Gem wilderness bill lands in lap of Congress

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — As Idaho's wilderness bill now falls into the laps of federal lawmakers, Republican Sen. James McClure said widespread criticism back home in Idaho stemmed from compromises necessary for federal approval.

"That's a different bill than would be voted on in Idaho," McClure said during a teleconference interview Tuesday.

Idaho's Republican state convention this past weekend rejected naming any new wilderness in the state, while the bill designates more than 1.4 million new acres, with another 650,000 acres of special management areas.

"I think that is the sentiment of the Republican Party in Idaho," McClure said. "But you can't get a bill (with that language) through Congress."

The proposed bill's co-author, Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus, echoed that opponents are vocal, but merely a minority.

Referring to extremists wanting more or less wilderness, Andrus said, "They speak with a higher decibel level, but they do not speak for 100 percent of the people of Idaho."

McClure and Andrus turned over their compromise wilderness bill Tuesday to a Senate subcommittee on Public Lands, National Parks and

Gov. Cecil Andrus, Sen. James McClure confer prior to Tuesday's hearing

Forests. Testimony ran throughout the morning and the bill now moves to the full Energy Committee.

Neither McClure nor Andrus set a time table for when the Idaho Forest Management Act would move through Congress. They instead argued that the bill is the only workable solution to Idaho's contentious wilderness issue. "I think this is the best vehicle we can use," McClure said.

New measure's critics testify from every side

States News Service

WASHINGTON — Critics of Idaho's new wilderness bill testified on all sides of the issue Tuesday during a congressional subcommittee hearing.

"Our opposition continues to be based upon the fact that this legislation will reduce an already inadequate timber supply in our operating region," Todd Maddock of the Potlatch Corp. testified in the hearings.

But Eric Christensen of the Idaho Sportsmen's Coalition said the bill's special management provisions provided for the mandatory harvesting of timber, "thus eliminating the areas from future consideration as wilderness and locking in subsidies to the timber industry in the form of below-cost timber sales."

GOP Sen. James McClure and Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus together crafted the Idaho Forest Management Act under consideration. They each testified before the Senate Energy subcommittee on "Public Lands, National Parks and Forests."

Their bill, which would add about 1.4 million acres of land to Idaho's wilderness areas and 650,000 acres to special management, has been hotly opposed by both conservationists and forest industry groups.

But Andrus rejected opponents' arguments, saying the measure is exactly what the state needs.

"These issues will either be settled by this bill or in the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco," Andrus said in an interview during a recess in the hearing. "And that would be a very bad thing for Idaho."

Subcommittee Chairman Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., queried Andrus and McClure on the provisions of the bill, especially those concerning federal water rights.

Federal water rights are water rights on federal land set aside for the use of the federal government. Opponents of the bill, including the Sierra Club, have said that the bill's wording would curtail federal claims to water rights on national wilderness land.

But McClure and Andrus Tuesday repeatedly stressed that the bill's language was designed to ensure that no additional water rights will be conferred on the federal government and not to limit those rights it already

Half U.S. children have no cavities

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Half of America's 43 million school-age children have never experienced tooth decay, a dental problem that affected almost all of America's youth just a generation ago, according to a federal study released Tuesday.

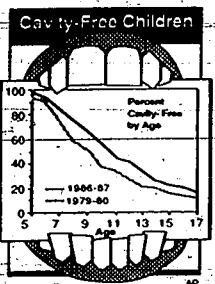

In a study that included the oral examination of about 40,000 youngsters coast-to-coast, the National Institute of Dental Research found that dental cavities have declined by 36 percent among children ages 5 to 17, and that 49.9 percent of these children had no tooth decay at all.

Officials said the sample population examined was selected to represent the approximately 43 million school-aged children in the nation.

Dr. James P. Carlos, chief of the epidemiology at the NIDR, said that dental decay, a problem that has plagued humankind throughout history, has been steadily declining since the use of fluoride became widespread and that the trend probably will continue.

Carlos said the decline in tooth decay follows a pattern consistent with the increased use of fluoride in the nation's drinking water, in toothpastes, and in mouth washes.

For the survey, specialists counted the amount of decay or fillings noted on each of the 128 surfaces of a typical set of 28 teeth in the school children. A missing tooth was counted as five surfaces. Wisdom teeth were not counted since few school children have them.

The result showed that the statistical mean of tooth surfaces with decay was 3.07 per child. The mean in a survey taken in 1980 was 4.77, reflecting a 36 percent decline in tooth cavities.

In 1980, the survey found that 35.6 percent of the children were free of

Post-summit Reagan 'upset' over scope of Pentagon bribery, fraud

The Associated Press

TORONTO — President Reagan said Tuesday that bribery and fraud in the $10-billion dollar purchasing program of the Pentagon was "understandable" given the size of the government, but that he was "very upset" about the alleged scope of the problem.

At a news conference marking the end of his eighth and final economic summit, Reagan also was asked about the drought plaguing the United States. Noting he has set up a task force to look into the problem, Reagan said, "outside of praying for rain, there isn't anything I can do until we hear from them."

On another subject, he suggested that gun-control laws should be tightened to require that gun-holders undergo some training.

Once again, Reagan refused to say whether he would pardon Oliver North or John Poindexter for their alleged roles in the Iran-Contra scandal. However, he said the legal case against them

"has to go forward or they would live the rest of their lives under a shadow of guilt."

Immediately after his opening statement, Reagan was peppered with questions about the investigation of alleged corruption at the Pentagon.

"I think all of us are disappointed and upset that such things could happen," Reagan said. Nevertheless, he said, "I think it should be understandable how such things can happen in

Optimistic leaders dodge question of farm subsidies

The Associated Press

TORONTO — Leaders of the seven richest nations concluded their annual summit Tuesday with a debt-relief plan for the world's most desperately poor countries, proclaiming optimism about the global economy but spurning President Reagan's plea to abolish farm subsidies.

Reagan acknowledged that "there are some differences of opinion" on agricultural subsidies but said, "I am not going to give up on that. Showing no regrets over the final communique, he said, "I'm just surprised we got it done."

The three-day summit was Reagan's last, and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney thanked the president on behalf of the Western leaders.

Proclaiming their talks a benefit for the entire world, the summit leaders agreed to launch a new, seven-year cycle of summits in France next year, beginning July 14, the bicentennial of the start of the French Revolution, and running three days.

Conferring around an octagonal table in a windowless, basement room of Toronto's convention center, the leaders met for nearly three hours — an hour longer than scheduled. "It was a very vigorous exchange of views that produced a very substantial document," said Mulroney, the host of the summit conference.

In a speech prepared for delivery Tuesday night, before leaving Toronto, Reagan told an audience of wealthy Canadian business executives he hoped the industrialized democracies would expand free trade and steer clear of "the protection and isolation that are relics of another age."

Displaying fascination with the technological revolution, Reagan noted that a tiny silicon chip has the same power of the biggest computers of the 1950s. "Do we dare stop climbing?" he asked.

The communique said the leaders approved a plan allowing creditor countries to choose from a menu of options in granting debt relief to 20 to 30 nations of sub-Saharan Africa.

On the agricultural subsidies issue, however, they stopped far short of Reagan's proposal to eliminate subsidies by the year 2000, an idea staunchly opposed by European nations and Japan.

Instead, the leaders said negotiators must develop "a framework approach" to reduce — not eliminate — the subsidies.

Retail price inflation slows during May to 4.3% annual rate

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Inflation slowed for the second month in a row to an annual rate of 4.3 percent in May, the government said Tuesday.

However, effects of the Farm Belt drought have yet to reach the grocery shelves and consumers are banking at paying more for clothing.

Retail prices overall rose just 0.3 percent in May and food prices were up only 0.4 percent, almost half their 0.7 percent increase in April, the Labor Department said.

Last month's increase in the Consumer Price Index, the smallest since a 0.2 percent rise in February, slowed the pace of inflation in May from a 6.3 percent annual rate in April and a 6.4 percent rate in March.

For the first five months of 1988, overall retail prices have risen at an annual rate of 4.4 percent, the same pace as in 1987.

A few lucky farmers may be winners

The Associated Press

DES MOINES, Iowa — If winners emerge from the drought that has sent grain prices skyrocketing, it will be farmers lucky enough to keep crops intact and those with surpluses from prior harvests, a farm economist said Tuesday.

The U.S. Treasury also could benefit if the dry spell continues over the nation's Grain Belt, but "agriculture as a total would be a net loser," Iowa State University economist Robert Wisner said.

"In the meantime, despite grain prices nearly doubling last year's highs, 'people are apprehensive of what might happen,'" said Peter Brent, who coordinates a hot line for troubled farmers for the rural advocacy group Prairiefire. "Everybody's sitting tight, praying it will rain."

In Iowa, which was sweltering through its third straight day of triple-digit temperatures, soybean prices rose to an 11-year high at elevators Tuesday, with one bid reaching $10 a bushel. Corn rose to its highest level since September 1984, with bids over $3 a bushel common.

The high prices reflect fears that drought will curb harvests at a time when 90 percent of the state's topsoil is reported too dry, as is 91 percent of its subsoil. Still, agriculture officials said timely rains could save most of the crop.

Other economists warned that an inflation problem hasn't gone away; it's just hibernating right now.

Higher prices for gasoline and medical costs were behind most of the inflation in May, but they were somewhat offset by a leveling off in prices for clothing.

Women's apparel prices, which had skyrocketed more than 7 percent in March and April, actually fell by 0.4 percent last month.

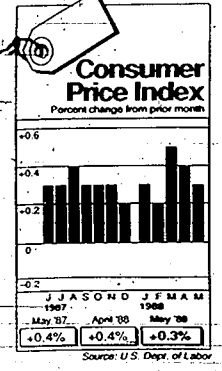

Gasoline prices rose 1.7 percent in May atop a 1.1 percent increase in April but remained only 2.9 percent above what they were a year ago.

Medical costs jumped 0.7 percent in May and are now 6.4 percent higher than they were a year ago, making them the single biggest propellant of inflation over the past 12 months.

The May figures raised the Consumer Price Index to 117.5, meaning that a hypothetical selection of goods costing $100 during a 1982-84 base period would have cost $117.50 last month, a dime more than in April.

In a related report Tuesday, the Labor Department said Americans' average weekly earnings, after adjusting for inflation, fell 0.3 percent in May. The decrease follows an increase of 1.0 percent in April and a drop of 0.6 percent in March.

The changes left American's inflation-adjusted earnings 0.7 percent below a year ago.

Hearing

"The issue is a red herring," Andrus said. Bumpers' questioning closely followed concerns later expressed in testimony delivered by Forest Service Chief F. Dale Robertson.

Robertson told McClure, who took the podium after delivering his testimony, that the Forest Service supports all the bill's proposed additions to wilderness areas in the state except for three areas in the Boise National Forest — Temple/Black Warrior, Snowbank, and Palisades — which did not conform to the Forest Service's draft plan for the forest.

Robertson also said the Forest Service would like to see the bill's proposed wilderness boundaries adjusted to "exclude activities not normally allowed in wilderness areas."

"Our concerns relate to roads, helicopter skiing, and motorized access," Robertson said.

Additionally, Robertson opposed the bill's designation of "special management areas." Such areas would be open to some commercial development, such as logging and mining. The Forest Service opposes the designation of special management areas because it would remove management authority from the Forest Service and vest it with Congress.

The Forest Service draws up management plans every 10 to 15 years for areas under its jurisdiction. McClure's bill would set management plans in legislative language, meaning that Congress, not the Forest Service, would have the final say on management of the areas.

Chief among the areas of concern to the Forest Service is the Bonners Ferry "special management area," one of the most controversial provisions of the bill. The bill would allow an additional 3.5 million board feet of timber to be harvested annually in the area. Conservationists have vehemently opposed the provision.

"We strongly recommend that these specific management requirements be deleted from the bill," Robertson said. "If that is not done, an alternative would be to sunset these management requirements so that they would be effective only for the next 10 to 15 years."

The advantage of Forest Service procedures for drawing up management plans, Robertson said, is that they allow the public to comment on the plan's provisions and that the Forest Service is required to update the plans frequently.

But McClure has said that he is unhappy with the amount of time the Forest Service spends on the public appeals process.

McClure's concerns were echoed by Mark Rey, vice president of the Public Timber Council of the National Forest Products Association, an industry group.

Rey recommended that the subcommittee consider reducing the grounds for filing an appeal to Forest Service management plans, establishing fees for filing an appeal, and narrowing the standard of review used in evaluating an appeal.

Andrus, in an interview after Robertson's testimony, said he was not surprised by the Forest Service's position. "They don't want us telling them how to manage areas like the Panhandle, but they're saying if you do it, then make sure it's subject to review every 10 years or so," Andrus said. "That's understandable."

Bill

But conservationist opponents predict failure of the bill this year. And Pat Ford, former president of the Idaho Conservation League, said regardless of whether wilderness legislation passes this year or next, threatened lawsuits used as leverage to pass this bill will continue from both conservationists and the timber industry for years to come.

Beyond Idaho's nearly 4 million acres of wilderness, the bill declares an additional 1.4 million acres in Idaho as wilderness, with another 650,000 acres as special management areas where uses are restricted.

Nearly 7 million more acres now under wilderness consideration would be released for development under U.S. Forest Service management.

Andrus warned that failure to pass this bill this year would open Idaho wilderness to a federal judge's discretion, instead of being decided by state residents. That is because of varying interpretations of the federal Wilderness Act of 1964.

"I want it settled in Idaho, by the people of our state, rather than in some federal courtroom somewhere," Andrus said.

"If there is not a legislative solution to this issue, there will inevitably be a litany of appeals and legal challenges and the matter will end up being resolved by the courts," McClure told the subcommittee. "That, to us, is a lousy way to manage public lands."

But Ford said the wilderness bill is not an end, but a step in a process. He said lawsuits challenging Forest Service management plans are likely in northern Idaho regardless of whether this bill passes.

"That's where the political crunch will come," Ford said. "It's going to be a lot of Idaho's politics for years to the future."

While he and Rick Johnson, of the Sierra Club, each favor passing a wilderness bill as a blueprint for managing federal lands, both predict this bill will fail this year.

"They came up with something that was dead on arrival," Ford said. He added that congressional discussions in 1989 and beyond will open up the process mostly unopen to public contributions so far.

McClure spokesman H.D. Palmer said the senator pursued this year's path of closed discussions and revelation with Andrus because wilderness efforts in 1983 and 1984 ground to a halt. Palmer said those discussions became mired in non-negotiable demands from various factions involved.

Ford and Johnson expect continuing dispute over the state's roadless areas beyond passage or failure of this bill.

"They (McClure and Andrus) were billing this as a wilderness solution to the polarizing process," Ford said. "I think this bill wouldn't solve that problem. The problem is the development of roadless areas and that's the reason people are jousting over the issue in these areas."

"This is a simple piece of legislation and that will not be the final solution for Idaho's public lands," Johnson said.

Even the authors characterize their compromise as a series of trade-offs. They said they made their determinations without any inclinations toward acreage ceilings or floors.

But their decisions failed to satisfy factions on both sides of the issue. One bone of contention focuses on special management practices. Greater timber harvest in the Panhandle National Forest was exchanged for wilderness status for Long Canyon.

"It was a pure-and-simple trade off," Andrus said. "If you exclude Long Canyon (from timber harvest), you've got to make it up somewhere else."

Under the bill, 40.5 million board feet of timber would be harvested per year, up from 37.5 million. Andrus said the Forest Service voiced concern over that proposal during the subcommittee hearing.

And Ford criticized the increased harvest size, "regardless of environmental or other effects," while predicting such special management practices throughout the bill could kill it in either the House or Senate.

Ford added, "Long Canyon deserved wilderness status on its own merits."

Another lingering dispute features McClure's language for states' rights over water rights within the areas.

Andrus characterized that a "red herring" because the language follows traditional western water law.

"Our language does nothing but keep the water rights the same as they are," Andrus said.

But Johnson said that language could kill the bill at the national level. A House member has held up other public lands bills for for the same language.

"He's being quite inflexible," Johnson said. "Quite honestly it will be the fault of our senior senator if this bill is not passed."

McClure has consistently argued the language is necessary in all public land bills to maintain state authority over water allocation. The water language is also considered a minor point in these wilderness talks because the areas are largely peninsulas above the downstream water rights.

something as big as our government is."

Reagan added, "But I think we also ought to recognize that within our government... it brought the units... which we trust such things" to launch an investigation.

The president said he did not want to leave the impression the problem was minor. "I don't feel that way at all. As a matter of fact, I'm very upset... I'm not taking this lightly at all."

However, he said, it was the Pentagon, itself, "that uncovered and then proceeded to investigate and pin down where there was fault."

Reagan said Caspar Weinberger, his longtime friend and defense secretary for seven years until late in 1987, was "one of the finest" Pentagon chiefs ever even though the alleged corruption happened on his watch.

He said he didn't think the affair would give Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis a boost in his race against Republican George Bush.

tooth decay. This compares to almost half, 49.9 percent, found without decay in the recent survey.

He said in the 1940s, it was estimated that U.S. school children averaged seven teeth each that were decayed, missing or filled.

Now, instead of counting teeth, he said, the survey must count surfaces affected in order to get a meaningful statistic.

Carlos said school children in the Southwest, which includes Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado, showed the least amount of tooth deca with a mean of 2.4 tooth surfaces affected per child. That region showed a mean of 3.4 in 1980.

The New England states — Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island — showed the highest rate, with a mean of 3.6, compared to a mean of 6.1 in 1980.

Other regional findings, with the mean number of tooth surfaces per child affected and the same mean from the 1980 survey in parenthesis, are:

Southeast (Maryland, Virginia, Delaware, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia, Arkansas, Louisiana): 3.1 (4.6).

Pacific (Alaska, Hawaii, Washington, Oregon and California): 3.4 (5.1).

Northwest (North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Nevada and Utah): 2.8 (4.7).

Briefly

Striking teachers set offer

MOUNTAIN HOME (AP) - Mountain Home teachers have offered to reinstate a "no-strike" clause in their contract proposal to break a deadlock in negotiations with the School Board.

The teachers removed the clause last week because of what they perceived as the trustees' unwillingness to consider their demands.

At the heart of the impasse is the teachers' request to take part in setting district policy. The School Board maintains policy-making is its responsibility.

The dispute led to the 12-day teachers' strike which ended May 24. The next negotiating session has not been scheduled.

Woman placed on probation

POCATELLO (AP) - The daughter of an Idaho Falls City Council member has been placed on five-years probation for embezzling more than $18,000 from the credit union her father manages.

Julie Maureen Chandler, 24, was also ordered by U.S. District Judge Marion Callister to serve two weekends in jail, provide 100 hours of community service and repay the embezzled money within four years.

Callister also said he would amend the restitution order to reflect that auditors have raised the amount taken from the scenic Falls Federal Credit Union to over $20,000.

Ms. Chandler, a teller at the credit union, pleaded guilty to the embezzlement charge on Monday. Authorities said the money was taken over the past two years. The shortage was discovered during an internal audit.

Senator downplays probe

POCATELLO (AP) - The federal investigation into possibly widespread bribery, fraud and corruption in the nation's defense procurement is "not that big a deal," Idaho Republican Sen. Steve Symms says.

In a telephone news conference Tuesday with Idaho reporters, Symms did not condone the scandal being uncovered in the Pentagon and the country's largest defense contractors.

But he suggested that the current allegations did not come close to the magnitude of payments and other activity during World War II. He said "today's eyeballs would roll" at the actions 40 years ago when the fighters were developed to counter the Japanese Zeros and the German Messerschmitts.

Although the alleged corruption could involve millions of dollars, Symms discounted prospects for negative political fallout, citing the Reagan administration's efforts to end payments of hundreds of dollars for a hammer or over a thousand dollars for a toilet seat.

Center challenges decision

LEWISTON (AP) - Operators of a Lewiston nursing home will challenge the federal decision to withdraw their Medicare and Medicaid certification for the second time in six months, claiming the action is based on outdated circumstances.

The Department of Health and Human Services has given Orchards Villa Nursing Center until July 20 to prove that "serious deficiencies" in nursing care have been corrected or lose the lucrative federal certification.

"Our position is the findings are erroneous, and we feel confident the facility can prove through the records that isn't the case," said Jan. Njetjen, vice president of operations for the home's owner Beverly Enterprises.

Based on a May 26 inspection, the government found problems with patients receiving proper medication and in-bed treatment and being placed in restraints for unacceptably long periods.

Drought hurts hydropower

BOISE (AP) - The second straight drought year in the Northwest has prompted Idaho's largest electric utility to further reduce its forecast for power generated by its hydro facilities.

Idaho Power Co., serving over 230,000 customers in southern Idaho, northern Nevada and eastern Oregon, said run-off into Brownlee Reservoir, the major reservoir in its system, is barely half the normal flow.

Court ruling may affect Boise Arid Club

BOISE (AP) - Boise's Arid Club may have lost its status as an all-male bastion with Monday's U.S. Supreme Court ruling against the exclusion of women at private clubs.

Earl Reynolds, an Arid Club member for more than 20 years, said how the club will respond is up to its executive committee.

"I'm sure the executive board will want to see what the full ruling said before doing anything," said Reynolds, former chairman of the board at CH2M-Hill.

Reynolds said he had not seen a copy of the decision and declined to comment more specifically.

The 98-year-old club includes the chief executives of the state's largest corporations, the governor, lieutenant governor and other top state officials. Its critics say important business deals occur at luncheons, to the exclusion of women.

"The value in it is the Supreme Court is saying to all of us that, 'in this day and age, we don't segregate ourselves by race or sex for business dealings,'" said Leslie Goddard, a deputy attorney general who serves the Human Rights Commission.

"The court is getting really serious in saying that if you really don't have a private club, you shouldn't be discriminating," she said.

According to the high court's ruling on the New York City case, a club is not "distinctly private" if it has more than 400 members, provides regular meal service and its members dues generally are paid by non-members such as employers.

The latter two provisions would apply to the Arid Club if its private status is contested, Ms. Goddard said.

The club's March 1987 membership list shows 401 members, although Reynolds said the current number of active members is closer to 300.

Sen. Marti Calabretta, D-Osburn, who sponsored an unsuccessful bill in the Legislature to prohibit Idaho members would like to control their own destiny.

Reynolds, who said he supported a failed attempt earlier this year to allow women to lunch at the club, said women would like to control their own destiny.

"I think it's preferable for the club to act on its own free will rather than being forced," he said.

Club hold Idaho in the past," Mrs. Calabretta said Monday. "There are women with business and financial stature who are arbitrarily being discriminated against."

If the Arid Club does not move to change its rules, Mrs. Calabretta said she probably would draft legislation tailored after the New York City ordinance to challenge the club.

Reynolds, who said he supported a failed attempt earlier this year to allow women to lunch at the club, said women would like to control their own destiny.

"I think it's preferable for the club to act on its own free will rather than being forced," he said.

Phone bills to increase

BOISE (AP) - Idaho telephone customers will begin paying a small surcharge on their local and long-distance bills on July 1 under the new Universal Service Fund program ordered by lawmakers and state utility regulators.

The money will be used to offset the high operating costs of several small, mostly rural phone companies so their rates will not rise more than 25 percent above the statewide average.

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission has set the monthly local exchange surcharge at 3 cents for residential and 7 cents for business customers. A half-cent-per-minute surcharge will be added to in-state long distance rates.

The commission said the surcharge will collect an estimated $1.8 million in its first year. That's about twice the estimate of the initial Universal Service Fund equipment, but regulators said they want to play it safe in the fund's first year of operation.

"We will re-examine these surcharge rates on an annual basis and adjusts them as necessary to more closely match the actual funding required that develops," the PUC said.

The commission adopted the Universal Service Fund in February to ensure that reasonably priced telephone service will be available to all telephone customers of Idaho.

Drought will hit nation's consumers

Across America, the fields of waving wheat are being transformed into a seared landscape of stunted grain.

From the burned-out spring wheat and oats in the Dakotas to the stunted corn and soybean growth in Iowa and Illinois, to the dried-up newly planted corn in the Mississippi Delta, the frying sun and the lack of rain has ushered in a drought which has been dubbed the worst since the crop-killing Dust Bowl of the 1930s.

So far, about 10 percent of the anticipated crops nationwide have been damaged. But with much of the Plains and Midwest expected to be hotter and drier through mid-July, it is likely to reach 20 percent before long. Still, the Dust Bowl took one-third of the nation's crops. Irrigation and insightful legislation probably can prevent a replay of that disaster.

Nonetheless, consumers will feel the impact by early next year. Some foods already have been noticeably higher.

But even in the worst-case scenario, consumers would be hit, but not intolerably hard. There is enough government stockpiled corn and wheat to meet the nation's domestic and export needs for a year. Further, since only a small fraction of every dollar spent on food reflects crop prices, the average family of four would pay $5 to $6 more a week for groceries, at most, even if price increases hit the 6 percent "problem range."

The people who will bear most of the drought burden are the farmers, who will suffer a double whammy. As crop prices go up, government payments to farmers go down — a bottom-line loss if farmers produce a smaller crop because of the drought. Further, even one bad season can threaten farmers' ability to service their debts, which can mean bankruptcy and cause ripples throughout the agri-business community.

Capitol Hill already is buzzing with talk of legislation to guarantee farm income payments to all producers, regardless of the size of their crops.

Whatever nature and the politics do, one thing is certain. This year is going to be extremely difficult for farmers — once again.

SOME EPIGRAMS

Ruling settles briefcase brigade battle

WASHINGTON — In a case more interesting for its sociological context than its constitutional content, a few women have won what is sure to be a famous victory in the Supreme Court.

Its fame will grow in the telling about it, until it stands as a milestone on the rising road to the full emancipation of women. Too bad it also marks another contraction of what Louis Brandeis called the right to be left alone.

The case concerning New York's private — not really private any more — clubs will be applauded most warmly by liberal groups who fancy themselves tribunes of the common people. The applauders will include people who consider themselves immune to, and scourges of, the crass, commercial, aggressive, self-aggrandizing spirit of the day, a spirit often denoted by such people as "the climate of Reaganism." But the case is really intramural roughhousing in the ruling class, a battle between two briefcase brigades.

In 1965, New York City enacted a Human Rights Law prohibiting discrimination in any place of "public accommodation, resort or amusement," but exempting any "institution or club" that is "distinctly private." In 1984, the city amended the law with language designed to define a few private clubs as substantially "public" in nature and thus covered by the law. The amenders of the law had some male-only clubs in mind. The City Council declared a "compelling interest" in guaranteeing to all a "fair and equal opportunity to participate" in the city's commercial life. The council said that "women and minorities" are seriously held back by discrimination at clubs "where business deals are often made" and personal contacts valuable for business are formed.

George Will

Now the Supreme Court has unanimously — and correctly — held that nothing in the Constitution prevents New York City from doing what it did. However, it remains for the rest of us to do what the Supreme Court should not do, for reasons of dignity: gulfaw.

Some men desire havens from women. Some men believe that mixing of the sexes inhibits certain kinds of discourse. Such men (and women whose clubs also can now be stormed) may be peculiar or mistaken, but they have founded institutions where they would like to have a right to be "let alone." And today's emancipators seem so lost in abstraction that they are utterly unembarrassed by this:

They have used government power to override a First Amendment value (freedom of association) and have done so in the name of "nondiscrimination." But the women who will benefit by being admitted to clubs are part of a small privileged class, and their desire to get into the clubs presupposes that the clubs will remain safe havens for privileged elites.

Where is Karl Marx when we really need him? It is time for American reformers to learn to talk the language of class. Interesting, is it not, that the right to discriminate on the basis of class is the only right so inalienable that it is unquestioned, even unnoticed.

The improvers who amended New York's law can not see the moral ambiguity of their handiwork. The law cranks up the clanging machinery of civil-rights enforcement on behalf of a few hundred well-tailored women with briefcases they are eager to park next to the briefcases of men from the same class. These people would lose all interest in these clubs if, once inside, they found there men and women who are not, well, you know, the better sort — folks like us, with deals to make. The clubs are enticing precisely because they are selective.

What's that you say? Oh, no, not at all. Being selective is not like being discriminatory. Discrimination is declassé. It is what tacky people do — people like Lester Maddox. Being selective is what the best people do in order to "network" with their own kind.

Charles Paul Freund of The New Republic has it right: "The struggle between women and private clubs smacks of the Iran-Iraq war; neither side is very appealing. Certain rich women want to get richer. Good for them. But what about the rest of us? These women are happy to keep the clubs' class discrimination. In fact, that's sort of their point. Do we really want to trash remaining notions of privacy over this?"

This episode involves the hijacking of the civil-rights tradition. It is the exploitation, by strong and socially adept people, of a legal vocabulary ("fair and equal opportunity, barriers to advancement") written to protect the weak. It illustrates the decline of the moral weight of the label "civil rights."

George Will writes for Newsweek.

Noise shouldn't be alarming

Don't be frightened, folks. That high-pitched, whining sound from north of the river is not the result of a harmonic convergence gone amok, or the shifting of continental plates.

It's just old Jerry Callen coming to grips with being voted out of the legislature.

He can't quite put his finger on the reason why such a forward-thinking, rational person should have been sent back to the farm.

Thus far, his guess for the answer most resembles a game of pin-the-tail-on-the-donkey. He has blindly blamed schoolteachers and insinuated (through his wife and campaign manager) that homosexuals may have been out to get him.

He has scapegoated the media, implying that reporters will tell lies about him just to sell newspapers. He clearly prefers his own brand of journalism. Who publishes that stuff he was passing out that calls the AIDS epidemic a communist plot?

He has also lambasted several of his fellow Republicans. After all, they can't really be good party members if they choke on the dogma of a right wing so far off course that it's in the gutter.

He's come up with a pretty long list of people responsible for his rejection at the polls. A pity that he hasn't been big enough to add his own name to it. Most of us can learn through losing, but Jerry seems to be suffering shortcomings in that dimension. Could it be that the voters saw something that he hasn't recognized in himself?

And finally, he has taken out an ad naming those who have sinned against him, listing their sins, and forgiving them. Isn't there a familiar ring to this? Who do you think you are, Jerry?

Bush better than Dukakis

Sometimes words just aren't enough. This is publishing the news of my article by Lisa Argenti in the Globe on June 5. I am from Massachusetts and Dukakis is one of our poorest governors in the last three decades.

Why do you allow such garbage (inaccurate as it was) to be put in your newspaper? We know how good Bush is at his worst, better than Dukakis!

A story about a daughter

I want to share a story with you about our daughter, Heidi.

Heidi was living in an apartment complex in Boise while she was attending BSU working for the Mann Theater Group and Michener's Realty and Investment Company.

One day last fall Heidi noticed an older man, much like our late Mr. Cory, rummaging in the garbage for aluminum cans. She went out and told him that she had a full garbage sack of cans he could have and that in the future she would leave all of her aluminum cans for him on her back patio.

Two days before Christmas, the man, John, knocked at her door and shyly handed her a small box of candy. On Valentine's Day he left her a small heart box of candy and on Easter he brought her a chocolate Easter egg.

Who can explain to John that our Heidi no longer leaves him the aluminum cans? Who can explain to John that she had a full garbage sack of cans he could have and that in the future she would leave all of her aluminum cans for him on her back patio.

Who can explain to John that this beautiful young lady was killed last week by a drunk driver traveling the wrong way on the highway? Who will explain it to John? We can not.

For all of you who have asked, your donations in memory of Heidi for "Mother's Against Drunk Drivers" may be sent to Ada County MADD, c/o Betty Sladler, P.O. Box 771, Boise, Idaho 83707. Donations may also be sent to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Foundation, c/o Larry Baxter, P.O. Box 409, Twin Falls, Idaho 83301. Thank you for caring and expressing your love for Heidi.

No justice in the system

Criminal Justice System? Title a misnomer, we have a criminal system. The March 3, 1988, Frank & Ernest comic strip told it well when the defendant answered when being sworn in "The truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth? There must be some mistake. I hired a lawyer."

Guess what illustrious criminal lawyer stated "I don't care what they have done, rapist, murderer or child molester, it is my job to get them off." He also stated that all my clients are guilty, maybe not exactly as charged, but they are guilty.

Let's watch the upcoming murder trial of the accused murderer of Mrs. Westergren. CARTER KILLINGER

Public behavior appalling

I am a firm believer in the rights that we as individuals and persons, have to freely aggregate and to express personal thoughts and opinions. I also believe that, as with any right, we have the obligation to do so in such a way that we do not infringe upon the rights of others.

My twelve-year-old daughter and I chose to have lunch at a small one room, family-oriented, Twin Falls restaurant on Saturday. We avoided the lunch rush because we wanted to have time to enjoy our meal and our time together.

We had barely finished our appetizer when a group of weekend golfers arrived and seated themselves at the three tables adjacent to ours. I didn't object to the high noise level of their discussion, groups of people sometimes have to have to "out-shout" others in order to be heard. I did, however, object to the profane, sexist language that, literally reverberated off the walls of the room.

I am not a prude; I have been known to utter occasional "hell" or "damn" — but these folks were gross and vulgar to the point that our meal was ruined.

I have tried to teach my children to respect others; that's how I was raised — these adults certainly showed little respect for my daughter or for the patrons and employees of the restaurant. I doubt that any of the men or women at that table would appreciate, or tolerate, others using such language in the presence of their children. I came very close to making my opinion of their behavior known to them — it was only because my daughter pleaded with me to just ignore them and please don't make a scene that they were spared! (My daughter threatened to climb under the table, from embarrassment, if I confronted them!)

I would like to add that one of the gentlemen (I was wearing a tee-shirt and hat imprinted with the logo of a highly respected, home-owned bank. I assume that he works for that bank; even though he was "on his own time" he was, by virtue of his apparel, a representative of his employer; I doubt that his employer would condone his behavior.

It is not my place to pass judgement on the beliefs, morals or behavior of others, I am far from perfect myself; nevertheless, by exercising their rights to free assembly and free speech, to such an extent, they negated the rights of others.

I appreciate the opportunity to express my opinion.

Pack out the aluminum

The article on backpacking food: Rojoice Hikers. Taste is Portable is good. With all the lightweight food on the market now, backpacking can be comfortable and enjoyable and meals something to savor.

I will emphasize that the aluminum pouches should be used rather than burned. The foil packaging can be folded and tucked away in a litter sack or any used plastic bag. The empty packets are of negligible weight and bulk for carrying home.

It is extremely difficult to pick the bits and pieces of "burned" foil out of campfire ashes. The ashes and charcoal can be scattered about and will work into the soil in a few years. The foil bits will shine for centuries.

I have worked as wilderness ranger and trail crewman in the Sawtooth Wilderness and White Cloud Mountains for years. It seems like half of a back country Ranger's summer is spent sitting "burned" trash out of campfires.

I have regularly hauled "burned" foil out by the gunny sack-ful. If everyone who visits the back country would take a little extra effort to take home everything they bring to the woods, the back country will remain more pristine and enjoyable for everyone visiting there later. Dates would be easier to include in your next article this emphasis on packing all foil and other litter out of the woods.

Remember to put out all fires before leaving camp. Due to the scarcity of wood and abundance of campers at many of the high mountain lakes the use of backpack stoves is recommended. Save the few remaining trees to look at. They take centuries to grow at high elevations. Camp fires are prohibited at some of the lakes in the Sawtooth Wilderness.

Thank you and happy camping.

Why label the Mormons?

Why is it? Everytime a Mormon does something wrong - you really put them down and advertise they are a Mormon.

When a Catholic, Baptist, or any other religious person does anything wrong - you never mention their religion - they do it on TV also and I think it's very wrong. There are good and bad in every religion so why do you have to say he or she is a Mormon? I am getting pretty fed up with it.

Johnson backer speaks up

After having read Charlie Sather's letter in the Times-News a few days ago about Alvin Johnson who is running for date representative, I would like to make a few comments.

I have never met nor do I know Mr. Johnson, but if he is interested in bringing in insurance reform into Idaho, which would bring some much needed relief to the working class and the low income, I would certainly note for, and support this man.

For as anyone can see, tort reform is just not working because insurance rates just keep rising. Regardless of what some segments of our community keeps saying they offer, the end result is still the same, higher rates.

If something is not done to put a check on these rates, soon we will not be able to afford a car to get to work and back. So Mr. Johnson, let's hope the good people of Twin Falls County, have the good sense to put you in office this time. We have got to elect some people who care out the people.

Job programs in 4 states boost welfare reform bills

WASHINGTON (AP) - Job programs in four states boosted the long-term earnings of welfare recipients and saved some states money, bolstering the case for welfare reform bills pending in Congress, according to a study released Tuesday.

The study of programs in Arkansas, Maine, Maryland and Virginia yielded important new results that point to the long-term effectiveness of recent state welfare employment initiatives, according to the Manpower Demonstration Research Corp., which conducts independent research on social policy issues.

"We have known for some time that these programs increase employment and earnings in the short term. We now know that these results continue for at least three years," said Judith Gueron, president of the group.

"As Congress moves forward with welfare reform legislation, this information gives us new confidence about the impact and cost-effectiveness of a key part of this reform," she said in a statement.

MDRC has been conducting large-scale studies of welfare employment programs in eight states for six years. Its findings helped shape the House and Senate welfare overhaul bills now awaiting reconciliation in a conference committee.

The pivotal element of both bills is a large-scale education, training and job program with a special focus on teen-aged mothers and others likely to be on welfare for long periods.

Gueron said the earnings gains found in the MDRC study, though they continued for the full three years, were relatively modest. "The programs themselves do not appear to move a large percentage of the welfare caseload out of poverty," she said.

MDRC researchers evaluated low-to-moderate-cost programs in Arkansas, Virginia and Maryland which required participation by women with children over three or six. Earnings gains in the final year of the study averaged $300 to $500 per person.

MDRC called the averages notable because they were based on all people eligible for the programs; not just the 60 percent or so that actually participated.

Researchers also studied Training Opportunities in the Private Sector, one option in Maine's welfare employment program. It involved voluntary participation by screened participants and offered lengthier, more intensive services than those available in the other states' broader programs.

MDRC said the program was much smaller-scale and had atypical enrollees, and resulted in increased earnings of $962 in the third year of follow-up.

Shuttle overhaul complete

24PE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) - Jubilant space workers completed a 600-day overhaul of the space shuttle Discovery on Tuesday, a giant step toward a late summer launch of the first shuttle flight since Challenger exploded 24 years ago.

Cheers and applause broke out among several hundred workers who lined the 1,000-foot route as a tractor towed the 80-ton shuttle out of a processing facility and moved it to an assembly building.

"This is like a rebirth," said Discovery flow director John "Tip" Tulone. "We're in business again and we're going to stay in business. It's got to be a tremendous boost to the workers here."

At the assembly building over the next few days, Discovery will be joined with its external liquid fuel tank and two 126-foot solid fuel booster rockets.

If there are no hitches, Discovery will be moved to Launch Pad 39B on June 30 to be readied for launch in late August or early September.

NASA's latest launch assessment date is Sept. 3, but officials said it is still possible to achieve a late August liftoff.

"A lot of things have to go right to make the end of August; if not, we'll go a few days after that," said Forrest S. McCartney, director of the Kennedy Space Center, after Tuesday's move.

"This is an outward event that people can look at and say that America is going back into space soon," McCartney said.

Launch Pad 39B is where Challenger started its ill-fated journey on a cold Jan. 28, 1986. Seventy-three seconds after liftoff, the shuttle and its crew of seven were destroyed in a massive explosion.

Investigators blamed the accident on a faulty joint that allowed flames to escape from one of the two boosters.

While the focus has been on re-designing and testing the solid fuel booster, engineers also have been altering Discovery and the other two remaining shuttles, with Discovery now complete.

A total of 210 modifications have been made and tested on Discovery since it was moved into the processing facility on Oct. 30, 1986, exactly 600 days ago.

Tribute to "Marge" Lake

Most of us at the Times-News either weren't born, or were very small boys and girls when Marge came to work 43 years ago.

The changes in those years have been staggering. We used to think letterpress printing with hot type from the linotype was pretty slick. Photoengraving, electros and mats were state-of-the-art for photo reproduction.

Today, high-speed web offset presses, digital laser color separations and computer generated graphics are part of everyday operation.

Marge came through it all with "flying colors". She was the key "read" point in the flow of news. She read local stories and headlines for accuracy, grammar, style, and above all, spelling. Marge had been known to spot a misspelling despite a reference book's insistence. And many an editor learned from experience to trust her judgement first.

We'll miss her here at the Times-News. Not for the cakes and goodies that had a habit of showing up on someone's desk at birthday time. Not for the jar of quarters always found on her desk that we used for the pop and candy machines. We'll miss her because she was Marge; and she cared. She cared enormously for Twin Falls and The Times-News.

The lives she affected, either directly or indirectly were innumerable.

May God bless and keep her 'til we meet again.

What's what

Speak of snoring? Q. Ask your Love and War man to back up the claim that wives are more willing than husbands to talk about their partners' faults. A. One social study turned up this: If the wife snores, the husband usually keeps it a secret. If the husband snores, the wife usually mentions it to her friends.

Dogs get hemophilia. Not all dogs. Some dogs.

It was an Egyptian who threw the first returning boomerang, scholars think.

Q. If I ate my luminous dial watch, would it give me as much radiation as an x-ray? A. As much as 25 x-rays. Don't eat your watch.

Q. Which feminine name has the most variations? A. Elizabeth, probably. If you count nicknames. Start with Liz, Lizzie, Beth, Bessie, Liza, Betsy, Lisabeth, Libby, and keep on counting.

The French verb "pimper," pronounced "pim-pay," means "to entice." It was from this word that a short variation worked its way into street English to identify procurers.

MUSIC

Q. Which is the hardest musical instrument to learn to play? A. Oboe. So say the rankers. Easiest, they say, is the ukulele. The saxophone is harder than guitar, the flute harder than piano.

Almost all gardeners could grow twice as much in half the space, if they fertilized more. So contends a vegetable expert. He believes gardeners are afraid to fertilize enough for fear of burning their plants. He blames poor instructions on labels.

Asimov celebrates 50 years since starting writing career

NEW YORK (AP) — Isaac Asimov celebrated the 50th year of his prolific writing career on Tuesday.

"You can't have a 50th anniversary of your professional life without feeling a little old," said Asimov. "I feel like a survivor."

On June 21, 1938, Asimov walked into the offices of Analog Science Fiction-Science Fact, then called Astounding, and submitted his first story to Editor John W. Campbell Jr.

To date, he has published 351 short stories, with nine more currently in press; 391 books, with 21 more in press; and at least 2,000 short, non-fiction pieces.

And at 68, he has no intention of relaxing: "I'll keep on writing. As long as I breathe, I'll write."

Through the years, Asimov also has counseled other writers.

Composer releases 1988 Olympic theme

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Giorgio Moroder, composer of the music for "Flashdance," unveiled Tuesday the official song of the 1988 Olympics, a pop ballad that says "we can make this world a better world."

Moroder said he sought to compose a song "with that quality that distinguishes the Olympics," that would be easily listening for people of all nationalities and that would have a Korean flavor.

"Hand in Hand" is scheduled for release on an album in mid-July and is to be sung at the Olympic opening ceremonies Sept. 17 by the Korean quartet Korreana.

"Hand in hand, we can start to understand breaking down the walls that come between us for all time. Arrang," says the song, set to a heavy percussion beat.

Rumors plague beauty contest

ATLANTA (AP) — The Miss Georgia beauty pageant has become the focus of squabbling between state and local pageant officials, rumors that the winner already has been picked and complaints that blacks can't win.

The pageant begins Wednesday in Columbus with Atlanta's entry dethroned and its pageant organization shut out, and a representative of the Miss America pageant is on hand to monitor proceedings.

Critics say the Miss Georgia pageant has evolved into a competition dominated by "professional pageant girls" professionally coached and dressed in $2,500 custom-made evening gowns and $120 "superuits" for the swimsuit competition, who travel around the state easily winning titles in pageants without residency requirements.

The Scholarship Atlanta Foundation Inc., which operates the Miss Atlanta pageant, had its franchise lifted by the state group because it took the Miss Atlanta crown away from Faith Ann Brown, 22, of Kennewash.

The Atlanta board said Miss Brown violated her contract by working with an unauthorized talent coach. The first and second runners-up had won other pageants, so the crown went to third runner-up Jennifer Anderson of Dunwoody.

TV evangelist resigns after admitting to affair

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — A television evangelist reportedly associated with the Rev. Jerry Falwell resigned as he tearfully told his congregation of a liaison with a woman who was not his wife.

The lapse lasted for 10 months and occurred seven years ago, the Rev. Marvin Rickard told church members of the Los Gatos Christian Church, Rickard, 57, and his wife, Joyce, both spoke at three services Sunday.

Many churchgoers broke into tears when they heard the news from the spiritual leader, described in a newspaper paper report as "a close ally of the Rev. Jerry Falwell."

Rickard built his congregation from 83 people in 1959 to an estimated current membership of 6,500, with a claimed—television—ministry of 100,000.

Charles Ferrell, chairman of the fundamentalist church's board, said Rickard's resignation will probably take him out of the pulpit but not out of the church. Final decisions on Rickard's future will be made by the board, he said.

Mississippi group chosen to tour Soviet Union in exchange program

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A Mississippi group has beat out 300 competitors — most of them based in New York, Los Angeles and other big cities — to win the contract for a major cultural-exchange exhibit that will tour the Soviet Union.

"This is the first time we have chosen a design group from the South," said Ron Underwood, project director for the U.S. Information Agency, the government office sponsoring the exhibit.

The exhibit, called Design USA, will be produced by Yoknapatawpha Exhibit Group, USA officials announced Monday. The group is a joint venture of two Jackson firms — Communication Arts Co., a graphic design and media production studio, and Mockbee-Coker-Haworth Architects.

The exhibit will showcase U.S. architecture, product design, graphic design and design education. It will tour nine Soviet cities in 18 months, starting in Moscow next June.

In its proposal, the group emphasized its Mississippi background. Yoknapatawpha is the fictional Mississippi county that was the setting for several works by Nobel Prize-winning novelist William Faulkner.

Jeanne B. Luckett, vice president of Communication Arts, noted the group's experience with the Mississippi pavilion at the New Orleans World's Fair. She said the challenge there was to sell the attributes of a state that is often stereotyped and misunderstood.

"We figured that if we could do that for Mississippi, we could do it for the United States to the Soviets," Luckett said.

Underwood said the USIA liked the way the Mississippi group grasped and expressed the exhibit's concept: the role design plays in the everyday life of Americans.

He said the group's design model "was far and away superior to any of the others, and the others were done by some of the most highly thought-of design firms in the country."

Underwood said exhibit designers often "think of the details instead of the big picture. This group grasped the big picture and expressed it very effectively. They're just very creative people."

Design USA is the second traveling USIA exhibit to result from the 1985 cultural exchange agreement between President Reagan and Soviet General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev. The first, which is touring the Soviet Union now, deals with communications.

"This is a wonderful opportunity for the people of America to touch the people of the Soviet Union in a very dynamic way," said Harp Owen, president of Communication Arts.

"In this period of perestroika, or 'rebuilding,' the Soviets are open to new ways of designing and manufacturing. They are realizing that their lifestyles, products and built environments can be enhanced through better design."

"We are not going to put on a traffic show of products and services," Owen said. "We are seeking to explain how our society expresses itself through design and how, therefore, our quality of life is improved."

Jagger's defense requests 2nd hearing delay

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Attorneys will argue today whether the preliminary hearing for Jesse Ray Jagger, charged with first-degree murder, will be delayed again.

Private attorney Greg Fuller, who represents Jagger, filed a written motion Tuesday asking for more preparation time.

He wants the preliminary hearing delayed until at least Sept. 8.

"Certainly, if a case involves the potential of the death penalty, more is required than a rudimentary understanding of the facts," Fuller wrote in his affidavit.

He also wants a psychologist to examine Jagger at state expense.

Today's hearing will be at 1:30 p.m. Jagger is charged with first-degree murder, second-degree burglary and two counts of grand theft.

A judge delayed Jagger's preliminary hearing once before.

On May 27, 5th District Magistrate Judge Melvin C. Edwards granted a delay, when Twin Falls Public Defender Michael J. Wood represented Jagger.

Twin Falls and Las Vegas police arrested Jagger May 23 in Las Vegas. Idaho law normally requires a preliminary hearing within two weeks of arrest.

Wood was appointed to represent Jagger, but Fuller took over the case last week.

Wood, like Fuller, said he needed more time to prepare for the preliminary hearing, especially since the evidence in the case was so complex.

Fuller also says he wants Jagger questioned by a psychologist to determine if Jagger is competent to assist in his defense. He also wants the state to pay for the psychologist.

Courts already decided Jagger is innocent when the public defender's office was appointed early in the case. Because of that, Jagger is entitled to state-paid psychological examination, Fuller said.

Normally, no defense is presented at a preliminary hearing, but a defense attorney can cross-examine witnesses.

At a preliminary hearing, a magistrate judge decides if there is probable cause a crime has been committed and if the defendant committed that crime. If the case passes muster, the judge orders the defendant to stand trial in district court.

Jagger is charged with the murder of Virginia Westögrön, 79. Westögrön was stabbed to death May 13, while her husband, Al, was visiting relatives in Portland.

Look abroad, export center head advises businesses

By MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The only long-term solution to the United States economy is the same one that small businesses in Idaho should consider — penetrating the global market.

That was the advice of Bob Sebastian, president of the Export Assistance Center of Washington. He told a small group of businessmen here Tuesday that the world economy is not becoming global, it is global already. The way to make their own businesses and the U.S. economy strong is by learning to compete on that level rather than hiding behind protectionist trade barriers.

It is the decades-old protectionist attitude that still prevails today that has left American industry in the economic dust, he said.

The Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce and the College of Southern Idaho sponsored Sebastian's visit. He has a combined career in international finance, trade promotion and computer systems development. Sebastian's state-funded office in Seattle helps Washington businesses learn the ropes of exporting, including finding markets, getting financing and avoiding common pitfalls. His budget is $5.25 million per biennium.

While Idaho is not large enough to afford the kind of support offered by Washington. "There is a great deal of help out there," he said.

The Idaho Department of Commerce and CSI both have direct assistance programs, modeled in part on the successful one Sebastian started.

Idaho is just now coming out of the wilderness in terms of exporting, said Chamber Director Buzz Langdon.

But even if a local business owner has only a vague idea about what and how to export, Rod Grudzieski, who directs the Idaho Small Business Development Center at CSI, can get him started with a computer-assisted program that will reveal information gaps.

There is a misconception that you have to know the language of a country to do business," Sebastian said. "You don't. In the ancient world, Greek was the language of trade. Today, it is English."

Sebastian believes all trade barriers should be eliminated. The future of business is national interdependence.

City OKs $87,500 land purchase

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city council has approved the purchase of 25 acres of property adjoining the municipal golf course for long-term development.

The council Monday unanimously voted for the acquisition that will cost the city $87,500.

City Engineer Gary Young said the land could potentially be developed into a third nine at the Municipal Golf Course

City Engineer Gary Young said the land, which was sold by Howard Briggs in an estate sale, could potentially be developed into a third nine at the Municipal Golf Course.

The property is located east of the northernmost section of the golf course towards Rock Creek. It is bounded by Rock Creek Canyon to the north, Victory Avenue to the south, the golf course to the west and private property to the east.

Young said the city will pay $30,000 out of the capital improvement fund for the property this year and the remainder in October from the next fiscal year's budget.

"It's not what you call a great bargain," Young said. "It's difficult to get great land."

He said the city has been negotiating for the property for the past few months. The city does not have current plans for expansion of the golf course, Young said.

He said the golf course has been used more and more every year since it was opened. "We're getting a lot of play at the golf course," he said.

He said the city wants to avoid the possibility of long waiting lines. When the golf course is busy all day long it gets difficult to maintain the greens, Young said.

He also said that the city owns land north of the new property and that there has been interest among some of the golfers to expand onto the canyon floor to make it more challenging. Young said golfers would play over the 40 foot drop to the canyon floor and come back on their way to another hole.

"That would be exciting for experienced golfers," he said, but added that it would be a nightmare for the novice.

Tupperware closing is put off yet again

By MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writer

JEROME — Production at the Tupperware plant here will not shut down Friday as previously scheduled, plant manager John Forbes announced on Tuesday.

The plant will continue production at its current level, operating 15 molding machines, for at least several more months.

The plant was scheduled to halt production permanently this Friday, and the remaining machines and materials were to be shipped to Tupperware's other two manufacturing facilities in Tennessee and South Carolina.

But Forbes received a call from the president saying that current sales of the famous tight-fitting containers, dishes, and toys have been better than forecast, and the immediate production capability of the plant here is still needed.

"We will still have some layoffs this week," he said. And the plant still will close eventually.

In the meantime, most of the 205 employees still working will receive a reprieve from unemployment.

"Everybody's still in shock," said Rose Hutchison, a quality-control inspector. "We all feel like we were hit with a bowling ball and all the pins fell down."

No one suspected the continuation before it was announced by Forbes on Tuesday, she said.

O'Neill drops fight; fast transfer expected

The Associated Press

GRETNNA, La. — Darren Dee O'Neill, at one time one of the FBI's 10 most wanted, dropped his fight against extradition to Washington state on Tuesday.

Randell Hafner, lawyer for O'Neill, said he expected Washington officials to quickly transfer O'Neill later this week.

He faces first-degree murder charges in the 1987 death of Robin Smith of Des Moines, Wash., a suburb between Tacoma and Seattle.

O'Neill is a suspect in the killing of 23-year-old Erin Elizabeth Szubert, of Twin Falls, a year ago. He is also being investigated in connection with the death of a third young woman, 29-year-old Wendy Aughe, of Bellingham, Wash., who disappeared in 1987.

Hafner said he was dropping the extradition fight after he lost a round in the state 5th Circuit Court of Appeals earlier in the day.

On Monday, District Judge James I. Cannella ordered O'Neill extradited to Tacoma, and Hafner turned to the appeals court for a delay.

Within hours of appealing to the 5th Circuit, however, the appeal panel issued a brief order in which it said there was no reason to delay the transfer.

Foes hope judge's rejection kills proposed UP&L merger

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Opponents hope a judge's decision will prove to be the fatal blow to the proposed merger between Utah Power & Light Co. and PacifiCorp.

FERC administrative law judge George P. Lewnes last week ruled that both utilities failed to substantiate the merger's savings, and questioned whether the promise of lower rates was realistic. Lewnes also found the merger anti-competitive by locking out competitors from a strategic interstate transmission system.

"I really think this is the end," said Don Allen, a Washington, D.C.-based attorney representing the Colorado River Energy Distributors Association.

The association is a consortium of 117 public power systems, including many in Utah, that buy cheap power from government dams along the Colorado River.

UP&L acknowledges last week's initial rejection was a major setback to its merger plans. But the company says it will continue to seek the merger.

"At this point we aren't considering options without the merger. Right now we are trying to get it (the merger) approved," UP&L spokesman John Ward said.

Analysts agree that UP&L's and PacifiCorp's quest to merge is far from finished, and some observers say it isn't a matter of if the merger gets approved, but when.

"That prediction is based on the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission's overruling an initial decision issued last week blasting the merger proposal as an attempt to set policy based on the "strength of ill-proportioned benefits and sterile conjectures."

UP&L and Oregon-based PacifiCorp announced their intent to merge in August 1987, promising the move would result in multi-million dollar savings for the companies and lower power rates by at least 5 percent for UP&L customers. The merged utility would serve more than one million customers in seven states, as well as secure control over a vast, interstate transmission system, requiring regulatory approvals from seven states and the FERC.

But as state deliberations rolled around to meet the merger's 12-month deadline, FERC approval hit a major snag.

Lewnes' 250-page opinion offered 91 reasons not to approve it.

— cross-manufacturing, cross-ownership and cross-financing between companies of different countries.

Tony Mabbott, coordinator of the Idaho Foreign Policy program at CSI, agreed.

"It's no longer going to be what's good for General Motors is good for the country," he said. "It's going to be what's good for Japan is good for the United States."

Meanwhile, the United States went from being a creditor nation to a debtor nation overnight in large part because of its failure to deal with the realities of the global market, Sebastian said.

During World War II, England went into debt to save its society. Americans, today, have hooked themselves simply by Japanese electronics, he said.

"It's become accepted wisdom that you can't compete in Japan," he said. "Not true. You can." Japan has its own set of problems to deal with. It's companies have moved into the high-tech markets which they try to dominate, but most of their consumer products are junk, he said.

The Japanese workforce is growing older. Since salaries there are pretty much tied to age, the cost of producing Japanese products is going to rise as more workers earn higher and higher wages.

If American companies would stretch out their schedules to plan for the long-term instead of worrying primarily about next quarter's profit figures, the nation's trade and budget deficits wouldn't be such a problem, he said.

"Lee Iacocca is put up as one of the great business innovators," he said. "Give me a break. He's doing what everybody else is doing — short-term, short-term, short-term."

Eden allots paving budget

The Times-News

EDEN — Eden City Council voted last week to spend this year's road paving budget on the two blocks of Main Street south of Highway 30.

Ray Warren, representative of Gordon Paving, briefed the council on street repair techniques and costs. The city had considered paving parts of Center and Pacific streets but budget limits held it to the $5,000 Main Street project.

Council members also voted to accept a proposal of $3,404 for the city's insurance package for the 1988-89 fiscal year. Dave Wheat and Lauri Woolworth of Obenchain-Wheat insurance presented a policy which offered more coverage for about the same dollar expenditure the city used last year.

In routine business, the council granted building permits to Henry Perry for mobile home installation and to John Ellis for a utility shed.

Castelford to get speed signs

The Times-News

CASTLEFORD — In an effort to cut down on speeding vehicles entering and leaving the city, the Castleford City Council decided at its meeting last week to place signs throughout the town limiting the speed limit to 20 mph.

"Signs will also be posted on roads into the town by way of Harold's service station and the potato cellars.

"And the speed limit will be strictly enforced," Mayor Robert Sample said.

The speed limit in front of the school will remain at 15 mph.

The council, responding to a request by the Castleford Saddle Shepherds 4-H Club, granted permission to place four litter barrels on Main Street as part of the club's community service project.

The council also discussed whether the community center furnishings, such as tables and chairs, should be loaned out. It was decided that furnishings would not be loaned outside of the community center building.

In other business:

City Clerk Patsy Kinyon reported that the Idaho Personnel Commission is sending weekly announcements to the city about jobs available statewide. Any one interested can see the job listings and get applications at J & D Printing in Castleford.

Mayor Sample reported that weed spraying on the city streets is almost completed.

Koop honors PTA group for its AIDS education program

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The U.S. Surgeon General has honored a Gainesville, Fla., high school parent-teacher group for staging the most effective AIDS education program and he reiterated Tuesday that educators must remind young people to practice sexual abstinence to stem the deadly disease's epidemic.

C. Everett Koop presented the award at the 92nd Annual National PTA Convention in the Gainesville High School Parent-Teacher Association building Tuesday. Koop said that AIDS has claimed 65,000 victims in the United States since its discovery in 1981, killing more than half and doubling the rest.

"You must take seriously any disease that explodes upon a nation and the world with such severity," he said. Most victims are male homosexuals or intravenous drug abusers who share needles, but a small percentage are heterosexuals or children of infected mothers.

The parent-teacher group, working with local health professionals and school personnel, conducted a pre-test to learn what students knew about the "disease," arranged in-service training for the school staff and coordinated a program for the students.

"I am deeply saddened that we have a disease that is so deadly," Koop said. "I've always said you cannot exceed community standards" when designing an AIDS curriculum, Koop said. "Otherwise, it will never fly."

Koop said his own latest educational effort, an eight-page pamphlet mailed to 107 million Americans, apparently had received a favorable reception, with exception of a "very, very few far-right-wing" protesters.

"Judging from the number of people who've accented me in airports, every one in the world has read it twice," he said.

Educators found that students significantly improved their knowledge about how to protect themselves against AIDS and there was a small improvement in their attitudes toward AIDS patients.

Running mate search begins

By The Associated Press

Michael Dukakis emerged from a meeting with Jesse Jackson on Tuesday and said "the process has now begun" by which he will choose a Democratic running mate. Sources said he had requested background information on Jackson and at least one other possibility, Sen. Bob Graham of Florida.

Vice President George Bush, meanwhile, reassured congressional Republicans worried about his presidential bid.

And President Reagan remained unfazed about Bush's chances for victory in November. Asked about the prospect that Dukakis might succeed him, Reagan said, "Over my life body."

Dukakis and Jackson met privately for about 40 minutes, but neither would say whether Jackson requested a spot on the ticket.

"We talked about it more than we have talked about it (before) person," Jackson said of the vice presidential question.

He reiterated his contention that he should at least be sized up as a potential running mate, saying: "This constituency we have organized in our party has earned consideration."

Dukakis refused to give any hint of what they discussed, and said no decisions had been made yet on a running mate.

"The process has now begun. But it's open. There's no short list, or medium list or long list," Dukakis said.

It was the first Dukakis-Jackson session since the two met privately for 90 minutes on the eve of the final June 7 primaries, when Dukakis locked up enough delegates to assure his Democratic presidential nomination.

Sources said Dukakis has requested background information on both Jackson and Graham and that the Dukakis campaign has begun public polling to determine who would best help the Democratic ticket.

Some in Congress, however, are advising the Dukakis campaign to steer clear of Jackson, sources reported. They said Paul Brontaus, who is guiding the search for a running mate, received advice in Congress last week to look elsewhere.

Bush met over lunch with Senate Republicans, who said later they told the vice president of their concern about polls showing him behind Dukakis. They offered their help in his behalf, like a bunch of trout ready to jump out of the water," said Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo.

Bush acknowledged he trails but said he was unconcerned. "I read the polls. They don't bother me," Bush said.

Although Jackson has mounted a public campaign to pressure the vice presidential choice in his favor, Dukakis' aides say it is unlikely Jackson will wind up in the No. 2 spot on the ticket.

Brontaus met with Democratic leaders in Congress last week. Sources, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, said he was advised privately that the ticket should be balanced with a moderate or conservative candidate attractive in the South or West.

Dukakis spoke to the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees in Los Angeles, where he called for policies to control health costs and provide long-term care for an estimated 8 million people who need it.

"I'm running for president because I want to make sure that quality, affordable health care is available."

PACs spend record on elections

WASHINGTON (AP) — Special interest political action committees are spending record sums on the 1988 elections, led by the Teamsters union PAC which has given out close to $1 million and has $4.5 million in the bank, the Federal Election Commission said Tuesday.

Some 4,000 PACs are registered with the FEC for participation in the federal election process. In the 16 months ending March 31, they raised more than $2.1 billion, up 7 percent over the same period in 1986, and spent $162 million, up 8.4 percent over spending in the last election cycle, the FEC reported.

The Teamster-affiliate PAC, called Democratic Republican Independent Voter Education Committee, raised the most during the period — $5.5 million. It was followed by the American Medical Association PAC at just under $4 million and the Realtors Political Action Committee at $3.7 million.

Labor unions and corporations are prohibited by law from giving money to federal campaigns, so many set up PACs to which their employees and others can give money voluntarily. Politicians and interest groups also form PACs to promote their own interests.

Others in the top 12 that raised the most money are: —The National Congressional Club, founded by supporters of Republican Sen. Jesse Helms in North Carolina, $2.7 million;

—Auto Dealers and Drivers For Free Trade PAC, a Jamaica, N.Y.-based committee funded significantly with money from imported and domestic car dealers, $2.7 million; —Campaign America, founded by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., $2.6 million; —American Citizens for Political Action, a committee founded by former Young Americans For Freedom chairman Robert Dolan which has given to a variety of conservative candidates, $2.4 million.

—League of Conservation Voters, an environmentally oriented group, $2.4 million.

—National Education Association Political Action Committee, $2.3 million.

—Association of Trial Lawyers Political Action Committee, $2.2 million.

—United Auto Workers Voluntary Community Action Program, $2.1 million.

—National Conservative Political Action Committee, once the leading conservative PAC, $1.8 million.

The Teamsters PAC had the most money in the bank at the end of March, $4.5 million, followed by the International Longshoremen's Association AFL-CIO PAC, $2.7 million, and the NEA PAC, at $2.3 million.

Overall, the list of the biggest PACs has changed in the last two years as those associated with would-be presidential candidates have dropped off with the changing focuses of their leaders.

For instance, the Fund For America's Future, founded by Vice President George Bush, effectively shut down its activity when Bush formally became a presidential candidate last fall and his fund-raising efforts shifted to his White House campaign.

The Bush-founded PAC had raised $9.4 million for the 1986 election cycle, but as of the end of March had raised just $1.7 million for the 1988 elections.

Of similar PACs set up by several presidential hopefuls, only the one headed by Dole, who dropped out of the Republican race, is in this year's list of top 10 PACs. Dole's Campaign American reported raising $2.6 million.

The presidential hopefuls set up their PACs with the stated intent of helping chief like-minded members of their party to office, but much of the money went into vendor costs and payroll.

In spending, Dole's PAC tops all others so far in the 1988 cycle, reporting $3.1 million in expenditures, but with only $69,350 of that going in contributions to federal candidates.

The Teamster PAC, DRIVE, was second in spending, at $3 million, with $992,614 of that in donations to federal candidates. That made DRIVE the top PAC contributor to candidates.

NOW to urge Dukakis to choose Jackson

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The National Organization for Women plans to urge likely Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis to select rival Jesse Jackson or a "non-white" woman as his running mate, the group's president said Tuesday.

Molly Yard said it would take the selection of Jackson, who is very sensitive to women's issues, or "a woman from Jackson's constituency" to smooth relations between the women's movement and the Democratic Party.

"The whole stance of the party since 1984 has been to blame us for the defeat of Mondale and Ferraro," she said.

NOW, the nation's largest women's rights organization, has been a major influence in Democratic politics and was a factor in the selection of Geraldine Ferraro as Walter Mondale's running mate in the 1984 presidential race. The ticket later was defeated by the largest margin in the history of U.S. presidential races.

Ms. Yard said the group plans to introduce a resolution calling on Dukakis to heed their advice on the vice presidential choice. The NOW president did not provide a date for the resolution, but the group is holding its national conference in Buffalo this week.

"Dukakis is currently considering potential running mates. Jackson, runner-up to the Massachusetts governor in the delegate race, has said he has earned the right to be offered the No. 2 spot, but Dukakis has not made any commitment."

Yard also charged that Democratic leaders have tried to keep NOW out of the 1988 election.

"They say they don't want the party captive to special interests," she said. "I don't know how they can call the nation's largest group of voters a special interest."

There are 10 million more women registered to vote than men, she said.

The NOW president also said the Democratic Party could lose the women's vote and the 1988 presidential election if it doesn't pay more attention to women's issues.

Yard warned that millions of women would vote Republican if the GOP is perceived as caring more than the Democrats about women.

"Even though their platform is a disaster, they'll get votes because they're seriously considering a woman as a vice presidential candidate," Yard said of the Republicans.

"Everything depends on who you showcase at the convention," she said.

S&Ls' flow of red ink from early '88 may be abating

WASHINGTON — The nation's savings and loan industry continued to bleed huge amounts of red ink in the first three months of this year as the deterioration of the worst S&Ls overwhelmed a modest improvement in other institutions, the government said Tuesday.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board said the 3,118 federally insured S&Ls lost $3.78 billion, only slightly below the $3.81 billion record set in the last three months of 1987.

Bank board economist James Barth said the losses continued to pile up despite some hopeful signs.

Earnings at thrifts considered solvent under regulatory rules totaled $600 million, compared with a $200 million loss in the fourth quarter of 1987.

Also, the percentage of solvent institutions increased from 65 percent to 69 percent. And, the number of solvent S&Ls under generally accepted accounting rules fell for the first time in two years from 518 to 504.

"Unfortunately, we do have a bifurcated industry," Barth said. "The insolvents got worse, although solvents did indeed realize gains."

In the January-March period, 2,164 insolvencies earned $1.3 billion, but 954 lost $6.1 billion. The 20 worst S&Ls accounted for $3 billion of the losses and the worst 50 accounted for $3.7 billion.

Texas, where 139 of 279 S&Ls are considered insolvent, racked up losses of $3.48 billion. Institutions in Texas, along with the other oil-drilling states of Louisiana and Oklahoma, have been particularly hard-pressed by the plunge in oil and regional real estate prices.

Last year, the thrift industry had its worst year since the Great Depression, losing $7.6 billion. That figure, released Tuesday, is an upward revision from previous estimates of $6.8 billion.

Martin A. Regalia, chief economist of the National Council of Savings Institutions, said 1988 losses will likely top $8 billion and set another record.

However, he said, "there are a lot of things in these numbers to suggest that while the problem is terrible, it is not getting worse. It is bottoming out somewhat. I don't mean to put a favorable light on a $3.8 billion loss, but there are some glimmers out there."

By comparison, the nation's 13,541 commercial banks earned $3.6 billion in 1987, the smallest profit since the Depression, and $6.0 billion in the first quarter of 1988.

While banks' performance is improving, S&Ls have not gotten better, yet, despite regulators' efforts to shut down or bail out sick S&Ls. Twelve were closed or merged with healthier institutions from January through March.

The bank board said earlier this month that the industry's capital, which closely mirrors losses, declined about another $550 million in April.

However, Barth said preliminary data from April indicates the industry could turn a profit in the second quarter.

Yeutter applauds trade deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new agreement with Japan on beef and oranges will be a positive element in general trade negotiations, particularly with the European Economic Community, U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter said Tuesday.

"It should provide some additional psychological support for us in dealing with the Europeans," Yeutter said. "In other words, now that we've been able to strike a deal with the Japanese on beef and citrus, it puts some additional pressure on the Europeans to be somewhat more accommodating than they have in the past."

With the Japanese starting to come into line, it could put EEC leaders in the position of looking "like the villains of the agricultural world" if they continue holding out, he said.

Yeutter, who earlier this week returned from Tokyo where the new agreement was reached after marathon negotiations, told a telephone conference with broadcast and newspaper reporters that Japan agreed to open the door to more American beef and citrus in the face of further U.S. challenges under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, or GATT.

The agreement could lead to a doubling of U.S. exports of beef and oranges by 1991 to more than $1 billion a year. In return, the United States agreed to withdraw its GATT complaint against Japan restrictive import quotas.

Yeutter said the complaint and previous success under GATT rules last year helped prod Japan into accepting an expansion of beef and citrus.

"In other words, the jig was up," he said. "They'd gotten away with a continuation of these programs for a lot of years. What we, the United States, should have done was challenge those things about 16 years ago instead of now, but better late than never."

U.S. to keep links to Haiti government

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States will maintain relations with the military government of Haiti and work as best it can toward democracy through traditional diplomacy, not sanctions, State Department officials said Tuesday.

"There is no break in the diplomatic relations; we're not contemplating it," department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said.

The United States also will continue supplying $36 million in aid to non-government organizations in Haiti, the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere, Mrs. Oakley said.

On Monday, a few hours after Haitian military leader Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy ousted President Leslie Manigat, the State Department denounced the takeover and called it a step backward on the road to democracy.

Asked Tuesday if the United States contemplated any steps to reinforce its criticism of Namphy's coup, Mrs. Oakley said the State Department is monitoring the situation but plans to deal with the new regime.

"I think there are examples of many governments around the world of whom we don't particularly approve, with whom we have relations and have dealings," she said.

History repeats itself with anti-Americanism in South Korea

Analysis

SEOUL, South Korea — The report from a senior U.S. official in Seoul to his superiors in Washington was alarming. The United States, he said, was being "blamed for the partition of Korea," and the war of a "growing resentment against all Americans." The label "pro-American" was quickly becoming an epithet.

The report was written by general John Hodge, commander of the U.S. military occupation of Korea, shortly after he arrived in Seoul in 1945 to take charge of the southern half of the former Japanese colony. Before Hodge's years were realized, however, the 1950-53 Korean War broke out, and the virulent anti-American sentiment disappeared with the U.S. effort to defend the South. In fact until recently, South Korea was one of the few places in the world where cries of "Yankee go home" were not heard.

But now, anti-Americanism is again on the rise, and at the root of much of the sentiment is, again, the issue of who was responsible for dividing the peninsula after World War II. Students and some historians here are blaming the United States anew for the partition of one of the world's most homogeneous peoples, and the view that America was responsible is feeding into a host of other complaints about the U.S. role here.

Over the past month, South Korean students have staged violent protests that have linked the themes of reunification and anti-Americanism. In addition to blaming the partition on Washington, the students have charged that the United States has acted to prevent reunification and the flourishing of democracy. Specifically, they have demanded the pullout of the 43,000 U.S. troops in the South, which Washington says are here to guard against an invasion from the North.

To be sure, the student protesters have thus far failed to win widespread support for their anti-Americanism and their reunification tactics. They attracted only 10,000 demonstrators, far less than predicted, to a scheduled march to the border for reunification talks with North Korean students which was blocked by police earlier this month. The generally conservative population appreciates many U.S. efforts here, views the calls for immediate reunification as unwelcome and far-fetched, and looks with suspicion at those who blame only the United States for the division and ex-empire Moscow or Pyongyang, one of the world's most repressive governments, from scrutiny.

Yet there is a visceral yearning for reunification here, despite the political realities, as well as for sincere official efforts to relax North-South tensions, and the subject of just who was responsible for the peninsula's division has become a large part of the debate. Although the historical revisionism now under way is still a minority movement among scholars, it is gaining popularity among even moderate students and it appears to be gaining strength as democratic reforms have led to the lifting of limits on research into the sensitive aspects of the partition.

"This is the beginning of viewing that period in a new perspective," said Choi Jang Jip, a revisionist-oriented professor of political science at Korea University.

The revisionism raises fundamental questions about the U.S. role in Korea, particularly about the three years of military occupation following Japan's surrender. In essence, the revisionism contends that Hodge quashed a broad-based leftist movement in the South, imposing a right-wing anticommunist government that cemented the partition and served as a bulwark against Soviet expansion. This contradicts the orthodox view, which holds that the people in southern Korea freely chose to establish a right-wing government.

Israeli civilian shoots Arab youth

JERUSALEM (AP) — Three Arab youths were shot in the occupied territories on Tuesday, one of them by an Israeli civilian firing to chase away young stone-throwers.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir urged Israelis to harden their stand against the Palestinian uprising.

Shamir made the appeal in an emotional eulogy to a young Israeli farmer whose slaying, blamed off Palestinians, has aroused calls for harsh action against the 6½-month "intifada," or uprising.

"We will not abandon the land because murderers want it," Shamir said in Givat Ada, a communal farm in northern Israel where the Cohen was buried.

In Nabulus, the West Bank's largest city, a 10-year-old boy was shot by an Israeli civilian who opened fire to disperse a stone-throwing mob, said officials at the city's Al Itihad Hospital.

The civilian was injured when his car was stoned, but other details were not available, said an army spokesman.

In the nearby village of Burka, soldiers opened fire against youths who set up roadblocks, then the stones at troops, the spokesman said. He added that one youth was wounded.

The 10-year-old was shot in the right leg and the victim in Burka was a 16-year-old with a bullet wound in the left shoulder, hospital officials said. Neither was seriously hurt.

In the Shati refugee camp in the occupied Gaza Strip, soldiers opened fire to disperse demonstrators, wounding a 25-year-old Arab in the chest, said doctors at Gaza City's Ahi Arafat Hospital. The army said it had no report of the incident.

Israel radio said thousands of Israelis gathered for the funeral of Cohen, the farmer whose stabbed and battered body was found Monday amid his grape vines in Moshav Shekef, a communal farm near the West Bank.

Shamir, whose remarks were carried by the radio and the Israeli Itim news agency, called on the mourners to build a "fortified, strengthened Israel."

"If the killers, their dispatchers, their commanders mean to tell us it is either us or them, then our answer is clear: This is our land of Israel," Shamir said.

"If it's our fate to fight for our lives, we will be here and not them," he said. "We will harden our will not to surrender."

Several mourners shouted, "Death to the terrorists." Cohen's coffin was draped in an Israeli flag. He was buried in Givat Ada, a farming village in northern Israel where he once lived. Moshav Shekef where he died is 25 miles south of Jerusalem.

Cohen, 33, was the fourth Israeli killed since the Arab uprising began last December. At least 210 Palestinians have been killed.

Soviet soldiers under attack leave Afghanistan city for secured airport

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Soviet soldiers under attack by Moslem guerrillas have evacuated Kandahar, Afghanistan's second-largest city, for the safety of its heavily fortified airport. Western diplomats said Tuesday.

Insurgents have had Kandahar under siege for a month and say they have formed an arc around the city, cutting roads on the north, south and east.

Those claims were supported by the reports from diplomats, who said Afghan troops were driven to the city limits and the Red Army, which is leaving Afghanistan under an agreement signed April 14, moved its men to the airport.

The diplomats, speaking on condition of anonymity, said travel on the road to Herat in western Afghanistan was sporadic and many vehicles came under guerrilla fire.

Food prices in Kandahar have increased tenfold because of the siege, they said. The city is about 300 miles south of Kabul, the capital.

Earlier reports have said pressure from U.S.-supported insurgents had forced the Soviets to delay withdrawal from Kandahar. An occasional battered military truck has been seen heading west from the city, but there are no reports of significant Soviet troop movement.

According to the diplomats, Soviet commanders are limiting use of their helicopters to avoid losing them to guerrillas armed.

Delegation from Israel visits Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — A five-member Israeli consular delegation will visit Moscow in July in the first diplomatic visit from the Jewish state in 21 years, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said Tuesday.

Gennady Gerasimov said at a briefing that the delegation consists of the diplomats, plus a spouse, and that their visas will permit them to stay in the Soviet Union for two months. They will visit during the last two weeks in July.

In Jerusalem, officials said the delegation will administer an empty embassy building for which Israel has been paying monthly rent for 21 years.

Israeli diplomats are hopeful the consular visit to the Soviet Union could lead to renewed diplomatic relations.

The Soviet Union broke ties with Israel in 1967 at the time of the Israeli-Arab war.

Bomb explodes near crowded Hindu market

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — A bomb blamed on Sikh extremists exploded in a crowded Hindu city market near the Golden Temple on Tuesday evening, killing 24 people, a police official said.

The latest bombing was the fourth attack attributed to Sikh separatists since Sunday. At least 52 people, most of them Hindus, have died in the attacks and more than 130 have been wounded.

Crowds of Hindus angered by continuing Sikh militant violence in Punjab state threw stones at police as they tried to cordon off the area struck by the bomb. Doctors said they had problems operating because of agitated crowds that filled the hospitals, where about three dozen of the injured were taken.

The blast ignited a fire that burned two shops in the market and 10 motor-

15 die in riots in Pakistan

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Three days of violent street clashes between ethnic Indians and native Pakistanis in the southern city of Hyderabad has left 15 people dead, officials said Tuesday.

The riots began Saturday after the Pakistanis opened fire on the Moslem Indians, whose families had emigrated to this country after its partition from India in 1947.

Officials on Monday lifted a curfew in Hyderabad, 84 miles north of Karachi, for one hour, and five people were stabbed or shot to death and 15 wounded.

Army troops sealed off the city with barbed wire.

Lakers become first NBA repeaters in 19 years

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers lived up to their coach's promise and guaranteed their place among basketball's greatest teams.

The Lakers, the NBA's first repeat champions in 19 years, took a 15-point lead midway through the fourth quarter Tuesday night, then held on for a 108-105 victory over the Detroit Pistons in Game 7 of the championship series.

James Worthy, the series' Most Valuable Player, scored 36 points, 16 rebounds and 10 assists. Just as Coach Pat Riley guaranteed they would a year ago, when the Lakers beat the Celtics, Los Angeles repeated as champions — the first time any team has done so since Boston in 1983.

Asked if he'd guarantee a third title, Riley was about to answer when Kareem Abdul-Jabbar stuffed a towel in the coach's mouth. Finally, Riley said, "I'll guarantee that we'll enjoy this all summer. It took 116 games to get this job done. They worked for it. They won. They deserve the credit."

"I can't believe we did it," Magic Johnson said. "We worked so hard against Utah, against Dallas and now against Detroit. We kept coming back, back, back ... This was the hardest championship we've ever won."

"I want another one," Johnson said. The Lakers made history, but it wasn't easy. They became the first team to win three seven-game series in one year, beating Utah and Dallas 4-3 in the Western Conference playoffs.

Pistons Coach Chuck Daly said the Lakers "came out in the third quarter and seized the game with some ferocious defense. They scored on the break, threw a 37-point quarter at us."

"At that point, I said, 'Lights out and it could get worse.' But we went to our speed team and we got back into it."

"It was a gallant, courageous effort by our guys." But it wasn't enough. "Give credit to the Lakers, they did what they said they would do," Daly said.

The Lakers, who trailed 52-47 at halftime, hit their first 10 shots of the third quarter on the way to a 15-point lead, then held off a furious rally by the Pistons in the final 12 minutes.

Led by Worthy, the victory gave the Lakers their fifth title in this decade. And they won despite just four points and three rebounds from Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the NBA's all-time leading scorer.

Byron Scott scored 12 of his 21 points during the Lakers' 23-7 rally in the third period, which spanned the first 6:25 of the second half and gave Los Angeles a 70-59 lead. Scott capped the spurt with a 3-point goal. "We worked so hard to get to this moment," he said. "We weren't thinking about history, we were just worried about just winning this game tonight."

The Lakers led 94-79 with 7:24 left before the Pistons rallied. "Vinnie Johnson had three baskets and John Salley five points as Detroit used a 17-4 spurt to close within 98-99 with 2:50 left."

The Pistons got within two on two other occasions before Magic Johnson hit a free throw with 1:16 to go to make it 103-100. Bill Laimbeer then missed a 3-point attempt and was unable to save the rebound. The ball went out of bounds with 1:05 to go.

After a missed shot by Los Angeles, Dennis Rodman missed a jumper with 39 seconds left.

With a sellout Forum crowd of 17,505 screaming "Repeat, repeat," during every timeout, Scott hit two free throws to make it 105-100. The Lakers missed, three of their next four attempts at the line, however, and the Pistons then trailed by only 106-105 when Laimbeer hit a 3-pointer with six seconds remaining. But A.C. Green clinched it with a layup with two seconds on the clock.

When the game ended, delirious fans swarmed over the court.

Magic Johnson added 19 points for Los Angeles. Joe Dumars had 25 points for the Pistons, LaSalle 17 and Adrian Dantley 16.

Isiah Thomas, despite a badly sprained ankle that had him on crutches just an hour before the game, played 19 minutes and scored 10 points in the first half, including consecutive jumpers in the final 27 seconds of the second quarter. Those shots gave Detroit the half-time lead.

But Thomas failed to score in the second half and saw only spot duty in the final minutes.

The franchise now has won 11 titles, the last six in Los Angeles and the first five in Minneapolis from 1949-54.

But it was the first time since moving to California in 1960 that the Lakers won a title with a victory in a seventh game. They lost five championship series that went the seven-game limit, four against the Celtics and once to New York.

The Pistons, making their first appearance in the championship series since moving to Detroit 31 years ago, became the first team since Seattle in 1978 to lose in the finals after taking a 3-2 lead.

Canyon coaches shift jobs

The Canyon Conference basketball race will have a decidedly new look about it during the 1988-89 season due to the resignations of three head coaches in the past several days.

Louis Andersen, who took over the Gooding Senators as basically a winter job that wouldn't interfere with his ranch-managing operation, has given up the Senator helm after four successful years in which Gooding won one state title.

Andersen, who had great success coaching at Camas County High School before sitting out of the education business for a few years, said he would be devoting fulltime to his management duties.

Gooding faces a special problem on this vacancy in that Andersen did not hold a teaching position at the school. He simply came in after school hours and on weekends to fulfill his coaching obligations.

Gooding therefore currently does not have a teaching vacancy to offer a prospective basketball coach and very few individuals with Andersen's qualifications are available. State law requires the coach must have a teaching certificate.

Larry Gwartzney, who guided Wendell the past three years, gave up his post to accept the head basketball position at Salmon High School.

Wendell Athletic Director Jack Lancaster said the Trojan administration was "looking at all the options right now and not prepared to make any statement concerning their method of selecting a replacement."

Alex Flores, who has served as jayvee football and basketball coach the past three years, is drawing support from the community and is considered the leading candidate if Wendell decides to hire from within.

Kimberly also is seeking a new basketball coach as it was announced last week that Richard Thompson was giving up coaching to become an administrator and will begin a new career as principal of Gooding Junior High School.

Opening in Filer

Idaho high school champs open bid for spots in nationals

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

FILER — One complete go-round of each timed event highlights tonight's opening performance of the 1988 Idaho High School Rodeo Finals at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds.

Also included in action, set for 8 p.m. each night through Saturday's championship round, are the roughstock events. Those will be divided equally over the four performances with top hands scheduled to be up for titles on the final night.

Qualifiers from each of the state's six districts will be competing in 11 events with winners and runners-up, along with one alternate in all events, advancing to the National High School Rodeo Finals in Pueblo, Colorado July 25-30.

A number of local cowboys and cowgirls representing Districts Five and Six — covering Magic Valley schools from north and south of the Snake River, respectively — are expected to fare well over the next four days.

If homecomings are sweet it could be a real heyday for Filer's Zane Davis.

The Wildcat junior not only claimed his second straight sixth district all-around cowboy title earlier this month at Rupert, but won individual firsts in calf roping, bareback and saddle bronc riding, added the bull riding crown and teamed with Castleford's Travis Lammers for team roping laurels.

Shoshone sophomore Tobey Clancy took bareback as well as placing second behind older brother Rob in the bulls in District Five.

That pair, along with Dally Curtis of Gooding (calf roping), Wendell poke Randy Branch, who captured the northside saddle bronc title, and all-around cowboy Justin James from Jerome should provide an ample test for Davis in roughstock.

Nor will competition be lacking on the girls' side where Buhl's Nevada Freeman pits her experience and against the likes of 14-year-old Tammy O'Malley out of Shoshone. Each garnered all-around cowgirl titles.

Other event winners coming to steer wrestling, Leo Brackett and Lori Satterfield, both from Filer, in boys and girls, cow cutting, Twin Falls' Rochell Wright in pole bending; Jodie Bean of Minico and Filer's Amy Lewis in goat tying. All carry the Dist. 6 banner.

Bringing their titles from the Dist. 5 event, at Jerome are Carey natives Denise Peterson, breakout roping, Jodi Farnworth, barrel racing and Casey Brunson in steer wrestling. Jake Correll and Lisa Aslett of Jerome in cow cutting and team ropers Jake Telford, Dietrich, and Tyler Gumb, Glennis Ferry, complete the list of northside winners.

Furbearers, upland bird hearing set

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Department of Fish and Game will hold a public hearing at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Holiday Inn to hear input on proposed upland game and furbearer seasons for the next two years.

The department will recommend most seasons be similar to last year. Some changes proposed for upland game are setting shooting hours from one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset, extending the sage grouse and sharp-tailed grouse season by an additional weekend, opening the forest grouse season on Sept. 1 and opening the pheasant season on Oct. 22, the weekend following following the Wednesday deer opening.

The department will propose a controlled bear season in the upper Big Wood and a few other areas where beaver provide valuable erosion control and aren't creating problems.

McEnroe receives triumphant greeting in Wimbledon return

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — John McEnroe, who spent his heyday playing the villain, was greeted like a conquering hero Tuesday when he returned to Wimbledon for the first time since 1985.

The three-time champion received enthusiastic ovations before and after his opening-round victory over Horst Skoff of Austria. Each time, he acknowledged the cheers with a wave of his left hand.

"It's a whole new ballgame now," McEnroe said following his 6-1, 7-5, 6-1 victory. "It's almost like starting over."

In the early 1980s, when he was the No. 1 player in the world, McEnroe's tantrums earned him nicknames like "MacBrat" and "Mac the Mouth" from the Fleet Street tabloids. During his recent comeback, he was vowed to keep his temper under control.

He kept that promise against Skoff, who captured a clay-court title in Greece over the weekend.

McEnroe, the No. 8 seed, kept quiet throughout the match and only once showed anger, swatting the net with his racket after netting an easy volley to give Skoff a break point in the second set.

"For a couple of years, my mind wasn't on the game," said McEnroe, making his first appearance at Wimbledon since his 1985 quarterfinal loss to Kevin Curren. "Mentally and physically, I didn't want it badly enough. But now, I think I'm on the right road again."

McEnroe's day of triumphant return was a day of departure for Curren, who was eliminated by Ricardo Acuna of Chile 7-6, 6-7, 7-5, 6-4.

The second day of the tournament also featured easy first-round victories by the top women's seeds, Steffi Graf and eight-time champion Martina Navratilova. Both wins were noteworthy — Graf's because she posted her second straight Grand Slam shutout and Navratilova's because it was her 42nd straight match victory at Wimbledon, a post-war record.

Fourth-seeded Chris Evert, No. 5 Gabriela Sabatini, No. 6 Helena Sukova, No. 9 Hana Mandlikova and No. 16 Mary Joe Fernandez also won, but No. 3 Pam Shriver struggled before downing South African Dinky Van Rensburg in three sets.

The women's seeds were reduced by one, however, when No. 11 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany withdrew because of a knee injury.

No. 14 Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union was eliminated by Udo Roglewski of West Germany 7-5, 6-4, 6-4, but all other men's seeds won. Among those advancing to the second round were No. 2 Mats Wilander, No. 5 Jimmy Connors, No. 9 Miloslav Mecir, No. 12 Jonas Svensson and No. 16 Slodan Zivjajnovic.

Evert and Connors, the oldest players in the men's and women's draws, looked strong as they started their 17th consecutive Wimbledon championships. Evert, 39, beat Alexia Dechaume of France 6-1, 6-2 while Connors, 35, dounced American Leif Shiras 6-3, 7-6, 6-1.

Peter Doohan, who upset two-time champion Boris Becker in the second round last year, was beaten by American Yan Fuch 7-5, 7-6, 6-3.

Skoff won three straight games to take a 5-4 lead in the second set, but McEnroe broke back in the 11th game on a backhand pass and held serve to close out the set. He then easily won the final set, breaking Skoff three times.

"I knew he had just come from a clay-court tournament and only had 20 minutes to practice, so it would have been embarrassing to lose," McEnroe said.

While McEnroe was subdued, Skoff occasionally cowered around, making unusual service motions, prancing on his toes and bowing to the crowd. The fans were amused, but McEnroe was not.

"Once I won the second set, he started doing these funny serves and it was like a joke," he said. "It's aggravating to deal with, but it's a lost cause if you've just won in three straight sets."

Navratilova, seeking a record ninth women's singles title and seventh in a row, needed only 49 minutes to beat Sabrina Goleis of Yugoslavia 6-1, 6-2 on Centre Court.

Next door on Court 1, Graf took three fewer minutes to defeat American Hu Na 6-0, 6-0. In her last Grand Slam match, the 19-year-old West German blanked Natalia Zvereva of the Soviet Union in the French Open final.

Navratilova seemed distracted at times against Goleis, but she said she wasn't looking ahead to Graf or any other opponent.

"I can only play one match at a time," she said. "I can't think about the quarterfinals or the semifinals until they happen."

With the victory, Navratilova surpassed Bjorn Borg for the second-longest match winning streak in the tournament's history.

Tigers' six-run ninth beats Yanks 7-6

DETROIT (AP) — Alan Trammell's grand slam with two outs in the ninth inning capped a six-run Detroit rally and lifted the Tigers to a 7-6 victory over the New York Yankees Tuesday night.

Pinch-hitter Dave Bergman led off with a single against Neil Allen and Darrell Evans walked to bring on Dede Righetti. After Matt Nokes singled to load the bases, Righetti got Pat Sheridan on a fly to center and Tom Brookens on a called third strike. But Righetti walked Lou Whitaker and Luis Salazar to force in Bergman and Evans and after throwing a ball to Trammell, he was replaced by Cecil Gant, 4-4.

Trammell worked Guante to a full count before hitting his 10th homer of the season and fourth career grand slam off the facing of the second deck in left field. Trammell had missed Monday's game with a sore elbow.

It was the second successive game in which the Tigers had defeated the Yankees with a homer in their last at-bat and moved Detroit 1 1/2 games ahead of the Yankees in the American League East.

Royals 6, White Sox 2

CLEVELAND (AP) — Mike Greenwell extended his hitting streak to 13 games with a homer and three singles and Jim Rice drove in four runs with three hits Tuesday night as the Boston Red Sox beat the Cleveland Indians 10-6 for their fourth straight victory.

The Red Sox' 10 runs on 16 hits gave them 39 runs and 69 hits over their past three games. Greenwell has 10 hits, including four homers and 12 RBI in the last three games.

Sellers suffered a broken bone in the middle finger of his right hand when he was hit by a Joe Carter line drive. Sellers, winless in six decisions, allowed four runs on five hits before leaving.

The loss was Cleveland's ninth in the last 12 games.

Athletics 4, Brewers 2

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dave Parker hit his third homer in as many games and Curt Young won for the first time in three weeks as the Oakland Athletics defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 4-2 Tuesday night.

With the score tied 2-2, Jose

Greg Minton, 2-1, got the win despite allowing a game tying single by Don Gladden in the seventh. He struck out two in 2-13 innings.

Stu Cliburn gave up a leadoff single to Steve Lombardozzi in the bottom of the 10th and Gladden sacrificed him to second. But Bryan Harer struck out John Moses and got Kirby Puckett to fly out for his sixth save.

Tuesday night for the Mariners' eighth straight loss.

The Mariners have lost 14 games in a row on the road, a club record.

Kilgus, 7-5, walked one and struck out four in pitching his third complete game.

Larry Parrish's fielder's choice in the second scored Pete Incaviglia, who had doubled and advanced to third on a groundout.

Parrish hit a sacrifice fly in the fourth and the Rangers scored twice in the fifth against Steve Trout, 3-3, on Kunkel's RBI triple and Bob Brown's run-scoring single, his third straight hit.

Orioles 4, Blue Jays 2

TORONTO (AP) — Cal Ripken hit an RBI double in the sixth inning and tripled home two runs in the eighth and Oswald Peraza earned his first major-league victory as the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 4-2 Tuesday night.

Through seven innings, the Blue Jays led 2-1 and Toronto starter Mike Flanagan had a three-hitter and appeared headed for his 150th career victory.

Rich Schu led off the eighth with a single and was forced by Rene Gonzales. Gonzales was forced by Pete Stanicek but Billy Ripken singled and Cal Ripken greeted Jose Nunez with a triple to right center.

Mets 9, Pirates 0

NEW YORK (AP) — Kevin McReynolds hit a grand slam and drove in five runs and Ron Darling pitched a seven-hitter Tuesday night, leading the New York Mets over the Pittsburgh Pirates 9-0.

McReynolds' third hit single-game high for runs batted in. He hit his second career grand slam in the sixth inning and had an RBI single during a five-run eighth.

Darling, 8-4, pitched his third shutout this season. He walked none and struck out three in his fourth complete game, and also hit an RBI triple.

Perez returns with shutout of Cards

MONTREAL (AP) — Pascual Perez didn't even have to see to believe it.

"I had such good control I could have thrown strikes with my eyes closed," said Perez, who turned in a brilliant pitching effort in his return from the disabled list Tuesday night as the Montreal Expos beat the St. Louis Cardinals 7-0.

Perez, making his first start since breaking his right index finger May 7, gave up five hits in eight innings. He walked none, struck out six and improved to 4-2.

"The big thing for me was staying in the shape through this," said Perez, who lowered his earned run average to 1.62. "I knew I could throw, but I did a lot of running to keep myself strong."

While Perez did the pitching, Andres Galarraga did the big hitting. Galarraga hit his 17th home run, tying for the National League lead, and also had an RBI triple and a single.

"They usually throw me for balls, but tonight I saw a lot of breaking pitches so I just tried to go with them," said Galarraga, who hit .409 against St. Louis last season and has four hits in eight at-bats this year against the Cardinals.

Two errors by Gold Glove shortstop Ozzie Smith helped Montreal scored three runs in the first inning.

He rarely makes two errors in an inning," Cardinals manager Whitey Herzog said. "But that wasn't our problem, too much Perez was."

Astros 3, Reds 1

HOUSTON (AP) — Buddy Bell, traded by Cincinnati to Houston three days ago, hit an RBI double during a three-run seventh inning and the Astros tied a team record with seven stolen bases Tuesday night in beating the Reds 3-1.

Cincinnati's Jack Armstrong, making his major league debut, pitched one-hit ball for six innings and took a 1-0 lead into the seventh. But Alan Ashby walked, pinch runner Louis Mize stole home and Bell hit a ground-rule double that tied the game.

After a single by Craig Reynolds and a walk, Gerald Young hit a sacrifice fly. Reynolds then stole home as part of a double steal.

Reliever Larry Andersen, 2-3, got the victory and Dave Smith earned his 14th save. Armstrong took the loss.

Houston starter Mike Scott left the game in the first inning after facing only four batters. He suffered a hamstring pull in his last start and Astros officials said Scott left the game because he didn't feel ready for game conditions and suffered no additional damage. It was Scott's shortest start in six seasons with the Astros and the second shortest of his major league career.

Phils 6, Cubs 1

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — David Palmer pitched seven strong innings and also hit an RBI double Tuesday night as the Philadelphia Phillies beat Chicago 6-1 and ended the Cubs' five-game losing streak.

Palmer, 3-6, gave up one run on six hits and stopped the Phillies' three game losing streak. Steve Bedrosian pitched the final two innings.

Shawn Dunston and Rafael Palmeiro hit doubles in the first inning to put Chicago ahead, but the Phillies scored twice in their half.

San Manuel opened with a single, took third on Von Hayes' double and scored on a wild pitch by Jeff Pico, 2-2.

Mike Schmidt then singled, homepuns Hayes for his 1,558th career RBI, moving him past Joe DiMaggio into 24th place on the all-time list.

The Phillies added two runs in the fourth on doubles by Milt Thompson, Palmer and Samuel. Chris James and Steve Jeltz hit RBI doubles in the fifth against Frank DiPino.

Lakers become first NBA repeaters in 19 years

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers lived up to their coach's promise and guaranteed their place among basketball's greatest teams.

The Lakers, the NBA's first repeat champions in 19 years, took a 15-point lead midway through the fourth quarter Tuesday night, then held on for a 108-105 victory over the Detroit Pistons in Game 7 of the championship series.

James Worthy, the series' Most Valuable Player, scored 36 points, 16 rebounds and 10 assists. Just as Coach Pat Riley guaranteed they would a year ago, when the Lakers beat the Celtics, Los Angeles repeated as champions — the first time any team has done so since Boston in 1969.

Asked if he'd guarantee a third title, Riley was about to answer when Kareem Abdul-Jabbar stuffed a towel in the coach's mouth. Finally, Riley said, "I'll guarantee that we'll enjoy this all summer. It took 115 games to get this job done. They worked for it. They won. They deserve the credit."

"I can't believe we did it," Magic Johnson said. "We worked so hard against Utah, against Dallas and now against Detroit. We kept coming back, back, back. ... This was the hardest championship we've ever won."

"I want another one," Johnson said. "The Lakers made history, but it wasn't easy. They became the first team to win three seven-game series in one year, beating Utah and Dallas 4-3 in the Western Conference playoffs."

Pistons Coach Chuck Daly said the Lakers "came out in the third quarter and seized the game with some ferocious defense. They scored on the break; threw a 37-point quarter at us."

"At that point, I said, 'Lights out and it could get worse.' But we went to our speed team and we got back into it."

"It was a gallant, courageous effort by our guys." But it wasn't enough.

"Give credit to the Lakers, they did what they said they would do, they did repeat," Daly said.

The Lakers, who trailed 52-47 at halftime, hit their first 10 shots of the third quarter on the way to a 15-point lead, then held off a furious rally by the Pistons in the final 12 minutes.

Led by Worthy, the victory gave the Lakers their fifth title in this decade. And they won despite just four points and three rebounds from Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the NBA's all-time leading scorer.

Byron Scott scored 12 of his 21 points during the Lakers' 23-7 rally in the third period, which spanned the first 6:25 of the second half and gave Los Angeles a 70-59 lead. Scott capped the spurt with a 3-point goal.

"We worked so hard to get to this moment," he said. "We weren't thinking about history, we were just worried about just winning this game tonight."

The Lakers led 94-79 with 7:24 left before the Pistons rallied.

Vinnie Johnson had three baskets and John Salley five points as Detroit used a 17-4 spurt to close within 98-96 with 2:50 left.

The Pistons got within two on two occasions before Magic Johnson hit a free throw with 1:16 to go to make it 103-100. Bill Laimbeer then missed a 3-point attempt and was unable to save the rebound. The ball went out of bounds with 1:05 to go.

After a missed shot by Los Angeles, Dennis Rodman missed a jumper with 39 seconds left.

With a sellout Forum crowd of 17,505 screaming, "Repeat, repeat," during every timeout, Scott hit two free throws to make it 105-100. The Lakers missed three of their next four attempts at the line, however, and the Pistons then trailed by only 106-105 when Laimbeer hit a 3-pointer with six seconds remaining.

But A.C. Green clinched it with a layup with two seconds on the clock.

When the game ended, delirious fans swarmed over the court.

Magic Johnson added 19 points for Los Angeles. Joe Dumars hit 25 points for the Pistons, Salley 17 and Adrian Dantley 16.

Isiah Thomas, despite a badly sprained ankle that had him on crutches just an hour before the game, played 19 minutes and scored 10 points in the first half, including consecutive jumpers in the final 27 seconds of the second quarter. Those shots gave Detroit the half-time lead.

But Thomas failed to score in the second half and saw only spot duty in the final minutes.

The franchise now has won 11 titles, the last six in Los Angeles and the first five in Minneapolis from 1949-54.

But it was the first time since moving to California in 1960 that the Lakers won a title with a victory in a seventh game. They lost five championship series that went the seven-game limit, four against the Celtics and once to New York.

The Pistons, making their first appearance in the championship series since moving to Detroit 31 years ago, became the first team since Seattle in 1978 to lose in the finals after taking a 3-2 lead.

Canyon coaches shift jobs

The Canyon Conference basketball race will have a decidedly new look about it during the 1988-89 season due to the resignations of three head coaches in the past several days.

Louis Andersen, who took over the Gooding Senators as basically a winter job that wouldn't interfere with his ranch-managing operation, has given up the Senator helm after four successful years in which Gooding won one state title.

Andersen, who had great success coaching at Camas County High School before sitting out of the education business for a few years, said he would be devoting fulltime to his management duties.

Gooding faces a special problem on this vacancy in that Andersen did not hold a teaching position at the school. He simply came in after school hours and on weekends to fulfill his coaching obligations.

Gooding therefore currently does not have a teaching vacancy to offer a prospective basketball coach and very few individuals with Andersen's qualifications are available. State law requires the coach must have a teaching certificate.

Larry Gwartney, who guided Wendell the past three years, gave up his post to accept the head basketball position at Salmon High School.

Wendell Athletic Director Jack Lancaster said the Trojan administration was "looking at all the options right now and not prepared to make any statement concerning their method of selecting a replacement."

Alex Flores, who has survived as jayvee football and basketball coach the past three years, is drawing support from the community and is considered the leading candidate if Wendell decides to hire from within.

Kimberly also is seeking a new basketball coach — it was announced last week that Richard Thompson was giving up coaching to become an administrator and will begin that new career as principle of Gooding Junior High School.

Opening in Filer

Idaho high school champs open bid for spots in nationals

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

FILER — One complete go-round of each timed event highlights tonight's opening performance of the 1988 Idaho High School Rodeo Finals at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds.

Also included in action, set for 8 p.m. each night through Saturday's championship round, are the roughest events. Those will be divided equally over the four performances with top hands scheduled to be up for titles on the final night.

Qualifiers from each of the state's six districts will be competing in 11 events with winners and runners-up, along with one alternate in all events, advancing to the National High School Rodeo Finals in Pueblo, Colorado July 25-30.

A number of local cowboys and cowgirls representing Districts Five and Six — covering Magic Valley schools from north and south of the Snake River, respectively — are expected to fare well over the next four days.

If homecomings are sweet it could be a real heyday for Filer's Zane Davis.

The Wildcat junior not only claimed his second straight sixth district all-around cowboy title, earlier this month at Rupert, but won individual firsts in calf roping, bareback and saddle bronc riding, added the bull riding crown and teamed with Castleford's Travis Lammers for team roping laurels.

Shoshone sophomore Toby Cannell took bareback as well as placing second behind older brother Rob in the bulls in District Five.

That pair, along with Dally Curtis of Gooding (calf roping), Wendell poked Randy Branch, who captured the northside saddle bronc title; and all-around cowboy Justin James from Jerome should provide an ample test for Davis in rougstock.

Nor will competition be lacking on the girls' side where Buh's Nevada Freeman pits her experience against Tammy O'Malley out of Shoshone. Each garnered all-around cowgirl titles.

Other event winners coming to Filer include Mike Munnies, Declo, in steer wrestling; Ira Brackett and Lori Satterfield, both from Filer, in boys and girls cow cutting; Twin Falls' Rochell Wright in pole bending; Rita Bean of Minico and Filer's Amy Lewis in goat tying. All carry the Dist. 6 banner.

Bringing their titles from the Dist. 5 event at Jerome are Carey natives Denise Peterson, breakaway roping, Jodi Farnworth, barrel racing and Casey Brunson in steer wrestling. Jake Gorrell and Lisa Aslett of Jerome in cow cutting and team roping; Jake Telford, District, and Tyler Gumb, Glenns Ferry, complete the list of northside winners.

Furbearers, upland bird hearing set

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Department of Fish and Game will hold a public hearing at 2 p.m. Thursday at the Holiday Inn to hear input on proposed upland-grouse and furbearer seasons for the next two years.

The department will recommend most seasons be similar to last year. Some changes proposed for upland game are setting shooting hours from one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset, extending the sage grouse and sharp-shinned grouse season by an additional weekend, opening the forest grouse season on Sept. 1 and opening the pheasant season on Oct. 22, the weekend following following the Wednesday deer opening.

The department will propose a controlled bear season in the upper Big Wood and a few other areas where beaver provide valuable erosion control and aren't creating problems.

McEnroe receives triumphant greeting in Wimbledon return

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — John McEnroe, who spent his heyday playing the villain, was greeted like a conquering hero Tuesday when he returned to Wimbledon for the first time since 1985.

The three-time champion received enthusiastic ovations before and after his opening round victory over Horst Skoff of Austria. Each time, he acknowledged the cheers with a wave of his left hand.

"It's a whole new ballgame now," McEnroe said following his 6-1, 7-5, 6-1 victory. "It's almost like starting over."

In the early 1980s, when he was the No. 1 player in the world, McEnroe's tantrums earned him nicknames like "MacBrain" and "Mac the Mouth" from the Fleet Street tabloids. During his recent comeback, he was vowed to keep his temper under control.

He kept that promise against Skoff, who captured a clay-court title in Greece over the weekend.

McEnroe, the No. 8 seed, kept quiet throughout the match and only once showed anger, swatting the net with his racket after netting an easy volley to give Skoff a break point in the second set.

"For a couple of years, my mind wasn't on the game," said McEnroe, making his first appearance at Wimbledon since his 1985 quarterfinal loss to Kevin Curren. "Mentally and physically, I didn't want it badly enough. But now, I think I'm on the right road again."

McEnroe's day of triumphant return was a day of departures for Curren, who was eliminated by Ricardo Acuna of Chile 7-6, 6-7, 7-6, 6-4.

The second day of the tournament also featured easy first-round victories by the top women's seeds, Steffi Graf and eight-time champion Martina Navratilova. Both wins were noteworthy — Graf's because she posted her second straight Grand Slam shutout and Navratilova's because it was her 42nd straight match victory at Wimbledon, a post-war record.

Fourth-seeded Chris Evert, No. 5 Gabriela Sabatini, No. 6 Helena Sukova, No. 9 Hana Mandlikova and No. 16 Mary Joe Fernandez also won, but No. 3 Pam Shriver struggled before downing South African Dinky Van Rensburg in three sets.

The women's seeds were reduced by one, however, when No. 11 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany withdrew because of a knee injury.

No. 14 Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union was eliminated by Udo Ro-

JOHN MCENROE Accepts plaudits

glewsk of West Germany 7-6, 6-4, 6-4, but all other men's seeds won. Among those advancing to the second round were No. 2 Mats Wilander, No. 5 Jimmy Connors, No. 9 Mikhail Yelgin, No. 12 Jonas Svensson and No. 16 Slobodan Zivjovic.

Evert and Connors, the eldest players in the men's and women's draws, looked strong as they started their 17th consecutive Wimbledon championships. Evert, 33, beat Alexia Dechaume of France 6-1, 6-2 while Connors, 35, downed American Leif Shiras 6-3, 7-6, 6-1.

Peter Doolan, who upset two-time champion Boris Becker in the second round last year, was beaten by American Ken Flach 7-5, 7-6, 6-3.

Skoff won three straight games to take a 5-4 lead in the second set, but McEnroe broke back and held serve to close out the set. He then easily won the final set, breaking Skoff three times.

"I knew he had just come from a clay court tournament and only had 20 minutes to practice, so it would have been embarrassing to lose," McEnroe said.

While McEnroe was subdued, Skoff occasionally clowned around, making unusual service motions, prancing on his toes and bowing to the crowd. The fans were amused, but McEnroe was not.

"Once I won the second set, he started doing these funny serves and it was like a joke," he said. "It's great to deal with, but it's a lot easier when you've just won in three straight sets."

Navratilova, seeking a record ninth women's singles title and seventh in a row, needed only 49 minutes to beat Sabrina Goleac of Yugoslavia 6-1, 6-2 on Centre Court.

Next-door on Court 1, Graf took three fewer minutes to defeat American Hu Na 6-0, 6-0 in her last Grand Slam match, the 19-year-old West German blanked Natalia Zvereva of the Soviet Union in the French Open final.

Navratilova seemed distracted at times against Goleac, but she said she wasn't looking ahead to Graf or any other opponent.

"I can only play one match at a time," she said. "I can't think about the quarterfinals or the semifinals until they happen."

Tigers' six-run ninth beats Yanks 7-6

DETROIT (AP) — Alan Trammell's grand slam with two outs in the ninth inning capped a six-run Detroit rally and lifted the Tigers to a 7-6 victory over the New York Yankees Tuesday night.

Pinch-hitter Dave Bergman led off with a single against Neil Allen and Darrell Evans walked to bring on Dave Righetti. After Matt Nokes singled to lead the bases, Righetti got Pat Sheridan on a fly to center and Tom Brookens on a called third strike — and Jim Leibold drove in Bergman and Evans and after throwing a ball to Trammell, he was replaced by Ceciliano Guante, 4-4.

Trammell worked Guante to a full count before hitting his 10th homer of the season and fourth career grand slam off the facing of the second deck in left field. Trammell had missed Monday's game with a sore elbow.

It was the second successive game in which the Tigers had defeated the Yankees with a homer in their last at-bat and moved Detroit 1 1/2 games ahead of the Yankees in the American League East.

Royals 6, White Sox 2

CHICAGO (AP) — Frank White drove three runs with a homer and a double and Mark Gubicza won his fifth straight decision as the Kansas City Royals defeated the Chicago White Sox 6-2 to snap a four-game losing streak.

Gubicza, 10-5, became the American League's fifth pitcher to win three consecutive games.

"I had such good control I could have thrown strikes with my eyes closed," said Perez, who turned in his brilliant pitching effort in his return from the disabled list Tuesday night as the Montreal Expos beat the St. Louis Cardinals 7-0.

Perez, making his first start since breaking his right index finger May 7, gave up five hits in eight innings. He walked none, struck out six and improved to 4-3.

"The big thing for me was staying in shape through this," said Perez, who lowered his earned run average to 1.62. "I knew I could throw, but I did a lot of running to keep myself strong."

While Perez did the pitching, Andres Galarraga did the big hitting. Galarraga hit his 17th home run, tying for the National League lead, and also had an RBI triple and a single.

"They usually throw me fast balls, but tonight I saw a lot of breaking pitches so I just tried to go with them," said Galarraga, who hit .409 against St. Louis last season and has four hits in eight at-bats this year against the Cardinals.

Barry Reuss, 6-3, had his four-game winning streak snapped.

Red Sox 10, Indians 6

CLEVELAND (AP) — Mike Greenwell extended his hitting streak to 13 games with a homer and three singles and Jim Rice drove in four runs with three hits Tuesday night as the Boston Red Sox beat the Cleveland Indians 10-6 for their fourth straight victory.

The Red Sox 10 runs on 15 hits gave them 39 runs and 59 hits over their past three games. Greenwell has 10 hits, including four homers and 12 RBIs in the last three games.

Sellers suffered a broken bone in the middle finger of his right hand when he was hit by a Joe Carter line drive. Sellers, winless in six decisions, allowed four runs on five hits before leaving.

The loss was Cleveland's ninth in the last 12 games.

Athletics 4, Brewers 2

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Dave Parker hit his third homer in as many games and Curt Young won for the first time in three weeks as the Oakland Athletics defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 4-2 Tuesday night.

With the score tied 2-2, Jose

Canesco hit a one-out single in the sixth and Parker followed with his ninth homer, just inside the left-field pole.

Clayton Kershaw, 6-8, lost his fifth straight decision despite pitching his ninth complete game, tied for the major-league lead. He has lost six of his complete games.

Angels 5, Twins 4

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Chili Davis hit a two-out home run in the top of the 10th inning Tuesday night as the California Angels earned their sixth straight victory with a 5-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Davis hit his ninth homer of the season off Twins reliever Mark Portugal, 0-1, who allowed only two hits in four innings.

Greg Minton, 2-1, got the win despite allowing a game-winning single by Dan Gladden in the seventh. He struck out two in 2 1/3 innings.

Stu Cliburn gave up a leadoff single to Steve Lombardozzi in the bottom of the 10th and Gladden sacrificed him to second. But Bryan Harner struck out John Moses and got Kirby Puckett to fly out for his sixth save.

Rangers 6, Mariners 0

ARLINGTON, TEXAS (AP) — Paul Kilgus pitched a six-hitter for his third shutout of the season and Jeff Kunkel drove in three runs as the Texas Rangers defeated Seattle 6-0

Tuesday night for the Mariners' eighth straight loss.

The Mariners have lost 14 games in a row on the road, a club record.

Kilgus, 7-5, walked one and struck out four in pitching his third complete game.

Larry Parrish's fielder's choice in the second scored Pete Incaevig, who had doubled and advanced to third on a groundout.

Parrish hit a sacrifice fly in the fourth and the Rangers scored two in the fifth against Steve Trout, 2-3. Kunkel's RBI triple and Bob Brown's run-scoring single, his third straight hit.

Northwest Freight turns to rover DeWitt for title leadership

As of last week, Northwest Freight powerhouse Paul DeWitt was batting a spectacular .692 including 12 home runs

TWIN FALLS — As the race for No. 1 heats up in the A-division of the Twin Falls Men's Softball Association, Northwest Freight will be leaning more than ever on its bread and butter — Paul DeWitt.

The 24-year-old rover as of last week, was batting a spectacular .692, including 12 home runs — in a league that only allows five out of the park per game.

After a shaky start, Northwest Freight has battled its way into third place in the division standings with a 9-5 record, trailing the co-division leaders Snake River Pool and Spa and Reser's by three-and-a-half games.

DeWitt, now in his sixth year with Northwest Freight, the team changed its name in 1985 from Whole sale Carpets — says the team's poor start was mostly due to its acquisition of new players this season.

"We kind of had a slow start," DeWitt says. "Our defense was shaky at first because of a few new players. We weren't sure who would play what positions, but we're starting to come around."

A 19-11 victory over Reser's last Thursday indicates Northwest Freight's improvement, but the bottom line according to DeWitt, is that the top "five or six" teams are interchangeable as far as he is concerned, in the division standings.

"The top five or six are tough," DeWitt says. "On any given night, anybody can beat anybody."

Reser's and Snake River Pool and Spa are on top right now but "they could go into a slump and drop down," he adds.

One might label Paul the quintessential product of the immensely popular youth softball programs in Twin Falls. He absolutely loves the sport.

Like more than a few young kids growing up in the Magic Valley, DeWitt began swinging the bat competitively when he was six-years-old and he's essentially played ever since. Even though his competitive school days are long gone, Paul says his competitive nature — has remained — with him.

"Oh yeah, I'm very competitive. Always have been," DeWitt says. "I can lose graciously, but I don't like to lose."

One aspect of the game that disturbs DeWitt is the presence of home run ceilings in league and tournament games. The Amateur Softball Association implemented the home run ceiling with hopes of making the game more competitive. DeWitt however, says it has done the opposite.

"I think it really hurts the game," he says. "The purpose was to make it (the game) more competitive. They had it for the first couple of years that every home run after the limit was a single. Now it's a foul ball and if you hit one on the third strike, you're out. They (the ASA) really limited the game."

"They (players) don't strive to be home run hitters," DeWitt continued. "Now batting average and base hits are most important."

Collegians make deal to escape NCAA

ATLANTA (AP) — More than 40 athletes have agreed to testify for the prosecution in a case involving sports agents Norby Walters or Lloyd Bloom comes to trial. The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution reported Tuesday.

The newspapers said the agreement to testify is part of a pre-trial diversion program under which the athletes would avoid being charged in the federal grand jury investigation.

Running backs Brent Fulwood of Auburn, Ronnie Harmon of Iowa and Paul Palmer of Temple are among the athletes who have agreed to enter the pre-trial diversion program; the Atlanta newspapers said.

The program also calls for the athletes to perform 100 to 250 hours of community service under the supervision of a federal probation officer, according to the published report.

The 40 to 45 athletes have agreed to reimburse their former universities for their scholarships the years they were under contract to Walters and Bloom, the newspapers quoted sources close to the Chicago-based investigation as saying.

Eight to 10 athletes involved in the probe will be cleared, the papers said.

In Chicago, Assistant U.S. Attorney Howard Pearl, who is conducting the 15-month-old grand jury investigation of the sports agents, refused to comment on the newspapers' report, U.S. Attorney Anton Valukas of the Northern District of Illinois was out of court, and could not be reached for comment.

All athletes offered the deal by the U.S. attorney's office in Chicago have accepted it, the papers said, meaning no athletes will be indicted. Prosecutors claim Walters and Bloom conspired to induce the athletes to defraud their schools by offering them cash-and-contracts-in-violation of National Collegiate Athletic Association rules, then inducing them to sign "student-athlete affidavits" stating they had not broken NCAA rules by signing with an agent.

The Chicago grand jury is considering possible charges of mail fraud, wire fraud, tax fraud, extortion, racketeering and obstruction of justice against the agents, the newspapers said.

The pre-trial diversion program will not officially begin until the grand jury decides whether to indict the agents, the papers quoted their sources as saying.

Valukas decided on the pre-trial diversion program, the newspapers sources said, because of three factors:

- All of the athletes came from financially needy backgrounds and were more victims than perpetrators of a scheme, and prosecuting them would not make the government look good.
- Given time to "remedy" their mistakes, all athletes filed appropriate documents with the Internal Revenue Service reporting the money as income.

Please, keep the recipes coming

This is pure nostalgia. My first column was four years ago (yes, some times it does seem like four score). There have been 205 regular columns with darn close to 500 recipes shared. Most of the recipes have been good, some exceptional, and some just okay — sort of like life, right? — In those four years a lot has happened. I've worked under four editors; traveled to 19 countries; attended food shows in 12 states; lost and gained the same 20 pounds at least three times; suffered the empty nest (for about six weeks) as all of our children took off; helped judge four cook-offs, spoke to 14 of your group meetings; lost two years of work when my computer hard disk crashed (it still brings tears of frustration to even think about it), and written to or talked to lots and lots of you — that is when I didn't lose your letter in my files only to find it months later. My desk runneth over with things I want to share with you and recipes and such you've shared with me. My very first column reported that!

owned 148 cookbooks and two file drawers of clippings. Well, I've doubled everything and sometimes still have the same trouble finding the perfect recipe as you do.

I learn something new about cooking every day. I'm not an expert (remember, X = the unknown quantity and "spurt" = a drip under pressure!).

Some of the things we'll investigate together in the near future are microwave techniques. That cuisine and the best ingredients from Magic Valley.

I'm sorry but it's almost impossible for me to find a recipe that ran in another story in our food sections. Usually I just clip my columns and save them (sometimes even they disappear).

I try to make my column reflect what you want — sticking to a ratio of about seven down-to-earth recipes to each very exotic treatment. An exotic treatment can be unusual or expensive ingredients served expensively.

I'm looking for the best original ideas from your kitchen. I know you are busy and like to have good, fast fare you can serve to your family with a minimum of hassle.

Here are a couple of recipes that ran in the column a few years back, but are geared to summer.

CABBAGE CHICKEN SALAD

- 1/2 head cabbage, finely chopped
- 2 green onions, chopped
- 2 tablespoons slivered almonds
- 2 tablespoons sesame seeds
- 1 chicken breast, skinned, cooked, and chopped or shredded
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon Accent
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 3 tablespoons vinegar
- 1 package oriental noodles, finely broken up

Mix everything together except noodles. It can be refrigerated at this point. Just before serving mix in the noodles so they give it some crunch.

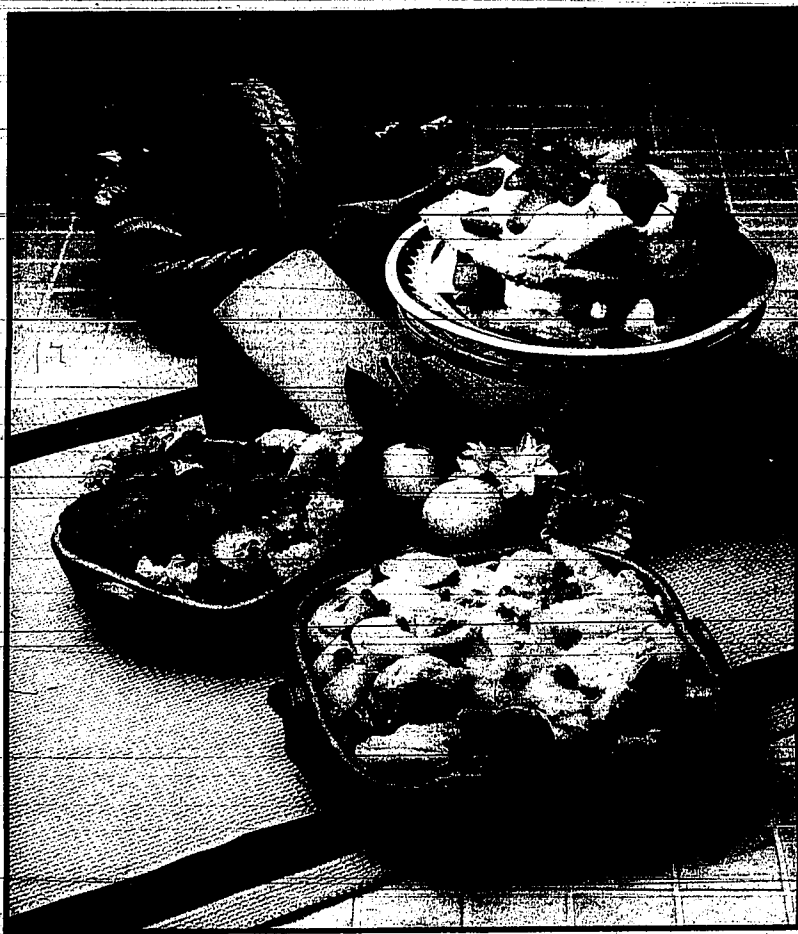

It's time to dust off your "sun tea" jar. Why not do some experimenting this year? Check the supermarket shelves for a "new" flavored tea. There's an explosion of varieties, both with caffeine and without.

You can do the same thing by jazzing up the old standby regular tea by adding mint or fresh lemon, lime or orange juice plus some spices like cinnamon and cloves.

You don't need to purchase a special container, just use the largest jar you can find. Use a ratio of three tea bags per quart of water. Yes, it's strong, but it can then be diluted. Remember to garnish your tea with fresh mint leaves or even fresh flowers from your garden (pansies are good).

So, here's to a few more columns we can share! Keep those cards, letters and phone calls coming, your feedback is wanted. Thanks.

Enjoy!

A 1-hour masterpiece

Quick, creative cooking is an art. Mastering it requires planning, resourcefulness, and recipes that offer satisfying ways to beat the clock. Start with high quality, readily available ingredients such as the tangy raisins, premium cheese, and red-ripe strawberries that are featured in the menu pictured here. The key is to combine these ingredients simply yet imaginatively, and to be aware of the impact of presentation. You can create a meal that has taste and eye appeal in only one hour using the timetable provided below.

Crisp and fresh, a salad is a fast-to-prepare side dish to accompany any, quick and easy entree. Give your salad distinctive flavor with moist, chewy raisins. Marinated with orange juice and honey, raisins bring a wonderfully fruity and slightly tangy surprise to Raisin Citrus Cucumbers. Cheese is another ready-to-use convenience food. Choose two from more than 200 varieties made in America. In this entree, Seshell Pasta with Two Cheeses, the flavors and textures of smooth mozzarella cheese and aged Asiago cheese combine in an updated twist on a classic: macaroni and cheese. The lively flavor of premium Asiago, first made by Wisconsin's Italian immigrants, adds a new taste sensation to this easily prepared dish.

Step-by-step directions for dinner in one hour

1. Remove frozen pastry shells from freezer;

thaw until pliable, about 15 minutes; preheat oven to 400 degrees F.

2. Prepare Citrus Marinade; combine with all other salad ingredients except lettuce; marinate 30 minutes.

3. Roll pastry shells according to recipe; bake 12 minutes.

4. Cook pasta shells according to package directions; drain.

5. Remove puff pastry from oven, cool.

6. Reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees F.

7. Assemble pasta dish as directed; bake 15 minutes.

8. Beat whipping cream; toss sliced strawberries with liqueur.

9. Uncover pasta dish; bake 5 minutes.

10. Assemble salads as directed.

11. Assemble Strawberry Torta as directed.

Steam sweets hikers' delight

By DANA WATERS
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — With some very basic equipment, a small stove and a relatively easy technique, you can make some delicious and festive treats in the backcountry.

Many times, overnight hikes or extended backpacking trips are planned around special dates — the 4th of July, summer birthdays and anniversaries, or the Labor Day weekend.

Using a method known as steaming, you can actually make wonderful cakes and puddings in your mountain kitchen to give these grand occasions a touch of home-baked goodness.

You'll need two pots of different size, the smaller of the two having a diameter of approximately 7-inch dimensions to "nest" inside the larger pot with a 1/4-inch or more of space between them.

Local sporting goods stores carry several brands of aluminum cookware that are light and easy to carry. Some have copper bottoms to prevent scorching. But, because most hiking cookware is thin-walled, it's a good idea to place a wire trivet between the two pots when steaming.

Each pot should have a tightly fitting lid, but one made of tin foil has been formed over the top of each pot and tied securely down with string will also work. Just make sure the foil has no holes.

Rub the inside edges of the smaller pot with oil and pour in the batter from one of the various recipes which follow. Cover with a lid or foil and place inside the larger pot. Carefully fill the space between the two with water, enough to come half-way up the sides of the smaller pot.

Cover the larger pot and place the whole ensemble over the heat source. Make sure you're working on a flat surface to prevent any tipping during the cooking time.

Backpacking stoves have to be light-weight and fuel efficient. Peak 1, a division of Coleman, makes several varieties which weigh less than two pounds and burn various types of fuel, from butane to kerosene.

Many experienced hikers have their own stove preferences, and this steaming method will work well over any, as long as the heat remains constant to ensure a rapid boil of the insulating water throughout the process.

(You could even use an open fire or a bed of coals in areas where wood burning is allowed, but it will be difficult to regulate the heat.)

When the water between the pots has reached a rapid boil, begin the steaming time given with each recipe. Don't peek until at least the minimum cooking time is up. Be sure to pack a mitt-type pot holder to avoid steam burns.

During the summer Clare Gibbs serves meals outside

World-traveler shares some of her collection

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY — International culture and cuisine are savored by the small groups of ladies Clare Gibbs takes on cultural field trips each year. They visit the museums, concerts, operas and tourist attractions of countries overseas.

In her travels, Gibbs says she is always looking for special recipes that are simple and good. And among her souvenirs, are recipes she has obtained from little family restaurants and hotel kitchens.

"Somehow you communicate," she says. "They take things out of the cupboards, and they'll show you the cummin or sage or thyme or something like that."

Although she has been taking these field trips for about eight years, she has not yet had the opportunity to visit Claude Monet's garden. Nevertheless, during the last weeks of June, Gibbs doesn't have to leave her own backyard to experience a similar aesthetic treat, because of the harmony of beautiful flowers, she has carefully nurtured there. In fact, her garden is often referred to by friends as "Claude Monet's garden."

During the summer, she and her husband, Garland, eat all of their meals out by the flowers. The garden is also a lovely setting for summer violin lessons, so she takes her students outside — something she cannot do for her piano students.

GERMAN FRUIT COFFEE CAKE

- (serves 10)
- 2 cups all purpose flour, unsifted
  - 1 cup sugar
  - 2 teaspoons baking powder
  - 1 teaspoon salt
  - 1 1/2 teaspoons grated orange peel
  - 1/2 cup butter or margarine
  - 2 eggs
  - 1 cup milk
  - 1 teaspoon vanilla
  - 3 1/2 cups prepared fresh fruit (suggestions follow*)
- Streusel topping (recipe follows):
- In a bowl, stir together the flour, sugar, baking powder, salt and orange peel. With pastry blender or two knives, cut in butter, until mixture resembles corn meal. In another bowl, beat the eggs lightly; then stir in the milk and vanilla. Make a well in the center of the flour mixture, and pour in egg mixture, just until moist. Pour batter into a well greased, 9x13-inch pan and arrange fresh fruit evenly on top, pressing in lightly.

Old recipes stir up childhood memories

By ALICE STEINBACH
The Baltimore Sun

Not too long ago, on a night when I could not sleep, I wandered downstairs into my kitchen looking for some mindless diversion.

Instead I found myself reliving the past. It happened as I was foraging about in my pantry and discovered an old, wooden box of recipes on the shelf. There, neatly typed on 3-by-5 cards or scrawled on the backs of envelopes or scraps of yellowing paper, was a kind of history of my life. Or at least a part of it.

I recognized my mother's handwriting on the three-card-long recipe for an English trifle, the one she made each Christmas; another, a recipe for super fudge cake, was written in a bold, artistic hand and signed, like a painting, by my friend Ellen.

There are many ways, I suppose, to review a life. Reading old letters or gazing at family photo albums is one way to stir up the sediment of old memories. A number of my male friends tell me that sports is the straw that stirs the past for them. It occurred to me that the exchanging of favorite, closely guarded recipes is a similar experience among women.

Most of the recipes in my file are titled with the name of the person who was generous enough to share an old, mixed concoction with me. Gloria's Bread Pudding; Marion's Lemon Icebox Cake; Katherine's Hot Mulled Wine. They are like chapters in the book of my life; the memories associated with each name are part of the narrative that's formed my story.

I have always felt a bit sad that I have no daughters—who might carry on the tradition of recipe-sharing. I suppose that's why I felt particularly heartened when a son recently wanted a copy of one of my recipes for his girlfriend. "You know, Mom," he said over the phone, "the recipe for Leslie's best fudge we ever ate."

It was always one of his favorites.

ELLEN'S SUPER FUDGE CAKE

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 1/2 teaspoons baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 cups sugar
4 1/2 ounces unsweetened chocolate
1/2 pound (1 stick) butter
1 cup boiling water
1/2 cup sour cream (heaping)
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon mocha flavoring
Heat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour 8-inch or 9-inch cake pans.
Sift together the flour, baking soda, salt and sugar in a bowl.
Melt the chocolate and shortening in the boiling water. Over low heat, stir until blended, then remove from heat and cool.
Pour chocolate-butter mixture into a mixing bowl. Add sifted dry ingredients. Blend.
Add sour cream gradually while beating (medium speed if using electric mixer). Add beaten eggs. Add vanilla and mocha flavoring.

Pour batter into greased-and-floured pans. Bake for 25 or 30 minutes, or when toothpick comes out clean. Remove from oven; Cool in pans 15 minutes, then remove to wire racks.

If desired, use a medium angel food cake pan and bake for about 45 minutes.

Ice as desired. Thin dark chocolate glaze recommended for tube cake; thicker chocolate icing for two-layer cake.

GLORIA'S BREAD PUDDING

3 slices bread, more if desired
2 eggs
1/2 cup of salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/4 teaspoon each cloves, cinnamon and nutmeg
1/2 cup of sugar
1/2 cup milk
Extra milk to cover bread
Butter
Nutmeg
Heat oven to 375 degrees. Set cake pan half-filled with water in bottom of oven.

Butter a 1 1/2-quart ovenproof casserole. Place bread slices in bottom of casserole.

In a bowl, combine eggs, salt, baking soda, vanilla, cloves, cinnamon, nutmeg and sugar. Add 1/2 cup milk and stir. Pour on bread. Cover bread with nutmeg and is covered. Sprinkle with nutmeg and dot with butter. Bake 35 minutes. Serve hot or cold.

If more bread is used, increase the amount of vanilla to taste.

MARCIA'S ARMENIAN CAKE

2 cups light brown sugar
2 cups pastry flour, sifted
1/4 pound (1 stick) butter
1 beaten egg
1 teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup sour cream
Pinch salt
Cinnamon
4-ounces chopped pecans
Heat oven to 350 degrees. Grease a 9-inch square pan.

In a bowl, blend sugar, flour and butter, cutting butter into dry ingredients until mixture is crumbly, as in pie dough. Divide the mixture in half. Spread half in pan.

To remaining dough in bowl add egg, nutmeg, soda, salt and cream. Beat well. Pour onto mixture in pan. Sprinkle with cinnamon and chopped pecans.

Indulge, you'll feel like you're cheating

Each week during the summer, The Times-News is featuring cool salad recipes for those hot days ahead. If you have a salad recipe you would like to share, send that recipe to: "Salad of the Week," The Times-News, Box 548, Twin Falls, Idaho 83303. Here is this week's featured salad:

Denny Peyman, owner of The Body Shop in Twin Falls, says the following salad is the salad he eats as his last meal of the day. "I've been using this in my training for the Mr. Intermountain and Mr. Northwest Body Building contests," he says. "I won the Mr. Intermountain Open, 35 and over, contest and also won the overall trophy, so this is not only an excellent salad, but also very filling and low in calories, high in fiber and carbohydrates. You'll feel like you're cheating."

Salad of the week: Yogurt & fruit

DENNY PEYMAN'S FRUIT SALAD

In a large bowl combine:

- 1 cup no-fat yogurt
- 1 apple, cut up in small pieces
- 1 cup strawberries, chopped
- 1 cup blueberries

1 banana, cut up in small pieces
Mix all ingredients together and place in the freezer to chill for about 30 minutes. When you take the salad out of the freezer, mix in one cup rolled oats and add cinnamon, to taste.

"This is a very well balanced meal, usually good for two servings, but in my case it was only one. It was so good I just couldn't put it down," he says.

Peyman reports the total calories as 556: one cup yogurt, 110; one apple, 90; one cup strawberries, 56; one cup blueberries, 60; one banana, 120; rolled oats, 120.

Squeeze together handfuls of the streusel topping; then break into chunks and scatter it over the fruit.

Bake coffee cake at 350 degrees or until a pick inserted in the center portion comes out clean, about 30 minutes. Cool on a wire rack for 20 minutes. Then cut into squares and serve warm. Or, cool completely, cover and store at room temperature. Reheat uncovered in a 300 degree oven for about 10 minutes to serve.

*Fruit suggestions: Blueberries, pitted cherries, pitted apricots, plums sliced 1/4 inch thick, or peeled and pitted peaches sliced 1/2 inch thick, or peeled and cored apples sliced 1/4 inch thick.

**Streusel topping:

Combine: 1/2 cup packed brown sugar
1/4 cup granulated sugar
1/4 cup all purpose flour, unsifted
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
With fingers, work in:
2 tablespoons butter or margarine until well distributed.

Stir in:

1/2 cup chopped walnuts
And, from a Russian hotel restaurant...

RUSSIAN FLUFFY PANCAKES

(Makes about a dozen 4-inch pancakes)

3 large egg yolks, beaten lightly
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup milk
1/2 stick unsalted butter, (she uses salted) melted and cooled

1 cup all purpose flour, sifted together with 1 teaspoon double acting baking powder and 1/2 teaspoon salt
3 large egg whites, at room temperature

Pinch of cream of tartar
Confectioner's sugar, for dusting the pancakes
Maple syrup to put over the pancakes

In a bowl, combine the egg yolks, sugar, milk and butter. Stir in the flour mixture and stir the mixture until it is just combined. In another bowl, beat the egg whites with the cream of tartar and a pinch of salt until they hold stiff peaks, and fold them into the batter. Heat a well seasoned griddle or skillet until it is moderately hot, and on it cook the pancakes in batches, using 1/2 cup batter per pancake, for 2 minutes, or until bubbles appear on the surface. Turn the pancakes and cook them 1 minute more, or until they are golden brown, transferring them to a heated platter as they are cooked. Sift the confectioner's sugar lightly over the pancakes, and serve them hot with maple syrup.

"They are really good," she says. "Sometimes we even have that for a supper, rather than breakfast. In fact, very seldom do we have them for breakfast. They are good for lunch in wintertime."

And, from a restaurant in Monte Carlo...

CHOCOLATE APPLESAUCE CAKE

2 1/2 cups all purpose flour
1/2 cup baking cocoa
2 teaspoons baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 cups sweetened applesauce
1/2 cup buttermilk
1/2 cup shortening
1 1/4 cups sugar
2 eggs
1 1/4 teaspoons vanilla extract
Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Grease and flour a 13-x9-inch baking pan. Sift together flour, cocoa, baking soda and salt. In a small bowl, mix applesauce and buttermilk. In a large mixing bowl, at low speed, cream shortening and sugar. Beat in eggs and add vanilla. Add dry ingredients to creamed mixture alternately with applesauce-buttermilk mixture. Mix 4 minutes, until well blended, occasionally scraping bowl. Pour batter into pan and bake 35-40 minutes or until test done. Cool.

Frost with any chocolate frosting.

You may add into the batter:
1/2 cup chopped nuts and 1/2 cup raisins, mixed into flour mixture.

"It's so good when it's hot," she says, "and it's good two or three days later—if there's any left."

The next recipe is from the 700-year-old, Galden-Hirsch Hotel in Salzburg, Austria. Gibbs took her first group there eight years ago, and arranged for her group to be surprised with this delicious dessert.

"When everybody had eaten, I said, 'Be patient and sip your coffee, and we'll have something special. They had this salzburger nockerl, and the plates stacked up alongside, and gave each one of us a generous share. It was wonderful," she says.

SALZBURGER NOCKERL

1 tablespoon unsalted butter, softened
5 egg whites, room temperature
3 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 tablespoon all purpose flour
3 egg yolks
Grated rind of 1 lemon
Sifted confectioner's sugar, for dusting

Pre-heat oven to 375 degrees. Heat gratin dish (or ovenproof plate, or jellyroll pan) slightly and coat lightly with butter. In bowl, beat egg whites to hold soft peaks. Gradually add granulated sugar and "the whites" to hold stiff peaks. Sprinkle flour over whites, and fold in gently. In another bowl, beat yolks with grated rind until thick and lemon colored, and fold gently but firmly into whites. Quickly divide mixture into four large portions and arrange the portions in prepared dish, smoothing sides with back of wooden spoon, and then shaping mixture into three mounds with highest possible peaks. Bake in middle of oven 15 minutes or until lightly golden. Sprinkle with confectioner's sugar, and serve at once.

When Gibbs' daughter, Diane, was about 4 years old, she picked up the idea of eating by candlelight while watching a TV show, and asked if they could do this, too. With the exception of outdoor meals in summer, this has become a tradition.

Gibbs says, along with the classical music playing softly on the stereo, "it seems like no matter what you eat, it tastes better by candlelight."

And, because the Gibbs are trying to eat as healthfully as possible these days, they are saving the cakes for birthdays and other special occasions.

She says she looks forward to the first family birthday of the year, which is that of their son, Jay, in May. She says she can hardly wait for this occasion to make a French chocolate cake, which was a $100 prize winner in an American Home magazine, about 35 years ago—a big prize for pre-inflation times.

FRENCH CHOCOLATE CAKE

Cream together:

1/2 cup butter
2 cups sugar
Add:
4-ounces melted chocolate
2 beaten eggs
Mix well. Then add alternately:
2 cups sifted cake flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder that have been sifted together, with:
1 1/2 cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Pour into two 9-inch greased, floured round cake pans, lined with waxed paper. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes, and test done.

The frosting:
1/2 cup butter
2-ounces chocolate, melted
Add:
1 beaten egg
Pinch of salt
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 1/2 cups powdered sugar
Beat until thick enough to spread. Use real butter, especially in the frosting.

Home/garden

Don't waste irrigation water, determine your soil type first

Summertime is irrigation time in the Intermountain area. We simply do not receive enough natural rainfall for most plants which we grow in our gardens. However, a lot of water is wasted by overirrigation. There are also some practices which will reduce water needs by plants.

Soil type greatly influences the amount and frequency of irrigation water which is needed. Heavy clay soils hold the most water and need to be irrigated the least frequently. However, it takes a longer irrigation period to wet a heavy soil. Light sandy soils need more frequent irrigation for a shorter time interval. Loam soils are somewhere between sandy and clay in type. If you are not sure what type of soil you have, take a small sample to a knowledgeable nurseryman or county agricultural agent. Sometimes they can even tell you what type of soil you have just by the geographical location where you live. One-inch of water will wet a clay soil approximately 4- to 6-inches deep.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

One inch will wet a sandy soil about 8- to 10-inches. A loam soil would be in the 6- to 8-inch range.

Lawns, flowers and vegetables have most of their roots in the top 6-inches of soil. An application of 1/2- to 1-inch of water is about right for these shallow rooted plants. Over half of the water absorbing roots of trees and shrubs are also in the top 6-inches of soil. However an occasional deeper watering of trees and shrubs (about once a month) is very beneficial.

It is easy to determine how long it takes to apply an inch of water, using your particular water pressure, sprinkler system or hose and sprinklers. Simply place two or three straight-sided cans, such as tuna fish cans at intervals from the sprinkler head. If you have more than one type of sprinkler or sprinkler head, check each one separately. Different types can require all the way from 15 minutes to over two hours to apply the same amount of water. Time how long it takes to accumulate a specific amount such as 1-inch. Then use that as a guideline for how long to get your sprinklers run.

Plants will exhaust all the available water in the top 6-inches of soil in anywhere from two to seven days, depending upon soil type, weather and other factors. Watch for signs of color change to indicate water need before wilting. Leaves change from a bright to dull color before wilting. Walk across the lawn to see if the grass springs back up or leaves footprints for several minutes. Check problem dry spots to see if the sprinkler is blocked or not functioning properly.

Plants on the shaded north side of the house need much less water than those on the south and west sides, which receive extra reflected heat. Lawns mowed at a height of 1 1/2- to 2-inches will have twice as many roots as those mowed at 1-inch or less. Higher mowing can cut irrigation frequency in half.

Daily irrigation is almost never a good practice, except for newly seeded or transplanted plants until they become established. In fact, frequent high irrigation keeps the top of the soil moist so that more weeds sprout.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College. His column appears in Food/Home every Wednesday

Old rule holds: Less is more

The Baltimore Sun

Aliment: The elegance of a formal living room is lost amid the clutter of dark paneling, poorly positioned art work and clunky table accessories.

Diagnosis: Rose-colored walls, an antique oil painting and cluttered decorative elements - restore - Victorian charm to the setting.

Cost of Cure: $437.95 to $2,624.95. "The more the merrier" was the obvious maxim used to create this ill-designed formal living room. But one look at the club-basement paneling, tapestry chair and Southwestern-style clay lamp left us begging for less.

Had the imagined owners of this staid scenario never contemplated the benefits of "more is less?" Instead, we envisioned them spending hard-earned money collecting fine pieces - a Victorian swooning couch, a mahogany pie-crust table and brass filigree tray - but lacking the vision to arrange them artfully. The sorry result was a costly mistake reeking of naivete.

To Kathie Szymanski, decorating consultant at Woodward & Lothrop, this was a textbook example of overdoing it. The paneling, which fought with the couch and chair for attention, provided the most vicious assault on her design sensibilities. Adding a modern floral arrangement and overscaled pastel Oriental rug only made the bad arrangement worse.

"We are all a little guilty of doing this," she explained. "We try to show off our best things by putting them in one room. People often overdress a living room area because that's where the bulk of the entertaining is done."

Szymanski breathed new life into this dreary room by replacing the paneling with rose-colored walls and lace curtain panels. Oversized accessories were traded for daintier heart-shaped boxes, a jade-colored picture frame and fern. To add authenticity to the setting, she hung an Italian oil painting in - a gold leaf frame over the couch. (While the original costs a whopping $1,579, similar prints can be found for as little as $150 in some art stores.) A smaller Oriental rug provided the ideal finishing touch.

"It was a warmer room," Szymanski explained. "It was the kind of room you'd want to go into and read a book or sew."

To avoid a decorating mishap of this sort, she recommends experimenting with the placement of furniture in different rooms. A table that has been hidden in a corner of the living room may take on new life when featured prominently in an entrance hall.

"Try to have a general plan for each room, remembering that when you're building a room it's not always done overnight," Szymanski said.

Transport of transplants is an eye-opening experience

DEAR ABBY: After reading the letter from a California reader concerning the casual manner in which the cremated remains of her aunt were sent to her home via regular mail rather than by a more dignified route, I think I can top that.

While dropping off a box of documents to be delivered by well-known bus company, I noticed on the counter a plastic foam cooler large enough to hold two six-packs.

It obviously had made many trips because the carrier showed signs of wear. I gapsed when I read the label on the box: "Refrigerated; HUMAN EYEBALLS. I later learned that they were being transported by bus for transplant purposes.

I am well aware of your efforts in this cause, Abby, and I report this to you and your readers merely to point out how commonplace transplants have become.

Please print this. It might make some uptight readers realize that hundreds — perhaps thousands — of donated body parts are in transit daily.

- WANTS TO GIVE IN ALBANY, N.Y.
DEAR WANTS: I, too, want to give. And when I go, I plan to take nothing with me that could improve the quality of life for the living. Readers, how about you?

DEAR ABBY: I am an 80-year-old woman who recently went by train to Portland, Ore., to attend a regional bridge tournament.

My daughter, who lives in Portland, took me to the restaurant in the union depot for a cup of coffee and a few last words before I boarded the train. I was wearing a pink pantsuit (my best) and a matching beret and scarf. (I've had many compliments on this outfit.)

The waitress brought our coffee, looked at me and said, "We have a policy here — no hats. I want to know in a state of shock! I know that men should not wear hats in a restaurant, but I have never heard of a woman being asked to remove her hat, have you?"

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

Please help me get to the bottom of this bizarre incident before I completely lose my mind: I haven't slept well since. No name, please.

- INSULTED IN PORTLAND
DEAR INSULTED: There is no reason why a woman should remove her hat in a coffee shop — or in any other dining room. The waitress was in error.

Now, dear lady, please put this unsettling incident out of your mind. It takes energy to worry, and although the waitress committed a gross gaffe (through ignorance, I presume) it is not worth a second thought.

DEAR ABBY: We can verify that you have readers all over the world and that they have a keen interest in dentistry.

After your column on "The Dental Patient's Bill of Rights," we received requests from 47 states and seven foreign countries. We are delighted!

The California Dental Association has a new booklet that contains the "Bill of Rights" and other useful dental information, such as what to do in a dental emergency, definitions of the various dental specialties, and the members of the dental team and what they do.

DEAR MR. REDIG: The booklet is indeed informative — particularly the section on what to do in case of a dental emergency.

Readers, send a No. 10, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: "Know Before You Go," P.O. Box 13749, Sacramento, Calif. 95853-4749. It's free to Abby readers.

"How to Have a Lovely Wedding" is a revised, up-to-date guide for formal church weddings, home weddings, second-time-around weddings, and even barefoot-in-the-park weddings. It covers who pays for what, wedding etiquette, accepted customs and dress, and who sits where. To order, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 477, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.
