Counsel says tax, conflict laws broken

EDWIN MEESE III

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Edwin Messe-III-probably broketwo tax laws and swice violated a criminal conflict-of-interest statute, but "I have decided we will not prosecute," independent counsel James McKay said Monday.

Messe declared he was outraged and appalled by McKay's findings, saying that if Justice Department lawyers had issued such a document "they'd be fired."

But the ranking Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee, Strom Thurmond of South Carolinn, said "It appears from the special counsel's report the attorney general did not exercise good judgment in a number of instances. The attorney general has announced his pending resignation and I hope ... this report finally puts this matter to rest."

Concluding his 14-month investigation, McKay wrote in an 814-page report that "A trier of fact would probably conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that Mr. Messe violated" a section-of the Internal Revenue Code by filing "a materially false tax return." McKay added that Messe probably also violated a section of the Internal Revenue Code for "willfully failing to pay tax at the time required by law."

The independent counsel dwelt at some length on Messe's activities on behalf of the scandal-plaqued Wedtech Corp. and a $1 billion Iraqi pipeline project, but concluded there was no evidence that his actions were for personal gain.

Messe announced July 5 that he will step down as attorney general later this month or in early August. He said then that McKay's report; which he had not read at the time, "completely vindicated" him. The report originally was filed under scal that day with a three-judge court, then was released publicly on Monday.

The certain Democratic presiden-tial nominee, Massachusetts Gov. tial nomine. Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, promised Jackson a major role in the presidential campaign following three hours of meetings Monday morning. But Dukakis said he made no specific guarantees as to what that role would be.

Yoder said a path toward easing tensions between the camps could be paved with acceptance of one of the 13 planks Jackson wants to add to the delegation and state co-chairman for the Dukakis campaign, said adoption of the planks was unlikely because it could jeopardize Dukakis' effort to attract con ervative Democrats and independents. The delegation's chairman, Gov.

"Dukakis does not want his handstied on defense issues and would object to placing the word 'freeze' in the platform," Evans said.

He added that Dukakis could best satisfy Jackson's demand for a role in a Democratic administration by appointing him 'roving ambassador' to deal with Third World relations and other international issues.

He's going to have, and he should have, a substantial, important role, said Evans. 'He could have a good, responsible position in international trouble-shooting, where it would be important to have Jesse Jackson's tal-

Alternate Edwards said she also was optimistic about the planks. But she said tension between the candidates would not keep Jackson supporters from backing Dukakis in the campaign.

However, she said many still remain piqued by Dukakis' failure to inform Jackson privately of his decision to pick Sen. Lloyd Bensten, D. Texas, as a running mate. Jackson learned of the decision from reporters.

Edwards said blacks would vote for Dukakis anyway because it is in their interest to elect a Democrat.

Givens dismisses campaign manager

NAMPA (AP) — Democratic congressional challenger Jeanne Givens has fired her campaign manager in what the candidate said was a disagreement over a number of issues.

But Carmi McLean, who was the Jadaho field representative for Democratic Sea. Albert Gore of Tennessee during his unsuccessful prosidential bid earlier this year, said her dismissal was prompted by "bad chemistry" with Givens' husband, Ray.

Givens, a two-term state representative from Coeur d'Aleme, announced on Monday that Mike Brush, a former division administrator in the administration of former Democratic Gov. John Evans will replace McLean. Brush was involved in the unsuccessful 1986 U.S. Senate campaign waged by Evans and in the unsuccessful 1980 congressional bid by Glenn. Nichols.

'Jackson problem' won't help Dukakis

As Will Rogers once remarked, "I'm not a member of an organized political party. I'm a Democrat."

But the spectacle unfolding in Atlanta this week may well go beyond the sly humor with which Democrats are sometimes saddled.

It is a spectacle likely to bring glee to the hearts of Republicans and remind millions of Americans again just why they have gone for Remillions of publican presidential candidates in four of the last five elections.

First, there is the problem of party unity. The Democrats, with their innumerable special interest groups of ethnics, religions and unions, has rarely presented a unified picture.

This year will be no exception, despite the efforts of nominee Michael Dukakis' strategists to appeal to the center of the American political spectrum by picking a Texas moderate as his running mate.

Then there is the Jesse Jackson problem, which is both immediate this week and serious in the long run.

The trick for the Democrats is to allow Jackson enough television presence to show that he has been treated decently, but not so much as to allow him to tie up the convention or to give the watching millions the impression that he is going to inherit the Democratic Party of the future.

At some point, a black man or woman is going to be President of the United States. But that person is not Jesse Jackson.

It doesn't take a lot of consideration to realize that Jackson is wholly unqualified for the office. He is simply a megalomaniac who cannot let go of the media spotlight his "rainbow coalition" has created.

What is worse, he has no apparent interest in anyone except Jesse Jackson. His every move and statement seems calculated to enhance his own image; if it doesn't help Jesse, he won't show

How to finesse this huckster is no easy task for Dukakis. He can't be rude to him, although that s-probably-what-a-lot-of-people-would do.

But if he lets Jackson dominate the convention, Dukakis will have raised the legitimate question in the nation: if you can't handle Jackson, how will you govern the country?

All of this should have the Republicans silently smiling. There will be a great show in Atlanta this week, that's for sure.

But being off fishing in Wyoming won't hurt George Bush one bit. He knows that what Jackson does in Atlanta will do more harm to Dukakis than any attempt by Bush to upstage him.

strongly encouraged Durryl Cameron to run for Sheriff.

The reasoning is that they hope to cause a split in the votes that gave Larry Gold a two-to-one victory in the primary election.

If they can split the votes, Mr. Half would then conduct an intensive write-in campaign the last five days before the November election in hopes of retaining his and Larry, Webb's positions of Sheriff and Chief Deputy for Jerome County, over the wishes of the voters.

Their plan might explain the nonchalant light-hearted interview they gave in The Times-News recently, It could also give some insight as to why Mr. Hall hant removed his "Re-elect Hall for Sheriff signs still standing in various places around the county and why, now, there is no request too large or difficult in the East end.

Masses are being misled

MASSES ATE OEING MISIED

As far as the "New Age Movement" is conferred, it is neither truly new nor is it remotely compatible with historic evangelical Christianity. Mr. Massoth and Mr. Flaningen are either ignorant of the tenets of the schools of thought which they are endeavoring to compare, or are attempting to white-wash the obvious truth to gain support for their cause.

In either case, I feel strongly that as a Southern Bautist master I can no langer been silvent while their cause. In either case, I feel strongly that as a Southern Baptist pastor I can no longer keep silent while the masses are being misled.

Although a thorough and complete refutation of their position is impossible in a short editorial—such as this, I would challenge all thinking peopleto do their homework and make their own comparison of Christian-theology and New Age-thought.

I believe that a personal evaluation of the factual data will convince anyone of the truth of my statements. It is my sincere prayer that we might strict us. From the New International Translation of the Bible we find these words... "Test everything, Hold on to the good."

For drivers that have driven for quite a while it's still a scary thing, but what about our children that are just learning to drive, or our cleidry people who don't have the quick reflexes anymore?

I would think that the people that are responsible for all the water on the roads (which we all know is Yery easily controlled) would not want to live with the responsibility of killing ar crippling some innocent person. It would be from pure negligence on their part.

So, everyone on both sides, let's see if we can't stop this before one of you have to go through the nightmare of seeing someone you love and care for, suffer, it can be stopped. There aren't very many times that you can drive around the roads of Gooding County and not ran into water on the roads. Atlanta visitors sample 'Southern cooking'

ATLANTA (AP) — If-Democratic convention visitors to Atlanta want. "Southern cooking," they will have to look for it among restaurants that take 28 Yellow Pages to list. But it's there and it's worth the hunt.

It is one of a few distinctive regional cuisines left in America, but it is, changing and it is hard to define.

"Southern cooking is primarily home cooking, not chef's art, writes Nathalie Dupree in her book New Southern Cooking."

"Our desire to preserve, hold on to and remain set in our ways is reflected in our politics and customs and in the soul food that became a trademark-and-main-stay of Southern cooking, she writes. Much of it came from former slaves who were our cooks."

A few Atlanta restaurants specialize in traditional Southern dishes. Thelma's Kitchen and Mary Mac's Ten Room are among the hetter-known ones.

But Amanda Brown Olmstead, publiciest for the nationally broadent public television series "New Southern Cooking with Nathalie Dupree," has a different idea about? the best place to find—Senthern cooking in Atlanta.

My advice is to make a friend and cast in, she said. That's where you are going to find true Souther's cooking the way my momma did it and the way we still do it."

Visitors can expect to find lots of carbohydrates, such as grits and biscuits, and a lot of fried food, especially chicken. There is nothing more Southern than those three foods, she said.

Southern regional "specialties are becoming more complex. Ms. Dupree's new book has a grits recipe" that includes turnip greens, parmesan cheese and whipped cream. Not traditional, but certainly Southern. New approaches to traditional, but certainly Southern. New approaches to traditional ingrédients live check-by-jowl with hush puppies and cern bread.

The Southern ham or sausage biscuit, she said, is now a popular. Just-food item across the country.

U.S. industry at highest operating point in 8 years in June WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. industry in June operated at its highest point in eight years, edging closer to a Tevel "that conomists believe signals a pickup in inflation, the government said Monday.

The Federal Reserve Board said American factories, mines and tullities operated at 83.1 percent of capacity last month, up 1.2 percentage points from May.

It was the third consecutive monthly increase, the seventh rise in nine months and the highest level since March 1980, when the operating rate was 83.7 percent.

the operating rate was 83.7 percent.

"We're in the danger zone," said David Jones, an economist government securities dealer.

"We are pushing back up to the levels we saw back at the beginning of the decade when we saw more inflation."

Jones predicted that by the that as companies have difficulty meeting demand and their products become more scarce, prices meeting demand and their products become more scarce, prices will rise.

Capacity constraints are usual in an economy in its 67th month of expansion, but Jones said the drought in the Farm Belt, a tightening labor market and the recent increase in the value of the dollar are combining to worsen the inflation pressures that would normally be present.

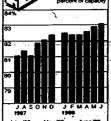

Last month, the drought sent grain and poultry prices soaring by more than 20 percent, unemployment dropped to a 14-year low of 5.3 percent, and the dollar rose to its highest level since last fall, a development that could eventually increase import prices.

"Some of the areas that have been the tightest don't seem to be getting any worse," said Cynthia Latta, an economist with Data Resources Inc., a Lexington, Mass., forecasting firm:

If realized, that would be the biggest gain in four years and should lead, she said, to an-easing-of-operating-rates by-late, this year or early next year. "Also, any time industries afid capacity, it tends to be state of the art and it tends to be more efficient. That should alleviate prices pressures somewhat. One Armenian activist said the decision was "awful."

The decision by the 30-plus members of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet was unanimous according to the Tass news agency. It was announced after the parliament's executive body had spent about eight hours in extrandinary session.

The parliament of the disputed region voted July 12 for annexation with Armenia, although they have no common borders. The Azerbaijan leadership quickly rejected the decision, setting the stage for Monday's resolution of the deadlock by the executive-body of the national parliament.

The Presidium's unanimous flocision is likely to anger Armenians, both in the disputed region and in the small republic at the Soviet Union's southern border. "This is awful," declared Koryun Nagapetyan, an Armenian artist, who organized Mosewe demonstrations in support of annexation. This will be the end of Soviet power.

Telephone calls to Armenia and the Nagarno-Karabakh region did not go through.

Armenians account for at least three quarters of the 160,000 population of Nagarno-Karabakh, a region about the size of Delaware. The Armenian population claims it has suffered neglect and discrimination at the hands of its Azerbaijani government.

Gorbachev was among the national and republic officials who addressed the Presidium gathering, according to Tass, but few details of his speech were reported in the initial announcement.

Ireland pays tribute to 'Wrong Way' Corrigan

BALDONNEL AIRPORT, Ireland (AP) — Douglas "Wrong Way" Corrigan, going the right, way this time, returned Monday to the artifield where he landed his small plane 50 years ago after leaving New York on a flight to California.

"Look, no hands!" the Levenr-old American declared, arms aloft in-a-triumphant gosture, as the commuter plane carrying; him, from Dublin landed at Baldonnel Airport. Corrigan wore the same leather flying jacket he had on when he landed here the first time. An army band, a Cabinet minister and the U.S. ambassador greeted him, along with R.W. Sullivan, the aircraft engineer who met him on the first trip.

Corrigan has always said he misread his compass, headed east by mistake, and did not know until his $900 Curtiss-Robin monephane pierced the clouds 28 hours later that he was over Ireland. He had applied to fly the Adlantic, but was refused because the plane, carrying 330 gallans of gasoline and five gallons of oil, was deemed too heavy to be safe over the ocean.

Before leaving the United States for his first trip to Ireland since, the Texas-born pilot, hinted his story might change, but he stack to it at the initial referency.

I followed the wrong end of the compass needle, he told admirers at Baldomel Airport, It's a simple thing to happen. It shouldn't have happened, I was the first one to admit that I, had made a mistake and I was willing to correct it.

He recalled that the the runway at Baldonnel, now Irish air force headquarters, was a grass-strip the last time he landed there.

I taxied up to a little shack where there were two men in uniform. Corrigan said, I was in the Irish ar the was in trouble until they found out what my name was and the policeman said, He's just another Irishman coming home.

U.S. aviation authorities suspended Corrig-an from flying for five days after he his unau-therized trip to Dublin, but Americans and the Irish loved his explanation.

The results in the United States were a New York ticker-tupe parade, a meeting with President Franklin D. Rossevelt and a movie, "The Flying Irishman," starring Corrigan as himself.

He was a woodworker and took up aviation when he helped build the Spirit of St. Louis, in which Charles Lindbergh made the first solo flight across the Atlantic in 1927.

Corrigan bought his own plane for $310 in 1931 and spent $590 modifying it for the trip.

South Korean protesters interrupt trial

Angry protesters hurling eggs disrupted the trial Monday of former President Chun Doo-huan's younger brother, who is charged with embezzling millions of dollars.

About 50 radical students and dissidents yelling "Execute Chun!" hurled eggs, pat toes and other objects outside the courthouse on the first day of hearings in the corruption trial of Chun Kyung-hwan.

Judges suspended the trial un-lil Aug. 8 as disturbances contin-ued inside the crowded court-room. Hundreds of police stood guard outside, but there were no clashes.

Wolford charged on 8 counts of state tax evasion

By CRAIG LINCOLN

TWIN FALLS — David Wolford, the owner of what was once the largest employer in Hailey, has been charged with evading several years of state income tax.

The founder and owner of Comm Tek Publishing Co., Wolford is charged with to paying Idaho state income tax for several years in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

Comm Tek, which published satellite television magazines, employed more than 100 people in Hailey before moving to Boise in 1985 to take advantage of cheaper air fares and other cost-cutting benefits.

The eight counts filed by Baine County Prosecutor Ned Williamson accuse Wolford of filing a non-resident Idaho return in 1979 and therefore not paying 1978 resident Idaho income tax when he was a resident.

Wolford also is charged with failing to file Idaho tax returns for the years 1978 to 1984. For the 1985 tax year, he's accused of filing a part-time tax return even though he was a full-time resident.

Wolford is now working at the company's office in Vienney-Var-He referred questions to his attorney, Terry Hogue of Ketchum. Hogue declined to comment Sunday, and didn't return phone calls Monday.

Evans seeks job in Dukakis camp

IDAHO FALLS — Former Idaho Gov. John Evans says he plans to do a little job hunting while at the Democratic convention this week at Atlanta.

Evans, an early supporter of Gov. Michael Dukakis and long-time associate, said in a pre-convention interview he will let it be known of his interest in a job if Dukakis wins the presidency in Navember.

On the cabinet level, Evans said he could be considered for interior secretary — which traditionally goes to a Westerner — or as energy secretary, which would put him in a position of overseeing the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Other possibilities, he said, could be director of the Bureau of Land Management or somewhere within the Small Business Administration.

Cyclist treks 4,700 miles for Alzheimer's

TWIN FALLS — David Robinson was not a cyclist four months ago, but on Monday he pedaled through Twin Falls on the last leg of a 4,700 mile trip from Miami to Scattle.

The 26-year-old consultant's abrupt change of lifes-tyle was inspired by his mother's gradual mental decay and eventual death from Alzheimer's disease. Deploring the "sense of isolation and desperation among caregivers" as well as the misery of victims, Robinson embarked last April on a "Ride for Reason" to raise con-ceivances and money.

emourked just April on a Nucleor Acuson to ruse con-sciousness and money. Robinson is affiliated with the Columbus, Ohio, chap-ter of the Altchiemer's Disease and Related Disorders Association, a nationwide network of support groups for victims and their families. He expects to raise $100,000 for local chapters in the towns along his route, although to date he has earned only $50,000.

More important than the money, according to Robinson hopes that his experience will show others are recease public awareness of the disease.

A lot of people will see our van (covered with "Ride for Reason" insignial and say. What a good cause."

He says-that-particularly-in-rural areas-his-very presence reassures families of sufferers that they are not alone.

Alzheimer's disease, an irreversible brain disorder which causes mental deterioration, currently affects about 3 million Americans. It is projected that, unless a curre is found by the year 2000, one in every three families will have at least one parent die of the disease. Robinson was 16 when his mother contracted Alzheimer's, and had to watch, powerless, for nine years, as she lost her reason and all ability to take care of herself. She was only 51 when she was diagnosed with the disease.

City turns down donation of mobile home's streets

TWIN FALLS — City council members say they turned down a donation of streets within a mobile home park because they didn't want to open up a can of

"I feel a little bit in reverse — we have some streets that we'd like to give these people," said Councilman-Gale Kleinkopf.

City Manager Tom Courtney said the proposal was the first he has seen of someone offering a private

The Magic Valley Mobile Home Estates Owners Association sought to dedicate the streets to the city so that maintenance would become the city's obligation, said Gene Huckfeldt, chairman of the association. The city council voted unanimously, with Mary Clusky absent, not to accept the property. Huckfeldt said the group pays taxes for street repairs and should receive some benefit.

The streets fall short of city standards because they are not asphalt, drain to the center, do not have concrete curbs and gutters, and are six feet short of the 50 feet right-of-way requirements, Huckfeld said.

He said mobile homeowners are willing to give up three feet of their lost to extend the right of way. Huckfeldt said the homeowner's association would also be willing to pay for existing repairs, but the city would pay for future roadwork.

Gary Young, city engineer, said when the park was developed, the streets were built privately? Although the streets meet appecifications for private streets, they fall short in several areas for public streets.

Young said when a developer builds the smaller roads, he does so with the intent of saving a lot of money.

Car chase ends in man's arrest

TWIN FALLS — Police early Monday arrested a Twin Falls man on several traffic misdemeanors following a lengthy car and foot chase through the city's Southside.

James Ray Morton, 31, was arraigned on charges of reckless driving, eluding police officers and fictitious-display of a license plate. Total bail was set at $1,000.

Several patrol cars chased Morton - at speeds exceeding 70 mph - along Seventh Street South, Second Avenue South and Kimberly Road, court records allege. The chase began around 3:35 a.m. after a Twin Falls woman reported to police that she was looking for her daughter, believed to be in Morton's car.

An attempt to locate was issued on the car, an orange Datsin 2807.

Datsun 2802.

A patrol officer with the Twin Falls Department of Public Safety spotted the orange Datsun crossing Main Avenue at Seventh Street South. The officer turned on his police lights, after which the Datsun's driver accelerated and turned eastbound on Second Avenue South. The driver ran a red light at East Five Points, then went eastbound on Kimberly Road, according to court records. Another patrol officer, listening to the chase over the radio, then pulled out from Locust Street onto Kimberly Road, blocking the Datsun's path.

He said firemen could upgrade their training to the basic EMT level when the city could afford it.

Fendley-said-dispatchers also need to be trained in handling medical calls. The volume of calls would be doubled with the new program, he said.

City Manager Tom Courtney said there is a "real mission question" that needs to be resolved.

We're reaching a point that we can't add on to the duties of the fire department, "Courtney said.

He said problems could arise if a fire unit is taking care-of-an-omergency victim and then gets a call for a fire.

Courtney said the department's pri-

Five tiers to be exact. And with a new High-Rise CD from The Benj. Franklin, each tier increases your interest rate.

In fact, the more you invest in our High-Rise CD, the higher your interest rate. And, by leaving your money in longer, your rate can go even higher than you with The Benj, Franklin's High-Rise CD, you have 30 days to add to your investment. So by combining accounts from The Benj. Franklin or other banks, you could earn interest at even higher levels. If your bank isn't giving you tiers of joy, visit your nearby Benj. Franklin office.

Bernhagen nurtures Olympic dream

Former Halley resident and onetime NCAA indoor champion Lisa Bernhagen clears the high jump bar during a recent track meet in Stanford Stadium

Is a time Lisa Herich agen completed in an Olympic women's high jump trial was in 1984. She was 18 years old, the pride of Wood River High School, an institution in Idaho high school track and field and on her way here, to Stanford University, to begin what most believed, would be a long glorious track career.

She took seventh place, but that was in 1984. This week, after four-years of frustration, injury, disappointments and a little glory to boot, Lisa Bernhagen will travel to Indianapolie-for-another-shot-at-making-the three-member U.S. Olympic women's team.

Unlike her high school career, Bernhagen years at Stanford have been been speckled with adversity and uncertainty. Had it not been for a mysterious foot injury Lisa suffered a year ago, shortly after she won the NCAA indoor title, her first 3% seasons as a Cardinal high jumper mighthave been a bit less disappointing and a bit more glorious.

Bernhagen, an organizational behavior student at Stanford, has one more indoor season remaining in collegiate eligibility.

The early years in college were bumpy at best for Bernhagen, but following a coaching change at the end of her sophomore year. Lisa began to resemble the form that brought her four consecutive Idaho state high Class A-2 jumping titles from 1981-84
while attending Wood River-High.

In 1987, Bernhagen looked as though she would dominate the college high jumping ranks. During the indoor season, she reached a personal best of 6-feet, 59-inches and later that season, she claimed the NCAA indoor remay mith a jump of 6-344.

Just four meets into the 1987 outdoor season, at the Modesto, Calif.
Relays, Bernhagen suffered a queer but severe injury to her left "takeoff" foot, while warming up prior to the meet.

The diagnosis was strained ligaments an injury that kept Bernhagen she says.

Superstardom in high school may Superstardom in high school may have attributed to Bernhagen's troubles early on in college, according to Dave Wollman, the high jump coach att Stanford. Lisa's problem, he says, was lack a of confidence in her abilities during that first year at Stanford. This is a general rule, Wollman says. Mobil sponsors the U.S. indoor track and field Grand Prix and the contract and field Grand Prix and the outdoor Grand Prix, in which most of the meets are conducted in Europe. Of the 17 outdoor Grand Prix meets this year, only one-was-scheduled-in-th United States, at San Jose, Calif.

In addition to many American athletes traveling to Europe for those meets, many go there for non-Grand Prix meets, because of the large amounts of money provided by the European promoters.

"We need to go to some professional outfit to see if we can market it (track and field in the United States)." Fran-ken said at a hastily called news con-ference during the U.S. Olympic Tri-als. "We're not getting much track on TV.

"I think the money's out there. I think track is bigger than beach vol-leyball and cycling," he said, referring to two sports that recently have been marketed for television.

Franken proposed a circuit cover-ing the indoor and outdoor seasons with a total of 10 meets, each with prize money of $300,000.

"I think the public could relate it," he said, "like the PGA or t. LPGA."

Jody Weiss, a representative of In-ternational Management Group, a-marketing company, said IMG had discussed a track circuit with TAC.

"But TAC won't give exclusivity to one marketing group ... one entity," Weiss said. "We would love to pursue this ... but it has to be financially realistic."

Jimmy Carnes, former president of TAC, agreed of the need for a strong track and field circuit in the United States

"We need to desperately create meets all over the United States if we are to create interest (in-the sport),"

One of the day's biggest surprises come in the men's pole vault, as American record-holder Joe Dial failed to advance to the final. Dial, who has vaulted 19-6½, failed in three attempts at 17-7¼.

There also was an important dis-qualification in the semifinals of the women's 400-meter intermediate hur-dles.

Sandra Farmer-Patrick, a native of Jamaica who recently became a licitizen and had the fastest time by American this year, was disqualified for running out of her lane after finishing first in her heat.

Mark Everett went out for basket-ball in high school, but when he didn't play in the first game, his mother made me quit. So he went out for track — "I had to do something in school," he said - only to find that "Mom kind of Wanted the to quit that, too. I was out running in the hot sun and she didn't think that was too good. She's a nurse."

That was in Bagdad, Fla., in the panhandle, where Mom picked-up the phone Monday night to hear Mark on the line. He was calling her to tell her that he had made the U.S. Olympic Team by finishing second in the 800 meters

The funny thing is that he didn't run them especially fast — an 800 best of 1:58, which he improved to 1:47 a year later and to 1:44.46 Monday night.

"The difference is training," Everett said, "and the fact that my senior year, we didn't have a track. We just ran in the neighborhood. Our coach would tell us, 'Go down to the telephone pole and come back,' and that's what we did."

His obituary as a world-class athlete was written too early, American 800-meter record-holder Johnny Gray insists.

Gray, 28, was the top finisher in the 800-meter run Monday night in the U.S. Olympic Trials, turning in a time of 1 minute, 4396 seconds — only slightly slower than his American-record-1:42,60 in 1985.

His reputation was tarnished by a seventh place in the Los Angeles Olympics in 1984 and his failure to could be a fine of the finals in 1984 and his failure to make the finals in 1984 and his failure to make the finals in 1984 works.

Controversial judging marks U.S. box-off

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — The Olympian was in the eye of the beholder at the U.S. Olympic box-off Sunday. Despite the physical nature of the sport, controversial judging turned the box-off into as much of a beauty contest as figure skut-ing.

beauty contest as figure skating.

Super-heavyweight Riddick Bowe won a trip to Seoul, South Korea, with a 3-2 decision over James Salters when a judge who scored the fight even leaned in Bowe's direction when forced to choose. But 17-year-old Ed Hopson and his coach, Roger Bloodworth, claimed that they wen the fight in the ring for the second straight day over 125-pound favorite Keleie Banks, but lost a 3-2 decision that they can be seen as a second straight of the second straight day over 125-pound favorite Keleie Banks, but lost a 3-2 decision that they can be seen as a second straight day over 125-pound favorite Keleie Banks, but lost a 3-2 decision that they charged was preordained. Salters raised no objection when the referee raised Bowe's hand as the winner. 'I had hopes, but Ididn't really think I had it,' Salters said. 'There's anothing wrong with praying, is there?'

nothing wrong with praying, is there?"

Bowe, who overcame ankle and hand injuries to defeat Olympic Trials champion Salters two straight days in the box-off, developed a warm regard for his opponent in the process. "Im quite fond of Robert." Bowe said. "He brought out the best in me. I haven't had this kind of competition for a long, long time. I haught they all were pushovers before."

The atmosphere between Hopson and Banks, however, was more heatile. Although he lost, Hopson-parformed his wictory back-flip before leaving the ring, then ran out of the arena and took a dive in the pool behind Caesars Palace, an action that symbolized his thinking about the judges who voted against him.

"I was there for decoration," Hopson said after failing to cool off in the pool. "Politics play a big part in amateur boxing. Roger said the only way I could win was if I knocked Kelcie Banks out, and he wasn't lying."

Banks won the world ehampionship in 1986 and was the only American to win a gold medal in the Pan Am Games last year and he has had more than 200 amateur fights. By contrust, Hopson won a novice division title earlier this year and was fighting in the open class for just the 12th time Sunday. Ballesteros wins British Open duel LYTHAM, England — Seve Ballesteros did more than win Monday at the British Open. He played the best round of his life, with what may have been his best shot ever, and revived a career that was in disarray.

"A round like that comes along only once in every 25 years, every 50 years," Ballesteros said after he best Nick Price in a stirring head-to-head duel with a 6-under-par 65, best "round of the tournament.

"I think we saw a new Seve out there today," said Price, who stretched Ballesteros to the limit of his remarkable talent.

"I think he's come out of his shell and is ready to resume his place in golf," Price said.

Ballesteros agreed. This was more than just his third triumph in the old-ast of all this world's golf tournaments, more than just his fifth major title. It will, he said, restore the confidence that was shattered by his lapses in the 1986 and 1987 Masters.

"Now, I will remember his," Ball-esteros said. "Lwill not remember his," Ball-esteros said. "Lwill not remember his, "Ball-esteros said." Livill not remember his, "Ball-esteros said." Oklahoma may face additional NCAA allegations

DALLAS (AP) — New allegations may be forthcoming by an NCAA enforcement team in the University of Oklahoma football program, despite deast one alleged infraction uncovered the institution's earlier receipt of an both at OU and rival Oklahoma State letter alleging 16 rules violations, according to a published report.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association staff is trying to gather information about car financing and other extra benefits that may have been made available to Sooner players, the Dallas Morning News reported in Sunday's editions.

An NCAA spokesman told the newspaper that, if additional efforts of the control of the composition of the control of the cont

Dykes has charged that former OSU assistant coach Willie Anderson offered him an automobile as the national signing date neared.

Anderson told the newspaper he would have no comment on any allegation. He now runs Integrity Management sports and talent agency in Stillwater.

Officials of both schools got official letters of inquiry from the NCAA that listed charges from investigators. OU officials released a five-page list of the 16 charges contained in its letter. The summary left out all coaches and players names.

At OSU, officials confirmed receiving an NCAA letter but declined to reveal its contents.

The Cowboys' investigation should be complete by the end of September, said OSU Athletic Director Myron Ro-

JEROME - As the 1988-sear winds to a close, it is apparent that there is no other better than the Udders here in women's softball ters nere in women's sortical.

No team better than the Udder Team that is, and a major contributor, to the success of this year's Udder

Team is first-year pitcher Misty Falconburg.
Another Falconburg?
Falconburg took over the Udder's Furling duties 10 games into the season this year. It was a spot vacated by her older sister Shelley, who now pitches for the second-best team inthe Jerome Women's Schiball Association—Honker's Place.
The transition from her former position—second base—to pitching has been for the most part, smooth for the Udder Team, according to Coach Vinco Dias.
"Im really pleased with how Misty is pitching, she's adapted to it (the position) real well, he says. Misty reellly filled-a need-when her sister left.
She struggled at first, but then she jelled. She's tough to hit.

The younger Falconburg may be tough to hit, but even possibly more important, is the way she hits against.
her opposing pitchers. She's batting 597 in 16 games, third in the league.
Dias-says-that-type-of-offensive-polency is not that common from the pitching position.

"I think that's (the pitching position) where she can help us the most.

Misty Falconburg tosses a pitch for Jerome's Udder Team in a game earlier this season

There's no secret to Misty's method of pitching. "I just try to get it overshes say, but she did and that II she needed a strike, she could throw one. Still, Misty says, I wish it was as good as my sister (Shelley).

Solid pitching from Falconburg is crucial if the Udder Faam hopes to do like the state tournament in Pocatello next month. There, he says, twell be competitive. Lowmanent in Pocatello next month under she legue state the Udders rolled to a Jerome league that the state tournament. The state tournament is a game earlier in a game earli

Fat hens lay few eggs: — German proverb

"Fat hens lay few eggs."

"Wo die neun ist, da ist die Dame," cackled an overjoyed South. And with that remark, he proved two things: that locating a missing queen does not a centract make, and that German bromides are little better than their American cousins. South won his diamond queen and led a low heart to dummy, fetching West's nine. With his triumphant chant, "Where the nine is lies the queen," he returned a heart to his ace to capture West's queen. Fattened by this success, he then proceeded to blow the game. The last trump was drawn, and a spade to the jack lost to East's queen. When East shifted to a low club to West's queen west cashed the spade ace and exited in diamonds. Stuck in his hand, South had to concede a club, and the gamewent one down.

Since South "knew_that he would drop the doubleton trump queen, he could have delayed that enjoyment to make his game—even with a misquess in spades.

After Cashing dummy's triump king, he leads a club back to his 10 and West's queen. West underleads his spade ace, dummy's lark going to the state of t

The couple were married in an elaborate ceremony that included a bridal party of 22 and drew about 650 guests, a throng of casually dressed well-wishers-outside the church, and hurdeds of journalists.

People began lining up outside the church as early as 10 a.m., six hours before the ceremony, to get a glimpse of the participants in what was called Canada's version of a royal wedding.

Gretzky, who has led the Edmonton Oilers to four Stanley Cup titles and holds dozens of National Hockey League records, arrived 30 minutes early for the ceremony. He was escorted by best man Eddie Mio, a former Oiler.

Jones, who like her new husband is 27, is from Bridgeton, Mo., outside St. Louis. She has appeared in the films "American Anthem," "The Flamingo Kid," "A. Chorus. Line" and "Police Academy 5."

The moment Mikhail Baryshnikov made the West his home 14 years ago, strangers claimed his life as public property. As a dance supthe years he has mastered, or at least reconciled himself to, this peculiarly American skill of selling and explaining himself and his dance company. "You never learn," he says. "You you the reality and tell the truth. Or tell the beautiful lie."

The idea of that, lie, as seemingly artless as a perfectly rehearsed dance, amuses him and he savors it briefly before continuing. Even sitting still, he radiates grace and dramatic authority. His magnetism has less to do with the gravitational pull of celebrity than with the expressive sweep of unam, the casual shrug of a shoulder, the seductively quiet voice. The mangled idioms of learned English and trunslated Russian are purt of it too. gied follows of rearried English and translated Russian are part of it too, and the rare direct glance or wry smile reveals the obvious—he is well-

"It's still frustrating, you know," he says, "because sometimes you make wrong decisions about your career or your life and you go for something and it doesn't work the way you want it to and people write you could have made the better choices. You just must be more careful the next time. People make up their story. People always interpret why you are doing this when you are not doing that." For years, Baryshnikov's work with the American Ballet Theater (ABT) came under attack. He was "Sovietizing" it! He was "Sovietizing" it! He was pushing young doncers too far! He was alienating older dancers! Although he said his goal was to create a company that did not need to rely on stars, he was See BARYSHNIKOV on D2

Although the controversy seems to have subsided, Baryshnikov, at 40, remains cautious about revealing his plans, as if unwilling to give new m terial to the people who insist on in-terpreting. He is known for unpredict-ably sliding from ebullience to a moodiness Americans delight in read-moodiness Americans delight in reading as typically Russian, but his reti-cence now seems more than that — a well-earned wariness about how his words and actions will be perceived. Is there another movie in the near future? Maybe, but nothing that can be discussed now. What will he be do-ing in Europe while the ABT plays and Washington? Company business, peri-od. Baryshnikov, who was not sched-uled to dance in Washington, had to cancel several of his performances in New York last week because of a flare-up of an old knee injury — an-other subject he deesn't like to talk about.

And on that most delicate subject of all — what becomes of a Soviet defector in the age of glasnost and summits — he is a paragon of discretion.

all — what becomes of a Soviet due fector in the goe of glasnost and sumitis — he is a paragon of discretion. "I wouldn't comment on that," he says, then smiles and adds, "Using your Washington classic answer."

The question is more than gossipmongering, and the answer is diplomatic in the truest sense. An agreement on cultural exchanges was one—of the most obyious nchievement of—the U.S. Soviet summit in Geneva two years ago. The visits to Moscow of justice this year were not just cultural events, but clues to change within the Soviet Union and in its relationship with the United States.

Last year the artistic director of the Bolshoi Ballet invited Baryshnikov to appear with the Bolshoi in Moscow, but several weeks later Baryshnikov but several weeks later Baryshnikov his troupe received an invitation as well. He remained publicly optimistic that the rejection of his request for an ABT tour of the Soviet Union would eventually be reversed. As of now, no ABT tour has been planned and Bary-shnikov won't speculate on the possibility of any upcoming invitations for his troup or himself.

He will, however, admit he was a particularly interested student of the recent summit.

"I think it was a success," he says.
"I think it was the right, slow pace discuss everything."

During the summit, President Reagan told members of Moscow's cultural community, "We in the United States applaud the new tinaw in the arts. We hope to see it go further. We hope to see wilknini Baryshnikov and Slava Rostropovich — artists Mrs/Reagan and I have seen perform in Washington — perform again in Moscow."

cow."
When he read that comment, Baryshnikov says, "I was very touched. I was very touched by this, but I will keep remarks to myself."
Sensing a political edge to questions about his homeland that might escape someone who did not grow up in the Soviet Union, Baryshnikov avoids even the seemingly innocuous and the Soviet Union, Barysanikov avoids even the seemingly innocuous subject of what he would like to see if he does ever visit Moscow. He deflects the personal to speak of his company ("We have some ballets to show ..."). Fellow defector Rudolf Nureyev re turned briefly earlier this year to visit his sick mother, and said at the time he intended to report back to Barysh nikov and other emigres, but Barysh stkov won't draw a connection be

As does her father, whose native in dependence was honed here.

"It's a good and cruel place to grow up," he says of the United States.

"You have to make up your mind. No-body would take care of you, for sure. It was unlike anything he had known in Russia. There, although a member of the privileged artistic member of the privileged artistic elite, he lived, he says, "like every-body else. It's 100 percent security. the early "70s. Obviously there were very good moments and very frustrating moments. That's why I left."

The security is now gone, replaced-by chance and risk.

I never gamble on eards or casinos or horses because my life is a constant gamble on stage," he says. And Thate to lose, like anyone else."

Baryshnikov has gambled on the screen as well as on the stage. Not all of his three movies have been winners, but he has come out of them a success, praised in reviews that panned the movie around him. Following the heavy-handed neo-Cold War thriller "White Nights," released in 1985, he joined "Turning Point" director Herbert Ross in what was originally intended to be a film of the ballet "Giselle." In the end, it became the story of a troupe of dancers filming "Giselle," with Baryshnikov in a sort of "Turning Point" reprise as a charismatic lover-and-leaver of young ballerinas. The movie, as its star admits, "disappeared very fast from the screens," but only after most critics got off a few good lines at its expense. He "learned a lot from the experience," he says, again the diplomat." I observed certain realities of what's good, what works, what deson't work, because I'd been involved from the beood, what works, what doesn't work, ecause I'd been involved from the be ginning on this project."

Now he thinks he would like to try a film role with no dancing. "It's much more intriguing and a different thing-to do for me, obviously. People are expecting me to put my ballet slippers on and dance around." He is current reading and discussing a part that has no dancing around. It may come to pass in that nebulous period he calls "the close future." Nothing he call's 'the close future.' Nothing he can talk about now.

Although the tone is tamer now, some controversies continue. The frothy production of 'Gaite Parisienne' that ABT premiered this season (with costumes by the equally frothy designer Christian Lacroix) received the response Baryshnikov has come to exoce the control to the come to exoce the control to the co

You can see reviews from a production, a rave next too. Itolal cream puff."

As he sees it, The Inchofunity in the dance world extends beyond the critics to the performers and creators. "This city, the New York City, has so many different companies going in different directions. It's a big confu-sion about, let's say, post-Balanchine, post-classicism... Like the Russians are saying. You cannot put a comb through all this hair and put it in one direction."

think, a sociological phenomenon. It is the end of the century, you know. It's a business involved."

He is speaking about budgets and ticket sales. They are constraints a few giants like Baryshnikov may be able to ignore — or claim to ignore, with all that talk about the positive review inevitably balancing out the negative — but that the majority of artists cannot. As he moves through artists cannot. As he moves through artists cannot. As he moves unrough the tangles of these larger realities, questions of policy and direction seem to defeat grammar and syntax. "Creative people are very much afraid. It's less and less places where.

One or two flops and you're out of the business forever. Nobody would commission ballet for you. For a man whose life has been shaped by varied political systems, this is getting a little too close to politics again. Granted, he is about to enter one political arena. As a relatively little of the color by the color by

"I am starting to get a little interested in politics here," he says with a shy smile that implies he is admitting to a mildly embarrassing passion.

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC enter-tainment chief Brandon Tartikoff says Thursday night is a fine time for couples anxious to start a fami-

"It's the most fertile night on TV," Tartikoff said in this week's -issue of People magazino. As proof, he cited several actresses who have become pregnant in real life while performing on NBC Thursday night shows, including Meredith Baxter Birney on "Family Ties" (since moved to Sundays), Rhea Periman and Shelley Long on Cheers, "Phylicia Rashad on "The Crosby Show" and the latest, Lisa Bonet on "A Different World."

Tartikoff concludes: "If you want to get pregnant, if you're having trouble having a baby, you and your husband should get on one our Thursday night shows."

The only logical thing to do in such a situation is to file a lawsuit, chaiming either physical suffering or mental anguish. Or passibly both.

"Is it true," the judge might say when the trial begins, in a sweltering courtroom not unlike the one used for the famous Scopes trial in 1925, "that the defendant, on a 95-degree day, actually walked up to the plaintiff, who was already suffering visibly from the heat, and said. Hot enough for you?"

Upon hearing this, one of the jurors faints and must be revived with a cold compress. Your attorney argues that this is exactly what happened to you the day the defendant asked if it was bot enough for you.

The defense attorney objects to such tactics, but cannot do so very strenuously because he is about to be overcome by the heat.

It is a landmark case, and as the trial drags on, you sit there, sweating it out.

WASHINGTON — Every time columnist Art Buchwald hears about someone plunking down six bucks to see the new Eddie Murphy movie "Coming to America," he has the annoying sensation that some of that money should be coming to him.

The fact that the film hasn't had good reviews offers little solace, suchwald said Sunday from his summer retreat at Martha's Vine-

He was responding to an item in Liz Smith's syndicated column that the Murphy film is amazingly similar to a Buchwald short story called "It's a Crude, Crude World." It is the tale of an African prince who, while on a state visit here, is deposed and forced to make his way in U.S. society penniless and without his usual entourage.

According to Smith, and Buchwald concurs with her reporting, the story was optioned and taken to Paramount to be offered to Eddie Murphy. A screenplay eventually was written, but Murphy passed on the milestone recently by releasing "Ramonesmania," at wo-record fit comfortably on one compact disk.

And except for an occasional guitar solo by Johnny Ramone — a lapse some fans equate with selling out — the anthology shows that the pioneers of punk pith have stuck to the formula of two-minute, three-cord head-bangers.

-It's easy to see why. Runzheimer International, relocation consultants, says the $50,000 it takes to support an executive with a spouse and two children for a year in suburban Tampa, Fla., or Columbus, Ohio, would have to increase to $70,000 to do the same in New York. "Tho price swings are so huge now," said Michael Schell, president of Mo-ran, Stahl & Boyer, relocation con-sultants. "The differences were al-ways there, but the magnitude has be-come so enormous it would seem to make relocation impossible in some cases."

One result is horrendous commutes, as late entrants to New York's overheated housing market are forced to seek less expensive shelter farther

If CRS had not decided to move, 'I couldn't continue it much longer,' he said. 'It really has taken a toll on our family, I barely see my kids.'

Beyond housing, New York has 'image problems to be overcome,' admitted Schell.

Lance Barclay, a Moran, Stahl vice president, is often reminded of that as he flies into New York. 'We're all admiring this magnificent view of Manhattan, and somebody will say something like, Somebody down there is getting-muggee.' I had always believed that Godra house was open to all people — not just the well-dressed-I got this crazy idea from reading the Bible. I thought that since Jesus hung out with prostitutes, poor fishermen and lowly tax collectors, he wouldn't be uncomfortable in the company of hard-working people who couldn't afford the luxury of dressing time.

DEAR ABBY: I am plenty frosted over "Frosted's" objections concerning what children wear to church.

Did she ever stop to think that maybe the mother was running late that morning and instead of dressing the children and walking into church late, or skipping church altogether, she chose the al-ternative? At least she was there!

Statewide diet takes off 24,000 pounds

What happens when an entire state goes on a diet?

Ask the propole from the Land of Enchantment, better known as New Mexico. Over 7,000 residents dropped an astonishing 23,941-pounds. That's close to 12 tons and they aren't finished yet. Numbers are expected touble once all reports are in. How did they do it? Through a behavior modification program called Ear Right New Mexico. With the help of a $5 kit, antricipants were taught to change their eating habits. Specifically, their goal was to make five diary changes or lose five pounds in a 10-week person. The kit contains posters with 19 suggested eating behaviors. Each week focused on a different group of suggestions. For example, the first week focused on a different group of suggestions. HealthNet New Mexico is a unique private, non-profit corporation created to supplement state and federal health promotion efforts. Lnunched by Sen. Jeff Bingaman (D-N.M.) in 1985, it promotes the health of all the state's citizens through educational campaigns. It is funded primarily through grants.

The second annual Eat Right promotion is changing mutrition habits throughout the state. This year, coordinates registered almost 16,000 people for the 10-week program.

"It's more difficult to reach rural sites," said Leonard. But we went into 60 cities, many of them small communities, and every Indian reservation. For many, it might have been the first health promotion program-to reach them."

Once citizens were introduced to the program, the media, state agencies and employers provided plenty of incentives to encourage participation. They included the following:

• A bushel of New Mexico red chili and a bushel of Arizona grapefruit were waged in a dietary duel between the cities of Albuquerque, won, the first part of the bet by enrolling more people than Tucson (10,000 versus 6,500).

• Implementation guides were distributed to more than 285 work sites.

Anniversary

It's a girl — finally

MOUNT DORA, Fla. (AP) — The Maufroy clan is celebrating a doubly blessed event — not only the birth of a child, but the first girl born into the family in 140 years.

Asleep in her mother's arms, little Ashley Renee Maufroy seemed unnware of the fuss being made over her by doting relatives as they snapped pictures and chatted excitedly at a recent family gathering.

Ashley's great-grandfather, Rene Maufroy, 77, said his grandfather had two sisters in the 1840s.

"That's the last time girls have been in the family and then this one came along," he said. "Ill say, she's quite welcomed."

The elder Maufroy doesn't remember how many sons his great-grandfather had, but his grandfather had one. His father had one som he has two sons; and his son has three.

The lucky day came on May 13, when Leon Maufroy Jr.'s wife.

Dr. Harry Ostrer, an assistant professor at the genetics division of the University of Florida in Gainesville, said the Maufroy family is a rare case.

He said he could not determine why girls have been rare in the family, without studying the Maufroya' background. However, "the likelihood (of having so many boys) is extremely low," he said.

'Swine Queen' accepts crown but squeals about the title

FRANKFORD, N.J. (AP) — Some-times, being swine queen isn't all it's cracked up to be. Oh sure, there's the crown and the sash and you get to reign over a 4-H pig club. But 16-year-old Karrie Lomas has found a down side.

Material girls wear diamonds

By The Associated Press

Diamonds apparently still are a pir'ls best friend.

In 1986, according to industry figures, 73 percent of all brides-to-be got diamond engagement rings. And they probably were bigger and more expensive than in previous years.

The average diamond ring sold in 1986 was Aic carats, with an average value of $1.177, says Lloyd Jaffe, charman of the American Diamond Industry Association, a trade group. That compared with an average 28 carats and a value of $700 in 1980, Jaffe says.

"Latest tabulations regarding diamond wedding bands and anniversary rings. he 530s, "indicate that the market for men's diamond wedding bands has increased substantially, to over 400,000 pieces, up 20 percent over 1985." over 1985."

Men usually know very little about diamonds when they start shopping for an engagement ring, says another jewelry executive, but they generally have a set price they are willing to spend.

"Before they buy an engagement ring," says H. Marvin Beasley, vice president, jewelry merchandising for Best Products Co., "they should de-cide what is most important for the money – quality or size or both." Other things to keep in mind, he says:
