Officers escort recaptured Francis P. Mitchell

Single helicopter escapee still loose

The Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — A helicopter plucked three inmates from a state prison yard in a hail of gunfire Monday, but the escapees were ambushed by alert state police and the copter was finally forced down after a 20-mile aerial chase, officials said. The copter nearly rammed a pursuing U.S. Customs helicopter and tried to force a police helicopter into a crane. Four people, one a wounded inmate, were in custody, and one inmate remained at large Monday afternoon.

"We both hung with him. We knew he had to set down because he was running low on fuel," said Maj. John Denko, pilot of the state police chopper. Charles Bella, the helicopter's pilot, told officials he had been hijacked.

About 100 prisoners were in the exercise yard at the Penitentiary of New Mexico near Santa Fe when the escape helicopter, an Aerospatiale Gazelle, landed at about 9:50 a.m. MDT and picked up three inmates, two of them convicted murderers.

Guards in two towers opened fire as the chopper took off, said Don Caviness, a spokesman for the New Mexico Corrections Department.

In the next two hours, the copter flew first to a small airport at Los Lunas, 80 miles away. There, waiting police captured one inmate and a woman companion and a second inmate managed to escape on foot.

The copter then took off again, leading the customs and police helicopters on a 20-mile chase before being downed at a second airport in Albuquerque where the other inmate was freed.

U.S. will pay kin of victims aboard airliner

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, calling Americans "a compassionate people," said Monday the government will compensate the families of those who perished in an Iranian airliner shot down by a U.S. Navy cruiser.

Without admitting legal liability for the loss of 290 lives when Iran Air Flight 655 was downed July 3, Reagan said the payments should be made on behalf of "the innocent people who were the victims."

There was no immediate indication how much money would be involved, and a State Department official said "we have a lot of facts to investigate" before any payments are made.

In Congress, whose approval apparently would be required, House Speaker Jim Wright said lawmakers are likely to be sympathetic to Reagan's request—but some members called the request premature because of still-unanswered questions about the incident. Some said compensation should be paid only after Americans being held hostage in Lebanon are freed.

In its announcement, the White House said there would be no lowering of the U.S. military profile in the Persian Gulf. And Reagan stressed that "there's certainly going to be no compensation" for the Iranian government.

On the eve of a scheduled United Nations Security Council debate on the incident, the administration said ultimate responsibility rests with "those who refuse to end" the Iranian war.

Iraq war, especially Iran "which has refused for almost a year to accept and implement Security Council Resolution 598, while it continues unprovoked attacks on innocent neutral shipping and crews in the international waters of the Gulf."

"We will not countenance any impression that this is a payment to the government or an admission of liability or is in response to any other external pressure or external international political condition between our two countries," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

Iran's ambassador to the United Nations, Mohammad Jafar Mahabati, said the U.S. offer was unsatisfactory.

"I have already stated that the proper term is 'reparation,' Mahabati said. "But reparation is not sufficient definitely because the root cause of this tragedy and similar tragedies should be removed from the Persian Gulf."

"And it cannot be anything less than withdrawal of U.S. forces from the Persian Gulf."

Democratic presidential hopeful Jesse Jackson called Reagan's offer "the correct humanitarian expression."

Amid conflicting reports about whether Iran recovered the flight recorder from the downed A300 Airbus, the White House said anew that Capt. Wilk, Rogers III, skipper of the USS Vincennes, took "justifiable defensive actions" to protect himself against feared attack by an Iranian F-14 war plane.

Thornburgh choice to succeed Meese

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — President Reagan has chosen former Pennsylvania Gov. Richard L. Thornburgh, a one-time federal prosecutor from the moderate wing of the Republican Party, to replace Edwin Meese III as attorney general, senior White House officials said Monday.

Thornburgh was expected to meet with Reagan today to confer with him about the job, said the officials, who added the decision to nominate the Pennsylvanian had been all but officially made.

If confirmed quickly by the Senate, as expected, Thornburgh would have barely six months to serve as the nation's top law enforcement officer, unless Vice President George Bush wins the presidency in November and decides to keep him in the post.

Thornburgh, who is director of the Institute of Politics at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government, was on vacation at Cape Cod, Mass., and was unavailable for comment, his office said. White House officials said that Thornburgh had indicated that he would accept the post.

Meese announced his resignation a week ago, declaring that he had been "completely vindicated" by the as-yet-unreleased report by independent counsel James C. McKay on his investigation into allegations about Meese's affairs.

Thornburgh, who will turn 56 on Saturday, has a reputation as an aggressive prosecutor who served as the assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division in the Ford administration. His nomination can be expected to move smoothly through the Senate confirmation process, Senate and White House officials said, avoiding the embarrassing confirmation fight triggered by several previous Reagan appointees such as Judge Robert H. Bork, who was rejected for a Supreme Court seat last year.

Avoiding controversy was a top priority in this selection, White House officials said.

They said they hope the Senate Judiciary Committee staff can begin its initial review of the nominee during the legislative recess for the Democratic National Convention next week.

Check alternatives, agency tells INEL

By MARK PRATTER Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The director of the state Department of Water Resources wants the Idaho National Engineering laboratory to look at alternatives to disposing of radioactive waste in the Snake River Plain aquifer.

The federal laboratory west of Idaho Falls is asking state permission to inject low-level radioactive tritium into the aquifer during emergencies.

The aquifer is the drinking water source for 200,000 people in southern Idaho.

The waste comes from the Idaho Chemical Processing Plant, a facility that recycles uranium from government-owned nuclear reactors.

"A July 8 letter from DWR's Keith Higginson says INEL should look at ways to divert the radioactive wastes from its chemical processing plant to a holding facility."

Another suggestion is removing radioactive waste from the waste stream that would reach the injection well.

Higginson also asks INEL to look at eliminating use of the well.

Higginson gives INEL 30 days to respond to the state's suggestions, after which the state will process the application.

But Higginson says the state's opposition to the well remains unchanged.

DWR sent the letter to John Barry, INEL's assistant manager for environmental safety and health programs. A spokesman from Barry's office could not be reached for comment.

Higginson wrote in response to INEL statements that appeared in Idaho newspapers, says Frank Sherman, DWR's manager, water planning.

INEL said it would review its own

Nicaragua tosses out American ambassador

The Associated Press

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The leftist Sandinista government on Monday ordered U.S. Ambassador Richard Melton and seven other embassy officials to leave the country within 72 hours, accusing them of state terrorism.

It also closed the opposition newspaper La Prensa for 15 days, shut down the Roman Catholic radio station, and arrested an opposition leader.

The actions came a day after police clashed with thousands of demonstrators at an anti-Sandinista rally.

President Daniel Ortega on Sunday described the demonstration as being part of a U.S. plan to undermine his government and vowed to "act with force" against any violations of public order.

Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto, who announced the decision to expel the Americans, said they were engaging in "activities complementary to the state terrorism the administration of U.S.

President Ronald Reagan is carrying out against Nicaragua."

He said he called Melton to his office Monday afternoon to advise him of the decision and gave him a sealed letter advising U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz of the same.

Speaking with reporters at a Foreign Ministry news conference, D'Escoto described Melton as "a robot of the maniacal Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs Elliott Abrams."

Vote tally gives Salinas lead in Mexico election

The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — A vote tally released Monday gave the government party's candidate for president a majority, but the slow count fed rumors of party infighting and fraud.

Interior Secretary Manuel Bartlett said early Monday that Carlos Salinas de Gortari of the governing Institutional Revolutionary Party, known as the PRI for its Spanish initials, had 52.89 percent of the votes counted.

Contumbent Cardenas of the leftist National Democratic Front was second with 29.10 percent and conservative National Action Party candidate Manuel Clouthier third with 16.65 percent, Bartlett said. Election officials said 13.24 million votes had been counted from Wednesday's election but did not say how many of the nation's 38 million registered voters cast ballots.

PRI officials in Cardenas' home state of Michoacan conceded that Cardenas won 58 percent of the vote there to Salinas' 25 percent. Cardenas was a popular governor of the state from 1980-86.

Party officials in Mexico City also said privately Cardenas was expected to win in the federal capital.

Court won't hear T-shirt case appeal

By BART JANSEN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The 9th Circuit Court of Appeals decided Friday not to hear the lawsuit stemming from the T-shirt banned in Twin Falls High School.

A panel of three circuit judges decided that since litigant Rod Gano graduated from high school, it "no longer matters whether district administrators banned him from wearing the controversial shirt to school. Oral arguments for the appeal had been set for Wednesday.

The judges' decision did not reflect on the case's merits. Gano's lawyer, William Hollifield, plans to continue to pursue the case's $1 million damages.

"My clients intend to pursue their claim for damages against the school district and the administrators," Hollifield said. That could include making the suit a class action for students still attending the school.

Gano and his father, also named Rod, sued TFSD last October after the art student was twice sent home for wearing a homecoming T-shirt he designed.

District administrators suspended Gano because the shirt appeared to caricature high school Principal Frank Charlton, Vice Principal Norm Thomas and Dean of Men Dick Baun, apparently drunk, outside the school's football field, Bruin Stadium.

But Hollifield contended the drawing was protected speech under the First Amendment to the Constitution. In November, U.S. District Judge Marion Callister disagreed.

Technically, Hollifield asked the federal district court for an injunction to prevent school administrators from forbidding the T-shirt at school. But Callister ruled that school administrators acted appropriately by banning the shirt, which he considered disrespectful and said could undermine administrators' authority.

Hollifield appealed, but on Friday the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals decided the question of an injunction became moot because Gano was no longer a student and administrators could no longer deny Gano's right to wear the shirt. Since the injunction request was moot, the appeals court also "vacated," or threw out, Callister's decision.

"They (judges) are not making any decision at all on the validity of the case," said James Lynch, of the Boise law firm Imhoff and Lynch, who is representing the school district on appeal. "It just means they set it aside."

The appeals court remained silent about Gano's contentions that the shirt should be allowed as free speech. That puts the case back to square one, in Callister's court. But this time, the case would be heard by a federal jury.

Callister made the decision on the injunction in November before the matter got to a jury.

Hollifield said his clients will pursue the $1 million damages sought in the case.

"They have other children in the high school which are affected by the administration's abridgment of the student's First Amendment rights," Hollifield said.

He added he could seek other stu-

Micron Tech officials quit company

BOISE (AP) — Micron Technology Inc. President Juan Benitez and the Idaho-based computer-chip maker's top financial officer resigned Monday for what they labeled personal reasons.

At an afternoon news conference after the stock markets closed, Benitez and Vice President for Finance Leslie Gill declined to elaborate on their decisions to leave the company both had been with since its infant stage in 1980. They said they had no immediate professional plans and would remain at Micron to help with the management transition, possibly through the end of the year. "We'll stay until we're not needed," Ms. Gill said, adding, "The company has transcended needing any single person."

Micron Chairman Joe Parkinson immediately announced that Executive Vice President Randal Chance has replaced Benitez. Sales and Marketing Vice President James Garrett moved up to executive vice president, and corporate controller Reid Langrill became the new financial vice president, he said. Parkinson said "the decisions by both Benitez and Ms. Gill to resign were made some time ago and their announcement simultaneous" was only a coincidence. He said neither was asked to leave the company, which just posted four straight quarters of profitability after pulling out of a severe industry depression many blamed on unfair Asian competition.

The inmate who was still at large Monday afternoon was identified as Daniel Mahoney, 30, serving life plus 60 years for second-degree murder and armed robbery in Florida.

Randy Mack Lackey, 29, of Curry County, N.M., serving a nine-year sentence for burglary, was wounded in the shoulder and captured at the Los Lunas airport. Francis Preston Mitchell, 26, serving life for first-degree murder in Utah, was captured at the Albuquerque airport. A woman carrying ammunition was also taken into custody at Los Lunas.

Mahoney and Mitchell were being held under an interstate compact that provides for prisoner exchanges. Roadblocks were thrown up from Albuquerque to Socorro as authorities pressed the search for Mahoney.

Bella, owner of Bear Helicopters, was being held while officials checked his story that he was a hostage who was forced to fly the inmates out of the prison.

Authorities said that after the chopper took off from the Los Lunas air port, it was chased by a U.S. Customs Service Sikorski Blackhawk and Denko in a Twin-Star Aerospace.

The Customs helicopter "got on the left and I got on the right and they led us on a merry chase and tried to shake us," Denko said. "It appeared they were trying to maneuver into a position to land and run."

At one point, the gazelle tried to turn into the Blackhawk, "which had to go through a violent climb maneuver to avoid a collision," he said. The gazelle then "turned into us and tried to run us into a crane involved in construction at the Abuquerque airport," Denko said. The helicopter hit the ground with the other choppers to its sides, Denko said.

"One individual came out and lay prone," Denko said. "The other one (Bella) remained in the helicopter. He was handcuffed to a control. He claimed he was a hostage."

Bella's wife, Carroll, said he left his home in El Paso, Texas, at 5 a.m. Monday to fly to Santa Fe for a contract flight.

background injection permit application with the state to determine what changes are necessary to bring it up to date, according to a June 29 INEL press release.

INEL's use of the injection well to dump waste into the aquifer has been a long-standing controversy.

There have been no discharges to the well since 1986, but the well was used for two decades to dispose of hundreds of millions of gallons of low-level radioactive and hazardous waste.

In 1984, Gov. John Evans stopped INEL's regular use of the well but the well was used for emergencies in 1985 and 1986.
On July 22, 1985, the federal Environmental Protection Agency gave the state authority to monitor injection wells. Prior to that there was no permit system in place, says DWR's Sherman.

Magic Valley lawmakers from both parties say the state should ban INEL from disposing of more low-level radioactive waste into the aquifer, even in emergencies.
One of the more vocal opponents of INEL's plan is GOP Rep. Ralph Peters, of Jerome. He says-INEL should hold the waste in sealed ponds and then cart away the sediment to hazardous waste dumps.

DWR says it will hold public hearings on INEL's permit request. But the state hasn't announced locations yet.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, a staunch supporter of INEL, says too much is being made of the injection well issue.
"While some love to label it as ra-diactive because it has some trace elements in it, it meets clean drinking water standards and is safe to put directly into a city's main," McClure told The Associated Press.

But DWR's Sherman says INEL's disposed tritium discharge wouldn't meet state drinking water standards. INEL is asking for a waiver state drinking water standards to dispose of the tritium waste during emergencies, Sherman says.

Legislature battles over computer systems

BOISE (AP) - Leaders of the Idaho Legislature find themselves split over what kind of a computer system to buy for the Legislature.

One official says not much has happened since last fall, despite a lot of discussion. The paralysis stems from two sides each pulling for a different system. The Legislature has become a battleground in the national war between two major types of computer systems. Partisans on both sides speak as strongly as die-hard Republicans and Democrats do on politics.

One side argues that an IBM system, which uses a mainframe computer linked to remote terminals, will be a more powerful system, have a longer life span and work well with existing equipment. The system would cost $1.2 million, according to a "worst-case estimate" prepared by the legislative auditor's office, although it later was revised downward.

The other side wants a less-expensive Apple or Tandy computer system - the initial Apple bid was $505,000. Both the Apple and Tandy systems rely on a "local area network," or LAN, of free-standing desktop computers. They contend it would be easier for staff to use and more effective.

Despite those arguments and the support of two key state officials for the Apple or Tandy systems, most of the key legislators are backing the IBM system.

Legislative Auditor Bruce Balderston says it's hard to compare the two systems for price, training, installation costs and other factors.

"I think we're just about where we were last fall," Balderston said. "We have a tentative selection of IBM," although a formal purchase decision has not been made and no specific timetable has been set.

The four-lawmakers most involved in buying the computer system have been Senate President Pro Tem Jim Rich, R-Boise, House Speaker Tom Boyd, R-Genesee, and the co-chairmen of the budget-writing Joint Finance Appropriations Committee, Rep. Kitty Gurnsey, R-Boise, and Sen. Atwell Parry, R-Melba.

"I just feel more comfortable (with the IBM). While it's more expensive, it's looking down the road farther," Boyd said.

But Dick Raybould, the state's computer coordinator, said the IBM would be more difficult for state employees to use and might not be so efficient. The IBM system also costs far more - "It shocked me to see the slow payback," he said.

While Apple and Tandy each would repay for its cost within a year or two, IBM's payback period would be seven years, he said.

But Balderston questioned the validity of the payback estimates. The whole issue began when lawmakers started investigating purchase of a central computer system. The system would serve not only the lawmakers, but also the Legislative Budget Office, the Legislative Auditor and the Legislative Council Office.

In 1987, legislators approved a request for proposals. Critics including Hewlett-Packard, which withdrew its bid - said the request was devised partly by specialists from IBM. Balderston said IBM officials were consulted, but did not draw up the document.

Gurnsey acknowledged that some state staffers believed it was biased toward IBM.

Rigby fire traced to electrical wiring

RIGBY (AP) - An investigator has traced the cause of last Friday's devastating fire in downtown Rigby to electrical wiring between one of the burned-out businesses and apartments above it.

Rigby Police Chief Larry Anderson said Monday that the probable cause of the blaze was determined by a state arson investigator only after sifting through the rubble for three days.

The financial loss resulting from the fire that destroyed the Ben Franklin store, apartments above it and the adjacent Reed Drug has yet to be determined. But Anderson said officials have recovered some personal possessions, documents and money from the scene.

No one was injured in the blaze, that began Friday and was not completely doused until Sunday, but the 25 to 30 people who lived in apartments above Ben Franklin, were left homeless, officials said. Those people have found lodging with Rigby-area residents.

Chamber of Commerce President Glen Bonnett expressed fear that Rigby residents may begin shopping elsewhere since the two stores were lost.

"I'm sure someone's going to have to pick up the slack," he said. "It's going to have a definite impact because (the Ben Franklin) store had things that no one else had."

Downtown businessmen expressed the same fear even though their operations were not damaged by the flames.

"All of the businessmen work better together, but with them gone, it's gonna hurt," said Chris Lee at the Sports-n-Staff store across the street. Max Groom of Modern Plumbing and Heating said the destroyed businesses were key ones on Main Street.

Don't expect changes to end regional bickering, Gibb says

MOSCOW (AP) - Expecting changes in the way Idaho's higher education system is governed to end regional bickering among the four state colleges is "a mistake," outgoing University of Idaho President Richard Gibb says.

Whether the state moves to a chancellor system or an overseeing coordinating board as he favors, Gibb suggested the loyalties of state officials, particularly legislators, will remain an overriding issue since they have ultimate control over the system through budget and legislation.

"You can't require a legislator to like something, and if a chancellor makes a decision that's unpopular in Boise, those legislators aren't required to like it," he said.

Gibb, who formally announced his retirement effective next July during the board's meeting last month in Moscow, was the first of the institution presidents to speak out on the governance issue since Gov. Cecil Andrus urged the Board of Education to seriously consider revamping the way the state runs the system.

Military team investigates crash

LOWMAN (AP) - An military accident investigation team was on the remote site of an Idaho Army National Guard helicopter crash Monday as two of the aircraft's crewmen remained hospitalized.

Major Jim Ball said it would probably be several days before the team from Ft. Rucker, Ala., completes its review of the downed UH-1 helicopter in a mountain area near Lowman and return to Boise to interview the crew.

"They're in the very preliminary stages of the investigation," Ball said. "They'll probably spend a couple of days up at the crash site and then come back here to conduct the interviews."

The helicopter, piloted by Capt. Kevin Brown, 37, of Boise, was on a routine training mission Saturday afternoon when it crashed in a mountain ravine. The crash site was 60 miles northeast of Boise and about 10 miles northeast of Lowman in an area known locally as Eight Mile Creek ravine.

The pilot and four crewmen were released from the hospital on Sunday. But Ball said Sgt. Jeff Sparks, 27, remained hospitalized in serious condition with back injuries and 2nd Lt. Jerry Dewood, 31, was listed in fair condition with a foot injury.

U.S. to work with Soviet military

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Soviet Union's military chief of staff announced Monday an agreement designed to ease superpower friction through creation of a "military-to-military working group," but said the Red Army plans no unilateral withdrawal from Central Europe.

During a week-long tour of the United States, Marshal Sergei Akhromeyev met with President Reagan at the White House before unveiling the agreement at the Pentagon with the chairman of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, Adm. William Crowe.

Along with creation of the joint working group, designed to head off brushfire incidents between the two sides, the two officials also announced future tour exchanges among top commanders and several other steps designed to enhance mutual understanding, including port visits by warships.

Akhromeyev and Crowe gingerly handled questions that each might have exploited to stress their disagreements. "We do have some differences," Crowe said. "Obviously, we did not try to paper those over."

"But I also think that we clarified our perspectives. We probably cleared up some misunderstandings, and I think we formed the basis for further exploration," said the American admiral.

Akhromeyev thanked Crowe for taking him on the U.S. tour, unprecedented for such a high-ranking official of the Soviet Defense Ministry, where he is No. 2 man next to Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov. The visit included a cruise aboard an aircraft carrier at sea, a peek inside an F-117 bomber, a visit to a missile training facility, a rodeo, a barbecue, the gift of an Indian headdress, and a trip to Crowe's alma mater, the University of Oklahoma.

SERGEI AKHROMEYEV
Ends tour of United States

At the news conference, the two announced agreement to form a joint "military to military working group" to explore the issue of dangerous military activity in greater detail and make recommendations.

Examples of the sort of friction the group will attempt to resolve in the future include the fatal shooting by Soviet soldiers of U.S. Maj. Arthur Nicholson in East Germany in 1985, and the bumping incident involving U.S. and Soviet ships in the Black Sea on Feb. 12.

To stimulate long-range contact, Crowe and Akhromeyev also laid out a two-year exchange program beginning this fall with a meeting between senior U.S. and Soviet commanders in Central Europe.

Also on the agenda are a return visit to the Soviet Union by Crowe in the summer of 1989, port visits by warships, and tour exchanges of doctors, historians, and commanders of the services, and a marksmanship competition.

Despite the camaraderie, Akhromeyev apparently made little progress convincing Crowe the heavily publicized Soviet doctrine of defensive sufficiency has reduced the threat posed by Warsaw Pact forces.

U.S. museum plans to display Soviet paintings

WASHINGTON (AP) - An exhibit of Soviet paintings, many hidden for years by order of Communist Party leaders, will go on display in Washington on Tuesday in a new show of Soviet art.

The show, called "Russian and Soviet Paintings, 1900-1930," will be at the Hirshhorn Museum and is considered the first one of significance devoted to works from just before and just after the 1917 Russian revolution. The exhibit of works on loan from Moscow and Leningrad will continue until Sept. 25. Unlike many major art exhibits, it will not be shown in any other U.S. city. Included are works by Marc Chagall and Vasilii Kandinsky, who are among the best-known artists of the 20th century.

Early leak of report was illegal, Meese says

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Attorney General Edwin Meese III complained Monday that it's not only illegal, it's unfair, that someone leaked portions of an independent counsel's report on his activities.

The New York Times published a story Saturday that said portions of the report, by independent counsel James McKay, show Meese gave differing accounts of his knowledge about a possible bribery scheme involving a $1 billion Iraqi pipeline project.

Meese, in St. Louis for an FBI gathering, denied he gave differing accounts. "Asked Monday if he knew the date in 1985 of plans to pay the Israeli Labor Party money from the pipeline project, Meese replied: 'No, I have no recollection of knowing anything about that.'"

Meese said he did not read closely a memo from his longtime friend E. Robert Wallach, in September 1985 mentioning the planned payments to the political party.

"The first time I focused on that, as I made clear to the independent counsel when they showed me the memorandum during the course of depositions, was in November of 1987," Meese said.

McKay submitted his report July 5 under seal to a federal appeals court panel in Washington. The report is to be released publicly in a few weeks, after people named in it have had an opportunity to file responses.

Meese said the leaked portions of the report showed only "one side of the picture."

"Under the law, there's also supposed to be a response filed by my lawyers or anyone else who might be mentioned in the report," he said. "So it's not only illegal, it's unfair to 'only' have half the picture out. The public's entitled to the whole picture, all sides which should be made public when the report is released lawfully by the court."

Meese, who spoke briefly to reporters after giving an address that was closed to the media, was asked about his belief that he had been vindicated.

"I have only been talking about the fact that that vindication comes from one decision that the independent counsel is required to make," Meese said. "He's only required to find out if there's been any justification to going forward. And the decision he makes is whether he should proceed with criminal action."

"And in this case, he has indicated that after a thorough and exhaustive investigation he has determined not to take criminal action and that's the vindication I've talked about."

Meese said he did not believe his actions in the case were open to any questions of ethics, adding that "if any issues are raised, I'm prepared to answer them."

Damage to shuttle booster not expected to delay launch

IRRHIGHAM, CITY, Utah (AP) — Damage to a trial version of Morton Thiokol's redesigned space shuttle booster will delay a July test-firing, but NASA said Monday it expected no delay in the September launch of Discovery.

The test will conclude a series of five run-throughs for the redesigned booster rocket required before the shuttle program, grounded after the 1986 Challenger disaster, can resume.

day when a worker testing one of the motor's three field joints inadvertently switched pressurization lines and damaged the bonded insulation that helps contain superheated gasses during flight, Morton Thiokol spokesman Rocky Raab said Monday.

But Edward S. Campion of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said: "We do not expect it to affect the STS-26 launch schedule."

STS-26 is the official designation for the first flight of a space shuttle since the Jan. 28, 1986, explosion destroyed Challenger and killed seven crew members.

NASA spokesman David Garrett said the test motor must be disassembled partially for evaluation and possible repairs, and then reassembled.

While a firm date for a rescheduled test-firing would have to wait until condition of the joint had been assessed, engineers believe the motor can be fired before the end of August, Raab said.

Episcopal Church delegates uphold opposition to abortion

DETROIT (AP) — Delegates to the 69th General Convention of the Episcopal Church reaffirmed the church's opposition to abortion Monday and narrowly upheld a policy that lets dioceses decide whether to bar homosexuals from the priesthood.

A resolution expanding access to the selection process for ordination for all people, including homosexuals — but refusing to recognize a right to ordination — fell one vote short of passage by lay members of the House of Deputies.

The 900-member House of Deputies, divided between lay and clerical church members, and the 200-member House of Bishops established policy for the 2.7 million-member church, whose nine-day convention ended Monday.

The question of ordaining homosexual priests turned on a narrow semantic axis during the final hours of the convention.

Leaders of some of the church's 118 dioceses in the United States have ordained homosexual priests without running afoul of Episcopal canon law, which says candidates for ordination must be at least 21 years of age and pass prescribed medical, psychological and academic tests.

In 1979, the 66th General Convention approved a resolution stating, in part, "We believe it is not appropriate for this church to ordain a practicing homosexual." That resolution, however, is not a part of canon law which draws a distinction between homosexual activity, which it says is sinful, and homosexual orientation, which it says is not.

SEC chair endorses legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the Securities and Exchange Commission and the top federal prosecutor of insider trading on Monday endorsed legislation that would make brokerage firms liable when their employees violate securities laws.

"It's the only way we're going to get institutions to start taking responsibility for individual behavior," Rudolph W. Giuliani, U.S. attorney in Manhattan, told a House panel.

However, Giuliani and SEC Chairman David S. Ruder both questioned if the law should exempt firms and supervisors that make a good-faith effort to prevent their employees from using non-public information to profit from the trading in securities.

"All of us are certainly sensitive to the fact that whenever anyone runs any institution, large or small, they can be victimized by the criminal activities of others," said Giuliani, whose office has prosecuted a string of prominent Wall Street insider trading cases during the last two years.

Ruder said his agency is investigating the role of Morgan Stanley & Co. in the second biggest insider trading case the SEC has ever handled.

Two weeks ago, the SEC accused Stephen Wang Jr., a 24-year-old Morgan Stanley analyst, and Fred C. Lee, a Hong Kong businessman, of raking $15 million in illegal profits, second only to the $100 million Ivan Boesky case.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon contracting investigation is a direct result of President Reagan's defense buildup, and the spending surge also will soon cause many big cost overruns on weapons, the head of the congressional General Accounting Office said Monday.

"History shows that when too much money is pumped into the acquisition system over a relatively short period of time, we will have problems," Comptroller General Charles Bosher told the Senate Armed Services Committee.

"We had procurement scandals during World War II, the Korean War and in the past few years — all during periods of rapid growth in defense spending," the watchdog agency chief said.

The current criminal investigation involves allegations that defense contractors and consultants bribed Pentagon officials for contracting details that could be vital in winning contracts worth billions of dollars.

Indian leaders reject land claim offer

HAY RIVER RESERVE, Northwest Territories (AP) — Leaders of 15,000 native Indians in Canada's Northwest Territories have rejected a land claim offer from the federal government. All but four of the 300 delegates to a special joint assembly voted Sunday to reject the offer of $500 million ($415 million U.S.) in cash and the use of 72,000 square miles of land in the Mackenzie River region. Leaders of the Dene Indians and the northern Metis — who are half-descented from French fur traders — called for more negotiations with Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, setting a two-year deadline for agreement. About 1,000 Indians gathered for a week at Hay River Indian reservation for the heated debate over whether to accept a tentative agreement reached in May after protracted negotiations. Some bands wanted to sign the agreement because of the talk taken by poverty, alcoholism and other chronic problems on Indian settlements. But other groups demanded a broader agreement including provisions for self-government and clear title to their ancestral land.

In the end, there were only three dissenting votes and one abstention. Georges Erasmus, president of the Assembly of First Nations which represents all Canadian Indians, urged Dene leaders not to "nail themselves to the cross" of the federal offer. Anyone too tired to continue fighting for their rights should step down, he said.

Shultz plans meeting with Philippine officials

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz meets Tuesday with Philippine officials on the future of U.S. military bases, but President Corazon Aquino predicted negotiations would remain deadlocked. Shortly before Shultz's arrival Monday, Mrs. Aquino was asked if she expected the talks to lead to an agreement on compensation to the Philippines for continued use of Clark Air Base, Subic Naval Base and four smaller facilities. "No, because the review is still going on, and it will be up to the review committee to discuss that," Mrs. Aquino told reporters. "Shultz is not part of the review panel. It is (U.S. Ambassador Nicholas) Platt and on our side, (Foreign Secretary Raul) Manglapus. Earlier Monday in Jakarta, Shultz said retaining the Philippine bases, America's largest military facilities outside the continental United States, was "the most desirable option for everyone." But he said Washington had found "other options" in event Manila forced their expulsion. Students said they planned to stage a small-scale protest in Manila against the bases.

U.S. will continue work on space-based defense

GENEVA (AP) — The United States will not limit its plans for space-based defense as a condition for a strategic nuclear arms treaty, Washington's chief negotiator said Monday on the eve of new U.S.-Soviet arms talks.

Max Kampelman also dismissed Soviet calls for a new formal commitment by both sides to the 1972 anti-ballistic missile treaty, which restricts each country to a missile defense around one site. He said negotiators have yet to agree on a text pleasing both sides to observe the pact for a certain period.

MAX KAMPELMAN
Negotiates new treaty

Negotiations on a treaty to reduce strategic, or long-range, nuclear arms began in March 1985 and enter their 10th round with a plenary meeting Tuesday. They recessed before the May 29-June 2 summit in Moscow between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Neither side has announced an ending date for this round, still remains to be resolved.

Kampelman and Soviet chief delegate Alexei Obukhov had lunch together Monday and discussed issues of "substance," Kampelman said, but would not elaborate. In response to questions from journalists, he said they should not expect rapid progress.

Negotiators probably will work "carefully" and not be watching the calendar, he said, adding: "Don't look for drama. We're at a stage now where hard work is required rather than drama."

The chief U.S. delegate said he hopes this round will at least "significantly narrow the differences," and expressed the belief a treaty can be completed before Reagan leaves office in January. The superpowers signed a treaty in December to destroy their intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Obukhov said when he arrived Sunday that the talks should not be allowed to lose momentum.

Gunman opens fire aboard cruise ship, killing at least 3

PIRAEUS, Greece (AP) — A gunman opened fire and lobbed a hand grenade aboard a cruise ship carrying 570 passengers Monday, killing at least three people and wounding 53 others, police said. The gunman escaped on a yacht.

Earlier Monday, an explosion killed two people and destroyed a car parked near the marina where the cruise ship, the City of Poros, was to dock in the Athens seaside suburb of Paleo Faliron.

Police speculated the car blast and the shipboard attack were connected.

Police said many of the passengers on the City of Poros were European tourists from Sweden, Britain, Italy, France and Denmark.

Police were unable to positively identify the dead, which they said included one man and one woman, both foreigners. Port police first said the third dead was a crew member, but later said he too was a tourist.

The 208-foot City of Poros, smoke pouring from its side, steamed 16 miles to the port of Piraeus at full speed. Port police said at least 53 people were wounded and were taken to a hospital.

The attack occurred at 8:40 p.m. as the City of Poros, on a one-day cruise, left the island of Aegina in the Saronic Gulf to head back to a small marina in Paleo Faliron, port police said.

Officials close highway to defuse bomb

TRENTO, Italy (AP) — A section of the Brenner highway that links Italy to Austria will be closed for two hours Tuesday so authorities can defuse a World War II bomb, the Italian news agency ANSA said.

The agency said the bomb was discovered during construction of the northern highway exit for Trento, 365 miles north of Rome. While the bomb is being defused, authorities will close a nine-mile stretch of the motorway between the Trento north and the Sar Michele all'Adige exits for two hours beginning at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Armenians ease strike, thousands return to jobs

MOSCOW (AP) — More Armenians returned to work Monday as a strike called to press a territorial demand eased, but their southern republic remained tense, Soviet media and a resident said.

Many Armenians decided to return to their jobs because of appeals by prominent cultural figures at a demonstration Sunday night to use other means of protest, said the resident, who said he was a television reporter.

"They suggested meetings, open statements, but not strikes," said the resident, who declined to give his name in a telephone interview from the Armenian capital of Yerevan.

But other speakers at the rally called for a continuation of the strike, the reporter and the official news agency Tass reported.

Soviet newspaper said the walkout began July 4 and virtually paralyzed Yerevan and other parts of the Armenian republic in the Caucasus Mountains. Armenians have demanded the annexation of an Armenian-dominated enclave in the neighboring republic of Azerbaijan, Nagorno-Karabakh.

Radio Moscow reported Sunday that public transport and many factories resumed work in Yerevan. Tass said on Monday that tens of thousands of Yerevan residents went back to their jobs and that the overwhelming majority of enterprises had resumed normal operations.

But Tass and the government newspaper Izvestia said the situation in Yerevan remained tense.

Izvestia said hundreds of thousands of people attended Sunday night's rally. Some speakers harshly criticized Armenian delegates to the June 28 Communist Party conference in Moscow for not defending national interests, according to Izvestia. Resolutions approved at the conference didn't mention the Nagorno-Karabakh dispute.

The legislature of Nagorno-Karabakh has voted to pull out of Azerbaijan and join Armenia. Armenia's parliament has endorsed the demand, but Azerbaijan's legislature has rejected it. Armenia and Nagorno-Karabakh have asked Moscow to intervene.

PAC wants state to consider lottery's effects

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A new political action committee, named Consider, has formed to campaign against the Idaho lottery on the November ballot.

Sixty percent of Idaho voters approved a lottery in 1986, and Consider spokesman Randy Furniss acknowledged that many people may still favor it. "We feel we are fighting an uphill battle," Furniss said.

But the PAC has broad business and religious membership, Furniss said, and raised $20,000 since forming in early June. Consider's goal is to educate people statewide about ethical and financial arguments against the lottery, he said.

As part of its organizational efforts, Consider is sponsoring a speech tonight by former North Dakota Gov. Arthur Link, who twice defeated a lottery there. Link will speak at 7:30 p.m. at the College of Southern Idaho's Shields Building, room 117.

Idaho voters approved a lottery initiative in 1986. In Twin Falls County, voters approved it 11,014 to 8,919; while Magic Valley in general approved it 25,604 to 21,609.

But a 4th District judge threw that out because the state Supreme Court earlier ruled lotteries unconstitutional.

This year, Idaho voters will decide whether to amend the state Constitution to allow lotteries.

The Consider group opposes an Idaho lottery for a number of reasons, both ethical and financial. Among the reasons, Furniss said, are it being a regressive tax hitting low-income residents hardest and raising money by expensive means.

The Legislature proposed spending lottery proceeds on building educational facilities, after 15 percent of revenues go toward administration and 3 1/2 percent pay for advertising. Furniss also said revenues usually fall short of expectations when lotteries are started in other states.

Lotteries in 23 states and the District of Columbia raised $5 billion for state treasuries during one recent year.

So far, Furniss said Consider has raised about $20,000 to fight the lottery, but that much more is needed to pay for advertising as the November election nears. He said the money will not be paid to individual candidates in the campaign.

"Any money we raise will be spent on the educational process and getting the message out, not to the candidates at all," Furniss said.

Link, the Democratic governor of North Dakota between 1973 and 1981, and earlier a one-term U.S. representative, will speak against lotteries.

"Lotteries involve a deceitful process that puts government into the role of a pusher and that makes losers out of the vast majority of players," Link said in a press release.

He is also scheduled to speak in Idaho Falls and Pocatello.

Furniss said Consider's board includes Boiseans Ken Wilde, who is chairman and pastor at the Capital Christian Center; Bishop David Birney, lawyer Stan Crow; businessman Ted Johnson; accountant Gary Merkle; Leon Cornforth, secretary for the Idaho Conference of Seventh-day Adventists; and Grant Ipsen, of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Wayne Iverson of Buhl cools down fellow volunteer Dan Howard following the first of two fires near Buhl Monday

Firefighters extinguish 2 Buhl fires

BUHL — Buhl firefighters used more than 13,000 gallons of water to extinguish two separate fires Monday afternoon and evening.

A machine shed and about 80 tons of hay were destroyed in the first fire, which started eight miles northwest of Buhl at approximately 1:45 p.m. Tom Owens, captain of the Buhl Fire Department, said the blaze also destroyed a feed wagon and a six-row planter.

Officials estimated the damage at approximately $5,000.

Owens said the blaze spread after a trash fire ignited a corner of the machine shed. Mike Thomas owns the property and rents it to Joe Bill Robertson, according to reports.

No one was injured in the blaze.

The Buhl Fire Department, assisted by the Filer Fire Department, left the scene around 4 p.m. But members of both departments were called to another fire two hours later, this one four miles north of Buhl on River Road West.

"The 23rd of last month we had three fires," Owens said. "This time there were only two for the day."

Owens said the second fire swept over approximately five to six acres of sagebrush. "We didn't write down anything as a loss," he said.

Officials have not assigned a cause to the fire, which burned ranch land owned by Collins Brothers Corp. "We don't have a clue in the world right now," Owens said.

Firefighters left the scene of the second fire at approximately 7:39 p.m., Owens said. The two departments used roughly 9,000 gallons of water to fight the first blaze and around 4,500 gallons to extinguish the second.

Time against Sen. McClure's wilderness bill

IDAHO FALLS — Republican Sen. James McClure concedes time is working against passage of the compromise Idaho wilderness bill he and Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus have drafted.

With less than 28 working days left in the election-year congressional session and the bill still mired in a Senate subcommittee, McClure said Monday it will be very difficult to get it to the Senate floor.

"The subcommittee schedule has been absolutely full," McClure said. "That's a problem I've had for the last three months."

The two political leaders have been the only driving forces behind the controversial legislation that would preserve another 1.6 million acres of forest land as wilderness and provide special management for another 650,000. The bill has been criticized by resource interests who called it too restrictive and by environmentalists who claim it does not protect enough.

McClure said he knew time would be a problem when the bill was not introduced in 1987 at the beginning of the current Congress. Once the session ends this year any bills that pass only the Senate or the House die.

The bill was not introduced in 1987 because Andrus, organizing his administration and orchestrating his first legislative session back in office, worked on his proposal until the end of the summer. It was not until December that he and McClure reached a compromise.

"Obviously it's tough," McClure said. "But we've known it was going to be that way all along."

The odds narrow as each day passes, McClure said, "but a lot of things happen in the closing days of sessions. I'm not predicting that will happen. Obviously I would feel more comfortable if we had more time."

Andrus has said that if the compromise effort fails this year, he will drop further efforts to resolve the debate over how the 5 million acres of roadless land in the state should be used in the future.

A land swap bill that would allow Grand Targhee ski resort owner Mory Bergmyer to purchase land in Idaho, then trade for national forest land in Wyoming at the base of his resort, also is stuck in the Senate subcommittee. That bill, sponsored by Idaho Democratic Congressman Richard Stallings and Wyoming Republican Congressman Richard Cheney already has passed the House.

A similar bill has been introduced by the Republican Sen. Steve Symms, and McClure said he supports the Symms bill. But he said he predicted it also will be hard to get through the Senate by the end of the session.

"I doubt very much that it will," he said. "That's a little easier bill to pass than the wilderness bill because there are fewer issues."

Wendell man to stand trial for vehicular manslaughter

By JANE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — Leon Howard, of Wendell, was bound over to district court Monday on a charge of vehicular manslaughter in the death of the daughter of a Twin Falls County commissioner.

Gooding Magistrate Thomas Cushman ruled in a preliminary hearing Monday that evidence presented by Gooding County Prosecutor Lynn Nelson was sufficient for the case to proceed to district court. The ruling came despite questions Howard's lawyer raised about a blood test.

Howard, 60, is charged in connection with a June 9 accident on Interstate 84 in which 20-year-old Heidi Hempelman of Twin Falls died. She was the daughter of County Commissioner Marvin Hempelman.

Two eyewitnesses testified in the 5th District Magistrate Court hearing that they had seen the Howard vehicle traveling the wrong way on I-84 the night of the accident.

Willard Allen, who owns the Road Runner Cafe in Bliss, said he and his son Glenn were on their way to Burley around midnight when they saw the Howard car near the Wendell exit. Allen said he flashed his lights and honked "his horn" trying to get Howard's attention and then saw the car collide with the on-coming Hempelman vehicle.

Glenn Allen said he and his father stopped to "flag traffic" and give aid at the scene. He said he spent time with Howard and noticed the "odor of alcohol" about Howard.

Idaho State Police Cpl. Patrick Mooney, who investigated at the scene, said he too detected the odor of alcohol around Howard, and found beer cans and other debris near Howard's car.

Jerome County Coroner Gerald Osler, who performed the autopsy, said Hempelman died of massive head injuries.

Howard was taken to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center for treatment. While there police ordered a blood test. Howard had a blood alcohol level of .19, Mooney has alleged. The legal limit is .10.

Twin Falls police officer David Heidemann testified he went to MVRMC to get the test and that he had Howard sign an informed consent form after reading the form to the injured man.

Howard's attorney, Craig Hobbey, objected to admitting the blood test as the consent form as evidence. He questioned Howard's condition at the time he signed the form and whether it was really "informed consent." He also questioned the "chain of evidence" involved with the blood test.

Heidemann testified, "I asked him four times if that was his signature and he said he thought so."

MVRMC medical technologist Daniel Socknat testified he followed proper procedure, used the test kit given him by Heidemann, including use of an iodine swab rather than an alcohol swab to clean Howard's right arm. He said the sealed kit was given to Heidemann who testified he gave it to Mooney a few hours later. Mooney told the court the test was sealed and sent to the state laboratory at Pocatello for processing and then returned to him with the lab report.

Cushman ruled the evidence was admissible at the hearing, and also accepted several photos taken by Mooney.

In making his judgment to have Howard stand trial, Cushman said there was enough evidence to have the defendant bound over to district court even without the contested evidence.

He said the question of whether Howard was in a condition that allowed him to give consent to the blood test was really not an issue in this case. "The police had probable cause and could have collected the test as evidence anyway," he said.

Monday's preliminary hearing was the chance for prosecutors to convince the court there is enough evidence against Howard for a trial. The defense will have a chance to make its case in district court.

Howard will be arraigned Aug. 1 in Gooding District Court.

Possible national park Park service looks at Craters

The Times-News and The Associated Press.

BURLEY — The National Park Service will travel to the Craters of the Moon National Monument next week in a review of a proposed national park.

The visit comes at the request of the Craters of the Moon Development Corp., consisting of members of chambers of commerce near the broad expanse of ancient volcanic activity in south-central Idaho.

"I am quite confident they [Park Service] will find those areas suitable for a national park and I believe they will be interested in the surrounding areas as well," Glen Allen, chairman of the development coalition, said.

Allen said the group wants to have the monument a national park by 1990, in time for the Idaho Centennial Celebration.

Supporters also have proposed expanding the 54,000-acre site to include Crystal Ice Caves, which were recently closed; the Great Rift and Big Southern Butte.

National parks have more depth and diversity than national monuments.

Earlier this year Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, asked William

Penn Mott, director of the park service, to study the craters for national park designation, according to a press release from the congressman's office.

Stallings says people at town meetings he attended strongly backed the national park proposal.

The 2nd District congressman says the Craters of the Moon Development group has been effective in building support for the park idea.

Should the Park Service recommend national parks status for the monument there would still be water rights questions to resolve.

"A water rights dispute derailed plans to make the City of Rocks near Oatley a national park and the Hagerman fossil beds a national monument."

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, is insisting that any Idaho public lands bills introduced in Congress contain language that doesn't increase federal water rights beyond what they were at the time the bill was written.

McClure is concerned that without this language agriculture and development interests would lose water for their projects.

Rep. Bruce Vento, whose committee he wants to pass the City of Rocks and Hagerman bills, is opposed to the McClure language.

It is early, but if a bill proposing the monument for a national park is introduced, McClure would insist on that water rights language, says Todd Neuenchwander, a McClure spokesman.

Ivan Miller, NPS spokesman in Seattle, said politics won't enter into the agency's determination of whether the monument becomes a national park.

"Our job is to make a professional evaluation first," Miller said.

It would take the Park Service about 18 months to determine whether the monument warrants national park status. The trip to Idaho this month is a reconnaissance study, Miller says.

The Park Service also will be working on a 20-to-25-year management plan for the monument, Miller says.

This is separate from the national park study.

Project promoters have asked the state Department of Transportation to improve a 60-mile "rabbit path" from the Rupert area to Arco. The road would help funnel tourists to Minidoka-area merchants.

State officials have estimated the route could cost up to $30 million to improve.

Boise man gets 60 day sentence

TWIN FALLS — A Boise man booted out of two Twin Falls bars Sunday evening was sentenced Monday to 60 days in jail.

Murad was asked to leave the Pioneer Club around 6 p.m. Sunday after he threatened to fight a customer and used profane language, according to police reports. The Boise man then went up the street to the Pocket, another Kimberley Road bar, where he again threatened customers and used obscene language.

Employees at both bars asked Murad to leave. Twin Falls police located and arrested him around 6:40 p.m. in the parking lot of the Pioneer Trailer Park.

2 injured in accident near border

SNOWVILLE, Utah — A Utah woman and daughter were injured Monday evening when their car went airborne for about 80 feet after striking a culvert, Idaho State Police said.

The car driver, Loretta Shaw, 65, of South Jordan, Utah, was taken to Cassia Memorial Hospital, where she was listed in stable condition. Her 29-year-old daughter, Susan Tenney, received head, neck and chest injuries and was flown to Bannock Regional Medical Center in Pocatello.

Hospital officials did not have available a condition report for Tenney.

Police said the accident occurred around 6:50 p.m. on U.S. Interstate 84, approximately three miles north of the Idaho-Utah border. Shaw, driving a 1984 Mercury four-door, apparently fell asleep, causing the southbound car to go off the highway twice. The car eventually went into the median and hit a culvert, police said.

It flew into the air for about 80 feet, then flipped and rolled.

Tenney, asleep in the back seat, was not wearing a seatbelt and was ejected, police said. The car partially landed on her.

Another daughter, 4-year-old Jennifer Shaw, was wearing a seatbelt in the front seat and was not injured, police said. The mother was not wearing a seatbelt but remained in the car.

Truck accident leaves Florida couple injured

HEYBURN — Two Florida residents were injured Monday when their vehicle was rear-ended by a semi-truck about a mile east of here, Idaho State Police said.

Olat Olson, 72, and his wife, Phoebe, were initially taken to Cassia Memorial Hospital, but were later transferred to St. Benedict's Hospital in Ogden, Utah. State police said Olson suffered two neck fractures.

The husband and wife, from Panama City, Fla., were injured around 11:15 a.m. while traveling west on U.S. Interstate 84. The husband, driving a pickup truck pulling a travel trailer, was rear-ended by a semi-truck driven by 65-year-old Willard Richard of American Falls, police said.

The collision knocked the trailer into a field, and the detached pickup rolled once. The husband and wife were both wearing their seatbelts, police said.

State police said they closed both westbound lanes of traffic for about an hour and a half while cleaning up the wreckage.

A good many of us spend an inordinate amount of hours in front of our television sets each day. Yet, this privilege is denied the hearing-impaired person unless the TV set is equipped with a caption decoder. This small "box-like" device allows hearing-impaired people to join the video revolution that we have experienced in the last decade. The decoder allows television dialogue to appear as subtitles, called closed captions. This is accomplished by capturing the appropriate part of the broadcast signal and converting it to print. While not all broadcast programming is currently closed captioned, a significant portion is. This warrants the purchase of a TV caption decoder for a cost similar to that of an inexpensive VCR.

Programs from "Sesame Street" to "Miami Vice" and "All" are now close captioned. A decoder lets you enjoy your family's favorite shows. ## CONSIDER: IDAHO IS TOO GREAT TO LOTTERY!

LEARN THE TRUTH ABOUT THE IDAHO LOTTERY

TONIGHT, July 12th • 7:30 PM
College of Southern Idaho
Sheilds Building Room 117

Special guest speaker: Arthur Link, former 2 term governor of North Dakota — The state that defeated the lottery twice.

"Lotteries involve deceitful process that makes a pusher out of government and losers out of the people. The real lottery winners are the out-of-state companies that run the games and the new state gambling bureaucracy."

"It is a well known fact that lotteries are the most expensive method ever devised to raise public revenue. Most lottery income is eaten up in administrative costs, prizes, and advertising. Very little ever filters down to the state agencies voters are lead to believe the lottery supports." And a great deal of it ends up out of state in the hands of the lottery companies."

"It is not the proper role of state government to encourage it's citizens to gamble. And it is bad fiscal policy for a government to spend millions on advertising to get citizens to play the lottery, and to then turn around and spend tax payer money on the tremendous social costs that always result from gambling."

Gov. Arthur Link, North Dakota.

Governor Link's visit to the Magic Valley sponsored by CONSIDER, the state-wide non-partisan organization fighting a proposed constitutional amendment to legalize a state-run gambling lottery in Idaho.

Tyson ends 'retirement,' may drop trainer

The Associated Press NEW YORK — Mike Tyson said Monday his "retirement" would last one or two months, that Kevin Rooney may be out as his trainer and confirmed that Donald Trump is advising him.

The heavyweight champion, speaking at a news conference in a Manhattan hotel, was surrounded by Trump, attorney Michael Winston, wife Robin Givens, mother-in-law Ruth Roper and Rory Holloway, a long-time friend. Tyson said he wanted to dispel the swirling stories about his future but he may have started more than he stopped.

Tyson said that Rooney, who has trained him since his start as an amateur, will be dropped if he sides with Bill Cayton in the litigation begun two weeks ago to break Cayton's managerial contract.

Judge refuses to grant free agency to players

By MIKE NADEL The Associated Press MINNEAPOLIS — U.S. District Court Judge David Doty refused on Monday to turn loose 300 NFL players from their teams by granting them free agency, saying it could destroy competitive balance and cause some teams to fold.

requested injunctive relief. Doty's ruling, in effect, means that such prime players as quarterback Randall Cunningham of the Philadelphia Eagles, nose tackle Bill Maas of the Kansas City Chiefs, offensive lineman Gary Zimmerman of the Minnesota Vikings and two New York Giants All-Pro, tight end Mark Bavaro and linebacker Carl Banks, must resign with their old teams.

Kansas basketball program hit by NCAA investigation

By CRAIG HORST The Associated Press LAWRENCE, Kan. — The NCAA is investigating national champion Kansas for alleged recruiting violations in its basketball program, Athletic Director Bob Frederick said Monday.

The allegations, which included providing transportation for and loaning money to recruits, did not involve any member of the team which beat Oklahoma in the NCAA finals, Frederick said. In fact, he said, none of the players involved enrolled at Kansas.

There was a long period of time during which we were working with them (the NCAA) in which we thought this matter would not end up in an official inquiry," Frederick said. "That's why I feel very confident we're going to get through this thing OK. It's something we want to be up front about. We've asked for the speediest resolution possible."

All-Star Game will be test of newcomers

By BEN WALKER The Associated Press CINCINNATI — Infused with 30 fresh faces, this year's All-Star Game will be a test of whose new blood is best.

Never have there been so many newcomers — 18 on the National League side, including starters Vince Coleman, Will Clark and Bobby Bonilla.

Gooden, 11-5, lost his last start on Friday night. This time, his support will include such familiar faces as Strawberry and Gary Carter of the Mets, Andre Dawson of the Cubs and Ozzie Smith of the Cardinals.

Henderson will lead off in one outfield spot, followed by Paul Molitor of Milwaukee, elected at second base although he has played there only twice this season, this past Saturday and Sunday.

But some other perennial All-Stars are not present. Mike Schmidt, Dale Murphy, Tim Lincecum and Eddie Murray are among the big names missing.

Times-News writer

HANSEN — The officials working slowpitch softball may just be more of a team than you realize. Luis and Day Eguisquiza, longtime residents of this seaside community, are celebrating a decade of umpiring this season and have spiced up their involvement with a new type of participation. "We've started playing on a co-ed team," says Day. "It's a new experience for me. Luis is definitely the player of the family. I've played hard ball before, but never slowpitch." The change has wrought changes in what was previously a heavier schedule behind the plate and on the bases.

"We umpire (in the Twin Falls leagues) two nights a week on the average," Luis explained. "We play one night and usually wind up working again in weekend tournaments. That ties up five nights and that's plenty." Not that it could ever have been called easy for the Eguisquizas, who have watched their children grow up while establishing themselves as senior officials in the Twin Falls and Glens Ferry associations. "When we first started we usually worked opposite each other," said Day. "Daughters' Jenny was 4 and Jamie was just a baby so one or the other of us had to be home." Add in Jody, now 6, and 5-year-old Jeremy and it's obvious that a lot of dedication went into just sticking with the couple's favorite sport all these years. Luis had some experience in officiating prep sports when the two decided to try their hand as softball arbiters, but Day, the first and until two years ago the only female official certified in the local association, found her acceptance differed between her peers and the players.

"The male umpires have always treated me with the utmost courtesy and respect," she said. "But some of the players just had to test me. Luis told me early that in order to get the players respect I might have to bounce someone."

"The first one I tossed insulted my cooking as well as my umpiring," she continued. "He said I couldn't even boil water, so I decided he was history. Would you believe, though, that in 10 years I've only ever had to eject two people?"

"Women seem to come and go a lot more than the men do," added Luis of his wife's pioneering effort in the blue uniform. And his mate was quick to suggest a reason for that turnover. "It takes a high level of concentration," she emphasizes. "You go out there and work hard for four hours. All the players expect 110 percent out of you. Sometimes they forget you put in eight hours just like they did. They play their game and are done. By the time the 9 o'clock games rolls around an umpire can be pretty well worn out."

Although the association has gone from the lowest-paid in the state ($7.50 for a three-game evening to a more realistic $11 per contest) it takes a lot more to keep top-notch officials in the game.

"I think the improved pay has contributed to getting and keeping better people," said Luis. "I wouldn't be out there though if I didn't enjoy it and I wouldn't do it if I didn't get paid. It kind of goes together."

The Mrs. agrees. "You really have to love a sport to do a good job," she offered. "I think most umpires pride themselves on their professionalism on the diamond. I feel like it's part of my life now — a part of my profession."

Turn it all over to The Weasel

The Department of Defense and the International Brotherhood of Teamsters have a lot in common aside from guns. Both are rife with corruptive influences that have so corroded their internal machinery that the government now feels obligated to step in and weed out the wrongdoers.

It is, of course, high time something was done at the Pentagon. Why should American taxpayers continue to shell out bundles of money for, say, toilet seats (on which some very important military strategy is formulated, no doubt) when a junior officer could just run down to Woolworth and get the same items for a fraction of the cost?

As for the Teamsters, any organization whose presidential oath begins with the words "You have the right to remain silent" bears looking into.

But I believe the government is missing a wonderful opportunity to clean up both organizations by failing to see the wisdom of merging them in a creative and effective manner.

Thus, my eminently sensible proposal: Let's put all those corrupt

Perspectives

Jerry Zezima

I believe the government is missing a wonderful opportunity to clean up both organizations by failing to see the wisdom of merging them in a creative and effective manner.

Thus, my eminently sensible proposal: Let's put all those corrupt Teamster bosses in the Pentagon.

Teamster bosses in the Pentagon.

For one thing, it would take them out of the union (and away from its many honest members) and put them where they could actually do the country some good. Why should we send them to jail when we, the taxpayers, in addition to paying for all those overpriced toilet seats, would also have to pay room and board for mobsters and get nothing in return?

I say we should put them in the Army. Or the Navy. Or, best of all, the Marines. And not just as privates or lowly sailors. No sir. We should make them generals and admirals in charge of defense procurement.

That way, it is highly unlikely that national security will ever again be compromised by insider traders and greedy contractors. Not when it would mean bilking people with names like Louie the Weasel.

"Two grand for a toilet seat!" I can hear an ex-Teamster boss bellow when a contractor makes a bid on bathroom fixtures. "You tryin' to pull a fast one?"

"But Louie..."

"Dat's GENERAL Louie to you, gook."

When the contractor tries to explain that this is the way things have always been done, General Louie smiles thinly and says, "Things have changed. From now on, we do 'em MY way." Then he says the Pentagon will pay $1.98 for each toilet seat.

"This is an outrage!" the contractor shouts. "I have never heard of such impudence."

"I'm makin' you an offer you can't refuse," General Louie says as he escorts the contractor to the door. "Now I want you to think it over. If you need toida convincin', I'll be glad to send over a couple of da boys, Capt. Sil the Snake and Lt. Fat Frankie, to help youse change your mind."

Think of what this policy could save taxpayers when it came to the really important stuff, like weapons systems. ("I don't care what dem defense contractors say, no fighter plane should cost more than my Lincoln Continental.")

And you don't for a moment believe that the new Pentagon chiefs would settle for inferior quality, do you? ("Dose new missiles ain't worth squat. Start makin' 'em right or you just

Sorry folks, no pickups

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — An affluent suburb trying to spruce up its neighborhoods is having second thoughts about a law that bars pickup trucks from parking overnight in front of homes or in driveways, the mayor says.

"Citizens need for equality for pickup owners," Nichola Hills Mayor Mac Maguire said Monday. He and other town leaders will use a 90-day moratorium to review the ordinance and how it affects residents.

The city adopted an ordinance several years ago to prohibit pickup trucks from parking in driveways or in front of homes between 8 p.m. and 6 a.m.

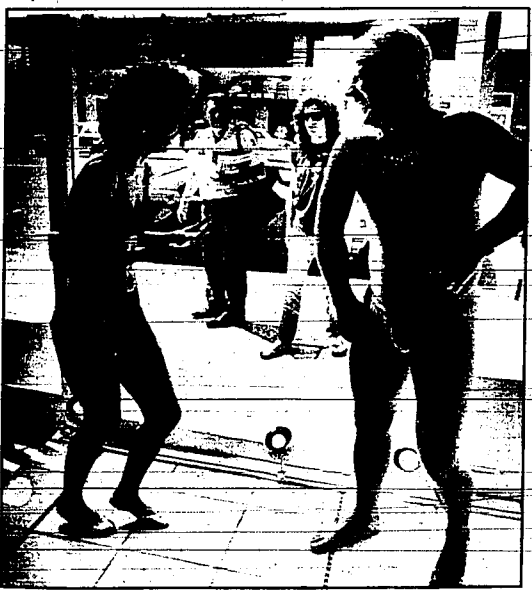

At a recent meeting, the city council unanimously agreed to the moratorium because of complaints by residents who owned pickups and had received tickets for parking illegally outside their homes.

"I don't think our citizens want the city to look unattractive in any way, but they have a right to protect their property, and they should have a place to park their vehicles," Maguire said.

The ordinance's original intent was to prohibit commercial vehicles from parking in front of homes overnight, Maguire said.

But it has forced some residents to "put their pickup in their garage and their Cadillac in the driveway," Councilwoman Ann Taylor said.

Move over John

Mike's tops now

ALBANY, N.Y. — It looks like Jason and John and James have gone the way of Tom, Dick and Harry.

For the first time in more than 20 years, John is not among the top 10 names parents gave to boys born in New York, according to statistics released Saturday by the state Department of Health.

John was the 12th most popular name given to boys in 1987 after being ranked No. 2 in popularity since the early 1960s and 1970s. Also gone from the top 10 are Jason and James, which were regulars on the top 10 list since 1977.

Mike maintained its hold on the No. 1 ranking for the 16th straight year. The name Michael was given to about 4 percent of all boys born in the state last year, the Health Department said.

Next in popularity for boys names were Christopher, Matthew, Daniel, Joseph, David, Andrew, Steven or Stephen, Brian or Bryan, and Robert. Jesse was the most popular name for girls for the second straight year, accounting for almost 3 percent of the names. Next in the top 10 came Jennifer, Ashley, Amanda, Christine, Sara or Sarah, Nicole, Stephanie, Melissa and Danielle.

Names popular for girls just a decade ago that have been bumped off the top 10 list include Michelle, Amy, Kelly and Heather.

Some of the more unusual names given last year include Jersey, Jamaica, Indiana, America, Fortune, Liberty, Equality, Freedom and Casanova.

Jesse's got 'em beat, no question

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — According to the latest Stafford Brent poll, Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis has a slight lead over Vice President Bush.

But both are getting beaten soundly by Jesse Jackson, who himself is running a distant second to President Reagan.

Brent, a 21-year-old acting student, has a unique vantage point from which to observe the whims of the American electorate — the corner of 14th Street and Constitution Avenue near the Mall.

Brent is one of several vendors running those ubiquitous "take-a-picture-with-a-famous-person" sessions, where tourists pay up to $6 for a Polaroid shot of themselves with a life-size photo cutout of such luminaries as the president, the presidential hopefuls, the pope or Hulk Hogan.

Jackson, or at least Jackson's likeness, is the clear choice among the remaining candidates, say Brent and other concessionaires. "It must be his charisma, or maybe it's because he lives in Washington," theorizes Jennifer Hirsch, 18, who manages a stand outside the National Air and Space Museum.

Well, actually, Jackson lives in Chicago. "Maybe Jesse's just more exciting than these other guys," said Brent, motioning toward Bush and Dukakis, who offered no reply.

In the closest thing to a scientific poll, Hirsch and partner James Lane, 22, have been keeping tabs on the Bush vs. Dukakis race for two weeks. The count as of last Wednesday afternoon: Dukakis 924, Bush 763.

Republicans should take heart, however: Lane suspects the tally was skewed by a preponderance of tourists from New England, especially Massachusetts, who were in town last week for the Smithsonian's Festival of American Folklife at the Mall. It probably hasn't hurt Dukakis either that his "life-size" cutout is a bit larger than life size; Hirsch added about six inches to the image after customers complained that the model, at Dukakis' actual height of 5-foot-8, wasn't tall enough.

Thanks largely to interest in the

For the record

Maybe it's the heat, or maybe it's just something in the water, but around the world last week people were bent on breaking records. For the curious, here's a sampling:

Yet another omelet: They were really cooking in Washington last Monday where Sead Woolley volunteers poured 56,000 eggs onto a 500-squares-foot surface in their quest to break the Guinness record for the largest omelet. Ham and cheese were added to the 4,666 dozen eggs, and according to organizers, the resulting omelet broke the old record by approximately 3,000 eggs.

For the hard to fit: The Auro factory in Carmaux, France took the woes of the hard-to-fit to heart and zipped out the world's biggest shirt. It took 65 feet, 7 inches of cotton to make, and measures 11 feet, 9 inches by 15 feet, 9 inches. Color? Why, bright yellow, of course.

Flying high: Most of us would consider one jump out of a plane a lifetime achievement, but not Rocky Kenoyer. He must have a tough stomach and a will to match, because last Monday he made 403 jumps in 24 hours, easily surpassing the old record of 301.

Definitely the heat: They say folks are, well, different out in L.A. and Delane Balliot, 23, and Newcomb Munt, 28, aren't dispelling the myth — any. The duo stripped down to their underwear 432 times in 72 hours — and this in the window of a Hollywood clothing store. The two are professional strippers for a singing telegram company which is giving each of them $500 a new set of clothes and a free trip to New York or Hawaii for the stint.

Bond, James Bond.

Handsome, dashing and a keen killer, Agent 007 is returning, this time in "License Revoked." Robert Davi (above, center) is joined by beauties Talisa Soto (left) and Carey Lowell in Hollywood for a publicity announcement. Davi will portray Franz Sanchez, Bond's drug lord nemesis, and Soto will play Davi's lover. Lowell is cast as the female lead opposite Timothy Dalton, who will return as Bond. What about that blonde cello player? Word's not out, but filming is scheduled to begin later this month in Mexico City.

presidential race and the summer tourist season, business has been good for the photo people. Lane estimated that his concession would gross as much as $500 a day during the July Fourth weekend. Things have been so hot, in fact, that Lane's employer, Progressive Marketing of Washington, has begun selling franchises. In the past three weeks, franchises have been sold to entrepreneurs in San Francisco, Los Angeles and Nashville.

Hirsch and Lane might want to pass on a word of thanks for their success to Bob Goss. A retired automotive transmission wholesaler, Goss, 67, is the self-proclaimed founder of the Washington photo-cutout business.

Sitting in a chair the other day outside the Internal Revenue Service building on Constitution Avenue, surrounded by likenesses of Pope John Paul II and President Reagan, Goss recalled the early days. Originally, he wanted to create a wax-museum-like figure but instead found it cheaper and easier to use blow-up photos mounted on plywood. He took his first model, of Jimmy Carter, to Plains, Ga., in 1976. There, he says, the industry was born.

Pointing to his Reagan model—which wears a brown suede jacket and a tie featuring two leaping trout—he observes that Reagan's "comfortable eloquence" makes him the industry's superstar, outshining all others combined. "He's the honorary grandfather to many people in the U.S.," Goss says.

Yes, but people have a way of forgetting, as Goss and the other vendors know only too well. Take, for example, Oliver North, last year's hot cutout. You can still get your picture taken with the former Marine officer on the streets of Washington, but clearly he is not the draw he used to be.

Last week, outside the Air and Space Museum, there was Ollie standing next to Michael Jackson, marked down to $1 per pose.

Hard of hearing had better open their eyes to facts of life

DEAR ABBY: "Hurt in Paterson, N.J." said her day was spoiled when the florist delivered a beautiful basket of fruit — an Easter gift from her granddaughter — and on the delivery order was written: "She is deaf, so please wait for her to answer the door."

Abby, this grandmother has mistaken a kindness for an insult. In some cities, delivery people merely ring the doorbell, and if no one answers, they leave the package by the door where it can remain for hours or even days.

How thoughtful it was of her granddaughter to have given those special instructions to the florist. And since florists make numerous deliveries in one day, their drivers can't be expected to remember special instructions unless they are written on the package.

Abby: a hearing loss is a fact of life; it is neither an insult nor anything to be ashamed of. I was surprised you didn't point that out instead of agreeing with "Hurt" that it was "insensitive and thoughtless" for the delivery instructions to have been in plain sight.

Seems to me, "Hurt" is overly sensitive. If that spoiled her day, she should have sent the basket of fruit to a nursing home where residents would have been thrilled to be remembered at all.

— DOLORES WERDER, SUN CITY, ARIZ.

DEAR DOLORES: You are absolutely right — I rate a raspberry on that answer.

One wonders why so many people who are hard of hearing are reluctant to admit it. And how ironic it is that so many of us willingly stick something in our eyes to improve our vision, but we're too embarrassed to stick something in our ears to improve our hearing.

Let's hear it from a sister who's right on in Sisters, Ore.:

DEAR ABBY: "Hurt in Paterson, N.J." should have been grateful, not hurt.

I was hospitalized not long ago. Several nurses were in and out of my room to take care of me. Some of them scolded me for not following instructions until I explained that I could not hear. One of the nurses made a sign and hung it over my bed: "Mrs. Tuggle is deaf, but she reads lips well."

From then on, all the people who came into my room made sure I could see their faces when they spoke to me. I wasn't offended by that sign. I was grateful to the nurse who put it there.

I hope that "Hurt" will accept her disability and not try to deny it or reject the help that comes from letting others know about our special needs. I have never known a person who did not respond positively to me when I explained my special needs.

Thank you, Abby, for giving space in your column to the problems of hearing impairment. You may use my name.

— RUBY TUGGLE, SISTERS, ORE.

DEAR RUBY: Thank you for sharing your sensible attitude. Many people who are hard of hearing pretend they aren't. They sit in groups, smiling and nodding, and either remain silent, or frequently they'll interject inappropriate comments because they don't have the faintest idea of what the conversation is about. Letters such as yours may help to persuade them to put vanity aside and see an audiologist.

Solution

Continued from Page D1 might end up sleepin' with da fishes." As for the passing of classified information, as has been alleged recently, a stern but simple "We don't like stool pigeons around here," followed by the unshathing of a blunt instrument, would put a swift end to the problem.

And as for the ex-Teamster bosses, any temptation to use their positions for personal gain could amount to treason; which would mean not an easy stretch in the slammer, but court-martial and very possibly death by firing squad.

Best of all, anyone who tried to pull any shady do would be easily found out. All government investigators would have to do is watch for Pentagon officials who made their wives start their cars in the morning.

But the real beauty part is that with a little imagination, the government could either wipe out or bump off (depending on whether you prefer military or mob parlance) two birds with one stone.

L.M. Boyd What's what

The fear of death
 A year-fatal accident would become even more afraid of death. But researchers say no, the experience usually diminishes that particular fear. As though the victim concludes, if I didn't get it that time, I guess I won't get it until destiny decrees. Or some such.
 That organ you call your skin is not just a raincoat. It's also in the chemtry business. Influences your immune system.

 Q. What's the Federal Government's acronym "POSSLQ" mean?
 A. "Persons of Opposite Sex Sharing Living Quarters."
 FEMALE SURGEON
 If you needed an operation, would you prefer a female surgeon? Many say yes. On the ground that a female surgeon, like a female school principal, has to be extraordinarily well qualified just to be there. Still.

 Q. Hollywood people use the Italian "ciao" pronounced "chow" for hello or goodbye. What's it really mean?
 A. Hello, goodbye, whatever you want it to mean. That's not. Take it all the way back to the Latin "salvare," though, and it meant, "I am your slave."
 Q. Before cars, did cities have speed limits for horses? If so, how did the cops clock them?
 A. "Running" and "reckless" ordinances. Police made judgment calls.
 What the oil from poison ivy does is damage-nerve-endings. That's what causes the terrible itching.
 TWO NATIONS
 Was in 1835 that Alexis de Tocqueville wrote, "There are two great nations, which tend towards the same end...the Russians and the Americans. The Anglo-American relies upon personal integrity to accomplish his ends...the Russian centers all the authority of society in a single arm...each seems to be marked out...to sway the destinies of half the globe."
 Q. Where'd the United States get the money to finance the Louisiana Purchase?
 A. From the great London banking houses of Rothschild and Baring Brothers.
