Crews carve fire break between Inkom, flames

By The Associated Press
Crews carved a break between the raging 2,600-acre Walker Creek fire and the town of Inkom Friday as air tankers rained retardant on the flaming flank of the blaze just south of the southeastern Idaho town.
"The problem with this fire is not the resource loss but the big-time homes all over," Caribou National Forest spokesman Frank Carroll said. The fire acreage had been revised from 1,000 to about 2,600 Friday night.
Flames whipped by 60 mph-an-hour gusts swept over thousands of acres of drought-dried sage, grass and groves of trees Thursday, forcing the evacuation of 20 rural homes in the Indian Creek area of the town south of Pocatello, Carroll said.
Up to a quarter-inch of rain dampened the fire Friday afternoon, he said.
"It was very significant in putting it down so we could work on it," Carroll said. But, "We have no estimate of containment or control. Fuels can change in a few hours from wet to dry."
The Indian Creek families were allowed to return to their homes, "with the understanding they may have to run out again if we get some wind," Carroll said. No structures were lost and no injuries reported.
Elsewhere across the state, strategists dispatched dwindling manpower to dozens of new fires sparked by lightning-loaded thunderstorms, bracing for what forecasters said could be another round of dry lightning Friday evening.
Land managers issued a "red flag" warning of extreme fire danger as the number of lightning-sparked blazes climbed from 75 to more than 100 Friday.
The storm sparked 16 new fires in central Idaho's Challis National Forest, whose crews continued to carve a buffer line between the 13,300-acre Battelove wilderness fire and a guard station and private airstrip about a mile to the south.
"We had 21 pins on the board last night, but some of those were double sightings," forest spokesman Jim James said.
More than 20 firefighters were transported to the small blazes via helicopter and had held the fires to about five acres.
The forest anticipated a manpower shortage on the short term, but expected to have enough firefighters if any of the spot fires made a run, he said.

Delegates from Idaho back Bush

The Associated Press
BOISE — Idaho's 22 white, middle-class delegates to the Republican National Convention in New Orleans agree on just about everything including why they think George Bush should be the next president.
"I think he's probably the most qualified person we've ever had run for the job," said homemaker Donna Brizez, a delegate from Twin Falls.
The good news, at least for Bush, is that Democrat Michael Dukakis also is seen by many of his party's delegates as a fairly colorless presidential nominee, although his acceptance speech at last month's Democratic National Convention caused some of those concerns.
After the busy days of Ronald Reagan — perhaps the ultimate media candidate — the prospect of trying to get the Republican troops fired up for Bush even against Dukakis stirs something less than enthusiasm in many GOP faithful.
"He is, after all, the man Ar-

'Temptation' opens as uproar persists

The Associated Press
LOS ANGELES — The Last Temptation of Christ opened in nine cities Friday amid tight security that included guards standing as sentries alongside movie screens and theater patrons being searched as they walked to the movies.
"Thousands of Christians furiously objected to the film, saying it depicts Jesus as filled with doubts and lust, while some critics praised it as a masterpiece."
Filmmakers snaked around the thousands for the first showings, vastly outnumbering the protesters who turned out in several cities.
Uniformed security guards checked purses and bags of movie patrons in New York, Los Angeles and Toronto, and demonstrators gathered in the streets in San Francisco and Chicago.
"Although a demonstration by 26,000 Christians in Los Angeles was peaceful and well-attended, it was not without some disruption," said a spokesman for the movie.
"The Last Temptation of Christ," Lindsay said in a statement, "is not the Savior of the World. Having experienced the lifting of his spirit, we encourage all people to truly seek the Savior and the eternal truths he taught, and to shun those things that detract from the dignity and spirit of his divine mission," he said.

LDS Church joins in condemning film

The Associated Press
SALT LAKE CITY — The Mormon Church Friday joined other conservative religious denominations in condemning the film, "The Last Temptation of Christ."
Richard Lindsay, spokesman for the 6.4-million-member church, said the movie "is not the story of Jesus-Christ, the Only Begotten Son of God, who lived in Galilee and on Calvary took upon himself the sins of the world and rose from death with the promise of redemption for all."
"In our view this film trivializes the message and indignity of Jesus-Christ," Lindsay said in a statement. "We abhor the irreverent portrayal of Jesus-Christ in intimate sexual scenes and as a voyeur. Men and women are left poorer by exposure to the stereotypes the movie portrays."
Lindsay said Mormons revere Christ as "the Son of God, the Savior of the World."
Having experienced the lifting of his spirit, we encourage all people to truly seek the Savior and the eternal truths he taught, and to shun those things that detract from the dignity and spirit of his divine mission," he said.

Meese signs order for prosecutors to investigate members of Congress

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Edwin Meese III, whose 3-year tenure as attorney general was marred by an independent counsel's probe of his affairs, as his final act Friday signed an order for similar special prosecutors to investigate members of Congress suspected of criminal conduct.
Meese said he acted on his last day as head of the Justice Department to ensure that legislators and top executive branch officials be treated equally under the law.
Having all high officials covered by the same general procedures makes good sense," he told reporters. "Since Meese came to Washington in 1981 as counselor to President Reagan, two separate independent counsels have scrutinized his financial dealings."
Meese said the order means that senators and House members will be treated similarly to the top executive branch officials covered by the Ethics In Government Act of 1978.
Asked if this act was a parting shot at his critics in Congress, Meese replied: "No, not at all." No one currently under investigation will be subject to the order's provisions, he said.
Meese said his authority to impose the rule derived from the attorney general's power to appoint special prosecutors, as was done in the Watergate scandal.
He said he wanted to sign the order until his successor, former Pennsylvania Gov. Richard Thornburgh, was approved by the Senate on Thursday so as not to cause "through any problems at his confirmation hearings."
Meese said he discussed the regulation with Thornburgh, and "I believe he agrees with it." Thornburgh, who was sworn in at the White House on Friday, could rescind the rule at any time.
Under Meese's order, if the attorney general receives specific and credible information indicating that a senator or congressman has violated criminal law, he must launch a preliminary investigation of up to 90 days to see whether a special counsel should be named to conduct a full probe.
Based on the results of the preliminary probe, the attorney general can either close the case or appoint an independent counsel to investigate.
A Justice Department official speaking on condition he not be named, said the order would require Meese to follow these procedures if allegations were made against a legislator. "But Meese said if the legislator was the subject of a related criminal probe, that could take precedence."
Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., chairman of a House Judiciary subcommittee that reviews the ethics law, said Meese's order was unnecessary because the act already allows the attorney general to call for a special prosecutor.

Wholesale price rise intensifies concerns over inflation

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Wholesale prices rose at a brisk annual rate of 5.7 percent in July despite smaller increases for food, the government said Friday in a report that intensified already deepening concerns about inflation.
The Labor Department said its Producer Price Index, which tracks prices for finished products and stop before the retail level, rose 0.5 percent last month, compared with a 0.4 percent increase in June.
But what alarmed analysts most about the July report was that, unlike previous months, the biggest increases were not in the normally highly volatile food and energy sectors but across a wide spectrum of consumer and capital goods.
Drugs, men's clothing, tires, sports commodities, home electronic equipment, glassware, tobacco products and construction equipment all rose at annualized inflation rates in the double digits.
In the past two months alone, auto prices have climbed more than 1.5 percent, close to double digits if annualized.
"These prices will slow down, but something else will pick up the slack," said Donald Ratzczak, director of economic forecasts at Georgia State University. "The price inflation is kicking around."
Ratzczak said the August figures, when they came out next month, will look even worse: He predicted a monthly increase of 0.5 percent or annual rate exceeding 7 percent as energy prices rebound and the impact of the Farm Belt drought wends its way through the food production process.
Consumer food prices on the whole have levelled off since the summer. The price decline was led by falling meat costs as drought-plagued farmers and ranchers rubbed their herds to slaughter rather than continue feeding them high-cost grains.
The 0.4 percent gain compared with increases of 1.1 percent in June and 0.9 percent in May.
In July, beef prices dropped 2.5 percent, pork plummeted 10.5 percent and fish prices edged down 0.7 percent.
Prices for other food products affected by the drought, such as fruits and vegetables, were flat.

Bush, Dukakis trade charges; GOP wraps up work on platform

By The Associated Press

George Bush and Michael Dukakis swapped charges on the economy Friday while Republicans pressed a disagreement over Star Wars in completing a conservative platform—the vice president will take from next week's New Orleans convention into the fall campaign.

GOP chairman Frank Fahrenkopf said the platform reflected Bush's call for a "new direction" in some areas. Still, he added, "We're a conservative political party. We're proud of that. We're not afraid of the word."

But Leslie Dach, a top aide to Dukakis, said in Boston the Republicans had produced "a right-wing platform mired in the past."

Bush privately invited advisers to discuss topic No. 1 on the minds of Republicans—his choice of a running mate—but offered no public clue. In Illinois,

Gov. Jim Thompson announced he did not wish to be considered for the post.

"The vice president's job requires a lot of national and international travel," he said. "My wife couldn't travel with me because I've got a 10-year-old-in-school."

An ABC poll reported Bush and Dukakis in a statistical dead heat, with Bush at 49 percent support and Dukakis at 46, a margin smaller than the poll's six-point margin of error. Several other polls this week have reported Dukakis leading, although by less than in the days following the Democratic Convention.

Both Bush and Dukakis were pointing their efforts toward next week—the vice president by previewing the convention themes of peace and prosperity and his Democratic rival by airing the first television commercial of the fall campaign in Texas and California in a bid to take the sting out of an attack the GOP will launch against him from New Orleans.

Fahrenkopf urged Bush to make a dramatic announcement of his choice of a running mate Wednesday night after the convention bestows its presidential nomination. Bush has been saying he would wait until Thursday morning to announce his decision and would not tell "a soul" in advance.

Bush, campaigning in Washington, told Reagan administration loyalists he stands for "low taxes and high opportunity" for all and accused Democrats of favoring policies that would doom the economic recovery.

Fahrenkopf completing a five-state campaign sweep, fired back that Republican "borrowing and spending" caused this week's rise in interest rates.

Fires

In the Nez Perce National Forest, some 180 firefighters regained containment of the 2,000-acre Ruby Rapids fire after a lightning storm broke through the containment line.

A second lightning storm Friday brought the number of fires to 42 in the Nez Perce, said Mary Zabinski, forest information officer. Most of those were located outside wilderness.

"We're using all the tools at our disposal, including smoke jumpers, retardant drops, 'helict' helicopter-borne crews and firefighters on the ground when access was available, she said.

Crews finally controlled the stubborn 1,500-acre Spring Canyon fire in the Targhee National Forest near the Wyoming border Thursday night, and firefighters were hoping to begin demobilization this weekend.

"The real problem is the weather forecast is for a carbon copy of yesterday," said spokesman

Dave Olson at the Payette National Forest, where the Thursday storm ignited 25 new blazes. All were in the western end of the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness, where fire bosses were already monitoring two huge wildfires—the 12,000-acre Steep Cabin fire west of Chamberlain Basin and the 5,000-acre Silver Creek fire that had threatened the Root Ranch to the south.

A 20-man crew was brought back to the Root Ranch as a protective measure, Olson said, and over 40 smokejumpers and helict firefighters were dropped into the six worst of the new wilderness fires.

In some ways we're in a chess match with the weather," as fire strategists try to attack the new fires while holding some manpower in reserve against the possibility of a "fire bust" from another storm, Olson said.

Near the Utah border in the Burley District of the Bureau of Land Management, 200 firefighters supplied by air tankers dropping retardant, battled the 9,800-acre Metcalf range fire just west of Malad.

Crews succeeded in controlling the 1,500-acre Middle Mountain range fire and containing the 3,000-acre Badger blaze Friday, dispatcher Tracy Thompson said.

Those fires had already claimed an unknown number of cattle, and ranchers were told to move their herds off the range ahead of the fire.

The Boise National Forest reported four new fires Friday in addition to the nine discovered the day before a forest dispatcher said. Firefighters flown to the blazes had kept each to several acres.

Eight new fires were sparked on the Salmon National Forest to the north, and fire bosses had to leave one in the Church Wilderness unattended.

Today's weather

It doesn't read a bit differently

Cwin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding:
Sunny today and Sunday with a slight chance of afternoon and evening thunderstorms. Highs from 80 to 95. Lows from 50 to 65.

Camas Prairie and Wood River Valley:
Partly cloudy today and Sunday with a slight chance of afternoon and evening thunderstorms. Highs from 80 to 86. Lows in the 40s.

Northern Utah and Nevada:
Utah—Fair through Sunday. Highs in the upper 80s and low 90s. Lows in the upper 50s and low 60s. Breezy southwinds from 10 to 20 mph each day.

Nevada—Sunny today with a slight chance of thunderstorms in the far north. Fair tonight. Mostly sunny on Sunday. A little cooler with highs both days in the 70s. Overnight lows from lower 40s to lower 50s.

Summary:
The National Weather Service in Boise says a strong upper level disturbance moved into southern Idaho early Friday morning and spread extensive clouds and areas of showers with a few thunderstorms into all of southern and central Idaho except the far west.

The remainder of the state was under a light southwest flow of air from a low pressure area off the California coast that was spreading sufficiently moist unstable air into Idaho for afternoon and evening thunderstorms.

Even though the strong upper disturbance was to move into Montana Friday evening, the entire state will stay under the southwest flow of moist air for the next few days.

Skies at 11 a.m. were cloudy in all but the far west and the panhandle, where fair to partly cloudy skies exist.

Areas of light showers were reported Friday morning in eastern Idaho. The greatest amount reported was 2.2 inches at Swan Valley, northwest of Palisades Reservoir.

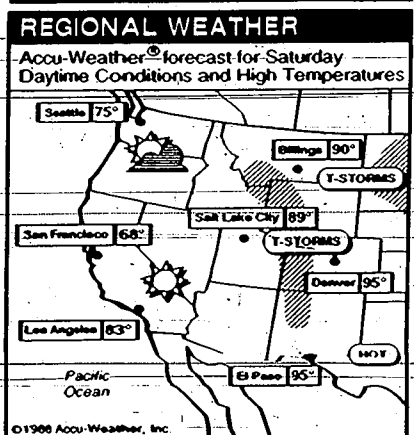

All other amounts were less than .10 inch. Morning showers moderated under the cloudy and showery, with 60s to mid 60s in the southern and central valleys, upper 40s and 50s in the panhandle and 40s in the mountains.

The coldest was 41 at Elk City, while the warmest low temperature was 67 degrees at Lewiston.

Wind to east winds from 10 to 15 mph were common in the east and north. Idaho Falls had a wind gust to 25 mph and Pocatello to 21 mph early Friday morning.

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 97 degrees at Emmet. Dendwood Lodge reported the coldest at 36 degrees.

The pollen count in Twin Falls Friday was 122 particles per cubic meter of air.

The extended forecast for Southern Idaho—Monday through Wednesday, chance of afternoon and evening thunderstorms Monday, decreasing Tuesday and Wednesday. Highs in the 80s to low 90s. Lows in the upper 40s and 50s.

A meteorological outlook for Southern Idaho shows conditions for field work and hayting will be good through Wednesday except for a few brief delays from thunderstorms through Monday. Evaporation rates will be a little above normal through Sunday and near or a little below normal Monday through Wednesday. Winds from prevailing daily will be south to west 5 to 12 miles an hour and Sunday 5 to 12 miles an hour and Sunday 5 to 45 mph near any thunderstorms.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 109 degrees at Bullhead City, Ariz. The lowest was 12 degrees at Gunnison, Colo.

officers monitored the crowds at the Century Plaza Theater and security guards checked purses and bags of movie patrons.

Police Cmdr. William Booth said no officers will be in the theater in Century City despite fears of slashed or spray-painted screens.

Vandals tossed balloons filled with paint at the Century City theater about 5 a.m., splattering it with yellow paint, said security guard Fabian Munoz. By noon, someone had spread glue on the floor in the women's rest room, said patron Jo Drott, 24.

Hours before the film was to open, a group of directors including Warren Beatty, James L. Brooks, Peter Bogdanovich, Michael Mann, Sydney Pollack and Walter Hill called a news conference to express support for the film's director, Martin Scorsese.

"We owe a debt of gratitude to this group of somewhat misguided zealots. The film now will be seen by a lot of curiosity-seekers," said John Badham, director of "Short Circuit" and "WarGames." "What is not terrifying is the effort to rewrite the Bill of Rights."

The Directors Guild of America was the latest group to enter the fray, which has spread from the studio lots to Congress to churches nationwide.

Protesters have decried the film as sacrilege, saying it portrays Christ as a deranged and lust-driven man, who while being crucified, dreams he marries and has sex with Mary Magdalene and lives his life as an ordinary man.

Cardinal Bernard Law, the Roman Catholic archbishop of Boston, urged Catholics to boycott the film, calling it "morally offensive and repugnant to Christian belief."

"It is inconceivable to me that a person of faith in Jesus Christ would go to this movie," Law wrote in the archdiocese newspaper. "One way to be heard is by not going. Another way is to write the producers."

But proponents say the film illustrates the central mystery of Christianity, showing it fully human Jesus wrestling with doubts and temptation, then rising above them to accept his role as God's son, willingly crucified so the rest of humanity may be forgiven its sin.

Wilem Dafoe, who portrays Jesus in the film, said he is baffled by protesters' complaints.

"I just think this is a beautiful, powerful, positive film. Some people that for the most part haven't seen it are coming out against it—this I don't understand," he said in an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" program.

zona Democrat Bruce Wabbits once said reminded every woman of her first husband.

"It's just a little bit harder for some candidates to project past the footlights," said state Sen. Ann Rydahl of Idaho Falls. "But Ronald Reagan is a tough act to follow. I'll just take some time for people to realize his [Bush's] qualifications."

By any standard, the vice president's choice of government service is impressive.

He was a congressman from Texas, chairman of the Republican National Committee, special envoy to the People's Republic of China, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, ambassador to the United Nations and the second-to-last finisher to Reagan in the 1980 Republican primaries.

A genealogical researcher also reported recently that Bush has the blood of royalty. He apparently is the 13th cousin, twice removed, of England's Queen Elizabeth.

Perhaps a more important qualification, in the eyes of some Idaho delegates, is his firm identification with the philosophical agenda set by Reagan over the past eight years, including minimal government, private initiative, low taxes, strong national defense and an emphasis on "family values."

Those concerns are reflected in the issues Idaho delegates said they considered the most important in the 1988 presidential campaign. Nearly half identified the budget deficit and runaway federal spending as the most crucial questions facing the next president. But they identified them as products of the Democratic Congress rather than the Reagan administration.

Other major issues cited by delegates included fending off what they are sure would be a Democratic build-down in the nation's defense posture, pressing the war on drugs and pursuing excellence in education. An scored Bush high on those issues.

One might expect little dissent within a group as homogeneous as the Idaho delegation. Unlike Idaho's Democratic Party, there are no black, Hispanic, Indian or other delegates. Within the GOP contingent, all the differences are in shades of white.

The delegation includes 12 women and 10 men with an average age of just over 49. There are 12 Catholics, three Mormons and eight other Christian religions represented.

Six delegates operate their own business, seven are professionals, three are homemakers and one is a rancher. None belongs to a union but six are elected officials.

All but one said without hesitation that they would vote for Bush on the convention's first ballot in New Orleans. The one delegate who initially was undecided has since said Bush will be his choice.

But the answer was not as clear-cut when it came to vice presidential choices. Seven said they had not made up their minds who to support and four liked Idaho Sen. James McClure, although they doubted he would get the nod.

Some delegates favored New York Congressman Jack Kemp for the second spot with Bush, and three others said they would like to see former Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole on the ticket.

Interior Secretary Donald Hodel and former United Nations ambassador Jeanne Kirkpatrick each were the choice of two delegates, and one endorsed New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean, who is scheduled to give the convention's keynote address.

There was "no hue and cry for Bush to pick a woman as the vice presidential nominee, but many agreed his choice of a running mate was a good offset to some of the perceived negatives of his own candidacy.

Besides the lack of charisma, the delegates said they expected Bush to run into problems over his association with people involved in the Iran-Contra scandal; the lack of opportunity to prove his leadership ability as vice president, and his identification with the Eastern elite.

But GOP leaders at the state convention, hard-pressed to come up with fiery rhetoric to accentuate the positive about the Bush resume, stressed the need to keep the Reagan Revolution alive and safe from the "loony left" policies of the Dukakis Democrats.

And although Bush might not be the type who inspires revolution, Idaho Republicans are betting he is just the kind of dependable, qualified candidate they want to once again "stay the course."

Fitzwater had said earlier this week that administration officials were "disappointed" that the Federal Reserve Board had boosted the interest rate charged banks from 6 percent to 6.5 percent in an effort to stem inflationary pressures.

However, other private analysts who once shared the administration's view that inflation is not a serious problem yet said they were alarmed by the July wholesale price report.

There's no report of sugarcoating it, the report was disturbing because the big increases in prices were outside food and energy," said Larry Chimerino, president of the Wafa Group, an economic consultant in Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

"It certainly makes what the Fed did earlier this week look a little bit more prudent," Chimerino said. "The report somewhat overstates the underlying rate of inflation, but clearly it is getting worse."

poultry products, continued to rise but at a slower pace than in June.

Prices for fresh vegetables jumped 7.5 percent after declining 5.7 percent in June, and canned fruits and vegetables rose 1.3 percent, triple the rate to increase the previous month.

On Thursday the Agriculture Department said consumer food prices alone will be pushed about 1 percent higher than they would have been had it not been for the drought.

Energy prices, after dropping 1.6 percent in June, were stable last month as a 3 percent increase in the wholesale price for gasoline was offset by a 6.1 percent decline in home heating oil prices.

President Reagan's spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, said that despite Friday's report, officials at the White House still believe inflation remains low and under control.

Stallings rejects proposal for 26 debates with Watkins

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Democratic Congressman Richard Stallings has rejected the challenge of Republican opponent Dane Watkins for "Lincoln-Douglas"-style debates in all 26 counties of the 2nd District during the next two weeks.

But Stallings spokeswoman Sallee Gasser said the two-term lawmaker would participate in the televised debate sponsored by the League of Women Voters and the Idaho Press Club, leaving open the possibility of additional debates as well.

"We have had many requests, and we are dealing with them individually," Mrs. Gasser said.

Watkins, a former state senator whose campaign to unseat Stallings has been sputtering, sought the 26 debates over the last half of August in a letter to Stallings in which he said students have told him they do not know where the incumbent stands on the issues.

He proposed a series of regional debates to the August congressional recess if the county-debate plan was unacceptable.

But Mrs. Gasser, Stallings' campaign manager, said the congressman already had a full schedule during the recess that would make it impossible to work in any series of debates.

"The August district work period is full at this point," she said.

Watkins will be out of town part of that time as well. He is scheduled to speak Tuesday morning to the Republican National Convention in New Orleans.

But he said he would be back in Idaho Falls that night, and he will make the appearances by himself, leaving it up to Stallings to appear or not.

"There's plenty of time, and I'll make myself available," he said.

The Republican challenger said he wanted an informal setting allowing him and Stallings to "go at it toe-to-toe. No canned one minute questions with two minute responses, but a real life discussion. Instead of a moderator, maybe we should have a referee."

Mrs. Gasser accused Watkins of grasping at ways to draw attention to his campaign.

"The point that should not be lost is the fact that Congressman Stallings has been talking with Idahoans in all 26 counties for the last four years about his stance on issues," she said. "He has an established record."

Senate passes dam blocking bill

LEWISTON (AP) — U.S. Sen. James McClure has won unanimous Senate approval for his bill to block new dams on portions of the Snake and Salmon rivers.

Approved Thursday, McClure's bill prohibits the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission from licensing any new dams between the end of the Wild and Scenic section of the Snake River and the slack water at Lewiston.

On the Salmon River, the stretch between Long Tom Bar and the river's confluence with the Snake is protected. An identical version has been introduced in the House by Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho.

"I'm very much encouraged that we have been able to get this done so promptly and as fully as we have," the Senate Republican said.

McClure crafted the bill after Asotin Hydro Co., a subsidiary of Consolidated Hydro of Greenwich, Conn., applied for permits to build two dams, one near Asotin, Wash., and a second upstream about 3.5 miles above the mouth of the Grand Ronde River.

Fields heads search panel for UI head

BOISE (AP) — State Board of Education member Roberta Fields of New Meadows will serve as chairman of a 16-member search committee to come up with a successor to University of Idaho President Richard Gibb.

Gibb announced two months ago he plans to step down as president at the end of June.

At a special meeting here Friday, the Board of Education adopted a leisurely schedule designed to produce a new president in about seven months.

The search committee also includes board members J. Ray Cox of Coeur d'Alene and Colleen Mahoney of Lewiston. Acting Board of Education Executive Director Rayburn Barton also will serve on the panel.

Three public members will be named, along with one state legislator from the Moscow area.

Several academic representatives from the university will serve on the panel, but there will be just one student representative, the president of Associated Students of University of Idaho. The president of the schools' alumni association will be on the committee along with someone from the staff.

Union study cites Idaho loss of $600 million in grant funds

States News Service

WASHINGTON — Idaho has lost over $600 million in federal funding for the elderly, education, energy conservation and other domestic spending programs since the Reagan Administration moved into the White House in 1981, a private labor study shows.

The report, released Thursday by the AFL-CIO's American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME), charts domestic program cuts in each state.

"In all, 'The Republican Record: A 7-Year Analysis of State Losses in Federal Funding (FY 1982 - FY 1988)' concluded that the Reagan Administration has slashed funding by $159 billion for more than 200 domestic programs over the last seven fiscal years.

The losses represent the difference in the amount of money that would have been paid had 1981 service level payments stayed the same.

"The Republican record set out in this report is one of which neither the party nor the nation should be proud," the report said. "Our nation ... must do better," the report urged, calling for additional investments in the nation's health, education and physical infrastructure.

Among the major conclusions of the report, whose figures consider the effects of inflation, is that actual funding nationally for grant-in-aid programs to state and local governments was 16.5 percent below what would have been needed to maintain FY81 service levels.

The deepest cuts in programs which directly aid individuals were in student higher education assistance, which was cut by 9.5 percent since FY82, and food stamps, which endured a 7.2 percent reduction over the same period.

For Idahoans, cuts in these areas meant a loss of $13 million in student higher education grants and $20 million in food stamp payments since FY82, compared to the amount they would have received if 1981 service levels had stayed the same, the report said.

In other words, every Idahoan incurred an average $132 loss in individual payments since FY82, placing the state 34th among the 50 states, the study found. Americans nationally averaged a loss of $642 in individual aid programs, according to the study.

One of the most alarming drops in funding involve federal programs that help families pay for medical care, child care and other housing: $80 billion since 1982, according to the study. In Idaho, funding for programs which directly affect children and families plummeted by $259 million, the report said.

New York, Alaska, West Virginia, Vermont and Michigan suffered the deepest cuts overall of all states. Although Idaho did not incur cumulative losses in individual aid programs and grants-in-aid to state and local governments on the magnitude of these states, it did not fair well in specific program areas.

For example, Idaho stacked up second in losses among the states for economic development administration funding, beaten only by Alaska; the state's cumulative change in federal aid totalled a loss of $38 million.

The state ranked fourth in losses for programs to provide employment services and unemployment insurance, losing $22 million, fifth in losses for work incentive programs, losing $12 million; seventh for health services, losing $10 million; tenth in special programs for the aging, losing $4 million; and ninth in energy conservation, losing $17 million, according to the study.

Neighboring Washington suffered nearly identically in its per capita loss rank among the states—in all, Idaho came in 29th for grants-in-aid, 34th in payments to individuals, Washington ranked 27th and 46th in the same categories, the report said.

Oregon, fared somewhat better, ranking 25th among the states for grants-in-aid and 7th in payments to individuals, according to the report.

The grants-in-aid programs, which include the Job Training Program, Special Milk Program and the Work Incentive Program for welfare recipients, have been cut by at least 50 percent across the nation, the study said.

But the Reagan administration's new budget priorities also brought new money into the state, including $13 million more for work on airports, $15 million more for food programs for women, infants and children, and $4 million additional for administration of the food stamp program.

The study noted that several programs were started or expanded during the seven years of the Reagan Administration, including programs for handicapped education, Head Start, library aid and elderly nutrition.

Proposed gondola off funding list

KELLOGG (AP) — There is no chance for any more federal money for Kellogg's proposed gondola project, says Sen. James McClure, who said he "twisted arms and beat heads" to get an earlier $4.6 million federal grant for it.

"The community has to ask itself, 'How justified is this project?' and 'What do we do now?'" he said Friday in a telephone interview.

City leaders have been working to develop a gondola system from the city to the nearby Silverhorn Ski Area. It's viewed as a major attraction to lure tourists to the depressed Silver Valley.

Before the federal grant officials hoped to raise $9 million to $10 million to cover the rest of the cost.

But a feasibility study released earlier in the week said gondola financing plans won't work without further development of the Silverhorn Ski Area and other tourist attractions, to bring more people into the area.

McClure said he's been supporting the project, even though he was skeptical when he first heard about it several years ago. An earlier, optimistic Boise State University feasibility study persuaded him to give the project another chance, he said.

McClure said the Silver Valley was anxious to look outside of the silver mines for revenue and Interstate 90 was the key. He noted that interstate travelers still could be the key to the valley's economic future.

"I am still hopeful that something can be done to save it (the gondola)," McClure said. "There has been a lot of hard work to bring the project this far."

Judge allows agency to keep running

BOISE (AP) — Federal Bankruptcy Judge Alfred Hagan on Friday signed an order allowing the bankrupt Harrison-Frank Insurance Agency of Caldwell to continue operating while negotiations continue with a potential buyer.

Liabilities of the agency have been estimated by state officials at between $2 million and $3 million. The company filed Chapter 11 bankruptcy four weeks ago, which would have allowed it time to reorganize its finances, but was forced into Chapter 7 bankruptcy, which calls for liquidation to pay creditors.

In a brief court hearing Friday, Hagan allowed the agency to continue operating. Bankruptcy trustee Bernice Rakoczy and attorney Blair Clark said they have an offer to purchase the operation, and its value would drop drastically if it is shut down.

EPA says Ford lax on warranty work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has failed to fix defective pollution control devices under warranty as required by federal clean-air regulations, according to an Environmental Protection Agency complaint made public Friday.

The EPA notice of violation alleged the automaker had refused to repair under warranty emission-control equipment that failed because of another component not covered by the clean-air regulations.

The agency cited 23 instances from 1984 through this year in which Ford had allegedly denied warranty service.

The failure of the emission control and emission-related parts involved in these claims would cause the vehicles to fail to comply with the federal emission standards," the EPA notice said.

Ford may be liable for up to $230,000 in civil penalties as a result of the alleged violations, the notice said. EPA said the penalty could be lessened if Ford were to change its policy on emission-defect warranties.

Should Ford and EPA not settle the complaint within 90 days, the agency's normal procedure would be to refer the matter to the Justice Department with a recommendation that a civil complaint be filed in federal court, the notice said.

Ford's director of automotive emissions and fuel economy, Donald Buis, said in Dearborn, Mich., that the EPA notice constituted "a new interpretation of a longstanding emissions policy."

Under terms of the Clean Air Act of 1974, Ford and other automakers have repaired auto-emission components under a five-year, 50,000-mile warranty, but has excluded failures caused by other components.

Waste facility reaches record in settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Operators of a commercial hazardous waste facility in Louisiana have agreed to pay $2.5 million to settle a federal and state lawsuit, the Environmental Protection Agency announced Friday.

The suit against CECOS International Inc., a subsidiary of Houston-based Browning-Ferris Inc., had charged more than 1,700 violations of federal environmental regulations at the company's disposal facility in Livingston, La., about 40 miles east of Baton Rouge.

EPA spokeswoman Robin Woods, said the settlement represented the highest penalty ever obtained in a hazardous waste court case.

In announcing the settlement, EPA Administrator Lee M. Thomas said, "EPA will not tolerate hazardous waste mismanagement in this country, especially by the nation's major disposal companies."

This significant penalty should send a signal to all waste handlers that the cost of non-compliance with our requirements will be more costly than compliance," Thomas said.

Under terms of a consent decree filed in U.S. District Court in Baton Rouge, CECOS is to pay $1.1 million to the federal government, $900,000 to the state of Louisiana and $500,000 to Louisiana State University to fund environmental education programs.

CECOS, based in Buffalo, N.Y., also has agreed to implement an advanced computer tracking system and to carry out a series of independent environmental audits at the Livingston facility, the company said.

It said the audits are intended to be a comprehensive check on the facility's compliance with the Clean Water Act, the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act and the Clean Air Act.

Robert V. Price, president of CECOS, said in a statement: "This is a good, solid agreement."

Nicaragua delays approval of envoys

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nicaraguan government is withholding approval of the names the State Department has submitted as replacements for eight U.S. envoys who were expelled by Sandinista authorities last month, a spokesman said Friday.

Other officials said the administration does not intend to replace Ambassador Richard Melton, who was among those expelled, but instead plans to send Kenneth Skoug, head of the State Department's office of Cuban affairs, to run the embassy.

As embassy charges of affairs, Skoug would not require Senate confirmation. The officials, speaking only on condition they not be named, said it was doubtful that any ambassadorial nominee could receive Senate confirmation before congressional adjournment on Oct. 8.

They said Sandinista refusal to approve the envoys proposed as replacements apparently was in retaliation for the U.S. expulsion of Nicaraguan Ambassador Carlos Tunnerman, who served as chief envoy to both the United States and the Organization of American States.

Nicaragua maintains that the administration acted beyond its authority in expelling a diplomat accredited to the OAS.

Thornburgh was sworn in as attorney general Friday.

Thornburgh becomes new attorney general

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Pennsylvania Gov. Richard L. Thornburgh took office as the nation's 76th attorney general Friday with a vow to "make drug trafficking and drug abuse Public Enemy No. 1."

Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia, one of the conservative jurists appointed to the court by President Reagan, administered the oath of office to Thornburgh in the Roosevelt Room of the White House.

Reagan saluted Thornburgh as an "88-prosecutor with a national reputation for attacking the drug problem head on and cracking down on drug traffickers."

Thornburgh succeeds outgoing Attorney General Edwin Meese III, who resigned after saying he had been vindicated by an independent counsel investigation of his affairs.

Reagan paid tribute to work done in the drug area by both Meese and Vice President George Dush, the prospective Republican presidential nominee.

"Under Vice President Bush's leadership, federal, state and local law enforcement officials have been working together as never before to stop drug runners from smuggling illegal drugs into the United States," he said.

Bentsen is leader in gifts from PACs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen led all candidates for Congress in contributions from political action committees in the first 18 months of the election cycle, according to the Federal Election Commission.

Bentsen's campaign for re-election to the Senate collected $1.7 million in contributions from PACs between Jan. 1, 1987, and June 30, 1988, the FEC reported this week.

Bentsen is also running a simultaneous race as the Democratic nominee for vice president with Michael Dukakis, who does not accept contributions from PACs.

The senior senator from Texas, Bentsen has been chairman of the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee since January 1987, when his PAC contributions began to skyrocket.

The FEC report said Bentsen's campaign took in $161,679 in PAC money in 1983-84, and $139,491 in 1985-86. Bentsen, however, was not up for re-election during the period.

Navy won't send 2nd cruiser

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The Navy has decided not to send another of its billion-dollar "Aegis" cruisers to the Persian Gulf to replace the USS Vincennes, which shot down an Iranian airliner July 3, officers said Friday.

Lt. Cmdr. Tim Taylor, a spokesman for Mayport Naval Station in Florida, said the departure of the USS Mobile Bay "has been temporarily postponed until further notice."

The Mobile Bay had been scheduled to leave the base Friday to join the U.S. Navy Joint Task Force Middle East, which includes 27 warships in the gulf and Arabian Sea.

Taylor said he could not discuss the reasons and Maj. Shelley Rogers, a Defense Department spokeswoman in Washington, declined comment on whether the delay was related to Iran-Iraq cease-fire scheduled for Aug. 20.

Burma's leader resigns

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Sein Lwin resigned Friday after 17 days as leader of Burma and the focus of a bloody popular uprising against 25 years of repression, economic ruin and isolation imposed by a socialist military regime.

His government acknowledged 95 people were killed during a week of violence in which soldiers regularly opened fire on unarmed protesters, many of them high school students or Buddhist monks. Diplomats in Rangoon saw hundreds were killed and some estimates surpass 1,000.

Reports from Burma indicated security forces in at least two towns had sided with the protesters, and a guerrilla leader waging his own war against the government called for a coordinated nationwide offensive to support them.

Rangoon radio said Sein Lwin resigned as president of Burma and head of his only political party, but it did not announce a successor or say why he stepped down. The radio said People's Assembly and the Central Committee of the Burma Socialist Program Party would meet next Friday.

Joseph Silverstein, a leading American expert on Burma, said by telephone that a likely candidate to succeed Sein Lwin was Kyaw Htin, a relatively liberal military officer. Kyaw Htin, who received some military training in the United States, has been No. 3 in the government and party since July 26 after the resignation of No. 1, who had held power since a coup in 1962 and applied economic policies that made this potentially affluent nation one of the world's poorest.

Burmese leader resigns

Students, monks, workers and other filled the streets of Rangoon almost immediately, demanding Sein Lwin's ouster. They blamed the former general for brutally crushing student demonstrations in March and June, and cited his bloody suppression of Rangoon University riots after the coup.

Demonstrators recited chants and waved placards calling him "dog, a butcher, a Nazi."

The protests spread to two dozen other cities, and the killing began Tuesday.

Western diplomats who estimated the death toll in the hundreds said no firm information was available because of the chaos and because of a "battle for the bodies" between soldiers and protesters.

"When someone is killed (the protesters) try to get it, so they can display the bodies, and the government tries to get it to cremate it and destroy evidence of deaths, one said.

Friday's broadcast by the official radio said the capital "has been peaceful since last night and law and order was maintained."

There were almost no demonstrations or violence. The people of the whole city of Rangoon are making preparations to protect against looting."

It said about 1,000 gathered near a pagoda Friday in the Rangoon suburb of North Okkalapa but dispersed. Thousands of people were said to have fought and trapped soldiers in the suburb in the previous two days.

Japan's Kyodo news agency said soldiers had retained positions around three barricaded "liberated zones" in North Okkalapa and two other suburbs but were seen leaving after Sein Lwin's resignation was announced.

Brang Seng, head of the Kachins and a leader of a 10-group guerrilla coalition, called for an offensive "from north to south" to draw soldiers from two dozen towns and cities where they blocked protests.

A spokesman for Brang Seng quoted a statement as saying rebels would attack government troops but also urging soldiers to join the fight "for peace and democracy." The spokesman, who would not give his name, read the statement by telephone in Bangkok.

Khamenei lauds Iran's power

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — President Ali Khamenei said Friday that Iran has emerged from eight years of war against Iraq as a victorious regional power with new worldwide respect.

Also on Friday, Iran denied Iraqi claims that it shelled Iraqi military positions. A U.N. fact-finding team arrived in the Iranian capital to investigate allegations of Iraq's use of chemical weapons.

Today, the system of the Islamic Republic of Iran, for all the ineffective efforts of the enemies, has turned into an important power in the whole of the region," Khamenei said at a prayer sermon at the Tehran University campus. His remarks were broadcast on state-run Tehran radio.

"The nation of Iran is counted as an armed and established military force in the region," he said.

Khamenei said Iran gained worldwide respect because of the military prowess it displayed in the war, which he said the country acquired without depending on outside powers.

"These eight years of war and resistance taught other nations that it is possible to defend themselves without depending on big powers," he said, adding Iraq had been "defeated" because "it has not been able to achieve its despicable objectives."

Iran and Iraq agreed last week to an Aug. 20 cease-fire in their conflict, which killed or wounded an estimated 1 million people.

Iran had recently suffered a series of losses on the battlefield, leading it to accept a U.N. cease-fire resolution July 18.

In another development, British diplomat David Reddaway arrived in Tehran Friday for talks about British and other foreign hostages held in Lebanon by pro-Iranian groups. Before leaving London, Reddaway said he would speak with officials about the 18 hostages, who include Anglican envoy Terry Waite and two other Britons as well as nine Americans.

The foreign hostage held longest is Terry Anderson, chief Middle-East correspondent of The Associated Press. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

A spokesman for the War Information Headquarters in Tehran dismissed Iraq's claims of Iranian shelling as "false propaganda," the official Islamic Republic News Agency said.

Bahgdad accused Iran Thursday of shelling Iraqi military positions near the Shatt al-Arab waterway, where the Persian Gulf war broke out in September 1980.

The accusation was made in a statement issued by the Iraq mission to the United Nations in New York. It was not carried on newscasts in Iran.

In his speech, Khamenei urged Iranian volunteer and other forces to remain at the front to defend the country and to give more power to Iran on the international political scene.

"Even after the way defense will continue and members of the armed forces and volunteers must be present to defend Iran's territorial integrity along the country's reconstruction," he told the throng of worshippers.

Worshippers chanted "Down with the U.S.A.," "Down with the Soviet Union" and "Down with Israel" and pledged to obey revolutionary patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The audience at Khamenei's sermon included about 100 Iraqi prisoners of war, with about 25 of them wearing red headbands indicating they want to fight Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Soviets plan to inspect more missiles

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Forty Soviet missile experts prepared Friday for a second round of inspections on U.S. rocket sites in West Germany covered by a superpower arms treaty, a U.S. official said.

The first Soviet inspectors visited two missile sites in West Germany, while other checks have taken place in the United States, the Soviet Union and other U.S. Air Force spokesman Lt. Col. Pat Maloney said the 40 Soviets would be divided into four teams.

"There are four teams, and four sites remaining to be checked," Maloney told The Associated Press. He noted, however, that there had been no official announcement of the Soviets' destinations.

The first group of Soviet inspectors in West Germany visited the Mutlangen Pershing 2 site 27 miles east of Stuttgart and the Wueeschheim cruise missile site 25 miles south of Koblenz.

The remaining sites include Pershing 2 bases located at Neu-Ulm, 50 miles southeast of Stuttgart, and at Neckarsulm, 25 miles north of Stuttgart.

In addition, a Pershing 2 storage site is located about three miles northwest of Kaiserslautern, and a missile maintenance facility is located in the Frankfurt suburb of Hausen.

U.S. officials say there are 220 intermediate-range missiles in West Germany that fall under the terms of the treaty signed by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in December.

The checks are to make sure that items found at the missile sites correspond to what has been listed by the superpowers in the agreement.

Israeli troops kill attacker

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops Friday fired on three Palestinians attacking with chains, clubs and an ax in the occupied Gaza Strip, killing one and wounding another in the leg, the army said.

Leaders of Israel's two major political parties intensified debate on the future of the West Bank and Gaza Strip after King Hussein's decision to cut Jordan's ties with Palestinians in the occupied lands.

Friday's clash began shortly after midnight in Gaza's Mughazi refugee camp, an army spokesman said. He said the dead man, Riad Suleiman Abu Mandil, 23, had participated in anti-Israeli protests and attacks on soldiers in the past.

The death brought to 240 the number of Palestinians killed since the Arab rebellion in the occupied lands.

U.S. exhibition largest in Japan

TOKYO (AP) — The largest ever American food promotion and sales exhibition in Japan will be held in Tokyo from Aug. 30-Sept. 1, the U.S. Embassy said Friday.

More than 80 participants will show about 1,000 items of 500 kinds in the exhibition, called the "U.S. Food Shop '88," the embassy's Agriculture Trade Office said.

It said the new participants and increased size reflects more liberal Japanese agricultural trade policies.

Exhibits will include meat and poultry, seafood, confectionery, dairy, beverages, nuts and grains, fresh fruits and vegetables, canned and frozen food, and seasonings and spices.

The first such exhibition was held in Japan in 1968.

The United States exported $57 million in agricultural products to Japan last year, up 11 percent over 1986.

Turkey to vote on early elections

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — President Kenan Evren approved a constitutional amendment Friday to allow earlier municipal elections, opening the way for a national referendum on the issue.

The amendment, backed only by the governing Motherland Party, passed 284-95 in the 450-seat legislature a week ago.

Turkey's 1982 Constitution, written under military rule, requires at least five years between local elections. That meant local elections could not be held in Turkey before March 1989.

The amendment calls for local elections nationwide on Nov. 13.

But the nation must vote on any constitutional amendment adopted by fewer than 300 votes in Parliament.

The referendum is expected to take place Sept. 25.

Political analysts say the governing party wants early polls partly because they do not want to give the main opposition Social Democrats time to organize under new leadership.

began Dec. 8. Four Israelis also have been killed.

Israeli military officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said troops apparently caught the Arabs by surprise as they were painting anti-Israeli slogans on camp walls.

They said Mandil fled from the army patrol after being wounded and may have bled to death. An autopsy was ordered.

Troops also arrested the third member of the Palestinian group, the officials said.

In an interview with Israel's armed forces radio, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said Israel had to decide in elections Nov. 1 to pursue peace before arguing about the choice of an Arab negotiating partner.

"What does Israel want — to take a peace initiative or to sit idly and let the Arabs and the Russians and the whole world run our affairs? If we do not take the initiative — and that's actually what the Likud proposes — others will take it," warned Peres, the head of the liberal Labor Party.

Peres said he still believed Jordan had to be a negotiating partner, despite Hussein's declaration that he will not bargain on behalf of the Palestinians.

"We have always thought we should conduct negotiations both with Jordan and the Palestinians, as Jordan is responsible for the main border and the Palestinians are the ones who bear the main burden of the Palestinian problem," Peres said.

In an interview with the Jerusalem Post, daily, Industry Minister Ariel Sharon of the right-wing Likud bloc argued the "only realistic policy" was to consider Jordan a Palestinian state since most of its 3.5 million people are Palestinians.

"We have to object in the strongest possible way to attempts to foist on us a second Palestinian state to our east," Sharon said.

Sharon, who has a wide following among Israel's hard-liners, proposed that Israel annex portions of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, saying most Israelis agree that much of the territory is needed for security reasons.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir has ruled out repeated calls by right-wingers to annex the West Bank in response to Hussein's measures.

Dohrn doesn't regret her activist past

CHICAGO (AP) — Bernardine Dohrn says she has few regrets about her activist past, though she concedes the political movement of the 1960s was occasionally fraught with "arrogance, sexism and racism."

"I was determined not to be like my mother's generation," Dohrn, former leader of the Weather Underground and once listed on the FBI's "10 Most Wanted" list, told an audience Thursday at the downtown Cultural Center. She said she had wanted "no marriage, no children."

But Dohrn's views have mellowed since she spent 11 years in hiding and served a seven-month prison term for refusing to cooperate with a grand jury investigation of a 1981 Brink's armored truck robbery in which three people were killed.

Dohrn, 46, has married and has three children. She lives in Chicago, working for children's welfare issues, with her husband, William Ayers, also a one-time member of the Weather Underground who is now a teacher of education at the University of Illinois at Chicago.

"Remembering the past is a more revealing process than studying the present," Dohrn told her audience. The appeal of the '60s protest movement comes from a simple notion — that what you do makes a difference."

But Dohrn said radical movements she was involved in were often "chaotic, inconsistent and messy."

"In our militancy and intensity, we somehow lost hold of what brought us into the movement in the first place — a spirit of unity and democracy."

Boggs wins 1st round against former girlfriend

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — The former girlfriend of Boston-Red Sox star Wade Boggs struck out in court Friday when a commissioner threw out her suit seeking $5 million compensation for four years of part-time companionship.

"Score one for Wade Boggs," said Jennifer King, attorney for the four-time American League batting champion.

The suit by Margo Adams, 32, of Costa Mesa, sought $6 million in punitive damages and compensation for lost wages for time she spent on Sox road trips with Boggs, 30, who is married and has two children.

Orange County Superior Court Commissioner Eleanor Fell rejected the suit as being improperly grounded in law, but left open the possibility that it could be refiled if it is amended.

Ms. Adams' attorney, James McGee, said in court he intended to re-write the suit and refile it within 30 days.

Neither Boggs nor Ms. Adams was in court.

Dohrn's suit contended that Boggs and Ms. Adams essentially lived together during Red Sox road trips, and that by breaking off the affair, Boggs broke an oral contract that called for her to provide companionship.

Ms. King argued that if such a contract existed, it necessarily would have included sex. A contract for sex is illegal, invalidating any legal claim by any party to such a contract, she argued.

The third-base man has apologized to Deborah, his wife of 10 years and regrets the affair, Ms. King said.

Boggs acknowledges taking Ms. Adams, identified by her attorney as a mortgage broker, along on most of the team's road trips for two years. But he broke off the affair two years ago, his lawyer said.

Ms. Adams is planning a "kiss and tell" book about the affair and has signed a literary agent to try to sell the memoir to publishers.

Robert Kling, 52, is seeking to be released from jail until his appeal of a six-month sentence is heard. He argued in court Thursday that he should be let out on bail to harvest his grain crop.

Kieling believes Murray is in love with him and has been convicted 11 times since 1980 for bothering her. He's under a court order not to contact her or any members of her family.

His most recent conviction for breaching the order came June 29 after he telephoned her office 263 times in the first six months of this year. Crown attorney Alistair Johnston said the calls continued right up until he was sent to jail.

Carter talks to African leaders in course of trip

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Jimmy Carter, who has been mountaineering and game-viewing in Tanzania, will meet President Yoweri Museveni during his stopover Tuesday in Kampala, the former U.S. president also will talk with officials in the ministries of health and agriculture, Susan Zelle, acting director of the U.S. Information Service, said Friday.

Museveni is a former guerrilla leader who seized power 32 months ago.

Carter and a party of 35 leave Wednesday for a visit to Marxist Ethiopia, the Soviet Union's staunchest ally in Africa.

On Sunday, Tanzanian President Ali Hassan Mwinyi will present Carter, 64, with a certificate for his successful ascent of Mount Kilimanjaro, Africa's highest peak. Then Carter's party will fly to the Kenyan capital of Nairobi.

There, Carter will meet with Kenyan government officials while other members of the party visit a village during the one-day stay, the U.S. Embassy said.

Ramsey is best known for "Throw Momma From the Train"

Anne Ramsey dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Anne Ramsey, whose grotesque character in "Throw Momma From the Train" won her an Oscar nomination and a following in the twilight of her career, died of throat cancer. She was 59.

Her husband of 34 years, actor Logan Ramsey, was at her side when she died Thursday evening at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, where she had been for about a week, hospital spokeswoman Peggy Shaff said Friday.

The actress often appeared with her husband in projects, including Clint Eastwood's "Any Which Way You Can," scheduled to air Friday night on CBS-TV.

She appeared in two Barbra Streisand films, "Up the Sandbox" and "For Pete's Sake" and played Nick Nolte's added mother in "Weeks." In "Goonies," she uttered the line, "Put that kid's hand in the blender and hit puree."

Mrs. Ramsey's television credits included roles in "The Young and the Restless," guest appearances on "Hill Street Blues," "Night Court" and "Knight Rider," and movies of the week roles in "White Mama," "The Boy in the Plastic Bubble," "Blind Ambition" and "Marilyn."

However, it was her role opposite actor-director Danny DeVito and Billy Crystal in the dark comedy about matricide, "Throw Momma From the Train," that put her on the fast track.

After 37 years in show business, she became famous as the actress with the face of a mother no one could love.

"Some people say I'm not a very pretty woman, but I'm a very beautiful woman inside," she said when asked about her appearance.

As the murder-provoking harrier of "Throw Momma," the diminutive hunch-shouldered actress played her most tormented and tormenting role. DeVito, as brow-beaten son Owen Lili, tries to arrange a swap of murder-victims. He will kill his writing teacher's ex-wife if the teacher (Crystal) kills his mother.

PT boat hero ends Navy days

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rear Adm. John Duncan-Bulkeley, 76, the last Navy admiral on active duty to see combat in World War II, will retire Aug. 31 after more than 55 years of military service, the Defense Department said.

President Reagan will honor Bulkeley by nominating him for promotion to the three-star rank of vice admiral as he begins his retirement, the Pentagon said. Senate confirmation was virtually assured.

Bulkeley, a Medal of Honor winner, is known within the Navy as the officer who safely evacuated Gen. Douglas MacArthur from Corregidor to Mindanao in the Philippines, the first leg of his journey to Australia in March 1942 to escape the Japanese invasion forces.

Through most of World War II, Bulkeley commanded various motor torpedo boat squadrons in the Pacific theater.

He received the nation's highest military award for his squadron's success in damaging or destroying Japanese planes, warships and merchant ships during more than four months of duty in Philippine waters in late 1941 and early 1942 "without benefit of repairs, overhaul or maintenance facilities."

"His dynamic forcefulness and daring in offensive action, his brilliantly planned and skillfully executed attacks ... characterize him as an outstanding leader of men and a gallant and intrepid seaman," the citation said.

Bulkeley has spent the last 21 years as head of the Naval Board of Inspection and Survey, which is responsible for inspecting all ships and shore facilities for their equipment's readiness.

Bulkeley technically retired from the Navy in 1974, but was immediately recalled to active duty to continue directing the inspection board.

Bulkeley could not be reached for an interview Wednesday. The Navy said he had been admitted to Bethesda Naval Medical Center, Md., for tests related to a kidney problem.

U.S. experts removed for petty thefts

JOHN HINCKLEY JR.
No outing just yet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three U.S. technical experts involved in monitoring Soviet nuclear blasts have been relieved of their duties after the Soviets found them trying to make off with "souvenirs" from an atomic test site, administration spokesmen said Friday.

The spokesmen, dismissing the episode as a "misunderstanding," said the items found by Soviet authorities in crates being prepared for shipment back home included a small hammer, a piece of barbed wire, and several rock and core samples from a hole being drilled at the site.

The July 17 incident occurred near Semipalatinsk, in south-central Russia. A U.S.-Soviet agreement allows each country to observe and monitor each other's nuclear blasts. The U.S. experts were at the site in advance of a planned explosion in September.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman said that after consultations with Soviet authorities, it was decided that the three, who were not identified, will not be returning to the testing site next month.

One was said to be an Energy Department employee and the other two reportedly were working under Energy Department contracts.

The Soviets expressed concern over the incident but no formal protest was lodged, Redman said.

Redman said the hammer and the barbed wire were intended as personal souvenirs. As for the geological samples, the Americans asked the Soviets for permission to remove the items and had reason to believe the request would be approved, he said.

"These items were of a minor nature, certainly not of any military or technical significance," Redman said, describing the incident as a "misunderstanding."

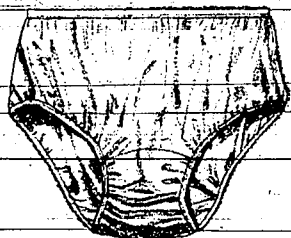

At the White House, presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater said, "We don't believe it was intelligence activity of any kind, but it was a personal mistake on their part."

Asked whether it wasn't strange for Americans to try to make off with rocks and soil, Redman said, "If you're involved in this kind of work, those might be considered souvenirs."

The Washington Post reported in Friday's editions that the soil and rock samples are regarded by U.S. officials as potentially useful in assessing yields of Soviet nuclear blasts.

Secret Service bars Hinckley from field trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — A mental hospital Friday abandoned plans to take John W. Hinckley Jr. on a field trip after the Secret Service turned up a new cache of writings by the man who shot President Reagan seven years ago.

The decision by St. Elizabeths Hospital was announced at a hearing originally convened by U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker to consider the plan to allow Hinckley to join other patients on a supervised outing.

But letters by Hinckley found this week during an investigation by the Secret Service prompted hospital officials to drop their request.

Based on "recent materials received" Thursday night, the hospital "determined that further clinical assessment by Mr. Hinckley's treatment staff is necessary before it would permit him to participate in such an off-grounds activity," said Dr. Raymond F. Patterson, reading from a letter sent to the judge.

"The hospital no longer plans to include Mr. Hinckley in the upcoming recreational activity in the community," Patterson, director of St. Elizabeths Hospital's forensic services unit, added.

Reagan names new commander

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has selected Army Lt. Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf to become the next head of the U.S. Central Command, the military arm responsible for all American forces in the Middle East, the Pentagon said Friday.

Assuming Senate confirmation, Schwarzkopf would replace Marine Gen. George Crist, whose tenure has included more than a year of tanker escorts by American warships in the Persian Gulf as well as combat clashes between U.S. and Iranian forces. Crist is to step down from his command on Nov. 23 and retire.

Schwarzkopf's selection had been widely rumored for several weeks, even since Pentagon sources disclosed Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci had rebuffed pleas by the Navy to install an admiral as Crist's successor. Vice Adm. Henry C. Mustin, the deputy chief of naval operations, plans, policy and operations, was the Navy's candidate. Instead, the Pentagon announced Friday that he will retire on Sept. 1 after more than 33 years of active service.

When the Central Command was originally created as the follow-on to the Rapid Deployment Force of the Carter administration, Pentagon officials decided the commanding general should rotate between the Marine Corps and Army in case troops had to be sent in.

At the time, the biggest threat to peace in the region was considered the Soviet Union, which was viewed as having designs on the oil supplies that are crucial to the West.

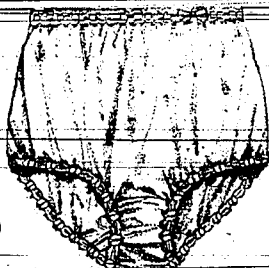

But then the Iran-Iraq war erupted and expanded to the waters of the Persian Gulf, and President Reagan decided last year to escort reflagged Kuwaiti tankers through the waterway. That prompted the Navy to begin arguing for a naval expert in the top job.

Planned gold mine clears environmental hurdle

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A government report issued this week concludes that a proposed gold mine project in southeastern Cassia County would not have a significant environmental impact.

That means Noranda Mining Co., the Nevada business behind the mine, can now start gathering permits for the project. Company officials estimate that the mine would employ 200 people during construction and 90 to 105 people during its operation.

The project must still clear a few other regulatory hurdles, preventing company officials from providing a specific timetable for ground breaking.

"We're not real certain of that right now," said Joe Scheenring, Noranda's project manager. "A lot of it is hinged on the timing of the rest of the permits."

Conservatively, it probably looks like next year.

The Sawtooth National Forest issued the environmental-assessment report, an inch-thick document needed to comply with the National Environmental Policy Act. It covers numerous issues, including impact on wildlife and water supplies.

More than 130 people participated in a March 10 public hearing on the project, which would disturb an estimated 350 acres of land in the Black Pine Mountains. Jim Wickel, a Burley Ranger District minerals specialist who headed the environmental assessment team, said public concern primarily addressed the project's potential impact on wildlife.

"When you look at wildlife, we feel that, yeah, some species or individuals will be displaced, but in the long run the habitat will return to the same kind of area," Wickel said.

Those animals that could suffer minor displacement include deer, sage grouse and some hawk species.

As for water, Wickel said the company plans to limit the project's impact by drilling below the aquifer that supplies water to area wells.

Several alternative proposals, from which one was selected, were considered in the environmental assessment's drafting. The chosen alternative calls for reclamation and upgrading of several area roads to improve access.

According to the assessment report, the chosen alternative also calls for measures to reduce the visual impact of the project, which will be visible from U.S. Interstate 84.

Officials estimate the mine's life at between five and 10 years. The project proposes to mine 7.5 million tons of ore, with a potential of up to 10.5 million tons.

Involved in this operation will be three open pit mines, two leach pads, two waste dumps, approximately six miles of ore haul roads and three miles of upgraded or new Forest Service and BLM access roads.

The company will have to mine 20 tons of limestone to yield an ounce of gold.

The Forest Service's finding of no significant impact is subject to appeal for 45 days. Appeals must be in writing and submitted Forest Supervisor Roland Stolesen at the Sawtooth National Forest in Twin Falls.

The BLM also approved the environmental assessment, toward which several other federal and state agencies contributed.

Former Port of Hope counselor files suit

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A former Port of Hope counselor has filed a defamation suit over a letter a board member wrote after the counselor testified against the alcoholism treatment center in a northern Idaho trial.

Carolee Walker, a Port of Hope board member and long-time volunteer for the center, wrote the letter in February and distributed copies to other people, Deremiah says.

The former counselor, Opal Deremiah, says the letter damaged her professional standing and caused great embarrassment and humiliation.

"She felt her integrity was harmed," says Deremiah's Coeur d'Alene attorney Corey Cartwright. "She felt she had done her civic duty (by testifying) and then came under attack."

Deremiah now lives in the Coeur d'Alene area.

"I was never more surprised and deeply hurt to know that you testified against Barry and the Port of Hope," Walker wrote in her letter, according to court files. "I'm not only disappointed in you but hold you in total disregard."

In her lawsuit, Deremiah says other parts of Walker's letter accuse her of perjury, dishonest business dealings and financial irresponsibility.

Walker gave copies of the letter to Barry H. Meyers, Port of Hope's executive director, and

Anthony sentencing waits on evaluation

By ADRIENNE TOOMEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The sentencing of convicted sex-slayer Kirby Anthony was postponed Friday after he requested a psychiatric exam.

The exam "has nothing to do with establishing insanity," said John Salemi, Anthony's attorney. "It's for sentencing purposes. It's to generate a psychological profile to give additional input before the sentencing. It will give a better idea of who Kirby Anthony is."

The new sentencing date has been set for 9:30 a.m. Oct. 5.

Anthony, 24, was convicted in June of three counts of first-degree murder, two counts of sexual assault, and one count of kidnapping by restraint. The victims were Anthony's aunt, Nancy Newman, 33, and her daughters, Melissa, 8, and Angela, 3.

The victims and Anthony are former Twin Falls residents.

Anthony was originally given the option of being psychiatrically tested in late June. "I refused for him," said Salemi. "Because he plans to appeal Anthony's case,

Salemi said, "It's foolish for him to submit to a psychiatric testing. Anything he says, even to a psychiatrist, could be used against him."

Salemi's appeal will be based on several pretrial rulings and evidence submitted to the jury during the trial. "We haven't determined all the legal issues, and I'm not at liberty to discuss the details," said Salemi.

Salemi said he did not know why Anthony agreed to have the psychiatric exam. "Actually, I haven't seen him since before the trial ended. We've just talked on the phone," said Salemi.

At the conclusion of his six-week trial, Anthony was to be sentenced immediately. "This is a heinous crime," Anthony told Judge Seaborn Buckalew. "If you feel that I am guilty of this, I feel you should sentence me now."

Judge Buckalew, who presided over the emotion-packed trial, rejected Anthony's request.

If a psychiatric sentencing, Anthony, 24, could receive 42 years in prison. Even a minimum sentence would lock him in prison for 70 years without the possibility of parole.

Heyburn Hoedown to take place today

The Times-News

HEYBURN - Heyburn's big day for festivals is today.

The second annual Heyburn Hoedown has a number of events scheduled, including hot air balloon rides, horse and cart rides, good softball, a pig roast and performances by various musicians. Among the musicians will be Rosalie Sorrels, a folk artist who has performed with such people as David Bromberg, Ry Cooder and the Grateful Dead.

"It was a lot of fun last year," Councilman and organizer Nilo Bohon said. "I saw people I haven't seen in 25 years. A lot of them are rural Heyburners who just drive in to see some people they haven't seen in a while."

The events begin at noon when festival-goers can chow down on a roast pig lunch to the tunes of the Magic Valley Old-Time Fiddlers. The lunch will cost $2-a-plate and include potatoes, corn and applesauce.

Throughout the day those attending the celebration can ride in horse-drawn carts for 25 cents, with proceeds going to the Heyburn Cub Scouts.

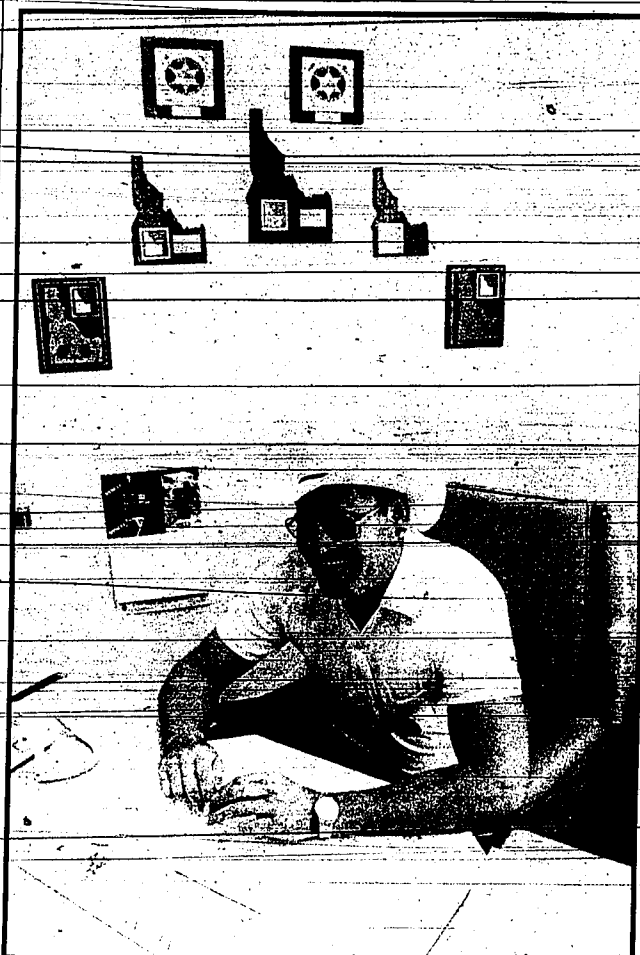

If Mother Nature cooperates, Lee Moyle will take folks up in his hot air balloon. A softball tournament is also on tap.

Various booths selling food and demonstrating crafts and other skills are also expected.

Those attending can also win prizes, including a 10-speed bike, a Walkman stereo, a brass plant stand, a fishing pole and Hoedown T-shirts. These prizes, donated by merchants and purchased by the city, can be won by drawing names from a hat and by picking up specially marked playing cards dropped from an airplane flown by Dean Baker.

But music is the centerpiece of the Heyburn festival and plenty of it is planned. After the fiddlers at noon, the Variations, a 15-member women's singing group will perform at 1:45 p.m.

Larry Webb, who resigned as Jerome County's chief deputy, plans to buy a local bar

Larry Webb leaves job as Jerome's chief deputy

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

JEROME - Although Larry Webb resigned Friday as Jerome County's chief deputy, he'll continue running people behind bars.

"Well, make that singular - 'bar' - and to be more exact, the people won't really be behind the bar. They'll be in front of it, as patrons of the North Side Club, one of Jerome's oldest taverns."

After a 15-year hiatus with two area sheriff's departments, Larry Webb is going back into the booze business.

"It's almost like going from an extreme to the other, isn't it?" said Webb Friday, minutes before 5 p.m. and the end of his 11-year stint as Jerome's chief deputy.

Webb said he has "earned money down" on the Main Street bar and hopes to have the deal finalized by the end of August.

Webb last worked in a bar 20 years ago, in Wyoming. But much has changed since that time, both in Webb's life and in the bar scene.

"For one thing, the drinks themselves have changed - drastically. I have no idea what they put in some of them," laughed Webb, adding that he nevertheless anticipates few difficulties adjusting.

"The fellow who taught me bartending 20 years ago told me, 'If you get in a jam, just tell them - I've got whiskey, water and beer. What do you want to drink?'"

Of greater significance, however, is the fact that Webb has since moved into law enforcement, working two years in Twin Falls County and 13 in Jerome.

Webb customers have difficulty separating the bartender from his former badge?

"I really hope they don't. I have to get over that police image," said Webb, whose office wall is draped with law enforcement plaques. "I hope the public realizes that I'm no longer a police officer. I'm a bar owner."

As for Webb himself, he said that - at least for awhile - he'll probably experience the same anxiety upon hearing a siren that he's had for the past 15 years. "But I'm sure in time goes by that's going to fade away."

Besides, Webb adds, the two jobs really aren't as different as they sound.

"It's still working with the public," he said. "I'm really looking forward to going into private business and still working with the people."

Webb will soon be followed in his departure from Jerome law enforcement by Sheriff Elza Hall, his boss of 13 years. Hall, a four-term sheriff, was defeated by Larry Gold in this year's Republican primary.

Gold and his opponent Darryl Cameron, a former Jerome City police chief running as an independent, have both said they would remove Webb as chief deputy if elected.

Couple compiles 9 years of returns

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Two accused tax protesters have seen the light, and 5th District Judge Daniel Mechl is making sure the couple doesn't sin again.

Stephen Wolters, a Twin Falls man who operates a trucking company with his wife, said in a court hearing Monday he's struggling valiantly to prepare nine years of tax returns.

"The Wolters are not tax protesters," their attorney Charles Peterson said Monday. "They're going to file taxes, and they're trying to minimize them."

The Wolters stopped paying state income taxes in 1979, and the state started chasing those lost dollars last year. If the state doesn't receive tax returns from the Wolters, Mechl said he will provide an office for them in a Twin Falls County jail cell.

The Wolters saga peaked this week, when Stephen Wolters asked for yet another extension - he's received two already - to wade through 12 large boxes of receipts and other business records. He's planning to send those receipts once he gets them organized, to a Spokane accountant.

Mechl's ruling apparently signals an end to a long struggle in the courts and administrative agencies over tax returns for Wolters and his wife, who operate a State Transportation

Wolters, characterized by state attorneys as a tax protester, declined comment on the case outside his court testimony Monday.

At the hearing, tall, heavy-set Wolters testified he has been wading through large boxes of receipts from his business since February. But he's having a few problems.

"I'm just unable to. I need a little more time," Wolters said at the hearing. "We've made progress, but it takes time."

State Tax Commission attorney Lawrence Sirhall characterized the situation as a little more important than just a few years of unpaid taxes.

"There are a lot of his family and friends who are also protesters," Sirhall told Mechl. "We need to send a message to obey the laws of this state."

Sirhall said the Wolters had used two tactics commonly used by tax protesters.

When the state sent a letter telling them how much to pay in taxes, Wolters responded by questioning whether they got hold of the right person.

The I.D. number listed is not mine as I have never applied for any type of I.D. number," Wolters wrote to the state. "However, if it is me you are referring to and since my name is on your determination, I feel compelled to respond."

Wolters then called the state's figures "bogus."

Another tactic used by tax protesters, Sirhall said, is to flood the tax commission with paperwork requiring voluminous answers.

Last year, the state sent an out-of-court letter asking for about $9,519 in back taxes. The state then revised its estimate of the taxes the Wolters owed.

Shoshone County would like to save Bunker Hill water system

WALLACE (AP) - Water - a premium product in a land beset by drought - is seen as an answer to the Silver Valley's depressed economic plight.

Shoshone County commissioners are hoping for a grant to help salvage the massive Bunker Hill water system.

They're preparing for another pitch to the Idaho Economic Development Agency Block Grant Advisory Board in September.

Commissioners were scheduled to meet with Al Ames of Boise, EDA grant administrator, on Thursday but car problems scuttled the meeting.

The system, capable of producing 5,300 gallons of water per minute, is touted by Commissioner Don Hayman as being equalled by only one other water plant in the state.

Officials said if the system is rehabilitated, it could maintain 100 pounds of pressure per square inch on a 4.9-mile transmission line, enough to serve an industrial complex in the Smelterville Plats area.

Hayman said a feasibility study sets the costs of purchase and rehabilitation of the system at $1.4 million. Since $862,000 has been earmarked for the project by the Economic Development Administration, the county is hoping to garner $600,000 of $650,000 in state block funds administered by the Department of Commerce. Another $78,000 can be furnished by the county through "in-kind" services, payment in the form of manpower or equipment rather than cash.

The area economy has been seriously depressed since the early 1980s, when the Bunker Hill mining-smelter complex closed, throwing 2,000 people out of work.

Employment still was more than 22 percent last year, although some mines have reopened. Projections in the feasibility study show more than 200 jobs would be created by the system in the next two or three years.

Police arrest 2 for drug manufacturing

SPOKANE (AP) - Two men arrested for allegedly operating a methamphetamine laboratory in a Whitman County home, were being held here Friday pending a probable cause hearing, authorities said.

William R. Donny, 42, and a man identifying himself as Brian O'Neil, 49, were arrested Wednesday near Colfax after a Washington State Patrol trooper spotted drug paraphernalia and equipment inside a disabled van on U.S.-195, authorities said.

A search of the van and nearby house turned up glassware and some residue from the "cooking" of methamphetamines, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Crum.

The two men made an initial appearance Thursday in Spokane before U.S. Magistrate James Hovis, who set a probable cause and detention hearing for Monday, Crum said.

Lambert had no identification with him when arrested, and authorities say they're not sure of his real name.

Both men were believed to have recently moved to the Palouse from the San Diego, Calif. area, Crum said. They were being held for investigation of a manufacture of methamphetamine, commonly referred to as "speed."

The size of the operation was not clear because drug workers found just evidence that some had been manufactured, Crum said. However, Whitman County Sheriff Steve Tomson said the home laboratory was capable of producing more than 100 pounds of speed at a time.

two other people, Deremiah says. Deremiah claims that Walker's statements in the letter are false.

She's asking for $75,000 and attorney's fees in the lawsuit filed in Twin Falls County.

Walker, now living in Ashland, Ore., declined comment on Deremiah's allegations.

Deremiah testified in a Coeur d'Alene trial in which a jury found Port of Hope guilty of using inside information while bidding for and eventually winning a state contract for the jury award of $164,000 to a competing substance-abuse treatment center, The Turning Point.

Port of Hope has asked the judge presiding over the case to throw out the jury's verdict. The judge hasn't ruled on those motions yet.

Curtwright said that, despite the verdict in the lawsuit, Port of Hope won the latest state contract in northern Idaho while bidding against Turning Point's successor corporation.

The state contract Port of Hope bid for in northern Idaho was part of a statewide expansion-theater center engineered over the past few years.

Deremiah had 14 years of experience as a counselor and administrator in substance-abuse treatment before leaving Port of Hope. Likewise, Walker has volunteered as an art-therapy instructor for 14 years for the Port of Hope.

Walker also led the charge against a Magic Valley Regional Medical Center proposal to open a cancer treatment center in Twin Falls. Walker instead supported Boise-based Mountain States Tumor Institute, where many local residents have received cancer treatment.

MS'P backed off their plans when MVRMC announced its proposal to open a cancer-treatment center.

Webb

"There was some criticism that people thought I was pretty forward, but I've always been that way - not telling people what they wanted to know, but what I had to tell them," Webb said.

And Webb, who says he didn't always agree with the system's demands, meant that he sometimes "had to" tell people something.

"That's probably one of the hardest things about law enforcement - you see the citizen's side of it and agree with it, but the law says you have to do it another way. There were times when I thought the citizen got the short end of the stick."

For that and other reasons, Webb said he probably won't suffer too many withdrawal symptoms upon leaving his job of so many years.

"Law enforcement has changed from when I went into it 15 years ago. It's more complicated - the court system has bogged down, the paperwork has built up, I think it's going to be a relief to get out of it, I really do."

He added, "I really discourage young people from going into law enforcement today. You're open for a lawsuit every time you turn around, and by that position you're damned if you do and damned if you don't."

But Webb said there is at least one thing - or person - who he will miss.

"I'm going to miss Elzie (Hall). We've just been through so much. I'm going to miss standing by him in tight situations like we have over the years."

Movie causes uproar in Idaho

By The Associated Press

The controversy over the film "The Last Temptation of Christ" erupted in eastern Idaho Friday, with critics pressuring Idaho Falls theaters not to show the movie depicting Christ as having human desires.

To the north, moviegoers in the college towns of Moscow and Pullman, Wash. may also have to travel elsewhere to see the film because of the decision of a Chicago-based movie theatre chain.

Both Pocatello and Idaho Falls have a heavy concentration of members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormons), although the protests came from a number of religious and other organizations.

"We received several petitions on this," said Rio Theater Manager Joan Ralphs in Idaho Falls. "A lot of people in the community are upset about it. I don't blame them."

Some petitioners have threatened to boycott a theater for one year if it shows the film. Critic Mark Kidd of Rexburg led the petition drive against the film even though she doubts it will ever be shown in local theaters. Ms. Kidd said she wants the signatures on her 400 petitions just to raise someone's consciousness about the movie.

Although the film began showing in only nine major cities across the country Friday, Ms. Ralphs said eventually theater chains will decide if the film will come to eastern Idaho.

The chains would be wise to consider public opposition, particularly in the conservative Upper Snake River Valley, she said, but Universal Studios, the maker of the film, may threaten to withhold its other releases from theaters turning down "The Last Temptation of Christ."

At Pocatello, the management of both the Starlite Cinemas and Mann Theaters said they had no plans to show the movie.

Both theaters said they received petitions and telephone calls showing the film, the screen-adaptation of Nikos Kazantzakis' novel about a self-doubting, humanly tempted Christ.

"There's no entertainment value in it," said Leroy Brown, manager at Starlite Cinemas. He said making decisions are made at the theaters' national headquarters, but his theater has no interest in bringing it to Pocatello.

Mann Theaters reported the same thing. "I'm glad to hear it is not going to show here," said Robert Greer, associate pastor of the Pocatello Bible Church. "I believe the film is very prejudiced and totally irresponsible as to the facts of the life of Jesus. It presents Jesus as a sexually immoral person, which is totally offensive to us."

Greer said he based his comments on a film script he has seen. A local spokesman for the Mormon Church also said he was pleased the film would not be shown.

"The film is a gross misrepresentation of the life of Christ and Mary Magdalene," said Robert Winward, public communications director for the church in Pocatello.

To represent "one of the most magnificent women in the New Testament as a prostitute is tragic," he said.

To indicate that Christ, who rose above all temptations that Satan and the world confronted him with, as being subject to lust, is a great affront to all true believers of the son of God."

Essaness Theaters, a chain that owns all Palouse movie theaters except the Micro-Cinema in Moscow and the Old Post Office in Pullman, has put booking the film on hold and probably will not bring it to this area at all, said "Drew" Devlin, one of the managers of the company's eight theater screens in the two towns.

"We've gotten a lot of negative public response to this, and we're very sensitive to the communities we're a part of," Devlin said.

Management at the Micro says the film also will not be shown there because of personal problems between its owners and distributors for Universal Studios, not because of the film's content.

Jack Clark, owner of Pullman's Old Post Office Theatre, said he had received boycott threats in the mail over the film, but had not decided on bringing it to his theatre.

"I'd never even heard of it until last Wednesday, then I got a letter from some religious zealots, threatening not to come to my theatre," Clark said. "That is not a motivator for me one way or the other."

No charges will result from fatal van accident

BOISE (AP) - No criminal charge will be filed against the teen-aged driver of a state Health and Welfare Department van that rolled July 29, killing three handicapped people, the Ada County prosecutor's office says.

After reviewing Idaho State Police investigation reports, Chief Deputy Prosecutor Roger Bourne said there is insufficient evidence for a charge of voluntary manslaughter against 18-year-old Amy Jacobs of Weiser in the July 29 tragedy.

Ms. Jacobs was a volunteer driver in the 1980 Dodge which was carrying 11 developmentally disabled adults and two volunteers to an annual summer camp in Donnelly. It rolled over on Eagle Road, north of U.S. 20-26, injuring 10 more people.

Former owner of Times-News dies

MANKATO, Minn. (AP) - Jared How, 76, at one time owner of The Times-News in Twin Falls, died of cancer Friday in Mankato, Minn.

How was also the former publisher of the Mankato Free Press daily newspaper and owner of several weekly newspapers in Minnesota.

While serving as publisher in Mankato, How purchased The News-Times in 1961. He sold it to Howard Publications in 1968, the same year he bought the Owatonna People's Press, another daily.

A native of Grand Forks, N.D., How attended school in Menlo Park, Calif., and at the University of California at Berkeley.

He joined The Free Press in 1937, later becoming city editor and then manager of the printing division. He became publisher and vice president in 1956 and in 1962, he became president, in addition to publisher.

In 1976, How purchased several weekly newspapers in Minnesota. In 1979, How sold his newspaper holdings to Ottaway Newspapers Inc., but Ottaway later sold the weeklies back to How.

How remained Free Press president until 1981, publisher until 1982 and, until his death, chairman, consultant and acquisition adviser.

Survivors include his wife, Mary Ellen; two sons, two daughters and seven grandchildren.

Oakley-Rogerson road will be fixed

OAKLEY - A one-mile section of the Oakley-Rogerson road will soon be widened and rerouted around Porcupine Springs Campground.

The road runs right through the center of the campground, said Don Oman, Twin Falls District Ranger. The campers get a lot of dust and noise.

In addition to being rerouted to the south of Porcupine Springs, the road will be expanded into double-lane.

"That whole stretch is pretty crooked and narrow," said Oman. "We want to improve the alignment and improve safety. There have been a few accidents through there."

Federal funds will cover the costs of the project, estimated at $96,000. "We usually just get maintenance money," said Oman.

"This year, we happened to get some funding to do improvements."

Repairs will begin Aug. 10 and will continue through October. During the first stages of reconstruction, traffic will be on one or less lanes. In October, during final surfacing, traffic may be delayed for up to four hours Monday through Friday.

This fall's repairs mark the first step in a plan to improve Oakley-Rogerson Road for eight miles east of Porcupine Springs. When funds become available, the road will be resurfaced and widened.

Aluminum can thieves are sentenced

TWIN FALLS - Two men who pleaded guilty Thursday to stealing cans from a Kiwanis Club bin were put on probation and ordered to leave Twin Falls.

James Oatler Clark, 25, and Jeffery Scott Reynolds, 27, were arrested Wednesday after a Twin Falls man reported seeing them taking cans from a Kiwanis collection point in the Blue Lakes Mall. Police stopped Clark's station wagon and found 29 pounds of cans inside, valued at $13.03.

Court records describe both men as indigent transients. Clark and Reynolds listed the Snake River Canyon as their official address in police reports.

Both men pleaded guilty Thursday to a misdemeanor charge of petty theft, and Magistrate Charles Brumback placed them on two-years probation. At the suggestion of Clark and Reynolds, Brumback said he attached a further condition requiring them to leave Twin Falls today.

"I planted in their mind the idea that if they were willing to leave town that would be a nice idea," Brumback said.

The Twin Falls Kiwanis Club recently reported a sharp drop in the number of cans collected in its bins, which officials partly attributed to theft. The value of scrap aluminum recently shot from 18 to 52 cents per pound.

Tax

The Walters sent a $9,519 check to the state on Oct. 19, 1987, and used the state's same day without hitting an attorney. The state coupleped shortly after that for another $55,904 in taxes through 1985, based on tax returns the state filled out. That case has been assigned to 5th District Judge J.

William Haft in Rupert.

Meanwhile, the state sued Walters over their 1986 taxes. Monday's hearing was scheduled to determine if the couple should get any more time to prepare that year's tax return.

The Walters have since retained Peterson of Boise to represent them.

Mormons adjust to role of blacks

By RUSSELL CHANDLER
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Last summer, the only all-black Mormon congregation in the Northern Hemisphere was disbanded and its 85 members told to attend services where they live instead of commuting from throughout Southern California to meetings in Downey, a Los Angeles suburb.

years, the very existence of the small, experimental, all-black congregation — and the move by church authorities to close it — exemplify both the problems black Americans face adjusting in an overwhelmingly white, conservative, middle-class church, and the intention of Mormon officials to integrate non-whites into Mormon life without having to abandon their culture.

"The branch served its purpose," says Paul Devine, a former president of the Downey branch who now worships at a Mormon ward (congregation) in Walnut, Calif. "It was a means of fellowship for blacks... But many used it as a crutch... and a lot of blacks are still afraid they won't be accepted and treated fairly" by white Mormons.

Ten years ago, the white, all-male leadership of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints took a major step toward racial equality in the church. Citing a new revelation from God, the late Mormon Church President Spencer W. Kimball decreed that, for the first time in the church's 148-year history, black males could fully participate in church rites. While church membership has always been open to all races, the priesthood, normally attained by Mormon boys at the age of 12, had been closed to those with any black ancestry.

The Mormon priesthood is the prerequisite to a meaningful role in the carefully structured family life prescribed by the church and is required for participation in temple ceremonies that the faithful believe assure them of eternal happiness. These special rites include baptism and marriage for time and eternity; permitted only to those who are priests in good standing. Mormon women, according to church doctrine and tradition, cannot be ordained.

Kimball stated simply that the change regarding black clergy was God's will. "I have heard our prayers," Kimball said in a cryptic, four-paragraph announcement on June 9, 1978.

charges that the church practiced racial discrimination, opened the door for black men to become church officers.

ICC OKs merger of Southern Pacific, D&RGW railroads

Southern Pacific (left) and Denver & Rio Grande Western engines near Thistle, Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission has approved the sale of Southern Pacific Railroad to Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad for $1.02 billion, a merger that creates the nation's fifth-largest rail system.

Southern Pacific operates up and down the west coast and along the southern tier of the country with tracks stretching from Portland, Ore. through central California through El Paso, Texas, and as far east as New Orleans. It also operates from St. Louis to the Gulf Coast.

The Denver-based D&RGW operates a rail line from St. Louis to Ogden, Utah.

Southern Pacific Transportation Co. will be the parent company of a single 15,000-mile, 15-state operation with headquarters in San Francisco. However, Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroads, Southern Pacific Lines and another subsidiary, St. Louis Southwestern Railway Co. will retain their names, said Jack A. Stuffer, D&RGW's Salt Lake director of marketing and sales.

The new rail system will have 15,000 miles of track compared with 24,000 for the Union Pacific, the nation's largest railroad, and will serve 15 states extending east from California to Missouri and south from Oregon to Louisiana and southern Texas.

Currently, the Southern Pacific has some 13,000 rail miles while the Denver & Rio Grande has 2,200 miles of track.

"The two railroads are a natural fit of logical allies — so natural it's a wonder the combination wasn't accomplished long ago," said Philip Anschutz, owner of Denver-based Rio Grande Industries, parent company of D&RGW Railroad. Anschutz said the merger should be completed by December.

The Southern Pacific has been unprofitable since it went into trusteeship in 1983, a state that limits management's ability to make long-term plans and financial commitments. The Southern Pacific has to enter the real world of active competition and real growth as soon as possible, Commissioner J.J. Simmons said before the vote.

Some investors get refunds

BOISE (AP) — Idaho investors got offers of recession for more than $2.7 million in the last year in cases involving securities violations. Department of Finance Director Belton Patty said in the fiscal year ending June 30, 146 Idaho residents were offered recession, in 20 different cases. Recession is a procedure allowing investors the opportunity to get a refund of their investment, plus interest. Either way, the offer of recession prevents the investor from later suing for a refund.

Patty said the offers ranged from $119 to one resident to $750,000 to a group of 40 investors.

Of the total, $2.3 million came because of court orders and the rest through department orders, as the result of investigations or customer complaints.

State nets money faster

BOISE (AP) — State Treasurer Lydia Justice Edwards says a new state law may mean an extra $300,000 per year in state investment income.

Since July 1, all tax payments and other fund transfers over $100,000 must be made by electronic transfer. The result is that the state receives its money quicker, eliminating the "float" of between two and eight days between the time money is sent to the state and the time it is deposited.

The Board of Examiners recently adopted regulations to put the new law into effect. The state generates income by investing tax revenue not needed immediately to pay bills.

Man drowns when boat sinks

CASCADE (AP) — A 68-year-old Fruitland man has drowned after his boat filled with water and sank in Cascade Reservoir.

William F. Heitz drowned shortly after 2:45 p.m. Thursday, near the east shore of the lake, Valley County Sheriff Lewis Pratt said. Heitz' boat was anchored about 35 feet offshore while he, his wife and another couple fished, Pratt said.

"A little wind came up, spraying water inside the boat," Pratt said. "Before they could pull anchor, the boat sank."

He said the 14-foot motorized boat was over the weight capacity and sank stern first in about 10 feet of water.

Only one person in the party was wearing a life jacket and none could swim well, Pratt said. They told the sheriff they saw Heitz swimming around the bow of the boat and assumed he was with them upon reaching shore.

IPC gives Potlatch water

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Power Co. has agreed to release 40,000 acre-feet of water from its Hells Canyon hydroelectric complex in the next 20 days to help Potlatch Corp. keep its Lewiston pulp and paper plant in full operation.

The Lewiston plant was faced with restrictions or closure because river flows were too low to accept normal effluent of wood-product waste, under federal laws.

Outflows from Hells Canyon Dam will increase by about 1,000 cubic feet per second, according to the agreement. The outflows will drop the level of Brownie Reservoir by about three feet by the end of the period but officials said the lower level will not keep boaters from being able to launch and develop parks.

Idaho Power agreed to release the extra water after the Bonneville Power Administration agreed to repay the utility with energy for lost hydroelectric generation in the complex. Potlatch will pay the costs BPA incurs repaying Idaho Power.

Searchers find lost scout

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — A 12-year-old Utah boy missing in the Targhee National Forest was found Friday by searchers in a canyon area south of Yellowstone National Park.

Teton County Sheriff Roger Millward said Jeremy Brown of Layton, Utah, was reported in generally good condition.

"It appears he is in OK condition," he said. "He was lost and disoriented, but suffering nothing more than being hungry. So at this point in time it looks like a happy conclusion to this particular search."

Court: No stay for Andrews

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Supreme Court, on a 3-2 vote, has declined to reconsider its stay of execution for death-row inmate William Andrews.

The decision to deny the Utah attorney general's motion for reconsideration came after the justices met in conference all afternoon Thursday, and they issued the order just before the court offices closed at 5 p.m.

Chief Justice Gordon R. Hall and Justices Michael Zimmerman and Christine Durham voted to deny the request for reconsideration. Justices Richard Howe and I. Daniel Stewart voted to reconsider the stay.

"In all likelihood, this means that Andrews will not be executed on the scheduled date of Sept. 14," said Associate Deputy Attorney General Paul M. Warner.

"There is an outside chance the court could resolve the appeal currently before it on Sept. 12, and lift the stay of execution in time for Andrews to be executed on schedule. But that is very unlikely," he said.

Earlier this week, the court granted Andrews a stay of execution after his attorneys argued that such a stay was mandated by law because Andrews still has an appeal pending before the state's highest court.

The decision came in a minute entry before the Utah Attorney General's Office had a chance to respond in writing to the request for a stay. That angered state prosecutors, who felt the high court should at least have listened to their side.

The state contends that the issues in the appeal should have been addressed earlier, and that the Utah Supreme Court is in error in both hearing the appeal and granting the stay.

The appeal claims Andrews' attorney at the time of his trial was incompetent because he did not challenge the judge's instructions to the jury that "created an alternative of finding Andrews guilty of a lesser offense than capital homicide."

Andrews contends he was not the one who shot five people during a robbery at the Ogden Hi-Fi Shop in 1974, killing three of them.

D River loses title of shortest

LINCOLN CITY, Ore. (AP) — Oregon's "D River" will lose its title as the world's shortest river in the 1989 edition of the Guinness Book of World Records, but city officials are angling to regain the title.

Editors of the annual publication agreed to give the title to the Roe River in Great Falls, Mont., after a group of fifth-grade students there spent the past school year researching the river, which flows through a state park.

The students concluded the Roe is 201 feet, far shorter than the 440-foot D River near Lincoln City. They submitted their evidence to the Guinness editors.

"On the basis of that, the Roe River was shorter," assistant editor Cyd Smith said from the publisher's New York office.

News of the change was not well-received in Lincoln City, however. The D River has held the shortest river title for 30 years.

"While a river begins and ends may be in the eye of the beholder," Mayor Del Isham said Wednesday.

In fact, Lincoln City now insists the D is only 120 feet long, give or take 5 feet. City officials are preparing documentation to convince Guinness editors that they were right the first time and that the D River should regain its rightful title in the book's 1990 edition. The deadline is past for next year's edition.

"Of course, the question being asked in Great Falls is: How can a river shrink from 440 feet to 120 feet? At first it was funny, but fewer people are laughing now that it's clear Lincoln City is serious. "It's fun to a point, but it has no end when people can come back and keep shortening it until it's kind of ridiculous," said Susie Nardinger, the Great Falls teacher who led her class in the river study.

The Roe River's acceptance into the records book is a matter of pride to the community's 60,000 residents, she said.

"Our students went about it perfectly innocently," she said. "The victory has been marred because Oregon came out with its claims and, in a sense, stole the limelight at the peak of their success."

Signs soon will grace the banks of the Roe to proclaim its world-class status. About 625 miles away in Lincoln City, similar signs remain along the D River and there are no plans to remove them.

DOT eases truck restrictions on much improved U.S. 95

BOISE (AP) — Because of improvements in some problem areas, the Department of Transportation is easing some trucking restrictions on U.S. 95, the state's major north-south highway.

Transportation Director Kermit Kiebert, who announced the changes on Friday, said they could have a significant impact on intrastate commerce. Some of the changes apply to other highways as well.

"In many areas of the state, the trucking industry is the primary means of transporting goods to marketplace," Kiebert said.

Longer truck combinations will be allowed on portions of U.S. 95.

Between New Meadows and Grangeville, truck combinations up to 85 feet will be allowed, by special permit. Department spokesman Clayton Sul-ivan said longer trailers will be allowed, and the overall length of a rig can be increased because of improvements in some sharp bends and other areas.

Work also was done on U.S. 95 south of Coeur d'Alene and at Mica Hill to eliminate problems, he said. By special permit, rigs with an overall length up to 105 feet will be allowed, Sullivan said, which for the first time will allow triple-trailer combinations.

Kiebert said long truck combinations are required to cease operations when unsafe conditions exist and the department retains full authority to impose length restrictions when necessary.

Larger trucks are more economical to operate, Kiebert said, with fewer trips required to haul a product to market and resulting lower costs to consumers.

line rate potential through the central corridor of the United States, which gives people of Utah and Colorado a competitive route with the Union Pacific Railroad. That's very important in today's deregulated world," he said.

Stauffer said he did not know if the merger will mean additional jobs in Utah, where D&RGW employs about 600 people.

"But we should see increased traffic through this corridor," he said.

Tuesday's action comes out of the ICC's denial of a merger between Southern Pacific and the Santa Fe Southern Pacific Railroad. The merger was never completed because the ICC ruled in 1986 that it would reduce competition in the industry.

The larger Southern Pacific has been held in a voting trust since 1983 when it entered a merger agreement with the Santa Fe Railway to create the Santa Fe Southern Pacific Co.

In making the decision, the ICC turned down a rival $1.25 billion bid by the Kansas City Southern Railway, which Commissioner Paul Lamboli called inadequate and anti-competitive.

The new rail system will have 15,000 miles of track compared with 24,000 for the Union Pacific, the nation's largest railroad, and will serve 15 states extending east from California to Missouri and south from Oregon to Louisiana and southern Texas.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

One cannot manage too many affairs like pumpkins in the water, one pops up while you try to hold down the other.

Chinese proverb.

Today's hand was played in the 1970 World Championships. The Aces vs Norway. In that year, the Aces won their first world title, to be followed by more than a decade of first- or second-place finishes.

WEST: K J 5, A 10 7 4, 9 8 2, 10 6 5, A K 8 3 2. EAST: 9 8 2, 7 8 2, A K 8 3 2.

The no-trump game was reached at both tables and both declarers got a heart lead up to their major tenace. Both Souths won the queen and led a club to dummy's ace. A low spade from dummy went to South's queen and West's king, and at this point the two pairs diverged.

Vulnerable: East-West. Dealer: South. The bidding: South West North East. 1 Pass 1 Pass. 3 NT Pass 3 Pass. Opening lead: Heart four. BID WITH THE ACES: K J 5, A 10 7 4, 9 8 2, 10 6 5, A K 8 3 2.

When Bob Homan beat the West dealer, he imaginatively returned his low spade after winning the spade king. Thinking that he had six clubs, two hearts and a spade, South saw no reason to risk a finesse, and dashed straight to the club.

ANSWER: Three clubs. The big fit justifies one more move, and the raise is the logical choice.

Send bridge questions to The Aces, P.O. Box 13483, Dallas, Texas 75213, with self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

For as many years as I have been used car sales manager I have never had as many fine locally owned, used, clean cars on the lot. Rather than take these cars to the Salt Lake City Auction, I am going to sell them here. All used cars have been drastically reduced. If these prices don't fit your way of thinking, come in and make me an offer.

Sincerely,

Emmett Harrison

Azinger seizes lead in PGA tourney

EDMOND, Okla. (AP) — Paul Azinger's back problem is gone. Now, with the lead at the halfway point of the PGA National Championship, he has a Palmer problem.

Arnold is his close foe. "He's an inspiration," Azinger said Friday after he shot a 5-under-par 66, with the legendary Arnold Palmer as his partner, and completed two rounds at 133, nine under par.

"I've played four rounds with him two at Bay Hill and two here. I shot 68, 67 at Bay Hill and 67, 66 here," Azinger said.

"Today, he told me you ought to try to keep me around. I wish I could. He's an inspiration. He tries so hard. He hits the ball so well. He grimaces when he misses a 5-foot putt on the first hole as much as he does on the 36th.

"It's amazing he's as competitive as he is after as many years as he's played golf," Azinger said.

But Palmer won't be with him over the final 36 holes. The 59-year-old failed to qualify for the final two rounds.

"It's much too early to start thinking about winning," said Azinger, the 1987 Player of the Year and a winner earlier this season in Palmer's Bay Hill Classic.

"What you try to do in the first two rounds is jockey for position, get yourself around the lead.

"Then you don't want to do anything different. Don't change things. Keep on doing what you've been doing, and then, on the last few holes on Sunday, then you can start to let the leader's shadow influence what you're doing," Azinger said.

Azinger said the back problems that threatened his entry in the last of the year's Big Four events, is a thing of the past.

"I don't have a back problem any more — except when I try to sleep. But I haven't slept much since Thursday and I was really getting fatigued.

"We had a very welcome wait on the 17th tee, and that helped," said Azinger, who held a one-shot lead over club pro Jay Overton.

a growing gallery, also had a 66 and was at 134.

"That's what club pros are supposed to do," the graying, 37-year-old Overton said of his on-course conversations with spectators. "If we're not nice, we get fired."

The Oak Tree Golf Club, ranked as the toughest par 71 course in this country but a tempting target in the absence of wind, was subjected to a record-setting barrage of low scores.

Forty-one broke par for the day. The previous single-day record for subpar scores in the PGA was 31.

In addition to Azinger and Overton, Curt Byrum and Calvin Peete also had 66s. Dave Rummels came within one stroke of the PGA record with a 64 and Gary Koch shot 65.

"I can't believe how low the scores are," said Rummels, a third year touring pro who matched his career-high finish with a tie for fourth last week.

"But the conditions are perfect for scoring; light winds and the greens are soft so you can throw it right in there," he said.

Rummels scored nine birdies, including five in a row on the front, in his course-record effort that, he said, could have been better.

"I felt like I could have shot in the 50s out there," said Rummels, who finished 36 holes at 137, five under par.

Roy Floyd, 49, a two-time winner of this title, was tied with John Cook at 136, three off the pace. Floyd had a second consecutive 68, Cook 69.

David Graham, 42, who won the PGA in 1979 and '87 and was tied with Koch, Rummels, Steve Jones and Tomoy Nakajima of Japan at 137. Jones and Nakajima each had a 68.

Greg Norman also had a 71 and was in a large group at 139.

"I'm basically disappointed," said Norman, who hadn't played since injuring a wrist in the U.S. Open. "It was moving day this morning. The course played two shots easier."

The exceptionally low scoring, however, did not extend to Seve Ballesteros and such aging stars as Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino. That quartet, with 36 major titles among them, all failed to qualify for the final two rounds.

Ballesteros, who won the British Open last month, took a 75 that included a triple-bogey 6 on the 19th hole where — among other things — he inadvertently bounced one shot off a stone wall and stubbed a chip, moving the ball only a couple of yards.

He had a 146 total.

The 48-year-old Nicklaus, holder of a record five PGA titles, scored 15 strokes to play the 15th and 16th holes, shot 79 and had a 151 total.

He 3-putted both the 16th and 16th and, on the par 16th, drove into a creek, hit into the woods and lost his ball and eventually made a 9 on the hole.

Palmer was 76-150 and Trevino 71-148.

Defending champion Larry Nelson was 71-141 and Tom Watson was one shot better at 140 after a 68.

Undhjem finishes romp into women's golf championship

TWIN FALLS — With most of the suspense dissipated by her first-round 67, Virginia Undhjem coasted through the second round and into the championship of the Charlotte Vane-Engelen Memorial Twin Falls women's medal play tournament Friday.

Undhjem posted a 77 Friday, a 10-stroke swing from her course record-tying effort of Thursday. But since runner-up Shauna Robinson also saw her second-day score rise by eight strokes, Undhjem's lead was never in jeopardy.

Undhjem took the title with 144 stroke with Robinson second at 158.

In the championship flight net division, Jan Hatch and Roberta Robertson shared first place at 136 while Wilma Shockey had 140, Louise Smith 144 and Sergene Soronen 145.

Lois Maddy claimed the first flight gross title at 163, some 10 strokes ahead of second-place Mary Obenchain. Kathy Janson's 126 earned the net prize while Phyllis Taylor and Diane Fischer had 138, June Olmstead 139, and Grace Bennett and Carole Kasel both 142.

Another 10-stroke difference arose in the second flight where Barb Bacon outdistanced Vi Young 177-187. Froda Ward paced net with 133, followed by Terry Kuogan at 136, Ruth Sonnie and Tracy Haskins at 138 and Jean Meigs and Norma Pickett, both 139.

Margerie Astorquia led from wire-to-wire in the third flight, taking gross with 201 strokes. Elaine Wigington was second at 208.

In the net division, Jane Purves nipped Diana Urie 142-141 with Lori Brown and Elva Felton just one stroke farther back. Alice Sabala was fifth at 144.

As tattoos indicate, Gastineau is in love

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — As soon as his divorce is final, wedding bells will ring for New York Jets defensive end Mark Gastineau and movie star Brigitte Nielsen, the pair announced Friday.

"We want something very romantic," said Nielsen, 25, who recently was divorced from actor Sylvester Stallone and has a 4½-year-old son, Julian, who lives in her native Denmark with her first husband.

No date has been set for the nuptials since Gastineau has yet to sever the knot with his first wife, Lisa. They split in 1986 and have a daughter, Britanny, 5.

While most people settle for an exchange of rings, the betrothed couple disclosed that as a symbol of their eternal love, they have had their names tattooed on each others' buttocks.

"It means I really love this person and I'm going to be with her for eternity," said Gastineau, 31, who is attending Jets training camp at Hofstra University in Hempstead.

"I can really call this true love," said Nielsen, who proudly showed off her ring, diamonds in the shape of a nine, reminiscent of Gastineau's jersey number, 99. "I am the happiest I have ever been."

"We want lots of kids, 10 of them," declared Nielsen, who said her movie career will be secondary to "being with Mark."

She had a miscarriage last May while filming in Rome.

"The miscarriage is one of the most unfortunate things that ever happened to both of us," said Gastineau. "It tore us apart."

They met during the Super Bowl in January and there have been rumors of an engagement and a broken engagement.

"We may have split up but in our hearts we were never apart," said Nielsen.

Tyson to mine British gold

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Tyson will get a gross purse of "well over $5 million" from his heavyweight title defense in the fall against England's Frank Bruno, the champion's manager expected Friday.

"And I'm being conservative," Bill Cayton said. "It could be substantially more."

Tyson will fight Bruno Oct. 8 at Wembley stadium outside of London, and the bout will be televised in the United States on HBO.

"It will be televised at 7 p.m. in the East. That's at least 2-3 hours earlier than usual, so the fight will begin at midnight in England, instead of 2 or 3 in the morning, which is great for the gate," Cayton said.

He estimated the gate revenue could reach $6 million.

Promoter Jarvis Astaire said the stadium will have a capacity of 60,000 for the fight, and Cayton figured the bout could draw 45,000.

Cayton said Tyson would receive two-thirds of the revenue from the gate and sale of foreign rights after costs, which include stadium rental and promotional expenses. Bruno will get one-third of the revenue after costs, according to Cayton.

Tyson's purse will include money he is to receive under his seven-fight HBO contract, which reportedly is worth $26.6 million.

Bruno has been the World Boxing Council's No. 1 challenger since last October, and the World Boxing Association made him a leading contender earlier this year.

His bout with Tyson was originally scheduled for June, but the 26-year-old British fighter was forced to wait when the champion instead fought Michael Spinks. Sept. 3 was the next date set, but a contract dispute between Tyson and Cayton created a further delay.

"There was never any doubt that he would fight Bruno," Cayton said. "It's a mandatory WBC defense because Bruno is the No. 1 contender. Mike had to fight him within a year of the Tyrell Biggs fight, which was last Oct. 15."

"Jose Sulaiman (head of the WBC) agreed to an extension to the end of the year, but now that won't be necessary."

Tyson announced his retirement during his dispute with Cayton, then said he wanted to take six-to-eight weeks off, but will be fighting with a shorter vacation.

"He will start training again about Aug. 22, and will go to England to complete his training about 3-4 weeks before the fight," Cayton said. The champion will spend the next week or so in California where his wife, Robin Givens, will be involved in the taping of episodes of Head of the Class, a television show in which she is a featured actress.

Cayton said he thought the later date for the Tyson-Bruno fight will help it as a money maker.

"The Olympics will be over, and the world can concentrate on the Tyson-Bruno fight. Mike is a bigger hero around the world than he is in the United States. Six major TV specials have been done on him in Japan, and the seventh is in production. They've done four or five on him in Italy, and in England and France. He's big, big."

Swim records still tumbling

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — David Berkoff set a world record in the 100-meter backstroke for the second time in eight hours and Matt Redman qualified for his sixth Olympic event Friday night at the U.S. Swimming Trials.

Berkoff, of Willow Grove, Pa., swam underwater for about the first 35 meters of the final and popped to the surface in the lead. He finished in 54.91 seconds, .04 of a second faster than his prelim time, in which he also set a world mark.

The previous record was 55.00 by Igor Poliansky at the Soviet Olympic trials on July 16.

Bondi, 6-6, of Moraga, Calif., was second in 22.50 freestyles, the 100 butterfly and two relays at Seoul. He also is a probable starter in a seventh event, the 400 medley relay.

Jager, 6-4, was only .03 of a second off his own American record and .08 slower than the 1988 world record held by Peter Williams, a South African who can't compete in the Olympics.

Janet Evans of Placentia, Calif., won her third event at the trials by capturing the 800 freestyle in 8:23.69.

Evans, 16, won the 400 individual medley in American record time and followed that with victories in her own record specialties, the 400 and 800 freestyles.

Tami Bruce of San Diego, second to Evans in the 400 freestyle, did it again in the 800 with a clocking of 8:30.00.

Melvin Stewart of Fort Mill, S.C., captured the men's 200 butterfly in 1:58.86, followed by Mark Dean of Kansas City, Kan., in 1:59.56.

The Olympic berths for Stewart and Dean again kept veteran Pablo Morales off the U.S. team.

Morales, of Santa Clara, Calif., the world record-holder in the 200 butterfly and the American record-holder in the 200, finished third in the trials in both events.

Morales swam the third-fastest time in the world in the 100 butterfly and Dean beat him Friday night by 51 seconds. Morales' third and final chance comes Saturday in the 200 individual medley.

Mary Wynn of Mercer Island, Fla., already an Olympic qualifier in the women's 200 freestyle and 400 freestyle relay, clinched another berth by winning the 200 individual medley.

Hor time of 2:16.28 was the fourth-best in the world this year and more than three seconds off Tracy Caulkins' American record.

Miami starting third season of trying to patch leaky defense

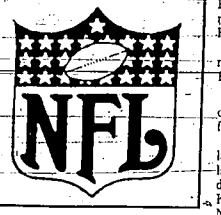

By The Associated Press

For the Miami Dolphins, the more things change, the more they stay the same.

The Dolphins, who have missed the playoffs the last two seasons because of gaping holes in their defense, will still be looking for the plugs Saturday night when they play host to the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins.

Despite drafting heavily for defense, Miami has given up a total of 727 yards — just short of 400 a game — in their first two exhibitions, a 27-21 victory over San Francisco at London's Wembley Stadium and a 20-17 loss to Chicago last week.

"There are some things that we see that are encouraging, but as far as putting the defense together, and opening the season and feeling good about it, we're not anywhere close to that stage right now," Coach Don Shula said.

The Miami-Washington game, which will be televised nationally by ABC, is one of the highlights of the NFL's second full week of preseason football.

It also features Sunday night's Minnesota-Chicago game at Gieberg, Sweden and two traditional regional showdowns: the New York Jets at the New York Giants on Saturday, and Philadelphia at Pittsburgh Sunday night. CBS will carry the Vikings-Bears and ESPN the Eagles-Steelers.

The weekend began Thursday night with Seattle beating Detroit 16-13 in overtime.

New Orleans was at Phoenix Friday night in the first Arizona game for the transplanted Cardinals.

Other Saturday games include Dallas at the Los Angeles Raiders; Cleveland at Tampa Bay; Green Bay at Indianapolis; Cincinnati at Buffalo; Kansas City at Atlanta; Houston vs. New England at Memphis; Tennes; San Francisco at Denver; and San Diego at the Los Angeles Rams.

Miami, 26th of the 28 NFL teams in defense last year, has installed John Bosa and Rick Graf, the two top draft choices a year ago, in the starting lineup at defensive end and linebacker, although Bosa currently is out with an injury.

The coaches were hoping for quicker development from this year's top choices, defensive end Eric Kumerow and safety Jarvis Williams along with cornerback Rodney Thomas, a fifth-round pick.

"They're progressing," says defensive coordinator Tom Olivadotti said. "But I don't know that they're ready to top in there's right now."

Washington, meanwhile, also had its defensive problems the first week, surrendering 434 yards in a 44-31 loss to Pittsburgh.

"I would like us to turn it up a notch because we played so poorly last week," Coach Joe Gibbs said. "I'd like us to play a good game against a good Miami team. They have a good reputation for playing hard in the preseason."

The Miami defense may get something of a break because the secondary may not have to face Washington's two top receivers, Gary Clark and Art Monk. Both are suffering from hamstring injuries.

The Dolphins will be without Dosa, linebacker Hugh Green and guard Roy Foster. And quarterback Dan Marino will sit out the game as Shula takes a look at the three quarterbacks fighting for two backup jobs — Ron Jaworski, David Archer and rookie Kerwin Bell.

Washington will give a long look to third-stringer Mark Rypien, who completed 16 of 27 passes for 210 yards in the second half against Pittsburgh. His development would allow the Redskins to use backup Jay Schroeder as trade bait.

Unlike the Redskins and Dolphins, the Packers go into the game at Indianapolis looking for just one quarterback. Last week, in a 34-3 loss to the Giants, they crossed midfield just four times behind Mark Wilson, Randy Wright and Blair Kiel.

This week's, Coach Lindy Infante will start Don Majkowski, who started five games as a rookie last season. He'll also take another look at Wilson, the former Raider, and Robbie Bosco, the former Brigham Young star who has spent his first two NFL seasons on injured reserve with an arm injury.

"Infante has specific reasons for each," he said.

"I want to see Marc end up in a two-minute situation before the half, regardless of whether we are ahead or behind," he said. "And then we'll take a look at him coming out of the tunnel, playing the third quarter. Then I want to get a look at Robbie in the fourth quarter and see whether he can play."

"I think he's back now. I think he knows what we're doing," Bosco concurs.

"I feel real comfortable with the system," he said. "Hopefully, I'll make all the correct decisions in the game and the right reads and everything falls into place."

Boston runs home streak to 23 in row

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox set an American League record with their 23rd straight victory at home, beating the Detroit Tigers 9-4 Friday night as Jim Rice's two-run homer capped a six-run third inning.

The Red Sox, winning the opener in a showdown between AL East leaders, surpassed the league mark of 22 set by the Philadelphia Athletics in 1931. The all-time home record is 26 by the New York Giants in 1916, followed by Pittsburgh's 24-game streak in 1976.

Dwight Evans went 3-for-4 and hit two of Boston's four doubles and Mike Greenwell drove in two runs as the Red Sox broke losses in its return to Fenway Park. Boston, leading the majors in batting and runs, is hitting .335 with 23 home runs and has outscored opponents 151-73 during its streak.

Boston moved back within 3 1/2 games of Detroit. The Red Sox went from the Tigers last week before a 2-7 road trip in which they batted only .229 and lost four times in Detroit.

ous 53 games. The five errors were a season high for the Rangers.

—Yett, 6-4, was on the disabled list June 14 to Aug. 4 with a pulled biceps muscle. Don Gordon, the third Cleveland pitcher, pitched 2-1-3 shutout innings to earn his first save.

Toronto 3, Kansas City 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Jim Klaczek allowed seven runs in 8 1/3 innings and Tony Fontana tripled and singled as the Toronto Blue Jays held on to defeat the Kansas City Royals 3-2 Friday night for their fifth straight victory.

Klaczek, averaging a 5-1 loss last week to the Royals and Floyd Bannister, struck out seven and walked only two to raise his record to 6-12. Klaczek allowed singles to Pat Tabler and Frank White in the ninth and was replaced by Tom Henke.

Bill Buckner singled to lead the bases. After Jim Esposito struck out, Jamie Quirk singled in two runs but Henke settled down to strike out Kurt Stillwell on a 3-2 pitch and earn his 23rd save.

trailed after eight innings. The Yankees snapped a four-game losing streak and moved to within four games of first-place Detroit in the American League East.

Steve Shields, 3-3, had seemingly allowed another New York opponent to win in the late innings when he gave up Randy Bush's 12th homer, a two-run shot, in the eighth for a 4-3 Minnesota lead.

But the Yankees, who have lost six games when they were just one out away from victory, stormed back against Twins' bullpen ace Jeff Brantner.

With one out in the ninth, Juan Berenguer walked Don Slaught and was relieved by Reardon, 0-4. Pinch-hitter Jack Clark singled, sending pinch-runner Wayne Tolleson to second.

After Rafael Santana singled to lead the bases, Henderson lined a single to center, scoring Tolleson and Clark. Claudell Washington drove in an insurance run with a single to left.

Milwaukee 8, Baltimore 3

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Mike Struss survived a shaky first inning to win his sixth straight game and Robin Yount's two-run double capped a four-run fourth as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Baltimore Orioles 8-3 Friday night.

The Brewers have beaten the Orioles 11 straight times at County Stadium. Birkbeck, 8-5 overall but 6-0 since returning from the minors July 2, allowed three runs in the first, giving up three opposite-field doubles but was bailed out by the Brewers' rally.

Cleveland 6, Texas 3

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rich Yett allowed five hits in 6 1/3 innings for his best victory since June 8 and the Cleveland Indians took advantage of five Texas errors to beat the Rangers 6-3 Friday night and snap a five-game losing streak.

Yett's only blemish was only his second in the last 13 games. Texas shortstop Scott Fletcher made three errors after committing just one in his previous

New York 6, Minnesota 4

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Rickey Henderson hit a two-run single in the top of the ninth and Dave Rightt worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the bottom of the inning to give New York its first win of the season when he drove in eight innings, a 6-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins Friday night.

New York was 0-40 this season in games they

Briefly in Sports

Wilson, Barr on state team

BOISE — Two Magic Valley golfers, Brent Barry of Twin Falls and Kade Wilson of Buhl, joined with three Boiseans to qualify for the Idaho team that will compete in the Hogan Cup Tournament Aug. 18-21 at Riverside Country Club in Portland.

The qualifying was conducted in a special 18-hole competition at Boise's Warm Springs Golf Course after completion of the Idaho Junior Golf State championships.

In that competition, Wilson won the 14-15 age-group title. Tara Cantrell of Buhl was the girls 16-17 state champion while Erin Stiles of Wendell claimed the title in the girls 8-9 age division.

The other Magic Valley qualifier coming close to a title was Pat Sites of Wendell who lost in a playoff after tying for the best 18-holes in the boys 12-13 division.

Volleyball clinic set

FILER — A volleyball clinic will be held for seventh and eighth grade candidates at 9 a.m. Tuesday at the Filer gymnasium.

There will be a fee for participation.

WSU quarterback leaves

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Quarterback Peter Rowe, a highly touted 6-foot-2 redshirt freshman, has quit the Washington State University football team and plans to transfer to Wyoming, head coach Dennis Erickson said.

"He's left. He's gone. He's history," Erickson said Thursday of the third-string quarterback from Edmonton, Alberta. Rowe told him he will transfer to the University of Wyoming, the school Erickson coached to a 6-6 record in 1986 before taking the job at Washington State, a Pacific-10 Conference school.

Myricks wins long jump

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Larry Myricks continued his busy journey to the Olympics by winning the long jump at the Hungari Grand Prix track meet Friday with a leap of 28 feet, 3 inches.

The American arrived in Budapest only hours earlier from Sestriere, Italy, where he competed Thursday night.

Morocco's Said-Aouita won the 800 meters in 1 minute, 46.42 seconds, a workout for him after a two-week layoff.

Collins booted by NFL

NEW YORK (AP) — Running back Tony Collins was suspended by the NFL for at least a year Friday after failing a drug test, he took after signing with the Indianapolis Colts last month. Collins was released by the New England Patriots last spring after reports he had resumed drug use.

The 29-year-old Collins, the third leading rusher in New England history, became the eighth player suspended by the league this year for violation of its substance abuse policy. And his penalty was by far the most severe.

"Tony Collins of the Indianapolis Colts was notified Friday that he has been banned from further participation in the NFL in accordance with the NFL's substance abuse policy," NFL spokesman Joe Browne said in a statement.

Citrus Bowl lands ACC

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The Florida Citrus Bowl and the Atlantic Coast Conference agreed Friday on a "flexible" four-year agreement to bring the ACC championship team to Orlando for the annual post-season football game.

The Citrus Bowl committed itself to the ACC for the 1988 and 1990 seasons. In the 1989 and 1991 seasons, bowl officials have the option of inviting the conference champion but can pass up the ACC team for another club.

Cactus Bowl organized

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Tucson will host a college football bowl game next year, providing that organizers can find a corporate sponsor and get a television contract, officials said Friday.

The NCAA granted certification Thursday to the Cactus Bowl, which has plans to begin play in December 1989 at Arizona Stadium on the University of Arizona campus.

Expos edge Mets 5-4 in 12 innings

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Fitzgerald's sacrifice fly in the 12th inning led the Montreal Expos to a 5-2 victory over the New York Mets Friday night despite the combined four-hit pitching of David Cone, Roger McDowell and Randy Myers.

Myers, 5-2, who came in to start the 10th, walked Tim Lincecum and Andres Galarraga to open the inning. Hubie Brooks fouled out, advancing the runners, and Tim Wallach was intentionally walked before Fitzgerald flew out to right, snapping a 2-2 tie. Fitzgerald is 3-for-5 with 10 runs batted in when batting with the bases loaded this season.

Nelson Santovenia followed with a two-run single, the Expos' first hit since the seventh inning.

Montreal is 16-5 in extra-inning games this season.

two before Rafael Ramirez chased him with a double. Mark Davis got his 20th save, striking out Ken Caminiti and getting Alex Trevino to fly out.

Tony Gwynn hit a game-winning double in the seventh and two singles, extending his hitting streak to 10 games.

first game of a two-night doubleheader. The second game was tied at 4-4 in the eighth inning late Friday night. Samuel was hitless in 16 at-bats and 4-for-35 when he singled in two runs in the fourth. He doubled in two runs in the sixth.

San Diego 4, Houston 3

HOUSTON (AP) — Dennis Rasmussen allowed six hits in 8 1/3 innings for his ninth victory in 10 decisions and the San Diego Padres beat Houston 4-3 Friday night, the Astros' third consecutive defeat.

Rasmussen, 11-7, won his fourth straight, striking out two and walking

St. Louis 4, Chicago 0

CHICAGO (AP) — Joe Magrane pitched a one-hitter and Tom Brunansky homered as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Chicago Cubs 4-0 on Friday.

The shutout was the third of Magrane's two-year career and first since last Sept. 23 when he defeated Montreal 1-0 on three hits.
