soviet in Moscow. Because Azerbaijan has refused to give its consent to the change, it appears that under this article the central Supreme Soviet does not have to get involved.

But Armenians cite another section of the constitution providing for the free self-determination of nations and the voluntary association of equal Soviet Socialist Republics.

The Supreme Soviet of neighboring Armenia voted Wednesday to call for annexation of Nagorno-Karabakh, siding with Armenian demonstrators who since February have been holding sporadic street rallies, marches and strikes.

Hungarian police detain demonstrators at rally

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Police beat several people and detained at least 25 who took part in peaceful demonstrations to honor leaders executed after the 1956 anti-Soviet uprising, a dissident said Friday.

The detentions occurred during a rally Thursday afternoon in downtown Budapest at which about 400 demonstrators called for democracy and the rehabilitation of Imre Nagy, who was Hungary's leader in 1956, dissident writer Miklos Haraszti said by telephone. He was reached from Vienna at his Budapest apartment.

Haraszti said all of those detained were released later.

Well-known dissidents Roza Horvath and underground publisher Gabo Domszky were thrown to the floor of a police station and beaten by officers in front of about 15 other detainees, he said.

Witnesses to the rally said some people were injured when riot police moved into the crowd, including dissident scientist Ottolia Solt, who was taken home "in pretty bad shape," one source reported privately.

Earlier Thursday, demonstrators held a peaceful vigil at unmarked graves in a Budapest cemetery where Nagy and some of his associates are believed buried. They were marking 30 years since official media published a Justice Ministry decree June 17, 1958, announcing the death sentences.

The afternoon rally was held at an eternal flame to Lajos Batthyany, a Hungarian premier executed in the abortive 1848 revolution against Austria. Witnesses said it began peacefully with 20-30 people laying flowers at the base of the monument, then rejoining the crowd.

According to the witness accounts, dissident writer Miklos Tamas Gaspar was detained when he tried to speak, and police took his notes.

Relatives of Irish hostage make appeal

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The mother and sisters of Irish hostage Brian Keenan appealed in a Beirut newspaper Friday to the kidnappers to declare their demands for his release.

"More than two years have lapsed since the disappearance of our son and brother in Beirut," said the appeal, published in the 7-An-Nahar newspaper.

The letter was signed by Maria Keenan, the hostages' mother, and her two daughters, Brenda Geilham and Eilaine Spinnery.

"Despite the fears we have suffered during this period, we still hope that Brian will be freed and return to his family in Ireland soon," they said.

Poland adopts military oath without pledge to Soviets

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The parliament on Friday adopted a new military oath that deletes a pledge to serve in alliance with the Soviet army, a clause long criticized as an affront to Polish sovereignty.

A brief statement by the official news agency PAP said the new oath, which was recommended by the government and the defense ministry, was passed unanimously.

The government has called the change merely a matter of updating antiquated language and has said it would not affect relations with the Soviets.

Previously, military inductees pledged to guard peace in "brotherly alliance with the Soviet army and other allied armies." An outlawed opposition group, Freedom and Peace, had long charged the oath affronted Polish sovereignty.

The new oath contains no reference to the Soviet Union, and the pledge is only to "guard peace in the brotherhood of arms with the allied armies."

It also drops a reference to defending Poland against "the threats of imperialism."

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban has stressed that the revised wording does not reflect any lessening of Poland's alliance with the Soviet Union.

Man attempts solo row trip

GWEEK, England (AP) — A British man set off Friday on a renewed attempt to become the first person to row solo around the world.

Geoff Cooper, 36, rowed away from this Cornish port in his 16-foot boat Water Rat 1. He was confident, despite previous failures.

A 1986 attempt ended after just 36 hours when Cooper injured a wrist and had to be airlifted by helicopter to a hospital.

Last year, he was again rescued by a helicopter when he got into trouble off the Cornish coast during a practice trip.

China to publish sex ed magazine

HONG KONG (AP) — China's first magazine on sex will appear next month, according to an official report appearing Friday.

"Sex Education" will be designed to help teachers, parents and doctors provide proper sex education so Communist China's people will grow up healthy, have harmonious marriages and not commit sex crimes, the China News Service said in a dispatch appearing in Hong Kong papers.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

There are people who want to be everywhere at once and they seem to get nowhere.

— Carl Sandburg.

"I'll draw the trumps and take the club finesse," claimed an impulsive South: "I have 10 tricks if the finesse is onside."

"Let's play it out," insisted West. "You'll get only three club tricks but not four."

East put his diamond queen on partner's jack, and South was forced to win the ace. It was at this point that South made his premature claim. Let's follow South's announced line of play.

He draws three rounds of trumps and takes a winning club finesse. He overtakes dummy's last trump to take another club finesse, but what now? Since he has no entry to finesse again, he must play the club ace, hoping to drop the king. When it doesn't drop, it's all over. His limit is five trumps, three clubs and one diamond — down one.

The game makes easily if South draws only two rounds of trumps. If they split, he can then make a legitimate claim and end the rubber. When West shows out on the second trump, South abandons trumps for a moment and takes the club finesse. Now he has two trump entries to take two more club finessses, and instead of three club winners, he collects all four.

 ANSWER: Two diamonds. This hand may be next to worthless, at one no-trump. It should provide four or five tricks with diamonds as trumps.

Defending champion sets stage for U.S. Open history

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Defending champion Scott Simpson has insisted all week that there will be a new U.S. Open champion when the 88th edition of the tournament wraps up this weekend.

With arm in sling, Greg Norman exits U.S. Open

Major tourney jinx clings to Norman

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Greg Norman, haunted by bad luck in major American golf tournaments, was forced to withdraw during the second round of the U.S. Open Friday after aggravating an injury to his left hand.

"It's probably the lowest point in my career," said the white-haired Australian who had drawn the biggest galleries of the week. "I've never pulled out of a tournament before."

Norman, among the top contenders for the 88th Open title, sustained what was believed to be a torn ligament when his club struck a rock while he was making an approach shot to the ninth green. The rock was covered by tall grass.

He hit a drive on the next hole but then withdrew in pain when he tried to hit a 6-iron out of the rough.

Norman, who had shot a 3-over-par 74 in the first round, was one over for the day when he left The Country Club course.

He told reporters he had never been so disappointed.

"It is the U.S. Open, isn't it?" he said.

Simpson's 66, which came despite a double bogey from the water on the 11th hole and a bogey on the 18th, ranked as the best round of the tournament. It gave him a 36-hole score of 7-under-par 135, after two trips over The Country Club in suburban Boston and matched the Open mark for the best sub-par total at the halfway point.

The cut figure of 146 also matched an Open record. It was established even though the round was not completed.

Six players — including first-round co-leader Mike Nicolette — were stranded on the course by darkness. They marked their positions and were scheduled to return at 7 a.m., EDT, Saturday to complete second-round play. The third round will be held as scheduled.

None of the six had a chance of overtaking the leaders. Nicolette was the best of them at 1-under for the tournament with one hole to play.

Norman, his arm in a sling, flew to Birmingham, Ala. to be examined by Dr. James Andrews, an orthopedic surgeon at the Alabama Medical and Orthopedic Center.

According to the U.S. Golf Association, hospital spokesman Mike Immel said Dr. Andrews found "no sign of significant damage to the wrist" and advised Norman to rest for 10 days to two weeks.

Norman said it was too soon to determine the extent of the injury or when he may be able to return to competition. He said he was unsure whether he would be able to play in the British Open in England next month.

Norman, one of the pre-tournament favorites, was injured when he hit a rock while playing a shot from the rough on the ninth hole.

"It sounded like he hit a boulder," said Larry Mize, who was playing with Norman.

Mize, whose pitch-in playoff birdie defeated Norman in the 1987 Masters, went on to a 67 that left him at

Scott Simpson and the gallery anxiously watch a tee shot head up the fairway 136, one stroke behind Simpson.

Curtis Strange, winner of five titles in the last 10 months and a record-setting money-winner in two of the last three seasons, slogged through a drizzling afternoon rain to shoot a 67 and pull into a tie for third at 137 with Bob Gilder, who had a 69.

Masters champion Sandy Lyle of Scotland, British Open title-holder Nick Faldo of England, Paul Azinger and Fred Couples were next at 139.

Couples and Faldo shot 67s, Azinger, the 1987 Player of the Year, had a 70 and Lyle, who shared the first-round lead, matched par with a 71.

D.A. Weibring, with a 69, and Jay Haas, who shot a 67, were at 140.

Seve Ballesteros of Spain, a 1967 winner last week in the Westchester Classic, was one stroke back after the first round but slipped to a 74 and was at 143 after 36 holes. Tom Watson was at 145 after a 71.

Jack Nicklaus, 48, who counts four U.S. Open titles among his record collection of 18 major professional titles, failed to qualify for the final two rounds, just as he did in 1963, the last previous time this tournament was held here.

"I just wasn't sharp. I played two rounds and made two birdies. You can't compete like that," Nicklaus said after a 73 left him at 147.

Norman would not speculate on what treatment he might require or on how long the injury might keep him from the game.

"I really don't know. So much has happened in the last 20 minutes that I'll have to think a while before I know what might happen," he said.

He said he had persevered after re-injuring the wrist more than a year ago, accepting the pain and the fact he could not hit down on the ball as he would like.

He flew Friday afternoon to Birmingham, Ala., to be examined by his orthopedic surgeon. A doctor at the course gave a preliminary diagnosis of a torn ulna collateral ligament at the left wrist.

He said he first injured the wrist in childhood and that it had bothered him intermittently over the years.

"But this is the worst it's been," he said.

Norman said he had been taking medication for about 18 months to alleviate the pain and swelling.

After he left the course, he went to the medical tent where his arm was put in a sling and his hand packed with ice.

The unusual isn't usual in open

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Did you know that Horace Rawlings shot a 91 in the first round of the 1895 U.S. Open — and won?

Do you care? No matter, it's only the beginning.

Rawlings, who followed his 91 with an 82, won that first Open with a 173. It was only a 36-hole tournament and it's a good thing or else Rawlings might still be on the course.

He does, however, have the record for the worst start by a champion.

The first 72-hole Open was in 1898. Fred Herd won that one in 328 strokes despite a final-round 84, the record for the worst finishing round by a champion.

On the other side, the best start by an eventual winner was a 63 by Jack Nicklaus in 1980. And the best finish was Johnny Miller's 63 in 1973.

Only four Open winners have led all the way: Walter Hagen in 1914, Jim Barnes in 1921, Ben Hogan in 1950 and Tony Jacklin in 1970.

If Bill Mayfair should happen to win at The Country Club this year he would join Francis Ouimet, Jerome D. Travers, Charles Evans Jr., Bobby Jones and John Goodman as the only amateurs to win. Goodman did it last and that was in 1933.

If Scott Simpson is the winner this year he would be the first since Ben Hogan in 1950-51 to win consecutive Opens. Willie Anderson, John J. McDermott, Bobby Jones and Ralph Guldahl also accomplished the feat.

Nicklaus has finished in the top 10 a record 17 times. Gene Sarazen appeared in every Open from 1920 through 1954 — a record.

If Nicklaus should win this year he would be the first five-time Open champion. Anderson, Jones, and Hogan are the only other four-time winners.

Sam Snead, who never won an Open, finished second a record four times. Jones, Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer also had four second-place finishes.

George Burns birdied six straight holes at Pebble Beach in the 1982 Open. That's a record.

And then there is Ray Ainsley. In 1938 he walked to the par-4-16th hole at Cherry Hills Country Club in Englewood, Colo., and walked off 19 strokes later.

No one before or since has hit the ball as many times on one hole in the Open.

If Lakers ever needed edge its the old home court now

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers worked all season to get the homecourt advantage throughout the playoffs.

Now they get to find out if it was really worth it.

After losing to the Detroit Pistons Thursday night for the second consecutive game at the Pontiac Silverdome and falling behind 3-2 in the NBA championship series, the Lakers were relieved to be flying home Friday. The sixth game and the seventh, if necessary, will be played Sunday and Tuesday night.

"We're back home Sunday and I hope we can come through with our greatest effort," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "Then we'll worry about the seventh game."

The Pistons won the opener at the Forum only to lose Game 3 at the Silverdome, returning the homecourt advantage back to the Lakers.

"We've got to go out there, concentrate and play defense," said Pistons forward Adrian Dantley, who scored 25 points in Detroit's 104-94 victory in Game 5. "We feel they're not going to come out and do their showtime stuff like they normally do if they're a game up. We figure they might be a little methodical now."

"I've been around too long to anticipate what's going to happen," coach Chuck Daly said. "All I know is that we're up 3-2 and we've got a chance."

"All we have to do is go to Los Angeles and play a good game," Pistons center Bill Laimbeer said. "We have two shots to win the championship."

Detroit, which now has two chances to win the franchise's first NBA title, has some history on its side.

To win the championship, the Lakers will have to become the first team to win three postseason series 1-3 the same year. They needed seven games to beat both Dallas and Utah in the Western Conference playoffs.

Riley, who said after winning the title a year ago, "I'm going to guarantee everyone we're going to repeat," did not back away from that statement after Thursday's defeat.

"I like our chances," Riley said. "I still believe this team is going to win the championship. I'm sure our fans will be very vocal. The buck stops in Los Angeles. We'll have to be highly motivated to get the job done."

The Lakers, who are in the NBA finals for the seventh time in the last nine years, are trying to become the first team since the 1968-69 Boston Celtics to repeat as champions.

But Mychal Thompson, who came off the bench to have his best game of the series with 14 points on 7-of-8 shooting, said the Lakers can't be thinking about winning the championship. Game 6 must go first on the agenda, he said.

"We can't think ahead past Sunday or they will blow right past us," Thompson said. "You guys (the media) have got to stop thinking that just because this ain't the Celtics that they don't deserve to be up 3-2. They are a hard-working team and they outplayed us two games here."

For awhile on Thursday, it looked like it would be the Lakers who would take the 3-2 lead back to California.

While Detroit had six turnovers in its first-eight possessions, Los Angeles was grabbing a 15-2 lead less than five minutes into the game.

"They just came out and jumped on us," Dantley said. "It looked like they were going to bury us."

But with Dantley scoring 18 points and Vinnie Johnson 12, the Pistons needed less than 17 minutes to outscore the Lakers 52-26, turning the 13-point deficit into a 13-point lead.

The comeback was aided by three Lakers being called for three fouls each, forcing them to the bench.

"Having three players on the bench with three fouls plays havoc with your continuity," Riley said.

Sommer second, Welty third in TAC's women's high jump

TAMPA, Fla. — Colleen Reinstra Sommer and Amber-Welty collected second and third, respectively, out of the women's high jump finals in the TAC Track and Field Championships Friday night.

Sommer, a Buhl native who moved to Reno during her high school career, was second, clearing 6 feet, 3 1/2 inches.

Welty, a Twin Falls graduate currently attending Idaho State, went 6-2 1/4 for third place.

The winner was Jan Wohlschlag, Nike Const. Track Team, who jumped 6 feet, 5 1/2 inches Friday night. However, Sommer's 6-6 effort earlier this season is still the nation's best this year.

Jake Jacoby, Boise, went unplaced in the men's high jump.

Idaho State Coach Dave Nelson said he was very pleased with the two Idaho jumpers and added "I felt the surprise was Wohlschlag. She looked really good."

From an Idaho State standpoint, Nelson said "I think it went very well" for Welty from a success and learning standpoint at this point of her career.

"This is her first shot at the non-collegians and it quite a difference," the coach said. "When she won (the NCAA championship) at Eugene everything went very well. It was a little rocky here, trouble with steps, getting used to a new facility, all the things that a competitor may have to adjust to on the road. But she had success and came through well and I think that makes her even more ready for the Olympic trials next month and for the years to come."

The Olympic trials are scheduled for July 22-23 in Indianapolis and Nelson said Welty would be competing in a pre-trial meet there July 2 "to get a chance to get acquainted with the conditions she'll be working with during the trials."

Charlotte pulls for NFL club

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — If the Charlotte area hopes to win a National Football League expansion franchise, it will take a unified effort by all parties interested in owning the team to sell it to league owners, George Shinn said Friday.

The Charlotte sports entrepreneur and South Carolina businessman Jerry Richardson are both trying to convince the NFL to expand to Charlotte. At a news conference Shinn suggested that both sides join forces now to win a franchise and worry about who will own it later.

Shinn released copies of a letter he wrote to an NFL blue ribbon committee in Charlotte expressing his willingness to join forces with all prospective team owners.

"Past attempts by separate groups representing the same area have led to confusion and a dilution of effort," Shinn wrote to Henry Faison, chairman of the committee. "Witness the Tampa and St. Petersburg situation in getting a major league baseball franchise. The two groups fought rather than helped the overall effort."

"I would like to see all prospective Charlotte ownership groups pledge the necessary time and money into a unified high-powered campaign selling the Charlotte market under the banner of your committee," he wrote. "After we have placed Charlotte on the expansion map then the individual groups can pursue their proprietary interests."

Shinn — the majority owner of the new National Basketball Association Charlotte Hornets and minor-league baseball team — also has made a pitch to Atlanta Falcons owner Rankin Smith about the possibility of moving the Falcons to Charlotte if a $158 million domed stadium plan in Atlanta fails.

"My message is, 'If another city doesn't want you, I'd love to have you,'" Shinn said.

Metcalf mulls choice between grid career and Olympics

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Texas' Eric Metcalf, a two-time NCAA champion, upset Michael Conley to win the long jump title Friday at the Mobil Outdoor Track and Field Championships with the best leap of his career.

Metcalf, also a star running back for the Longhorns' football team, said he is 27 feet, 8 1/2 inches, making him the No. 4 performer in American history and No. 8 on the all-time world list.

The jump was nearly eight inches further than Metcalf's previous best effort of 27-0 1/2. He had jumped 27-2 1/4 and 27-2 this year, but both marks were wind-aided. Conley, the favorite, who was trying to become the first long jumper to win the national championship since 1949, finished second at 26-9 1/4.

Metcalf's scintillating performance overshadowed sparkling races in the men's and women's 100-meter dashes and the women's 5,000 meters, along with strong showings in the women's triple jump.

In the men's 110-meter hurdles, 1984 Olympic champion Roger Kingdom produced the fastest time in the world in three years, winning his second national title in 13.15 seconds. The last time anyone ran faster was Kingdom, when he clocked his career best of 13:14 on May 11, 1985.

In the women's triple jump, former American record-holder Wendy Brown won with a leap of 45-4 1/4, the best in the world this year and only one inch off the U.S. record of 45-5 1/4 held by Sheila Hudson.

The long jump victory could cause a dilemma for Metcalf, the son of former pro football star Terry Metcalf. The younger Metcalf, 20, had planned to jump in next month's U.S. Olympic Trials, but had said if he made the team he would forgo the Seoul Games and play football in the fall.

Sheila Echols easily took the women's 100 in 11.04, after winning her semifinal heat earlier Friday in 11.01, trying her for sixth place on the all-time U.S. list.

Brenda Webb, the 1981 national champion in the women's 3,000 meters, breezed to victory in the 3,000 in 15:13.7, smashing more than 12 seconds off the previous meet record of 15:30.99 set by Betty Geiger in 1986. Webb's time also was the fastest in the world this year and put her fifth on the all-time U.S. list.

Jan Wohlschlag also broke a meet record, winning the women's high jump at 6-5 1/2, one-half inch better than the old mark of 6-5 set by Coleen Sommer last year.

In the women's triple jump, former American record-holder Wendy Brown won with a leap of 45-4 1/4, the best in the world this year and only one inch off the U.S. record of 45-5 1/4 held by Sheila Hudson.

The long jump victory could cause a dilemma for Metcalf, the son of former pro football star Terry Metcalf. The younger Metcalf, 20, had planned to jump in next month's U.S. Olympic Trials, but had said if he made the team he would forgo the Seoul Games and play football in the fall.

"I have a chance at the Heisman (Trophy) and we (the Longhorns) have a chance to win the national title," Metcalf said shortly after his surprise victory and brilliant jump. "But after today, I will have to make a decision on whether I go to the Olympics or not," he said minutes later. "It would put me right in the middle, I may have to reconsider."

"I enjoy football more, because my dad was an All-Pro. I want to try to prove I am as good as him or better than him." Last season, Metcalf rushed for 1,161 yards and scored 10 touchdowns. He said that beating Conley, the 1985 national champion and 1985 World Cup gold medalist, "gave me a big boost in confidence, because he's one of the best long jumpers in the world."

The big jump by Metcalf, the national collegiate champion as a freshman in 1986 and this year, pushed him ahead of Conley on the U.S. and world lists. Conley's best legal jump is 27-8. Conley, in his first long jump final since last September, was not disappointed at finishing second.

"I'm satisfied with where I'm at, but because I know I'm better than where I finished," he said. Conley had said prior to the championships that if he did not jump well, he would compete in another meet before the Trials. Afterward, he said he would not jump again until the Trials.

"This being my first long jump in nine months was not bad," he said. "For me to expect better than that would be pushing it a little."

"I'm fine," Conley said, referring to the tendinitis in his right leg that has bothered him the past three months. "I just didn't win."

"I'm satisfied with the shape I'm in. The only thing that wasn't right was my timing when I got to the board." On Conley's final jump, his knee buckled, but he said there was no pain.

Pro golf

Inkster, Okamoto hold Keystone mastery

HERSHEY, Pa. — Juli Inkster and Ayako Okamoto, who have accounted for the last three Lady Keystone Open golf titles, were back in familiar positions Friday.

The two shot 5-under-par 67s and shared the first-round lead in the $300,000, 14th annual tournament at the Hershey Country Club.

"This year's tournament attracted the finest field in its history, and the players responded with the best scoring since the event took up residence here in 1978."

There were 38 subpar scores (57 players were within five strokes of the lead) over the 6,345-yard, par-72 West Course on a day that went from morning rain to hot afternoon sunshine. Even before the rain, the greens had received a lot of water, resulting in particularly slow surfaces.

Uncharacteristically, neither of the co-leaders was overly enthusiastic about her game, even though both had five birdies and neither bogeyed a hole.

"I played like I knew what I was doing, but really, I just kind of walked and hit it ... walked and hit it," Inkster, 27, said. The 1985 and 1986 Lady Keystone champion already has had a tough week. She has low blood pressure and must keep a close eye on her condition. She blamed the low blood pressure for her collapsed at the course Tuesday.

Thursday afternoon, she said, "I didn't feel well at all and was thinking about withdrawing and going home for two weeks. However, I took a shower, hit some balls and played five holes. I don't feel badly, just weak."

"I waited until this (Friday) morning to make a final decision and decided to play. Right now, it's definitely nap time."

Devlin rides borrowed driver into lead

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Bruce Devlin, using a driver borrowed from leading money-winner Orville Moody, shot a 6-under-par 66 on Friday for the first-round lead in the $350,000 Northville Invitational seniors golf tournament at the Meadow Brook Club.

The 50-year-old Devlin, who joined the PGA Seniors Tour last year after devoting 5 1/2 years to constructing golf courses, had seven birdies against a lone bogey. His 12-foot birdie putt on the 157-yard, par-3 18th hole gave him the lead over Harold Henning and Bobby Nichols.

Bruce Crampton, runner-up in this tournament last year when he lost in a playoff to Gary Player, was at 68, one stroke better than Dave Hill and Don Bies.

Bob Charles, Lou Graham, Dick Howell and Charlie Owens had 70 while Gene Littler, Moody, Walt Zembriski and Dale Douglass had 71s over the 7,100-yard Meadow Brook course.

"I'm trying to find the right equipment for the last nine months," Devlin said. "I've been fiddling around with drivers and I saw one that Moody was using about a month ago and I asked him to get me one like it. He forgot."

"Devlin ended up with one of the drivers after all when Moody switched caddies, putting the bag on the shoulder of his 18-year-old daughter, Michelle. Devlin hired Moody's old caddy, Evan Breen."

"Evan had one of Orville's drivers in the back of his van and I jumped on the chance to use it," Devlin said. "Moody doesn't mind one bit. I left it the way it was."

Normally, I'm a great fiddler, but I didn't even change the grip."

Moody had obviously had success with that style driver, coming into this tournament as the tour's only three-time tournament winner and a four-high $227,463. The club proved to be just as big a help for Devlin, who hit 17 fairways during his round. He missed only on the 8th and it was on that par-4 hole that he suffered his only bogey of the day.

Devlin birdied the 1st, 3rd and 6th holes to get to three under, but gave a stroke back at No. 8 and turned in 2-under-par 34. He added birdies on the 10th, 12th, 15th and 18th holes.

Henning, fourth on the 1988 money list with $171,804, had birdie putts of 40 and 30 feet on the 11th and 12th holes, each par 4's measuring 389 yards.

"Putts hide a multitude of sins," Henning said. "My second shots weren't that good, but putting is 90 percent of golf, especially on the senior tour."

"I switched to the long handle putter this entire year. The long putters eliminate the physical aspect of the game," Henning, 17th on the money list last year, traced the improvement to his putting.

"If you putt well, you're going to get the scores." Nichols, the 1964 PGA champion, highlighted his round with a double-eagle on the par-5, 463-yard third hole. Using a 4-wood, his second shot carried 218 yards, bounced about six feet from the hole and trickled into the cup.

feud with American League umpires, however, was more at the crux of the issue.

"I think they have too much power. There's no doubt in my mind," Chicago Cubs manager Don Zimmer. "When Billy Martin can't come out of the dugout because a lawyer said so, then there's something wrong."

The "lawyer" is Richie Phillips, chief of the umpires' union. During the Martin fiasco, Phillips declared, "Billy just doesn't have the same rights and privileges that other American League managers have."

After Commissioner Peter Ueberroth stepped into the squabble and told both sides to make amends, Martin apologized to the umpires. The umpires, however, did not issue any apologies and some saw that as another parade of their power.

Pitcher John Candelaria of the New York Yankees felt it earlier this season. While walking from the mound to the dugout after an inning ended, he said something to umpire Durwood Merrill and was ejected.

"I asked what do I have to do to get a strike call and he tossed me for it," Candelaria said.

Merrill presented another version, saying Candelaria's language was not appropriate. There's the old rule for arguing with umpires — cursing the call is OK, swearing at the person who made it is not.

Umpires, while disputing that there is more trouble, are aware of the increased attention. Officials in all sports are getting noticed more — Ron Luciano's books may have made umpires less anonymous — especially when conflict is involved.

Deliberate confrontation

The umpires strike back

By BEN WALKER AP Baseball Writer

"Do not forget that the first essential in working out of a bad situation is to keep your own temper and self-control."

Yet the scene in the current beer commercial — where the umpire turns away from a manager after a close call — is no longer the norm. They used to say the best umpire was the one never seen, but now umpires seem to do more pointing and provoking and less listening.

Don Fehr, executive director of the Major League Players Association, has heard it. "We've been getting complaints from players about umpires in increasing numbers the last 18 months to two years," Fehr said. "The players think the umpires are more concerned with asserting their authority than with calling the game."

Complained union counsel Gene Orza: "The umpires no longer walk away from confrontations. They look for them."

"There's a tendency in the last half-dozen years for some umpires to put themselves into confrontational postures," Cincinnati general manager Murray Cook said.

"To which the umpires blurt, 'Out!' 'It's no different than it ever was,'" said Ed Vargo, supervisor of National League umpires. "Anytime you have players and managers and umpires, you're going to have arguments. But there are no more than before, although, they sometimes come in bunches."

Pete Rose's run-in with Dave Palone got the most attention. That was an isolated altercation. Billy Martin's play on his birthday Friday against the Giants at Riverfront Stadium. "I was looking forward to this day, to being on the field for my 40th birthday," Conception said.

Conception, the Reds' team captain and last playing holdover from the "Big Red Machine" of the 1970s, said he was merely venting frustration when he removed first base and tossed it.

"I didn't throw the bag (at) anybody," Conception said Friday. "I just threw it to get the frustration out of me. Mr. President (Giattetti), I guess he never got angry before."

Conception fights suspension

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds infielder Dave Conception filed an appeal Friday of his two-day suspension for a base-throwing incident so he could play on his 40th birthday.

National League President Bart Giattetti suspended Conception for two days Friday because the infielder uprooted first base and threw it following his ejection in a game last week in San Francisco.

Conception said he was surprised at the suspension, which was accompanied by a reported $500 fine. He said he made the appeal so he could
