Board blocks Snake development near Bliss

By The Associated Press and The Times-News

BOISE — Much of the Snake River in the Magic Valley gained interim protection from development Friday as the state Water-Resources Board adopted emergency rules implementing the landmark 1988 Comprehensive State Water Plan legislation.

It is one of five reaches of Idaho's most scenic and popular rivers now covered by the emergency rules.

The board's action, only hours after the law became effective, made Idaho the 30th state in the nation with a system to protect rivers and streams from development.

"This is the biggest thing to happen in Idaho in regard to water in the history of the state," Board Chairman Gene Gray said. "We have just made history."

The resolution adopted by the board granted maximum protection for two years to the rivers state lawmakers demanded be preserved.

No construction or expansion of dams or impoundments, hydropower projects, water diversion works, dredge or placer mining, stream bed alterations or mineral, sand or gravel extraction from stream beds will be allowed while the board conducts studies and hearings to determine whether the rivers should be permanently protected.

"The door slams shut on anything until we get ourselves in order," Gray said.

In the Magic Valley, the resolution will affect a hydroelectric dam proposed by Tacoma City Light near Bliss and hydro projects proposed for Star Falls, Kaanaka Rapids and Auger Falls. The Milner hydro project proposed by the Twin Falls Canal Co. was exempted from the resolution.

Developers of those projects may appeal the resolution.

Other stretches of river gaining protection in the first official act under the new law are:

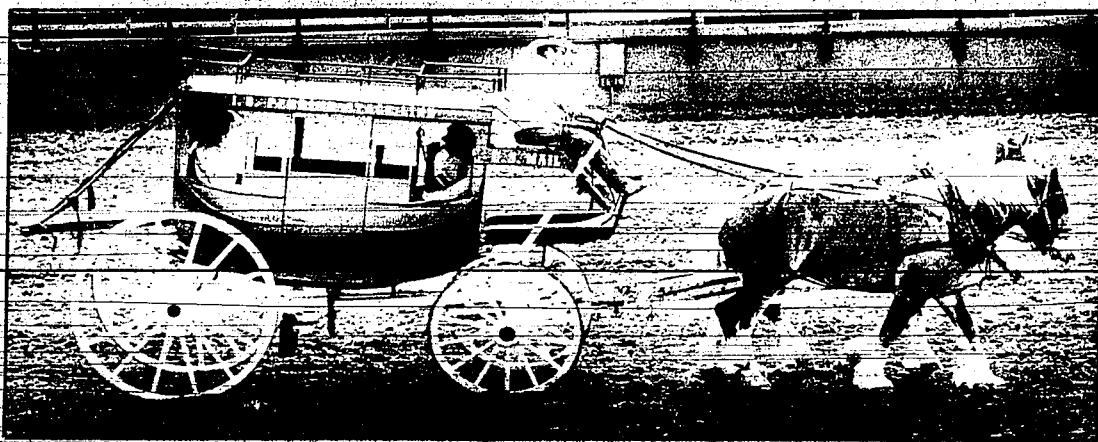

- The Priest River from the Canadian border to Priest Lake.
- The South Fork of the Boise River from Anderson Ranch Dam to Neal Bridge.
- The Henry's Fork of the Snake River from its origin at Henry's Lake to the backwaters of Ashton Reservoir.

• The Payette River from Caberton Bridge to Banks on the North Fork; from the Sawtooth Wilderness boundary to Banks on the South Fork and from Banks to Black Canyon Dam on the main river.

The emergency rules, which do not allow for any exemptions from the protected status, will remain in effect up to six months while the board puts permanent rules in place.

The legislation culminated years of unsuccessful attempts by various interests to win a scheme for protecting the state's waterways.

Reagan approves care bill

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — President Reagan signed a bill Friday giving 32 million Medicare beneficiaries unlimited days of hospital care and putting a cap on spending for doctor bills.

The law, he declared, would replace "fear and tear with peace and understanding."

The catastrophic coverage law, the biggest expansion of Medicare in the program's 23-year history, is the major piece of new social legislation enacted during the Reagan presidency.

The Medicare changes "will help remove a terrible threat from the lives of the elderly and disabled Americans, a threat of an illness requiring acute care, one so devastating it could wipe out the savings of an entire lifetime," Reagan said during a bill-signing ceremony in the White House Rose Garden.

The ceiling for hospital and doctor bills that Reagan originally proposed was lowered by the Democratic-controlled Congress. Congress also added new benefits, including coverage of prescription drugs.

Warning about potential "runaway" expenses from the new benefits, Reagan said, "we have no real way of knowing how much those services will cost. A jump in expenses could be more than a budget problem; it could be a tragedy," he said. "The program, after all, is to be paid for by the elderly themselves. So we must control the costs of these new benefits, or we'll harm the very people we're trying to help."

Medicare beneficiaries themselves — 29 million persons over 65 — the disabled of all ages — will pay for the new program through higher monthly premiums and a special surtax. The current monthly premium, now $24.80, would rise by $4 next year, increasing by another $10.20 a month by 1993 to a total of $39.

Those who earn enough to pay federal taxes, about 90 percent of the population over 65, will bear the heaviest financial burden, in the form of a special new tax beginning in April 1990 for income earned during 1989. The new levy would be a surcharge of 15 percent on the person's federal tax liability. For example, a person over 65 who owed $1,000 in taxes would pay another $150 for the new Medicare program. The maximum surtax payment would be $800 for an individual. The surtax rate rises to 25 percent by 1993.

Major features of the catastrophic coverage act are:

Pentagon halts $1 billion in payments

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci declared "we do not intend to wait for convictions, or even trials," in the Pentagon procurement of a firm on Friday suspended payment on $1 billion worth of potentially tainted military contracts.

Carlucci acted on the basis of information included in search-warrant affidavits that were unsealed by a federal magistrate in Dallas on Thursday. In the documents, the FBI said it eavesdropped on one consultant obtained and passed along inside information on nine contracts worth more than $522 million. They heard a Navy procurement official read off 10 sealed bids in a $120 million contract.

Carlucci also announced that the Pentagon was beginning suspension procedures against three individuals and a company named in the documents.

He said the Defense Department was reviewing existing contracts with four implicated companies and freezing new contracts on nine weapons systems.

"The affidavit provides the department with evidence concerning individuals and companies," he told reporters.

The Navy has initiated suspension procedures with respect to George Stone, Mark Saunders, Joe Bradley and the Continental Electronics division of Marian Associates Inc.

The Navy said it would be unable to give full details on the contracts for which payment was suspended until Tuesday.

Names of those companies and status of those contracts will be provided when the information has been appropriately verified for accuracy," the Navy said in a statement.

The Justice Department, caught off guard by the disclosures in Dallas, took steps to ensure that no additional affidavits or search warrants are disclosed in the public.

At a hastily-called news conference, Carlucci said the Pentagon would take further actions, as evidence in the case becomes public.

He said the current actions did not gravely impair national security, but that additional suspensions might. "Clearly, anything that slows down the process of producing defense equipment or requires us to reopen contracts has an impact on our ability to get equipment in the field," he said.

Carlucci said the Pentagon was reviewing existing contracts with four companies named in the

ZIP code on the job for 25 years

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After a quarter century on the job, the ZIP code — like most of us — has gained a little weight. But it still helps smooth the flow of nearly half the world's mail.

Friday marked the 25th anniversary of that string of numbers bringing up the rear of every American address, a system ordered into use by then Postmaster General J. Edward Day, who says he simply got tired of waiting for bureaucrats to finish studying the idea.

An expanded version was introduced in 1983, adding four more numbers to bring the total to nine — a voluntary addition officially called "ZIP Plus 4" but referred to in postal circles as "Son of ZIP."

The basic system, says senior assistant postmaster general John G. Mulligan, has been a "roaring success."

The United States, with only about 6 percent of the world's population, has 50 percent of the world's mail volume, Mulligan said.

U.S., Soviet INF inspectors start work

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. and Soviet teams were beginning inspection visits Friday to verify compliance with the treaty which requires the destruction of superpower medium-range missiles, officials said.

The Soviet government notified the United States early Friday that five teams were landing in San Francisco, said Kendall Pease, spokesman for the U.S.-On-Site Inspection Agency, created last January to monitor compliance with the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces treaty.

Under the treaty, signed last Dec. 9 at the Washington summit, the Soviets need not list the sites they want to visit until they have been in the United States 48 hours, Pease said.

Other Soviet teams will inspect sites in the eastern United States, but their arrival time has not been relayed to the United States, Pease said.

The teams have 60 days to carry out the "baseline inspections," designed to verify the exact number of missiles and related components to be destroyed under treaty.

In Frankfurt, West Germany, two U.S. inspection teams, consisting of 10 experts each, met with reporters before boarding an Air Force jet for the flight to Moscow.

"We all feel this is a historic mission," the head of the inspection agency, Army Brig. Gen. Roland Lajoie, told reporters.

One U.S. team was headed from Moscow to the Soviet city of Votkinsk, the site of a plant that formerly built the SS-20 missiles, the most important Soviet weapon to be eliminated under the treaty.

The United States has the right to keep a team at Votkinsk for up to 13 years, and the Soviets may station inspectors for the same period at Mangun, Utah, site of Hercules Plant No. 1, where U.S. missiles were produced.

Inspection teams will verify destruction of 1,800 missiles and check on about 3,200 related components, including storage and transport, missile containers and special hauling vehicles, Lajoie told reporters.

"We're going in with the attitude: Trust everybody, but always cut the cards," Lajoie said.

Over the next 60 days, the U.S. team will inspect 128 sites in the Soviet Union, including 33 in eastern Siberia, he said.

Mainstream handicapped students, Idaho high court rules

The Associated Press

BOISE — A divided Idaho Supreme Court has ruled that pervasive use of segregated special education classes to teach handicapped children violates the legal mandate that those students receive a "free and appropriate public education."

The high court said even if a school district officials disagree with so-called "mainstreaming" for handicapped children, they must have justifiable reasons for denying them an education in the less restrictive environment of normal classrooms as the government has directed when or possible.

The court, in the 3-2 decision issued on Friday, also ordered the Boise School District to reimburse the mother of 15-year-old Gabriel Thornek some $7,000 to $8,000 for the tuition and special teacher's aide she paid for in sending her son to a parochial school after the district declined to offer an alternative to segregated classes.

Some officials said the ruling could have a major impact on the way districts throughout the state serve handicapped students.

Justice Robert Huntley wrote the majority opinion, which was adopted by Justices Byron Johnson and Stephen Bistline. Chief Justice Alan Shepard and Justice Robert Bakes dissented.

Gabriel, who has been attending some nonhandicapped classes since the 1985-1986 school year, was born with part of his brain missing and with multiple other handicaps. In 1982, when he was 9 years old, tests showed his intelligence quotient at 37 — in the trainable, mentally-retarded category. Officials said there was evidence his intellectual achievement will not reach the level of a normal 6-year-old.

The court majority held that the school district, for both the 1983-1984 and 1984-1985 school years, failed to draft an appropriate individual education plan for Gabriel as the law requires. Without such a plan, Huntley wrote, Gabriel had denied an "appropriate public education."

The district offered only to admit the boy to isolated special education classes or finance special education services not including a special aide while he attended a private school. The court pointed out that the district provided no evidence disputing the demand of Gabriel's mother that the boy be mainstreamed, or allowed to attend classes with nonhandicapped children.

Since the school district had accepted federal funds for implementing

Shuttle will move to pad on Monday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space workers will hold a special Fourth-of-July ceremony when they move Discovery to the launch pad to be readied for the first space shuttle mission since the Challenger tragedy. One of the five astronauts slated to fly the early September mission and NASA officials will watch from a flagbedecked grandstand as the spacecraft is rolled out of an assembly building into the glare of spotlights at 12:01 a.m. EDT (10:01 p.m. MDT) Monday.

Discovery will be perched upright on a giant tracked transporter for the six-to-seven-hour trip over a 4.2-mile course to Launch Pad 39B.

The move is timed to avoid thunderstorms and lightning, which often occur during the daytime this time of year.

In a brief ceremony as the move begins, Forrest S. McCartney, director of the Kennedy Space Center, will present the astronaut with a book containing signatures of the 15,240 workers here who have labored to return the shuttle fleet to space.

Commander Rick Hauck and his crew, Dick Covey, George Nelson,

Mike Lounge and Dave Hillers, will take the book into space with them on a four-day mission. Hillers planned to be here for the rollout ceremony.

After Discovery is on the pad, employees and their families will be able to drive by between 8 a.m. and 11 a.m. Monday to get a close look before a service structure encloses the spacecraft.

Jim Harrington, shuttle operations director here, said delays in preparing Discovery placed the rollout date on the Fourth of July.

"We didn't plan it that way," he said. "We had hoped to do it earlier."

Asked if a rollout on the nation's birthday might have an emotional impact, Harrington replied, "No doubt it will have an effect. The biggest effect and the biggest morale booster we can give ourselves is to move the shuttle out to the pad, because that's where it belongs. The name of the game here is to get the vehicle ready to fly, and that's what we're going to do."

He said checks of systems will begin as soon as Discovery is on the pad, and workers will begin preparing the spacecraft for critical firing of its three main engines on July 24.

Burning roof falls, kills 5 firefighters

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — The burning roof of a car dealership collapsed on firefighters Friday, killing five of them in a shower of fiery debris, authorities said.

The fire, which destroyed the building and contents of Hackensack Ford, apparently started shortly after 3 p.m. in the ceiling space above the car service section of the building, said Fire Chief Anthony Aiello.

Aiello said the roof collapsed as the firefighters inside the building were cutting a hole in the false ceiling in order to attack the fire between the ceiling and the roof.

"All of a sudden the entire 60 foot square inside ceiling fell on them," he said, adding that four other firefighters inside at the time escaped injury.

Aiello said the men were spraying the space between the ceiling and the roof trying to create a "fog" to decrease the heat of the fire. "They did what they were supposed to do," he said.

Federal indictments target porn dealers, allege illegal use of mails

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department and the U.S. Postal Inspection Service Friday unveiled over three dozen federal indictments against distributors of pornography for alleged illegal use of the mails.

The indictments culminate nearly two years of undercover work by a joint federal and state task force that called itself "Project Postmark." The investigation targeted porn distributors in New York City, Long Island, Chicago, Los Angeles, North Hollywood, and a handful of other cities.

The investigation — part of a larger, ongoing federal anti-pornography drive — has been tracking the distribution of pornography through U.S. mails, United Parcel Service, and interstate transportation services in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Tennessee, Utah, Washington, Florida, Iowa, California, Connecticut, and Illinois.

Several other states also have ongoing investigations, according to federal enforcement officials — from both a federal level and state level.

High-level officials at the Justice Department and Postal Service confirmed that federal and state police agencies also are working with Canadian government counterparts in an effort to force the issue.

Norden is a division of United Technologies Corp., the eighth largest defense contractor in 1987 with deals totaling $3.3 billion. Litton was the 11th biggest, with contracts worth $2 billion. United Technologies is based in Hartford, Conn. Litton has offices in Van Nuys, Calif.

The largest special weapons system which payments are being frozen is called the Anti-Submarine Warfare Operating Center, known as ASWOC, a $712 million system of shore-based command and control centers to coordinate efforts to locate, and in time of war, destroy enemy submarines.

Carlucci said that the contracts provided for suspension of payment, and possibly recouping profits from the companies, but did not spell out whether work would continue on the affected weapons systems.

The Dallas affidavits disclosed that FBI agents eavesdropped on Stone, a Navy procurement official, read to Saunders, a consultant, the secret bids from 10 companies competing for a $120 million Advanced Tactical Air Command and Control system. Payments on that system, known as ATACC, were also suspended Friday.

Northern Utah and Nevada: Utah Fair to partly cloudy with a few afternoon and evening thunderstorms over the mountains through Sunday. Lows from 50s to near 70s. Nevada Mostly sunny and continued hot today and Sunday. Isolated late afternoon thunderstorms in central portion. Highs from 90s to 100s. Lows from 45 to 55.

Summary: A broad upper air trough of low pressure centered in the eastern Gulf of Alaska produced a southwestward flow of air over the state on Friday, according to the National Weather Service in Boise.

This air was too dry to produce any precipitation but some cloudiness was expected over the Panhandle. This pattern should persist through the holiday weekend.

Some mid and high level cloudiness over the Panhandle and the southeast will gradually wane over the central mountains and the southwest as the rule across the state Friday afternoon.

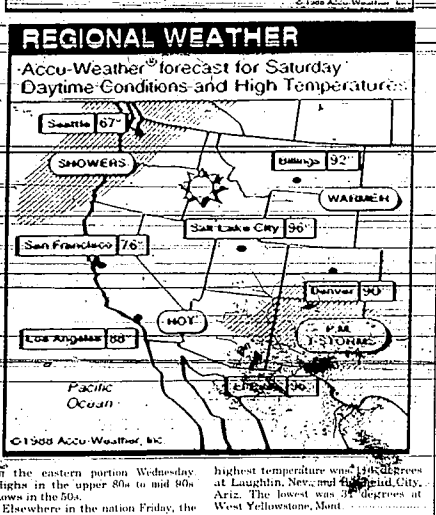

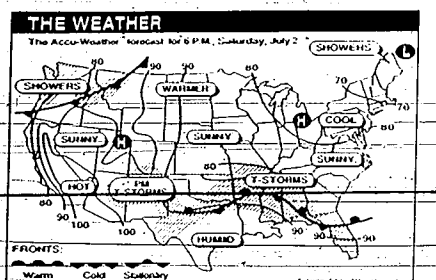

Afternoon highs were in the 70s to mid 80s across the Panhandle with mid 80s to upper 80s over the southern and upper 80s to 90s over the southwest. Winds across the state at mid afternoon were light.

The warmest temperatures in the state Friday were 90 degrees at Mountain Home Air Force Base. Deadwood reported the coldest at 26 degrees.

The pollen count in Twin Falls Friday was 40 particles per cubic meter of air.

The agricultural outlook for Southern Idaho shows conditions for planting and haying will be excellent through Tuesday. Temperatures will average slightly above normal. Widely scattered thunderstorms will develop in southern Idaho Wednesday afternoon but fair weather will prevail otherwise. Winds today will be from the west to 10 mph.

The extended outlook for Southern Idaho, Monday through Wednesday, shows fair and warm except widely scattered afternoon thunderstorms.

Lawmakers finally worked out an acceptable bill under pressure created by threats that the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and the Northwest Power Planning Council would take control of the rivers through their own plans.

Officials say the bill means Idaho, not national regional interests, will continue to control the future of the state's waters.

The board also began the lengthy process of adopting permanent rules for implementing the legislation, ignoring only Wendy Wilson of the Friends of the Payette who it kept access to initiating protected status for additional rivers as open as possible to the public.

The emergency rules allow only a state agency to initiate protected status consideration for additional rivers.

Public hearings will be held later this year on the draft rules that the board staff is still putting into final form.

The action on Friday took considerable time as the board reworked the legal documents needed to grant protection to the five rivers. Some members suggested the entire scheme will be challenged.

"Everything we do today is going to be looked at very carefully by some people," member J.D. Williams said, and Gray replied, "Like the Supreme Court."

Care

first day, starting in 1989. Under current law, Medicare enrollees pay $40 for the first day, gets the next 50 days free, and then pays $100 a day.

An annual ceiling of $1,370 for the beneficiary's share of payments for doctor bills. The cap is reduced to $685 for patients with additional charges. Under current law, the beneficiary pays 20 percent of doctor charges, with no limit on total payments during the year. (The patient is still responsible for charges in excess of the fees recommended by Medicare.)

Medicare coverage of prescription drugs for the first time, with the government paying 50 percent of the charges in 1991, after the patient has paid the first $600 in a year. The government's share will rise to 80 percent by 1993, with the deductible increasing with inflation.

A new "respite care" benefit, with the government paying for the costs of 80 hours a year for a nurse or a health aide to come into the home and give the family some "time off" from caring for a patient.

Unlimited days of care in a hospice for a terminally ill patient. The current benefit is limited to 210 days.

Coverage of routine mammograms, an important screening procedure for breast cancer in women, starting in 1990, with a payment up to $50. This is a new benefit.

An expansion of skilled nursing care following an illness 150 days compared with the current limit of 100 days. A doctor must certify that medical care is needed.

However, the bill does not cover what is potentially the most devastating financial burden to the elderly, the prospect of an extended stay in a nursing home for custodial care. The cost averages $22,000 a year, and isn't covered by Medicare or most private insurance policies.

Custodial care typically is for the chronically ill who cannot care for themselves, such as a patient rendered helpless by strokes, or victims of Alzheimer's disease, who suffer progressive mental and physical deterioration.

The congressional law on educational opportunities for the handicapped, the court majority said the district could not ignore the federal law's mandate to mainstream handicapped students to the maximum extent possible just because it did not agree with it.

Family remembers victim of Vietnam

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The name of Pat Wiggins won't be among the 364 inscribed on Utah's memorial to its Vietnam War dead. After all, he made it home alive and died in Denver, not the Mekong Delta. But his family sees him as no less a casualty of the war, mortally wounded by the guilt that drove him to suicide five years to the day after his Army unit's murderous pass through an enemy village.

"All down through family history, we've gone to war," says Wiggins' mother, Charlotte Wilson. "We've always said, 'God first and country second.'"

On Monday she will attend groundbreaking ceremonies for the Vietnam memorial, much as she honors her ancestors who fought in the Revolutionary War. But she feels a nagging pain for her son and others like him.

"They were every bit as much a victim of the war and they ought to be recognized," she said. "It seems like they suffered even more than those who died over there."

Ferrel Blaine Wiggins Jr., nicknamed Pat, was the only son of a career Army master sergeant. At the relatively advanced age of 27 — too old to be drafted — he volunteered for reasons of patriotism and family tradition for a war he didn't really believe in.

Fresh out of Brigham Young University, a political science graduate, he was an accomplished debater, a reader, a thinker. More pacifist than warrior, he envisioned a political career.

With his spit-and-polish background, Wiggins took his military training seriously, winning soldier-of-the-month honors before being assigned in April 1968 to the 9th Infantry Division in the Mekong Delta.

His tour completed in the spring of 1969, Wiggins returned to a family that didn't know him. "My first thought when I saw him was total shock," the weight he had lost and the look in his eyes," said his sister, Nedra Riley.

He couldn't sit still and aimlessly walked the streets of Provo. He didn't talk much about the war, but when he did it was evident he felt guilty to be alive.

She urged him to come to Denver and meet her best friend, Jeanette. They were married a year later in 1971. A few months after he'd shown her in an old newspaper clipping about a bloody operation he'd been part of in the Delta on Dec. 18, 1968.

For a while things went well. Wiggins was a reserve Denver police officer and sold life insurance, a job he hated because he knew many of his customers couldn't afford the policies he pitched them.

Board staff seeks ways to strengthen director

MOSCOW (AP) — The staff of the state Board of Education is launching an investigation of ways to strengthen the board's beleaguered executive director's position.

The board ordered the effort in response to the call from Gov. Cecil Andrus during its meeting in Moscow this past week to strengthen governance of Idaho's higher education system.

Andrus described the executive director's position as "neutered" and suggested several solutions, including buttressing the authority of the executive director. With the resignation of Richard Sperring this spring and the appointment of an interim director, the governor and others have said now is the time to make any significant changes.

The board directed its personnel committee to come up with recommendations by September on ways to accomplish that.

The board also asked its staff to gather information on governance options and to submit the material to the board's ad hoc committee for analysis.

The ad hoc committee, organized in May, consists of the president, past president, and executive director of the board. It addresses managerial and administrative issues.

Although board President Charles Grant of Rexburg told Andrus on Wednesday that the board would consider his suggestions, the board did not take any formal action on the matter until just before the 3-day meeting ended Thursday.

U.S. arms negotiator wants to return to Idaho, teaching

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A native Idahoan who has headed the U.S. disarmament negotiating efforts in Switzerland during the Reagan administration, is contemplating a return to the state to teach when his job runs out next year.

Lynn Hansen, 52, current the assistant director of the State Department's Arms Control Agency, says he has made no decisions about his future once President Reagan leaves office next January, but the retired Air Force officer is interested in returning to Idaho where his family still lives.

"What I think I'd like to do is go back into academics, maybe Idaho State or Boise State," said Hansen, who is spending the holiday weekend with his family in Idaho Falls.

"Students may be taught the theory of negotiations, but what I would be able to talk about is the reality."

And to Hansen, the Reagan administration has biased a trail in arms reduction that will be followed by the next administration, whether it is headed by Democratic Gov. Michael Dukakis or Republican Vice President George Bush.

"This administration in the last two to three years has invested so much, the next president will have no choice but to continue on course," Hansen said.

He called the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces Treaty the beginning of things to come in negotiations between the United States and Soviet Union.

Utah seeks Hi Fi case death warrant

OGDEN (AP) — The attorney general's office on Friday delivered a petition seeking a death warrant for condemned Hi Fi defendant William Andrews to 2nd District Court here.

Because there was no judge available to sign for the document, the petition won't formally be filed until court reopens on Tuesday.

Assistant Attorney General Sandra L. Sjogren said the petition will be filed with Judge John F. Wahlquist, who will set a date for a hearing on the matter.

Sjogren said that once the warrant is issued and an execution date set Andrews' attorneys probably will request a stay. Although Andrews has exhausted his avenues of direct appeal in the case, his lawyers have a habeas corpus petition pending before the Utah Supreme Court.

Andrews, 33, was sentenced to death in 1975 murder of the torture-slaysings of three people during a robbery of the Ogden Hi Fi Shop.

Waste cleanup plan to cost $2 billion

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — It will cost up to $2 billion just to determine how to clean up buried radioactive waste at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, a Department of Energy report says.

The report, released Friday by U.S. Senate Governmental Affairs Committee Chairman John Glenn, D-Ohio, said it could cost even more to actually clean up waste buried from 1952 to 1970.

More than 2 million cubic feet of nuclear-contaminated material was buried at the Radioactive Waste Management Complex before the practice was stopped and temporary above-ground disposal began in 18 years ago.

It would say $500 million is a good number for now, but I wouldn't be surprised to see it go up."

About $28 million needs to be spent on INEL cleanup by 1995, the report said. Afterward, another $915 million to $2.1 billion may be spent on the Radioactive Waste Management Complex alone.

But an environmental critic of waste management at INEL maintained that is not enough.

According to the report, 381 kilograms of transuranic material and 85,400 gallons of poisonous organic chemicals comprise the waste. The organic chemicals have been detected in the Snake River Plain Aquifer more than 300 feet below the site and in the complex drinking water. Transuranic material, heavy elements that remain radioactive for thousands of years, have been found in sediment beds below the site.

Liz Paul of the Snake River Alliance said the INEL is getting "the short end of the stick" in the cleanup budget.

"The DOE is responding to public, legal and political pressure, very little of which is coming from Idaho," she said. "It is only when production is threatened that the DOE starts to spend money for environmental cleanup." The state of Idaho has not been "forceful enough."

The government may spend over $2.5 billion on cleanup at the INEL while it spends $110 billion nationally, she said.

The INEL's low share of the budget does not reflect a lack of problems but a lack of public pressure from Idaho, Ms. Paul said, "and what the DOE thinks it can get away with."

By comparison, she said, political and legal pressure in Washington state has led to a larger cleanup budget for the Hanford Nuclear Reservation near Richland.

But Energy Department spokesman Chris Sankey said the report was a compilation of material put together by the field offices. DOE headquarters had not evaluated the information nor placed any priorities on the remedial projects.

INEL cites engineers for storage process

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — While the government struggled with the multi-billion-dollar costs of cleaning up radioactive wastes, officials honored the scientists and technicians who came up with an effective alternative to handling liquid radioactive wastes.

They were recognized Friday on the 25th anniversary of the Waste Calcining Facility that has turned liquid, high-level radioactive waste at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory's Chemical Processing Plant into easy-to-store solid granules.

"The farsighted people we had here in the late '50s and early '60s recognized we had to do something with the liquid waste other than hold it in tanks," said Donald Olte, INEL manager.

The liquid waste is a byproduct of the chemical reprocessing of nuclear fuel rods taken from U.S. Navy and government reactors. Uranium 235 is recovered in the process, leaving highly radioactive fission products and metals in liquid form along with acids used to dissolve the rods.

At other DOE sites, including the Hanford Nuclear Reservation in Washington and the Savannah River Plant in South Carolina, similar waste was neutralized and placed in underground tanks made from carbon steel. These tanks eventually corroded and leaked, causing significant environmental contamination.

But INEL scientists and managers decided to leave the waste in an acidic state and store it in stainless steel tanks, which are less prone to leaking. It also allowed them to develop the waste calcining process.

When the INEL made those key choices in the 1950s, the decisions were not popular in many sections of the Atomic Energy Commission,

Seminar dispels mystery

By ADRIENNE TOOMEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — When Jim Miller was asked to teach a journalism class next fall, he was dumbfounded.

"I've always been a science-oriented person," the Minidoka High School biology and physical science teacher said.

Miller agreed to teach the class but said, "I was afraid of what it would be like without a foundation in journalism."

To prepare himself, he enrolled in The Times-News Mass Communications Seminar.

The seminar, held June 20-July 1, was designed to dispel mass media mystery. The 24 high school students and teachers participating in the seminar became familiar with the nuts and bolts of newspaper production.

"We want them to walk away with a better understanding of what happens in the fast-paced world of journalism," said Mary Lu Barry, a Twin Falls High School journalism teacher who organized the seminar. "Hopefully, it's been a real eye-opening experience."

For four hours each morning, students and teachers learned about photojournalism, page layout, writing, the Associated Press and journalism career opportunities.

"We wanted to offer a smattering of ideas and activities," said Barry. "We gave them a taste of everything."

Seminar participants also had some hands-on newspaper experience. They created advertising campaigns and presented them. Working on computers, they wrote news stories and experimented with page layout.

"Working in the newsroom was a wonderful opportunity," said Barry. "They were right there, so they saw writers working and people carrying around... They got valuable tips from professionals. You can't pick that kind of thing up from a textbook."

Seventeen students, ages 15-18, attended the two-week seminar. See SEMINAR on Page A6

Company to bring 30 jobs to area

By MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The handcraft manufacturing company, Mario Jason Originals, has confirmed it is definitely moving to Twin Falls and will bring 30 jobs with it.

The company is purchasing the Wolverton Parts building on Third Avenue West and will move its operations from North Hollywood, Calif., this summer.

The company has been in business for 15 years producing art pieces including brass products, sculptures and collectibles for such customers as Hallmark and J.C. Penney. It is also developing a product line to be marketed exclusively through catalog sales.

"We recognized the growth and expansion opportunities that Idaho holds," said Wayne Bosh, the president and chief executive officer, who is originally from Wendell. "The area's artists and craftsmen complement the expansion we are seeking. The company plans to employ 30 people initially and expects to grow to a workforce of 45 or 50 within the next year.

Bosh said he was impressed with the willingness to help, from the Idaho Department of Commerce all the way to the Twin Falls city officials.

Gov. Cecil Andrus, who issued a press release on the move Friday, also praised the cooperative efforts of state and local officials in helping smooth the path for the company's relocation.

Additional assistance of a very practical sort is coming from a rather unconventional source. Austin Hall, owner of Austin's Express, a Twin Falls trucking company, is donating the use of three semi-trailer trucks and drivers to bring the Mario Jason Originals equipment from California.

Hall explained that "21 years ago I wanted to move back to Idaho from California and I was on my own all the way—I think if anyone can help the Department of Commerce bring new businesses into Idaho—they should do whatever is necessary."

Environmental groups form in Magic Valley

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley is sprouting homegrown environmental groups following hearings last spring on plans to start a federal special isotope separation—plutonium plant in eastern Idaho.

The newly named Citizens Against Radioactive Environment with about 30 members from the Twin Falls area met several times in Twin Falls City Park since the hearings.

"We are trying to be visible and expand beyond SIS," says Kathy Sursely, CARE spokeswoman. CARE has taken P.O. Box 2772 in Twin Falls.

FOCUS with about 40 members from the Burley area, also started in March after the SIS hearings, says spokeswoman Carla Shockey of Burley.

CARE and FOCUS members held a joint meeting at City Park on Wednesday night.

The meeting attracted local political leaders — state Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls; Twin Falls County Commission candidate Gary Nielsen, a Democrat; and Democrat organizer Don McMurrain.

Black says he attended because he was interested in learning more about environmental problems at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory where the SIS plant would be located. Levelly, INEL's plans to inject low level radioactive waste into the Snake River Plain Aquifer on an emergency basis have been grabbing headlines.

The aquifer, flowing beneath the lab and stretching west to Bliss, is already contaminated with low levels of radioactive cesium from INEL operations at its eastern end.

The aquifer is part of a water system that provides the Magic Valley's drinking, stock and irrigation water. "I am definitely against the injection well. That's foolhardy," Black

No records are broken during June scorcher

By ADRIENNE TOOMEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — June was a scorcher.

People living in homes without air-conditioning stood in front of open refrigerators for relief. Children sprayed each other with hoses, and dogs panted in the shade.

Although June temperatures sizzled the Magic Valley, "no extreme records were broken," said Bill Galkin of the National Weather Service in Kimberly. The average monthly temperature was 67.6 degrees, only 3.7 degrees above normal.

The really strange thing about June was that nighttime temperatures were extremely warm during the last two weeks of the month. "I said Galkin, 'Usually, the nights cool down pretty good after sunset.'"

Twin Falls' relatively high elevation, approximately 4,000 feet, usually keeps June's nighttime temperatures in the high 40s. In contrast, from June 16 to 28, they ranged from 50 to 69 degrees.

While June temperatures were higher than average, the month's precipitation fell below normal levels. The total precipitation at the Kimberly Weather Service amounted to only .09 inches, 46 inches below normal.

Board discusses effects of drought on foliage and water supply for grazing

By SHERRI SCHLOSS
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — Election of officers and discussion of the drought were among the items discussed at the Burley District Grazing Advisory Board meeting Tuesday.

Newly elected officers to head the board are Dale Pierce, chairman, and Dale Thomas, vice chairman. The election coincided with rechartering the advisory board. The new charter guarantees the continuance of the Burley district group until May 1990.

Bureau of Land Management, conservationists Duane Wilson and Kurt Kotter told the board about the effects of the drought on the foliage and water supply from now until the end of the grazing season.

Conditions in the Deep Creek Resource Area in Oneida County resemble the first part of August and worsen further on south, Kotter said. Wildlife and Kottler predicts the herds will come off the summer ranges two weeks to a month early because of scant growth.

The BLM said it would refund unspent portions of licenses for those whose stock some off the range early.

The Twin Falls area was helped by the foot of snow that fell in early May, Wilson told the board. Conditions are close to normal until near the Goose Creek Area but from there to across the Snake River plain and up to the Raft River area, drought situations worsen because springs are either dry or drying up, he said. He said he uncertain whether the summer grazing will end prematurely in this area.

Livestock may also have to be brought in early in the northside area, where cattle numbers are already down 50 percent, he said. In other action, the board discussed a continuing problem of the unauthorized use of public lands. Trespassing can include powerlines, roads, rights of way, homes or other buildings on public lands.

Unauthorized use can result in damaged resources and lost money from rent had the land been used legally, BLM's Karl Simonson said.

Simonson said Idaho has the largest number of trespass cases in local compared with other western states. Last year 845 cases of unauthorized use were reported while nearby states averaged 300 or less. Near Burley, 63 cases were found in the Deep Creek Resource Area and 60 in the Snake River Resource Area, according to a survey by the Burley district.

Simonson said he expects about the same number of violations will be found to have occurred in the West Cassin and Twin Falls areas when they are inventoried. Dumping in unauthorized areas is causing problems in Minidoka County around the desert perimeter, especially near German Lake, board member Henry Etcheverry said. The board agreed that to avoid illegal dumping, a designated area needs to be established and penalties enforced if people continue to use the unauthorized dumps but it did not specify the designating areas.

Because of recent changes in grazing fee regulations, Richard Wright of the BLM recommend the board encourage permittees to pay their fees by the due date. New changes specify that after 30 days, unpaid fees will result in a cancellation of grazing privileges.

Buhl may need more space for growing vo-ag program

By DON PUDER
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Buhl High School will need another classroom, more storage space and an additional teacher if enrollment in the vocational-agriculture program continues to increase, vo-ag teacher Dave Krueger told the board.

There are 76 freshmen and sophomore students enrolled in the introductory class, and if the trend continues, there will probably be a need for an additional teacher by the 1989-90 school year, Krueger said.

He also asked the trustees to consider updating the current greenhouse and a livestock building and corral.

The board decided to talk about possible expansion and other building projects at a special meeting, July 18.

Also at the meeting, the board tentatively named extra-curricular assignments for the coming year. High school coaches named were Keith Meitzner, football, with Gene Clemens, Clark Muscat, Rick McNurlin and Ralph Freidemann as assistants; Tom Chivers, boys' basketball, with Mike Gemar and Ed Richards as assistants; Jen Shepard, girls' basketball, with Clark Muscat as assistant; Ed Richards, volleyball, with Robert Chanton as assistant; Gene Clemens, wrestling, with Pat Milligan as assistant.

The board named no head track coach, but named Joe Greif and Rick McNurlin as assistants. Greif was named cross-country coach, and Joe Shepard, baseball.

At the middle school, the board named Gemar and Bob Sparks as football coaches; Patty TenCate, volleyball; Meitzner, wrestling; and Colvin Bartosovics, girls' basketball.

The boys' basketball and track coaches have not been named.

In other action: The trustees approved a request to trade in three typewriters and purchase three replacements.

Three days before the end of the fiscal year, the budget was reported to be 97.1 percent expended.

Barbara Weaver, outgoing school trustee, was thanked by Spiropoulos and the other trustees for her efforts and commitment to the district during her tenure on the board.

This was the last meeting Spiropoulos attended. In May he accepted the superintendent position in St. Helens, Ore., and left this week.

Kissinger to give lecture at CSI

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Former U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger will speak at the College of Southern Idaho on Oct. 20.

One of the most notable secretaries of state in U.S. history and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, Kissinger will lecture on international geo-political conditions and their effects on American domestic and international affairs.

The event is part of a continuing education series at the college that began with Tom Peters here last December.

Kissinger's visit is being sponsored by the Greater Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce. The chamber will be hosting a Success Breakfast at the college for its members before Kissinger's address, which is tentatively scheduled for 9 a.m.

HENRY KISSINGER Will visit Twin Falls

He will arrive by jet the afternoon of Oct. 18. Plans for that evening have not yet been determined. The cost of the event will be announced next week and tickets will go on sale then. Seating will be limited.

Jerry Beck, the dean of continuing education, hopes to bring in 100 high school seniors from around the valley for the speech. He will be contacting businesses and asking them to sponsor one or more students.

He also expects to draw a number of people from Boise and Pocatello. The estimated cost of bringing Kissinger here is in excess of $20,000. Ticket sales are anticipated to cover the cost.

Kissinger served as secretary of state under President Nixon and President Ford, and was a consultant to the White House during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

He has most recently served as chairman of the Bipartisan Commission on Central America.

No injuries seen from nitrate spill

YELLOWPINE, Idaho (AP) — No one was injured and apparently no serious environmental damage occurred as a result of a small spill of ammonium nitrate near Yellowpine; authorities reported.

State Law Enforcement Director Mack Richardson said the trailer of a truck hauling the fertilizer left the Sibrite road Friday afternoon and straddled the Twin Creek bridge. Richardson said the truck was operated by Savage Trucking Co. About 200 pounds of the fertilizer spilled through a fished-hole in the trailer before the driver was able to stuff his shirt in the hole and stop the leak. The trailer was carrying 12 tons of the substance.

"There were no injuries, and the trucking company and mine personnel will supervise removal of the trailer and any spilled material," Richardson said.

The ammonium nitrate was being hauled to a mining site to be used in blasting. When mixed with diesel oil it produces an explosive.

Julia Jensen Staffen, 23, was pronounced dead at St. Benedict's Family Medical Center in Jerome. Authorities said the car's driver, Michael Todd Polard, was taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls where he was scheduled to undergo surgery.

Polard, 19, of Twin Falls, was driving ing south on U.S. Highway 93 when he lost control of the car—at around 7:45 p.m., said Gerald Birt, corporal with the Jerome County Sheriff's Office. The car, a 1982 Datsun Stanza, went off the road's east side and rolled twice.

Polard was apparently ejected from the vehicle, said Staffen, and appeared to have been wearing her seatbelt.

The accident is still under investigation.

Water Resource Board bids on slice of revenue surplus

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Water Resources Board has drawn down its water management loan account to almost nothing and has put its bid for a slice of the multimillion-dollar 1988 state revenue surplus.

In a series of actions Friday, the board granted loans from the account to the city of Downey and the Trow Creek Water Association at Perthville for completion of water system improvements.

But while the loans will eventually be paid back with interest, the fund, that was started with $1 million now has a balance of under $200,000.

The board instructed Water Resources Director Keith Higginson to actively seek a piece of the surplus, estimated to be as much as $20 million, either in a special session if one is called to spend the money or next winter when lawmakers convene the 1989 regular session.

"This is the kind-of-year-the-people of Idaho should make this kind of investment," Higginson told the board. But the leader of the state Senate, Republican James Risch, has already said the bulk of any surplus will go to education. The actual amount of the surplus will be determined in the next week or two.

Higginson and the board, however, bolstered their case for a share of the windfall, pointing out that lawmakers raided the account in 1983 for $500,000 to help erase a huge budget deficit and never restored that money.

"The biggest drain on the account Friday was the board's approval of a $25,000 loan to the Trow Creek Water Association to complete work on its new well and consolidate loans obtained to finance it.

"We don't put a lot of money up in that area so I think we should do as much as we can to help them," board member J.D. Williams said.

The 500-foot well to serve the 40 association members was required by state to meet public drinking water system regulations. The loan will be paid back over 10 years at 6 percent interest.

"The only condition placed on the loan was that the association clear up a dispute with one of its members over the water right to serve well—Merrilee Lamm Watkins challenged the water right, afraid pumping from the well would negatively affect his springs."

Accident victim's identification given

CHALLIS (AP) — Roy Wayne Crum of Challis has been identified as the man who was killed Wednesday evening when the tree he was cutting fell on him, authorities said.

LeBaron, Mexico (AP) — Ervil LeBaron's bloody doctrine of vengeance haunts his relatives in this polygamist community.

Only hours after three former members of LeBaron's Church of the Lamb of God came to a child were murdered in Houston and Dallas Monday, the news reached this remote desert colony.

Investigators believe the slayings were carried out by members of the sect, perhaps in retaliation for the victim's breaking from the group. Three of Ervil LeBaron's sons are being sought for questioning on the case.

"People felt pretty bad the thing was still being carried out. They thought things had died out and people had started living their normal lives," Brent LeBaron, Ervil's nephew, told the Houston Post in a copyright story published Friday.

Alma LeBaron, 70, Ervil's brother, believes the Lambs of God will leave the people here alone if they truly want to follow their leader's last wishes.

LeBaron said he visited his brother in a Salt Lake City prison shortly before he died in 1981 while serving a life sentence for murder, and Ervil called for an end to the killing.

"Ervil told me he wanted no more trouble... He didn't want it killing to continue. He wanted it stopped. He wanted peace," said LeBaron, now a bishop for the Economic Religious Group, one of three separate religious sects of LeBaron that follow the teachings of Ervil's brother, Joel.

But others have said that before he died, Ervil LeBaron penned a blueprint for revenge, a death list for those he believed had betrayed him.

Monday showed the faithful here that the Church of the Lamb of God was 'spilling blood again, as it had more than 15 years ago when Ervil fought with his brother Joel for con-rol of the Church of the First Born of the Fullness of Times.

Joel LeBaron was slain during that struggle, but his sect and its followers did not accept the leadership of Ervil. The Lambs of God left Mexico, but their memory remains — the nephews of Ervil remember well their uncle and his deadly teaching of "blood atonement."

"We are on guard. We are looking over our shoulders. We're at least being careful because we don't know their minds, what they might do," said Brent LeBaron.

Brent has memories of bloodshed that go back a long way. He said he was in Los Molinos the night his uncle's followers raided the settlement of Joel's followers. He was 13 when the raiders firebombed most of the homes in the colony, killed two people and wounded 15 others.

"My older brother Stephen was only 14½ years old," he said.

Seminar

The seminar was the idea of Bill Howard, publisher of the Times-News, and Stephen Hartgen, managing editor.

"The idea grew out of a concern that journalism education in America is in a good deal of flux," said Hartgen. "What evolved was a feeling to do something in the valley to expose young people and teachers to what an exciting career field communications can be."

On the basis of their writing and participation during the seminar, two students were selected as Times-News summer interns. Rachel Harrell, who graduated in June from Twin Falls High School, will be assigned to the newsroom. Scott Crawford, also a Twin Falls High School graduate, will work in the advertising department.

The seminars will give them a chance to hang around the paper on a paid basis and get additional exposure to the news industry," said Hartgen. "It gives you a warm, furry feeling to help someone younger and greener along."

Jon Lawrence, Filer High School's speech, drama and English teacher, said he was excited about the seminar. "You've got features about plays. You don't write the play is just and this is who's in it."

While two students were from Murtagh High School, the remainder live in Twin Falls. "I was disappointed we didn't have kids from other schools in the valley," said Barry, who sent informative letters to every high school in Times News' eight county circulation area.

In the future, Barry may visit schools that do not have journalism programs or school papers to promote the seminar. "We get hit with the mass media every day," said Barry. "It's a program for kids who go to schools without these outlets to have an understanding of what goes on."

"I'm hoping to teach my students more about publicizing plays," said Barry.

Weather

The precipitation was really "spotted," Galkin said. "It came mainly in thunderstorms. If you got under those clouds, you'd get wet."

June's low rainfall did not significantly harm farmers' crops, according to Galkin. "As long as they have adequate irrigation water, and most farmers in the Magic Valley do, the crops grew pretty well."

"The hot weather, however, did have a negative effect by pushing the evaporation level to more than 11 inches. A good portion of the irrigation water went into the atmosphere," said Galkin. "The plants didn't get the benefit, and the farmers had to irrigate more often."

The National Weather Service in Boise predicts that temperatures will be near normal during July. High temperatures will range from the upper 80s to mid 90s. Low temperatures will be in the 50s.

Precipitation levels are also expected to be near normal this month, with totals of one-tenth inch to one-third inch.

Rebel archbishop has staunch support

NEW YORK (AP) — American followers of rebel Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre say they are sticking with his movement rejecting Roman Catholic reforms despite his break with the official church.

Other American adherents of the Lefebvre revolt, organized internationally as the Priestly Society of St. Pius X, expressed the same determination when they were asked to sign a statement.

The U.S. wing of the Lefebvre movement has 29 priests, about 95 centers across the country for worship in the traditional Tridentine Latin Mass, an estimated 10,000 lay participants, and various substantial programs.

school, high school and two-year college at St. Marys, Kan. "There's no dissension in our ranks," said James Huvar of Victoria, Texas, one of about 15 seminarians refurbishing new quarters for their St. Thomas Aquinas Seminary near Winona, Minn.

His consecration of four bishops in Switzerland on Thursday in defiance of Rome brings his automatic excommunication and marks the first split in the church in 118 years.

These listed include St. Vincent's Church in Katesville, Mo.; Immaculate Conception Church and a grammar school at Post Falls, Idaho; Queen of Angels Church and printing press for its magazine, Angelus, at Dickinson, Texas; and a primary school, high school and two-year college at St. Marys, Kan. "There's no dissension in our ranks," said James Huvar of Victoria, Texas, one of about 15 seminarians refurbishing new quarters for their St. Thomas Aquinas Seminary near Winona, Minn.

He is taking measures to insure continuation of the Catholic priesthood, the traditional Mass and survival of the church, said Timothy McDonnell, a seminarian from Manitowish, Wis.

"We're holding fast to the faith, which is what a true Catholic does. We know he (Lefebvre) is teaching the truth."

They succeeded cardinals who had all turned 75, the age at which Vatican officials are expected to turn in their resignations.

But the further step of consecrating new bishops to perpetuate his revolt beyond his lifetime formalizes the breach with Rome, marking failure of recent Vatican negotiations for reconciliation.

He and others followers echoed charges by Lefebvre that Rome's embroilment with other churches and the veneration of the Virgin Mary violated Catholic tradition and were "democratizing" it.

What's what

To start the talk...

You have a fantastic phrase—a volume called "The Frase Book" says, "That's a total opening time to break the conversational ice. Our Love and War man doesn't agree. He thinks a good opener must arouse curiosity and cur an easy answer. Any suggestions?"

"A man becomes what he does," said Madison-Wheeler.

"Cowboy outfits were created by Buffalo Bill. For his Wild West Show."

Q. Where'd the "key" in "Key West" come from?

A. The British word for dock is "key" pronounced "key." From that, the Bahamian word for island became "cay" likewise pronounced "key." Finally, the spelling was changed to conform with the pronunciation thereabouts.

Q. Do cats get AIDS?

A. Something like it. Vets say the fatal feline disease seems to have infected about 7 percent of the cat population so far, and it's spreading swiftly.

Q. What's "synesthesia"?

A. Visualizing musical notes in color.

Q. Lot of people do it. Deep notes are dark, high notes light.

COLDS

When youngsters first go to school, they bring home more cold bugs. To pass on to household grognos. Such is the generally accepted belief—but the stress-causes colds theorists say. Just the fact that the kids are starting school might be the cause. That's stressful.

Q. In what sport do the athletes use tire irons?

A. Abalone fishing. The ladder is supposed to be four feet longer than the height you're trying to reach.

Police veteran takes chief to court for slap

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - A 14-year police veteran says the police chief slapped her on the face in November and has repeatedly attempted to deny it.

Rikki Venemon notified the city attorney in a June 3 letter that she intended to sue the city and Chief Richard Walker.

She had declined to talk to reporters about the Nov. 2 incident, pending the results of an investigation ordered June 3 by Mayor Bud Clark.

However, on Thursday she provided The Associated Press with her account of the incident.

Walker has claimed that the incident was simply a misunderstanding over a gentle pat on the face.

RIKKI VENEMON
Accuses chief of slapping

But Venemon told the AP that the chief slapped her hard enough to turn her head, and for no apparent reason. She said she believes the city and Walker are trying to misrepresent and distort the facts.

The slap "shocked" her at the time, and she said she still doesn't understand why it occurred.

It was completely out of the blue," she said.

Venemon said she was leaving the police parking lot beneath the downtown Justice Center building in an unmarked vehicle to begin a plainclothes robbery detail with her supervisor, Sgt. Michael Barkley, when she saw the chief heading for his car.

She said she asked to stop and greet Walker, who approached her.

Venemon said she and the chief exchanged pleasantries, then Walker asked where she was heading. When she told him about the robbery detail, Walker told her something like, "You better keep an eye on him," meaning Barkley.

Venemon said she responded, jokingly, that, "Maybe I should keep an eye on you, instead," and at that point the chief slapped her hard on the right side of the face.

"I never saw it coming," Venemon said. "He just hit me, for absolutely no reason."

Walker turned around and left without saying anything about the slap, she said, and it took her weeks to get an appointment with him to discuss it, and then only after filing an official request.

When she finally was allowed to see Walker he denied the incident took place, she said.

Venemon said that Multnomah County District Attorney Michael Schruink attended the first meeting with Walker but she did not tell Schruink the details until Wednesday.

Schruink confirmed he talked with Venemon on Wednesday, but he said she did not go into detail about the incident. He said his first impression of the case was that it appeared "to be no big deal."

Deictave David Simpson, a spokesman for the chief, said Thursday that the city attorney's office had advised Walker not to comment.

Simpson added that it's up the mayor to decide if the findings of the investigation, being conducted by City Attorney Jeff Rogers.

However, Chuck Duffy, a spokesman for the mayor, said the police chief may be the one to decide.

The only witness to the incident was Barkley, a 10-year veteran whom Walker recently awarded a police medal of valor. Barkley has repeatedly declined to comment.

Barkley's attorney, Scott Erik Asphaug, said his client would not comment. "Sgt. Barkley is merely a witness in this case. He has retained our law firm due to the fact that the scope of this investigation has gone beyond merely the incident, and clearly has political overtones."

Gorbachev ends conference with talk of perestroika

MOSCOW (AP) - Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Friday night closed the national Communist Party conference on his program of perestroika, saying resolutions endorsed by the delegates lead the way to a "democratic image of socialism."

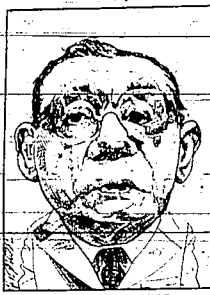

The four-day conference, the first held by the party since 1941, was unprecedented in the openness of criticism of past and present leaders.

Gorbachev pointed out one key to the four-day conference - the effort to overcome the party's "elitist legacy" when he called for reconstruction of a monument to the victims of Josef Stalin.

Gorbachev spoke after the convening of 5,000 party members adopted resolutions in what the news agency called an "unusually stormy and long debate."

The meeting, which was called by Gorbachev to pass judgment on a 3-year-old policy of restructuring Soviet society, formally closed after his address.

The Soviet leader also engaged in a long critique of the work of

ANDREI GROMYKO Given chairmanship

Communist Party honors Gromyko

MOSCOW (AP) - Soviet President Andrei A. Gromyko was honored with the chairmanship of a session of the national Communist Party conference on Friday, one day after he was criticized for contributing to the country's stagnation.

Soviet television showed Gromyko, 78, standing at a lectern in the Kremlin's Palace of Congress as he opened the morning session.

On Thursday Vladimir I. Melnikov, party boss in the Russian republics region of Moscow, told the conference that Soviets want high officials who served under Leonid I. Brezhnev removed.

"Those who in the past actively promoted the policy of stagnation may not surge and work on the central party and government bodies now," Melnikov said.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev interrupted to ask who Melnikov had in mind, and among those the Komi official listed was Gromyko.

That criticism cost Yeltsin his job and his spot as a candidate member of the ruling Politburo. Tass said the conference adopted a package of six resolutions, saying the debate on bureaucracy, inter-ethnic relations and Gorbachev's policy of "glasnost" or more openness, were particularly thorough. It did not say what the resolutions said.

several votes on amendments, and that the conference rejected proposals by space scientist Ronald S. Gidycz on elections to government councils.

An amendment calling for the Communist Party newspaper Pravda to be taken out of the hands of the policy-making Central Committee received only 56 votes, it said.

"In an apparent reference to the time of Stalin, Gorbachev said the printed word was a servant of arbitrary totalitarianism." In contrast, he said, the conference had showed how the interparty debate must be carried out.

Before the conference debate ended, however, the long-simmering feud between Yeltsin and Kremlin No. 2 leader Yegor K. Ligachev broke into the open.

Yeltsin was judged as being politically mistaken by the party, but he said Friday his only mistake was poor timing.

Gorbachev said Yeltsin was chosen to run the Moscow party organization because of his experience and energy, but ultimately proved he could not handle the job. Ligachev, at whom much of Yeltsin's criticism was leveled, took the floor Friday evening to oppose his return, saying Yeltsin committed many errors and still hadn't learned his lesson.

Car bombs injure 52 in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Cars packed with explosives blew up Friday on a busy block in west Beirut and near a Syrian army checkpoint in the Bekaa valley, killing one person and injuring 52, police said.

A spokesman for a PLO splinter group, the Fatah Uprising, blamed supporters of Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat for the two blasts, which occurred 30 minutes apart.

The first explosion sent flames roaring across west Beirut's crowded Hamra Street, killing one person and injuring 32, a police spokesman said. The street is west Beirut's main commercial strip.

The spokesman said a second blast, which triggered 22 rounds of explosives went off at about 11:55 a.m. (2:55 a.m. EDT) in front of the downtown Grand Hotel. The explosion shattered windows in the hotel and nearby buildings.

Police could not confirm a radio report that the person killed was the automobile driver.

They said most of the injured were treated at hospitals for wounds caused by flying glass and later released.

Syrian soldiers and intelligence agents also harassed journalists, hitting reporters with rifle bullets, slapping photographers and confiscating cameras.

Police earlier had defused a bomb found in a Mercedes-Benz that had been parked near the Helou police barracks in West Beirut's busy Mar Elias street, they said.

Former envoy calls for crackdown

JERUSALEM (AP) - The man who may become Israel's foreign minister said Friday the army must "show firmness" and deplore hundreds of Palestinian activists in order to crush the 7-month-old rebellion in the occupied land.

A Palestinian woman died of gunshot wounds to the head and suffered in an army raid on her village May 18, said officials at Mukassab hospital in Jerusalem.

Only a harsh crackdown can restore Israel's ability to deter revolt among the 1.5 million Palestinians of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, said Benjamin Netanyahu, a former ambassador to the United Nations and a leading candidate in the November parliamentary election.

Netanyahu could be the next foreign minister if his right-wing Likud bloc wins the election. Likud and the rival center-left Labor Party share a tenuous national unity coalition and recent polls show them running even in the election campaign.

Soldiers shot Fatima Kaseem, 24, during a raid on Abwein, an isolated West Bank mountain village.

Stefan Edberg advances to Wimbledon final

The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — After Ivan Lendl fought off three match points against Boris Becker at Wimbledon Friday, darkness forced the match to be suspended.

Hours earlier, Stefan Edberg had turned the lights out on Miloslav Mecir.

Edberg, staging the biggest semifinal comeback here since countryman Bjorn Borg, rallied from two sets down to beat Mecir and put a Swede in the men's final for the first time in seven years.

"It was hard to believe I could come back today," Edberg said after his 4-6, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-1 victory. "It felt such a long way off. I was in big trouble, then I got my act together."

The start of the second semifinal was delayed 45 minutes by a downpour that began minutes after Edberg completed his miraculous comeback. But lightning didn't stop until the third set. When Lendl, the top seed, overcame three match points and won the tiebreaker 10-8, pushing the match to a second day.

Although it was the first set Becker has lost in the tournament, history will be on his side when the 6-4, 6-3, 6-7 match resumes Saturday prior to the women's final between Steffi Graf and Martina Navratilova.

The last time a men's semifinal was carried over, in 1985, Becker beat Anders Jarryd and went on to win the first of his two Wimbledon titles over Kevin Curren.

In the first match, Edberg, the third seed, fought off the bullet service returns and pinpoint volleys of Mecir to become the first Swedish finalist since Borg lost to John McEnroe in 1981.

To reach the 1981 final, Borg had to come back with a run that will take him back to the semifinals. Edberg did the same against Mecir, who didn't play for two months before Wimbledon because of back problems.

The ninth-seeded Czechoslovak, nicknamed the "Swords Killer" for his success against top Swedish players, blasted 31 service return winners and won two more points than Edberg in the 3-hour, 10-minute match. But that wasn't enough to beat Ed-berg, who had lost his last three Grand Slam semifinals.

Edberg, who won the Australian Open on grass in 1985 and 1987, is so laid back and soft spoken that some have accused him of being gutless. But he answered all questions about his character on Centre Court — the most pressure-packed tennis venue in the world.

"Believe it or not, I do have guts," said Edberg, who has a London home a short cab ride away from Wimbledon. "If I didn't have guts, I wouldn't have won today."

His coach, Tony Pickard, was more blunt. "Everybody's been knocking him," saying he didn't "got any guts and there's no fire in his belly," Pickard said. "This has made an awful lot of people look a bit silly."

Mecir, whose only Grand Slam final was the 1986 U.S. Open, had 12 break points in the third and fourth sets and failed to convert any of them.

"If I didn't have so many chances, if I was not so close to winning, I would not be so disappointed," he said.

Stefan Edberg celebrates his semi-final victory.

Boitano skates into Sun Valley show

By STEVE CRUMP

Times-News sports editor

SUN VALLEY — Brian Boitano hasn't slowed down much since Calgary, hasn't even turned professional. Hasn't had time.

"People are turning professional left and right," says the 1988 Olympic men's figure skating gold medalist, in Sun Valley this weekend for a couple of Sun Valley Ice Show performances which sold out earlier in the week. "I haven't turned pro yet, in part because it's hard to let go of the challenge of competing as an amateur, physically and mentally. It's difficult to walk away from what I have been doing for the last 16 years and start over."

Boitano will turn professional, of course, probably after his current U.S. tour. There's an international tour under his name in the works, and also a Christmas TV special.

"I'll miss the competition," he says. "Not so much competing against other skaters as competing against myself, of going out and facing the challenge of skating better this time than I did the time before."

At the moment, the 24-year-old Boitano is to men's figure skating what Mike Tyson is to heavyweight boxing. He's won two of the last three world championships — including the last one — and every major national title since Scott Hamilton turned professional after the 1984 Olympics.

"Right now, I'm as good a skater as I needed to be as an amateur," he says. "I never really liked my skating until this year, but this year has been different. I don't think I'm the best in the world, but I was the best that night in Calgary. Another night, I might not be."

Boitano, who went into the long program — the third stage of the Olympic figure skating competition — with a razor-thin lead over the defending world champion Brian Orser of Canada, won the gold in large part because he was not distracted by the attention focused on the competition. Now, he says, it's harder to concentrate on skating.

"It's difficult now because skating is kind of taking a back seat in my life," says Boitano. "For years, I've been able to focus on skating, but now there are so many other things going on. It's been an adjustment that's been hard to make."

Boitano says he felt the pressure in Calgary — when he skated the long program, the United States hadn't yet won a gold medal in the Games — but that most of it was positive.

"There were so many people so supportive of me in Calgary," he says. "The bobsledders came to watch me skate. Bonnie Blair came to watch me skate. My whole family was there the first time all of them had seen me skate in competition. Even the media was supportive. The press conferences were like high-fives."

In the weeks that followed, he received 7,000 letters.

"A lot of them were from kids, but I was getting letters from 35-year-old adults, people with 9-to-5 jobs telling me that I had inspired them to take a chance to go out and make changes in their lives."

Boitano began ice skating because he liked roller skating as a kid growing up in the San Francisco suburb of Sunnyvale, which is now at the heart of California's Silicon Valley. He saw a performance of the Ice Follies, and asked his father to take him ice skating.

ing. He first teacher was Linda Lavner, who is his coach today.

"There were skaters who were my idols as a kid, but nobody you ever heard of," he says. "Skating was something I did because it was fun, but if I hadn't been a skater, I would have been involved in some kind of sports — maybe gymnastics, or I might have been a sprinter."

Boitano began competing internationally in 1983, the year he became a U.S. national champion.

Tobin sparks team in Ore-Ida race

By COLIN MULLOON

Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — Katrin Tobin said she had something to prove and she's proved it.

The Ketchikan native, who now resides in Palo Alto, Calif., collaborated with Lowrey's Meat Snacks teammate Jane Marshall, giving the Lowrey cycling team the 1-2 punch it needed here Friday to secure a first-place team finish in the fifth annual Ore-Ida Women's Challenge.

The pair worked side by side, for the most part, in Friday's eighth stage — the Elkhorn Circuit Race — as Marshall took first place with an unofficial winning time of 1:05:15 and Tobin picked up the silver medal less than a second behind.

The second-place finish makes Tobin an almost odds-on favorite to win the overall Challenge championship, her first, and a victory that she said is a major confidence boost going into the Olympic cycling trials at the end of this month.

"What do I say?" she said. "Escalate? Elevate? This has given me a lot of confidence."

After finishing 21st in stage 6 — the 60-mile jaunt from Stanley to Ketchum — Tobin, the 1985 Prestige Points champion, said she had something to prove to her Wood River Valley supporters.

"After coming in from Stanley 21st," Tobin said, "people were saying, 'who is this Katrin Tobin?' I deserved to win this race (the Elkhorn circuit). I had a lot to prove."

Sold finishes in today's ninth and final stage — the Park Center Circuit in Boise — will assure Tobin of an overall individual title as well as a team victory for Lowrey's Meat Snacks when the race commences downtown at 3 p.m.

Tobin most assuredly deserved to win Friday's race. From the final three laps to the finish, her and Marshall were virtually side-by-side, but Tobin said afterward that it was Marshall's turn to take a victory in the Elkhorn leg of this year's challenge.

"We've each won one," Tobin said. "Today was Jane's (Marshall's) turn."

Each one of the four Lowrey's team members have taken an individual gold medal in this year's challenge.

Even though Tobin was considered a favorite for the overall championship and her first-place finish in first stage's race from Emmett to Boise

Public fish salvage set at Big Wood River

By The Times-News

SHOSHONE — Southern Idaho's driest summer in years accounts for the earliest and largest public fish salvage in Region 4 in memory.

Beginning Sunday morning the main Big Wood River, from the Richfield canal diversion to the Lincoln canal diversion; the Lincoln canal system (including laterals); and the Richfield canal system will be open to public salvage of fish through Dec. 31.

The department emphasizes Big Wood River from the dam to the Richfield canal diversion is not open to salvage but is open year-round to conventional fishing methods and limits.

Fish may be taken by snagging, spearfishing, archery, dipnet, seines or with the hands. Use of toxic chemicals, explosives, firearms or electric current is prohibited.

Bag and possession limits are removed but a valid fishing license is required to salvage fish.

The salvage of this section of the river is not unusual as the Big Wood River usually is cut off in the fall after irrigation dewatering and fish living in the stream and certain canals are lost.

The department has conducted a salvage operation in Richfield canal proper off and on over the years, depositing the harvested trout back in Magic Reservoir or nearby streams.

But Bob Bell, Region 4 fisheries manager for the department, said the dewatering at this time of year makes it nearly impossible for the department to conduct the salvage.

"With the temperatures of the past few days and the forecast of even hotter weather over the weekend, the fish will be subjected to immediate stress from water temperatures," he said.

"Anything above 76 or 77 degrees is very critical for trout," he said. "They will start dying at that level and if the water temperature gets above 80, the dieoff is pretty general."

Bell noted that the Richfield canal ran dry last winter and two weeks this summer. In previous years, particularly during open winters, the canal has remained open for fishing year-round and there has been carryover of trout.

But because of the dry conditions foreseen this time around, the department feels it is better for the public to harvest and use the fish rather than let them go to waste.

New 18 opens for tourney

TWIN FALLS — The Canyon Springs Amateur moves into a new era next weekend when the championship will be decided over the new 18-hole layout.

Host professional Del Ericson said "our plan is to open the course with all 18 regular greens on Wednesday to allow tournament entrants to play some practice rounds. They will remain open through the tournament and on Monday (July 11) we will make an evaluation of the new greens and decide then whether to continue using them for open play or not. But they definitely will be in play during the tournament."

Ericson added "in fact, if people ask this weekend we will let them play the new nine with four temporary greens."

The two-day tournament will offer gross and net prizes in the championship flight but the remaining flights will be paid off in net only.

Entry deadline is 7 p.m. Thursday, Ericson said, adding about 60 had entered through Friday night.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Rex Chapman and Shelton Jones, who played with the U.S. Select Team on its recent European tour, have decided to withdraw from the U.S. Olympic basketball trials, an U.S. amateur basketball official said Friday.

Tom McGrath, the associate executive director of the Amateur Basketball Association of the United States, said attorneys for both players notified Olympic coach John Thompson of their decision earlier this week.

According to McGrath, both players said they were withdrawing to concentrate on their professional careers. Chapman, a guard, who left the University of Kentucky after his sophomore season to turn pro, was selected by Charlotte in the first round of Tuesday's NBA draft as the eighth pick overall. Jones, a forward who played at St. John's, was chosen in the second round by San Antonio.

WSU athletic official dies

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Lynn Rosenbach, Washington State University's associate athletic director and father of Cougar quarterback Timm Rosenbach, died Friday, a sports department spokeswoman said.

The elder Rosenbach was pronounced dead at Whitman Community Hospital in Colfax at 12:05 a.m., said head nurse Dolores Robinson.

"He died shortly after he arrived here," she said. "He died from cancer."

Rosenbach collapsed while on a return trip to Pullman from the Tri-Cities Thursday night with football coach Dennis Erickson and Cougar Club director Bill Moss, said Renee Horton of the WSU sports information office.

"The WSU sports officials had been in the Tri-Cities for a golf tournament for a while, Horton said. Rosenbach was believed to be in his mid-50s, she said.

Olson passes Olympics for pay

BALTIMORE (AP) — Gregg Olson, the Baltimore Orioles' 1988 top draft choice, has decided to pass up playing for the U.S. Olympic baseball team and join the Orioles, a newspaper reported Friday.

Olson, the fourth pick overall in baseball's college draft last month, will work out briefly with the Orioles before being assigned to one of the team's minor-league affiliates, The Baltimore Evening Sun said. All that's holding up the relief pitcher from Auburn University is a release from the commissioner's office, which is required of any Olympic team candidate, according to an agreement between major league baseball and amateur baseball groups.

"Gregg feels it's time to get on with his career," Bill Olson, Gregg's father, said from his home in Omaha, Neb.

"All he's waiting for now is clearance from the commissioner's office and then he'll be with Baltimore," Olson said.

Olson said his son has informed the United States Baseball Federation and the U.S. Olympic Selection Committee of his decision.

"Gregg called me from Middletown, Tenn., a baseball Olympic town, and said, 'I'm coming home,'" Olson said. "I asked him why and he said that wasn't what he wanted to do—that he wanted to get started with his career."

"I told him to think about it for a day and call me the next night. When he called, he said, 'I'll be home tomorrow.' He told me it was the best he had felt all spring because now he didn't have any more decisions to make."

Olson had a 7-4 record with 10 saves and a 2.00 ERA in 36 games as a junior at Auburn University this year.

Bruce faces money question

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Fired Ohio State football coach Earle Bruce may have to return to Ohio State not only his $64,000 base salary as new head coach at Northern Iowa, but also other income as well, according to an attorney who represented the Ohio school.

John Elam, a Columbus attorney who represented the university when Bruce sued after his November 1987 firing, ultimately negotiated a $471,000 settlement with Bruce. Under terms of the settlement, Bruce agreed to return whatever salary he earns before July 1, 1989. Elam said Bruce's income from athletic equipment endorsements and television and radio contracts, his first year at Northern Iowa may also be owed OSU under terms of the Nov. 28 settlement.

"I would expect Earle Bruce and his counsel to be open and fair-right as to what the (financial) arrangements of the new contract are," said Elam. "The university has (an) ... obligation much more than any private business to maximize its income. Therefore, I think it's fair to assume that anything (in Bruce's new contract) will be looked at."

Buoniconti settles out of court

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — An apparent settlement was reached today between the major parties in the lawsuit against The Citadel by Marc Buoniconti, who was left quadriplegic after a tackle he made in a football game for the military college.

The $16.5 million suit, which has been in trial for three weeks, named as defendants The Citadel, school trainer Andy Clawson and team doctor E. K. Wallace Jr.

"The Citadel and Mr. Clawson ... those two defendants are no longer involved in the case," Circuit Judge John Hamilton Smith said after a 40-minute session in the judge's chambers with Buoniconti, his father — former Miami Dolphins star Nick Buoniconti — and attorneys for them and the school.

The case, however, will continue against Wallace, the judge said. Following the meeting, The Citadel's attorneys packed up their briefcases and sat in the courtroom with the audience as the jury returned and the case continued against the doctor. Before the meeting, Citadel attorneys had made a motion to limit the school's liability to the amount of the school's liability insurance coverage. That policy contains $1 million, according to James Bennett of the South Carolina Insurance Reserve Fund.

Subsidized White Sox stay in Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago White Sox fans were jubilant Friday over an astonishing victory in the state Legislature that will keep the ballclub in the city it's called home for nearly 90 years.

But many scorned the multimillion-dollar package for a new stadium to keep the ballclub from leaving town and blamed greediness on the part of the team's owners for the near-victory to St. Petersburg, Fla.

"I think it's great! My heart was breaking last night when it looked like this deal wasn't going to pass," Paul Losensky said outside Comiskey Park while waiting to buy tickets for Friday night's game.

"This is one of the charter teams in the major leagues. It would have been kind of a cruel joke on the city" if the White Sox left town, said die-hard fan and jazz musician Joe Bianco, 30.

"This is the first time in the city's history that a deal like this was made," said Bill Lazzaro, 46, who's lived near Comiskey Park, the team's stadium, all his life.

Losensky, 30, and Lazzaro accused legislators of mixing up their priorities by favoring sports over more important issues like education.

The deal, narrowly passed as a midnight deadline, Thursday expired, could cost $60 million from the team's stock of occupying a new $150 million state-financed stadium near the site of its current home.

But education would get only a $200 million funding increase under a budget being prepared by lawmakers, far less than educators had sought. And Gov. James R. Thompson's proposed 40 percent state-income tax increase, tied heavily to funding education, fell on deaf ears in the Legislature.

"I find that a really bad set of priorities," said Losensky, a student at the University of Chicago.

"Schools should be first; sports should be last," Lazzaro said.

Legislators point out that funding for the White Sox deal is not directly tied to a tax increase and comes from a 2 percent tax on hotel and motel rooms in Chicago that was imposed specifically to pay for the stadium.

Gov. James R. Thompson said Friday the White Sox are now "legally and morally bound to stay" in Chicago.

"They signed a lease. We have their word," he said. "The White Sox promised to stay in Chicago if we passed the bill, and we passed it."

Final passage of the deal came on a tense 60-56 vote in the House on the last regularly-scheduled day of the 1988 session. A short time earlier, the package cleared the Senate on a 30-26 vote. There wasn't a vote to spare in either chamber.

Thompson said he had lobbied heavily for passage of the deal.

"I told members of the Senate-Republican caucus that I don't care what they think of baseball ... we can't let Illinois be wounded by losing a major league team."

Keeping the White Sox in Chicago is going to help the economy around here, that's for sure," said Mitch Hale, 31, who manages a gas station near the ballpark.

"I think it was kind of dumb that the state of Illinois was just going to let them slip through their fingers," Hale said.

While Lazzaro said he's thrilled that St. Petersburg's bid for the White Sox appears to be history, he accused the team's owners, Eddie Einhorn and Jerry Reinsdorf, of caring more about making money than playing baseball.

"They're trying to get everything out of the city, the fans, the state," he said.

"These owners don't care about the team — they look at it as an investment," Bianco said.

Einhorn and Reinsdorf have denied similar characterizations, but could not be reached for comment Friday.

Calls were referred to spokesman Paul Jensen, who said the team has "been committed to stay all along, as long as we could get the stadium built to replace aging Comiskey Park."

A team statement said the White Sox are "elected by the Legislature's action."

The deal still needs approval by the team's board of directors, who must act by July 7. But Jensen said "there's no problem anticipated."

Shumate given reins of SMU game program

DALLAS (AP) — John Shumate, Southern Methodist's new basketball coach, is the first to be back to coach a sport at a school trying to shake its conservative, predominantly white image.

"I wanted to be the next coach at SMU, but I had to compete against so many qualified people. But I overcame the odds," Shumate said.

The son of a Pentecostal Baptist minister, Shumate said he believes a strong work ethic got him the SMU job, which was announced Thursday. "I think the best way to overcome odds is with hard work. And I'll do that at SMU."

The school's 1987-88 basketball team, under former coach Dave Bliss, won the Southwest Conference regular-season title for the first time since 1967, and a school-record 28 victories sent them to the NCAA tournament.

Despite the banner year, the Mustangs averaged only 72.8 points per game at home games. And Shumate must recruit athletes under the toughest admissions standards at any Southwest Conference school.

Jacobson's 7-under 65 leads Western Open

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — Peter Jacobson scored a 7-under 65 on the way to a 7-under 65 Friday that lifted him into a two-shot lead after the second round of the $900,000 Western Open Golf Tournament.

Jacobson, on the rebound from a back injury that has slowed him for four seasons, completed two trips over the Butler National Golf Club course in 135, nine under par.

"I don't think I'll shoot nine under for the next two days, but if I can continue to putt like I did the last two days, I've got a good chance of winning," said Jacobson, who one-putted nine times in the best round of the tournament.

The engine came on the 12th hole, when he hit a 5-iron second shot to about eight feet and made the putt. He avoided what would have been an eagle on the 13th hole by sinking another eight-footer after putting his approach in a bunker.

"You don't want to make bogey on the last hole. Making a putt like that gives me a lot of momentum going into tomorrow," he said.

Ed Fiori and Dan Forsman shared second at 137. Fiori had a 67 and Forsman shot a 69.

It was another two strokes back to Joey Sindelar, Tom Sieckmann, Jim Benepi and Rocco Mediate. Benepi scored two eagles in a round of 68. Sieckmann matched par-72, Mediate shot a 70 and Sindelar had a 69.

PGA champion Larry Nelson, a winner last week in Atlanta, moved up with a 69 and was at 140.

Defending champion D.A. Weir and Tom Watson, a three-time winner of this title, were six shots off the lead at 141. Weir shot 71, Watson a 69.

Mark Hayes and Morris Hatalak, who shared the first-round lead, each went 13 strokes higher, from 66 to 79, and were at 145.

Red Sox rookies puts Rice on bench

By Steve Fainaru
The Hartford Courant

BOSTON — Almost every day this week at Fenway Park, Mike Greenwell talked about Mike Greenwell. He talked to people with microphones, to people with notepaper. He attended the cameras lined up near the dugout, their huge eyes trained on him.

He talked about hitting. He talked about hunting. He talked about breaking from Boston Red Sox hitting coach Walt Hrinik's philosophy. He talked seriously and light-heartedly and earnestly.

"Is it OK if we call you Gator?" longtime Sox broadcaster Ken Coleman asked him recently near the batting cage.

"Sure, that's fine," said Greenwell, who hunts alligators in the off-season. Mike Greenwell says he wants us to know the real Mike Greenwell. Three months ago, when it was uncertain whether Greenwell could wrest left field from Jim Rice, much less Rice's clean-up spot, that might have seemed preposterous.

But in the last two weeks, Greenwell's career has entered another dimension. He has established himself as Boston's next baseball star. He has almost singlehandedly pulled his team from a two-month slump and thrust it back into the pennant race.

"I've learned a lot in the last two weeks," he said. "I've learned that I can help to be a leader of the field and be a leader on the field with my bat. When I learned that, it kind of possessed me to go out and bring everything I had into it. Now I'm hot and I think everybody's getting into it."

Greenwell, 24 until July 18, is simply baseball's hottest hitter.

"I don't think I've ever seen anybody like this," first baseman Todd Pennington said. Greenwell was hitting below .300 as recently as June 10. Since then he has raised his batting average to .341, his RBI total from 35 to 61, his home run total from eight to 14.

He is third in the league in hitting, first in RBI, second in slugging percentage, second in on-base percentage. His 19-game hitting streak, which ended Wednesday after 34 hits, is the longest second in the league this season.

He recently had 22 RBI in nine games, four homers in three games, five homers in five games. He batted .304 with 31 RBI in June, the eighth Red Sox player in 24 years to get at least 30 RBI in a month.

"I think he's one of the top four or five hitters in all of baseball," Hrinik said. "An example of a player who flourished after he broke from Hrinik's philosophy."

The break came after the 1986 season. Greenwell said he went home to North Fort Myers, Fla., and people he didn't know were telling him he was swinging differently. Even his father said he was swinging differently.

He went to a local television station and reviewed tapes of himself in high school and the minor leagues. "I would see I had changed my style of swinging," he said. "When he returned the next season he met with Hrinik, General Manager Lou Gorman and Manager John McNamara and told them he was returning to his own style."

"I said I was uttering going to make it in the big leagues or I wasn't going to make it with my style," he said. "I still work with Walt, still do things, and he helps me tremendously. But what you see at the plate is Mike Greenwell. That's the ball out and get it back together."

"That's what we did. We got it all back together. That's just life, simple as that. It's sort of like being a teenager again. Everybody goes through changes in their life."

He said this while sitting in the stands at Fenway this week. When he finished, he walked down to the field and talked to more reporters, moving from one to the next like a politician.

Pistons give Daly million dollar pact

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Chuck Daly, who worked without a contract while coaching Detroit to within one game of the NBA title, reached agreement with the Pistons on a three-year deal worth a reported $1.35 million.

General Manager Jack McCluskey announced Thursday that a multiyear agreement had been reached with Daly's agent, Philadelphia attorney Albert Lindner. Terms were not announced, but The Detroit News reported Friday that the contract covered three years and would pay Daly $1.35 million.

The contract will be signed after McCluskey returns July 10 from Europe.

Daly, who turns 58 later this month, said the new contract probably would be his last.

"I just basically felt the best avenue for my future was right here," said Daly, whom The News said had been considering offers to coach the expansion Miami Heat or become general manager of the Philadelphia 76ers.

"I do think this will be my last contract, no doubt about it, and this is

Sale of shares to resume

SUN VALLEY — Laurel Pipeline Partners Ltd. of Sun Valley expects to resume sales of interests in its pipeline project soon, after agreeing June 29 to withdraw its application to the Department of Finance Securities Bureau.

According to Securities Bureau Chief Wayne Klein, the company agreed to return all investor monies and cease all offers and sales until a new filing is approved that includes disclosure of what he calls "prior disciplinary history."

John Martinson of Laurel Pipeline says he has requested a hearing with the state to dispute the need to include the disclosures as issue in future offering memorandums.

"He said he did sign a Securities and Exchange Commission injunction in 1974 agreeing not to violate securities orders of Audio-Media Co. of New York, but admitted no guilt in the incident. He characterized himself as a 'victim.'"

"After making a private investment in the company, he agreed to serve as an officer. While on the board, another officer improperly sold stock, he said.

Martinson said he has received verbal approval on a re-filing with the state and expects to continue sales shortly.

Farm credit banks to merge

SPOKANE (AP) — Two of Spokane's largest farm credit banks will merge next week, a farm credit bank official says.

Merger of the Federal Land Bank of Spokane and Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Spokane will be completed either late Monday or early Tuesday, said Al Haselbacher, vice president for the merging banks and the Spokane Bank for Cooperatives.

The merger is part of a program triggered by federal legislation designed to end the struggling 37-bank Farm Credit System.

Haselbacher said the new bank will be called the Farm Credit Bank of Spokane.

The Spokane Bank for Cooperatives, the smallest of the three Spokane-based Farm Credit banks, may merge later with some or all of its 13 counterparts nationwide, he said.

Results of a vote by the Bank for Cooperatives' stockholders will be announced next week, he added.

Idaho construction surging

BOISE (AP) — The pace of commercial construction in Idaho continued to set records through the first five months of the year, according to First Security Bank of Idaho's latest construction report.

During May, building permits for industrial and commercial construction valued at $15.4 million were issued statewide, up 156.7 percent from May 1987, said the report, issued Wednesday.

Boise, as it has all year, dominated the statistics, with $4.7 million in permits, followed by Ketchum with $1.9 million.

Nonresidential construction valuation through May totaled $92 million, $11 million above the previous record for the corresponding five months in 1980.

Utah mine firm modernizing

MAGNA, Utah (AP) — BP Minerals America, formerly Kennecott, has taken another major step toward completing the $400 million modernization of its Utah copper operation.

The company on Thursday closed the Arthur concentrator and some of the major sections of its Magna concentrator, said BP Minerals spokesman Frank Fisher.

Lumber production declines

PORTLAND (AP) — Lumber production orders and shipments decreased in 12 Western states in the week ending June 25.

The Western Wood Products Association said lumber production was 855 million board feet, 17 million feet less than the previous week. Orders were 851 million board feet, down 28 million feet. Shipments were reported at 379 million board feet, a decrease of 17 million feet.

Dow retreats in selling rush

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pulled back Friday in a flurry of pre-holiday weekend selling.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks dropped 10.13 to 2,131.58, closing out the week with a net loss of 11.38 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 617 up, 848 down and 473 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 238.33 million shares, against 227.41 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 308.92 million shares.

Close to half of the day's activity came in a few utility issues, which were involved in short-term trading strategies based on their quarterly dividend payments.

Analysts said worries about inflation had been diminished in recent days by rainfall in the drought-plagued Farm Belt and declines in oil prices to their lowest level of the year.

The contract for August delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude fell 22 cents a barrel to $14.94 on the New York Mercantile Exchange Friday, hitting its lowest price since 1986.

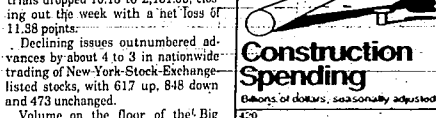

The easing of inflationary expectations has sparked a rally in late in the bond market, pushing yields on long-term Treasury bonds below 9 percent.

However, brokers said trading appeared cautious about making large commitments on the eve of the long July 4 weekend. The markets will be closed on Monday for the holiday.

Energy stocks were broadly lower for the second consecutive day.

Exxon fell 1/4 to 44 1/2, Amoco 1/4 to 22 1/2, Chevron 1/4 to 45 1/4, and Atlantic Richfield 1/4 to 80 1/4.

Losers among the blue chip industrial stocks included Ford Motor, down 1/4 at 52 1/4; International Business Machines, down 1/4 at 126 1/4; DuPont, down 1/4 at 92 1/4; Alcoa, down 1/4 at 52 1/4; and American Telephone & Telegraph, down 1/4 at 41. The Cooper Tire jumped 3/4 to 41. The

Construction Spending

Company said it knew of no reason for the activity.

National Semiconductor dropped 1/4 to 12 1/4 in active trading. The stock fell 1/4 Thursday on disappointment over the size of the quarterly earnings gain posted by the company.

On Friday National said it would buy back 4.1 million of its common shares and 4.1 warrants to buy its stock from Schlumberger Ltd.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $14.72 billion, or 0.43 percent, in value.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF
"Vision is the art of seeing things invisible."
— Jonathan Swift.

It took a Tarsighted defense to beat today's no-trump game. Fortunately for me, Jo Carol White of Fort Worth, my partner at a recent duplicate, found the only play that would allow me to cash the setting.

At most tables, South ducked two rounds of clubs, winning the third round and giving East a discarding problem at the same time. Most Easts held on to their spades and diamonds (correct) and threw a low heart as a least-of-evils choice.

South crossed to dummy's spade ace to lead a heart to the ace, and then played a spade to dummy's king for another heart lead past East. When East's queen appeared, South ducked and earned an over-trick for his efforts.

What did Jo Carol discard on my third lead of clubs? She wisely jettisoned the heart queen. This far-sighted play made it impossible for South to establish his hearts without giving me the lead, and instead of scoring 10 tricks, South was held to only eight.

In response to my grateful comment about her play, she replied, "My heart queen was subject to capture anyway; maybe I could do something for your hand if I unloaded it."
