Heat hangs on despite cool air, dash of rain

By The Associated Press

A cold front brought rain to parts of the parched upper Midwest on Friday and record chill to the sweltering Northeast, but hot, dry weather elsewhere withered crops and boosted the cost of everything from grain to fish bait.

Rivers dry up — A8

100-degree heat over the central part of the nation. A plan to pour more water into the Missouri River for shipping ran aground because it would have destroyed nesting areas for endangered birds. But the Mississippi was reopened to barges at Memphis, Tenn., after dredging opened a channel through a shallow area. Forest fires fanned by hot wind blazed in Montana and Idaho, and at least seven North Dakota counties have banned fireworks on July 4 because of the fire danger. Wisconsin banned outdoor smoking, open fires and fireworks in all state parks, forests and other state land Friday. Temperatures soared again at the end of a week that saw scores of high temperatures records shattered. The sun was barely dented overhead when the temperature at Sioux Falls, S.D., hit 100 degrees and tied the record. The overnight low at North Platte, Neb., was hardly low at all, dipping only to a record 74. Fewer cities reached record high temperatures Friday. They included 97 at Casper, Wyo.; 101 at Chattanooga, Tenn.; 93 at Cheyenne, Wyo.; 100 at Des Moines, Iowa; 101 at Kansas City, Mo.; 101 at Paducah, Ky.; 103 at Sioux City, Iowa; and 103 at Sioux Falls, S.D. It was Sioux City's fifth consecutive record. The official 1 p.m.

MDT high for the 48 contiguous states was 109 at Pierre, S.D., the National Weather Service said. In St. Louis, the medical examiner's office said three elderly women had died of hyperthermia. In Georgia, Thomas County Coroner Sam Brown said a woman died of a heart attack brought on by heat stroke while working on a road. See DROUGHT on Page A2

Natural rock facing will be added, the walkway removed and head gates renovated at the Niagara Springs diversion

Aesthetics at Niagara Springs

Army, utility set on diversion changes

By BART JANSEN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and Idaho Power Co. have agreed on changes at the Niagara Springs diversion. Water activists wanted the diversion torn out, after learning Idaho Power built it without a permit. But the corps and company instead adopted aesthetic changes that reduce the structure's profile.

"We got a little and anything is better than it was," said Bob Burks, a vocal water advocate from Wendell.

Tearing down the entire concrete structure would have been difficult and costly, and may have damaged the riverbed below. The concrete is heavily reinforced with steel.

"In looking at it, we agreed if you tried to (tear it out) you would damage the stream and the stability of the structure," said Dean Hilliard, chief of the Corps' regulatory branch in Walla Walla, Wash. "We couldn't justify removing the structure."

Idaho Power had a permit to build its main dam, but the corps ruled that an additional permit was needed for the wing wall built for Rim View Trout Co.

As Idaho Power filed a second permit application after the fact, Burks raised the specter of tearing out the dam or at least Rim View's channel.

Instead, the corps and Idaho Power agreed to four special conditions at the site.

By Sept. 15 the two agreed that water should flow continuously over the center of the wall, overflow of the wing dam will be provided when there's excess water for the Idaho Power hatchery, and walkways above the top of the concrete will be removed.

Currently, there is a catwalk across the main dam and two head gates above the wing wall. The walkway will be removed and the gates raised from the bottom, instead of lowered from the top, so that headgates are no longer visible.

Burks also suggested shaving the concrete down to water level, but that idea was also rejected because of the reinforced steel.

By next June 1, the downstream facing of the cutoff wall will be covered with natural rock.

Burks argued the entire structure should receive a facelift because the upstream side is what's visible from the road. But Hilliard said it would be difficult to place rocks on the sheer facing and could even be dangerous.

"Upstream is more important because it's what you see from the bridge," Burks said.

But Hilliard said, "It would be very difficult to put it on."

Beyond those changes to the water diversion, Idaho Power also expects to repair the observation boardwalk across the road from the diversion. But construction isn't expected to begin for at least a year.

Idaho Power spokesman Larry Taylor said a boardwalk and observation deck will be repaired where the springs gush out of the canyon wall. The boardwalk would be built beneath trees at the springs to bring spectators out over part of the cascading water.

But the deck and part of the walkway collapsed about four months ago for reasons that are not clear.

Taylor said a new path and boardwalk will be built to the left, or upstream, of the present walk.

"It is just above the location of the old one, but actually has a better view than the old one," Taylor said.

Tapes depict alleged bribes

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Authorities investigating allegations of fraud in the Pentagon's weapons-buying contracts have videotapes of consultants allegedly bribing Pentagon officials, NBC News reported Friday, the same day a Senate committee considered suspending payments to contractors under investigation.

The officials in the videotapes are Victor Cohen, a deputy assistant secretary of the Air Force, and James Gaines, a deputy assistant secretary of the Navy, NBC reported, citing unidentified sources for the information.

Both Cohen and Gaines have been reassigned temporarily since their offices were searched by authorities last week and the investigation became public.

The consultants on the videotapes include Melvyn Paisley, NBC reported. Paisley is a former assistant secretary of the Navy whose office also was searched by federal authorities last week.

The investigation focuses on whether private consultants, many of them former defense officials, bribed

Pentagon employees for inside information and then sold the details to contractors. The secret information could have given the recipients the advantage in winning contracts worth billions of dollars.

Paisley's attorney, E. Lawrence Barcella, denounced the officials who spoke to NBC, saying, "If they want to try a case about leaking government information, they should stop leaking information."

Michael Schatzow, the attorney for Gaines, refused to comment on the report, saying, "I'll just wait and allow everybody who's been reporting these stories to wait and be embarrassed later."

Cohen's attorney, Seymour Glanzer, was not immediately available for comment.

Meanwhile, a check-of federal and state records revealed that a firm established by a central figure in the probe — defense contractor consultant William Galvin — paid up to $50,000 in 1986 to Paisley's wife, Vicki. At the time, Paisley was the Navy's procurement chief.

President presents medals to ex-POWs

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan presented medals to former prisoners of three wars Friday and pledged continued efforts to bring home any more American prisoners of war who may be held.

"We write no final chapters here," Reagan told a crowd of approximately 1,000 at a medal ceremony on the South Lawn of the White House.

"Our country has not forgotten former comrades who are still missing, those who fought in Korea or Vietnam and have not returned home or been accounted for," the president said. "We must be faithful to them and their families and demand a full accounting of the fate of those Americans who are missing in action."

"If Americans are being held against their will, we must bring them home," he said.

Repeating his often-expressed view of the Vietnam War, Reagan told veterans, "On the battlefield you knew victory, only to have your victory lost by a failure of political will. Nevertheless, you did honor to America."

Reagan presented the medals to two prisoners from World War II, two from the Korean War and two from the Vietnam War as representatives of the many who are eligible.

The recipients were Sgt. Albert J. Bland, retired from the Air Force, who served in the Pacific theater during World War II; Lt. Charles M. Williams, a retired Air Force officer who served in the European theater in World War II; Cpl. Charles A. Burton, who served with the Army in Korea; Col. Jesse Booker, a Marine Corps officer who served in Vietnam; and Capt. Charles M. Williams, a retired Air Force officer who served in the European theater in World War II.

Carlucci said he was the first to be held officers in the Korean War; Col. Floyd James Thompson, an Army officer who was described as the first to be shot down, the longest held in the Vietnam War and who was held in the South; and Cdr. Everett Alvarez, a Navy flier who Carlucci said was shot down over North Vietnam and was the second longest held prisoner of the war.

Germs won't go by mail any more

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Germs and dangerous toxins will be banned from the mail under new regulations announced Friday in the wake of congressional concern over reports that the military has increased shipments of such items.

The action is being taken "to ensure the safety and health of ... customers and employees," the Postal Service said. "The Postal Service is concerned that some customers are planning increased use of the mails for sending disease germs or hazardous toxins (etiologic agents)."

No date was set to implement the new rules, which must go through a formal regulatory process before they can take effect.

Jeremy Rifkin, an activist who heads the Foundation on Economic Trends in Washington, hailed the decision Friday as a step toward avoiding a potential catastrophe.

Rifkin, who petitioned the Postal Service to ban such shipments, said he now will turn his attention to the Transportation Department, which he wants to investigate shipments of dangerous products by private carriers.

This past week the Postal Service had said it was reviewing its regulations on the shipment of potentially hazardous biological items.

Various products, including biological warfare toxins, have been mailed in the past under strict packaging and labeling rules, and postal officials say no problems have occurred.

But following reports that the Army planned to expand research facilities in Utah, California Attorney General John Van de Kamp complained that the need for increased shipments of dangerous biological products could create a hazard.

Army officials have told a House subcommittee that they ship few parcels containing biological items, and those almost always by private, commercial carrier.

Of more than 10,000 shipments of biological items over a 16-months, fewer than 10 percent were hazardous items, Dr. John W. McVicar told a House subcommittee.

Of those, the agency said only three reports of leaks were received and none resulted in any infection.

U.S. cracks arms ring

The Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The government Friday accused five people, including two Egyptian army colonels, of plotting to illegally export U.S. technology used in sophisticated weapons systems such as the stealth bomber.

Authorities said the group, directed in the United States by naturalized American rocket specialist Abdelkader Helmy, operated an international export ring that illegally routed sensitive material to Europe and the Middle East.

"This is conspiracy with deep roots in the Sacramento area," said U.S. Attorney David Levi in announcing the government's complaint. Three people were arrested, but one, an Egyptian colonel who claimed diplomatic immunity, was immediately released, authorities said.

Helmy's wife remained at large but was expected to surrender voluntarily in California, while the fifth person named in the complaint, another Egyptian colonel, was in Austria.

Helmy received $1 million in payments from Egyptian sources for his role in the scheme, which involved the "illicit export of a substance called car-

Bush attacks Dukakis' support for Massachusetts tax hike

The Associated Press

Vice President George Bush, citing Michael Dukakis' support for $115 million in state tax increases, said Friday the difference between him and the Democratic governor was "tax cuts versus tax hikes." Dukakis said New Jersey Sen. Bill Bradley has taken himself out of consideration for the vice presidential nomination.

Jesse Jackson dismissed a published report he had told aides that he would not accept the No. 2 spot on the Democratic ticket.

"Whoever was talking was not authorized, but also was not dealing in the truth," said Jackson.

The former civil rights leader said Thursday he had decided whether or not to accept the vice presidential nomination, but he refused to disclose his decision. The Boston Globe reported Friday that Jackson had told aides he wasn't interested in the vice presidency.

Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis and wife, Kitty, relax on Nantucket Island.

can unity meeting in Cincinnati, Bush cited Dukakis' announcement on Thursday that he supports a $115 million tax package that included a $40 million levy on cigarettes as part of an effort to deal with a $200 million state budget shortfall.

"I will not raise your taxes, period," said the vice president. "He just has in his home state."

The Massachusetts tax increases offered a welcome target to Republicans eager to knock down the lead Dukakis has enjoyed in recent national polls. GOP Senate Leader Bob Dole of Kansas was scheduled to address a party meeting in Ohio on Saturday and his office released the following excerpt:

"George Bush has made it clear that he will not raise taxes, period. And what about Mike Dukakis? Ask the people of Massachusetts. Yesterday, they got some more bad news from their governor — he's at it again. He just announced $110 million in new taxes for the people of Taxachusetts."

The revenue shortfall in Massachusetts is common to other states as well and is a result of part of the changes in federal tax laws enacted in 1986.

The vice president also said he was confident he would overcome the so-called gender gap, the indication in polls that women voters support Dukakis by a far higher percentage than do men.

"I am confident we can overcome this gender gap," said Bush. "I want to be sure I'm as sensitive as possible to the concerns of these activist women in our party. I think we've got a good message for women."

Meanwhile, Democratic Party platform writers worked in Colorado on what was shaping up as the shortest party platform in half a century, a document calling for restoration of "competence and hope" and avoiding "talks of high taxes, a Pentagon spending freeze or a Palestinian homeland."

Those three issues could be the subject of convention fights between supporters of Dukakis and Jackson, though Jackson partisan Eleanor Holmes Norton said "I'm not expecting any battles. We're trying to work out things that could cause great difficulties."

In other political news: —The latest figures from the Federal Election Commission show a continuing slump in Republican fund-raising, although the GOP still leads the Democrats.

The FEC summary of 15-month totals through March 31 showed Republican committees had raised $97 million, compared to $127 million at the same point in 1986, $137 million in 1984 and $116 million in 1982. The Democrats have raised a total of $29 million in this cycle, compared to $24 million in 1986, $37 million in 1984, and $13 million in 1982.

—Sen. John Glenn of Ohio got a boost as Democratic vice presidential nominee from Republican Party.

Today's weather Same weather, different day

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Glendale
Hot today, partly cloudy with a slight chance of thundershowers. Highs 85 to 100. Winds variable 5 to 15 mph except gusts to 40 mph near thundershowers. Tonight and Sunday, partly cloudy with a chance of thundershowers. Lows 65 to 70. Highs in the mid 90s.

Camas Prairie and Wood River Valley
Today, partly cloudy. A slight chance of thundershowers. Highs 90 to 95. Winds light except gusts up to 40 mph near thundershowers. Tonight and Sunday, partly cloudy with scattered thundershowers. Lows in the mid 60s. Highs near 90.

Northern Utah and Nevada
Utah — Widely scattered afternoon and evening thundershowers mainly over the mountains through Sunday. Low to south winds to 15 mph during the afternoons and Sunday. Otherwise gusty variable winds near thundershowers. Lows mostly in the mid 60s to mid 70s. Highs in the 90s to 100s.

Idaho — Scattered thundershowers and partly cloudy tonight. A chance of afternoon thundershowers northwest through mostly sunny Sunday and Sunday. Highs upper 80s to low 90s. Lows upper 50s to mid 60s.

Summary
The National Weather Service says upper level winds have been westerly as the result of a weak weather system that moved across northern Idaho.

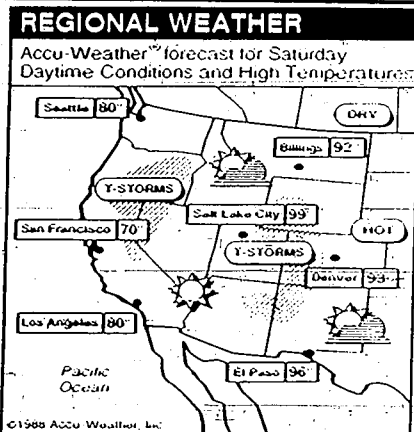

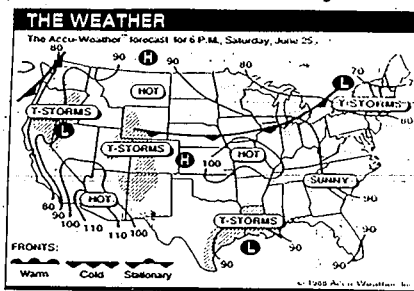

Due to this flow, temperatures across Southern Idaho were slightly cooler Friday with readings in the 80s and 90s instead of the 100s that were common on Thursday.

High pressure continued over the intermountain region. As this center moved northward, moisture from the south will be allowed to approach the state's southern border and move northward today, increasing the chance of thundershowers activity.

Low temperatures Friday ranged from 30 degrees at Bovi to 58 at Burley. Afternoon highs were mostly in the upper 70s and 80s in the north and in the 90s in the south. Malad had the state's high of 102 degrees.

Afternoon skies were mostly clear throughout the state with only a few scattered clouds. No precipitation was reported and winds were from the west to northwest 5 to 15 mph.

The pollen count in Twin Falls Friday was 96 particles per cubic meter of air. The agricultural outlook for Southern Idaho shows conditions for field work and haying will be good with hot and continued dry weather through Tuesday. The chance of afternoon and evening thundershowers will be small, with a few afternoon and evening showers. Should occur, expect brief delays. Evaporation rates will be much above normal through Wednesday. Winds will be westerly 5 to 15 mph today and Sunday. The extended outlook for Southern Idaho shows mostly sunny and warm days through Wednesday at Waterbury, N.V.

Drifting walrus hunters found

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Seven walrus hunters including a 13-year-old boy and a teacher from New Jersey are safe after three weeks adrift in the ice-clogged Bering Sea.

Three were flown to Anchorage hospitals Friday while the others awaited flights back to their St. Lawrence Island home.

One of the hunters, a 27-year-old Eskimo, said he dreamed of hot chocolate and strawberries before being rescued by helicopter late Thursday. The intensive search included flights authorized by the Soviet Union inside its 12-mile territorial limit; a first, according to U.S. officials.

But the missing hunters were found on a southeast shore of St. Lawrence Island at the opposite end from their home port of Gambell on the island's northwestern tip and away from the Soviet territorial waters.

The rescue touched off a celebration in Gambell, a closely knit Eskimo community. Six of the seven were members of the Sliwoko famly. The other was Andy Haviland, a school teacher formerly of New Jersey.

"Everyone is just all over the village, hugging and kissing and praising God... Oh, it's amazing," Haviland's mother, Deborah, told KJMM radio of Nome. She flew to Gambell from her home in Summit, N.J., after her son was reported missing.

Haviland, 30, was reported in stable condition at Providence Hospital, suffering from malnutrition and dehydration.

ing in a tobacco field. In Savannah, Ga., the Senior Citizens of Savannah-Chatham County and the Savannah Elderly Aging Consortium distributed 25 fans to the elderly Thursday, making it 424 given out since May.

Grain and soybean futures opened lower Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade after overnight thundershowers spread rain over parts of Minnesota, across Wisconsin and Iowa into Illinois.

Some parts of Iowa got more than 2 inches of rain before the hot air returned to bake the soil.

"Last week the soy beans and corn were all curled and shriveled, and now it looks like they're coming back," said Morris Greenley, who farms near Independence, Iowa. But he said he still faces a 20 percent cutback on his normal yields even if he gets an average of 1 inch of rain per week for the rest of the growing season.

Steve Hollinger of the Illinois State Water Survey said that as of June 15 there was "virtually no moisture available to plants in the top six inches of soil." Below that, down to 40 inches, he said, there is about a two-week supply of moisture.

The front ushered cool air into the Northeast and regard lows were reported in a half-dozen cities, including Burlington, Vt., with a chill 40 degrees. Cool air also hit the Northwest, and not only plants, tied its record of 38.

It's not just plants that suffer in the heat. Farmers have dumped about 40,000 pounds of dead cattle and hogs a day at the Worthington Rendering Co. in southwestern Minnesota, four times the usual volume, said manager Martin Terhark. The majority were victims of heat, he said.

"It just hurts more when you stand there and count 'em," said Loren Forest of rural Lovaine, Minn., saying he couldn't bear to count the 3-month-old piglets that died this week when a cooling sprinkler failed at his farm.

Urban shoppers may notice some price hikes caused by the drought, but a more immediate effect is visible at farmers' markets in some cities.

Carroll Elton, who manages a farmers' market in Urbana, Ill., said five to seven regular vendors were missing this week and people who do show up have less and less to sell. The drought is the major topic of conversation.

Even the price of fishing is going up because nightcrawlers, a large variety of earthworm popular as bait, have gone scarce underground seeking "drier, moist habitats."

"Wholesale prices of nightcrawlers are the highest in the 46 years we've been in business," said Phil Koep, who runs a wholesale bait supply business in Clitherall, Minn. By July 4, he said, the wholesale price of nightcrawlers will have doubled from a year ago.

bon-carbon, or carbon composite, U.S. authorities said.

The material is a low-radar-visibility compound used in missile nose cones and stealth aircraft, investigators said.

It's a carbon material that's been heated twice at high temperatures and is extremely resistant to heat," said Dan Brown, a spokesman for Aerojet, the company that employed Helmy. "It's an American technology that shouldn't be given to foreign nations."

Levi said Aerojet cooperated with federal agents conducting the investigation, which he said is continuing.

Hundreds of pounds of the material was shipped to a Washington, D.C., building owned by the Egyptian government, investigators said.

Levi said the Scud B-100, a tactical missile apparently used in the Iraq-Iran war.

The alleged operation apparently began last year, headed overall by an Egyptian colonel based in Vienna, Levi said.

A criminal complaint filed here said employees of two American companies and the two colonels conspired to ship the items on an Egyptian C-130 military plane from Baltimore-Washington International Airport.

Under arrest were Helmy of El-Dorado Hills, Calif., a research engineer at Aerojet Soltec Propulsion Co. and a recognized specialist in rocket propulsion; James Huffman of Lexington, Ohio, the Midwest marketing representative of Teledyne, McCormick, Selph, a defense aerospace company based in Hollister, Calif.; and Helmy's wife, Albia Eltayeb Helmy.

The two Egyptian army colonels are Mohamed Abdella Mohamed of Baltimore and Youssef of St. Louisburg, Austria. Mohamed claimed diplomatic immunity and wasn't arrested. Justice Department spokesman John Russell said Youssef wasn't in custody either, but Levi said officials sought to interview him in Austria.

Ethics specialist argues that no absolute standards exist

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — There is no easy, absolute set of ethical standards for elected officials to follow, says Paul Bauman, government ethics specialist with the University of Colorado in Boulder.

"Ethics is a swamp. There's no question about it," he said.

But Deputy Attorney General Dan Chadwick says there are certain pitfalls city officials must absolutely avoid, such as nepotism and profiting from public contracts.

"Public office is a public trust," he said. "If you are doing the public's business, you have no business doing your own private business."

Bauman and Chadwick discussed ethical issues Thursday during the Association of Idaho Cities annual conference at Coeur d'Alene.

Since late 1985, Chadwick has received hundreds of inquiries about state laws pertaining to local governments. Many inquiries come from newly elected or appointed officials.

When an official is told he or she has violated ethics laws, the official sometimes takes the news as a personal attack, Chadwick said.

"Ethics is probably the most difficult area for any public official," he said.

From a legal standpoint, a difficult area in Idaho code may be the state's bidding laws. Chadwick said the laws are not as strict or tight as they could be.

"There are ways around these laws," he said.

The bidding laws have so many gray areas that local attorneys disagree on their meaning, and "even the (attorney general's) office sometimes is reluctant to take a stand," Idaho Falls City Councilman Wes Deist said.

As a result, Deist said he doubts that any city government has not broken a state bidding law at some time.

Chadwick said he agrees, judging by the questions he receives. And no matter how carefully the bidding laws are explained or discussed, problems still develop.

"In small-town Idaho, it's done every day of the week," he said.

The bidding laws can be changed either through the courts or the Legislature. Legislative change may be the easiest route, and Chadwick suggested that city officials should lobby lawmakers or the AIC to change bidding laws.

Under Idaho law, a city can reject a low bidder, or all bidders, he said.

"If they (a low bidder) are not a responsible bidder, you can reject it," Chadwick said.

Five-alarm fire

Firemen battle a five-alarm fire on the roof of the Victoria Court Apartments in Seattle, Wash., on Friday. The blaze spread a cloud of black smoke over the Seattle Center area. There were no injuries reported in the fire, but many residents of the 50-year-old building were evacuated. Cause of the fire was under investigation.

Judge vacates execution stay

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal judge has vacated a stay of execution for William Andrews, condemned to die for his role in the 1974 torture-murders of three people.

The order, issued Thursday by U.S. District Judge David K. Windsor, does not have a significant impact on Andrews' appeal, which is now before the Utah Supreme Court.

The order to vacate was necessary to conform with the U.S. Supreme Court's refusal in April to reconsider its earlier refusal to hear the 14-year-old appeal.

Andrews and co-defendant Pierre Dale Selby, airmen stationed at Hill Air Force Base, were convicted of murdering two men and a woman during a robbery of the Ogden Hi Fi Shop. The victims were forced to drink caustic drain cleaner and one was raped before being shot in the head. Two others also were tortured, but survived.

Rodeo fans ask for action

NAMPA (AP) — Officials of the Snake River Stampede have concluded that rodeo fans want more action, not big-name entertainment.

After 37 years of featured performers, next month's rodeo will be all action and no country-western singers and other performers, says Bill Deal, president of the board of directors.

When the rodeo runs July 19-23, the entertainment will come from a trick riding and a buffalo specialty act.

"For many years our fans have asked us to drop the special entertainment and give them more rodeo action," Deal said. "We held on to tradition simply for the sake of tradition."

Concerns about plant ease

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Kootenai County officials, back from a tour of aluminum processing plants in Colorado and Tennessee, say concerns over a similar proposed plant near Hauser Lake are easing.

Commissioners Evelyn Adams and Bob Hauckson and deputy prosecutor Ken Bennett visited a used beverage can recycling plant in Fort Lupton, Colo., and two other facilities in Tennessee.

The trip was suggested by representatives of International Mill Service Inc., a Philadelphia-based company that hopes to build an aluminum remelting plant near Hauser Lake.

"I've been the most negative about IMS building their plant and I think the trip was enlightening," Adams said. "I have less concerns now if we can make sure the company follows certain guidelines."

Rail car shortage looming

BOISE (AP) — Because of problems caused by the Midwest drought, Idaho's wheat growers and dealers have been advised to prepare for a serious shortage of rail cars to ship wheat this fall.

Growers have been advised to start planning alternatives, such as on-farm storage.

"Supplies of rail cars for movement of Idaho grains have been inadequate to meet our shipping demand for much of this and last year," said Mark Samson, Idaho Wheat Commission administrator.

"Even a slight worsening in this regard is a very serious threat," he said.

The Wheat Commission received a report on the shortage from its transportation specialist, Robert Henry, Boise.

Falcon makes first flight

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Precocious, one of the city's baby peregrine falcons, has made his first flights, moving to different perches on the Hotel Utah and making an unsuccessful attempt at landing on the side of the Mormon Church Office Building.

"He looked pretty good for his first flight," said Bob Walters, a raptor biologist for the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources.

Precocious' brother, Rebel, has not tried to fly yet. Instead, he remained near the nest on a 10th floor ledge of the Hotel Utah, flapping his wings and walking along nearby ledges.

Precocious took off from the nest Thursday and flew to a perch near the front of the hotel. He then flew to a ledge on the back of the hotel.

Biologists were pleased with his flying skills. He maintained his altitude on both flights and made two successful landings.

'Centennial milk' on market

BOISE (AP) — The dairy sections of Idaho supermarkets got more colorful Friday as officials unveiled a "Centennial milk" with packaging bearing the popular burgundy, white and blue Centennial logo.

"Our association, with its rich Idaho heritage, is delighted to be a major supporter of the celebration," said Frank Krone, general manager of the Dairyman's Creamery Association.

Krone, Albertson's Chief Executive Officer Warren McCain and other officials toasted the state's first perishable centennial product in champagne glasses filled with milk.

The news conference kicking off the milk, which will be distributed by Associated Dairies, was held in Albertson's largest Idaho store — the site of Joe Albertson's first market. Shoppers worked their way through television cameramen, microphone wiring and reporters.

Workers ratify contracts

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Two of three companies with workers at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory have ratified new union contracts, and a third has reached tentative agreement.

Members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers who work for EG&G Idaho ratified a new three-year contract Thursday. At the same time, negotiators for OCAW and Argonne National Laboratory-West reached a tentative agreement. A ratification vote is set for Tuesday.

That vote will wrap up negotiations between three INEL contractors and the OCAW that brought the site to the brink of what would have been its first strike since 1977.

INEL is a federal nuclear research center in eastern Idaho.

Child abuse must stop, Andrus says

BOISE (AP) — Many Idahoans feel not enough is being done to curb child abuse.

In the last two years, Gov. Cecil Andrus says of about 500 child abuse cases, only about one in 10 results in incarceration for the offender.

"Somehow, the abuser must answer for their crime," Andrus told a news conference here Friday. "Something must be done. Our overriding concern is that children must be protected."

The governor presented about 1,000 pages of testimony from a recent series of statewide hearings on child abuse problems. The material went to the "Children at Risk" task force he appointed.

After a Sept. 13-15 meeting in Boise, the task force, headed by Ray Winterowd, will recommend to the governor proposals to change and strengthen state laws on child abuse.

Winterowd is chairman of the Division of Families and Children of the state Department of Health and Welfare.

"The testimony presented at the child abuse hearings included some very significant and valid proposals for change in our system," Andrus said. "These proposals, repeated by former victims and their families, and by professionals in the field, certainly deserve consideration by the task force."

The governor said he was concerned that so few child abusers ever go to jail or prison. He said copies of the recommendations would go out to judges, legislators and prosecutors.

"Plea-bargaining is being abused in the courthouses of the state," he said.

The governor's office proposed a package of child abuse bills in the last legislative session. Most were defeated amid acrimony over whether prosecutors and legislators had been consulted in the preparation.

Andrus said if he failed to consult with everyone last time, "it was unintentional."

But the bottom line is that something needs to be done to strengthen protection for children, no matter who gets the credit, he said.

More than 500 people attended 12 hearings in the spring.

"The sheer volume of testimony indicates that Idaho citizens are vitally interested in solving the problems of child abuse and neglect," Andrus said.

Winds push wildfire past fire lines

DEADWOOD SUMMIT (AP) — Gusty winds pushed a wildfire over two bulldozed fire lines Friday afternoon in an area where the drought has left tinderbox conditions.

"We are ferrying firefighters to the scene as fast as we can," Boise National Forest information officer Frank Carroll said.

Carroll said winds fanned the fire about 3:30 p.m., causing it to jump firelines in two places and "move into the countryside."

A combination of drought, hot temperatures and low humidity "have given us August conditions in June," he said. "We're expecting the worse."

Before the latest setback, the fire had scorched more than 60 acres a mile south of the area in Idaho hardest hit by wildfires in 1987.

Carroll said there was no estimate on the latest acreage consumed.

About 100 firefighters had been battling the blaze sparked by lightning Wednesday.

Carroll said another 100 were being called in, including two "hot shot" units from Oregon and Utah, and a special fire management team was being assembled.

The blaze was burning 20 miles southeast of Cascade in the Boise National Forest. It was within a mile of the site of last year's Deadwood Summit fire, which scorched 63,000 acres of timberland.

The fire "is the largest fire we've had this early in the year since 1979" when the state was hit by one of the worst fire seasons on record, Carroll said.

Firex 88 ends for 14,000 soldiers

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — With a parting cannonade, FIREX 88 — the largest field artillery exercise since World War II — came to an end for 14,000 soldiers in western Utah's desert.

All the howitzers in the 12 artillery battalions participating in the exercise were fired in unison Thursday afternoon as a final example of coordinated firepower, said Capt. Tom Wharton of the Utah Army National Guard.

Army and Air Force Guard units, along with active Army and Air Force units and Army reservists from 20 states, took part in the exercise which began June 6.

Wharton said military experts now will assess the exercise.

However, Gen. James Miller, 1 Corps commander and FIREX's chief officer, said early indications are that the exercise was a success.

"Our initial exchange with the leadership of the Army and the National Guard indicated that everyone was very, very pleased," he said. "A lot of training of soldiers took place."

"My feeling is that they really got a lot of training for their buck. We hope we can repeat FIREX at a later date," Miller added.

All of the exercises primary goals were met, he said.

"The FIREX objectives generated a tremendous amount of interface with all the units," Miller said. "It brought together the whole I Corps family. It went very, very well. I'm pleased with the overall results."

He said the lessons learned from FIREX will be documented and used in future artillery exercises.

"Many things didn't go exactly as we wanted," Miller said. "We want to tighten up and train."

Miller said he was especially pleased with the exercise's safety record. There were no serious accidents.

Statistically, for an exercise of its size, FIREX could have been expected to have a potential of seven to 12 deaths, said Maj. Bruce Holley of the Utah National Guard's 144th Evacuation Hospital.

Divided court rules children do not have right to school transportation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A divided Supreme Court ruled Friday that children from poor families do not have a constitutional right to free bus transportation to and from school.

The 5-4 decision in a case from North Dakota has particular importance for people in rural areas. The ruling was denounced by the dissenters for denying hope and equal opportunity to the disadvantaged.

The court's majority, however, said North Dakota officials acted rationally and lawfully in permitting local school districts to charge bus fares.

SANDRA DAY O'CONNOR
Writes for court

—Restricted the power of federal judges to dismiss criminal charges when prosecutors violate a law requiring speedy trial of defendants. The 6-3 ruling reinstated the indictment in Seattle of a man accused of cocaine trafficking.

In other decisions—the court: —Limited severely states' authority to lower the electric rates public utilities charge as a result of agreements with federal regulators. The 6-3 ruling will cost Mississippi consumers $326.5 million.

—Voted 5-4 to uphold an Illinois man's murder conviction, ruling that its famous Miranda decision is sufficient to protect the rights of defendants questioned by police after they are indicted or otherwise formally charged.

—Ruled, 6-3, that state and federal officials may not be sued for monetary damages by people whose Social Security disability benefits were cut off unlawfully.

—By a 6-3 vote, limited the government's broad immunity from negligence lawsuits. The court reinstated a suit by a couple shot at a tank, off-duty Navy medic in Maryland.

lies must pay to get their children to school.

“A state's decision to allow local school boards the option of charging patrons a user fee for bus service is constitutionally permissible,” she said. “The Constitution does not require that such service be provided at all and it is difficult to imagine why choosing to offer the service should entail a constitutional obligation to offer it for free.”

—The ruling is in line with earlier court decisions upholding laws that treat the wealthy and poor differently. For example, the court has upheld the use of property taxes to support public schools even though children from less affluent communities may suffer. The court has said such laws are permissible if they serve a rational purpose.

But in a dissenting opinion Friday, Justice Thurgood Marshall said, “For the poor, education is often the only route by which to become full participants in our society. In allowing a state to burden the access of poor persons to an education, the court denies equal opportunity and discourages hope.”

Justices William J. Brennan, John Paul Stevens and Harry A. Blackmun also dissented.

North Dakota law provides free bus transportation to those living in districts that have reorganized to broaden their tax base and improve education. Only those districts that have not reorganized are allowed to charge parents for busing their children.

Pentagon will relax freeze on outside supply contracts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon said Friday it would relax a freeze on outside contracting for supplies and services during the last three months of the fiscal year.

Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV, in a memo to all Pentagon offices, said he would begin allowing some new contracts to be awarded for research, development and evaluation work and for consultant services on July 1.

But all other restrictions imposed last May in a money-saving move will remain in effect through the end of the fiscal year on Sept. 30, including a ban on purchases of office supplies, an end to overtime pay and limits on civilian hiring, Taft wrote.

Active-duty personnel and civilian employees also can forget collecting their Oct. 1 paychecks a day early just because Oct. 1 falls on a Saturday, Taft declared. The Pentagon doesn't want any extra outlays before the current fiscal year ends, he wrote.

“Managers throughout the department must take every available step, within the provisions of law, to hold fiscal 1988 outlays to the minimum achievable level and at the same time meet mission requirements and maintain a strong defense posture,” Taft wrote.

In authorizing a resumption of spending on research and development contracts and consultant services, Taft said he wanted “special consideration” to be given to small and minority business contractors and to companies that had been waiting, since May for payments.

The Pentagon's No. 2 executive said he still wanted some controls on the research and consultant contracts, however, specifying that “total obligations during any month of the fourth quarter may not exceed 75 percent of the average monthly obligations incurred to date.”

The ban on new purchases of office supplies and other equipment will continue to cover everything from magazine and newspaper subscriptions to TV sets, library materials, recreation equipment, lawnmowers and furniture, tools, paint, lumber, air conditioners and fork lifts, he said.

Also still prohibited is any spending on new leases for cars, office space or computer equipment.

The spending restrictions originally were promulgated by Taft to comply with a deficit-reduction compromise reached last November. That compromise was crafted to control government outlays — the amount of money actually paid out during the fiscal year.

That approach causes problems for the Defense Department, because it restricts most profits business based on what is known as budget authority — the amount of money that can be obligated, regardless of when it's going to be spent.

For example, if Congress authorizes $100 million for the Navy to build a new ship, the Navy has $100 million in budget authority but might pay out only $10 million in outlays for work performed the first year.

That makes it difficult for the Pentagon to project precisely how much it will pay out in a fiscal year; a contractor might get more or less work done than originally expected.

Based on spending reports compiled in March and April, the Pentagon was paying out dollars such that outlays by the end of the year would have totaled $2.5 billion more than the authorized $277.3 billion. The May restrictions were designed to slow that spending rate.

Helicopter ditched on patrol

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Army special operations helicopter was forced to ditch in the Persian Gulf after encountering mechanical problems, Pentagon officials disclosed Friday.

The Thursday night incident, the first involving one of the secret MH-6 copters in the gulf, occurred during a routine patrol and did not involve any hostile fire, officials said.

Both crewmen escaped injury and were picked up later in good condition, the Pentagon said. The helicopter sank.

Col. Keith Schneider, a Pentagon spokesman, said the incident occurred shortly before midnight local time, or around 4 p.m. EDT Thursday. He identified the craft only as a U.S. helicopter operating in the central Persian Gulf on a routine surveillance mission.

But other officials, who asked not to be identified, said the helicopter was an MH-6 flying from one of two large barges moored in the northern Persian Gulf.

The barges are used to support mine-sweeping vessels as well as a number of special-operations aircraft and commando teams, and also as bases for surveillance missions to keep track of Iranian gunboats. The Navy and Defense Department officially refuse to acknowledge their existence.

Thieves take Star Wars computer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Department and FBI investigators are probing the theft of a small personal computer from the Star Wars offices in the Pentagon, a tightly controlled security area.

Pentagon officials who asked not to be identified said Friday the theft of the privately owned computer occurred two months ago and appeared to be “an inside job.”

The theft did not compromise any classified programs, but was troubling because of the emphasis placed on physical security by the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization, the Pentagon unit responsible for the Star Wars anti-missile program, the sources added.

Major Bill O'Connell, a Pentagon spokesman, said in a statement that “one privately owned stand-alone personal computer was stolen from offices within the SDIO's Pentagon complex in early April.”

O'Connell declined to elaborate, but a source said the theft occurred over the weekend of April 9 and 10 and involved a Commodore personal computer owned by a “mid-level manager” in the kinetic energy program.

Vanderham requests 2nd permit for dairy

By ADRIENNE TOOMEY
Times-News writer

JEROME — Kenneth Vanderham's struggle for permission to operate a 600-cow dairy west of Jerome came full circle Thursday night when he petitioned the Jerome County Board of Commissioners for a second special-use permit.

"I feel like we're in a soap opera," said Gene Fredericksen, Vanderham's lawyer. "We're standing in the same spot telling the same story as last year."

The County Commission originally granted Vanderham a special-use permit in August. However, angry residents living adjacent to Vanderham's dairy sued the commission, arguing that the farm violates a County Zoning Ordinance amendment requiring dairies to be 1,000 feet from residential property.

Fredericksen maintained that the amendment is not valid and does not apply to Vanderham's farm.

Amid much controversy in an April hearing, 5th District Court Judge Daniel Meehl ordered Vanderham to return to the County Commission for a second permit, saying he lacked information on the setback point.

The game may have been the same at Thursday's hearing, but the stakes were higher. Since the first permit was granted, Vanderham has completed construction of his dairy. If the commission refuses to grant a special-use permit, Vanderham said he will be forced into bankruptcy.

"I have an awful lot of money invested," Vanderham said at Thursday's hearing. "If this goes down, a lot of other heads will roll, too. Banking institutions are involved. My dad and uncle's farm in California is involved."

The dairy's opposition claimed that Vander-ham's losses should not be a factor in the commission's decision because he was warned that his special-use permit was being questioned.

In response, Fredericksen testified that he did not receive a letter stating that Vanderham was "acting in peril" until Feb. 16. By this time, construction already had begun.

"The only reason he purchased the property and built on it is because you gave him permission," Irene Vandervegt, a dairy farmer and United Dairywomen of Idaho board member, told the commission. "It's not fair ... to turn him down now."

Opponents are also angry because Vanderham has begun moving cows onto the property even though they believe he is under court order to refrain from doing so.

Fredericksen testified that the court order is inapplicable because the Jerome County Board of Commissioners, not Vanderham, was originally named as a party to the suit.

Thursday's meeting was relatively subdued compared to previous hearings involving Vanderham's case. While 50-100 people packed into the Jerome County district courtroom during earlier hearings, only 30 came Thursday evening.

The low turnout was explained by resident Martha Martin, who said, "We're few in numbers because, like you guys, we're sick and tired of this."

Despite the relatively meager turnout, familiar issues were rehearsed with vigor. Vanderham's neighbors expressed concern about flies, odor, bright night lights and ground water pollution.

"I feel we've been violated," said Marianne Truscott, a resident who opposes the dairy. Truscott testified that she closes her windows because odors from existing dairies drift into her home.

In response, Vanderham cited his previous track record as a dairyman in California. "I know of no other way to do it but the best way," he said. "I learned the best way. I had the best teachers."

Idaho's economy also surfaced as a hot issue. Vanderham's supporters testified that the dairy industry provides Magic Valley with jobs and tax revenue.

"We're falling to remember, no pun intended, who butters our bread," said Fredericksen. "We are all directly or indirectly dependent on the dairy industry."

Vanderham's opposition maintained that they are not anti-dairy. "We eat cheese and drink milk just like the rest of you," said Martin. "That's not the issue here."

The County Board of Commissioners will decide whether to grant Vanderham a second special-use permit within the next two weeks, said County Commissioner George Andrus.

Judge releases key witnesses

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A judge ordered two key witnesses in the first-degree murder case against Jesse Ray Jagers released from jail Friday after they were formally interviewed by prosecutors.

James Langham and James Williams, who allegedly bought a car from the 18-year-old Jagers shortly after the murder of Virginia Westergren, had been held in jail on $100,000 witness bonds.

"They haven't been fighting this at all," said J. Scott James, Twin Falls County deputy prosecutor. "The jail administrators say they've been very cooperative."

Langham, 31, and Williams, 34, were formally interviewed by prosecutors earlier this week. The interviews, called depositions, were also a reason James asked 5th District Judge Melvin C. Edwards to release the two men.

A deposition can be used to lock in testimony from witnesses before trial. James said prosecutors "didn't know what they were dealing with" when the two men were arrested in Las Vegas in possession of Westergren's Buick.

But now, the prosecutor's office is satisfied the two men will show at Jagers' preliminary hearing to testify, James said.

Twin Falls County filed grand theft charges against the two, then asked the court for $100,000 bonds on each to insure testimony at an upcoming preliminary hearing.

Prosecutors dropped the grand theft charges against Langham and Williams a week ago.

Jagers faces a first-degree murder, second-degree burglary and grand theft charges. Prosecutors say he stabbed Westergren to death May 13.

He sat quietly through the hearing, with shackles on his legs and arms. After the hearing, he stood up and smiled at a court security officer who motioned him to the courtroom's door.

Jagers' smile quickly faded when the leg shackles cut his first step short.

His preliminary hearing is scheduled for July 8.

Williams and Langham said they met Jagers in Las Vegas a couple days after Westergren's death. Langham, who said he's a mechanic from Norco, Calif., said in his deposition he met Jagers when Jagers asked him for a cigarette May 15.

Langham said he called Westergren's house several times May 15 — he got the number off the car's registration — to see if the car was stolen. He got no answer. Langham said he also called Las Vegas police that day, but they said there was no warrant on the car.

Finally, on May 16, Langham said he called the police again and found out there was a warrant on the car.

By then, Williams had met Langham, according to the depositions. After Langham's phone call, the two left their motel in the car.

"About five or six police cars pulled us over," Williams said in his deposition.

Langham said in his deposition Jagers never made any statement indicating he was involved in a murder.

Williams said he recognized Jagers' photos at the deposition because Jagers' smile "looks like that kid on Gentle Ben," a 1970s television show.

Buhl, Jerome districts call in mediator

Trustees declare an impasse

By BRAD BOWLIN
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Teacher contract negotiations in Buhl are continuing down a rocky but familiar path this summer.

Federal mediator Tom Curdie has been called in for the third time in five years to help the teachers and school board reach an agreement.

Curdie will study the positions of both sides and then make recommendations to the negotiators on Monday.

He was brought in after Buhl trustees voted unanimously earlier this month to reject the latest proposal from the teachers and declare talks at an impasse.

If Curdie's efforts fail, a fact-finding team will be chosen by the Buhl Education Association and the school board to further research the problem and make recommendations.

"At issue is BEA's request for a two-percent hike in the base salary, to $15,300 from $15,000.

In addition, the BEA has asked that a physical education instructor be hired for the elementary school.

That position was eliminated two years ago during a reduction in force.

While the board has agreed in its latest proposal to hire the instructor, the trustees have refused a base salary increase.

Buhl Superintendent Gus Spiropoulos said that a two-percent increase in the base salary would result in an actual increase of 4.5 percent for many teachers as they moved up on the district's progressive salary schedule.

BEA negotiator Helen Brown said those figures only hold true for newer teachers. Those with the most experience have already reached the top of the 15-step salary schedule and would not get the annual 2.5 percent increase, she said. Twenty-two of the district's 77.5 teachers are at or near the top of the schedule, she added.

The district maintains that the Fund availability stalls talks

By BRAD BOWLIN
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — A federal mediator has been called in to help jump-start stalled contract talks between Jerome teachers and the school board.

During a bargaining session earlier this month, the district's negotiating team suggested bringing in the mediator, and the teachers agreed, Jerome Education Association negotiator Jack Peavey said.

Peavey said that, while an impasse was not declared, neither side had changed its position significantly since talks began in April. He said talks would not resume until the federal mediator, Salt Lake City-based Tom Curdie, contacts the two sides to set a date. Curdie will consider the positions of both sides and make non-binding recommendations in an attempt to settle the conflict.

The amount of money available for teacher salaries and benefits is the major stumbling block in the talks.

The teachers have asked for an overall increase of $216,000 in teacher salary increments and insurance benefits. The district offered $77,000, representing annual pay scale increments for all teachers, as well as $30,000 to be used for benefits.

Peavey said he was optimistic about chances for a settlement going into the June 8 meeting, but came away disappointed. "I thought we had a settlement," he said. "But then I realized we were talking about apples and oranges."

Peavey said both sides had agreed to a one-percent increase on the pay scale before realizing that each side was using a different scale on which to base that increase.

Jerry Gates and Randy Behanion, the two professional negotiators hired by the Idaho School Boards Association to represent the district, were unavailable for comment.

Jerome man seeks damages of $100 million

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — From his table in a Cassia County courtroom, Jerome resident Michael D. Dahmer could look his opponent's lawyer square in the eye.

Through glasses permanently perched halfway down his nose, Dahmer could see attorney Jim Pristelski, from the Schaumburg, Ill., office of Motorola Communications and Electronics Inc.

Motorola, Communications is a wholly owned subsidiary of Motorola Inc., a conglomerate with sales of $5.9 billion in 1986. With those sales, Motrolora could buy all the real estate in the taxing area of the Jerome School District 21 times.

Dahmer is the primary stockholder of Systems Associates Inc., a small Jerome company operating out of his home northwest of Jerome.

Dahmer says Motorola stole one of his ideas, known in engineering terms as a digitally encrypted voice radio-telephone system. "That means it scrambles radio-telephone talk."

At first, Dahmer said he wanted Motorola to stop telling what he calls his invention and to pay him at least $5 million in damages.

Now he wants to amend his original complaint and increase his damages to a minimum of $100 million.

After bouncing around federal courts and through a couple of lawyers for a couple years, Dahmer settled into the suit Cassia County courtroom Friday with his attorney David Thompson of Jerome, 5th District Judge George Granata and two lawyers from Motorola.

He listened to the legal arguments two years and eight months after he wrote his own complaint without help from an attorney and handed it to the Jerome County clerk.

He was why Motorola to Warren Jones say there is lister to the case dismissed. Jones is a Boise attorney.

Burley couple waits for justice to come

The Associated Press

BURLEY — It has been a year of frustration and nagging sorrow for Harry and Betty Maselter of Burley.

On June 15, 1987, their daughter, Susan Quas, 35, died from a single gunshot wound to the head in her West Valley City home.

Police believe she was murdered.

Her husband John Quas, 37, told police he was showering when he heard a gunshot. He said he left the bathroom to find his wife dead in a pool of blood on the living room floor. John Quas' 44-caliber handgun was beside her.

However, West Valley City detectives said they found the shower dry and that Quas was dirty that evening. Furthermore, gunpowder burns on Mrs. Quas' body and the nature of the entry wound were inconsistent with suicide, according to police and medical examiners' reports.

But 5th Circuit Judge Eleanor VanSiver refused to bind Quas over for trial on the second-degree murder charge during a preliminary hearing, saying the testimony presented seemed "just as consistent with suicide as homicide."

West Valley City Police Detective Ron Edwards was surprised by the judge's ruling. But he believed the case against Quas was solid and vowed to review the evidence and refile the charges.

That was a year ago.

June 15, 1988, was an anniversary of loss for the Maselters.

"It was a terrible day. We tried to put it (Susan's death) out of our minds but, naturally, you relive it," her father said.

Edwards said prosecutors were waiting for one more bit of evidence from a crime laboratory before they could refile charges, but Harry Maselter has heard similar stories for 12 months.

"It's so frustrating to hear the same thing over and over," he said.

Since the death of his daughter, Maselter — a 68-year-old retired office manager for a potato processing plant — has made more than 100 calls to police, prosecutors and crime laboratories in Utah, trying to keep the case alive. He has made the 400-mile round trip from Burley to Salt Lake City and back 40 times.

"I've done a lot of running and a lot of talking to try and get this case to a jury," he said. "I'm a pest, but I vowed I wouldn't let this go by."

Meanwhile, his daughter's body — still officially "evidenced" — remains in the Salt Lake area. Maselter would like to bring the body back to Idaho for cremation, "but everything is in limbo," he said.

"It's driving my wife and I crazy," he said. "We've got to drive 200 miles just to put a flower on her grave."

Maselter says he doesn't understand the holdup. "It tears at the heart of the victim's family. It flies in the face of morality," he said.

"There were only two people in that house. Either she committed suicide

Mecham wants conviction overturned

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former Gov. Evan Mecham said Friday he will go to court in an effort to overturn his impeachment conviction and return to office.

The former governor, in an interview on KTSF-TV, also blasted Sen. John McCain, saying his fellow Arizona Republican is dishonest and is not qualified to be vice president.

McCain, a first-term senator who called for Mecham's resignation in January, has been among those mentioned as a possible running mate for Vice President George Bush, the certain GOP nominee.

"No, John isn't qualified to be vice president," Mecham said. "He doesn't have the intelligence, he doesn't have the stature, he can't have the honesty, he doesn't have the character that it takes, and he certainly doesn't have the political foundation."

McCain was speaking in South Dakota on Bush's behalf Friday night and was not immediately available for comment. Both Mecham and McCain are members of the Arizona delegation to the national GOP convention in New Orleans Aug. 15-18.

Mecham said he will not seek any political office this year but he will go to court in an effort to have his April 4 impeachment conviction overturned.

He was the first U.S. governor to be impeached and removed from office in 59 years.

"We think that it's important to challenge this," Mecham said, adding that leaving his conviction unchallenged would leave all public officials open to impeachment.

"Who knows? You may see me back on the ninth floor (the governor's office) before the next election," the former governor said.

Mecham was convicted by the Senate on impeachment charges of misusing $80,000 from the governor's protocol fund and trying to thwart an investigation of an alleged death threat.

The former governor would not say if he will seek the governorship in 1990 whether or not his challenge to the impeachment conviction succeeds.

Gov. Rose Mofford, the Democratic former secretary of state who succeeded Mecham, said earlier Friday she plans to run for re-election in 1990. Her spokesman, Vada Mangener, said later, "She is here and intends to stay."

The former governor for the rest of this term "unless a court rules otherwise."

The governor also said he had considered running this year against Democratic Sen. Dennis DeConcini or for the state Legislature, but decided he would rather work through his political action committee to defeat some incumbent Republican lawmakers.

Republican Keith DeGreen already has announced he will run against DeConcini, who Mecham contended is vulnerable because of his overall voting record.

Utah asks Soviets to join in parade

MAGNA, Utah (AP) — Soviet arms inspectors who will monitor a missile plant here are likely to find the chill of official security warmed by a friendly invitation to join in a Fourth of July parade.

Local leaders like Roy Smith, a former fire chief and organizer of the holiday festivities, say most residents of this Salt Lake City suburb of 20,000 are untroubled by the prospect of a Soviet arrival around July 1.

"As far as we're concerned, if they want to come and join the parade, they're welcome," said Smith, a Magna resident since 1920 and a two-time visitor to the Soviet Union.

"But if they bring any Russian flags with them, they're going to have the Stars and Stripes alongside," he said Wednesday.

The Soviets are coming to Utah to watch Hercules Inc. for shipment of Pershing II missiles banned under the Intermediate-range Nuclear Arms Treaty.

A U.S. team will be stationed at Volknisk, Russia, to make sure no SS-20 missiles are assembled there.

An advance team was expected Saturday to make sure that living arrangements for the Soviet crew of up to 30 inspectors are complete.

The Soviets, who will live in a Salt-Lake apartment complex until their compound near Hercules is completed, cannot travel outside the 30-mile radius of the plant and will always be accompanied by a U.S. escort.

"But despite the precautions, there are skeptics who fear for the security of Hercules and dozens of other nearby defense-related businesses."

"That's my main concern," said Richard Bogan, a freelance photographer, truck driver and self-described conservative who worries about espionage.

"The Utah economy isn't the best in the world... there's some hungry people out there," he said. "I could happen very easily. There's no doubt in my mind."

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, a member of Select Committee on Intelligence, shares Bogan's concerns. He objects to what he calls a lack of parity between the Soviet and U.S. inspection processes.

Hatch contends that while the Salt Lake Valley is home to some 60 defense-related businesses, Volknisk has only a nearby tank factory and possibly a nuclear production plant, said an aide who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"We really don't have that much to gain," he said. "Our people will probably just get a lot of exercise using snowshoes or skis."

O'Neill lands in Washington
TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Darren Dee O'Neill, a suspect in the death of Liz Elizabeth Szubert of Twin Falls, has been returned to Washington after dropping his fight against extradition from Louisiana.

O'Neill, a one-time member of the FBI's 10 Most Wanted, was returned to Tacoma on Tuesday. He is charged with first-degree murder in the 1987 death of Robin Smith of Des Moines, a suburb near Tacoma and Seattle, and also is being investigated in connection with two other deaths, including Szubert's.

O'Neill, 28, had been held in the Jefferson Parish jail in suburban New Orleans on an auto theft charge.

On Monday, District Judge James I. Cannella ordered O'Neill extradited to Tacoma. His lawyer, Randall Hafner, filed a Louisiana 5th Circuit Court appeal which was denied. O'Neill dropped his opposition to extradition Tuesday.

O'Neill was arrested in Florida using the name John Moyaux and was returned to Louisiana where state police identified him in a fingerprint check.

Authorities said they also want to question O'Neill about slaying in the Bellingham area.

Idaho officials also are expected to question O'Neill about the death of Szubert, 23, whose body was found near La Grande, Ore., last June.

The First Resort Co. Inc. of Sun Valley purchased the plaza, located next to Ernst Home Center & Nursery on Blue Lakes Boulevard, from Westwood Saving & Loan of Los Angeles.

The new owners plan to rename it The American Plaza, and redesign both the interior and exterior soon, said L. James Koutnik, president of Coldwell Banker Western Realty, the firm that handled the sale.

The plaza had been on the market for about eight months. Westwood decided to sell because the center is too far from their operations, Koutnik said.

The mini-mall is currently 80 percent occupied. Three new tenants have moved in in the last three months, he said.

Tom T. Hall performance set
The Times-News

RUPERT — Country-Western music star Tom T. Hall has been signed to perform this year at the Minidoka County Fair.

"We got the contract yesterday," Fair Board Chairman Wade Zollinger said Friday.

Tickets will be $8 for reserved, $7 for grandstand and $6 for bleacher seats, Zollinger said. By the end of this week the fair board should know where tickets will be sold, he said.

Hall will perform at 8 p.m., Aug. 1, a Monday. Patsy Sled, who performed at the Rupert Elks Club in April, also has been signed for the show. Zollinger said.

The Minidoka Fair is Aug. 1-6 this year.

More roads buckle in heat

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Unseasonably hot temperatures continue to take their toll on Interstate 15 in northern Utah, where a second chunk of freeway has buckled in the heat and a third section was showing signs of stress.

The Interstate "blowup," the second in as many days, occurred on northbound I-15 in northern Weber County about 4:30 p.m. Wednesday as early summer temperatures once again soared into the mid-90s.

Traffic continued to move smoothly in the remaining two lanes, unlike a similar blowup Tuesday on I-15 north of the Riverdale Road interchange, which paralyzed rush-hour traffic and forced police to detour motorists for about five hours.

Meanwhile, Utah Department of Transportation crews spotted another "blowup" pavement "beginning to buckle on southbound I-15 east of Sunset and began making cuts in the freeway surface to relieve stress on the concrete.

"It hasn't blown yet, but we saw it building," said Lynn Millard, District 1 maintenance supervisor for UDOT. "We'll be making cuts in all three lanes, so there will be some minor traffic interference."

Judge orders Utahn to be held without bail

DENVER (AP) — A federal magistrate has ordered a Utah man to be held without bail after he was arrested near Limon in a car that contained explosives and several machine guns.

U.S. Magistrate Jill Clifton said Thursday there is a substantial risk that Jorge Alejandro of Kayville, Utah, might jump bail because he has used a number of different identities.

Alejandro is facing federal charges of illegal possession of firearms with serial numbers that were altered or removed. The felony count is punishable by a maximum of 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Colorado State Patrol trooper Joseph Cullyford stopped Alejandro on Interstate 70 near Limon June 18 because his clean Volkswagen had dirty Oregon license plates, which later proved to have been registered to a truck.

At Thursday's court hearing, Pat Lewis, a special agent with the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, testified he was summoned to the scene near Limon after Alejandro told the state trooper that the car contained automatic weapons and was wired to explode.

Officers found a number of firearms in the vehicle, including an M-60 machine gun, a fully automatic M-16 rifle, a MAC-10 submachine gun and silencer, two Smith & Wesson machine guns and a .22-caliber Ruger pistol with silencer.

A check of federal firearms records showed that none of the guns was registered to Alejandro, according to the federal complaint.

Officials since have learned that Alejandro used the name of Larry Ramos when he worked at Omni Engineering at Overland Park, Kan.

Motorola

Besides that, Thompson said, the lawsuit is exceedingly complex and requires a lot of investigation.

"It takes a lot of time. That's life, that's how it is," Thompson said.

Meanwhile, Thompson was asking Granata to amend Dahmer's original complaint to include new charges.

Thompson claims Motorola not only stole trade secrets from Dahmer, but interfered with an arrangement Dahmer had with the city of Sun Valley.

Dahmer "pleges in the amended complaint that it happened like this: Dahmer ordered some equipment from Motorola. He planned to install his device on Motorola's equipment and sell it. One of his potential customers was Sun Valley.

However, he says Motorola's equipment didn't work up to its own specifications. So he sent it back to the company for analysis and repair. That's how Motorola got the secrets behind its digital encryption device.

Meanwhile, Motorola "deliberately and methodically" frustrated Dahmer's contract with Sun Valley. The city eventually cancelled its contract with Dahmer.

Granata took both Motorola's request to dismiss the case and Dahmer's request to amend the complaint under advisement.

Edwards says suicide is out of the question.

Harry Maseiter believes a jury, not VanSiver, should decide whether his daughter's death was murder or suicide.

"What infuriated me is she (VanSiver) became judge and jury," he said.

Susan Gans was a postal carrier who reported John Quas, a former singer and lead guitarist in a rock band, for most of their three-year marriage; her father said.

Quas' dependence upon his wife was a source of contention between the two, and in the last five weeks of her life, they fought often, Maseiter said.

But suicide was not consistent with his daughter's character, he said.

"She was a tough little fighter who wouldn't take anything from anyone. And she was too much of a fighter to commit suicide," he said.

teacher proposal would mean an extra $96,000 for teacher salaries.

Brown argued, however, that $45,000 of that will be the salaries of two new teachers, leaving just more than $50,000 used to increase existing teacher salaries.

"That's where we differ," Spiropoulos said. "Just what additional amount of money is going to go to teacher salaries."

Brown said the BEA proposal is fair and pointed to statistics provided by the Idaho Education Association that rank Buhl teachers 70th out of 115 schools in the state in terms of pay hikes.

Both sides said they hope for a quick settlement.

Spiropoulos said current talks are repeatedly raised teacher salaries since 1983-84 when the base salary stood at $12,800. He said that four years ago a second-year teacher with a bachelor's degree and 18 hours of extra training earned $13,569. Last year that teacher made $17,830 - an increase of more than 30 percent.

He said figures over the same time span indicate that experienced teachers received nearly identical pay hikes.

Idahoan labors for love in Nauvoov

Continentials have spread fellowship 21 years

Continentials offer devotional concert

TWIN FALLS - The Continentals, a Christian musical group, will present a concert on Wednesday at 7 p.m. at First Assembly of God Church. Featuring 24 vocalists and a 10-piece orchestra, the program will focus on themes of devotion and worship, integrating a variety of popular Christian songs, hymns, medleys and gospel music arrangements. The first part of the program comes from the books of I Corinthians and Hebrews in the Bible. The message is that Christians need to be determined to work together against all opposition and odds. The second part will concentrate on the worship of God. Now in their 21st year of existence, Continentals Singers and Orchestra will send 11 tours to perform in all 50 states and throughout the world. Each tour is made up of young people from all over the United States. For those interested in touring with the Continentals as vocalists, instrumentalists or technicians, auditions will be held after the concert.

NAUVOO, Ill. (AP) - Faithful members of the Mormon church have labored in this remote Mississippi River town for a quarter century to patch together broken reminders of their tumultuous history. The estimated $20 million restoration project in Nauvoov is nearing completion. The church announced earlier this month it would spend about $750,000 on one more major undertaking: restoration of the old jail nearby. Carthage, where church founder Joseph Smith and his brother Hyrum were killed in 1844. The jail is one of the most sacred spots for 6.5 million members of the Mormon faith worldwide. Its restoration begins as the church prepares for the 150th anniversary next year of its followers' settlement in Illinois.

"My orders are to make the jail the most beautiful site in Carthage," said Jim Taylor, who manages the Nauvoov restoration site. "This is where Joseph Smith sealed his testimony - he never denied it. And it's a sacred spot for our church. When the project is done, the restoration of Nauvoov will be over, for the most part," Taylor, 63, is an electrical engineer, a lawyer and recently retired president of Utah Power and Light, a company with $3 billion in assets and $1 billion in annual revenues. Taylor also is fairly typical of the people who work to Nauvoov each year to live and come to a labor of love: the restoration of a town that was envisioned as the home of the Mormon church.

"We are trying to tell the story of the life of Joseph Smith here and accentuate people with our church," Taylor said. "People come here for the historical experience of seeing a town as it looked in 1839. And they learn that we really aren't any different from them. For Mormons, it's a special place. We encourage all Mormons to come to Nauvoov and feel the spirit of the place. They can see the sacrifices made by their parents and grandparents. And they can actually see where Joseph Smith and the others walked and talked, lived and died."

About 100,000 visitors a year travel to Nauvoov and find an impressive assortment of restored brick and log homes, shops and other buildings in the town of about 1,100 residents 200 miles north of St. Louis. About 40,000 people a year also visit the jail at Carthage, 23 miles southeast of Nauvoov. Other townsfolk have followed the Mormons' lead and have restored a number of hotels, shops and businesses in the business district. Nauvoov offers quaint bed-and-breakfast inns, historic old hotels and novelty shops.

Petition attacks astrology

Los Angeles Times A Los Angeles broadcasting executive delivered 25,000 petitions from conservative Christians to the White House Monday, calling on President Reagan to "say no to astrology in the White House." George Otis, president of High Adventure Broadcasting, said in an interview that failure by the president and first lady Nancy Reagan to publicly reject astrology would "legitimize astrology and the occult and set our nation on a collision course with God." Reagan was in Toronto for the economic summit meeting, but a White House aide who received the suitcase full of signed petitions said that the Reagans were aware of the Bible-believing contingent's alarm over their consultation of horoscopes. Revelations of White House stargazing were included in a book published last month by former White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan, who wrote that Nancy Reagan had relied on advice from a San Francisco astrologer to influence the timing of the president's speeches and travel. The president has not denied consulting astrological charts but insisted that he has never made any policy or decisions based on them. The petition, copies of which were circulated to 40,000 individuals and 10,000 churches on Otis' High Adventure mailing list, says that "since astrology is strongly condemned in the Bible with attendant severe consequences, I ... as a Bible-believing, born-again Christian ... ask that you (Reagan) make a strong statement denouncing the American public and the world, it will no longer be tolerated in the White House." To base forecasts on the belief that the heavenly bodies form patterns that influence human activities "is a fundamental conflict with our Declaration of Independence and our Constitution," Otis declared in a telephone interview from Washington. "It's 'in God we trust' or 'in the stars we trust'; it's one or the other."

Church news

JEROME - Russell Fox will present a program of singing at 7 p.m. Sunday at Jerome Bible Baptist Church. He is a 1977 graduate of Pacific Coast Baptist Bible College in San Dimas, Calif. His ministry focuses on personal and corporate revival. Fox, along with his wife, Laurie, and their three daughters, travels year-round in local church ministries. Laurie is a writer and seminar speaker and has published booklets including "Innocent Beauty" and "Discipline for Young Children." The public is invited to attend the service.

SHOSHONE - Our Savior Lutheran Church of Twin Falls is sponsoring an Outreach Ministry in Shoshone. Persons interested in a Lutheran church in Lincoln County are invited to attend the first meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Shoshone United Methodist Church, Apple and C Streets. For information, call Diane Davis, 886-2990, or Pastor Fred Westerhold, 734-3774.

Episcopalians move to quell dissension

The Washington Post Episcopal Church has made up its mind that women may serve as priests and bishops, the Right Rev. Edmond L. Browning said, "we are trying to find a way in which we can continue to live together without forcing anyone to act against convictions." "There are those ... who are very much opposed to the ordination of women," Browning said. The Episcopal Church approved ordination of women as priests and bishops 12 years ago. No woman has been elected a bishop, although female candidates have made substantial showings in several diocesan elections, and church leaders believe that it is only a matter of time before one of the more than 700 women priests becomes a bishop. Thousands of traditionalists have left the church since the 1976 vote to ordain women. Others remain but continue to voice their beliefs that the Bible and church tradition argue against ordination of women. Browning is a strong supporter of women in the priesthood, said that "in no way are we backing up on the ordination of women. We are committed to the ministry of women and their full participation in the life of the church." But he said he was also concerned about providing a "pastoral response" to opponents of women in the ministry and developing "the kind of unity which allows participation in the life of the church of persons who don't agree with all aspects of the agenda." The proposal had its roots, he said, in a July 1986 meeting with five bishops opposed to women's ordination. "They had the feeling the church did not want their participation ... that it was trying to force them out of the church." Browning acknowledged that the proposal could compromise the authority of a female bishop and muddy the lines of authority between bishop and parish as spelled out in canon law.

NEW YORK - The presiding Episcopal bishop said Wednesday that deep dissension in the church over women's ordination necessitated a controversial proposal to allow parishes that oppose female bishops to bypass church laws on bishop-parish relations. The proposal, to be considered at the church's General Convention next month, would create "Episcopal Visitors" to carry out the normal functions of the bishop, such as visitations, confirmations and special eucharists, in such parishes. While there is "no question that the

The Drought of 1988: Low Rivers

Percent of average flow in May for selected rivers

Low water in the Mississippi slows business on riverfront

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A floating general store and fuel depot that ferries supplies to passing towboats has seen business dry up as the worst drought in 50 years has sporadically halted barge traffic on the shrinking Mississippi River.

"The boats are just sitting out there. The diesel fuel sales have all but come to a halt. Things have come to a standstill," said Robert Luttrell, executive vice president of Waterways Marine Inc. He estimated the shutdown has caused a 30 percent to 40 percent drop in business.

"We've never seen anything like this. We're working on every log ground," Luttrell said.

The mighty Mississippi is at an all-time low since records were first kept in 1872. It was closed to commercial traffic from Tuesday evening until Friday because the channel about six miles north of Memphis was six inches shy of the 9-foot depth needed to allow towboats and their barges to pass.

A 35-foot-wide dredge was sent in to clear the channel, and until it finished 56 towboats and their barges were parked along a 40-mile stretch of river around Memphis. The river has fallen so low, some boats had trouble finding trees near enough to the water for anchor lines.

"We should have all the backup cleared out of here by mid-day Sunday," Coast Guard Cmdr. Michael Donohoe said after the one-way channel was reopened, for south-bound traffic first.

When traffic was at a standstill, Waterways Marine was ferrying groceries, drinking water, newspapers and mail to the idled boats.

"It's a mess," said general manager David Cummings, an ex-river pilot whose first job was on a steam-powered, sidewheeled paddleboat. The problem here is there's no relief in sight as far as the rain forecasts go. This is a crisis.

In normal times, 30 to 50 towboats churn past Memphis daily, pushing barges loaded with wheat, corn, fertilizer, coal, steel, gas, jet fuel, oil, chemicals, cement, auto parts and other bulk goods.

Independent trader Bernard Dorman trades in the Chicago Board of Trade's corn pit

Drought dramatically boosts Chicago commodities trading

CHICAGO (AP) — High atop the Chicago Board of Trade building a statue of Ceres, the Roman goddess of grain, stared unflinchingly into the searing, cloudless sky. If anybody was praying to her for rain, she hadn't heard them.

Besides, the whispered plea of an Iowa corn farmer wouldn't stand a chance against the din from the floor of the world's oldest and largest grain exchange, where bushels of grain are traded in millions and blessings are counted in dollars.

The Board of Trade's grain floor, abandoned by many traders when prices and trading activity slumped in the mid-1980s, is filled these days with people looking to profit from the Midwestern drought.

As the drought withers crops across the Farm Belt, it ignites big rallies on commodity exchanges, where contracts for future delivery of grain grow more precious by the day.

"This is the only place I could think of where I can make a lot of money in a fairly short period of time," said Brad Whitacre, 21, an entry-level employee of a large investment firm who dreams of owning his own seat on the exchange.

Whitacre's job is to stand just outside the apparent chaos of the jam-packed corn futures pit and report to his boss on the moves of the market's major players. He has put his college education on hold for this opportunity, which was created by the dramatic rise in trading activity accompanying the drought-driven jump in prices.

"If you start out working at a corporation it takes years to work your way up to the top," Whitacre said. "But you come down here, after a couple of years you buy a seat, and you can be making a lot of money."

How much? "Your imagination's the only limit."

Whitacre isn't the only one lured to the Board of Trade by one of the biggest grain rallies in the exchange's 140-year history. The population of the grain trading floor has swelled more than 40 percent to nearly 2,000 in just the past two months, according to exchange figures.

Big trading companies such as Refco Inc. and C&D Commodities frequently trade thousands of contracts, totaling millions of bushels, during a session.

Perhaps a third of the traders are independents, called "locals" or

"scalpers," who trade for their own accounts and drift from pit to pit in search of action.

Return to civilian rule not expected in near future in Haiti

By JAMES RUPERT
The Washington Post

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Four days after Haitian army officers overthrew a limited experiment in civilian rule, two elements of Haiti's future seem clear: the army will be in power for a long time, and it will make little difference in the daily lives of the 5 million people who live here.

A return to civilian rule is clearly not on the agenda of military strongman Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, who took power in the Sunday night coup. Rather, struggles for influence in Haiti will be fought within the closed fraternity of its top military officers, who appeared to display internal rivalries during events surrounding the coup.

It was Namphy who headed an army-dominated junta that managed a halting two-year transition from the fall of dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier to the installation last February of civilian president Leslie Manigat. Even though Namphy kept controls on Manigat's power — such as a constitutional ambiguity over which man really commanded the armed forces — he now appears to view the civilian experiment as a mistake not to be repeated.

In taking power, Namphy has vilified Manigat and his corps of civilian managers as arrogant, power hungry and unpatriotic. He has not mentioned any idea that the army might eventually give up power, and his brother, Joseph, has said he "has no plan" to reinstall civilian rule.

The ouster of Manigat is more lamented by foreign diplomats, aid workers and Haitian businessmen than by the ordinary residents of this impoverished capital city.

Ousted Haitian President Leslie Manigat arrives in Miami. Members of the educated elite here mourn Manigat's passing not because he was instituting democracy. None of a dozen such people interviewed believed that he was. But Manigat and his appointees were seen as more competent managers than the military, with a more sincere desire to attack corruption and develop Haiti's prostrate economy.

Of scores of Haitians interviewed in the past year, virtually the only ones to dispute that the military officer corps is corrupt have been military officers. The most visible symbol of the problem is the indictment of a powerful colonel, Jean-Claude Paul, on drug-smuggling charges in the United States.

"We had no passion for Manigat. He may have been on the way to building his own dictatorship," said one European diplomat. "But he attacked the great problem of Haiti, namely corruption."

"In the Third World, you get used to the idea that 'normal' corruption will take away 20 percent of what the state spends," the diplomat said. "Here, they take 90 percent, and I'm not exaggerating very much."

"We had some hopes after Manigat surrounded himself with good technicians," said the dejected administrator of a Western economic aid program. "It was such a change to talk to people who shared our aims and wanted to develop the country," she said. "Now, in the ministries, we will again find army officers. ... I am giving up. I have a great affection for Haiti, but I am going home."

The impoverished Haitian majority in this city, whose view of the future focuses on more immediate needs of finding the food and money to sustain life, have responded to the coup with more of an embittered indifference.

"Just as there was no outpouring of support for or opposition to Manigat's installation after tainted elections in January, the coup has been invisible in the rutted streets of Port-au-Prince's slums. Daily business — such as carrying water from public faucet to home.

Palestinian stabs Jewish settler

JERUSALEM (AP) — A Palestinian stabbed an American-born Jewish settler in the back Friday in the occupied West Bank, and the bleeding man chased his assailant and shot him before collapsing.

Both men were hospitalized in fair condition. Some Jewish settlers demanded revenge and the settler blamed American inaction against Arab unrest for the attack.

An Israeli couple opened fire on young Palestinians who threw stones at their car in the West Bank city of Nablus. Israel television showed scenes of the bearded settler crouching behind his white Ford Transit auto, dashing out to fire at the Arabs and ducking back.

Hospital officials said seven Arabs were wounded, including two 8-year-old boys. The two Israelis were slightly injured. Another six Arabs suffered tear gas and rubber bullet injuries when soldiers arrived to disperse the crowd, an army spokesman said.

In Gaza City, protests broke out after weekly Moslem prayers. About 150 Palestinian youths burned fires and shouted "Allah akbar!" before troops dispersed them with rubber bullets and tear gas, witnesses said.

The stabbing victim, Yohan Chaiken, was attacked while shopping before the Jewish Sabbath in Hebron, about 20 miles south of Jerusalem. The 33-year-old computer programmer from Boston suffered stab wounds in the shoulder and lower back.

He pulled out a gun, chased his assailant about 50 yards and shot him in the elbow, said Zev Hever, a Jewish leader in Hebron. About 200 Israelis live among 80,000 Arabs in the city.

Chaiken ran another 300 yards to a building housing Jewish families, where he collapsed and received first aid before being flown by helicopter to Jerusalem's Hadassah Hospital, Hever said.

Pope condemns Nazism, but angers Austria's chief rabbi

MAUTHAUSEN, Austria (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Friday condemned Nazism on the site where 110,000 World War II prisoners died, but the pontiff angered Austria's chief rabbi by not making a specific reference to Jewish victims.

Earlier, John Paul urged Austrian Jewish leaders to accept the Vatican's call for a Palestinian homeland. The Roman Catholic leader did not respond to appeals for the Vatican to give full diplomatic recognition to Israel.

The pope also said Mass in Trausdorf near the Hungarian border for an estimated 80,000 people, most of them Yugoslavs and Hungarians. The emotional high point of the day came at Mauthausen, Austria's most infamous death camp, where an estimated 110,000 Nazi prisoners died or were murdered.

On his arrival, six U.S. Jews who were opposed to the pontiff's meeting Thursday with President Kurt Waldheim scuffled briefly with police outside the camp. The group was kept away from the pope, and it was not known if he saw the altercation.

"They threw me down, they used excessive force," Rabbi Avi Weiss of Riverdale, N.Y., told The Associated Press. Earlier in Vienna, police detained Nazi hunter Beate Klarsfeld and eight supporters. Ludwig Soswinski, the head of the camp survivors' group, introduced the pope to 11 camp survivors, including a Polish priest, Rev. Zdzislaw Lipinski.

The Polish-born pontiff, speaking outside a memorial chapel, said: "Here in Mauthausen were people who, in the name of a lunatic ideology, set into motion a whole machinery of contempt and hatred of others."

Delivering his remarks in German, the pontiff continued: "They tortured them, broke their bones, cruelly abused their bodies and their souls." Camp inmates were forced to work in nearby quarries, carrying huge granite blocks up 189 steps known as the "stairway of death."

Estonia asks to handle own affairs

MOSCOW (AP) — About 150,000 people rallied in the Baltic republic of Estonia last week to cheer radical demands for the Soviet Union to turn into a federation of republics with equal rights to manage their own affairs, according to a newspaper reaching Moscow on Friday.

The June 21 edition of Soviet Estonia quoted speakers at a rally organized by the National Front, a group of Communist Party members, and non-party members founded in April with official backing, as saying that Estonia's 32 delegates to next week's party conference in Moscow should return with an OK to handle the region into a sovereign republic.

Five of the delegates spoke at the meeting, pledging to push a published conference platform calling for Estonia to fix its own prices, pay and investments, and to make its own cultural, ecological and other policies.

Tiit Vyakhi, a delegate from an Estonian auto repair shop, told the crowd, "I think it's very important for Estonia and all republics to get their sovereignty recognized. It's necessary to confirm the principle of a united federation composed of sovereign states with fully equal rights.

"And it's necessary not to talk about what rights we want for ourselves but the union republics should meet and decide which questions it would be better to turn over to the Union," Vyakhi said, apparently referring to some kind of federal government that the Estonian conference platform suggests should take care of national defense.

Other delegates and speakers at the unprecedented meeting in a meadow outside the Estonian capital of Tallinn demanded immediate condemnation of Stalinism and, by implication, of the Soviet seizure.

Students given 'discussion' on history of Soviet Union

MOSCOW (AP) — Before glasnost, School No. 734 on Friday would have looked like this: 17-year-olds lined up in the hall in the summer heat, nervously awaiting a grilling on Soviet politics and history by a panel of teachers.

"That's what 'lanky,' blond-haired Dmitri Predkov and his classmates at the school in eastern Moscow had been expecting. But last month, the head of Soviet education, Gennady A. Yagodin, suddenly ordered the tests canceled.

The reason: The final exams would have made students in the final year of school parrot material in textbooks now contradicted by the revelations of Mikhail S. Gorbachev's drive for more openness in history and other areas. Instead, Dmitri and his 24 classmates, like 10th graders nationwide, were called into school Friday for a three-hour ungraded "discussion" to gauge their knowledge of the past and awareness of problems facing the Soviet Union today. "We want to be sure that the children can take part in discussions and are able to voice their opinion anywhere," said their teacher, Vera F. Zorich, 53.

Despite that wish, most of the teen-age Muscovites who gathered at 9 a.m. around four tables in a geography classroom said nothing during the ensuing "discussion," despite repeated prompting from teachers.

Some, however, aired views at odds with official ideology, and that presumably would have gotten them into trouble only a few years ago. One even joked about the Russian Revolution.

Predkov stood up to say that Gorbachev's program for "perestroika," or economic and social restructuring, was not a mutual consequence of the growth of Soviet socialism, and that people who say otherwise do so "only because Gorbachev is the head of our party."

Spy scandal a secret

TORONTO (AP) — Canada doesn't have spy scandals very often, but it suddenly finds itself embroiled in an espionage drama involving sophisticated U.S. naval technology, the banishment of 19 Soviets and reprisals from Moscow.

Yet nobody was supposed to know about it. As the Canadian Embassy in Moscow awaited the Kremlin's next move Friday, officials here remained silent on exactly what the Soviets they expelled were trying to do.

In the latest retaliation by the Kremlin, the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia on Friday accused three Canadians diplomats who have been expelled or barred from the Soviet Union of specific acts of espionage. Izvestia said one of them had collaborated with U.S. diplomats who were also expelled as spies.

What's what

Nurses, doctors

Nurses develop definite attitudes about doctors. That's clear from surveysters' recent findings. About 20 percent of the nurses said they'd marry doctors, if at all possible. About 80 percent said, no, no way, never, think not, are you kidding? Like that.

MotORIZED roller skates get 220 miles to the gallon?

"Live fast, die young, and have a good-looking corpse." That was a comment widely delivered by numerous young men a generation ago. Pollsters recently saw fit to check out one group of same. File for the record, please, that none in that particular group still thinks it's a good idea.

INCUMBENTS

Ninety percent of the House incumbents in the last 35 years have been re-elected.

When that British Science Journal asked readers to recommend redesigns of the human body, one enjoyed to stop rehashing.

Q. Can you verify that it's bad luck to kill a spider?
A. Only a spider can verify that one. All I know is the superstition goes back to the tale of Robert Bruce in 1314.

LOG CABINS

Q. What kind of logs make the best log cabins?
A. 1. Cedar. 2. Spruce. 3. Pine. 3. Fir. In that order. According to U.S. Forestry lab studies.

Fifty-five percent of the American women started life as natural blondes.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today's full moon might engender a very active period indeed, and it is important to make sure that the energy remains productive. Be sensitive of the feelings of others, and try to minimize your own potential to get hurt.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Don't let ambitions get the better of you this morning. Steer clear of elders with radically different ideas.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Give others the benefit of the doubt in financial matters whenever feasible, but be cautious with business. Spend time with a close friend this evening.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Steer clear of colleagues who act strangely. Contact a financial expert after lunch. Use tact with an irate associate.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Put aside routine for a while, and take care of personal affairs. Examine causes of anxiety. Surround yourself with as many friends as possible.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Cut down on time and money spent on pleasure, work to increase intimacies. Show that you appreciate your kin.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Treat

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): In writings and trips, be tactful. Socialize in the evening. Dress nicely and work on a new friendship.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): It's not the best time to start a new project or to solve an old problem. Go shopping instead. A new contact can bring good ideas.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Prepare for a vital day in business. Finish personal duties. The evening will be delightful. Energy and health are high.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Don't permit a private anxiety to interfere with responsibility: Your mood will improve in afternoon, and the evening should be nice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Time spent with friends is not the most gratifying today; it might be better to work hard and enjoy co-workers. Don't make any decisions.

Former Miss America asks for delay in prosecution

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — Former Miss America Bess Myerson asked for a delay in prosecution of shoplifting charges against her until after her federal trial this fall in New York City.

Lycoming County Judge Thomas C. Raup scheduled a hearing July 6 on the motion, filed Thursday. Myerson's trial, scheduled to begin Monday, will be temporarily postponed at least until the hearing.

Her lawyer argues that publicity about the shoplifting trial could keep her from getting an unbiased jury in the federal trial. But District Attorney Brett O. Fetsé opposed the delay, saying, "It's just another shoplifting case."

Myerson, 63, was charged with shoplifting May 27 after she allegedly tried to leave a department store with six bottles of nail polish, five pairs of earrings, a pair of shoes and flashlight batteries.

The former New York City cultural affairs commissioner contends she planned to go back to the store to pay for the items after locking her car.

Myerson is scheduled to stand trial in New York in September on charges of mail fraud, racketeering, conspiracy and influencing a judge. The indictment, returned in October, accuses her of trying to influence the divorce case of her reported lover, millionaire Carl Capasso.

Ferraro set to provide convention commentary

BOSTON (AP) — Former vice-presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro will be at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta next month as an analyst for a local television station.

At a news conference Thursday announcing her plans to work for the ABC affiliate WCVB-TV, Ferraro said she doesn't "feel the same obligation the station does to be objective" but is confident she will be able to discuss the issues without promoting her personal political agenda.

"I'm not walking away from being a Democrat. I'm proud of it," she said. "Perhaps because of it I can give an inside view. You've seen it from the outside. I've been on the inside."

She said she was raising funds for Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, the probable Democratic nominee. A former congresswoman, she ran on the ticket in 1984 as Walter Mondale's running mate.

Actress finds parallel between play, real life

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Actress Rebecca DeMornay, reprising Judy Holliday's Oscar-winning role in the 1946 comedy-drama "Born Yesterday," says she's amazed the story on Washington corruption is so relevant today.

DeMornay, who starred in the films "Risky Business" and "The Trip to Italy," plays a woman who learns her boyfriend is involved in government corruption in a stage production beginning Sunday at the Pasadena Playhouse.

PATTY HEARST Keeps guns close at hand

"It's amazingly reflective of our times," DeMornay said. "I'm going to rehearsals and I see huge headlines in the newspapers, 'Bribery Exceeds All Limits.' That's what this play is about!"

She calls her character "an innocent who is apolitical and, for all intents and purposes, pretty dumb, who awakens intellectually and politically."

"She sees the (hypocrisy) within the system and calls everybody on it. I thought that was very inspirational, particularly this year," she said.

Patty Hearst keeps gun by suburban bedside

NEW YORK (AP) — Patty Hearst, who once handled automatic weapons as a kidnaped soldier in the Symbionese Liberation Army, says she now keeps a gun by her suburban bedside.

"There are guns all over the house," she says, including a handgun "a little more substantial than a Magnum" kept by the bed, she said in an interview in Vogue magazine.

The 34-year-old publishing heiress recalled that during her time with the SLA, she "really began to notice I was no longer in control when, without a thought, I just did what I had been trained to do — fire the machine gun and the other guns in sequence."

A few weeks after she was kidnapped by the SLA in 1974 in Berkeley, Calif., the radical leftist band released a taped message from her declaring that she had decided to join the group. She subsequently took part in a bank robbery and spent more than a year on the run before being arrested.

At her trial, her lawyers argued that she had been mistreated and did not freely join the SLA. Though she was convicted and spent time in prison, her sentence was eventually commuted.

Hearst married her former bodyguard and now lives in Westport, Conn.

Former Greek president rests following surgery

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Former President Constantine Caramanlis underwent emergency surgery Friday to remove a gallstone, a hospital official said.

A doctor at the Hygeia hospital, who requested anonymity, said the 81-year-old statesman was "well and resting comfortably" after the operation. The former president was airlifted to the hospital aboard a helicopter from Revmatonisi, a small private island in the Aegean where he was vacationing.

Caramanlis was president from 1980 to 1985, when he retired after Premier Andreas Papandreu's ruling Panhellenic Socialist Movement decided not to back him for another term.

Bank robber donates assault rifles to police

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Convicted bank robber turned businessman Delbert Dunmore donated $300,000 worth of high-powered assault rifles Friday to the Highway Patrol.

Saying he thought the weapons would deter criminals, Dunmore presented police officials with the first 100 of his planned gift of 300 semiautomatic-223 rifles.

Dunmore is the millionaire chairman of Growth Industries Inc., an airplane parts manufacturing company he founded in 1967 after serving two years in prison for robbing a bank to pay off gambling debts.

"The criminal element will hit the soft spot, not the hard," Dunmore said as he presented the weapons. "I want this patrol to be a coconut, not a banana."

Dunmore made headlines last August when he treated nearly 200 classmates from the Foxcatcherway (Pa.) High School class of 1952 to an expensive trip to the Bahamas for their 35th reunion.

A lesson in counting

Students collect pop tabs for charity

SPOKANE (AP) — Who wants a million soda pop tabs? A rural elementary school northeast of Walla Walla plans to launch a national letter-writing campaign to see what charity will receive money from the 1 million tabs the students are collecting.

Superintendent Ray Yoder said Thursday that Dixie Elementary School's 36 pupils hope to donate the pop tabs to a program for the needy, or they will cash them in at a recycling center and give the money to charity.

The school initially planned to donate the pop tabs in exchange for time on a kidney dialysis machine. Yoder said he had heard that a hospital in California would exchange one minute on the dialysis machine for each pop tab collected.

But no such programs exist, said Terry Wessels, account executive for Berry & Co., the Seattle public relations firm representing Reynolds Aluminum Recycling Co. After hearing the rumors, Reynolds decided to start an aluminum can recycling program, beginning July 1, Wessels said.

Proceeds from the program will be donated to the National Kidney Foundation to finance research, treatment and diagnosis of kidney and urinary diseases, she said.

Reynolds and the National Kidney

Foundation have been plagued with calls from people who heard the rumors and wanted to know where to donate their pop tabs, she said.

"It just spread like wildfire," she said. "They finally decided that this would put an end to it."

Dixie's pupils have collected 730,811 pop tabs in the past two years and hope to reach their goal of 1 million next year. The goal was set in September 1986 by a teacher who wanted to show her math pupils how much 1 million was.

Yoder said the letter-writing campaign will be incorporated into classroom work.

"The bottom line is, when we have them all collected, we will look at all charities and see what will do the most good," he said.

Yoder said the emphasis of the pop tab collection is to teach children the concept of a million and the idea of donating to a worthy cause later.

"When people give, they give to ward that goal," he said. "Secondarily they say, 'what are you going to do with them.'"

Yoder estimated the pop tabs weigh 915 pounds.

"If we end up with a half ton of those things... that would be a pretty sizable donation," he said.

Clyde Enfield, owner of All City Recycling Co. in Spokane, said recycling centers are paying between 48 cents and 52 cents per pound for aluminum cans.

He said he probably would pay top price for the school's pop tabs, rather than the lower price for scrap aluminum, which pays about 26 cents a pound.

Gypsies to testify in trafficking trial

SPOKANE (AP) — Police raided the homes of two prominent Gypsy leaders in 1986 shortly after investigators feared their informant, who had been selling stolen jewelry, may have been recognized, a detective testified.

The informant, convicted burglar Mike White, apparently was spotted by a member of the Gypsy community, as police officers were placing a hidden microphone and transmitter on him, Detective Andrew J. "Skip" Pavlishchak said Thursday.

His testimony came at a continuing Superior Court hearing on defenses motions to dismiss trafficking in stolen property charges against James and Theresa Marks and Graver and Maria Marks.

Testimony was to continue today. Next week, members of the Gypsy community are expected to take the stand.

Police claim the Marks bought stolen property at their southeast Spokane homes. Defense attorneys contend the judge should toss out the charges because the police searches, which turned up $1.6 million cash and $500,000 in jewelry, were illegal.

Much of the seized cash and some of the jewelry has since been returned to the defendants based on Internal Revenue Service and court decisions. Some pieces of jewelry turned up missing from the police vault about six weeks after the search, police acknowledge. Defense attorneys also claim police improperly publicly displayed the evidence.

Pavlishchak, who heads the police department's SWAT team, testified that in June 1986 he was part of a burglary task force investigating "fences" who buy stolen items from burglars.

He said the informant had been sent to the residence of James Marks on June 18, 1986, and sold silverware and jewelry that had been portrayed as stolen.

Pavlishchak said he and another officer attempted to "wire up" the informant for a second deal when a car driven by a Gypsy woman passed by. "I felt they had seen us," he testified.

He said detectives were quickly rounded up for the raids while search warrants were processed.

Europeans handle scandals differently

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Europe has its arms scandals, but the kind that has shaken Washington is unlikely because procurement programs are run differently and governments generally avoid direct competition among contractors.

In Washington, a 2-year-old investigation has focused on allegations that private consultants bribed government employees to obtain Pentagon secrets that could help their clients win huge contracts.

Proportion alone is a significant factor in the relative opportunity for corruption. Nothing in Europe even approaches the colossus of the U.S. defense budget, $290 billion, for 1988.

Sweden and Norway — respective recent budgets of about $4 billion and $2.8 billion — have had scandals recently, but they involved bribery and illegal exports. Both Scandinavian are considering measures to control their arms traders.

Even Britain, France and West Germany spend only one-tenth the amount of money on defense that goes through the Pentagon funnel every year.

The giant British Marconi communications group currently is the object of a year-long fraud investigation, but defense scandals in Europe seldom are publicized. The Marconi case is based on suspicions that the company made excessive profits and did not pay royalties it owed the government.

Italy had a major bribery scandal a decade ago in which a former defense minister and an air force chief were convicted of accepting payoffs from Lockheed, the U.S. aircraft manufacturer.

In West Germany, Franz Josef Strauss was accused of taking millions from Lockheed when he was defense minister in 1961, but the case was dropped.

"The Europeans deal with these things differently. They don't want to know about them," said Aaron Karp.

Workers search for landslide victims

CATAK, Turkey (AP) — Rescue workers dug in a 20-foot layer of mud and rocks Friday for about 100 people buried by a landslide, using sniffer dogs and dodging boulders that skittered down the mountain.

A truck driver and a resident were injured by the new rockslides that pelted down on what remains of this village in the rain-soaked mountains above the Black Sea port of Trabzon.

"It's too soon to give up hope of finding people alive, but I think we will soon be discovering bodies," said Klaus Kolter, a member of the West German Rescue Dog Association helping in the search for victims of Thursday's disaster. "We'll keep on trying."

Rescue workers abandoned plans for an all-night search because of fears of a new, major landslide. The operation was to resume at dawn Saturday.

"Here's a risk that an entire hilltop could be crashing down in the same period. Cracks already have been observed but it's not possible to predict when it might happen," said Erkan Omerbeyoglu, Turkey's general director of highways.

He said that if a new landslide occurred during daylight hours, the rescue teams would have time to evacuate.

Three West German tourists were among those missing in the landslide, which residents of Catak blamed on inadequate buttressing of the walls of the highway that runs through the village.

Members of the West German team, wearing red coveralls, took 21 sniffer dogs over mounds of earth covering a coffeehouse, a restaurant, 20 homes and a high school that had been closed for summer vacation.

Earthmovers cleared loose debris and a team of 50 civil defense workers dug in spots where the reactions of the dogs indicated survivors might be trapped in air pockets beneath boulders.

More than 30 hours after hundreds of tons of mud and rock roared down on Catak, only one body had been recovered.

Villagers said at least 30 bus passengers were in the coffeehouse when the landslide occurred, having breakfast and while bulldozers cleared a rockfall that had blocked the highway at the roadside, they said.

"My friends were in the coffeehouse, I'd gone back outside to see if the bus was ready to leave and I saw it telegraph pole slowly bending over," said Gaby Engeler, 28, a nurse from West Germany. "I heard a noise like an explosion and the whole hillside came away in front of me."

She identified her friends as Birgit Hastenteufel, a 25-year-old social worker, and Andreas Burghard, 28, a pharmacist. The third missing West German was identified only as Markus Mutter.

Report says Khomeini diagnosed with cancer

The Washington Post

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — A number of U.S. officials are giving credence to an intelligence report that Iran's spiritual leader, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, is suffering from liver cancer and is not expected to live beyond the end of this year.

The report on Khomeini's health, said by sources to have emanated from the Central Intelligence Agency, has circulated among senior U.S. officials, and its existence was first reported by CBS News earlier this month. Although the CBS report, and subsequent media reports in Britain that Khomeini is dead, have been denied by Iran, the focus on Khomeini's health persists, as do references to the CIA report.

One official briefed on the report said it is regarded as credible because it is based on access to medical opinions and the prognosis of the physicians treating Khomeini. The report indicates that Khomeini already has lost some or all of his eyesight due to the effects of the cancer, the official said.

"We're taking it seriously," said one U.S. official in the Middle East. "We think he will be dead by December."

Reports of Khomeini's demise or the deterioration of his health have surfaced regularly since the 85-year-old religious figure inspired the overthrow of shah Reza Pahlavi nearly a decade ago. In each instance, Khomeini eventually has reappeared, lecturing students or government officials on the challenges facing the Islamic-based regime in Tehran or the evils of the West.

In Washington, U.S. officials confirmed Friday that the CIA has received what it regards as highly reliable reports that Khomeini has terminal cancer, and said they are being taken seriously.

10 die in struggle for refugee camp

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)

Syrian-backed guerrillas on Friday bombed Yasser Arafat's loyalists in a bloody struggle for control of two Palestinian refugee camps. Police said 10 people were killed and 34 wounded.

At one point, police said five shells a minute were hitting the Chatilla refugee camp as Col. Saed Mousa's radical Fatah-Uprising tried to crush Arafat's Fatah guerrillas. They said Chatilla's only hospital was hit dozens of times.

A Fatah spokesman charged that Mousa's fighters "started shelling the camps indiscriminately" to sabotage mediation efforts by Libyan officials. "They are massacring our people," said the Fatah spokesman, who refused to be named.

A truce announced in Tripoli on Thursday called for the warring factions to return to positions they held before fighting broke out May 1 in Chatilla and the nearby Bourj-el-Barajneh camp. It was reached in a meeting between Libyan officers and representatives of neutral Palestinian groups.

Since May 1, 112 people have been killed and 502 wounded in the fight for control of the refugee camps on Beirut's southern outskirts.

A Palestinian official said Mousa's gunners used 240mm mortars to shell Chatilla, the first time they have used the heavy weapons in the fighting.

The official quoted a doctor in Chatilla as saying most of the hospital's medical and surgical equipment were damaged.

"We're crippled. We don't have the means to carry out even minor operations. Even oxygen bottles and gauze supplies have been blown up."

U.N. conference draws peaceniks

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — These days, this East River enclave is a magnet for peace marchers, Buddhist monks, Nigerian "drummers of passion," victims of Hiroshima, poets and blues singers of the nuclear age.

All have converged on the Third Special Session on Disarmament, a monthlong gathering ending this week.

They have camped on the sidewalks and exploded 1,000 balloons to symbolize nuclear tests. They have gathered at a corner coffee shop to discuss radioactive military landfills, the evils of transnational corporations, and the future of the Siberian crane.

They range from a 12-year-old California girl who invented a peace game to Mother Teresa, the 77-year-old Nobel laureate.

But all the spinning of prayer wheels, scattering of flower petals, chanting of mantras, and meditation on brotherhood have not harmonized discordant views on disarmament.

The 159 U.N. members are trying to devise a realistic agenda for peace, and delegates hope they'll be able to adopt a final document by consensus, without divisive voting that usually pits the United States against most of the developing world and socialist countries.

The superpower backdrop is positive: the Moscow summit, the Soviet pullout from Afghanistan, and the treaty on elimination of intermediate-range nuclear weapons.

But differences over such issues as nuclear and conventional disarmament and a nuclear test ban treaty are enormous.

The United States has made clear it will not reaffirm what it calls a sweeping and unrealistic U.N. disarmament document adopted 10 years ago.

Last year, the United States voted alone on most disarmament issues in the General Assembly, ranging from a demand for a comprehensive nuclear test ban to prohibiting the military uses of outer space.

It refused to participate in a conference on the relationship between disarmament and development.

Third World nations have been clamoring for a disarmament fund of military savings in the industrialized world to be diverted toward economic and social development in poor countries.

Western diplomats say that the developing world should do its part by halting its regional wars and curbing its massive spending on conventional arms — spending that deprives people of food, health care and education.

The American positions have not changed in the current disarmament session.

The U.S. administration and Western allies emphasize the importance of bilateral negotiations with the Soviet Union in nuclear and other fields and do not want bilateral talks subject to multilateral pressures.

"We are hearing a lot of cant," said one Western diplomat. "The U.S. and the Soviets are doing just fine. What we need is a realistic approach that will leave nations free to pursue their bilateral actions without multilateral interference."

At this session, the Soviet Union is a major player and is seen, far more than the United States, as a team player in the world body.

The Soviet Union has been calling for a larger and more powerful role for the United Nations in multilateral arms negotiations, disarmament verification and monitoring, expanded peacekeeping operations and crisis management. It has called for a new U.N. naval peacekeeping force and U.N. space agency.

But the United States, more than $400 million in arrears in U.N. dues, doesn't want to see expanded U.N. operations infringe on traditional areas of national prerogative.

Tank fire re-ignites in Mexico

GUADALUPE, Mexico (AP)

A fire in a gasoline storage tank reignited Friday only hours after officials had declared the inferno out and some of the 10,000 evacuated residents had begun streaming home.

Flames and thick black smoke again shot into the air over this industrial suburb of Monterrey. Radio and television stations warned people to stay away from the San Rafael gasoline depot, where three 40-foot-tall gas tanks exploded Thursday, killing two people and injuring 20.

Local news reports said two of the injured later had died. Officials of Pemex, the government oil monopoly that operates the depot, were not available for comment Friday afternoon.

Officials declared two of the fires extinguished late Thursday night and had said the third was put out by Friday morning, then reported the blaze had begun again.

11th renewal of Burley Regatta on added significance

By COLIN MULDOON
Times-News writer

BURLEY — It's Regatta time again and with national titles at stake in two divisions, this year's 11th renewal today and Sunday may prove to be one of the most successful to date.

According to racing coordinator Don Moyle, Burley's bid to host the national championship races in the crackerbox and competition jet boat divisions was accepted by the American Powerboat Association, an added bonus for racing enthusiasts.

The Regatta had previously played host to the national flatbottom championships in 1982.

The APA is the governing body that sanctions all motor boat racing in the United States.

According to Moyle, several factors played a role in the APA's decision to grant the Regatta the championship competitions. Burley had bid $1,500 for winners in each class and all the participants in the crackerbox and comp-jet divisions are from the West.

"They really didn't want to go all the way back to Quebec, Canada, when all of them (crackerbox and comp-jet participants) were from the West," Moyle said.

Combined national championships in Canada and the U.S. will be held in Valleyfield, Quebec.

Racing is scheduled to begin at noon today at Riverfront on the Burley-Milner stretch of the Snake River. About 100 boats are expected to be on hand to compete in 14 different categories. Flatbottom runabout categories include jersey speed skiffs, comp-jets, crackerboxes, pro-stocks, KR/R and superstocks.

Hydroplane divisions will include six and seven-liter combined, four and five liter, 2.5 modified and 2.5-liter stock, in addition to the Cobra Grand Prix and stock outboards.

Notable racing figures expected to compete this weekend include pro-stock racer Paul Grichar, winner of the Regatta's mink coat last year and Mike Nuetz, the nation's 1987 high-point champion of the K racing runabout class.

"I've made it to Burley every year since they started racing there," Nuetz said, "and I don't intend to miss this one. Though we didn't have good luck there last year, it's a great community and we always have a good time."

"There's a champion in every class," Moyle said. "This is probably the best flatbottom race in the U.S."

According to Moyle, a particular category will consist of not more than eight boats. Each division will race two five-mile heats per day in the two-day event. The top accumulated time will determine the champions in each division.

Should more than eight boats be entered in a given division, a qualifying heat will be necessary. Qualifying heats will take place today at 10 a.m.

Because of increasing national recognition, this year's Regatta will be videotaped, according to Moyle, by AWMC, a video production company contracted by ESPN to make a series of racing tapes from sites all over the country to be shown at a later date by the national all-sports network.

On Sunday, the Regatta will conclude with an awards ceremony which will feature the presentation of the Idaho Cup by U.S. Senator Steve Symms, the Governor's Cup by Cecil Andrus and the traditional mink coat to the winner of the Bill Faulkner Memorial Cup.

Tickets for the Regatta are available at area 7-Eleven stores, Wilson-Bates in Burley and Twin Falls and at Home Electronics in Twin Falls.

More records broken in finals

By RON GATES

FILER — A pair of 75s in bull riding highlighted three new records in the 1988 State High School Rodeo Finals Friday, but all-around honors were awarded for the evening performance that would go to an Oakley cowboy.

Minutes after Salmon's Dan Mulvey unseated Paul Cope as the overall event leader in bulldogging Mike Poulton — a 17-year-old representing Oakley — posted a 4.741-second performance to lift the lead from Mulvey.

Two events further into the schedule Poulton returned to the arena to lead off the calf roping. The Oakley youngster got his tie in 12.531, then watched that stand up against all comers for his second victory of the day.

The first section of bulls saw Blackfoot pike Justin Palmer bump St. Anthony's Jason Johnson by a single point, 75-74, but that mark was duplicated on the final ride in the second section by Kyle Duren of Soda Springs.

With one record each falling in roughstock and boys' timed events, Megan Coon — Nampa's hope for all-around cowgirl selection — brought the girls into the picture in adding a rodeo best 3.006 seconds in breakaway roping.

"The balance of roughstock, bareback and saddle bronc riding, respectively went to a pair of Mikes, Tracy of McCommam in the first and Blackfoots Giannini in the first and the broncs — the only timed event to complete a full run on Friday.

The Slash-T stock pommel by Shushone's Pat and Juanita O'Malley pitched a near shutout, dumping all but one rider in the first segment, before Giannini showed the way.

Two points back of the winner, Burley's Clint Crane staged a reversal of the Dist. 6 finish egging homelowner Zane Davis by one.

"I was bucked off my first horse (on Wednesday)" said Crane, who moved into position for a shot at nationals.

"I'll have to make a good run tomorrow and I have to get a good draw to do that."

Friday's two rounds of cow cutting decided Idaho's first qualifiers for the National Finals in Pueblo, Colo. the last full week of July.

The four-day event winds up at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds this evening and promises top-notch action with the top 12 contestants in each of the remaining 10 events scheduled up with national berths on the line throughout the program.

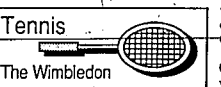

Schapers runs Lendl through 3 tiebreakers at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Ivan Lendl, whose favorite grass game is golf, found himself in the rough at Wimbledon Friday. It wasn't an unplayable lie, though. Playing on a chewed-up outside court that his opponent likened to golf course rough, the world's No. 1 tennis player outlasted big-serving Dutchman Michiel Schapers to move into the fourth round of the Grand Slam tournament.

Lendl, the top seed, moaned over line calls and was distracted by noise from a nearby balcony, but he kept his concentration for the nearly four hours it took to win 6-7 (7-9), 7-6 (7-2), 6-4, 6-7 (5-7), 6-1.

"I usually have trouble in the rough," Lendl said of the conditions on Court No. 2. "And the course I play at home (in Greenwich, Conn.) doesn't look that bad."

Court No. 2 is known as the "graveyard of champions" because stars such as John McEnroe, Jimmy Connors and Ili Nastase lost there in past tournaments.

Lendl, who has never won a Wimbledon title and doesn't like playing on grass, nearly added his name to the list of upset victims: But after his 6-foot-6 opponent boomed a service winner to win the fourth-set tiebreak.

Lendl broke him twice in the final set before closing out the match with his own service winner.

"I felt in the fourth set he was getting tired and having more trouble with his serve," said Lendl, who reached the fourth round here for the sixth straight time. "In the fifth set, it really showed."

Schapers, the only player to win a set against eventual champion Pat Cash at last year's tournament, had mixed feelings about his losing effort.

"I beat Boris Becker in five sets once (at the 1985 Australian Open) and I didn't play half as well as I did today," he said. "Against Becker, I was happy with the win but not with the way I played. Today I was happy with my play but not with the loss."

er, Lendl broke him twice in the final set before closing out the match with his own service winner.

women's seed Hana Mandlikova was ousted by Anne Minter of Australia 6-4, 6-3.

Mandlikova, who has won every Grand Slam event but Wimbledon, was sidelined for almost two months with a leg injury before the French Open, where she lost in the second round.

"I'm one of the most fragile bodies in the game," she said. "If you look at my body, it's not very strong or muscular. It's catching up with me. I'm 26 years old and I've been on the circuit since I was 15. The body is just giving you warnings all the time ... and that's what happens when you're 26."

Top-seeded Steffi Graf continued her dominance with a 6-3, 6-1 victory over American Terry Phelps. Although she lost, Phelps managed to win twice as many games as did Graf's first two opponents combined.

Sixth-seeded Helena Sukova, No. 12 Zina Garrison and No. 16 Mary Joe Fernandez also won their third-round matches.

Cash, coming off a tough five-set win over Javier Frana, breezed past fellow Australian John Fitzgerald 6-1, 6-2, 6-4, joining him in the fourth round were two-time champion Boris Becker, seventh-seeded Henri Leconte and No. 10 Tim Mayotte.

Cleveland cuts Schrom, one of 2 active Idahoans

CLEVELAND — Right-handed pitcher Ken Schrom, one of the two active Idaho residents in the major leagues, was released Friday by the Cleveland Indians.

Schrom, a 33-year-old Granville native, has been on the disabled list since the season started and has not pitched a game.

Schrom came to the Indians in 1986 in a trade with the Minnesota Twins. He was 20-20 in Cleveland with a 5.43 ERA.

Schrom has a career 51-51 record in the majors with a 4.81 ERA.

Schrom, a University of Idaho graduate, broke in with the Twins in 1982, and posted a 34-31 record over four seasons.

IBF relents, agrees to sanction 12-round Tyson-Spinks fight

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The International Boxing Federation Friday gave heavyweight champion Mike Tyson the approval to fight a 12-round title bout against Michael Spinks, ending a long dispute over the length of Monday's $35 million bout at Atlantic City.

The decision means Tyson will defend his undisputed title against Spinks and that the IBF will withdraw its threat to strip Tyson of the championship.

It also ended an almost month-long battle between the IBF, the World

Boxing Association, the World Boxing Council and state athletic commissioner Larry Hazzard, with the final days of the dispute being discussed in federal court.

The meeting came on the second day of a hearing on a suit filed by the IBF against the WBA, WBC, Hazzard and Cayton.

In the end, the IBF considered a second request by Cayton for an exception to IBF Rule 21, which calls for 15-round title fights. On June 7, the IBF had rejected an exception requested by Cayton.
