Drought-cut corn crop to boost food prices

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An annual Agriculture Department survey confirmed Thursday that drought will curtail the fall corn harvest by a third or more, resulting in higher retail food prices for months and years to come.

However, government officials said bountiful crops in recent years have built stockpiles so high the United States need not fear actual shortages on grocery shelves and can even continue exporting food.

The new surveys led USDA experts to predict the 1988 corn crop will total 4.48 billion bushels, down 37 percent from last year's harvest and the smallest output since 1983.

Sharp reductions also were reported for soybeans, wheat and a number of other crops. Cotton, which thrived last month in the hot, humid weather, is expected to increase from last year.

Overall, the department's Agricultural Statistics Board put total U.S. crop production at 88 percent of the 1977 average, a scale used to compare output from year to year. That matched the low 1983 reading, when sharp cutbacks in government acreage programs, along with drought, reduced crop production sharply.

The corn crop is expected to average 78.5 bushels per harvested acre, down from 119.4 bushel per acre last year, a record year-to-year decline of 34 percent.

Corn is the largest and most important crop grown by American farmers and, as a feed ingredient, is essential to the production of meat, poultry and dairy products.

Assistant Secretary Ewen M. Wilson, the department's chief economist, said the drought may add 1 percent to the cost of food this year, 2 percent next year.

"Today's reports confirm that the drought has had a major impact on this year's crops," Wilson told reporters. "But, because of large pre-season stocks, total supplies are enough in most cases to assure and adequate food supply at home, satisfy foreign customers and meet our

President signs disaster relief bill to assist farmers

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Commending "the indomitable spirit" of drought-stricken farmers, President Reagan on Thursday signed America's largest-ever disaster relief bill.

"This bill isn't as good as rain," Reagan said. "But it'll tide you over until normal weather and your own skills permit you to return to your accustomed role."

Reagan, standing before several farmers invited to the Rose Garden signing ceremony, said the $3.9 billion aid package expresses a distinctly American tradition ... of lending a helping hand when misfortune strikes."

The disaster-relief measure, among other things, provides aid for farmers suffering crop losses of more than 35 percent of their expected harvest because of the drought or other calamities. The payments would be equal to 65 percent of the lost income. Farmers whose crop losses exceeded 75 percent of the expected yield would receive payments equal to 90 percent of lost income.

Idaho spring wheat harvest hits 14-year low due to dryness

The Associated Press

BOISE — Drought took its toll on Idaho's spring wheat crop this summer, cutting estimated production to its lowest level in 14 years, the government reported.

The 7.6 percent decline in the anticipated spring wheat harvest despite increased acreage over last year kept combined spring and winter wheat production at under 77.3 million bushels.

That was down 9 percent from 1987 production to mark the lowest total in the last nine years, the Agriculture Department said Thursday, basing its projections on Aug. 1 field surveys.

Wheat is one of the top cash crops for Idaho farmers, trailing only potatoes. Spring accounts for just under a third of Idaho's total wheat production.

Barley and sugarbeets also felt the heat and shortage of water as yields declined substantially for both, and while dried bean yields were only off slightly from 1987 total production will be down markedly due to a 27 percent reduction in acreage, USDA analysts said.

The only crop to survive the drought was corn, which is mostly grown under irrigation in Idaho. Production was forecast at 8.1 million bushels, up 25 percent from last year as the average yield rose five bushels an acre to a record 135 bushels.

In the major field crop estimate of the season, the department forecast Idaho's spring wheat crop at just under 23.6 million bushels, down 10 percent from last year's drought-plagued harvest. Harvested area was put at 380,000 acre, up 40,000 from 1987.

The last spring wheat crop to be smaller was in 1974, when the harvest totaled just under 22.1 million bushels

The average yield plunged from 75 bushels an acre last year to an estimated 65 bushels this year, reflecting the severe impact the drought had on dryland production. In some areas of southeastern Idaho, dryland farmers were reporting the loss of half or more of their crop.

Winter wheat's survival through the drought was the only thing that kept producers from being hit as hard as their counterparts in other areas as the national wheat harvest plunged 13 percent from 1987.

The Agriculture Department left unchanged its July forecast

Thousands of sign-bearing foes of 'Last Temptation' assemble outside Universal Studios in California Thursday.

'Temptation' may show for free in Twin Falls

By ADRIENNE TOOMEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A local campaign against the "The Last Temptation of Christ" may backfire.

Not only is Twin Falls theater owner Larry Roper considering showing the film that has raised the ire of some Christians, he says he's tempted to throw open the doors of his theater and show it for free.

"I'm considering showing it now more than I was before," Roper said in response to the petitions, letters and phone calls barraging his office. "They're telling me I don't have the right to show it. It's no longer an issue of good or bad taste or religion. It's become a constitutional issue."

If Roper decides to bring the movie to Twin Falls, he may offer free admission. He spoke with Universal officials about the possibility on Wednesday.

"We're considering it," said Roper. "They (the protestors) think we're money grubbing. If we open the doors for free, everyone in Twin Falls can see it and form their own opinion about the movie."

Scared? — A4

The movie, produced by Universal Pictures and directed by Martin Scorsese, has spurred controversy with its extra-biblical account of Christ's life. The movie depicts Jesus as being involved in sexual relationships and doubting his divinity.

Roper believes "The Last Temptation of Christ" would have bombed with Twin Falls audiences if it had not generated such controversy. "Twin Falls likes comedies and kick-butt movies. This movie isn't either of those," Roper said. "Every letter to the editor is worth 100 to 200 tickets. ... I've had people from all walks of life asking me when they can see the film."

Although controversy may perk ticket sales, the Christian community's "only logical choice is to speak out on the issue," said Jim Osborn, a member of the Tyler Street Baptist Church Board of Elders. "The same applies to rape, murder and shoplifting. Ignoring it and pretending it's no big deal isn't going to make it go away."

Roper has received two petitions urging him to boycott the movie. One petition, signed by 100 members of Tyler Street Baptist Church, states, "We the petitioners will not patronize any theater that shows this film or any Universal production."

"I understand he has the right to run a business, but we have the right to make some noise, too," said Chuck Helman, a member of the church's Board of Elders. "I'm in favor of the petition because we want to voice our opinion when we see something that's going to be detrimental to the community."

In response, Roper said, "I stand by their right to express their feelings, but these petitions are threatening me."

Senate OKs Thornburgh as successor for Meese

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate unanimously confirmed Richard L. Thornburgh as attorney general on Thursday, sending him to take command of a Justice Department wracked by turmoil over his predecessor's ethical conduct.

The vote was 85-0.

Thornburgh succeeds Edwin Meese III, who quit after pronouncing himself exonerated by an independent counsel's report that concluded he "probably" broke the law.

The Senate did not take immediate action, however, on three other department nominees who, along with Thornburgh — will shape Justice Department policy for the remainder of the Reagan administration.

The three already are serving in acting capacities: Harold Christensen as deputy attorney general; Francis A. Keating II as associate attorney general; and Edward S.G. Dennis Jr. as chief of the criminal division.

American, Soviet teachers crack stereotypes

The Associated Press

AMHERST, Mass. — American and Soviet educators are spending two weeks coping with stereotypes and social policy in an unusual program aimed at teaching them new ways to tell their students about each other's countries.

"Maybe first I will try them on my family," joked Alexander Mitrofanovich Bannov, principal of a secondary school in Novosibirsk, about "believing exercises" and other methods outlined at the institute at Hampshire College.

The two-week program, which began Monday, is sponsored by the Soviet Academy of Pedagogical Sciences and by Educators for Social Responsibility, a non-profit organization based in Cambridge.

Twenty teachers, researchers and administrators from each country were chosen for the program, which is run in English.

Bannov, who teaches English in the high school he also supervises, said he was surprised to find his American counterparts facing so many of the same problems he faced in trying to reform his school.

Among those problems, he said, were "the evaluation of teachers and students and staff, and the improving of education. Everybody says teachers should teach better, as if a child was a pan into which you could pour information like water."

Lawrence Dieringer, associate director of ESR, said that for teachers in both countries, lessons about each other's country "are fraught with problems, strong feelings, misinformation, deeply embedded assumptions and resistance to new information, all related to tensions in U.S.-Soviet relations."

Thursday, the participants did a "believing exercise" — a method of getting students to learn how to understand other viewpointe by making them defend points of view they disagree with.

The teachers were asked to make statements supporting the position that "there are some crimes so horrible and so abusive that they demand capital punishment."

For many participants, it was impossible to suspend doubts about the death penalty enough to understand how others could support it.

"It is very strange for me to hear about this death penalty," said one Soviet woman.

Throngs demonstrate against film's release

The Associated Press

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. — Thousands of demonstrators lugged crosses and picket signs to the gates of Universal Studios on Thursday to protest "The Last Temptation of Christ" on the eve of the film's release.

In Washington, the conservative religious lobby Moral Majority condemned the Martin Scorsese-directed film as "an utter blasphemy" and pledged a boycott of Universal, the movie's distributor and related companies.

The movie, which opens today in seven U.S. cities and Toronto, stars Willem Dafoe, Barbara Hershey and Harvey Keitel. Based on the 1955 novel by Nikos Kazantzakis, it differs with the Biblical account of Jesus life.

The fundamentalists' fury has focused on Scorsese's portrayal of Jesus as an uncertain, ambivalent savior. In a hallucinatory dream sequence while dying on the cross, Scorsese's Christ imagines abandoning his divinity to food-aid commitments."

The new USDA crop estimates were based on field surveys as of Aug. 1. In May and June, before drought had made its biggest impact, USDA projected the corn harvest — based on trends and an assumption of normal weather — at 7.3 billion bushels.

But those projections were revised downward a month ago to 5.2 billion bushels, assuming farmers got normal weather the remainder of the season.

The soybean harvest was estimated at 1.47 billion bushels, down 23 percent from 1.9 billion bushels produced last year. Prospects last spring called for about 1.88 billion bushels, and the July projection was 1.65 billion bushels.

Production of all wheat was indicated at 1.82 billion bushels, down 13 percent from 2.1 billion produced in 1987. In May and June, the USDA forecast this year's output would be up slightly. The July projection was 1.84 billion bushels

The wheat total included winter wheat planted last fall, which barely stayed ahead of the drought. Later plantings of durum and other spring wheat varieties were brutalized by heat and dryness.

Winter wheat production was estimated at 1.355 billion bushels, down 1 percent from last year. But durum and the other spring varieties, which are produced in the hard-hit northern plains, showed sharp declines.

Durum was estimated at 54.6 million bushels, down 41 percent from last year's harvest, and other spring wheat was shown at 212 million bushels, down 53 percent from 1987.

Cotton production was estimated at 14.9 million bales, up 1 percent from last year. The crop was projected at 13.7 billion bales in July.

Department officials said U.S. grain production this year is expected to total 192 million metric tons, 31 percent smaller than the 1987 output. The total grain supply for 1988-89 — which includes inventories on hand at the beginning of the season — is down 24 percent from last season.

In addition to the reductions in corn and soybean yields, Wilson said production of some other spring-planted crops has suffered, including: oats, 206 million bushels, down 45 percent; barley, 288 million bushels, also down 45 percent; and sorghum, 561 million bushels, down 24 percent.

Wilson said USDA experts "continue to believe that the drought will add only one percentage point" to consumer food prices this year.

The department has forecast a food price increase this year of 3 percent to 5 percent. Before the heat and dry weather, USDA had expected a 1988 food price hike of 2 percent to 4 percent.

Wilson said the drought could add 2 percent to the consumer price index for food next year.

"That's on top of an additional estimated increase in food prices somewhere in the region of 4 percent," Wilson said. "So this would bring it up to a total of 6 percent."

He also said the United States is "looking at an export situation that is not as good as it was a year ago." He said production abroad would have to take up the slack in world food supply caused by the drought.

He scoffed at any suggestion, however, that the United States may have lost its capacity to produce sizeable crop surpluses. He noted that 50 million farm acres are being kept out of production this year in addition to millions of additional acres in the long-term Conservation Reserve Program.

GOP platform toes conservative line as committee presses work

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Republicans finished work on major chunks of their 1988 platform Thursday, crafting a document that toes the conservative line on major issue.

Near the end of the day, they recommended that the party support reopening a major tax loophole for independent oil and gas producers, but they defeated a proposal calling for expansion of AIDS testing to bus drivers and other transportation workers.

The convention platform committee completed its version of the document save the defense and foreign policy sections, matters that Nebraska Gov. Kay Orr, the committee chairman, said would be wrapped up this morning.

She said it was unlikely any minority planks would be pressed on the convention floor next Tuesday.

The 106-member platform committee, after spirited debates late Wednesday over AIDS and abortion, turned to less controversial issues Thursday such as urging schools to teach more geography and foreign languages.

But late Thursday, another bitter dispute over AIDS broke out.

Porter Davis of Oklahoma proposed a plank calling for testing of transportation personnel for the deadly disease.

"When you travel around New Orleans, you will take taxis and buses," he said. "When you go home, you will take planes and rely on pilots and mechanics.

"This is overkill," retorted Rep. Guy Molinari of New York. "My God, we won't be able to get out of New Orleans if we adopted this."

"Fellow delegates, let's come to our senses. ... Why pick on these people?" said Bill Graham of North Carolina.

The amendment was defeated without a formal vote tally.

Earlier, the committee added language supporting efforts to expand drug testing of transportation workers.

A potential fight over apartheid was averted as Sen. Lowell P. Weicker Jr. of Connecticut left town before the committee took up the foreign policy plank. Weicker, who returned to Washington to attend to Senate business, shelved plans to press an amendment calling upon the GOP to back tough economic sanctions against South Africa.

Before leaving, Weicker got Sen. Robert Kasten of Wisconsin, co-chairman of the committee, to press for adoption of another Weicker amendment backing a merger of the Environmental Protection Agency and the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration — but not as a Cabinet-level Department of the Environment, as Weicker originally sought.

The amendment was adopted later without dissent.

Another approved amendment calls for reopening a major tax break for oil and gas producers. Currently, "intangible drilling costs" can greatly reduce an independent producer's taxes. But the so-called alternative minimum tax can wipe out much of that benefit, by forcing the producers to forego the deduction — a change made in the 1986 tax law.

petition extended its protest to all Universal films because "that's one of the strongest ways to express how strongly we feel about this," said Osborn. "Do you justify a drunk driver killing one person by saying he drove a 100 times without doing any harm? If you leave in one bad apple, it will eventually spoil all the rest."

Roper feels the request is unreasonable. "What happens down the line if they decide they don't like Clint Eastwood because he sneers at people?" he asked.

The Christian Book Store, in the Blue Lakes Shopping Center, sent Roper a petition last week. The petition has 160 signatures, including several from residents of Montana, California, New Mexico, Washington and Arizona.

The signatures were gathered in less than a week. "People were signing it right and left," said Julie Sherry, store employee.

Christian Book Store employees say the petition was not intended to be a personal slam against Roper.

"It was more just in general," said Charlene Herd, store employee. "Businesses need to stand up and turn their backs on the dollar sign if a lot of people are going to be offended."

In addition to the two petitions, Roper has received several letters urging him to reject the movie. Roper's theater operator, Don Campbell, said he has received six phone calls protesting the movie and three supporting its release.

If theater owners boycott the film, it will quickly be transferred to video cassette, Roper said. Or if video store owners refuse to buy the movie, it will be shown on cable television.

"Movie companies have three avenues now," said Roper. "They aren't going to sink $10 or $12 million into a movie and let it sit on a shelf somewhere."

Idaho law prohibits theater owners from ordering films until they have been screened in a major city. Although Universal Pictures is releasing the movie in some cities today, no release date has been set for Salt Lake City, Twin Falls' screening city.

Therefore, Roper may be unable to make a final decision for several months. "I'm looking towards the fall," said Roper. "We're already scheduling our October pictures."

A booking agent usually previews his films; but Roper may personally travel to Salt Lake to screen "The Last Temptation of Christ." He is considering asking a member of the Christian community to accompany him.

for Idaho winter wheat, which put the total harvest at 53.3 million bushels. Although 11 percent below last year's record harvest, it would be the fifth largest crop on record with a yield of 68 bushels an acre, the second best ever.

And while the drought has curtailed production, it has also sent market prices soaring, leaving farmers able to make a crop this year with the prospect of their first near-decent return in years. Idaho's average market price for wheat was at its highest level in two years in July.

Barley prospects were down 10 percent from a year ago to an estimated 55.3 million bushels, the smallest crop since 1979 although acreage was up 3.5 percent from 1987. The drought-reduced yields were off 10 bushels an acre from last year at a forecast 65 bushels.

Sugarbeet yields were off nearly two tons an acre to 24.5 tons as expected production dropped 5 percent from 1987 to under 4.1 million tons.

And production of dried beans, which hit their highest average market price in seven years last month at $23 a hundredweight, was off 28 percent at an anticipated harvest of just over 200 million pounds. Yields were down on fractionally to 1,850 pounds an acre, but harvested area was cut back from 148,000 acres in 1987 to only 108,000 this year.

live as an ordinary mortal, and fantasizes about sex with Mary Magdalene.

Scorsese has defended his film, saying it is intended as a thought-provoking work of art derived from a novel that focuses on the humanity of Jesus and the worldly temptations he faced.

In London, a Roman Catholic official called Thursday for viewers to boycott the film.

"People ought to show a bit of restraint and not give in to curiosity," said Nicholas Coote, assistant general secretary of the Catholic Bishops of England and Wales. "Can we just for once not wallow in bad taste?"

A spokesman for the Church of England, John Miles, said the church's Board of Social Responsibility will want to see the film, but until it did, the church could not comment.

Police said a crowd of 25,000 joined the Hollywood protest, coordinated by the American Family Association, Trinity Broadcast Network and other conservative Christians. It caused huge traffic jams around Universal Studios.

Jover Walker, 34, said she came to the demonstration at the direction of the PTL Television ministry. "I may go see the movie," Ms. Walker said. "I'm still curious, but I don't like the sex scenes with Jesus."

Among participants in the noon demonstration were Rev. Donald Wildmon, director of the American Family Association of Tupelo, Miss., and Bill Bright, president of the Campus Crusade for Christ in Arrowhead Springs, Calif.

"We have come to tell this company that although you may not respect our religion, you will respect us in the marketplace," Wildmon told the crowd.

Bright and Wildmon have emerged as prominent critics of the film. Bright has offered to raise $10 million to buy and burn the film, and Wildmon has urged a nationwide boycott of MCA.

Moral Majority president Jerry C. Nims said in a statement from his Washington office that he was calling for a nationwide boycott of Universal Pictures and other subsidiaries of MCA Inc., Universal's parent company.

"Regardless of what this movie claims to be, 'The Last Temptation of Christ' appears to be utter blasphemy," Nims said in a letter to MCA chairman Lew Wasserman, accusing MCA and its officials of "privately and personally profiting from te blaspheming of our Saviour."

Nims said the boycott also would apply to Xerox Corp. and Pepsi Co. because some members of their boards of directors also serve on MCA's board. Nims' spokesman, Jake Hansen, said the Moral Majority leader has not seen the movie.

Conservative Reps. William E. Dannemeyer, R-Calif., Robert K. Dornan, R-Calif., and Clyde Holloway, R-La., added their denunciations late Wednesday in Congress, calling the movie "scurrilous" and "blasphemous."

Reagan to nominate Hurlbutt

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan plans to nominate Guy J. Hurlbutt, general counsel of the Boise Cascade Corp. in Boise as a judge of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, the White House announced Thursday.

Hurlbutt, 46, will succeed J. Blaine Anderson if confirmed by the Senate.

Before joining Boise Cascade in 1984, Hurlbutt was U.S. attorney for Idaho for three years. He is also a former chief deputy attorney general of Idaho.

Mom charged in child's death

ST. ANTHONY (AP) — A 2-year-old St. Anthony boy has died after allegedly being beaten by his mother, authorities reported.

Richard Dozier died early Thursday at the Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center in Idaho Falls, four days after he was hospitalized in critical condition with severe head injuries.

His mother, Dawn R. Airhart Dozier, 22, was in custody in the Madison County Jail in Rexburg on $50,000 bond after being charged earlier this week with aggravated battery. She was arrested late Saturday night at the hospital.

McCrea's Bridge to be replaced

ST. ANTHONY (AP) — The Idaho Transportation Department has agreed to replace the McCrea's Bridge in Fremont County, where two teen-age girls were killed in a traffic accident last year.

In a letter to the county commission, the department said the bridge "is seriously deficient" and the county's application for money to replace it was "readily accepted."

But there was no indication when money would be available.

Premature quads surviving

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Quadruplets born to a Lewiston couple were listed in serious condition this morning, but appeared to be doing well, a Sacred Heart Medical Center spokeswoman said.

The three boys and a girl born 2 1/2 months prematurely Saturday morning were the third set of quadruplets delivered at the Spokane hospital in six years, said spokeswoman Marilyn Thordarson. The earlier two quadruplet sets survived.

Each of the new quadruplets weighs less than 3 pounds and will probably remain in the hospital for another 48 days, she said.

The babies are in the hospital's intensive care nursery.

The infants are the first children for Karen and Bruce Lasky. Mrs. Lasky was released from the hospital on Wednesday, Ms. Thordarson said.

The children's names are Justin David, Travis Wayne, Ryan John and Sarah Jean.

Events Center joins fray

CALDWELL (AP) — Amid efforts to improve racial relations in Caldwell, the manager of the Caldwell Events Center claims his facility has been wrongly pulled into the controversy.

A U.S. Justice Department conciliator has met with community leaders in the wake of Mayor Pete Cowles decision to place eight Hispanic events at the center under review.

The mayor took that action after an event at a different facility, the privately-owned Multi-Purpose Center, resulted in a disturbance this spring.

Caldwell Events Center Manager Doug McConnaughey says that one problem event has spilled over to have a negative effect on his facility.

Nampa man to study in Japan

BOISE (AP) — Harold Printz, manager of Producers Supply Coop of Nampa, has been selected by a Japanese trade organization to take part in a study program in that country this fall.

Printz will receive an all-expenses-paid trip to Japan for three weeks starting Oct. 12. State Agriculture Director Richard Rush said Printz is to visit Japanese farms, meet with farm leaders and discuss trade relations.

He manages the state's second-largest farm supply cooperative and is a graduate of the Leadership Idaho Agriculture program conducted by the state.

The study program is sponsored by the Japanese External Trade Association, which has seven offices in the United States. Printz was selected by the San Francisco office as one of 15 participants in this year's program.

Border traffic suffers reroute

EASTPORT (AP) — Traffic between the Panhandle and Canada on U.S. 95 was rerouted for the better part of the day Thursday after a tractor-trailer accident closed the border station at Eastport.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police said a liquid propane truck failed to make a turn and slammed into a power pole and overturned. The driver suffered a shoulder injury.

None the propane leaked, but it had to be pumped into another truck before the wreckage could be moved, officials said.

The border station normally handles about 800 vehicles a day, but traffic on Thursday was rerouted.

Trucks that must pass through the Eastport Customs Station were delayed there until the highway was cleared.

Firefighters battle stubborn Idaho blazes

By The Associated Press

Thousands of acres of southeastern Idaho range were in flames Thursday as fire bosses throughout the state braced for another assault of thunderstorms and the dry lightning that could ignite even more backcountry wildfires.

"Resources are getting pretty hard to get," said Bureau of Land Management spokesman Floyd Bethke in the Burley District, where three lightning-sparked range fires have already charred more than 13,500 acres of tinder-dry range.

"We had to go all the way to Grand Junction, Colorado, for hand crews," Bethke said.

BLM fire bosses pushed up to 200 firefighters on the lines around the raging 9,000 acre Metcalf fire just nine miles west of Malad City near the Utah border.

"It's a sleeping giant that just woke up," Bethke said. "Winds of 60 mph hit it and it decided to move."

Tankers bombarded the front of the fire with retardant while crews backed up by bulldozers fought gusting winds to get a break line around the blaze. Ranchers were being urged to get their stock off the range ahead of the flames.

"We've really got a major incident out there," Bethke said. "I've got no projection of containment or control except that maybe it'll be Sunday — luck with us."

Crews were being diverted to Metcalf from two other range fires as they were gradually reined in. The 1,500 acre Middle Mountain fire south of Oakley was controlled about mid-afternoon, and after losing several head of cattle to the flames crews finally had a handle on the 3,000-acre Badger fire just north of the Utah border.

Prospects for containment by day's end of the stubborn 1,500-acre Spring Canyon II fire on the Targhee National Forest near the Wyoming border improved as the 10-mile containment line established last weekend continued to hold through swirling winds.

That fire, eight miles east of Swan Valley, has already cost over $1.8 million to fight.

In the Caribou National Forest, about 75 firefighters were battling the 100-acre Walker Creek fire, burning in heavy timber on a ridge about six miles northwest of Inkom. Air tankers were dropping retardant on that blaze as well.

Crews and equipment were being demobilized from the 1,000-acre Ruby Rapids fire in the Nez Perce National Forest north of the Main Salmon River near Riggins after that two-day-old blaze was contained late Wednesday.

Because another 1,000 acres of fuel remained unburned inside the fire line, strategists kept over 100 firefighters on the scene to mop-up hotspots intensified by low humidity and temperatures nearing triple digits.

The control target was set for early Friday.

The National Weather Service was also forecasting "widely scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms" to leave land managers worried about another outbreak of fire. Some put crews on standby.

McClure demands explanation from FBI

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said Thursday he's "furious" that Montana Democrats apparently have forced the FBI to change its mind about moving regional headquarters from Butte, Mont., to Salt Lake City.

In a letter hand-delivered to FBI Director William Sessions on Thursday, McClure said he's demanding an explanation why the FBI will let political pressure change its plans.

"This flip-flop is nothing less than a slap in the face to hard-working federal law enforcement officials in Idaho and Montana, and a disservice to the people of the Intermountain West," McClure said, in a statement released through his Idaho offices.

"There have been few times in my career when I have been so angry as I was when I learned the Justice Department has caved in to Montana Democrats and has agreed to shelve a plan to move the Butte FBI office to Salt Lake City," McClure said.

"Frankly, I am furious about this and I demand an explanation," McClure told Sessions.

Earlier in the week, Montana political leaders said they had been advised that the FBI planned to close the Butte agency, which had served as headquarters for Idaho and Montana for many years, and move most of its functions to Salt Lake City.

About 44 employees are involved. Boise had been studied as a possible site for the office.

The Montana officials immediately protested and on Wednesday, the FBI said it would shelve the whole idea.

"It is beyond my understanding how you can justify allowing a handful of Democrats to micro-manage the FBI," McClure said.

Banks to begin paying fair share of state taxes

BOISE (AP) — Spokesmen for some of Idaho's major banks say because of a favorable tax decision and hard times in the state's most important industries, they've paid very little in state tax in the last few years.

But that's changing, and the spokesmen say as they return to strong profits, state tax payments are going up.

"Our responsibility as good corporate citizens is to pay taxes to support the state of Idaho," said Les Paskett, tax manager for First Security Corp.

He was among several bank executives testifying here Thursday before a legislative committee studying Idaho's tax system.

A Tennessee decision in 1983 held that the holders of some government securities did not have to pay state taxes on interest earnings, the officials said.

The ruling, plus the fact that Idaho's basic industries were in decline, wiped out state tax liability of most banks for the next few years.

"Banks reflect what happens in a state. When its basic industries do poorly, we do poorly," said Berne Jensen, executive of the Idaho Banking Association. He said banks also benefitted from a tax break which he called "the David Leroy bill," pushed by the former lieutenant governor.

Paskett said the banking industry gauges performance on return on assets, with 1 percent considered good.

He said the Idaho banking industry generally was healthy up to 1982-83 but the industry as a whole reported losses in 1985-86 because of writedowns to cover problem loans.

Paskett said the return on assets was 0.37 percent last year, indicating banks are climbing back to normal profitability.

"This problem (the fact banks paid no state taxes) will go away by itself. We expect in the future our tax bill will be very substantial," he said.

Drug firm pleads not guilty in death

MOSCOW (AP) — Attorneys for a mail-order pharmacy company have entered a plea of innocent on an involuntary manslaughter charge in the death of an elderly Princton, Idaho, woman.

Second District Judge John Bengtson accepted the plea for Medco Containment Services Inc. of New Jersey and set the trial for Feb. 6.

Earlier this week, the company waived a preliminary hearing on the charge that it was responsible for the death last January of Iris Hemmelman, 70. Mrs. Hemmelman died after taking the drug Coumadin, which had been supplied by Medco subsidiary National Prescription Service of Las Vegas in a bottle labeled Prednisone.

Latah County Prosecutor Craig Mosman maintained the company's mistake caused Hemmelman's death, charging that procedures showed a "reckless disregard" for human life.

CSI dorm incident carries a message

The sexual incident involving a former College of Southern Idaho basketball player and a 16-year-old girl in a college dorm suggests that college officials need, at the minimum, to tighten the access to buildings on campus.

But more importantly, it should cause us all to think about two things: one, the value system we create when we give sports an excessive role in our society and thereby turn its stars into superheroes; and two, our role as parents and our communications with our children.

As to the first, the facts of this incident suggest that the girl was not exactly an unwilling participant. Indeed, she seems to have been something of a basketball groupie, described as someone who was "hanging out" at the college gym.

The phenomenon of the adoring sports fan is not exactly unknown, either at CSI or elsewhere. Given the outlandish emphasis on sports in American society, the wonder is we don't see more of the phenomenon than we do.

To be sure, the incident did not reflect exactly well on CSI; nor was the timing very good, considering the college's efforts to pass a September bond issue for new construction. But we don't think the impact will be very great.

We should all remember that basketball players have been coming here since the days of Doc Taylor and most have been both a credit to the CSI basketball program and to the community.

People are sophisticated enough to know that these two probably were not the first to engage in sex in a college dorm and probably won't be the last.

What we all have a reasonable right to expect is that the college is maintained in a way which does not condone or promote such activity.

The school should review this carefully, relying on both what students and counselors say, and take whatever steps are needed.

It is also our guess that the reported incident resulted in at least a few gentle conversations this week in homes around the community between parents and their daughters.

Young people do not always think clearly about the consequences of their actions; this incident illustrates the point well.

It may also have resulted in some parents thinking about how they are bringing up their children, how they monitor who their children's friends are and how good a job they do in communicating with their children.

In short, both growing up and parenting involve some rocky times; a reported incident like this may help us all to get through them.

TIRED OF ACCUSATIONS AND INSINUATIONS, THE KING PICKED UP HIS MARBLES AND WENT HOME.

Are 'Temptation' critics scared of sex?

Maurice Ogden

Lost in the uproar over the showing of "The Last Temptation of Christ" is the fact that film maker Martin Scorsese, novelist Nikos Kazantzakis and their critics all have adhered to the basic dogma of Christian orthodoxy: that Jesus of Nazareth was in some unique way not shared by ordinary humans, both mortal and a god.

Even the traditional scriptural interpretation portrays Jesus as displaying genuine human frailties and feelings: anger, fear, doubt, self-pity, sorrow and so on.

But extremists have tilted the scales so drastically to the "god" side that his human qualities have virtually disappeared.

Many, in protesting Universal Pictures' decision to release the film, have said that "the sinless one" could not possibly have thought about sex with a woman, since thinking about it is as sinful as doing it.

Traditionalists like Kazantzakis, who died in 1957, disagree with that view of Jesus as devoid of "real" human characteristics. How can you say Jesus "sacrificed" his life, they ask, if he had no attachment to life, experienced no doubt or pain or terror at losing it? If he had no genuine human temptations, how can he be a meaningful model of resistance for those who are tempted?

All those questions exist in a shadow world where no acceptable evidence exists, where the "truth" of an opinion depends on the intensity with which it is held, and the self-righteousness of critics is proportional to their ignorance of the works that they condemn.

Granted, it is difficult (and perhaps hasty?) to judge a film before its release. But Kazantzakis' book has been around for 30 years; surely those so quick to protest the movie have scanned his eloquent prologue to find out what he had in mind, or the final few pages containing the scenes that have thrown them sight-unseen into such a towering snit.

While working on the book, Kazantzakis wrote that "I never felt the blood of Christ fall drop by drop into my heart with so much sweetness, so much pain...." He expressed the hope that those who read the book will "more than ever before ... love Christ."

A century ago American freethinker Robert Ingersoll commented that a lot of people who think they are very pious are really only dyspeptic.

Today I suspect he would be inclined to observe that a lot of people who think they are god-fearing are merely scared silly of sex.

Time to shift focus of taxation

In Sunday's paper, I read that CSI is seeking $7 million for some new buildings. No one has been more gratified than I that the college was started in this area, and has continued to grow and become more useful and helpful to the people here-abouts. Young and old alike have had lots of benefits from the college.

However, I would like to point out that the way money is raised to finance the college, and in addition, to finance schools and county government, is unfair, and has been unfair for a long, long time.

Property taxes on businesses and farms for this purpose are unfair, and are especially burdensome on farms since there is no way farmers can raise their prices to pay costs.

Everyone lives in a home of some kind, so property taxes on homes are fair. Renters pay their share of these taxes, too. Is it equitable for a farmer who invests his money in land to pay property taxes every year to subsidize the education of children who belong to a lawyer who gets $75 per hour, when the farmer may realize a bit of profit or may not?

A few years ago I wrote numerous letters to our legislators as well as to leaders of farm organizations and others about the inequity of property taxes on farms and businesses. People replied, saying, yes, the tax was not fair, but nothing was done.

The person who invests money in education does not pay taxes on his investment every year, even though he reaps the rewards of his investment. Anyone who uses his money to buy farm land has to pay tax on his investment every year, even though he may realize not a penny profit from his work and land.

People who invest money in stocks and bonds are not required to pay property taxes on these investment. Many, many county residents receive more income than farmers, or businessmen, yet pay much less taxes to support schools and county.

Last year an item in The Times-News mentioned a representative, Raymond Parks, of Blackfoot. To quote from the article, "after working on the idea for five years, he finally convinced the House to approve his legislation shifting the basis for local school support in Idaho from property tax to income tax. "It is fair, it is equitable, it is just," Parks told House members. "It puts the dollars where the people are."

Farmers and businessmen would not get out of paying their share of taxes, they have been paying income and sales taxes along with everyone in addition to the property taxes.

It is high time the legislature addressed this problem and changed the tax laws so everyone paid his fair share for government and schools. The people we send to the legislature should make this a priority in the upcoming session. I applaud Rep. Raymond Parks for his fair thinking and hope he gets far with his bill.

Idaho should have its lottery

Arise, citizens of Idaho who think for themselves.

I, for one, am sick and tired of hearing some ex-politician from somewhere in one of the Dakotas attempting to tell me why the lottery is such a sinful and unfair choice.

First of all, the situation in somewhere Dakota is completely different than the situation in Idaho. This state is surrounded by gaming states, most notably Nevada, and to ignore the financial impact to the state and believe people do not partake in games of chance is analogous to sticking one's head in the sand.

We are told that the financial impact to the state will be minimal. I say if the effect is minimal it is more than the state has to work with now. Show the voters how this measure will cost them money.

What we are talking about is stopping the flow of money which goes out of state already, when people cross the state line to purchase tickets.

Prove that a lottery with a minimal financial benefit as you contend, will invite organized crime to run rampant. Give us examples from the other states where this is the case - that crime was a direct side effect of a lottery.

The facts of the matter are this:

1. We live in a state which borders Nevada and at least two states which have a lottery. Nevada is the gaming capital of the world. Why shouldn't Idaho get some of this money and some of the money spent on lottery tickets by the residents who live close to Nevada, Oregon and Montana? Has anyone wondered why the results of the Oregon lottery are announced on the Boise television stations? Perhaps there may be some interest.

2. The theory that gambling in the form of a lottery (or any other form for that matter) is a regressive tax is absurd. Who is twisting one's arm to buy a ticket? The last time I visited Oregon I was not stopped at the border and forced to buy a ticket.

If the lottery is defeated in November, I suggest the following to those who are trying to save me from myself:

1. Push for repeal of the most regressive tax of all - that of eating and having to buy food.

2. Set up a road block at the Nevada-Idaho border and scrutinize personal financial statements so that the people who can least afford to be there will be turned back or face the threat of jail. We cannot think for ourselves and we must trust that aspect of our lives to an ex-politician from some where Dakota.

It's time to add a 4th R, reasoning, to schools' traditional 3

Jonathan Baron
Rex V. Brown

Jane, 30-and single, was living from hand to mouth as an actress and waitress when her father died and left her his life savings.

The money was tied up in stock, which he had held for years because of the capital-gains tax he would have had to pay if he sold it.

Jane, of course, could sell it without paying the tax, but she did not plan to do so, since the value of the stock had just gone down, and she hoped it would go back up.

A friend asked her, "If you had the money in cash instead of the stock, would you buy the stock at its current price?"

"Of course not," she replied. "I want a safe and steady income to supplement what I earn, and the stock could just as easily go down some more."

"So, if you had a choice between the stock and the cash, you'd choose the cash, right?" Jane saw that this was exactly her choice, and she sold the stock.

Jane at first exhibited a classic fallacy of decision-making called the endowment effect, an irrational tendency to favor the status quo. Yet one apt question enabled her to recognize and correct the problem.

Most Americans, however, never get that kind of help — either in school or in later life. Adolescents become involved in crime, abuse drugs, get pregnant or drop out as a result of faulty thinking. Adults make bad decisions about careers, investments, marriage, insurance and medical treatment.

Nor are public officials exempt. Listen to then-Sen. Jeremiah Denton discussing the Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway project in 1981: "To terminate a project in which $1.1 billion has been invested represents an unconscionable mishandling of taxpayers' dollars." This classic fallacy, the "sunk cost" effect, is also known as "throwing good money after bad."

The real question, of course, is whether the benefits of future spending are sufficient to justify the expense. The money already spent is, so to speak, over the dam and irrelevant to the issue.

Even the most prestigious professions are vulnerable. Researchers have found that physicians are subject to the same sorts of defects in reasoning, which often lead to widespread misdiagnoses and failures to order treatments that produce optimal results.

Such fallacies are endemic to everyday life. They waste public and private money, make people less efficient and productive and diminish national capacity to compete abroad. But there is evidence they can be corrected.

Within the past few years, a "thinking skills" movement has arisen among educators around the globe. We believe that the time has come to add a fourth "R" to the traditional three: reasoning.

If schools taught children to make up their minds intelligently, more of us might avoid the above fallacies and others to which we are notoriously prone. For example:

• Shortsightedness. We overweigh the immediate present. An adolescent might choose to have sex without contraception when the opportunity is at hand; but if asked the same question beforehand, would prefer not to take the chance. Governments — and the people who elect them — would rather have a budget deficit to pay off in the future than higher taxes now.

• Impulsiveness. We sometimes make choices with insufficient thought or no thought at all.

• Neglect of probability. Some assume that improbable events (getting pregnant, getting hooked, getting AIDS) won't happen, but, of course, they do. People also forget that choices set precedents for later choices and probabilities add up. One ride without a seatbelt is unlikely to kill you, but if it sets a precedent for thousands of rides, the chances of a serious accident sometime are substantial.

• "My-side" bias. We defend our beliefs as if we were lawyers hired by ourselves to convince us that we were right all along.

• Single-mindedness. We sometimes make decisions as though they had only a single goal, such as getting out of a bad marriage, while ignoring other relevant goals, such as raising our children well.

A major stimulus for our and others' efforts has been the emergence, over the last 20 years or so, of "personalized decision analysis" as an effective and widely used tool for professional decision-makers.

At the core of PDA is a sophisticated theory of rational choice. This theory can serve as a kind of standard that we should try to approximate in our everyday lives. PDA basically poses the questions: What do I want? What can I do? What might happen?

It quantifies the resulting judgments of uncertainty and subjective value as probabilities and utilities, respectively. The best choice is the one with the highest expected utility, as calculated by multiplying the probability of each outcome times its utility, and then adding the products. That is, the value of an outcome is balanced against its likelihood — if either is too low, the option is rejected.

We believe that even ordinary decisions, in the personal, professional and civic lives of ordinary people, can be improved by teaching the principles of good decision-making. Instruction beginning in adolescence or before can prevent the development of poor reasoning habits and, with enough practice, instill better habits.

NRA letter weakens congressional support

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the National Rifle Association's staunchest congressional supporters bitterly criticized the group Thursday after the organization attacked his support for a seven-day waiting period in handgun purchases.

Rep. F. James Sensenbrenner Jr. of Wisconsin, a conservative Republican on the House Judiciary Committee, said a critical NRA letter sent to his constituents was "downright erroneous, false and plays on hysteria in an attempt to get me to change my vote."

Sensenbrenner was strongly backed by Rep. Dan Lungren, R-Calif., a Judiciary Committee member who has backed past NRA positions; and Rep. Herbert H. Bateman, R-Va., who considers himself a strong supporter of the right to own guns.

Lungren called the attack on Sensenbronner "a pretty desperate letter against one of their supporters."

Bateman, whose constituents received an NRA letter against the waiting period that did not attack him personally, said: "I am shocked and disappointed at the excessive language and tactics used by the NRA in the letter to my constituents."

This is not the first time in recent months that longtime supporters of the NRA were sharply critical of the organization.

In May, Sen. J. James Exon, D-Neb., criticized the NRA for attacking him in his state when he and the pro-gun group differed over a version of legislation to ban undetectable plastic guns.

"I think that influence has deteriorated some," Exon said then.

Banks boost prime into double digits

NEW YORK (AP) — Major U.S. banks boosted the prime lending rate back into the double digits Thursday for the first time in three years, reflecting the Federal Reserve's drive to push all interest rates higher to stave off inflation.

The half-percentage point hike in the prime to 10 percent — pushed the lending rate to its highest level since the spring of 1985. It was the third increase in the rate so far this year and the second in a month.

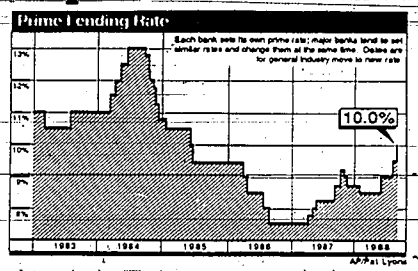
Because the prime is used to calculate a wide range of fixed- and adjustable-rate loans, the increase is likely to pinch the pocketbooks of consumers who already have seen borrowing costs rise in recent months.

"It will slow the economy, but it won't stop it in its tracks," explained Robert A. Brusca, chief financial economist for the investment firm Nikko Securities Co. International. "That's a healthy thing right now.

"You try to get your flu shot before you get the flu. ... That's preventative medicine. That's what the Fed is doing."

Economists say the rise in the prime will affect small-to medium-sized businesses and consumers more than large corporations, which borrow more cheaply in the open market by issuing commercial paper, or short-term unsecured IOUs.

Home equity lines of credit are usually pegged to the banks' prime rate, while many home mortgages are tied to interest rates paid on Treasury bills.



The financial markets took Thursday's news in stride after weathering the storm that followed the Fed's increase in a key lending rate earlier in the week.

On Wall Street, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed up 5.16 to 2,039.30. Bond prices, which generally decline in the face of rising interest rates, ended mixed.

The dollar lost ground against all key foreign currencies, although the prime rate hike was credited by some European traders for preventing a free fall.

Chase Manhattan Bank was the first to announce the prime hike, Thursday, with other major banks across the country quickly following.

The increase brings the rate to its highest level since June 18, 1985, when it was lowered to 9.5 percent from 10 percent.

Arizona sues Mecham for fund

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The state of Arizona filed suit Thursday against former Gov. Evan Mecham, seeking to force him to relinquish the $80,000 protocol fund that was a centerpiece of his impeachment conviction.

The lawsuit, filed in Maricopa County Superior Court, asks that Mecham be forced to give the state all the money remaining in the account as of April 5, the day after he was removed from office by the Arizona Senate.

Mecham has said that there is about $80,000 in the fund, which he maintains is private money.

On Wednesday, he rejected a state offer that would have allowed him to return the money.

Navy relieves skipper for not helping

WASHINGTON (AP) — The skipper of the USS Dubuque will be relieved from command this weekend pending an investigation of charges the warship failed to adequately assist a boatload of Vietnamese refugees who later reportedly resorted to cannibalism to survive, officials said Thursday.

Capt. Alexander G. Balian, 48, "has been assigned temporarily to the (Philippines-based) Commander, Naval Surface Group, Western Pacific."

The Navy said Balian would be relieved Saturday by Capt. David Wetherell.

Air conditioning ran a cool $4.3 billion in July

WASHINGTON (AP) — July's hot weather cost Americans more than a quarter-billion dollars more than normal in keeping cool, the government reported Thursday.

The national air conditioning bill for July was $4.3 billion, some $255 million more than would have been expected in normal weather, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration reported.

That averaged out to a July air conditioning bill of $104 for the typical home, $6 more than normal.

Costs varied with the weather from region to region, with only the west south central states spending less on cooling than in a typical July.

Here is a regional rundown of the estimated cost, per household, of air conditioning in July.

—West South Central, $131, $4 less than normal. Includes Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

—East South Central, $119, $4 more than normal. Includes Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama.

—South Atlantic, $112, $5 more than normal. Includes Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia, West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

—West North Central, $112, $8 more than normal. Includes North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas and Missouri.

—East North Central, $103, $16 more than normal. Includes Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio.

—Middle Atlantic, $94, $14 more than normal. Includes New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

—Mountain, $89, $4 more than normal. Includes Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Nevada, Colorado, Utah, Arizona and New Mexico.

—New England, $56, $4 more than normal. Includes Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

—Pacific, $53, $1 more than normal. Includes Washington, Oregon and California.

Fewer quakes rock earth

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Earth shook a little less in the first half of this year.

The U.S. Geological Survey reported Thursday that there were 26 significant earthquakes in the first six months of the year, three fewer than in the same period a year ago.

And only 12 deaths have been attributed to quakes around the world in the first half of the year.

If that rate continued, an annual total of 24 deaths would be the lowest ever recorded, the survey said. The current low record is 77 deaths in 1984. The high was 600,000 in 1976.

Of the 26 significant quakes this year only two affected the United States. One was the Feb. 11 event that qualified as significant because of the death, although it measured only 4.8 on the Richter scale of ground motion.

The second U.S. quake qualified easily, scoring a 7.6. It occurred March 6 in the Gulf of Alaska, shaking parts of Alaska and Canada and generating a small tsunami, or sea wave.

That was, in fact, the strongest quake so far this year. The world has now gone more than 60 months without a "great" temblor, measuring 8.0 or more.

Sleeping on job at nuclear plant leads to $1.25 million fine

WASHINGTON (AP) — The operator of Pennsylvania's Peach Bottom nuclear power plant was hit Thursday with a $1.25 million fine, largest in Nuclear Regulatory Commission history, because 33 reactor workers slept or were negligent on the job.

The NRC also announced fines ranging from $500 to $1,000 against the 33 present and former reactor operators — the first such civil penalties ever proposed for individual operators.

It said the 33 fines "involved sleeping and/or other acts of inattention to duty" at Philadelphia Electric Co.'s dormant Peach Bottom nuclear power plant on the Susquehanna River in Delta, Pa.

The NRC called the levies "proposed fines," explaining that both Philadelphia Electric and the operators have 30 days to either admit or deny the alleged violations. If they admit the allegations, they still can seek to have the fines reduced or withdrawn.

The $1.25 million fine is the largest since Congress gave the NRC authority to issue civil penalties in 1969. The previous high was a $900,000 fine against Toledo Edison Co. for an incident in which the Davis-Besse nuclear plant in Ohio had a temporary loss of cooling water.

Peach Bottom, which sits near the Pennsylvania-Maryland border and is capable of producing one million kilowatts of electric power, was ordered shut down by the NRC on March 31, 1987, because it posed "an immediate threat to the public health and safety."

Sleeping on the job was so common at the plant that on one occasion a shift superintendent and three of the four reactor operators all dozed at once, according to testimony by an NRC official at a commission hearing in April 1987.

Philadelphia Electric officials said at a news conference in Holtwood, Pa., that they had not decided whether to appeal the record fine.

"We have a period of time to evaluate and make that decision. We have not made it yet. We intend to review it very carefully before we make that decision," company Chairman Joseph F. Paquette Jr. said.

James Taylor, the NRC's deputy executive director for regional operations, said in a letter to Philadelphia Electric that the commission recognized that the utility had made "extensive personnel changes" and had ordered reactor operators retrained.

But Taylor said the fines were necessary to emphasize to the company and others "the significance of the problem, and to ensure that corrective actions are long lasting."

In addition to the fines, the commission barred the utility from placing "in any operational position" three officials who were top-level managers at the plant in 1987.

In wake of thousands of dead seals, scientists call for ban

LONDON (AP) — Scientists at a conference organized by the environmental group Greenpeace urged northern European countries Thursday to stop polluting the North and Baltic seas until they can solve the mysterious deaths of thousands of seals.

Scientists said it was unclear whether pollution was playing a role in the deaths, and they called for international research.

Greenpeace said it will take direct, non-violent action in all countries bordering the North and Baltic seas, including blocking pipelines that discharge toxic chemicals.

"The time for words is gone," said Andy Booth, Greenpeace International's North Sea coordinator.

"Time is running out for these seals," he said at a news conference following the meeting of scientists from Britain, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, West Germany and the Netherlands.

Booth said Greenpeace will send the meeting's conclusions to the leaders of all governments bordering the North and Baltic seas and will urge them to introduce urgent measures to ease pollution.

"Greenpeace will be peacefully trying to prevent the flow of certain persistent man-made chemicals which we regard as too dangerous to be discharged into the marine environment," he added. Greenpeace did not reveal when or where it would try to block pipelines.

Conference chairman Minnie Courtney said about 7,000 harbor seals have died in the North and Baltic Seas since April, out of a population of 15,000 to 16,000 seals.

In some areas up to half the harbor seals have died and there are indications other seal species may become infected, she said.

Two viruses have been isolated among the dead seals, said Ms. Courtney, senior lecturer in biology at the University of London's Queen Mary College, which co-sponsored the conference.

She added, however, that "we don't understand why the disease should have spread so quickly through the seals and we don't understand why they are reacting to it so badly."

"There is no doubt that the Baltic and the North seas are very polluted areas. They're some of the most polluted marine waters in the world."

Every year an estimateed 260,000 tons of liquid industrial waste, 77 million tons of dredged materials and 5 million tons of sewage sludge are discharged into the North Sea.

An international research project "to study the effect of environmental factors, including pollutants, on the immune system of seals should be started immediately," Ms. Courtney said.

"In the interim, every effort should be made to reduce the leakage of PCBs (polychlorinated biphenyls) into the environment ... Immediate, effective, precautionary measures should be taken to stop the discharge of other persistent pollutants."

The viruses leave the seals suffering from a variety of symptoms, including lethargy, diarrhea, skin lesions and spontaneous abortions.

USSR aide: Activist's wish ignored

MOSCOW (AP) — An expelled Armenian activist's requests to return to the Soviet Union are not being taken seriously by the government, a legal official said Thursday.

Paruyr Ayrikyan was stripped of his Soviet citizenship and expelled from the country to Soviet-allied Ethiopia on July 21.

The 39-year-old Armenian activist was arrested in March for his part in spreading word to Western journalists about the Armenian people's campaign to have a region of neighboring Azerbaijan annexed to their republic.

Pavel A. Laptiev, an aide with the Soviet State Prosecutor-General's office, appeared at a Foreign Ministry briefing to discuss the handling of Ayrikyan's case.

Laptiev contended Ayrikyan had asked during his imprisonment to be allowed to emigrate to the United States.

Ayrikyan, however, told reporters in Paris last week that after his arrest, Soviet authorities gave him the choice of returning to prison or going to the United States. He said he was expelled because Soviet officials feared putting him on trial would lead to more inter-ethnic hostility.

The U.S. government declined to issue Ayrikyan an immigration visa on the grounds that he was leaving the Soviet Union against his will.

In news conferences in Paris, Rome and Bonn, West Germany, Ayrikyan has said he would like to return to Armenia. He said he has applied to the Soviet Embassy in Paris for permission to do so.

Soviet officials indicate the appeal will be rejected.

Trolleys traded

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Greece has signed a $4.1 million barter deal for 50 Soviet-built trolley buses to update its aging electric-powered fleet, the Transport Ministry said Thursday.

According to an agreement signed Wednesday with the Soviet firm Avtoexport, the first 15 trolleys will be delivered in January 1989 and the remaining 35 by June, a ministry announcement said.

Each trolley costs $83,050 but most will be paid for in exports of Greek oranges and other farm products, said a spokesman for H.PAP, the state-owned Athens trolley-bus company.

Israel holds army exercises based on end to war in gulf

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israel must start readying for war now that the Iran-Iraq conflict is ending, a general warned Thursday, and the chief of staff disclosed Israeli troops already held exercises in preparation for the Persian Gulf cease-fire.

Lt. Gen. Dan Shomron, the chief of staff, said his troops "completed a maneuver based on the presumption that the war had ended and (Iraqi) forces are free. We also took Syria into account."

"I will reveal something interesting," Shomron said on Israel Television. He then said Israel held the maneuvers two weeks before Iran's July 18 announcement that it was ready to accept a cease-fire.

"This was because of an assessment of the situation," Shomron said Wednesday night. "We knew this war was winding down."

The U.N.-mediated cease-fire, announced Monday, will take effect Aug. 20.

Israel has monitored the war carefully, believing the outcome had an important bearing on Israel's security and the future of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

While military and intelligence officers said Israel was safer while Iran and Iraq were fighting each another, they also worried about Israel becoming an eventual target for built-up Iraqi forces that were better trained as a result of the war.

Iraq has sent ground forces to fight against Israel in three of the five wars the Jewish state has fought since its 1948 founding.

While it will take Iraq some time to recover from its losses after the 8-year-old conflict, "in the longer run, this will mean a bigger danger for Israel," reserve duty Brig. Gen. Aharon Levran, a former intelligence officer, told foreign reporters at a government-sponsored briefing.

"The gulf war appears to be ending, and I don't add thank God. Israel will have to think about it and start preparing," said Levran, an analyst at Tel Aviv University's Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies.

Levran said any future war between Israel and Syria "will be much more costly, more bloody, than it has been in the past" because Damascus had significantly improved the quantity and quality of its military equipment.

He noted Syria recently had developed chemical warheads for its surface-to-surface missiles.

Also, Syria had doubled its number of ground forces from five to 10 divisions and increased the number of tanks from 1,700 to 4,000 since the 1973 Yom Kippur War, he said.

Damascus also has obtained advanced weaponry from the Soviet Union and more than doubled the number of attack aircraft in its arsenal, Levran said. He declined to give a figure.

On the other hand, he said Syria's military expenditures had forced it to cut back on the size and training of its ground forces. Damascus spends 37 percent to 50 percent of its budget on defense, while Israel spends slightly more than 10 percent, he said.

"Syria's self-confidence has been augmented dramatically because of its huge military build-up," Levran said, but added that he doubted Syria would plan to launch a war against Israel on its own.

At the same time, he said, Israel and Syria share "lots of friction points ... At any time, something could explode and what I call a 'circumstantial war' could occur."

Burma unrest shows desire for change, lack of direction

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Those who follow the rapidly moving events are uncertain of the outcome in Burma, where unarmed citizens are angry enough to confront rifles and the government is willing to shoot them down.

Diplomats and other observers sketch a variety of finales to the drama that began with President Sein Lwin's accession to power late last month and has progressed through increasing levels of popular protest and violence.

Security forces initially were restrained and disciplined, but soldiers opened fire Tuesday on thousands of demonstrators in the streets of Rangoon. Official reports say protest has spread to virtually every town and city in the the Southeast Asian nation of 38 million people.

High school students in their mid-teens were the vanguard but witnesses say Buddhist monks, workers and ordinary townspeople have joined the mass denunciation of 26 years of authoritarian rule and economic deprivation.

These are some of the results foreseen by diplomats in Rangoon and Bangkok:

— Continued ruthless suppression of all protest by Sein Lwin and a loyal army until all opponents are rooted out or cowed into the passivity that characterized the political scene until recent events.

— The ouster of Sein Lwin by former strongman Ne Win, who overthrew the democracy in 1962. He formally retired from political life last month, but some believe he still pulls the strings.

— An intensified and bloody uprising that would compel the army, Burma's most powerful institution, to overthrow the government and install a more moderate leadership.

Unlike the Philippines or South Korea, where mass popular protest achieved greater political freedom, Burma has no prominent personalities advocating democracy who could lead the growing but diffuse opposition.

Aung Gyi, the most outspoken critic of the system, is 70 and retired from politics after falling out with Ne Win in the early 1960s. Sein Lwin has jailed the former army officer, a relative liberal.

Protesters seem to illustrate this dearth of political alternatives by resurrecting old symbols and the images of leaders long dead.

Rangoon marchers carry portraits of Aung San, the dashing fighter for Burmese independence who was assassinated in 1947, and wave the peacock flag of days when Burma struggled against its British colonial masters.

Like the Philippines under Ferdinand E. Marcos, Burma has a strong military in which increasing disaffection is reported. Some diplomats speculate that elements of the army, as in the "people power" revolution that ousted Marcos, could provide the muscle to bring down Sein Lwin, a former general.

Ne Win assiduously built, or bought, the loyalty of a generation and more of army officers. Although his proclaimed ideology has been a mix of socialist economics, Buddhism and isolationism, political control has rested with the military and the army-dominated government political party.

End to Iran-Iraq war could cause trouble for rebels

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — The dawn of peace in the 8-year-old Iran-Iraq war is likely to be a sunset for the hopes of rebels in each country, diplomats say.

The cease-fire announced Monday may close crucial border sanctuaries used by the Kurdish rebels fighting Iraq and the leftist peoples' Mujahedeen seeking to topple Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

That can only be bad news for Kurdish rebel leader Jalal Talabani, who declared in an April interview with Middle East magazine: "We can no longer live with (Iraqi President) Saddam Hussein in the same country ... now it's either him or us."

The cease-fire will take effect Aug. 20, and 350 U.N. observers are to be in place along the 730-mile border within a week. That gives both countries a chance to concentrate on eliminating their rebels.

"I don't think the Iraqis are going to be anything other than merciless" toward the Kurdish rebels, said a Western diplomat in Baghdad.

Talabani's Patriotic Union of Kurdistan, fighting for a Kurdish republic, scored a series of military successes against Iraq late last year in alliance with Iranian forces.

But their fortunes faded as Iran's army appeared to crumble this year, and diplomats say Iraq largely has squashed the Kurdish forces.

Witnesses said Iraq has tried to rob the rebels of base areas by bulldozing dozens of villages in mountainous northern Iraq, where about 2.5 million Kurds live.

"It's just one destroyed village after another," said a diplomat who has toured the area.

Kurds from different villages have been moved to newly built towns of gray concrete houses — breaking the tight social solidarity of village life that rebels often used for protection.

"Kurds will continue to be Kurds ... but the village way of life is a thing of the past," said the Western diplomat, who spoke on condition of not being identified further.

A 1975 Iraq-Iran treaty closed the border to rebels in each country, helping quell Kurdish dissidence at that time. But Iran's later support of Kurdish guerrilla action was one of the fuses that led to full explosion of the war in September 1980.

Iraq in the past also supported Kurdish dissidents inside Iran, but its main aid during the war went to the Mujahedeen Khalq, which moved to Iraq after its leaders were expelled from France in 1986.

The Mujahedeen-led People's Liberation Army of Iran made a series of raids into Iranian territory this year. The latest drove 60 miles into Iran and briefly captured two cities.

Military observers said there is evidence that Iraqi forces aided the Iranian rebel operations, an allegation Iraq and the rebels denied.

Angola apologizes for attack on jet

GABORONE, Botswana (AP) — Angola has apologized for the attack by one of its warplanes on a private jet carrying Botswana's president, a Cabinet minister said Thursday.

Ponatshego Kedikilwe, minister for presidential affairs, said Angola sent a note to Botswana saying the plane carrying President Quett Masire had been mistaken for an enemy aircraft.

One of two jet engines on Masire's 10-seater plane was shot off Sunday as it flew 38,000 feet over Angola on the way from Gaborone to a meeting in the Angolan capital, Luanda. The pilot made an emergency landing at the town of Kuito in central Bie province.

Masire and one of his aides were slightly injured when fragments from the right engine penetrated the cabin.

Kedikilwe, who was aboard the plane, said cordial relations between Angola and Botswana would not be affected by the incident.

Angola said the plane was flying in a corridor that has been closed because of the war being waged by Angola and its Cuban allies against South African- and U.S.-backed rebels.

Republic has AIDS stamps

SAN MARINO (AP) — This tiny republic is issuing four postage stamps dedicated to the fight against AIDS, the government said Thursday.

The stamps, due to come out in the next few days, were prepared in conjunction with an international congress on AIDS in San Marino in October.

"The set carries a warning but at the same time hope," a government statement said.

The stamps cost about 18 cents to 71 cents each.

San Marino, an enclave in Italy's Apennine mountains, claims to be the world's oldest republic, founded in 301. Tourism and its postage stamps and coins are its chief sources of income.

Bangladesh seizes ship

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Bangladesh has seized a Honduran merchant ship carrying an estimated $1.2 million in contraband, a senior government official said Thursday.

The Shipping Ministry official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a Bangladesh navy frigate seized the ship, Fung Lee No. 77, on Saturday in territorial waters near St. Martin Island in the Bay of Bengal.

The frigate's crew fired several warning shots before intercepting the Honduran vessel, he said. The 13-member crew has been detained.

The ship was carrying various contraband items, including electronic goods, cigarettes and alcohol, the government official said. He estimated the cargo's value at $1.2 million.

County considers improvements to 911 system

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - County commissioners are considering an enhanced 911 system that could speed up ambulance response time enough to save lives.

Dave Silbernagel, director of Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's ambulance service, said emergency medical technicians now get information through the 911 system third hand.

The new system would eliminate at least one of the steps, he said at a meeting of county and city officials Thursday in the county building.

The enhanced 911 system, which would entail a single dispatch command post for all county emergency calls, was made feasible by a bill passed by the Legislature this year, Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said.

The county's 22,000 telephone customers would be billed up to $1 more a month to pay for the service.

"Our question is - Is it feasible?" Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said.

He said a committee is being formed with a hospital worker and representatives from each city in the county to consider the issues and make a recommendation of whether to put it before voters on the November ballot.

Hempleman said if the issue is not placed on the ballot this year, it cannot be brought up again until the next general election in two years.

"I strongly feel we need to reevaluate our 911 program," Silbernagel said.

He said residents of outlying communities call to the local dispatcher, who then calls the hospital dispatcher, who in turn relays the information to the EMTS.

"In the process vital information is lost," Silbernagel said. "By eliminating one dispatcher you would be able to cut down on response time."

Hempleman said under the enhanced 911 system, callers would phone 911 from wherever they are in the county, a central dispatcher would answer and call directly to the ambulance service.

The caller could stay on the line and relay patient information to the EMT while enroute, giving the ambulance staff time to decide what equipment to bring in, instruct the caller about what preparatory care he could give and get time-saving directions about where to go.

Silbernagel said callers in rural areas sometime give sketchy directions - such as turn right at the white barn, go two miles - and having to stop and call back for information would waste time.

Hempleman said dispatchers would have to be extensively trained in taking medical information.

The first information a dispatcher must get is the caller's phone number and address so that if he passes out the dispatcher can still help. From that point there are a few important questions that must be asked depending on the situation, Silbernagel said.

Hempleman said the dispatch station would be in a separate building than the Twin Falls sheriff's or police stations. Four dispatchers would be needed 24 hours a day to service the entire county.

He said the surcharge on phone bills would pay for line, building and equipment expenses, but law enforcement de-

Leroy stumps for Blass, Bush

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

BUHL - Former Lt. Gov. David Leroy reminded fellow Republicans Thursday of a basic party tenet - "the government closest to the people is the best for the people."

He stumped for about 75 people barbecuing at Clear Lake Country Club to support Twin Falls County commission candidate Norma Blass. The crowd-packed with a dozen lawmakers or candidates listened as she pledged continued "progressive" leadership.

"We must stay progressive in our county, growing the way it is, so we keep the issues of the county first," Blass said. "I want to represent the county of Twin Falls, but I want to represent especially the west end."

Toward that end, Leroy stressed the importance of linking presidential election-year politics to the county level, where the most significant power is held.

"One of the things that comes across this election year is that apathy is all-too abounding," Leroy said. Indeed, the May primaries in which Blass fended off a GOP rival featured the worst turn-out in history.

The former attorney general leaned casually, resting one hand in a hip pocket while the other stretched away from the rolled-up sleeves of his open-collar shirt, punctuating his argument for less federal government.

With less than 90 days to the election, Leroy said the choice is clear at the national level between Republican Vice President George Bush and Democratic Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis. He said Dukakis represented gun control, federal funding for abortions and tax-and-spend liberalism.

He said Bush reflects the same philosophy as the county's founding fathers. "The government is a collection of states in this country," LeRoy said.

Following from that emphasis on local control is

Symms says: Keep the canal

By BART JANSEN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Sen. Steve Symms advocated Thursday rescinding the Panama Canal Treaty, saying, "The chickens are already coming home to roost."

The Caldwell Republican, in the Senate, and Rep. Phil Crane, R-Ill., in the House, each offered measures Wednesday to rescind the treaty. They oppose transferring control of the Panama Canal to that Central American country run by recently ostracized dictator Gen. Manuel Noriega.

"I think we're serious about it," Symms said. "I'm not sure the liberal Democrats, who gave it away in the first place, are serious."

Through narrow Senate ratification in 1978, control of the canal built by the United States will be turned over to Panama in the year 2000.

But Symms argues the treaty is invalid because "it wasn't signed by anybody but a military dictator."

During a teleconference with Idaho journalists, Symms also hesitated to offer reparations for the U.S. Navy destruction of an Iranian airliner, killing 290 passengers aboard.

Despite human error blamed for U.S. Navy crewmen downing the airliner in the Persian Gulf, Symms said it is still "premature" to discuss reparations to families of the victims.

Symms said the United States should pay reparations if found "totally culpable." But he added, "I think it is premature to say that. I personally do not believe that at the current time."

He said the motivations of Iranians must be further examined for not responding to a dozen U.S. warnings before crewmen misinterpreted radar information and shot down the plane July 3. Symms had earlier questioned whether the plane was a kami-kaze flight martyring the passengers.

"The question that we have to answer is the motivation of the people in the airliner when interrogated by the Navy official in the Persian Gulf," Symms said. "Did they want to have an incident (embarassing the United States and ruining the national holiday on July the 4th?"

His comments came the day after President Ronald Reagan signed into law $20,000 reparation payments for each Japanese-American interned illegally during World War II - 43 years after the fact.

Three Island park plans re-enactment of crossing

GLENNS FERRY - A large crowd is expected Saturday at Three Island Crossing State Park here for the third re-enactment of the Oregon Trail pioneers crossing the Snake River.

A number of events and activities are also scheduled.

I think we're going to have a big turnout," wagon master Bud Allen said. "Everywhere I've been this summer there's been a big interest."

Allen will take an authentic replica of a covered wagon across the river in what might be the first crossing of such a wagon since the 1860s, when thousands made the trip on their way to Oregon.

He's been practicing through sections of the river but is saving the entire crossing for Saturday at 11 a.m.

The day's events begin much earlier with a sourdough breakfast at the park pavillion from 7-10 a.m. Welcoming ceremonies will begin at mid-morning.

By 10 a.m. local and regional craftsworkers will open displays in a Pioneer Skills Fair that will include blacksmithing, basketweaving, black-powder musketry, quilt-making, flint-knapping and antiques of the period.

The Shoshone-Bannock Indian tribe will exhibit tepees and Indian cultural items. Their mountainmen counterparts, in authentic dress, will also be on hand.

Kimberly budget has preliminary approval

By LYNDA BOODY
Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY - The City Council here Tuesday gave tentative approval to a 1988-89 budget that is up slightly over the current budget.

The budget includes a 6 percent pay raise for all city employees, excluding the mayor and council members, no tax increase for city residents and money for a new fire truck.

Much of the discussion at Tuesday's meeting centered on continuing the salary of the building inspector and raising the retainer fee of the city attorney. Both salaries are included in the new budget, which won't be official until the council adopts it at a special Aug. 30 meeting.

The public can comment on the proposed budget at 8 p.m., Aug. 30, at City Hall.

Kimberly has $871,964 budgeted for operating the city from Oct. 1, this year, to Sept. 30, 1989. This compares with $844,256 for the current year.

The $27,708 difference is due to a variety of small increases, including salary increases, money for a new fire truck and reserve funds for work on the city's sewer system.

The fire department's budget is $25,140, compared with the current year's $11,500, to help lease a new fire truck to replace the old city truck, made in 1955.

It also includes 6 percent pay raises for all city employees. The council was able to grant the pay raise without raising taxes because some city expenses have

3 sisters play a part in handling robbery suspect; victim also a relative

TWIN FALLS - They should a never messed with the Shope sisters.

Richard Graham, the man accused of being a smiling bandit, and his traveling companion with five names - none confirmed - rambled into a "Family Affair" Tuesday, but instead of meeting Buffy, Jody and Mr. French, they met Sissy - three different times.

Graham, charged with five crimes, allegedly burglarized a home southwest of Twin Falls Tuesday afternoon. According to reports, he then smiled and waved at police while pulling them through a seven-mile car chase.

Unbeknownst to Graham, however, revenge was also on his tail. No sooner was he stopped than was he made to run a gauntlet of Twin Falls sisters, all related to the burglary victim.

One sister, Donna (Shope) Killinger, helped tow Graham's Ford Fairmont to the Idaho State Police's impound yard. She and her husband, Carter, operate the Highway 30 Garage.

The sheriff's office hands out towing jobs on a rotating basis, relegating Donna's involvement to pure chance.

A second sister, Judy (Shope) Wilcox, helped inventory stolen items found in Graham's car as a deputy clerk with the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office. In the process, she started to recognize several of the items being processed.

A third sister, Nancy (Shope) Weeks, helped keep watch over Graham's companion as a detention officer with the sheriff's office.

Larry Wilcox, owner of the burglarized house, is Wilcox's son and Weeks' and Killingers' nephew. He and his fiance, Dione Nogler, had recently bought the house and had been moving things into it in anticipation of their future marriage.

But Graham and his companion, both charged with second-degree burglary, allegedly took the afternoon to start moving some of those things back out.

Grahlm's companion, who was arraigned under the name Patricia Graham, has provided authorities with about five different names. Twin Falls County Sheriff Jim Munn said none have been verified.

As for the familial chain which eventually handcuffed Graham, Donna called it "amazing," Judy called it "shocking," Nancy called it "kind of bizarre."

"And do you want to know something even more bizarre?" asked Nancy. "I have a son-in-law who just a week ago went to work for Minidoka County. If he would have still been here, he would have been involved in this, too."

Her son-in-law, Daniel Soto, had been a shift supervisor at the Twin Falls County Jail, where Graham is being held on $51,500 bond.

As for the familial chain which eventually handcuffed Graham, Donna called it "amazing." Judy called it "shocking." Nancy called it "kind of bizarre."

"And do you want to know something even more bizarre?" asked Nancy. "I have a son-in-law who just a week ago went to work for Minidoka County. If he would have still been here, he would have been involved in this, too."

Her son-in-law, Daniel Soto, had been a shift supervisor at the Twin Falls County Jail, where Graham is being held on $51,500 bond.

added significance to county elections.

Leroy said every day a person is five times more likely to use a county roadway as federal; 15 times more likely to deal with local law enforcement as federal; 50 times more likely to reach out for county assistance in some form and 5,000 times more likely to have a phone call returned from Norma Blass as President Ronald Reagan.

"I hope you know which is the most important candidate here tonight," Leroy said.

Crossing

ers on horseback, pack strings and the covered wagon. This is the first year that a wagon has been used in the crossing because of the difficulty in past years locating equipment, teams and drivers experienced enough and willing to make the crossing.

"It's hard to realize how powerful the water is, especially in the channel from the last island," Allen said. "It's hard for a horse alone to keep it's footing without the pull on a wagon."

Spectators who saw horses and riders tumble during the 1986 crossing, when one horse was lost, will appreciate the added risk.

Juanita Steen will lead a riderless horse in memory of the late Senator J. Wilson Steen, who originated the crossing re-enactment for the 1986 Glenns Ferry Centennial.

Immediately following the crossing, a parade of pioneer wagons will travel through the park and circle on the west side of the pavillion, where a barbecue is set for 1:3 p.m. and a bonfire for evening.

Throughout the day state park staff will give talks on the history of the Oregon Trail and others will continue with demonstrations at the Pioneer Skills Fair.

Entertainment will conclude the Old Time Fiddlers, "Life on the Oregon Trail" (a play), entertainment by Chuck and the Good Times Band and the Vigilantes band, square dancing, selections from "Mr. Music" Lee Savell's group, games for kids, fur songs from Dorothy's Merry Melodies, kids' songs from the Talent Sprouts and pioneer music from area churches. Wagons Ho will present a pioneer play, and local law enforcement officers will entertain with a favorite melodrama, "Black Bart's Gang."

General Chairman Jim Juker noted that, as in pioneer times, "the plan may be adjusted under changing circumstances, but our only difficulty is that there may be too many things going on at once for people to see every one, this has grown so much."

Police identify victims of pileup

By The Times-News and The Associated Press

BURLEY - Idaho State Police on Thursday identified the people killed or injured in Wednesday's eight-vehicle pileup. The drivers and passengers came from seven different states, none Idaho.

David Buttars, 37, of Cornish, Utah, was killed when his trailer load of pipe slid forward and crushed him, police said. William Grant, 52, of Lincoln, Neb., was also killed in the chain-reaction crash, which occurred amid a severe dust storm about 30 miles east of Burley on U.S. Interstate 84.

Twelve people were injured, including Grant's wife and son.

Donna Grant, 48, was flown by helicopter to the Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center in Idaho Falls. She underwent surgery for a skull fracture and was listed in serious condition Thursday.

Paul Grant, 17, was flown to Bannock Regional Medical Center in Pocatello and was listed in fair condition Thursday.

All six members of a Texas family were injured in the accident, though only one seriously.

Matthew Kohlschnidt, 2, was flown to Bannock Regional, where he was listed in stable condition; Mark Kohlschnidt, 31, his wife Brenda, 30, and their three other children were all treated and released at Cassia Memorial Hospital in Burley.

Jessie Godfrey, 74, of Prescott, Ariz., was listed in good condition at Cassia Memorial. Her husband, Willard, 75, was treated and released at the same hospital.

Nancy King, of Alabama, and Martin Watts, a passenger in the semi-truck she was driving, were also treated and released at Cassia Memorial.

Five semi-trucks, two passenger vans and a car were entangled in the pileup, which closed westbound traffic on I-84 for more than seven hours. Drivers who were not injured were: Bill Weeks, 56, of Knotsville, Tenn., Raymond Daugherty, 45, of San Antonio, Texas, and Ephrin Reed, 39, of Beaverton, Ore.

The interstate's westbound lanes were closed until 10:10 p.m., an Idaho Transportation Department spokesman said. Traffic was rerouted to Idaho 81, where drivers had to travel 10 miles to the north and back onto I-84.

The area is posted with warnings that wind can cause severe dust storms in the region. Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal said more land near the freeway has been set aside under a U.S. Department of Agriculture program and dust storms have been more common in the last five years.

declined this year, City Clerk Edythe Widmer said.

Mayor Jesse Posey will continue to earn $150 a month and council members will earn $100.

The budget also includes a $62,706 sewer budget, up $18,300 from the current year. The city is trying to build up a reserve in this fund for anticipated work on the city's sewer lines, Widmer said.

The salaries of Building Inspector Lee Taylor and City Attorney William Hollifield were discussed at Tuesday's meeting as council members considered the new budget.

Councilman Tom Lewis asked Lee Taylor, the building inspector, to justify his position."

Taylor said state law requires it. He also said he has made money for the county. "I've saved the county money and made them a little bit," Taylor said.

Widmer showed the council that Taylor has been paid $19,000 over the past six years. Building permits have grossed $22,389 during that time, thereby earning the city $2,066.

"Lee is like an insurance policy," Widmer said. "You don't always need it, but when you do, it's nice to have it." She said Taylor has always been available to answer her questions.

Taylor, responding to a question, said he would not consider a cut in salary, even though the number of permits has declined, because they eventually will bounce back. Taylor told the council he has not asked for an increase in salary during the times that he was issuing many permits.

In other salary matters, City Attorney Hollifield asked for a $250 per month raise. He currently is on a $725 retainer for the city.

Hollifield presented the council with itemized bills to compare his city salary with what the city would have payed if he had charged his normal $75 per hour fee. At that rate the bill for legal services during June would have been $1,900.

Councilman Jack Wright said Hollifield is accepting 50 to 75 percent of his normal fee under the current system.

Wright made a motion to approve the $13,703 budgeted for legal fees, which could include the increase for Hollifield. Lewis asked to amend the motion putting a hold on the increase until a "proper" decision could be made, but that died for failure of a second.

The council approved the $13,703 amount budgeted for legal services but reserved the approval of Hollifield's request until a later date.

In other action, the council approved paying the full fee for recent road work, despite concerns by city officials over the work.

Craig Hanson of Gordon Paving attended the meeting to answer questions regarding completion of the street work.

Major work was completed one day after the date specified in the contract. Councilman George Nauman and City Works Chief Ken Story said they were dissatisfied with the work. Story said sweeping and cleaning is required on two streets.

Story and Nauman suggested that the company should be charged $100 a day in damages for unsatisfactory performance. Story questioned how many days should be charged sonce the contract was still not completed as of Aug. 9.

Hanson told the council his company is forced to make its income in a three- to four-month period each year. He admitted the work was completed a day after the contract completion date.

He agreed to finish this week all the street work to Story's specifications. "One day should be called for on liquidated damages, but it's up to you," Story told the council.

The council agreed with Councilman Wright, who suggested paying the contract price and waiving the one day of damages.

In other action:

- The city is reviewing a contract for garbage collection. The contract encompasses a five-year period and is expected to be advertised for next month.
- The council accepted the donation of land north of town from Idaho Power Co. The triangular parcel at the junction of Highway 30 and Main Street will be surveyed at the city's expense.
- The council approved accepting aluminum bleachers donated by Sandy Tiegan. The bleachers will be moved to the City Park ball fields.
- Scott Bybee of JUB Engineers told the council the city's water tower is in good shape. He suggested regular maintenance in three to five years.
- The council approved the purchase of a computer for the city clerk's office to be used primarily for storing and retrieving water bill information.
- The council approved Bybee to administer a 1988 Community Block Grant for the Ageless Senior Citizens center. The funds are expected to arrive this week. Work should begin shortly thereafter.

partments would still have to pay for the dispatchers.

Hempleman said dispatchers would also handle non-emergency calls on a separate line. Anyone making calls about barking dogs or someone looking in my window would be referred to the non-emergency number to free up the 911 line, he said.

Buhl Police Chief Les Cochran said Buhl, which already has a 911 system, would find it difficult from a funding standpoint to justify keeping the police station staffed 24 hours a day, which he said was an important service, without a city dispatcher handling 911 calls.

Agencies offering 911 service are required by law to provide it 24 hours a day.

Cochran said the department gets only two calls a night sometimes - usually "a barking dog and a 911 call.

"We are going to say to the public that it will improve the 911 system or they will say we already have a good system," said Twin Falls County Sheriff Jim Munn.

Commissioner Judy Felton said the issue is not only improved 911 service, but funding as well.

"The difference is that they (small cities in the county) might have 911 in effect now but in some of these communities they have it on the back of the county and this would provide new money that would not have to be provided through the present tax structure," Felton said.

Munn responded by saying, "Hey, I'm not worried about getting money. I'm wanting something to present to the people so they know they're getting something in addition to what they're getting right now."

"You've got to show them that a central emergency system is going to improve the efficiency and the response time to their already in-place 911 number," he said.

Hempleman said it is possible that there isn't anything wrong with the current system.

"Maybe there isn't a fault and that is why we're going to take a look," he said.

Grazing tour will be held near Oakley

OAKLEY - The Forest Service is updating its grazing management plan for the 68,000 acre Goose Creek Allotment, and is asking the public to identify issues which should be addressed.

An all-day guided tour of the allotment will be held Saturday beginning at 9 a.m. at the Oakley High School. Tour participants will need a four-wheel drive vehicle and must provide their own lunch and drinking water.

"We're hoping the public will tell us how they feel about about grazing in national forest areas and what changes they'd like to see," said Bert Webster, range wildlife staff officer for Sawtooth National Forest. "We want to know what they see out there in terms of present management."

The current Goose Creek Allotment plan was written 15 years ago and must be updated to meet new Forest Service standards.

When revising the plan, the Forest Service will decide how much forage should be accessible to grazing animals. Potential for revegetation and water development will also be considered.

The Twin Falls Ranger District would like the public to submit comment by Aug. 31. Anyone interested should call the ranger office at 373-3200. People may also pick up briefing and response sheets and a map at 2647 Kimberly Road.

Area duck hunters opt for late season date

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Only 14 duck hunters showed up for a public hearing on the 1988 duck season and regulations Thursday night but they were unanimous in wanting the season to run to the last possible date in January.

After hearing some bleak reports on drought-cause production problems in the continent's major breeding areas, the hunters seemed pretty well convinced that the reduction in season length and bag limits were justified.

But they also indicated that they still would like the season to be open during the traditional best-harvest period of the winter. Magic Valley duck hunting always improves with cold weather and snowy weather to the east and west because it forces the birds into this area where open water is available and cornfields offer healthy diets.

Because the state must conform to (a) the hunting framework for both season length and harvest by the Department of the Interior (Fish and Wildlife Service) and (b) trying to accommodate the length and elevation of the state which makes early hunting necessary in north Idaho before migration and eastern Idaho before freeze up, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's announced recommendation to the Fish and Game Commission would be to run a split season from Oct. 8-30 and from Thanksgiving through Dec. 29.

The department felt the four-day Thanksgiving weekend would provide additional hunting opportunity to the worker-hunter. This was broached after Dan Cress, Filer, said the working-hunter is limited to weekends. But that wasn't a consideration when the group voted 14-0 to move the closing date to Jan. 8 — the latest Uncle Sam will allow.

To confirm that feeling, the group stayed at 14-0 when asked directly if the individuals preferred the Jan. 8 closing date or being open during the Thanksgiving weekend.

Jerry Mallett, field operations officer from the Boise office, said that is an option open to the commission, which will set the final dates at its two-day meeting in Sun Valley Aug. 22-23. A public hearing is slated for 7:30 p.m. the first night and the commission will make any final decisions the following day.

Cress earlier had argued that the opening date of Oct. 8 coincided with big game hunting and presented a conflict that usually left the duck hunter somewhere in the forest.

Bob Penney, Twin Falls, asked for any statistical backing the Fish and Wildlife Service might have for some of guidelines. He expressively inquired about the anticipated saving in harvest through elimination of the 30-minutes before sunrise hunting hours. Craig Kvale, Region 4 wildlife manager, said he'd seen nothing beyond guesses on that.

To Penney's inquiries concerning the difference in duck population by reducting harvest from 6 or 5 to four birds per day, Kvale said the federal biologists, based on bag limit changes in previous years, could peg savings at 8 percent. A reduction from 5-3 ducks would have been an estimated 20 percent.

Penney said perhaps more important than saving ducks right now was maintaining the interest and support of the duck hunter, noting all financial support for habitat and management comes directly from duck hunters either through stamps and license fees, federal excise taxes on hunting equipment and donations to conservation groups suchas Ducks Unlimited.

"Right now I would rather have 200,000 hunters supporting 100,000 ducks than 100,000 hunters supporting 200,000 breeding ducks," Penney said, noting the long-term effects of the drought are imponderable.

By the same token, Penney noted that while considerable hunting-day concessions were being made by the state to northern and eastern Idaho hunting, the fact remained 60 percent of the stamp and license-buying duck hunters came from the Treasure Valley and Magic Valley.

That last argument came after Kvale reported that the number of duck hunters declined nationally from 1986 to 1987 by 27 percent. In the Pacific Flyway, the number of hunters, as measured by federal duck stamp sales, was down 11.8 percent while Idaho was off by 35 percent.

Kvale said this large disparity was probably large attributable to Idaho requiring its first-ever $5 state duck stamp this year. The combination of increase state costs and depletion of the duck population conspired to build strong buy resistance, he said.

PGA leader isn't certain club pros belong

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) —. Golf's four major tournaments, including this week's 70th PGA championship, are the standards by which the game's great players are measured. But first-round leader Bob Gilder said they don't draw the toughest fields.

"I always feel I have a better chance to win in the majors than other tournaments," Gilder said after shooting a 5-under-par 66 Thursday to take the opening-round lead.

"The majors are weaker than the fields we play every week (on the PGA Tour)," said Gilder, who scored the last of his six victories in 1983.

He has yet to win one of the recognized majors — the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and the PGA — but led the first round of the U.S. Open two months ago.

Gilder's observations came in response to a question about the quality of the 150-man PGA field, which includes 40 club pros.

"You have 40 club pros and that makes it a weak field," the 37-year-old veteran said after his bogey-free round on the defenseless Oak Tree Golf Club course.

"That's nothing against the club pros," Gilder said. "Some of them are my friends. But they don't live to play tournament golf and that's the difference.

"All the majors are unique," he said, noting that each has different methods by which players qualify.

"The Masters is weak because it has only 40-50 really good players. This has 110 and is weak. So is the U.S. Open. The TPC (Tournament Players Championship) probably is the strongest," said Gilder who took advantage of the hot, still weather that helped produce some exceptionally low scoring.

Paul Azinger, recovered from back problems that made him a doubtful starter earlier this week, Chip Beck, John Cook and Nick Faldo of England were tied for second with 67s.

"You couldn't ask for better conditions," Gilder said.

"You won't find a better day for scoring," Azinger said. "When the wind isn't blowing, no matter how hard the golf course is, it's playable."

The game's top players made the most of the ideal conditions at the Oak Tree Golf Club, rated by the U.S. Golf Association as the most difficult par-71 course in the country.

More than two dozen players broke par, as the course was robbed of its natural defenses by the absence of wind.

Jack Nicklaus, holder of a record five PGA titles, was not among them, however. He took a double-bogey on the ninth and shot a 72.

Seve Ballesteros of Spain; the British Open champion, matched par 71. U.S. Open title-holder Curtis Strange was at 72.

Tom Watson, who needs a victory in this tournament to become only the fifth man to make a career sweep of the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and the PGA, also shot 72.

Greg Norman, Craig Stadler, Ray Floyd, Mike Reid, Rocco Mediate, Australian Peter Senior and Florida club pro Jay Overton were two strokes off the lead at 68.

"I'm very happy and very excited about my performance after the layoff," said Norman, who is coming off a two-month absence due to a wrist injury suffered in the U.S. Open.

"That 68 would feel like a 62 under other circumstances," he said.

Floyd, 45, a two-time PGA winner, scored an eagle-3 on the 16th hole, where he hit a 3-wood second shot to within 15 inches of the flag.

Stadler had a share of the lead at 5-under until his foot slipped on his tee shot off the 18th, leading to a double-bogey that dropped him two shots back.

Defending champion Larry Nelson and Ben Crenshaw were in a large group at 70.

"I pretty well kept it in play and gave myself a lot of chances. That's what you have to do, and I was able to do it," Gilder said.

Gilder, who hasn't won since 1983, missed four birdie chances from 10-12 feet and was in danger of making a bogey only once.

That was on the ninth, one of the three greens he missed.

"That was a tough chip, really tough," he said. But he got it to within 18 inches of the flag and made the par-saving putt.

Azinger, a winner earlier this season and the 1987 Player of the Year, said he suffered back problems last week and was surprised to be playing.

"I had to withdraw after the first round last week with a sore back and muscle spasms," he said.

"Early this week, I didn't think there was any chance I'd be able to play."

He said a series of treatments solved his problem and "I was able to play pain-free.

"I'm very pleasantly surprised. I guess I'm lucky. I know my attitude is going to be good. It's almost an 'everything to gain' attitude," Azinger said.

Undhjem blitzes field by tying course record

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Continuing the torrid pace she established in winning the state amateur championship last month, Virginia Undhjem of Twin Falls again flirted with the course record in opening up a huge lead in the annual Charlotte VanEngelen Memorial Twin Falls Women's Golf tournament Thursday.

Undhjem's record-tying 67 gives her an eight-stroke lead over runner-up Shauna Robinson, Twin Falls, going into today's final round.

And that record-tying effort came despite a double bogey on No. 12 and another bogey on No. 2.

"Other than No. 12 I played as well as I can," Undhjem said. "I had eight birdies and I've never had eight birdies in 18 holes in my life — and I may never play that well again."

Undhjem said a couple of the strokes over par resulted from lack of concentration and another from a peek.

"On 12 I hit a pretty good drive but I was in the long grass and kind of between clubs," she said. "I finally decided to go with a nine-iron but I just looked up. I thought for a minute it was going to go into the creek but it got across. Then I kinda chunked a chip shot to the front of the green. My first putt was pretty good, the ball was about a couple of feet away and I just forgot to take my time with it and missed it for a three-putt."

Playing the back nine first, Undhjem's first five holes read 3-3-6-3-3.

On the front nine she got her birdie on No. 1 but bogied No. 2 and then sailed around in par.

"On the last hole I hit a good eight iron into the green and the ball stopped about 10-12 feet away. My birdie putt just fell off at the last. I really wanted that 66 because that's the record," she said.

The flight leaders include:

Championship — Undhjem 67, Shauna Robinson 75; Sergene Sorenson and Wilma Shockey, both 80, and Jan Hatch and Roberta Robertson, both 82.

First flight — Lois Maddy 79; Kathy Janson 80; Mary Obenchain 82; Justine Messersmith 85; Mildred Lynch 87, and Phyliss Taylor 88.

Second flight — Barb Bacon and Ruth Sonius, both 91; Freda Ward 92; Vi Young 94; Terry Keegan 93, and Larae Asson 96.

Third flight — Marguerite Astorquia 96, Lori Brown 101, Alice Sabala, Anna Dean Coulam and Elaine Wigington, all 104; Denise Mays, Elva Felton, and Jame Purves, all 105.

One Cal Ripken is only worth two Bo Jacksons

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — After hitting a historic home run, Baltimore's Cal Ripken learned how much he's worth to at least two Kansas City fans — half as much as Bo Jackson.

During the Orioles' game against the Royals Wednesday night, Ripken sent his 20th home run flying into the left-field bleachers. The clout made him and Hall of Famer Ernie Banks the only shortstops to hit 20 homers in seven consecutive seasons. It also moved him past his manager, Frank Robinson, as No. 5 on the Orioles' all-time homer list, and naturally he wanted the ball.

He phoned the Baltimore bullpen, adjacent to the leftfield bleachers, and asked if somebody could retrieve his momento.

But word came back that the two women who had the ball refused to give it up, and Joe Stamps, a stadium security guard, went out to talk to the women.

"They knew exactly what they wanted," Stamps said. "They said Cal could have the ball back only if they got two balls autographed by Bo Jackson. I told them I was sure I could get a ball autographed by the Orioles and they said no, only two balls autographed by Bo would do."

TV replay voids KO in championship bout

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Tomas Molinares' sixth-round knockout of WBA welterweight champion Marlon Starling was voided Wednesday by New Jersey's top boxing official, who ruled the challenger threw his winning roundhouse right after the bell ended the sixth round.

It is now up to the World Boxing Association to decide if Molinares will keep his title, or whether there should be a rematch of the July 29 fight, said state Athletic Control Board Commissioner Larry Hazzard.

Starling's adviser, Mort Sharnik, praised the decision, but the fight's promoter, Dan Duva, said Hazzard's ruling was a first in boxing history.

"I don't think anyone disputes that the referee's judgment in this case may have been incorrect, but the question is, 'Do you overrule a judgment call?' " said Duva, whose company, Main Events, promoted the bout with New York promoter Cedric Kushner.

Duva, who called Hazzard's ruling improper, said he will await the WBA's decision and noted Starling had appealed the outcome to the boxing organization.

Hazzard said he expects the WBA to side with him in the ruling, which he said was made out of "fairness," because a "single bizarre incident like this should not be the determining factor of a fight."

"Since July 29 I have studied the videotape of that bout many, many times. With the luxury of time and appropriate surroundings, I have been better able to evaluate the split-second circumstances that led to referee (Joe) Cortez' decision," Hazzard said.

NCAA to continue testing despite judge

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The NCAA, despite the ruling of a California court, said Thursday it will press for drug-testing even though the tests probably do violate athletes' privacy.

In the meantime, at least one school suspended its drug-testing program and NCAA lawyers prepared to appeal Wednesday's ruling by Santa Clara County Superior Court Judge Conrad Rushing that declared the NCAA program unconstitutional.

"We are disappointed with the California court's ruling concerning only Stanford athletes," NCAA Executive Director Richard Schultz said. "It should be noted that a federal court in Seattle, Wash., has refused to enjoin the same drug-testing program, ruling that there was no invasion of any constitutionally protected right of a student-athlete's requiring invalidation of the NCAA drug-testing program."

The ruling applies only to Stanford. But it could be used as a precedent if other legal challenges are raised.

"The right to engage in NCAA competition is not a right guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution," NCAA President Wilford S. Bailey said. "It's a privilege. And if an individual wishes to compete in NCAA championship events, the individual must be prepared to comply with the rules established by the membership."

"In light of the legal climate right now, I ordered the testing part of our program to be held up today," said Don Combs, athletic director at Eastern Kentucky University in Richmond, Ky. "We were bringing in freshmen this week in football and volleyball and were going to have drug-testing. But the legal climate does not appear to be favorable at this time. We will continue the educational part of the program."

Bailey and other NCAA officials said they knew of no other school that had put its drug-testing program on hold.

Rushing held it is unconstitutional for the NCAA to test Stanford athletes for drugs. He said the testing "invades student athletes' privacy," and that it "interferes with the athletes' right to treat themselves with appropriate over-the-counter medications as other students do."

He ruled in an injunction sought by Stanford and two of its athletes, football player Barry McKeever and soccer player Jennifer Hill.

Ironically, it was a resolution five years ago by the Pacific 10 Conference, to which Stanford belongs, that first urged the NCAA to look into drug-testing.

After much discussion, NCAA schools voted overwhelmingly in January, 1986, to begin testing for performance-enhancing substances such as steroids as well as "street drugs" such as cocaine and marijuana. The tests are conducted prior to NCAA championship events and football bowl games, not during the season. Many schools have established their own programs for in-season testing.

Bailey noted that federal courts in Louisiana and Washington have previously ruled in favor of the constitutionality of the program. In Louisiana, a federal court denied the injunction sought by Roland Barbay, an LSU football player who tested positive for steroids and was declared ineligible for the 1987 Sugar Bowl.

U.S. District Judge Walter T. McGovern in Seattle, in a motion for preliminary injunction, ruled last spring that the NCAA's program "would likely succeed on its merits."

"In other words, it was likely to be proven to be a constitutional program," said Carol Niccolls, assistant Washington attorney general. "But at this point, it's too early to say where all this is going," Niccolls told the Associated Press. "Everything is still in the preliminary stage."

"There's no question but that there is an element of invasion of privacy," Bailey said from his office at Auburn University. "And until there are effective ways of testing for drugs that do not require that, this is necessary in order to have an effective drug-testing program.

"We wish we did not have to invade privacy at all. We wish there was no question of violation of constitutional rights. But we think these issues are so important, it justifies it."

Rookie drives Phillies to 1-0 victory over punchless Cards

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ricky Jordan's one-out double in the bottom of the ninth scored Chris James with the game's only run as the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 1-0 Thursday afternoon.

Steve Bedrosian, 2-5, pitched one scoreless inning for the victory after Mike Maddux had shut out the Cards on three hits for the first eight. John Costello, 3-1, took the loss.

Costello, who had pitched three scoreless innings retired Lance Parrish leading off the ninth, but walked James on a 3-2 pitch. Jordan then lined the first pitch to left center, scoring James.

The Cardinals Scott Terry, who has been in 40 games as a reliever, made his first start since July, 1986 in place of Danny Cox, out with an elbow injury. He pitched five scoreless innings, allowing 2 hits, striking out 2 and walking 2, before being relieved by Costello.

The Cardinals loaded the bases with two out in the third, but Maddux retired Terry Pendleton on a fly ball.

New York 9, Chicago 6

CHICAGO (AP) — Kevin McReynolds' grand slam with two outs in the ninth inning lifted the New York Mets to a 9-6 victory over the Chicago Cubs Thursday night.

McReynolds' 17th homer and second grand slam this year came off relief ace Rich Gossage, who had just entered the game, and broke New York's three-game losing streak.

Pat Perry, 4-4, had replaced Frank DiPino with Mets on first and third and none out in the ninth. Len Dykstra singled in a run and, one out later, Keith Hernandez was hit by a pitch, loading the bases. Perry fanned Darryl Strawberry, then was relieved by Gossage, who allowed McReynolds' long homer to straightaway center field.

Atlanta 2, San Diego 1

ATLANTA (AP) — Rookie Terry Blocker, batting only .130, drove in his first major-league run with a seventh-inning triple as the Atlanta Braves snapped a four-game losing streak with a 2-1 victory over the San Diego Padres Thursday.

Blocker lined the triple into left-center field off Jimmy Jones, 7-10, who had yielded only three hits in the first six innings. Dion James had doubled with one out and remained at second when Bruce Benedict flied out, setting up Blocker's game-winning hit.

Rookie Pete Smith, 5-11, retired the first 10 Padres he faced and turned in his second complete game with a seven-hitter. He fanned a career-high eight and walked none.

John Kruk broke out of an 0-for-14 slump with a double in the sixth inning, helping the Padres gain a 1-1 tie. Kruk went to third on Roberto Alomar's sacrifice and scored when Tony Gwynn singled.

San Francisco 6, Houston 0

HOUSTON (AP) — Will Clark and Kevin Mitchell hit consecutive solo home runs off Nolan Ryan and Atlee Hammaker pitched a five-hitter as the San Francisco Giants beat the Houston Astros 6-0 night.

Hammaker, 6-4, struck out two and walked three, as the Giants blanked the Astros for the second straight game. Don Robinson beat Houston 5-0 with a one-hitter on Wednesday night.

The Giants took the three-game series 2-1 and ended a string of six consecutive series victories by the Astros.

Clark, who has hit .600 against Ryan this season, hit his 24th home run over the right-field fence in the sixth inning. Mitchell followed with his 17th homer over the left-field fence for a 3-0 lead.

Clark's home run extended his hitting streak to 11 games, equalling a career high, and it was his third homer off Ryan this year.

Pittsburgh 6, Montreal 1

MONTREAL (AP) — Doug Drabek allowed five hits in seven scoreless innings for his sixth consecutive victory as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Montreal Expos 6-1 Thursday night.

The win kept the second-place Pirates five games behind the NL leading New York Mets, while third-place Montreal fell 6½ games back.

Drabek, 11-5, whose last loss was on June 21 against Chicago, struck out five and walked two before Jim Gott pitched the last two innings to earn his 20th save. Gott yielded a solo home run to Hubie Brooks in the eighth.

But Pittsburgh scored four runs in the ninth. R.J. Reynolds had a bases-loaded double and Barry Bonds added a two-run single.

Cincinnati 9, Los Angeles 8

CINCINNATI (AP) — Eric Davis singled home Kal Daniels with two outs in the bottom of the 10th inning after the Reds scored twice in the bottom of the ninth off reliever Jay Howell, 2-3, to tie the game. Daniels opened the 10th with a single, moved to second on Barry Larkin's groundout and Davis lined a single to left off Howell — his third hit of the game.

John Franco, 4-5, pitched a perfect 10th to get the victory.

The Reds had tied it 8-8 as Davis led off the ninth with a single and stole second. Paul O'Neill singled for his fourth hit of the game and Jeff Reed singled home Davis. O'Neill scored on Jeff Treadway's sacrifice fly.

O'Neill led the Reds' attack with a solo homer, a run-scoring single, a double and another single in five at-bats to give him nine hits in his last 12 at-bats. He has hit a homer in each of his last three games.

Kirk Gibson hit a two-run homer and three doubles, scoring four times for the Dodgers. Mike Marshall added a two-run homer.

Blue Jays use 11-inning throwing error to beat Yanks 6-5

NEW YORK (AP) — Jesse Barfield stole second base and then dashed home on catcher Don Slaught's throwing error with two outs in the 11th inning Thursday night and the Toronto Blue Jays beat New York 6-5 for a three-game sweep of the Yankees.

Barfield singled with one out off Dave Righetti, 3-3. One out later, with Nelson Liriano batting, Barfield was safe at second when Slaught's bouncing throw hit him in the leg. The ball caromed into shallow left field and Barfield kept running, barely beating Rickey Henderson's throw home with a hook slide.

Duane Ward, 8-1, got the victory, Toronto's fourth straight. The Yankees, temporarily rescued on Don Mattingly's two-run homer with two outs in the ninth, have lost seven of nine, including 2-5 on their homestand.

Texas 5, Cleveland 4

CLEVELAND (AP) — Doug Jones' wild throw allowed three runs to score and the Texas Rangers took advantage of four errors with two outs in the ninth inning Thursday night and beat Cleveland 5-4, the Indians' fifth consecutive loss.

Jones, 1-3, who had converted 21 consecutive save opportunities, had a 3-1 lead and got the first two outs in the ninth before Geno Petralli's grounder went through shortstop Ron Washington for an error. Oddibe McDowell singled and Curtis Wilkerson loaded the bases on a grounder to Washington, whose throw to second was too late to force McDowell.

Buechele then bounced a grounder in front of the plate that Jones grabbed and threw past first, letting three runs score as Buechele went to third on an additional error by catcher Andy Allanson.

Cecil Espy's grounder skipped past Washington for another error, Cleveland's fifth, allowing Buechele to score for a 5-3 lead.

Kansas City 6, Baltimore 5

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kevin Seitzer's sacrifice fly scored Bill Pecota with one out in the 12th inning Thursday night, giving Kansas City a 6-5 victory over Baltimore and making the Orioles the first American League team in 10 years to be swept in a season series.

With one out, Pecota singled off Tom Niedenfuer, 1-3, the fifth Baltimore pitcher. Kurt Stillwell singled Pecota to third, Stillwell's fourth hit, and Seitzer hit a sacrifice fly to left.

Chicago 4, Seattle 3

SEATTLE (AP) — Dave Gallagher singled home Kelly Paris with the go-ahead run Thursday night and the Chicago White Sox beat the Seattle Mariners 4-3, snapping a three-game losing streak.

Paris singled to lead off the eighth, advanced to second on a passed ball and scored on Gallagher's two-out single off Mike Jackson, 6-4.

Jerry Reuss, 8-7, gave up seven hits in seven innings. Bobby Thigpen pitched two innings of two-hit relief for his 25th save.

Harold Baines tied the score 3-3 with a bases-loaded three-run double off Jackson in the seventh. Singles by Ozzie Guillen and Dave Gallagher and a walk to Steve Lyons preceeded Baines' hit.

Seattle scored twice in the first on a two-out single by Darnell Coles, a triple by Steve Balboni and a passed ball.

Milwaukee 4, Boston 0

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Don August pitched a six-hitter for his first major league shutout and Rob Deer and Joey Meyer homered in the same inning Thursday as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the slumping Boston Red Sox 4-0.

The Brewers took three of four games from the Red Sox at County Stadium. Boston, which won 19 of its first 20 games after the All-Star break, has dropped seven of its last nine.

August, 7-5, gave up three hits in the second inning when the Red Sox loaded the bases, but retired Jody Reed on a popup and Rich Gedman on a grounder.

McMahon limps around camp after losing balance on curb

By The Associated Press

Jim McMahon, who seems to get hurt about as often as he walks across the street, injured himself again Thursday ...

Walking across a street.

The flamboyant Chicago quarterback practiced Thursday in Goteborg, Sweden, where the Bears will play Minnesota Sunday, but was limping as he left the Bears' locker room.

"I tripped over a curb last night and sprained my ankle a little bit," he said. "The ankle still hurts, but it I hope will be all right for the game."

McMahon hasn't played an entire season since his junior year at Brigham Young University in 1980.

Since 1982, his rookie year, he has missed 40 percent of Chicago's games, starting just six in each of the last two seasons. He has had separated shoulders, rotator cuff problems, pulled hamstrings and groins, bruised tailbones, stiff necks, bruised legs and backs, lacerated kidneys, fractured hands, battered knees, cracked tailbones and sprained ankles.

Now, McMahon hopes he will be able to lead the Bears at the 52,000-seat Ullevi Stadium in the first-ever NFL preseason game on the European continent.

"Hopefully, the people will enjoy the game," McMahon said. "I think it's good that Europe is starting to get a taste of American football. It's a great game and it's nice that the Europeans are taking interest in it."

This week has been relaxed for McMahon, who can't walk down a street in the United States without being recognized. Even two years ago, when the Bears played in London, he was an instant celebrity.

But in Sweden, where there's been little exposure to American football, he and the other Bears can still go for a private stroll.

"The thing that's really nice about this trip is that nobody in Sweden really knows who the players are," said Coach Mike Ditka.

"I don't think anybody cares who they are. In London, even though they weren't sure, they knew who certain people were and they made a bigger fuss over it than here. The people are nice, they're nice to everybody.

"But they don't really know if I'm Mike Ditka. They really don't care."

AND ON TO THE AULD SOD

Dan Rooney, president of the Pittsburgh Steelers, says he'd like to take his football team for an exhibition game to Ireland, his ancestral home.

"I think New England and the Steelers would be ideal," Rooney said. "There is a lot of interest in those two teams in Ireland. If I were picking the teams, that's who I would pick."

Rooney said he has discussed the idea with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle and with a group in Ireland willing to sponsor the game.

He said the sponsors are interested in seeing the Steelers play the Buffalo Bills. The issue could be decided when the NFL owners meet in March if the owners allow the two teams to play a fifth exhibition next year.

No NFL team has ever played in Ireland. Boston College and Army will play in Dublin on Nov. 19.

- OUT AND IN

John Maloney, agent for Tony Casillas, said the Atlanta nose tackle intends to return to the Falcons' training camp after walking out last month and beginning treatment for stress.

"From what I hear, the way he's progressing, it's not going to be a long period of time," Maloney said. "He feels much better about everything. He was suffering from a lot of anxiety before. Now he seems much more relaxed."

When Casillas left camp, he said he was unsure he wanted to continue to play football. The 6-foot-3, 280-pounder has been seeing a psychiatrist.

"It's the doctor's call now," Maloney said. "It's not like he can go up to (Coach) Marion (Campbell) and say, 'I'm going in. I'm ready.'

"Now it's like a doctor evaluating a knee injury and letting the coach know when he's ready," Maloney said. "They're not going to let him on the field until he's released" from treatment.

The Green Bay Packers, overwhelmed 34-3 last week by the New York Giants, will give Don Majkowski his chance at quarterback this week against the Indianapolis Colts.

Coach Infante said Majkowski, who started five games as a rookie last year, will play into the second quarter and will be relieved by Marc Wilson, who started the Giants' game. Robbie Bosco, who like Majkowski sat out against the Giants, will take over in the third quarter.

New Orleans nose tackle Tony Elliott says that if he's demoted to second-string he wants to be traded.

"I wouldn't be an asset to the Saints. I would be a liability," Elliott said.

Coach Jim Mora has been working defensive end Bruce Clark at nose tackle. Mora says he believes in familiarizing players with more than one position in case of injury and says he has noticed an improvement in Elliott's performance at training camp since Clark has been working at tackle.

"In case, just in case, the Saints decided to start Bruce, they would definitely have to get rid of Tony Elliott," Elliott said.

Oilers shopped Gretzky around at high price

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Rangers were asked last June if they were interested in Wayne Gretzky, General Manager Phil Esposito said Thursday.

Esposito said he was approached about a possible deal by Glen Sather, president of the Edmonton Oilers, who traded the superstar to the Los Angeles Kings on Tuesday.

"He came up to me on draft day and said, 'I think Gretzky is going to be moved,' and asked if I was interested," Esposito said of Sather, who he played with on the Boston Bruins. "When I said I was, he said, 'I know there will be money involved, but that comes later. Let's talk about the players.'"

But Esposito said the price was too high.

"I told him, 'It's great to have Gretzky, but who's he going to play with? I think it's too much.'"

Esposito said Sather promised to talk again about a potential trade, but never did. The two clubs are involved in a dispute over free agent forward Geoff Courtnall, and Esposito said he thought that might have been part of the reason he did not hear from Sather.

Esposito said the Kings-Oilers trade would benefit both teams from a business standpoint.

"I think it may have been the best business decision two sports franchises ever made: (Edmonton owner) Peter Pocklington got enough money to run his franchise for four years, and he got two players, both of whom are capable of playing great. His team will be just as tough.

"Gretzky is great, but one guy does not make a team. I think Edmonton, with all the players they have, will be a strong team for years to come.

Gretzky accused of feigning sad farewell

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Wayne Gretzky has an ego "the size of Manhattan" and faked his tearful departure from the Edmonton Oilers, team owner Peter Pocklington said.

However, Pocklington issued a brief statement Thursday saying the comments, which appeared in the Edmonton Journal, "were taken totally out of context."

Speculation over why Gretzky, the greatest hockey player of the modern era, was traded to the Los Angeles Kings for more than $10 million has thrust Pocklington into a spotlight he is not enjoying.

The 46-year-old business was quoted in Wednesday's Journal as saying Gretzky's ego was "the size of Manhattan." Then he added: "I understand that, though. If people had told me how great I was day-in and day-out for 10 years, I'm sure my ego would be a pretty generous size, too."

Pocklington also was quoted as saying Gretzky faked his tears at an emotional news conference announcing the trade.

American track stars shine in Italy

Carl Lewis winds up an incredible 200-meter dash

SESTRIERE, Italy (AP) — Roger Kingdom of the United States became only the second man ever to crack the 13-second barrier in the 110 meters hurdles, winning the event in 12.97 Thursday and stealing the show from Carl Lewis and Ben Johnson.

Kingdom, winner of the U.S. Trials in Indianapolis, said he did not expect to run so fast.

"I wanted to lower my personal best of 13.14, and I was confident I could do it," Kingdom said. "I knew I had an excellent race, but I never thought it could be under .13 seconds.

"I am shocked myself. I still have a technical problem in pulling my trail leg over the hurdle. Once I improve on that, I'll get the world record."

The American hurdler, who will be 26 in two weeks, came within .04 of the world record of 12.93 set by Renaldo Nehemiah in 1981.

"I plan to run another three races in Europe and then fly home to rest for a few weeks before I go to Seoul in defense of my Olympic gold," Kingdom said.

Colin Jackson of Britain was second in 13.11, the second fastest in the world this year and a European record.

Lewis ran 19.82 in the 200, and Johnson had 9.98 in the 100.

It was the inaugural meet for the Sestriere track, which is the highest in Europe at 6,723 feet elevation.

The crowd of 11,000 was hoping Johnson and Lewis would run in the same race, which they have not done since the 1987 World Championships in Rome when the Canadian set a world record of 9.83 and left Lewis trailing at 9.93.

But once again the two chose separate races, and it was obvious that only a consistent money offer could get them together before Seoul.

Lewis ran a strong 200 in the fastest time this year. Gilles Quenherve of France, silver medalist in Rome, was second at 20.20.

"I had a great start, but I stumbled a little bit coming off the bend," Lewis said. "I really don't know why, but I did. I managed to stick on and finish but I was tired at the end.

"I wanted to do a good 200 and I feel I ran well. I am pleased with my performance, I feel good about it."

Johnson wasn't happy with his race, although 9.98 virtually matched the wind-aided 9.90 he ran Saturday in the Canadian championships. He beat Americans Joe De Loach and Dennis Mitchell, both at 10.11.

"I ran well for the first 80 meters, but then I could not keep my back up. I felt it was too stiff," Johnson said. "This will go with a few more races. This is only my second event after my leg injury which kept me out of racing for three months."

Tigers wonder what that offense went

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit's once-fearsome hitting attack is looking sick lately, but Tigers pitching has made opposing batters look worse.

Pitching is just about the only way to explain why the Tigers have won 13 of their past 21 games while scoring three runs or less in 17 of those contests.

"This team has unbelievable pitching. Thank God," said right-hander Jack Morris, who on Wednesday night pitched what lately has become a typical Detroit victory.

The Tigers beat the Texas Rangers 2-1 as Morris and Guillermo Hernandez combined on a five-hitter. Luis Salazar singled home Alan Trammell with the winning run in the top of the eighth.

"It's not a question of 'Can it continue like this,'" Manager Sparky Anderson said. "It might have to. I'm not even looking for the big offense anymore, because it isn't there."

Detroit scored 896 runs last season, the most by any major league team since 1953. At their current rate, they'll finish the season with only a few more runs than the 729 they scored in 1985.

Home runs, the Tigers' trademark through most of the 1980s, also are lagging. They've hit 95 this season and won't even come close to matching the major league-leading 225 of 1987.

"They'd hit them if they could," Anderson said. "They're not trying not to hit home runs. They just don't have much punch."

Wednesday night's seven-hits lowered Detroit's team batting average to .256, 10th in the American League. The Tigers have hit just .233 since the All-Star break.

Enter the pitchers, who have combined for a 2.57 earned-run average since the All-Star break and share a 3.57 ERA over the entire season. Continued sharp pitching is just what the Tigers, idle Thursday, will need as they invade Fenway Park for a three-game weekend series against Boston.

The Tigers won four of five from Boston at home last week and led the Red Sox by four games in the American League East after Wednesday's action.

"I don't even want to think about why we're not scoring runs," said Trammell, the only Tiger regular hitting over .300. "We're not, but we still get the big hits."

Scott plans surprise for Olympic milers

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Steve Scott relishes not being the favorite in the men's 1,500-meter race at the Seoul Olympics.

In the 1984 Los Angeles Games, in his hometown, Scott was counted on to give the United States its first gold medal in that event since 1908. He finished 10th.

"This time, I can go in as the underdog," Scott said. "I will enjoy the experience and not put pressure on myself. I think things will be better because of that attitude.

"I have the feeling that on a good day, I can beat anyone in the world."

Scott, the premier U.S. middle-distance runner for the past decade, has proven his capability to win in the past - except in big meets.

In addition to his dismal showing in the 1984 Olympics, he finished seventh in the 1977 World Cup, fourth in the 1979 World Cup, second in the 1983 World Championships, third in the 1987 Pan American Games and 12th in the 1987 World Championships.

Scott has mixed feelings about his performances in the major competitions.

"Of course, I always want to win the big ones," he said, "but with the competition I've faced, there's nothing to be ashamed of. Sure, it's frustrating. But I also can be proud of what I've accomplished."

Scott's accomplishments include being the American record-holder in the mile, 2,000 meters and 3,000 meters.

Swinging market tries to stabilize

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market swung back and forth in a narrow range Thursday, struggling to stabilize after its recent steep decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had fallen nearly 100 points over the five previous sessions, rose 5.16 to 2,039.30.

But declining issues outnumbered advances by about 5 to 4 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 666 up, 828 down and 502 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 173 million shares, against 200.95 million in the previous session. Nationwide consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 201.30 million shares.

Gainers among the blue chips that make up the Dow included International Business Machines, up ¼ at 119; Eastman Kodak, up ⅞ at 43¾; General Motors, up ½ at 75⅞, and American Express, up ½ at 28.

American depositary receipts of leading Japanese issues, which have been very volatile lately, chalked up broad gains. Matsushita jumped 11 to 217; Honda Motor 9¾ to 171¾; TDK 4½ to 80½; Hitachi 7¾ to 143; Pioneer Electronics 5½ to 58¾, and Kyocera 3¼ to 89½.

Computer addict wastes firm's money

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: We have a computer addict in our office. He's the office manager. He comes to work at 5 a.m. so he can "work" on his computer before anyone comes in to interrupt him. He's here on Saturday and Sunday, too! In the last three years, he has spent a fortune of the company's money on computers, printers, software, etc.

Before the rest of us have time to learn a program, it's been replaced with an "updated" version. We have an accounting package installed with all the extras, such as report generators, built-in spreadsheets, payroll modules, a network, etc., but nothing ever works right, which gives him a perfect opportunity to spend more time playing with the computer — trying to "fix" it. He never gets enough.

Everyone in this office has a computer on his desk whether he needs it or not. I won't even tell you how much we spend every month on computer paper, ribbons and other supplies to keep all the hardware running. The owners of this company would be flabbergasted if they knew that their money is being spent on the manager's hobby.

Well, Abby, I think you get the picture. I'm sure there are many other offices just like ours. Computers are marvelous machines, but for the most part, they are fascinating toys for people who need to play. Sign me ...

— CONTROL C.

DEAR CONTROL C.: Computers have revolutionized the business world, but there are many who are intimidated by them. Read on for a teen-ager's evaluation:

DEAR ABBY: I'm only 13, but I think I have the right to write to you. I'm writing about the people who wrote to you saying they think computers are a big waste of time.

Well, here's my opinion: I think computers are fun, but really, people are becoming too dependent upon them. I think they should get off their butts and figure things out for themselves.

After all, that's why we go to school, isn't it? It's true what you said. Next year there will be more computer junk to suck more of your hard earned-money up! It stinks! So tell people to use their brains! That's what God gave us brains for, right? By the way, I love your column. Disgustingly yours,

— ANGELA ISAACSON OF WASH.

DEAR ABBY: People who criticize their fellow office workers for playing computer games and doing useless computer work on company time usually fall into one of the following categories:

People who hope to hang on until they retire so they won't have to learn how to operate "those things."

Administrators who command someone else to learn to use the new computer because they are too busy shuffling paper to learn anything new themselves.

Workers who are afraid that one of those instruments from outer space will take over their jobs.

Ninety percent of computer-literate managers would love to have the problem of telling their workers to stop playing computer games. When I go into the office, I see far more useless talking and eating than game-playing. More often than not, the new computer sits unused on a corner of the desk while the electric type-writers type like they did in the good old days — mainly because no training time is given, or people are too lazy to learn how to use something new.

— EAGER BEAVER

People are eating them up! To order your copy of Abby's favorite recipes, send your name and address, clearly printed, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postage and handling are included.

Thanks and Appreciation

I spent the first ten days of August in the Twin Falls Clinic Hospital having a major 5 hour colon operation and recovering. In those ten days I met the most outstanding personnel I have met in my life. The doctors, nurses and all the personnel were most gracious and hospitable at all times. They made my stay a very pleasant one. The last night I was well rested and stayed awake to watch the nurses pass my door on their rounds in their brilliant white uniforms. They reminded me of the term "Nightingales on Parade." I also would like to thank all my great friends who showed such love for me in my time of need, especially the Twin Falls Municipal Band for their great rendition of "Them Basses". I will return to the Twin Falls Clinic Hosp. In about six weeks for a finish up operation and hopefully a full recovery. Twin Falls should be very proud to have such an outstanding hospital as the Twin Falls Clinic Hospital. Sincerely Yours, Allan DeVries

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"Sacrifices are not the ones to pity. The ones to pity are those they sacrifice."

— Elizabeth Bowen.

Most sacrifices in bridge are made when one side voluntarily suffers a penalty instead of allowing the opponents to score even more points by playing a makable contract. Today's hand involves a different sacrifice. West offers one of his high-cards-to-build-an-entry-to partner's hand.

East signals with his spade jack on West's king, and West continues with the queen and another after dummy ducks twice. In dummy with the spade ace, declarer leads a diamond back to his jack and West's queen, and West is at the crossroads.

If West exits with a "safe" club, the rest is easy. South loses another diamond to West's ace but he wins eight tricks.

Obviously West must lead a heart after winning his diamond queen. However, if he leads a low heart, dummy's seven forces East's king and the defenders once again take only five tricks.

West's winning move is to switch to the heart queen after he wins the diamond queen. If South wins, East's heart king becomes an entry to the fourth spade. And if South ducks, West leads another heart, which East should duck. South's ace falls "on air" and this time the defenders take seven tricks instead of only six.

For as many years as I have been used car sales manager I have never had as many fine locally owned used clean cars on the lot. Rather than take these cars to the Salt Lake City Auction, I am going to sell them here. All used cars have been drastically reduced. If these prices don't fit your way of thinking, come in and make me an offer.

Sincerely,
Don Theisen

Ballet legend pulls no punches

By BARBARA NEIWERT
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — "Your problem is style in dancing, and if you don't have it, you have nothing. And most of you don't have it," ballet master Jacques d'Amboise told a group of amateur and professional dancers gathered in Sun Valley this week.

His words are harsh and to the point. They are taken well, however, as he softens the statement with a bit of encouragement and a smile, "But you will."

d'Amboise is conducting a two-week workshop and dance festival sponsored by the Ballet School Foundation of Ketchum. The workshops will culminate with two public performances of selected works on Aug. 19 and Aug. 20., immediately following the Elkhorn Music Festival at 7:30 p.m. on the Elkhorn Plaza.

If you are in the Sun Valley area this next week, you are invited to take a free peek at the ballet. Rehearsals are being held throughout the day inside a 500-person tent on the Elkhorn Plaza.

d'Amboise is directing two dozen dancers from George Balanchine's New York City Ballet, the American Festival Ballet in Boise, as well as students from Salt Lake City, Seattle and San Francisco.

In addition to this group of advanced ballet students, d'Amboise is teaching a group of 12 local youngsters who've had no previous dance instruction.

If you have ever had problems holding the attention of a group of 8-to-12-year-olds, a lesson from d'Amboise would be in order.

"Okay, now let's do the Old Karate Chop," d'Amboise orders as he calls out the steps and demonstrates the routine. "La, la, la, la, la, la, la, la."

"Jump!" he calls out.

"Clap!" he shouts.

"Yah!!" he cries as his arms fling wide as he slices the air.

The kids quickly catch on that their duty is to move with purpose, distinctive steps and exaggeration. And they love it.

d'Amboise's spirit is filled with an energy and enthusiasm that is non-stop, an effervescent, endless supply which pours out to those around him, catching them up in its wake.

How does he do it? How does he maintain such a level of exuberance and exhilaration hour after hour, day after day?

"I like what I'm doing," he says. "I like the people, I like the responsibility and the challenge."

d'Amboise began ballet at 8 years old, studying with George Balanchine, Anatole Oboukhoff, Vechestlar Swoboda and Pierre Vladimiroff. At age 12 he was asked to perform with the Ballet Society, the immediate predecessor to the New York City Ballet.

As Balanchine's protege, d'Amboise has had more works choreographed specifically for him by Balanchine than any other dancer, including "Stars and Stripes," Tchaikovsky's "Pas de Deux," "Episodes," "Figure in the Carpet" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

With more than 50 years of dancing experience, d'Amboise has an impressive list of credits. Highlights of those are 20 works he choreographed for the New York City Ballet, seven film credits, including the award-winning documentary film, "He Makes Me Feel Like Dancin." That 1983 film won an Academy Award, six Emmy Awards, the Peabody Award, the Golden Cine Award and the National Education Association Award for the Advancement of Learning Through Broadcasting.

d'Amboise began teaching others when he was only 14 and it is a passion he continues today.

He says he has always liked children and old people, and with four children of his own, he jokingly adds that he only recently began to like teen-agers.

He encourages parents to give their children an opportunity to learn dance, but he doesn't dwell strictly with dance.

"I think every child should know about the arts and sciences, not to become artists and scientists, that's only for a few special people to go on to become artists and scientists," d'Amboise says. "But to be ignorant of our arts and sciences is to be ignorant of some of the greatest aspects of what the human can achieve."

'To be ignorant of our arts and sciences is to be ignorant of some of the greatest aspects of what the human can achieve.' — Jacques d'Amboise, ballet master

Part of d'Amboise's work gives children an opportunity to experience dance when they otherwise might never receive the chance. As founder, dancer, choreographer and director of The National Dance Institute in New York, for 11 years d'Amboise has produced what is titled "The Event of the Year," which brings together a cast of up to 2,000 children, senior citizens and supporting artists in a dance musical performed in Madison Square Garden in New York City.

d'Amboise uses the same technique for teaching this large group of children as he does for his dozen students in Sun Valley. He is also working on a similar program in the Soviet Union, and has made three trips to Moscow already this year.

d'Amboise describes ballet as a very delicate, subtle art which takes the color and perfume of the culture and society in which it thrives.

In Russia the ballet is a grand, heroic, heavy, stomping rendition of Soviet realism, says d'Amboise. In England, it is prissy, proper, antiseptic, full of good manners.

By contrast, in the United States, d'Amboise sees ballet run strictly by economic needs. Due to the high cost of running a ballet company, policy is determined by the ballet guild's response to newspapers and critic's views of the times.

"It's an art that isn't leading a culture, it's responding — to it," d'Amboise says. "That's the trouble — there's very little innovation in ballet."

But d'Amboise is doing his part to innovate the minds of youngsters. He's giving art a chance to grow.

"When you have time to dream you begin to wonder, what are the stars? You begin to try to understand what the stars are — and they're stars," d'Amboise says matter of factly.

"You begin to wonder about the stars and you sing them because they're magical, and you call them, and you paint them and you dance to them — that becomes art."

Ballet master Jacques d'Amboise works with a student

d'Amboise offers 2 shows

New York and local ballet dancers come together on Aug. 19 and 20 for two special performances directed by ballet master Jacques d'Amboise.

The shows will be held at the Elkhorn Plaza with performances beginning immediately following the music festival at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets are $10 each and may be purchased in advance at Ex Libris Bookstore and the Elkhorn Concierge in Sun Valley, Chapter One Bookstore and Shade of Sun Valley in Ketchum, and the Wood River Journal offices in both Hailey and Ketchum.

Call the Elkhorn Resort, 622-4511 ext. 1022 or ext. 1800 for reservations or information.

A moralist could have called her a self-centered, sometimes spiteful, woman, and a psychologist could easily see her lifelong attention-seeking as the result of incredibly bad parenting.

Reviews

But because Alice Roosevelt was born to a prominent family and also was beautiful and lively, none of that mattered. As everyone knows, naughty people make much better "news copy" than more sedate ones.

Carol Felsenthal's new biography, "Alice Roosevelt Longworth," claims her "complex and moving story" has never been told in full before. The author uses new sources, including Alice's own diaries and lively quotes from many cousins and friends.

Of particular interest to Idahoans is the allegation that Alice's only child, born when she was 41, was fathered by Idaho Sen. William Borah instead of her husband Speaker of the House Nick Longworth.

The Gem State's best known politician is pictured as a notorious political womanizer, not as the solitary statesman he was perceived in his home state.

While relatives are quoted confidently about the paternity of Paulina, who committed suicide at age 32, reviews of the Longworth biography in some Idaho newspapers refute it. Readers are urged to read Mary Borah's memoirs "Elephants and Donkeys" for a different perspective.

Woven into the story of Alice's stormy life are intriguing tidbits about once-prominent people. This aspect will appeal to readers old enough to remember the prestige enjoyed by many World War II leaders.

From the time her father, Teddy Roosevelt, became President when she was a teen-ager, Alice easily moved from being the darling of the Washington press corps to the fitting title of the "other Washington monument."

The song "Alice's Blue Gown" was written in her honor.

But underneath the wit and "old money" family veneer lurked a child longing for acceptance and love. Her failure to have early emotional needs met not only promoted show-off tendencies, but created a hardness to anyone less tough than she.

When her mother died shortly after Alice's birth, her father, then a struggling New York politician, treated her coldly and never again mentioned her mother's name.

Former Sen. Borah aide remembers the way it was

By LORAYNE ORTON SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls lawyer who was an aide to Idaho Sen. William Borah in 1925 recalls Alice Roosevelt Longworth bringing her infant daughter, Paulina, into the senator's office.

"She'd come in frequently to see the senator," says F.O. Sheneberger, who served in Borah's office in 1925-26 while attending Georgetown University.

But he doubts the claim in a new biography of Teddy Roosevelt's daughter that the Idaho senator fathered her only child.

"There's been more than one story about her," Sheneberger recalled.

"I don't really know, but knowing the senator as I did, I don't think he looked to right or left. Mary was his wife."

As Borah's aide, the longtime Twin Falls attorney, who is now retired, said he was in their home several times.

Sheneberger remembers Alice as "quite a young lady" who "kept Washington in a steam."

"I'm sure she admired the senator," he says. "She was a sharp lady and had the inside track on politics."

Shenberger said that "stories were going around then and later" about the senator's private life, but as to Borah's alleged sexual pursuits, he "just can't believe them."

He does agree with author Carol Felsenthal on one point; Borah, the "Lion of Idaho," played a pivotal role in defeating U.S. acceptance of the League of Nations.

"Borah and eight others are credited with defeating the proposal," Shenberger says.

He turned Alice over to an aunt to raise and would have left her there, but his second wife, Edith Carow, felt they must take the 6-year-old for appearance's sake.

Feeling unwanted, Alice already was a difficult child and neither the famous Rough Rider TR, nor his wife, recognized she craved attention and acceptance.

The stepmother, the author claims, made it clear to Alice that her own mother had been stupid and boring.

Not surprisingly, Alice married to escape the home where she never had felt cherished.

But Longworth's drinking and womanizing soon ended any affection and she blocked Nick and his political career out of her life.

Instead, she spent boundless energy as a young woman helping TR in his last futile attempts to regain the presidency.

And when her own daughter was born Alice repented the rejection pattern. Only for Paulina it was even more cruel because she had adored Nick Longworth, who died when she was 6. He would take her to the capitol and shower her with attention.

After his death, Alice belittled him to her daughter and not only rejected but constantly criticized Paulina. Like her mother, Paulina sought escape in an ill-advised marriage, also with an alcholic, who soon died, leaving her alone with a 6-year-old girl.

After Paulina's death, friends said Alice showed some remorse, asking if she could have been at fault. She then surprised friends by insisting on raising her grandchild whom she treated much better than her daughter.

The enduring quality of Alice Longworth was her wit and the conversationalists she attracted.

For decades she reigned as undisputed top hostess of the nation's capital. Invitations to her dinners were highly prized, presidents sought her out and she knew "everyone worth knowing."

Her reputation as a Washington establishment continued until a few years before her death at age 96 in 1980.

Any history buff would be fascinated by this biography. I enjoyed it as an inside glimpse of the "Washington merry-go-round."

"Alice Roosevelt Longworth" is available at local bookstores and is on order at the Twin Falls Public Library.

He turned Alice over to an aunt to raise and would have left her there, but his second wife, Edith Carow, felt they must take the 3-year-old for appearance's sake.

Feeling unwanted, Alice already was a difficult child and neither the famous Rough Rider TR, nor his wife, recognized she craved attention and acceptance.

The stepmother, the author claims, made it clear to Alice that her own mother had been stupid and boring.

Not surprisingly, Alice married to escape the home where she never had felt cherished.

But Longworth's drinking and womanizing soon ended any affection and she blocked Nick and his political career out of her life.

Instead, she spent boundless energy as a young woman helping TR in his last futile attempts to regain the presidency.

And when her own daughter was born Alice repeated the rejection pattern. Only for Paulina it was even more cruel because she had adored Nick Longworth, who died when she was 6. He would take her to the capitol and shower her with attention.

After his death, Alice belittled him to her daughter and not only rejected but constantly criticized Paulina. Like her mother, Paulina sought escape in an ill-advised marriage, also with an alcholic, who soon died, leaving her alone with a 6-year-old girl.

After Paulina's death, friends said Alice showed some remorse, asking if she could have been at fault. She then surprised friends by insisting on raising her grandchild whom she treated much better than her daughter.

The enduring quality of Alice Longworth was her wit and the conversationalists she attracted.

For decades she reigned as undisputed top hostess of the nation's capital. Invitations to her dinners were highly prized, presidents sought her out and she knew "everyone worth knowing."

Her reputation as a Washington establishment continued until a few years before her death at age 96 in 1980.

Any history buff would be fascinated by this biography. I enjoyed it as an inside glimpse of the "Washington merry-go-round."

"Alice Roosevelt Longworth" is available at local bookstores and is on order at the Twin Falls Public Library.

Big payoffs to anonymous tipsters — these work about as well as anything to cut crimes. Particularly crimes committed by drinkers. Sooner or later, police say, the criminal who drinks overmuch is going to tell somebody about it all.

Q. You said a 10.5 second fight in Maine was the shortest boxing match. Please note, Mike Collin knocked out Pat Brownson on Nov. 4, 1947, with the first punch, and that Golden Gloves bout was stopped without a count after four seconds.

'Bull Durham' shows smartness about people and baseball

By HAL HINSON
The Washington Post

Review

Limber, funny and as in touch with the pleasures of the flesh as it is with the pleasures of the game, "Bull Durham," the new baseball movie starring Kevin Costner and Susan Sarandon, eases up on you, lazy as a cloud, and carries you off in a mood of exquisite delight. To borrow W.P. Kinsella's phrase, it has the thrill of the grass.

The movie begins on a slow, stirring, soulful note, and that's the way it's pitched — as a kind of rousing, gospel testimony. And the witnesses here are like born-again zealots, spreading the holy word. This is a movie about true believers, and if beforehand you're not a member of their church, by the end you'll be raring to join up.

The tent-revival soulfulness of the film's opening moments is sustained throughout its entire length. Combine this with loopy comedy and you've got a great mix. The people that writer-director Ron Shelton has created are the richest, looniest, most cherishable characters to appear in a movie in ages. They're built out of real sinew and bone, and they look substantial up there on the screen, as if they've lived and learned, and will go on living and learning after the movie is over.

The heart and soul of the film is a part-time community college English teacher and full-time hardball devotee named Annie (Susan Sarandon). The movie's opening monologue is Annie's, and not only does it function as a statement of her personal principles, it also defines the film's areas of exploration — baseball, sex and the ontological mysteries of the universe. Seen unsympathetically, Annie might seem to be the sort of woman who hangs around ballparks looking to make conquests — a mere baseball groupie. But for Annie, baseball is a governing metaphor, and it's through her eyes and her pagan devotion to the game that we see the film's events.

Every year Annie selects the hottest-looking prospect and takes him as her lover for that season. Her pick for the current year is a fireballin' flake named Ebby Calvin LaLoosh (Tim Robbins), a still-wet-behind-the-ears bonus baby with "a million-dollar arm and a five-cent head" who's been sent to the hometown Durham Bulls for a little seasoning. Actually, more than a little seasoning is needed because Ebby Calvin's heaters are as likely to hit the team mascot, or go sailing into the broadcast booth, as they are to find the strike zone. And to help mature this green talent, the team organization brings in Crash Davis (Kevin Costner), a catcher near the end of his career, to work the kid into shape for "the show," the movie's slang for the majors.

As Annie sees it, this is pretty much her role, too, though her education focuses less on the youngster's baseball skills than on such aspects of life wisdom as bondage, Walt "Limpid Jets of Love" Whitman and the breathing habits of the South American lava lizard. And so while Crash teaches him everything from how to throw a breaking ball to how to give an interview, Annie has him wear a garter belt under his uniform to reorient his head and get him pitching out of the proper hemisphere of his brain.

Shelton keeps shifting the relationships among these three characters, giving first one and then another the upper hand. And his script takes us deep inside their heads. This is Shelton's first film as a director (he wrote "Under Fire" and "The Best of Times"), and at times his staging of scenes is awkward, but he's a fully developed scenarist with a wonderfully organic sense of comedy. And the strength of the writing, plus his assurance with his characters, carries us over any rough spots.

What "Bull Durham" plunges us deep into is the sentimental notion, dearly held by die-hard fans, that baseball is more than a mere game; that it is profound, metaphysical, paradigmatic.

But "Bull Durham" is neither turgid nor worshipful. The film has the virtues that Annie says a good hitter must have — it's concentrated and relaxed.

Movies that take an inflated view of baseball usually have no feel for the everyday details of the game, for what it's like to be in the locker room or the dugout and smell the dirt and the liniment and the tobacco juice. "Bull Durham" sees the game in its larger dimensions without losing those details.

But as smart as "Bull Durham" is about baseball, it's even smarter about people. And when we watch Crash effortlessly unsnap the catch in Annie's garter — the catch that Nuke fumbled over earlier — we see that in a sense, the movie is a celebration of experience over raw youth. What it tells us is that though youth and talent are valued, there are greater glories in age.

Magic Valley films run comedy, drama gamut

The following are capsule reviews of some of the films playing locally in the Magic Valley. The ratings are by the Motion Picture Association of America and opinions are by Los Angeles Times reviewers.

A FISH CALLED WANDA (R). Poor, sweet Archie (John Cleese) begins as a proper, neglected British paterfamilias and wakes up, under Wanda's (Jamie Lee Curtis) spell, to find himself a man besotted, borrowing apartments for afternoon liaisons and waltzing about starkers, to Wanda's bemusement. Low comedy at high speed, it pretends to be a caper movie about a smooth London jewel heist and its infinitely complex aftermath. Actually, it is a smart farce about ingrained cultural differences, playing the clenched respectability of the Brits against the hearty spontaneity, some might call it vulgarity, of the Yanks. Equally splendid performances by co-stars Kevin Kline and Michael Palin.

THE BLOB (R). An insatiable glob of seemingly extraterrestrial gook slithers around a small ski town — populated with the usual assortment of sex-mad teen-agers, incredulous police and stereotyped provincial boobs — finally driving the heroine to the sewers and anti-hero to last-minute nobility. The 1958 "Blob" has an undeserved reputation as a horror classic; this one improves on it, somewhat, by adding a subversive political subtext and outlandishly graphic special effects, though the disembowelings and ingestions, mostly played for laughs, get juvenile and unpleasant.

COMING TO AMERICA (R). As a 21-year-old princeling of Zamunda, a mythical African kingdom, Murphy reins in his scatology, making do with a soupcon of bathroom humor. John Landis, directing from Murphy's original story, has created a plentiful waste of time and money. Also stars Arsenio Hall, John Amos and James Earl Jones.

THE DEAD POOL (R). Nobody squints like Clint, and in this fifth of the Eastwood "Dirty Harry" series, our man once again squints up a storm, descending gingerly into another cesspool of urban slime and .44 magnum sexuality — along with a cult horror director (Liam Neeson), whose betting pool on celebrity deaths backfires bloodily. Eastwood is good as always — full of coiled tension and wry, whispering irony — but the movie has an overly stylized media-fable script and nearly styleless direction by Malpaso's second-unit specialist, Buddy Van Horn. Predictably, only the action scenes come alive: especially one tongue-in-cheek toy-car parody of the chase in "Bullitt."

LICENSE TO DRIVE (PG-13). In their theatrical feature debuts writer Neil Tolkin and director Greg Bee-man get as carried away as their young hero (Corey Haim) who has just failed his driver's license exam but cannot resist borrowing his grandfather's vintage Caddie for an unexpected date with the most beautiful girl (Heather Graham) in school. Hairbreadth predicaments ensue, but the film's makers forget to bring impressionable young audiences down to earth in regard to legal and safe driving. Lots of fun, however, along the way. With Corey Feldman, Carol Kane, Richard Masur.

Twin Falls woman wins first KEZJ contest; advances to state

TWIN FALLS — Suzanne Croner of Twin Falls, was winner of the first annual KEZJ/True Value Country Showdown and Good Times Jamboree held last Sunday in the City Park.

Croner now advances to the state finals Oct. 15 at the Shilo Inn in Idaho Falls. She also won studio time at Glenn Nelson's recording studio in Twin Falls.

Second place winner Mike Copenbarger of Elko, Nev. also will participate in the state finals and received studio time at Pro-Tec in Hagerman.

Tying for third place was Amy Stukenholtz, of Twin Falls and the group, Dry Creek, also of Twin Falls.

The state winner will receive a $1,000 cash prize and advance to one of six regional competitions offering $5,000 in prizes and opportunity to compete in the national finals.

This year's event produced a record crowd.

Library offers free kids' puppet shows

By DENISE TURNER
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — The curtain opens, the lights dim and the children's eyes grow bright. From the beginning, it is easy to see that the Twin Falls Public Library's presentation of "The Emperor's New Clothes" is a show of a different sort.

The show is still in the rehearsal stage, with practice shows now being presented to children involved in the library's summer reading program. But on Wednesday at 3 and 7 p.m. the public will be treated to this unique form of entertainment known as a shadow puppet show.

Ellen Neff, assistant children's librarian, has been working with five junior high school students who will present the shadow puppet show in the children's department of the library. She estimates the group has put in about 20 hours of work making puppets and sets and rehearsing the play.

"In a shadow puppet show, there is a light behind the stage that casts shadows of the characters onto a translucent screen," says Neff, who explained that this form of entertainment is an Eastern art that has been popular in China for more than 1,000 years.

During the local performance directed by Neff, there will be recorded music, and the puppeteers will also sing. The puppets they have made are fashioned of lightweight painted cardboard and are set onto long sticks and crafted so that their arms and legs can be moved. Objects used in the set, such as chairs and tables, are secured onto large pieces of plastic that can be placed across the puppet stage so that characters can interact behind them.

"There are some simple shadow puppet shows that little children can do," says Neff, "but this is an advanced program for which the participants need good manual and auditory dexterity."

The young people who are involved in the show are Tali Kienzle, Lori Wheeler, Erika Neff, Amanda Stoker and John Roice.

There are nine characters in this particular adaptation of "The Emperor's New Clothes," which is an updated version of Hans Christian Andersen's story as published in "The Shadow Puppet Book" by Janet Lynch-Watson. Each of the young people involved in the play will be handling more than one role.

The students taking part in the production have volunteered their time and talent just because they enjoy doing this sort of thing, Neff says. She adds that she herself has had no specialized training in shadow puppetry beyond studying and reading about it on her own.

Neff expects to host a large audience on puppet show day. The children who have been enrolled in the library summer reading program have been invited to attend the performances, and we have had about 175 children participate in the program this year, she says.

Those who wish to attend either of the one-half hour performances must obtain free tickets from the children's department of the library. There is limited seating available, so tickets will be distributed until they are gone.

SUN VALLEY — The 20th annual Sun Valley Arts and Craft Festival gets underway today with 112 craftsmen and artists from all over the United States.

This year's festival, sponsored by the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities, is located on the Sun Valley soccer field, northeast from the Lodge and adjacent to the SV Opera House.

Applications from hundreds of artists wishing to display and sell their original works were individually juried to ensure new and imaginative work for the festival, said visual arts director Roberta Heinrich of the Sun Valley Center. Current works in basketry, ceramics, fiber, glass, jewelry, leather, metal, paper, textiles, wood, photography and mixed media will be displayed.

The arts and craft festival will also feature local and out-of-town entertainers performing on a stage located at the northwest end of the soccer field.

Entertainment begins at noon with Margaret Fogwell's students performing Broadway-inspired Musical Theater. The Old Time Fiddlers will follow. Saturday at noon a 10-piece German band will perform.

Audiences will also enjoy "Best Friends," a vaudevillian variety show combining juggling, comedy, puppetry, song and dance. Tak Duke, Shirl McBride, Freddy Flamingo, Melvin Magician, Nickey Mouse and other assorted creatures will entertain both Saturday and Sunday.

With its 20th showing, the summer art festival has become a tradition at the resort.

The festival is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. today through Sunday. Admission is free.

Bush follows other former athletes into Republican Party nomination

By George Robinson

When Vice President George Bush was a first baseman for the Yale varsity team, it is reputed that pro scouts discounted him as a prospect because he lacked power. That sounds like a perfect description of the vice presidency itself. When Bush is nominated as the Republican Party's candidate for president at its convention in New Orleans (airing Monday through Thursday, Aug. 15-18 on the major networks), the ex baseballer will follow a long-standing Republican tradition. Like most recent Republican candidates for national office, he is a former athlete.

It seems to have started with Dwight D. Eisenhower (Republican nominee 1952, 1956; president 1953-61). Eisenhower played football at West Point until he incurred a knee injury in his sophomore year. He later became better known as a golfer, and his affection for the game had much to do with its rapid rise in popularity in the 1950s. He had a sense of humor about his play, noting that after he left the White House, "a lot more people beat me."

Richard Nixon (Republican nominee 1960, 1968, 1972; president 1969-74) also played football in college. At Whittier, Nixon was a benchwarmer who saw his most extended action in practice. His coach, Chief Newman, told columnist Garry Wills, "He used to take an awful lacing in scrimmage. He was tenacious as the dickens." That doggedness would stand Nixon in good stead through his checkered career. Nixon also has tried his hand at golf. Indeed, in his recent autobiography, Sam Snead alleged that when they played together he saw Nixon cheat to win a bet worth about $10.

Barry Goldwater (Republican nominee 1964) was an outdoorsman and a pilot in his younger days, but like many other Republicans he eventually made his way to the golf course. Indeed, he set the standard for another GOP candidate when, at the 1965 Phoenix Open pro-am, his drive beamed a spectator about 30 yards from the tee. "He was standing too close to my ball," Goldwater quipped.

The golf game of Gerald Ford (Republican nominee 1976; president 1974-77) more than equaled Goldwater's, and his repeated beanings of spectators contributed to the unfortunate image of Ford as klutz. He found himself the butt of one-liners from friend and foe alike, with Bob Hope observing, "President Ford waits until he hits his first drive to know what course he's playing that day." Lost in all the humor is the fact that Ford was an all-American center when he played football at Michigan. It's hard to imagine that anyone who excelled at this difficult position could really be a klutz.

Ronald Reagan (Republican nominee 1980, 1984; president 1981-present) clearly had high standards of athletic competence to live up to when he aspired to the White House. Reagan was a not particularly distinguished member of the Eureka College football team. But he has had a long association with sports in other capacities. The president did radio re-creations of Chicago Cubs games in the 1930s, and during his film career, Reagan played George Gipp, the famed Notre Dame running back, in "Knute Rockne All-American." More recently, Reagan has revealed himself to be an excellent horseman and an enthusiastic chopper of wood. The last is only appropriate for a man whose party first sent a rail splitter named Abraham Lincoln to the White House.

On The Cover: George Bush, the certain nominee of the Republican National Convention, has one thing in common with all recent Republican nominees. The Republican Convention meets Monday through Thursday, Aug. 15-18, and all three major networks, as well as cable's CNN and C-Span, will be offering prime-time coverage.

Crystal works triple duty on movie

Q. Billy Crystal is the star, producer and cowriter of the new movie, "Memories of Me." How did he keep all his different duties straight? — R.A.

A. Crystal admits that wearing three hats on one film had its difficulties. He says, "As a writer, I run the risk of not seeing my version the way I created it; as an actor, I think I'm letting down the writer; and, as producer, I don't have enough money to shoot it again."

Q. Did Elton John secretly record a song about AIDS? Why so hush-hush? — H.V.

BILLY CRYSTAL
Wears three hats

A. Nothing secretive about Elton. With his voice back intact after an operation, John is ready to belt away. I caught him recently playing a Hollywood benefit with his new eight-man band. Elton previewed his latest ballad — "Love Is Worth Waiting For" — a tune whose lyrics caution teenagers about "the dangerous game of sex." With Madonna, he plans to record this warning about AIDS soon.

Q. We saw "Tucker" recently and wondered if anyone in the movie actually owned one of those great cars that Preston Tucker created. — F.L.

A. The film's director, Francis Ford Coppola, and George Lucas, the executive producer, are both passionate fans of the Tucker Torpedo, which was built in the '40s. They each own two of them which originally cost $2,450 and today are virtually priceless.

FAN FRIGHT — Seems hard to believe, but heavyweight champ Mike Tyson can be shaken up just like the rest of us. Iron Mike came into Patsy's, a well-known Manhattan restaurant, recently and announced, "On my way over here a man stopped me. When he reached inside his coat I just about died. I thought he was going for a gun, but all he wanted was my autograph."

Q. We hear that Bruce Springsteen's wife is so distraught by the breakup of their marriage that she's gone into seclusion. — M.R.

A. Hardly. Mrs. Springsteen, Julianne Phillips, is currently on display in Hollywood making two movies, something called "Skin Deep," from director Blake Edwards, and "Fletch II," a comedy with Chevy Chase. Her "Skin" leading man, John Ritter, remarked that he and the crew members noted not an ounce of sadness due to the split from Springsteen. If anything, Phillips is drawing attention as, in the words of one normally blase Hollywood observer, "a breathtaking beautiful" actress. Looking good is often the best revenge.

Q. What famous Hollywood actor actually ate a cockroach to add a bizarre touch to a horror movie? Can you tell who that would be? — R.R.

A. That's Nicolas Cage, who played Cher's boyfriend in the hit film, "Moonstruck." Cage believes in pushing the method school of acting which incorporates reality and illusion. In his new movie, "Vampire Kiss," Cage eats a cockroach — not a fake but a real New York cockroach. It was his own idea, too. As the Italians say, bono appetito.

Q. Any truth to varied reports that Steve McQueen was fascinated by spiritualism and the occult? — N.R.

A. It's so — absolutely. Friends are well aware that Steve was heavily into metaphysics and would oftimes disappear into the desert on his motorcycle to meet groups with similar bents. Plus, he secretly considered himself a warlock, the male equivalent of a witch, and was deeply into literature on sorcery, the black arts, etc.

Q. We've heard there are still plots to hurt the Pope. How good is Vatican security? — M.C.

A. Very good if the following is any indication: actor Michael Carmine took a day off from starring in MGM's underwater thriller, "Leviathan," filming in Rome, to attend mass at the Vatican. Security guards searched for weapons among the flowers Carmine had brought for the Pope.

Q. With his seemingly unbreakable string of flops, isn't the movie career of Burt Reynolds just about over? — L.M.

A. After a dismal run of boxoffice failures, Burt costarred with Kathleen Turner in a comedy about TV news, "Switching Channels." The flick, unfortunately, was released at roughly the same time as the more popular "Broadcast News." The result: another Reynolds misstart. The offers somehow keep coming, though, and never-say-die Reynolds is currently working on "Breakin' In," which will break in a new Reynolds leading lady, actress Sheila King.

Q. We're always reading interviews with the offspring of famous actors saying how having a famous parent hindered their careers. This seems so silly. Aren't there any who level and admit that a celeb mom or dad couldn't hurt? — D.P.

A. Danny Huston, the son of the late John Huston, the legendary director, says, "Those people are full of malarkey." Danny, the 26-year-old director of "Mr. North," a fable of the high life in Newport, R.I., during the 1920s, adds, "So many kids of well-known parents in our industry try to claim that their heritage is a handicap. This hokum may make good interview copy, but I'm grateful for my privileged background and make full use of all the perks that can come with the territory."

Girl-watching during high school changed soap opera star's life

By JOHN N. GOUDAS

When Benjamin Hendrickson (Hal Munson in "As the World Turns") was 16 and still in high school in Huntington, N.Y., he followed a girl into a meeting of the dramatic club. That simple act of flirtation changed his life.

Benjamin was cast in a play and found that he liked strutting on the stage. He wondered out loud if he could really make it as an actor. As fate would have it, Benjamin's mother went to a lecture where she learned about the newly created Juilliard Drama School and picked up a brochure. Benjamin was invited to audition for the school, and to his and his mother's surprise and delight, he became one of the members of the charter class of the now famous acting school. His classmates included Kevin Kline, Robin Williams, Patti Lupone and Ken Marshall, among others.

"I didn't know at the time just how lucky I was. What lay ahead for me was four years of intense theatrical training and another four years of employment as an actor with the company. During this time, I never had to work as a busboy or shoe salesman. I functioned as an actor."

Benjamin worked with some of the best regional theaters in the country, including the prestigious Globe Theatre in San Diego, playing a variety of roles, ranging from Shakespeare to Pinter.

In his Broadway debut, he replaced David Bowie in the title role in "The Elephant Man," playing the part while at the same time appearing in the now defunct soap, "Texas."

"I don't think I'll ever spread myself that thin again. I would work all day on the soap and rush to the theater at night for the play. You can't help but become compromised on both ends."

These days, Benjamin is hot playing Hal in "As the World Turns." Hal doesn't know it, but his police-partner and onetime lover, Margo, is carrying his child. He recently married Barbara, who was tried for the murder of her ex-husband.

Hillary Bailey-Smith, the wonderful actress who played Margo until recently, had such rapport with Benjamin that the directors would let the pair play their scenes in their own way. The actors would often inject a sense of humor that wasn't indicated by the lines and their scenes were often among the best on the show. Audiences picked up on this, and it was just a matter of time before all that kidding around would take a turn for the bedroom.

"Hillary left the show to have a baby in real life and wants to stay home and be a mother and wife. However, she really loves acting and maybe, just maybe, she'll be back in the future. In any case, I'll miss her very much."

When Benjamin first came on the soap, he was perceived less as a romantic leading man than as a character actor. These days, however, Hal Munson is as much a lover as he is a policeman and the fans are loving it.

Soap fans who tune in the Republican National Convention on August 16 may be surprised to see Delila Garretson singing "The Star-Spangled Banner." Shelly Burch, who plays Delila on "One Life to Live," will be leading the delegates in New Orleans in the singing of the national anthem. She also performed the anthem at the 1980 and 1984 Conventions in Detroit and Dallas. Shelly has enjoyed this honor because of the prominence of her father, Dean Burch, a former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission and of the Republican National Committee. No stranger to politics, Shelly grew up among such family friends as George Bush and Senator Barry Goldwater.

CBS resurrects past

By JAMES ENDRST
The Hartford Courant

HOLLYWOOD — It has been more than 20 years since Mary Tyler Moore and Dick Van Dyke starred in CBS' situation comedy classic "The Dick Van Dyke Show." And it has been more than a decade since "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" went off the air.

Still, it was no accident when CBS decided to put Moore and Van Dyke's latest sitcom endeavors in back-to-back time slots Wednesday nights this coming season.

They know we cannot forget Rob and Laura Petrie and their idyllic TV lives in the suburbs or, later, Moore as Mary Richards, TV's model single-girl in the '70s.

But what about Dick and Mary?

They both seemed politely tolerant of TV matchmaking talk foisted on them by TV critics attending the fall press tour here.

Unfortunately, they wanted to get on with their TV lives. Van Dyke wanted to talk about "The Van Dyke Show," a half-hour show in which he plays Terry Burgess, a retired stage and screen star who works with his son (played by Van Dyke's son Barry) to save a community theater. And Moore wanted to talk about her as-yet-untitled project that follows Van Dyke's show. She is cast as Annie Block, a divorced mother who works in the Manhattan borough president's office.

But the talk at the press tour always came back to Mary Richards and Rob Petrie.

"It's difficult to live up to Mary Richards," sighed Moore, obviously having spent some time over the years thinking about it. "I met somebody the other day, a woman who said, 'God, I used to watch that show and wish that I could be Mary Richards.' And I said, 'Me, too.'"

NBC to premiere shows anyway

Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — In spite of delays precipitated by the Writers Guild of America strike, NBC will premiere 13 of its fall prime-time series the week of Oct. 3 and five more by the end of that month, NBC entertainment chief Brandon Tartikoff said Monday.

But NBC's Tuesday-night series lineup, which includes "Matlock," "In the Heat of the Night" and the new "Midnight Caller," will be delayed until the last week of November, he said, although not because of the 154-day strike. Rather, Tartikoff said, those shows will be postponed to avoid competition with ABC's "War and Remembrance" miniseries in mid-November.

Tartikoff, the last of the three network entertainment division presidents to face journalists who cover television as part of the TV industry's semi-annual press tour here, disputed earlier news reports that suggested the writers' dispute would cost NBC the opportunity to promote its new programming during its Summer Olympic broadcasts in September — one of the chief reasons the network purchased rights to the Games. Thanks to the strike having ended Sunday, that will not be true now, he said.

"I think we're in very good shape vis-a-vis the strike and in terms of the Olympics," Tartikoff said, adding that NBC has "23 series going on within four weeks of the Olympics" that could easily be promoted during the two weeks of programming from Seoul.

NBC is also well-prepared to compete with "War and Remembrance" during the November ratings "sweeps" with youth-oriented theatrical movies and the 4-hour miniseries "Goddess of Love," starring "Wheel of Fortune" alphabet queen Vanna White, he said.

Calling "War and Remembrance" a "very big book," Tartikoff joked that NBC would instead offer the viewers "nice little books with very big print — and I would say 'Goddess of Love' was the biggest print we could find."

Tartikoff said that NBC will be able to get its new season underway earlier than the other networks — which have predicted season start dates of late October and early November — because NBC prepared for the strike in advance.

Aside from the series that went into production during the strike under interim contracts with the writers guild — "ALF," "Highway to Heaven," "The Cosby Show," "A Different World" and "Amen" — NBC will benefit because there were extra scripts left over from last season to start up this season's production on "L.A. Law," "Miami Vice" and "Hunter," he said.

NBC's new drama "Tattinger's" also has several scripts that were near completion when the strike hit, he said.

to Silence" for Fries Entertainment, to be aired next season. In it, the hearing-impaired actress will speak on film for the first time.

Q. Isn't Marlon Brando's son also an actor? — P.H.

A. Yes, and like his dad, who is starring in "A Dry, White Season," Christian Brando will star in a remake of "La Dolce Vita" in Rome. Christian is also like his famous father when it comes to the women — and, alas, the plumpness.

Q. I hear that Jonathan Winters is as good an artist as he is a comedian. Is this true? — B.T.

A. You'll find out soon. Winters will feature his artwork in his soon-due book, "Hang-Ups," and, in the foreword, fellow artist Dong Kingman says, "To understand his funny stories, one must also see him as a painter and analyze his artwork."

Q. I like classical music and loved the movie "Amadeus." Are there going to be any other films about great composers? — V.W.

A. So many, in fact, that it could be considered a hot trend: "Toscanini," "Puganini," "Beethoven," "Final Movement" (based on the life of Anton Dvorak) and Zupnik Pics' "Puccini" should all be released in the near future.

Q. We can't believe that the career of sexy and athletic Patrick Swayze is about to end because of serious health problems. What's the matter with the "Dirty Dancing" star? — O.P.

A. Swayze is faced with a physical problem, though not quite that serious. Patrick's nursing a left knee injury and has to have a chiropractor on movie sets to keep things moving. A former ballet dancer, Swayze loosens up by practicing karate moves. He faces, nonetheless, knee surgery in the not-too-distant future, sidelining him for as much as a year. In the meantime, he's finishing a movie titled "Road House" before he goes in for the operation.

Q. Isn't it true that Bill Murray turned down an offer to make a "Ghostbusters" sequel because it didn't pay enough? — J.I.

A. A sequel to the 1984 smash hit comedy about a ghost-seeking trio of "paranormal" investigators has had a tough time getting off the ground. One problem was that Murray clashed with a studio head who suggested he was too greedy. Hollywood insiders say "Ghostbusters II" has finally gotten the green light because Bill and costar Dan Aykroyd agreed to forgo salaries in return for a much larger percentage of the hoped-for profits.

Q. We all know that Jackie Mason is Jewish, but is he really a rabbi? — U.P.

A. Jackie did become a rabbi ("mostly to please my father") but got out of it. There's a distinction in Judaism between a rabbi, who is a spiritual leader of a congregation, and a cantor, who sings or chants prayers during the service. Mason is a cantor.

Q. Isn't actor James Garner in the midst of some serious health problems? — A.R.

A. The short answer is, yes. Jim, 60, underwent heart bypass surgery earlier this year. Then in July he had more surgery for a heart-related aneurism. The prognosis is good, however, and Jim is now back home recovering.

'60 Minutes' #1, but NBC tops week

NEW YORK (AP) — Old news was good news for CBS as a rerun of "60 Minutes" topped the week's A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings.

But it was mostly the same old news for the week ending Aug. 7 — NBC won the week, making it 40-of-46 this season, and NBC won the July sweeps to go 13-for-14 in those important ratings months.

"60 Minutes," a consistent top 10 show, made it to No. 1 on Sunday with reports on Disney studio chief Michael Eisner, an interview with Billionaire Boys Club founder and convicted murderer Joe Hunt and a report on Brazilian men getting away with murdering their wives.

The rest of the top 10 included "Golden Girls," "Cheers" and a fourth-place tie between "Different World" and "His Mistress," all on NBC; "A Case of Deadly Force" on CBS; a three-way tie among "The Cosby Show" and "Night Court," both of NBC, and CBS' "Murder, She Wrote"; and "ALF" on NBC.

NBC won the week with an average rating of 10.7 and an average share of 21 percent of the viewing audience, followed by CBS with 10.2 and a 20 share and ABC with 8.6 and a 17 share.

Each rating point represents 886,000 homes with television.

For the July sweeps period, NBC averaged 11.2; followed by CBS at 9.1 and ABC at 9.0. Ratings in sweeps months, which are often sweetened by special programming, are used to determine advertising rates.

For the 46 weeks of this season, NBC's average rating is 14.8, followed by CBS at 12.5 and ABC at 12.4.

CBS won the evening news ratings with a 9.0 for the week, while ABC and NBC tied at 8.6.

Idaho PBS to produce 13-part history series

TWIN FALLS – The Idaho Public Broadcasting System is producing a series on Idaho history for showing during the Centennial in 1990.

The series will be called "Proceeding on Through a Beautiful Country," after a diary entry made in 1805 by Capt. William Clark as his expedition descended toward the Camas Prairie. It will be hosted by Drich Bowler of Bliss, founder of the Antique Festival Theater, which toured Idaho from 1964 to 1971, presenting classical theater.

"Far from a dry review of dates and names, the series will use the immense power of television to bring the past to life, help viewers to understand their heritage, and guide present and future decisions," says a PBS press releases.

The program will consist of 13 one-hour segments on topics including Idaho's prehistory, geology, outdoors, water, Indians, religion, arts, prominent citizens, and contributions to the nation and the world.

Because of the state's relative youth, it is still possible to interview many of the its past leaders and founding families. The project's creators promise evenings of "history by the people who made it".

Citing the dearth of resources available to teachers of Idaho history, the Idaho Educational Public Broadcasting system has also announced plans to re-edit the series into 20-minute sections suitable for fourth grade use.
