Yellowstone blazes threaten 2 towns, close park roads

The Associated Press

Idaho fires — A3

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. — Residents of two towns on the edge of Yellowstone National Park were warned Friday they might have to evacuate because of a 36,000-acre forest fire, and inside the park rangers shepherded convoys of tourists down roads otherwise closed by fires.

Forest fires also threatened two communities in Oregon, where youngsters at one Bible camp were sent home as a precaution. Numerous fires also charred woodlands in parts of Washington, California, Utah and Idaho, where one fast-moving fire forced firefighters to pull back Friday.

Two additional battalions of U.S. Army troops, about 1,200 soldiers, from Fort Lewis, Wash., were being trained to assist hard-pressed civilian crews, according to officials of the Boise Interagency Fire Center, which coordinates firefighting efforts in the West. About 1,200 men from Fort Lewis already are fighting fires in and near Yellowstone.

Friday's two convoys of up to 350 cars allowed tourists to get from one side of the park to the other in safety, after a ranger drove the route between the park communities of Canyon and Norris to check its condition.

Ranger Mona Devine said notices were posted Thursday night notifying visitors of the convoys. "They think it's a big adventure. Of course, some of the people are upset," she said.

The convoys filed past the 114,000-acre "North Fork" fire, one-of-10 involving about 400,000 acres of the park.

Just outside the park's northeast entrance, a 36,000-acre blaze in the Absaroka-Beartooth wilderness area in southern Montana threatened two towns Friday and a fire official said evacuation plans were ready.

"We have about a 30 to 40 percent chance that we would have to evacuate" Cooke City and Silver Gate, said David Liebersbach, incident commander on the

FBI looks into sabotage of space shuttle O-rings

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — The FBI said Friday it is investigating apparent sabotage of O-rings destined for space shuttle booster rockets, a problem a NASA official said may have been motivated by a company incentive program.

The defects were detected before any damaged rings were sent to the rocket maker.

A "very small number" of O-rings that appeared to have been deliberately cut were discovered in June by the manufacturer, HydraPak Inc., and the incident was immediately reported to the FBI, NASA, and rocket maker Morton Thiokol, said James Dockstader, HydraPak vice president of operations.

He said a check showed none of the flawed seals was shipped to Morton Thiokol.

"These things are inspected more times than you can hardly believe. But it's a serious nature. This O-ring has a great deal of visibility in the space program and around the world, and we can understand that. They are handled very carefully," Dockstader said.

A faulty O-ring that allowed super-hot exhaust gases to escape sideways through a joint and ignite the shuttle's external "fuel tank was blamed by a presidential commission for the Jan. 28, 1986, Challenger explosion, which killed the craft's seven-member crew and grounded the nation's shuttle program.

J.R. Thompson, director of NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., said some HydraPak employees are suspected of damaging O-rings to receive bonuses awarded to workers who found defects.

"My understanding is they tightened internal final inspection, incentivized it or came up with some kind of program to make sure (no flawed O-rings) got out," Thompson told The Huntsville Times on Friday.

"After HydraPak set up this internal thing, perhaps some employees may have

Marilyn Hempleman's life has changed since a drunken driver killed her daughter earlier this year

Mourning daughter Heidi, starting MADD chapter

Marilyn Hempleman's focus narrows

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A late-night knock on her door narrowed the focus of Marilyn Hempleman's life.

Since the death of her daughter June 9, her life is dominated by two matters: mourning Heidi and starting a local chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers.

"A lot of things (about her death) make me angry," she says. "Maybe it's a compulsion. It's something Marvin (her husband, a Twin Falls County commissioner) doesn't feel. But I want to know all the details, talk to everyone who had seen her."

Marilyn has attended all the court hearings for the man charged with driving drunk down the wrong lane of Interstate 84 and smashing full on into Heidi Hempleman's car. She has driven over the interstate during the day and night, trying to figure out why her daughter failed to swerve out of the way. She has talked to the people who tried to save her daughter's life. She has listened to the recording of Heidi's funeral and pored over her scrapbooks.

"You don't expect a child to precede you in death," she says. "It's the most unnatural thing."

The death is made more difficult to bear because her daughter was killed by a drunken driver.

"It was so needless," she says.

U.S. proposes raising auto gas mileage standard

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Transportation Department, while calling fuel economy standards "a dinosaur that should be extinct," on Friday proposed raising the minimum average gas-mileage for automakers' fleets by at least half a mile per gallon.

The agency proposed setting the corporate average fuel economy, or CAFE, standard at between 26.5 mpg and 27.5 mpg for the 1989 and 1990 model years.

The range is identical to or less than the 27.5 mpg mandated by Congress in the fuel economy program begun in 1975.

However, since the 1986 model year the department has set the CAFE standard at 26 mpg, so the proposed level would actually be more stringent than that now in effect.

"CAFE is a dinosaur that should be extinct," said Jim Burnley, secretary of transportation.

The 1975 fuel economy law, adopted to reduce petroleum consumption at a time of rapidly rising prices, requires U.S. manufacturers to meet an average fuel-consumption level of 27.5 mpg on all passenger cars they make.

The law allows the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, an agency within the Transportation Department, to lower the standard below 27.5 mpg if it finds that manufacturers have made reasonable efforts to achieve that level.

Moreover, the law requires the agency to consider whether achieving the 27.5 mpg level is economically and practically feasible.

It was under those provisions of the law that the agency lowered the standard.

Ex-GI spy suspect refuses to cooperate in probe

Los Angeles Times

BONN, West Germany — A former U.S. serviceman arrested this week on suspicion of spying for the Communist Eastern Bloc is refusing to cooperate with West German authorities, complicating U.S. and NATO efforts to assess the intelligence losses caused by the spy ring he allegedly led, German officials said Friday.

Retired Army Sgt. 1st Class Clyde Lee Conrad, 41, of Sebring, Ohio, was seized Tuesday at his home in West Germany after a long investigation by U.S., West German and Swedish agents.

But Alexander Prechtel, spokesman for the Federal Public Prosecutor's office in Karlsruhe, West Germany, declared Friday, "Conrad is not helping us. He is refusing to say anything. So we'll have to do it the slow way. Our first task is to establish exactly what secret documents he had access to. That is going to take some time."

In Washington, Army officials said Conrad was granted a "top secret" clearance in 1978 after a background check by the Defense Investigative Service and the Army's Intelligence and Security Command. He held the clearance until he "retired" in September 1985 after 20 years of service, according to Army spokesman Lt. Col. Greg Rixan.

Conrad's top-secret clearance allowed him access to much of the Army's most sensitive information in his capacity as an archives clerk at the headquarters of the U.S. 8th Infantry Division at Bad Kreuznach, southwest of Mainz, West Germany.

Army officials acknowledged that Conrad's clearance was not reviewed periodically, as required by U.S. military regulations, because of a large backlog in security checks. Rixan said that the Pentagon fell behind in normal five-year security reviews in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

U.S. Attorney General Richard Thornburgh said Friday it was unlikely that the Justice Department would seek charges against Conrad.

Idaho drought — A severe drought in Idaho has caused a sharp decline in the state's hay production. The drought has affected the entire state, with the most severe conditions in the southern and central regions. Farmers are reporting significant losses in hay yields, and some are being forced to cut back on their livestock. The Idaho Department of Agriculture is providing information on drought relief programs and urging farmers to conserve water. The drought is expected to continue through the end of the season, with little hope for significant rainfall. Farmers are being urged to take advantage of the current hay market, as there has been a strong demand for hay in the Midwest from Idaho. Some producers are already cutting back on their production. Park also was closed, because of a 21,500-acre fire in the Bridger-Teton National Forest. Some 1,525 firefighters, including about 600 soldiers from Fort Lewis, battled the 162,700-acre Clover-Mist fire burning in the park and in steep, rugged terrain in the Shoshone National Forest.

Tape of Vincennes action shows swings of crew's emotions

NEW-YORK (AP) — A crewman aboard the USS Vincennes shouted, "That was a dead-on!" when one of its missiles shot down an Iranian passenger plane that they believed was a F-14 fighter, according to a Navy videotape obtained by television networks Friday.

The tape, made by a Navy camera team on board the ship, was obtained by NBC and ABC through the Freedom of Information Act and shown on the Friday evening newscasts. NBC reported that the crew members appeared "bewildered and solemn" after learning the missile had shot down a passenger jet. During the battle, which used the 5-inch guns mounted on deck, one crewman yelled, "I don't know where it's hitting."

Group asks McCall for help

McCALL (AP) — Proponents of an improved U.S. 95 are lobbying the town of McCall on Idaho 55 for help and plan to extend their efforts to Nevada.

The Scenic Highway 95 Association held a public forum in McCall Thursday night attended by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, state Transportation Department Director Kermit Kiebert and Rep. Gayle Wilde, R-McCall.

Association members emphasized the need for the area encompassed by U.S. 95 and Idaho 55 — referred to as "the loop" — to push its attributes as a tourist destination.

Boating victim was drunk

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A 16-year-old Washington state youth who was killed when his speedboat plowed into a log boom on Lake Coeur d'Alene was legally intoxicated, the Kootenai County coroner reported.

Bryan Lucassen, of Spokane, had a blood alcohol content of .10 percent, the level considered legally intoxicated, when he died Aug. 16, Dr. Robert West said Thursday.

Lucassen died of head injuries and traumatic asphyxiation when he was thrown through the boat's windshield and into the water after striking a log boom being towed on the lake about 11:40 p.m. A passenger, Matthew Howard, 16, also of Spokane, suffered a sprained wrist.

Be aware of travel offers

BOISE (AP) — Attorney General Jim Jones has a bit of advice for people considering "special" travel offers.

Think twice about it, Jones said Friday, especially if the offer involves giving your credit card number over the telephone.

"People should be very careful to evaluate travel offers to insure that they are not throwing money down the drain," he said. "Prospective travelers should deal with reputable travel agencies or take other steps to insure that they actually get what they pay for."

"Consumers should be very reluctant to give credit card numbers over the phone to pay for a vacation package or for any other purpose," he said.

Jones held a news conference to announce that in the first 13 months of operation of the new consumer protection agency in his office, 1,963 individual complaints were received. They involved $539,418 in consumer complaints.

REXBURG (AP) — A Madison County toddler was killed Thursday night when the horse she was riding fell, a sheriff's office spokesman said.

Tina Mortensen, 3, daughter of Terry and Lois Mortensen of Salem, was riding the horse with her brother at their home when the accident occurred about 7:30 p.m.

She died at the scene of head injuries, Madison County authorities said.

ISLAND PARK (AP) — The parents of an Ohio woman last seen in the Island Park area Monday are offering a $10,000 reward for her safe return or the conviction of anyone responsible for her disappearance.

Christine M. Warnick, 36, of Powell, Ohio, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Cole of Wisconsin, a Fremont County sheriff's spokeswoman said.

Mrs. Warnick was reported missing by her husband, Bradley Warnick, who found her abandoned van on old U.S. Highway 20 north of Lost Chance. It appeared the van had been forced off the road and the driver's side door was open, said Fremont County Sheriff Terry Thompson.

Butte teachers OK contract

ARCO (AP) — Teachers in the Butte County School District have ratified a new contract that provides a 3.2 percent overall salary increase.

Butte Education Association President Karen Pyron said the agreement approved Thursday on a vote of 24 to 8 sets a base salary of $15,800 for entry level teachers with a bachelor's degree.

The previous base salary was $15,550.

School Board Chairman Eric Aikele said the board may approve the agreement when it calls a special meeting early next week to interview candidates to replace Superintendent Sam Sears, who died Aug. 11.

New Hayden park put on hold

HAYDEN (AP) — Inadequate development specifications and a faulty land appraisal have kept the Idaho Parks and Recreation Department from releasing federal funds for Hayden's Finucane Park, a state official said Thursday.

Jake Howard, administrator of Parks and Recreation's Land and Water Conservation Fund, also said Hayden city officials may be as much as $70,000 off in estimates of how much the park ultimately will cost.

Workers have done nothing with the 10-acre park since building fences and ballfield backstops and clearing and sculpting the fields in the spring, Howard said. City officials have been waiting for $120,000 in federal matching funds, administered by the state, to continue work.

U of I professor enters plea

WALLACE (AP) — A University of Idaho professor has entered a plea to involuntary manslaughter in the shooting death of his hunting partner last October.

Roy Edward Williams, a U of I professor of hydrogeology, entered an "Alford" plea in 1st District Court in a plea agreement with Shoshone County Prosecutor John Cossel. In such a plea, a defendant does not technically admit guilt, but may believe there is enough evidence to convict him.

Workers withdraw from fire

By The Associated Press

Swirling winds and increasingly dry conditions forced fire bosses on Friday to completely withdraw crews from the raging Eagle Bar fire near Hells Canyon until they develop a new plan for attacking the blaze.

"The fire is doing some really weird things," said Payette National Forest spokeswoman Carla Tipton. "It's really windy and everything is extremely dry. It's very erratic fire behavior."

Hundreds of firefighters were pulled off the lines after the blaze made another major run early Friday, racing to over 3,000 acres in heavy timber near the Idaho-Oregon border.

Thirty firefighters were trapped for an hour in a raging hotspot and had to use their fire shelters for safety. They were finally airlifted from the fire by helicopter at dawn.

On the eastern side of the state between Palisades Reservoir and Grays Lake, fire bosses were just beginning to mobilize manpower on the 800-acre Trail Creek fire in the Caribou National Forest. The fire was sparked by lightning Wednesday night.

"Our problem is there are so many fires burning in the west, especially in this area, that we're strapped for crews and equipment," spokesman Dan Pogreiss said.

Some 160 firefighters remained on the lines around the 1,420-acre Boston Lake fire in the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness about 20 miles southeast of Elk City, said Nez Perce National Forest spokeswoman Mary Zabinski. Fire bosses still were monitoring the 3,164-acre Ladder Creek fire in the same general area as it slowly burned down Crofoot Creek drainage toward the natural fire break of the main Salmon River.

Another 80 firefighters were to the north in the Nez Perce, battling the worst of nine more wilderness fires east of Moose Creek Ranger Station. At Eagle Bar, an elite "hotshot" crew, dropped into the Deep Creek drainage just to the east of the main fire to battle spot flames in the midst of 12 million board feet of commercial timber, was withdrawn because of the fire's unpredictable behavior, Ms. Tipton said.

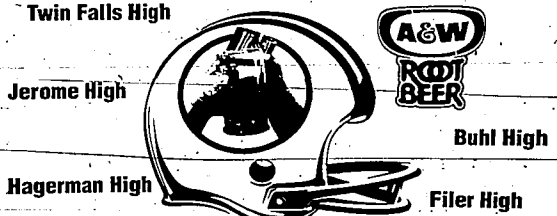

That spot fire finally joined with the main blaze at Haley Ridge north of Sheep Rock after blackening more than 100 acres of the commercial timber. The Forest Service has set an area road closure around the fire south of Hells Canyon Dam, she said.

Nearly 600 people were committed to the blaze and another 200 firefighters were requisitioned as fire strategists reassessed the suppression plan for the 7-day-old, man-caused fire that had pushed to within a half mile of Kinney Point and several inactive mining claims.

Crews dug in on Grassy Ridge ahead of the fire's southern flank on Thursday, carving a break line into the open grassland to halt the flames' advance. But while much of that line held, the fire funneled itself into the stand of timber at the eastern end of the line where it met Haley Ridge and began burning intensely, fueled by gusting winds.

Man gets life term for Boise slaying

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Daniel Rodgers was sentenced to a fixed life term in prison Friday for the June 1987 murder and dismemberment of 21-year-old Preston Murr of Boise.

Fourth District Judge George Carey entered the sentence against Rodgers, 37, after a daylong hearing in Boise. Daron Jimel Cox, 31, who prosecutors said helped Rodgers dispose of the body, pleaded guilty to charges of being an accessory to a felony and aggravated assault in Murr's death. He was sentenced in April to five years in prison.

Supporters of Otter look to 1990 and beyond

BOISE (AP) — Supporters of Republican Lt. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter have started quietly building a 1990 re-election campaign war chest with their eyes focused on the governor's race four years later.

"It is our belief that a very strong showing in 1990 will build the foundation for a strong candidacy for the 1994 gubernatorial race," says one of the fund-raising letters the group began sending early this summer on Otter's behalf.

Otter's GOP backers emphasized that the lieutenant governor will not challenge Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus in two years and would only consider a race for governor if Andrus decides to retire or seek another office.

While not announcing his intentions yet, Andrus has not indicated any plans to step aside or seek another office, and state Republican leaders are slowly beginning to challenge Andrus in 1990, citing what GOP Chairman Blake Hall calls a strong field of potential contenders. "Looking ahead, it seems like a long way away, however, planning can never begin too soon," the Otter fund-raising letter signed by Idaho First National Bank President Robert Lane says.

"Accordingly, it is probably in all of our best interests, and the state of Idaho, to strongly support Butch for re-election as Lt. Governor in 1990 in preparation for mounting a full attack on the Republican gubernatorial candidate in 1994."

Lane said Friday it was too early to assess the impact of the fund-raising effort, but "there's a significant level of interest."

Mike Gwartzney, a former state lawmaker and executive with the Boise Cascade Corp., said the letters began going out to "Otter's closest, staunchest supporters in June and will eventually be sent to a widening circle of some 1,000 Republicans throughout the state by early next year."

Records show discrepancy in Quayle's job with state office

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle's official resume says he was the Indiana Consumer Protection Division's chief investigator a year before the unit was created, state records show.

The law creating the unit passed April 14, 1971, and took effect July 1. Officials said Quayle served as chief investigator from July until mid-September, when he became administrative assistant to then-Gov. Edgar D. Whitcomb.

Quayle's Senate biography, which his campaign is using as his official background, says he was chief investigator of the unit in the Attorney General's office from 1970 to 1971.

"He was assigned to our section in the spring of 1971," said Robert Smith, the unit's first director and now an attorney in Indianapolis.

"He was in fact the chief investigator. He helped get the unit set up. (But) it would not have been before 1971," Smith said Friday in a telephone interview. "We formally began operations July 1."

Quayle conceded Friday that the resume entry was "inaccurate" and said his staff had written the document.

"If it indicated that, that is inaccurate. I didn't hold that job for two years," Quayle told reporters about his campaign plane.

Earlier, however, Quayle spokesman David Prospero called the revelation of the error by The Plain Dealer of Cleveland "a cheap shot."

Quayle was hired as an entry-level research assistant by the state Attorney General's office in 1970 after he returned from six months of basic and advanced training for the $30,000.000 will leave any lawyer, accountant, engineer, utility manager or civic officer with a new respect for their legal liability.

Bush calls Dukakis' criticism of anti-drug efforts 'an insult'

By The Associated Press

George Bush and Republican ticketmate Dan Quayle depicted Michael Dukakis as weak on crime on Friday, and the vice president said his Democratic rival's criticism of Reagan administration anti-drug efforts were "an insult."

"Dukakis spent the day working in his governor's office in Massachusetts and offered no immediate rebuttal to the latest Republican campaign blasts. Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen called for more spending on rural health care programs as he toured Mississippi.

Bush behaved more and more like a man who felt the controversy surrounding his running mate's service in the Indiana National Guard was fading. The vice president talked with Quayle by telephone for the first time in two days and reporters were told that Bush advised his running mate that "things are going very well."

But Quayle also conceded an error in his official biography — after his press spokesman first denounced a newspaper story about the matter as a "cheap shot."

The Indiana senator said it was "inaccurate" to say that he had spent two years working as chief consumer investigator for the Indiana attorney general's office, but blamed the error on his staff. "If it indicated that, that is inaccurate," he said of his official biography. "I didn't hold the job for two years."

The issue arose after The Plain Dealer of Cleveland reported that Quayle actually held the position for a little over two months. Quayle was hired as an entry-level employee in the attorney general's office in Indiana in 1970, several months before the consumer division was created. He later held the investigator position.

But after more than a week of fending off controversy about Quayle and his service in the National Guard, the Republicans went on the offensive.

Bush attacked Dukakis as he spent his second straight day trying to firm up support in his home state of Texas.

Reagan undergoes checkups

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan's allergist has determined there has been no essential change in his sensitivity to pollen. White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said Friday.

Reagan, who receives weekly shots to control the allergy, has been undergoing a battery of annual checkups in the midst of his traditional August vacation.

The president had a checkup with his ear, nose and throat specialist, Dr. John House, on his Friday schedule, Fitzwater said.

"There are no problems that we are aware of at this point. It should be a routine check," the spokesman said.

The president wears hearing aids in both ears.

Fitzwater noted that Reagan started to use a new type of hearing aid last year and he has had no complaints. He can adjust the volume by using a credit card-size control.

The president was examined Thursday by his long-time allergist, Dr. Ralph Bookman, spokesman said.

Carlucci bans hiring new Pentagon consultants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci, in a move related to the ongoing fraud investigation, has banned the hiring of new Pentagon consultants.

Carlucci signed the order earlier this week, directing it at the military services as well as the Joint Chiefs of Staff, his own staff and defense agencies.

"In view of the recent attention given the employment of consultants by the Department of Defense, effective immediately and continuing through the remainder of the present administration, new individual consultant appointments may not be made by DOD organizations," Carlucci wrote.

He said some exceptions may be possible "to accommodate special problems or unique circumstances," but that all such requests for exceptions would have to be sent directly to him "along with detailed justification."

William Caldwell, a Pentagon spokesman, declined to predict the impact of a five-month ban on consultant hiring. The pace of such hiring is frequently erratic, depending upon funding and changes in priorities. Moreover, the new ban does not apply to the hiring of consultants by defense contractors, Caldwell noted.

According to budget documents, the defense Department expected to spend $11.4 million this year hiring individual experts and consultants to assist with various studies. The ban would apply to them.

The Pentagon's total consultant budget approaches $3.9 billion, including such services as management support studies, engineering and technical support for new weapons systems and computer work.

The current fraud investigation has focused on the relationship between various defense contractors and their consultants, not consultants hired by the Pentagon.

Nonetheless, as allegations about consultant activities have surfaced, some congressional leaders have begun to question the Pentagon's hiring practices.

The Pentagon subsequently denied that accusation, releasing a detailed financial breakdown of its spending.

The Justice Department investigation centers on allegations that defense contractors routinely used outside consultants to obtain proprietary information.

Personal incomes rise in July while consumer spending drops

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal incomes, bolstered by the biggest increase in wages in seven months, rose 0.6 percent in July while consumer spending slowed because of a drop in auto sales, the government reported Friday.

The 0.6 percent increase in incomes was identical to the June advance and would have been an even stronger 0.8 percent if it had not been for a big drop in farm subsidy payments.

Spending on personal consumption, which includes virtually everything except interest payments on debt, rose a 0.5 percent in July. While this was less than half the 1.1 percent June advance, economists said it showed that overall demand remained strong despite a decline in car purchases.

As with other recent statistics, economists found signs of growing inflationary pressures in the report, primarily in a 1 percent gain in wages and salaries, the biggest rise in this key income component since last December.

While rising incomes are normally viewed as healthy, economists have begun worrying that demand pressures are outstripping the economy's ability to produce goods, thus creating a classic recipe for rising inflation.

Those fears were heightened Thursday when the government reported that the overall economy, as measured by the gross national product, was growing at a 3.3 percent annual rate from April through June, faster than previously believed, while a GNP price index shot up at the fastest rate in six years.

"We have a lot of economic activity out there and it is generating a lot of jobs and spending power for American consumers," said Sandra Shaber, an economist with the Futures Group, a Washington consulting firm.

She said that for the first time since the late 1970s, consumers appeared to be basing purchases on a belief that they needed to act before prices went higher.

"Up until recently, we have had enormous resistance to price increases, but I think we are beginning to see a buildup of inflationary expectations," she said.

David Jones, an economist with Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a government securities dealer, said the personal income report showed that economic growth was showing no signs of slowing

Yonkers councilmen refuse to change vote, despite federal court's ruling

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — Four Yonkers city councilmen refused Friday to change their votes against a housing desegregation plan despite a federal appeals court's ruling hours earlier upholding fines of up to $1 million a day.

The appeals court approved the contempt fines against the city, and $500-a-day fines and the threat of jail against the four councilmen who defied a federal judge's order to approve legislation that would implement the housing plan.

"I believe I've become a political hostage," said Henry Spalone, one of the four. "I'm never going to allow my vote to be changed."

He spoke shortly before the council, which twice has voted 4-3 in defiance of the court order, assembled in City Hall for a weekly vote. Mayor Nicholas Wisnisko asked the councilmen if any wanted to change his vote.

There was several seconds of silence, making it obvious there would be no change, and then wild cheers broke out from the residents in the audience who oppose the plan.

Friday morning, the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the legality of the fines imposed by U.S. District Judge Leonard B. Sand. But the appeals panel modified the penalty against the city, placing a $1 million-a-day cap on the fines.

Judge rules Eastern cannot fire employees

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge ruled Friday that Eastern Airlines cannot fire some 4,000 workers who filed a suit charging Eastern's parent company with deliberately dismantling the financially-troubled passenger carrier to rid it of organized labor.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker said the Air Line Pilots Association, International Association of Machinists and Transport Workers Union, all of which filed suit, were entitled to preliminary relief.

He said he would issue a detailed opinion by Aug. 30.

However, Parker scheduled a hearing Friday on his decision.

Karen Ceremask, a spokeswoman for the Miami-based Eastern airline, said in a statement the company believes the unions "are not entitled to relief of any sort and we expect we will be filing an appeal at the appropriate time."

The statement said the airline would take no action against the employees pending clarifications of what our obligation will be under terms of the ruling.

The IAM, representing 13,000 Eastern workers filed suit earlier this month, accusing the airline's parent company of deliberately dismantling the financially-troubled passenger carrier to rid it of organized labor.

The suit said that Frank Lorenzo's Texas Air Corp. was trying to undermine the union's legal right to represent Eastern employees by transferring the airlines assets to other subsidiaries of the parent.

Judge Parker had issued a restraining order until Friday prohibiting Eastern from dismissing about 4,000 workers as part of a cost-saving measure.

Eastern, which has lost about $1 billion over the past 10 years, posted a second quarter net loss of $89.8 million, compared with net income of $27.1 million a year earlier. Eastern's revenue in the most recent quarter declined to $1 billion from $1.2 billion.

The Eastern plan, announced July 22, also calls for elimination of 140 of its 1,225 daily flights to help cut costs.

The plan would end nearly all operations at Kansas City, Eastern's principal hub for the western United States, and dramatically reduce its flights at its Philadelphia hub.

GQ features Joe Kennedy on cover of September issue

NEW YORK (AP) — His hair usually looks like he has just emerged from the shower, or possibly a hurricane. His necktie is worn, and its lopsided knot often hangs limply on his wrinkled shirt. There are stains on his trousers.

This is a composite picture of Joe Kennedy drawn by Gentleman's Quarterly, the men's fashion magazine which features the young Massachusetts congressman on the cover of its September issue.

In the course of several days with a GQ writer, Kennedy downed countless cans of Coke and explained his feelings about the homeless, aid to the Contras, the Kennedy family legacy and other topics.

But the magazine couldn't keep its mind off Kennedy's appearance. As he was driving to a television interview, GQ noted, "His hair has dried at right angles to his face."

At a photo session in his Washington office, Kennedy "is beltless," the magazine noted. "His mismatched shoelaces are un-tied."

Prosecutor will not arrest talk show host

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — A prosecutor, saying there are more dangerous people to prosecute than a combative talk show host, has decided not to arrest Morton Downey Jr. on a complaint that he scuffled with a weekly news-

Assistant State's Attorney Burton A. Kaplan said he has rejected an arrest warrant charging Downey with breach of peace based on a complaint filed by Paul Bass, editor of the 24,000-circulation New Haven Independent.

"I denied the warrant, not based on the merits of the case — because I believe there was a violation by Mr. Downey — but based on other considerations, including the volume of business and the resources of this office," Kaplan said Thursday.

Downey was in Detroit with his producer and publicist Jim Langan on a publicity tour Friday, according to a member of his show's staff at WWOR-TV in Secaucus, N.J., who said one of the men would comment later.

Downey scuffled with Bass and James Motavelli, editor of the weekly Fairfield County Advocate, when tempers flared during a show Aug. 14 at the Palace Performing Arts Center. The show followed the confrontational format of Downey's syndicated television show.

Bass's sister, Sharon Bass, charged on stage and slapped Downey in the face after Bass and Motavelli walked off. The standing-room-only audience of 2,000 cheered.

"I understand Kaplan's need to prioritize," Bass said Thursday.

"The courts are overbooked with cases. ... I'm very glad he said in his statement that Downey broke the law."

But, he added, "I think it's unfortunate that some guy who's a celebrity can get away with backing himself up with thousands of groups and he can get away with attacking someone. If it was a poor black kid with three friends cheering him on, I think he would get arrested."

Town celebrates singers' homecoming

CENTRAL CITY, Ky. (AP) — Almost 10,000 people milled to "Wake Up Little Suzy" and "Bye, Bye Love" in this western Kentucky town to celebrate the homecoming of the Everly Brothers.

Don and Phil Everly, who consider Central City their hometown because they spent summers here when they were young, performed a benefit concert Thursday night, their first here since they hit the national record charts about 30 years ago.

The Everlys donated $6,500 for a police radio system for the town six months ago.

Mayor Hugh Sweatt Jr. said that when townspeople began organizing the homecoming, which also included the dedication of a monument to the singers and renaming the three-mile section of U.S. 62 that runs through town "Everly Brothers Boulvard." Don was born at Brownie, a now-extinct coal camp just outside of town, but Phil was born in Chicago.

At a city hall ceremony Thursday, Sweatt gave Phil Everly an honorary birth certificate from Kentucky.

"You can't be born in Chicago," Sweatt said. "You can be delivered in Chicago, but you have to be born in Kentucky."

"I really appreciate you making me a full-blown Kentuckian," Phil Everly told the crowd of 1,000 at the ceremony. "I've been lying for a lot of years."

Liberty students face drug screening

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — The 6,000 students at the Rev. Jerry Falwell's Liberty University face mandatory drug screening this year.

A school official said Thursday the random program, which Falwell promised last April to institute, apparently is the first implemented at a U.S. college.

Urine-testing could begin next week and will include all students during the program's first year, said Dr. Gregg Albers, the school's director of health services.

Albers and Falwell spokesman Mark DeMoss said they did not expect students would be scared away and had heard no complaints from students who must sign waivers allowing the tests.

"I think the ones that could get scared ... didn't get scared," Albers said. "And I think we attracted some, too."

Faculty and staff "are voluntary participants," DeMoss said. "I think you'll see participation from the top down."

There are no plans to test employees of Falwell's other organizations.

Tests will be given to about 200 students a week in a special bathroom designed to make it difficult for anyone to alter the urine sample, he said.

The urine will be screened three times with the last test breaking it down to the molecular level. Testing will be done for illegal and abuseable prescription drugs and will be used to spot other health problems, Albers said.

Students who test positive will be offered counseling, and possibly a second chance.

"While the school takes a very strong position against drugs, we're not going to be unreasonable in our methods," DeMoss said.

Police remove 100 diseased dogs from man's home in Mississippi

CLINTON, Miss. (AP) — One hundred diseased and vicious dogs were found at a man's home, and most were put to sleep, officials said.

Police charged Isaac Taylor, 74, who lives on less than one acre, with violating two ordinances regulating ownership of animals.

It was the third time authorities have removed large numbers of dogs from Taylor's property. Four dogs are allowed under Clinton law.

One officer was bitten when police and Animal Rescue League officials went to Taylor's house Thursday, said Scott Worley, animal control officer.

A few dogs were killed by gunshots at the home Thursday after officials were attacked, police said. One dog will be held for observation for suspected rabies.

Most of them were killed by lethal injection, said Debra Boswell, director of the Mississippi Animal Rescue League, which helped round-up the dogs. "Near-ly all of them were diseased and aggressive."

Taylor is being allowed to keep four dogs, but they must be spayed or neutered, Boswell said.

Taylor has an unpublished telephone number and couldn't be reached for comment Thursday or Friday.

But Boswell said Taylor believes he's being kind to an animal by giving it a home.

"People think they're being kind by just putting food and water out, but animals need more than that," she said.

Prominent figure in polygamist community, Harmon, dies at 61

COLORADO CITY, Ariz. (AP) — Jonathan Marion Dault Harmon, a prominent figure in the building of this polygamist community on the Utah-Arizona border, is dead at the age of 61.

Harmon died Wednesday at his home here, said Alma A. Timpon, president of the Fundamental Priesthood Council. Harmon moved to the Short Creek area where Colorado City now stands, across the border from sister polygamist community Hildale, Utah, in 1959.

Harmon was called to take charge of the United Effort Plan, a trust set up for the welfare of its followers, Timpon said.

Harmon was involved in setting up the Colorado City Academy in 1960. The Academy was an institution of learning that is still in existence today after being moved to Centennial Park under Harmon's direction.

Member of House leadership leaves hospital after surgery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo., a member of the House Republican leadership, was released from George Washington University Hospital on Friday, a week after undergoing coronary bypass surgery.

Cheney, 47, who served as

White House chief of staff during the Ford administration, had suffered three reportedly mild heart attacks in 1978, 1984 and in June of this year.

Cheney left last week's GOP convention in New Orleans a day early and underwent surgery on Friday.

Diana Ross gives birth to boy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pop singer Diana Ross gave birth to a baby boy today, the singer's publicist reported.

It was the 44-year-old singer's fifth child and her second with husband Arne Naess Jr., according to publicist Elliot Mintz.

He declined to say where the infant was born, or give the child's birth weight or name.

Ms. Ross married Naess, a Norwegian shipping tycoon, in October 1986. She gave birth to their first child, also a boy, last October. That child's name is Ross Arne Naess.

Burma erupts amid calls for democracy

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Strikes and violence spread on Friday, huge anti-government rallies continued and retired ranking military officers joined those demanding immediate democracy in Burma.

"Thousands of lives have been lost" since the coup that began authoritarian military rule 26 years ago "and the country is in the grip of a general strike paralyzing the whole administration," Gen. Tin Oo, a former defense minister, said in a letter to President Maung Maung.

"It is now long overdue to abolish one-party (government) in favor of a multiparty system," he wrote. "It is imperative to immediately transfer power to an interim government ... composed of people acceptable to the country."

A copy of the letter, dated Friday, was seen by The Associated Press.

Another letter urged Maung Maung, the first civilian president since the coup, to form an interim government and release political prisoners. It was dated Tuesday and signed by a retired brigadier and 14 colonels.

Rangoon radio reported three prison riots:

— On Thursday, 2,000 inmates rebelled at Insein jail on the edge of the capital, setting buildings ablaze. Guards opened fire and "some inmates and prison warders were injured."

— Prisoners set fires at Bassein, 90 miles west of Rangoon, on Wednesday, guards shot one inmate dead and about 100 prisoners escaped.

— At Akyab jail in Arrakan state bordering Bangladesh, "prisoners and people outside of the prison shouted slogans, demonstrated and started to riot" Thursday night. Six inmates were killed, 24 were wounded and about 1,600 escaped.

Turmoil began when 77-year-old Ne Win, who led the coup and imposed rigid socialist rule, resigned late in July.

60 pilgrims feared dead in Bangladesh accident

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — A ferry carrying 80 Moslem pilgrims capsized in the monsoon-swollen River Padma and a newspaper stated Friday that 60 people may have died.

The Bangladesh Observer said the pilgrims boarded the ferry at Faricchar in Manikganj district on Wednesday to reach the home of a Moslem saint in Atroshi village in Faridpur district.

The Observer stated the ferry sank in midstream after it was hit by high waves and only 20 people were rescued. It said 10 bodies were recovered and the remainder likely were carried downstream in the strong current.

Watson's lawyer argues charges should be dismissed

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A man charged with vehicular manslaughter in the death of a popular, developmentally disabled Twin Falls resident could not avoid the accident, and the charges should be dismissed, his lawyer argued Friday.

Pointing at a diagram on a courtroom easel, Leon Smith argued that his client, Clinton Watson of Hazelton, had no time to react. The man who died in the accident ran across the three-lane road, and another vehicle hit him from Watson, Smith said. "It occurred because of a jay-walker, or runner, coming across the intersection in front of another vehicle and totally obscuring vision, until it was too late to do anything," Smith said.

Watson, former Hazelton city supervisor, is charged with the involuntary manslaughter of Elvin Lee Cory, 48.

Prosecutors say Watson was driving with a blood-alcohol level of 12 at dusk on April 4. Idaho's blood-alcohol limit is .10.

Watson's pickup struck Cory in the 500 block of Second Avenue North, prosecutors say. Cory died of a ruptured aorta, according to a coroner's examination.

Twin Falls police officer Gary Rinehart, backed up Smith's assertion during cross examination marked by Deputy Prosecutor J. Scott James' vigorous objections.

"Do you have an opinion as to whether or not this accident could have been avoided by Clinton Watson under this set of facts?" Smith asked.

"I hesitate to answer that because I did not do the complete investigation," Rinehart said. "If you were the investigator, you were familiar with the facts, and if you have an opinion, I'd like to hear it," Smith said. "I would say it could not have been avoided," Rinehart answered.

Smith offered a two-pronged legal argument for dismissing Watson's charges.

Smith said Twin Falls prosecutors have told him that if a person hits and kills someone while driving drunk, it's a felony, Smith said.

Under those guidelines, Smith said he could drive down an interstate with a blood-alcohol level of .10 or more, hit and kill a person who fell off a bridge over the interstate and be charged with a felony.

"That's not the law," Smith said. "That can't be the law. There's got to be something in there telling me I did something wrong."

Prosecutor James disagreed. "We submit that when a pedestrian crossing the street gets hit and killed, that's an issue for the jury to decide," he said.

Smith also argued that James hadn't proved Watson was drunk. No field sobriety tests were administered and the breath test came in low enough to be within the margin of error of the breath-test machine, Smith said.

Fifth District Magistrate R. Michael Redman said he would consider Smith's motion and issue a ruling later. Redman must decide whether Watson more likely than not committed the crime.

If Redman rules against Smith, Watson will be ordered to stand trial in District Court.

Watson sat quietly during the hearing wearing jeans, a red and white-striped shirt and cowboy boots. He occasionally talked to

Agriculture specialist visits Soviet Union on exchange

By MARTA CLEVELAND
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — Americans are competitive with Soviets about who can destroy the world more times, and about who will plant their flag on Pluto first.

But in the field of agricultural research, Tom Trout was hoping they would have a thing or two to show us. He was disappointed.

"I didn't see anything more advanced there than what we have here in irrigation or agriculture," he said. "When they showed us something they were proud of, it was nothing new to me."

"We have the same kinds of problems and I thought they would have come-up with some different solutions. They haven't."

Trout is an irrigation specialist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture Research Service in Kimberly. He recently returned from an agricultural exchange with the Soviets.

In the 1970s, there were frequent exchange programs between USDA scientists and Soviet agricultural scientists. Then the Soviets invaded Afghanistan, and the United States halted the exchanges.

Trout was in one of the first groups in nine years to resume the exchange program.

My desire and reality were two different things. It ended up being a reconnaissance mission learning where they are doing what kind of research."

He spent the first three days in Moscow visiting the Soviet Agriculture Department and the Ministry of Reclamation and Water Management. He went to a lot of meetings with scientists and bureaucrats — "had our fill of bureaucrats."

Then it was out to the countryside. They visited the Central Asia area that is as arid as Idaho.

There are two major river systems that have been irrigating about 10 million acres for hundreds of years.

The farms are 20,000 acres and more. The fields are miles long. Most of the water delivery to the farms is through precast concrete ditches. Then earthen ditches move the water around the fields. The water is moved into the furrows by moving a lot of dirt around, making paths, stead of thinking about the problem independently.

Scientists and engineers like to show off their stuff, he said. "Trout didn't get much opportunity to teach the Soviets, because when we were with people, they felt obliged to tell us what they were doing."

He did give one slide lecture on "cablegation," an irrigation method developed at the Kimberly research station, but that was the exception. The Soviets had heard of cablegation because they translate the technical journals in which results of American studies are published. There is much more translating going on from English to Russian than vice versa, he said.

Americans have textbooks and manuals to show them how to put in an irrigation system. But, mostly for economic reasons, the book way is rarely observed at the letter. They will see something they know is needed, but it can't be added immediately because the money isn't there.

In the Soviet Union, money is no object because the government pays for everything. They can go into an area and decide what is needed, and get all of it done at once, and on a grand scale," Trout said.

They could do what Americans know how to do even better because money is no object.

They don't look at the economics. They don't have the constraints of short-term economic

Parsons wins pageant

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Jennifer Parsons was crowned Twin Falls Junior Miss in front of a near-capacity audience at the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium Friday night.

Parsons, a student at Twin Falls High School, performed a ballet routine during the three-hour pageant, in which 16 girls competed. By winning, she earned the right to compete for the state Junior Miss title two months from now in Moscow.

Runners-up at the pageant were: first runner-up, Marisa Whitaker, of Twin Falls; second runner-up, Ade Chandler, of Ellettsville; third runner-up, Jana Heber, of Ellettsville; and fourth runner-up, Kristina Hawker, of Twin Falls.

The contestants, all seniors at Magic Valley high schools, were judged .35 percent on interviews; 15 percent on scholastic achievements; 20 percent on creative and performing arts; 15 percent on poise and 15 percent on physical fitness.

Other winners were: Candie Young, Creative and Performing Arts award; Hawker, Physical Fitness award; and Heber, the Spirit of Junior Miss Award, as selected by the other contestants.

JENNIFER PARSONS
Contest winner

Art Frantz, Twin Falls City councilman, was the master of ceremonies. The pageant was sponsored by the Twin Falls Kiwanis Club, which awarded more than $5,500 in cash scholarships to program winners.

Parsons, 17, is the daughter of Ronald and Bonnie Parsons. She was editor of the 1987-88 Bruin yearbook and a national Hallmark winner. She belongs to German, Interact and Outdoor clubs and was a Girls' State delegate.

Report proposes sealing Three Mile Island

By The Associated Press and The Times-News

HARRISBURG, Pa. — A report filed with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission proposes sealing the crippled Three Mile Island Unit 2 reactor for 30 years after the conclusion of a $1 billion cleanup, GPU Nuclear Corp. said.

GPU, which oversees the two nuclear plants on Three Mile Island, said in a statement Thursday the long-term storage of Unit

2 would prevent exposing cleanup workers to radiation.

Before the reactor is sealed, the remainder of its damaged radioactive core will be shipped to Idaho, where part of the core already is in storage.

Rail cars have been hauling damaged reactor core to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory since Dec. 20, 1986. The material is being held for study and storage.

Shipments will continue until about a year from now, said Terry Smith, a spokesman for EG&G Idaho, INEL's prime contractor.

INEL is about 20 miles northwest of Idaho Falls.

The core will remain in storage at INEL until about 2003, when a national nuclear waste repository is expected to open in Nevada, Smith said.

As early as 1986, GPU outlined a plan for mothballing TMI-2. However, the filing of the safety-evaluation report with the NRC represents the first time the utility has formally specified a 30-year storage period following the conclusion of the 10-year cleanup, said Doug Bedell, a company spokesman.

The safety report is an elaboration of the earlier proposal, he said.

TMI-2 has been shut down since March 1979, when a combination of human and mechanical errors led to a partial melting of

Stallings: Watkins' campaign may cost GOP votes

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Dore Watkins may be his own worst enemy, if Rep. Richard Stallings, his opponent in the 2nd Congressional District race, is correct.

"I find his advertisements and smears have enhanced our opportunities," Stallings told about 100 Democrats who turned out for the opening of the Twin Falls County Democratic campaign headquarters Friday.

Stallings said that Watkins' "smear campaign" is costing the Republicans votes and winning him some.

"Americans, and independents in particular, do not like dirty campaigns. They are very critical of mudslinging," Stallings said after his speech.

Watkins has so far used advertisements to link Stallings with pro-abortion, gun control and gay causes. Thursday Watkins mailed press releases on a new advertising campaign with advertising Stallings took an unethical loan from his own campaign funds.

"There is no question where I stand," Stallings said. "For Watkins to portray me that way is just wrong. The loan — that's all wrong. I made it public on FEC (Federal Election Commission) reports."

"Farmers were going bankrupt because they could not find a loan at 12 percent. Dick Stallings then has the nerve to take a loan from the people of Idaho at 6 percent and of all things to spend it on himself for a new car," Watkins said in his press release.

"He took this loan at an interest rate he knew was too good to be true. It is just like taking out of the church offering plate."

In 1987, Stallings borrowed $4,800 from campaign funds to buy a car for business and personal use. Stallings said the FEC verbally approved the loans, but the House Ethics Committee later said the use of campaign funds was improper.

Stallings has since paid back the money and says the matter has been closed.

"He (Watkins) refuses to look at the issues," Stallings said. "He's trying to gain votes through smears."

In contrast, Stallings said he has emphasized the federal deficit, farm credit and nuclear waste management in his campaign. Those are the issues important to me.

Both in Twin Falls and later at a Democratic fundraiser in Shoshone Friday, Stallings emphasized his stands on agricultural issues.

Large numbers of people turn out to register to vote

TWIN FALLS — Large numbers of people in all nine groups turned out this week to register to vote, the Twin Falls County clerk's office reported Friday.

Friday was the last day people could register with the county clerks in Twin Falls and Jerome counties to be eligible to vote in the Sept. 6. College of Southern Idaho put facilities levy.

"It's been quite good as far as the registration for this levy election," said Larry Haycock, Twin Falls County deputy election clerk.

Haycock did not attribute the increased number of people registering to the levy election alone.

"They're doing it before this election instead of waiting for the general election (in November)," Haycock said.

He had no tally of how many voters had registered.

Voters in Sept. 6 levy election must be 18 years old, must be Idaho residents and must have lived in Jerome or Twin Falls County for at least 30 days before the election.

The levy requires 55 percent of the vote to pass.

Delay for translator site permit may hold off radio broadcasts

SALMON (AP) — While funding to transmit National Public Radio broadcasts to central Idaho is shaping up, technical problems might force eager listeners to keep standing by.

Jim Paluzzi, general manager of public radio station KBSU in Boise, said he expects to hear by Thursday whether federal funding will be available to transmit the station's programming to the area this fall via translators near Stanley, Challis and Salmon.

Paluzzi said he was optimistic the Public Telecommunications Facilities Program grant for the project will be awarded. But even with the grant, he said, a delay in U.S. Forest Service approval of a translator site permit could mean broadcast sites will not be able to begin by Thanksgiving as originally planned.

Two of the three permits needed for the 10-watt translator sites have been issued. All three must be approved within 30 days of the grant being awarded in order to proceed with installation before winter, Paluzzi said.

"Once-a-grants awarded, the clock starts ticking very quickly on federal dollars," he said. "It would be a shame to lose money from one federal agency because of delays with another."

A permit from the Challis National Forest for a translator on Basin Group Peak, east of Challis, was issued last January. A permit from the Salmon National Forest for a translator on Baldy Mountain near Salmon was issued Aug. 9. A third translator on Basin Butte northeast of Stanley has yet to be approved.

The two approved translators will be placed on existing developed sites, but Basin Butte is a relatively new site undergoing preliminary development, Paluzzi said.

Greg Johnson, Yankee Fork District ranger, said work on an electronic site plan for Basin Butte is proceeding on schedule, despite a hectic fire season that has stretched district personnel to the limit. But he said KBSU's deadline for approval might not

Anti-racism activists plan to protest reading room

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Anti-racism activists say they will hold a rally Monday to protest a white supremacist's opening of a reading room and church in Salt Lake City.

During a Friday news conference, Jo Roach, spokesman for Utahns Against the Aryan Nations, said he expected "a pretty healthy turnout" for a noon rally in a parking lot across the street from where former Utah Aryan Nations leader Dwight McCarthy plans to open his headquarters on Monday.

"This demonstration will show that in Utah, we are not into racism," said Roach. "If these people don't get any opposition, they (supremacists) will see it as agreement" with racist beliefs.

McCarthy, who hosted the short-lived Aryan Nations Hour radio talk show before protests prompted its cancellation last December, said he has since left the Hayden Lake, Idaho-based white supremacist group and formed his own, The Church of Christian Israel.

McCarthy, who could not immediately be reached for comment, has said he left Aryan Nations because the group, headed by the Rev. Richard Butler, is more neo-Nazi than religious.

McCarthy said his group, however, is more interested in the teachings of the Christian Identity Movement, which preaches whites are God's chosen people.

Roach said that after McCarthy's radio show was introduced late last year, his group was formed to battle supremacist views.

"He's totally committed. He really believes in what he's doing," Roach said of McCarthy, warning that while McCarthy has not threatened anyone, violence tends to follow neo-Nazi groups.

Zerrif Smith, co-founder of Utahns Against Aryan Nations, said protesters will use every available legal means to oppose racist philosophy.

Candidates face each other on TV

BOISE (AP) — State Senate President Pro Tem James Risch and his Democratic opponent Mike Burkett disagree whether the Idaho Senate is chamber of independent lawmakers, or a group held on a short leash by the Boise Republican.

The two candidates in Idaho's premier legislative race for District 21 faced each other for the first time Thursday at a taping of KTVB-TV's "Viewpoint" program.

Burkett asked Risch "whether you truly feel" that under your leadership the Senate and the senators are allowed to freely express their views and to come up with a consensus of views, or it in fact a Senate where it's dictated by one individual, primarily yourself?"

The Boise attorney said he has heard reports not only from the opposition, but from Senate Republicans that they are not allowed to speak or think for themselves.

That question arose in the private campaign of Republican Sen. Rachel Gilbert of Boise. Risch had supported her opponent in the race. Mrs. Gilbert indicated in her campaign that Risch wielded too much control in the Senate.

Legislators are "all very independent people, people who have gotten there because they are capable politically and because they are very competent people," Risch said.

"We have a spectrum of people who have political philosophy to continue decontamination of the facility, this effort would not appreciably enhance the overall stability and maintainability of the facility nor would it add to the overall margin of safety for the public," the report said.

Further work beyond the end of the planned cleanup "would result in unnecessary additional occupational exposure to personnel who would be conducting the decontamination tasks," the report said.

Group to picket 'Temptation'

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Police have issued a demonstration permit to a Utah religious group opposed to the showing here of the controversial movie, "The Last Temptation of Christ."

The Stimpson of Salt Lake City said he filed the petition for the permit on behalf of "concerned Christians."

He said the group will be composed of "a loose alliance of Christians of several different denominations."

The permit will allow up to 100 people to demonstrate on the sidewalk at the downtown Salt Lake Centre-Theatre, said police spokeswoman Nita Wright.

The movie, which has been condemned by Utah's predominant Mormon Church as an "obscene and blasphemous religious denigration nationwide," was to open at the theatre Friday night.

The group is picketing the movie because it presents an "unbiblical view of Jesus Christ."

LONDON (AP) — A British newspaper reported Friday that the Shroud of Turin, said to have been wrapped around Jesus after his crucifixion, is a fake but experts discounted the newspaper report as unsubstantiated rumor.

The London Evening Standard reported without attribution Friday that radio-carbon dating tests conducted by scientists at Oxford University showed the shroud was made about 1350.

It quoted Dr. Richard Luckett of Magdalene College, Cambridge University, as saying: "I think that as far as seems possible the scientific argument is now settled—and the shroud is a fake. I suppose there will be certain people who will never believe it but it seems unlikely that the tests could be 1,300 years off."

The London Daily Mail reported that the Shroud of Turin is a photograph of a bearded, crucified man.

Tests of Holy Shroud of Turin raise questions lished 10 years ago to pursue investigations into the cloth.

There have been so many of these type of reports and they're all rumors that I got totally out of hand."

Tests were made at Oxford, at the University of Arizona in Tucson and at the Federal Polytechnic in Zurich, Switzerland. All three agreed to keep their findings secret and forward them to the Roman Catholic Church in Italy for an official announcement in September or early October.

At Oxford's Research Laboratory for Archaeology and the History of Art, where the tests were made, a woman on the staff who would not give her name said: "No data has been disclosed by this laboratory."

"I presume the director knows the results but the rest of the staff don't even know and we are sworn to secrecy anyway," the woman said. "The only people who know are the director and professor of the laboratory and they are hardly likely to disclose it."

Both Luckett and Professor Robert Hedges, head of the radio-carbon dating laboratory at Oxford which was responsible for the tests, were unavailable for comment Friday.

Luckett, whose university is an ancient rival of Oxford, was not connected with the tests but has been associated with investigations of its history.

He wrote in a separate article in the Evening Standard that laboratories "are rather leaky places," but did not elaborate.

Luckett's article concerned the religious aspects of the shroud, where the tests were made, a woman on the staff who would not give her name said: "No data has been disclosed by this laboratory."

"I presume the director knows the results but the rest of the staff don't even know and we

This report is without any serious foundation," said Susan Black of the British Society for the Holy Shroud of Turin, established 10 years ago to pursue investigations into the cloth.

Iran presses for '75 treaty at U.N. talks

Cease-fire holds, but sides trade massacre accusations

GENEVA (AP) — Iran took a hard line Friday in the U.N. peace talks with Iraq, pressing for the swift formation of an independent body to assign blame for the war and insisting that peace depends on a 1975 treaty rejected by Iraq.

The truce in the 8-year-old war continued to hold, but guerrilla groups from both sides traded new accusations of government-ordered massacres.

In New York, the U.N. Security Council condemned the use of chemical weapons in the Persian Gulf war, expressing deep dismay over their "more intense and frequent" use against Iran.

The British-sponsored resolution, adopted unanimously by the 15-member council, did not name Iraq as the attacker, but cited reports by U.N. chemical weapons experts, blaming Baghdad for using poison gas, including a mustard-gas attack on the Iranian city of Aug. 2.

Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati outlined Tehran's position in the Geneva talks in a brief statement on the second day of the negotiations, which are expected to last months, if not years.

Velayati said Iran had three "valid criteria" for reaching a "comprehensive, just and honorable peace."

They are U.N. cease-fire Resolution 598, which Iraq accepted when it was passed a year ago, but which Iran accepted only last month; an "outline plan" prepared by U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar for implementing the resolution; and the 1975 Algiers treaty between Iran and Iraq.

The 1975 treaty was aimed at settling centuries of border disputes between Iran and Iraq. Iraqi President Saddam Hussein repudiated it on Sept. 17, 1980, five days before Iraqi forces invaded Iran.

Velayati did not elaborate on the outline plan in his statement to reporters at the Geneva U.N. office, but he evidently was referring to a paper prepared by Perez de Cuellar last fall.

In a follow-up April 13 message to the Security Council, which later was leaked to the press, the U.N. chief executive proposed specifically that on the official cease-fire date, "the impartial body to inquire into responsibility for the conflict shall begin its work."

Iran has stated repeatedly that the promised formation of that body prompted it to accept the cease-fire last month. It expects the body to identify Iraq as the aggressor, a verdict that could also be the basis for reparation claims.

Iran also holds that the 1975 border treaty, concluded between Iraq and Shah Reza Pahlavi has remained in force and that Iraq's rejection of the treaty violates international law.

The most controversial part of the treaty made the southern boundary between Iran and Iraq the middle of the Shatt-al-Arab-waterway. Iraq's only access to the sea at the Persian Gulf. The treaty granted Iran its claim to the eastern half of the 127-mile waterway.

The border issue "is critical to a peace settlement because Resolution 598 requires troop withdrawal to mutually recognized boundaries. A major cause of the war was the dispute over the Shatt-al-Arab.

It was not known what was discussed at the closed-door talks, however.

After Thursday's two-hour opener, face-to-face talks were abandoned temporarily and both sides stayed in separate chambers, with U.N. officials meeting them and reporting back to Perez de Cuellar.

But Friday afternoon, both parties met again in a joint session chaired by the U.N. chief. The start of that meeting was delayed two hours "at the request of one party," U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani said. He refused to say who asked for the postponement. Officials declined comment on reports that the Iraqis were dissatisfied with the pace of the talks and that they felt under pressure to accept deadlines in implementing the resolution.

Outside the sprawling U.N. complex, about 200 exiled Iraqi Kurds protested Iraq's use of chemical weapons and waved banners demanding, "Stop the massacre of Kurds."

A Kurdish guerrilla group, the Kurdish Democratic Party, charged that six Iraqi air force planes dropped poison gas bombs on Kurdish villages in northern Iraq on Thursday, the day the Geneva talks started. A spokesman who telephoned the Nicosia bureau of The Associated Press said that 38 civilians were killed and 500 were injured.

Moslems attending the Friday prayer service in Geneva's imposing, Saudi-financed mosque passed a large, colored poster illustrating the chemical bombing of the Iraqi Kurdish town of Halabja, which Iraq said killed 5,000 people last March.

Iraq-based Iranian guerrillas, many while accused Iran of killing political prisoners.

Massoud Rajavi, leader of the Iranian-people's-Mujahideen-guerrillas, called on Perez de Cuellar to send a mission to Iraq to halt an "accelerated pace of killings."

He charged Iranian authorities arrested more than 10,000 people on political charges in the past few weeks and that hundreds of Mujahideen sympathizers were executed.

Sino-Soviet talks center on pullout

BEIJING (AP) — China and the Soviet Union will try to remove the last major hurdle to restoring relations when they meet this weekend to discuss Cambodia.

"The major obstacle in the way of normalizing Sino-Soviet relations is the Kampuchean (Cambodian) question," Foreign Ministry spokesman Jin Guihua said Thursday. "This obstacle must be removed before relations can be normalized."

The talks between Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Igor Rogachev and his Chinese counterpart, Tian Zengpei, are to begin Sunday. It will be the first time the two sides have met solely to discuss Cambodia.

Vietnam, backed by the Soviet Union, has occupied Cambodia since 1979. China supports the Khmer Rouge, one of three guerrilla groups in the opposition.

"The talks will concentrate on how to press Vietnam to withdraw all its troops from Cambodia at an early date," Jin said at the weekly briefing.

"We hope that the talks will achieve positive results to contribute to the improvement of relations between our two countries," he said.

The world's two largest communist countries split over ideological and strategic differences — in the early 1960s. Moscow and Beijing have met every other year since 1982 to discuss normalizing relations and have encouraged a steady increase in trade and cultural contacts.

But China has consistently held that three obstacles stand in the way of normalization: Soviet support of Vietnam's occupation of Cambodia, Soviet military presence in Afghanistan and Soviet troops stationed along the Chinese border.

Premier Li Peng, in a meeting Thursday with Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita of Japan, said Soviet support for Vietnam's occupation of Cambodia blocks normalized political ties.

The Soviet Union already has taken steps to remove the other two obstacles by beginning a withdrawal of its troops from Afghanistan in May and reducing troop strength along the Chinese border with Soviet ally Mongolia.

China, which backs the Khmer Rouge and other forces fighting Vietnamese troops in Cambodia, says the Soviet Union, which gives the Hanoi government financial support, must use its influence to end Vietnam's occupation.

Vietnam invaded Cambodia in late 1978 and ousted the Khmer Rouge who killed hundreds of thousands of people during its four-year rule.

Siberians cheer on California swimmer

MOSCOW (AP) — Hundreds of Siberians cheered Friday as an American swimmer crossed the 11 1/4 miles across chilly Lake Baikal to promote U.S.-Soviet friendship.

Lynne Cox of Los Alamitos, Calif., made the early-morning swim across the crescent-shaped lake, the world's deepest, in four hours and 20 minutes, Tass reported.

"Wish me success," Ms. Cox, 31, shouted to a crowd as she plunged into the 52-degree water.

The official Soviet news agency said hundreds of residents of the city of Irkutsk stood on the banks to cheer Ms. Cox.

Strong winds and currents made the journey difficult. At one point, she told Tass, she considered giving up because her leg cramped. But two people jumped off accompanying boats and raised her spirits to continue and she made it to the Listvyanka settlement, the finishing point, Tass said. American jazz saxophonist Paul Winter was on shore near the end of Ms. Cox's journey, and played

"America the Beautiful" and a song about Baikal.

"I was overwhelmed and that underestimates the whole thing," she said of the reception she received as she made her way to an ambulance, where she spent about 20 minutes recovering.

"Seeing all those people, those people from the village, I think we're doing something good," she said.

Ms. Cox said she overcame the difficulties of the swim in the name of "goodwill, peace and friendship between the peoples of the U.S.S.R. and U.S.A.," according to Tass.

After leaving, Ms. Cox was hoisted onto a small retaining wall from which she told the crowd through a loudspeaker, "I've found some warm hearts in Siberia."

Palauans call for unity after 2 leaders' deaths

KOROR, Palau (AP) — Mourners at the funeral for President Lazarus E. Salii were told that dissent and mistrust must be resolved, after the first two presidents of this western Pacific archipelago have died from violent means.

"We must cooperate with one another," said President Thomas O. Remengesau, who is serving out Salii's term, which ends this year.

Salii was elected three years ago to succeed Palau's first president, Haruo I. Remelick, who was shot to death.

Salii was found dead with a gunshot wound to the head Aug. 20 in his home in the capital city of Koror.

The government is withholding results of an autopsy performed Monday to determine whether Salii was killed by a gunman or committed suicide.

The government will delay releasing the results until they are reviewed by family members and the cabinet, said presidential aide Bonifacio Basilus.

Remelick was gunned down outside his home. Three men convicted at trial later were acquitted of murder charges on appeal.

"These two very tragic events have made us search our souls to see if our people can survive in today's world," Remengesau told the more than 1,000 mourners at the National Congress Building.

High Chief Ibedul Yutaka M. Gibbins called for unity and peace among Palauans.

"The people of Palau must work together in unity and cooperate to bring prosperity to our future generations," Gibbins said.

Palau is a 400-mile-long archipelago about 600 miles east of the Philippines and 4,500 miles southwest of Hawaii. Its nearly 15,000 residents inhabit eight of its 200 islands.

The island chain, which implemented constitutional government in 1981, is a U.N. trusteeship with its affairs administered by the United States' Department of the Interior.

It has been seeking a new political status with the United States that would terminate the trusteeship and make Palau self-governing.

Salii was a staunch proponent of a proposed compact of free association under which Palau would receive $460 million in U.S. aid during the first 15 years of a 50-year agreement.

Hundreds of tourists flee blaze-threatened Sardinia resorts

SASSARI, Sardinia (AP) — Hundreds of tourists were evacuated from three resorts in northern Sardinia that were threatened by a wind-driven forest fire, police said Friday.

The blaze, blamed on arson, blackened 60 acres of hills surrounding the coastal resort of Santa Teresa di Gallura on Thursday night. But it caused no injuries or structural damage before being extinguished Friday by hundreds of firefighters and volunteers.

"The fire was a downright criminal act which could have had dramatic consequences," a police official said.

The mayor of Santa Teresa di Gallura, Bruno Modesto, ordered the precautionary evacuation.

Dow edges up in 'play-it-safe' market

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted a slim gain Friday as trading volume withered to its lowest level of the year.

Analysts said stocks took some support from a mild runup in bond prices, which sent yields on some fixed-income issues a bit lower.

But they said the sluggish trading totals indicated investors continue to play it safe while awaiting a clearer signal on the direction of the economic...

inflation and interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which fell 15.82 on Thursday, rose 5.58 to 2,017.43. That left the market's best-known index with a gain of 1.43 points for the week.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 7-to-6 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 725 issues up, 605 down and 601 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the NYSE came to 89.24 million shares, down from 127.64 million in the previous session. The NYSE index rose 0.30 to 147.24.

That was the slowest trading level of 1988 and the lowest, since 86.36 million shares were traded on Nov. 27, 1987, the day after Thanksgiving.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trading at regional exchanges and on the over-the-counter market, totaled 106.96 million shares.

Worries that inflation may be accelerating as a pace that would prompt the Federal Reserve to push interest rates higher have weighed on the market.

But the government reported Friday that personal income rose by 0.6 percent in July, a bit below expectations, while personal spending rose 0.5 percent.

Analysts said the report calmed worries that inflationary pressures were continuing to build.

The report sent bond prices mildly higher, reducing their yields slightly.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"For purposes of action nothing is more useful than awareness of thought combined with energy of will."

— Henri F. Amiel.

The bad trump break left me with only one chance to make the game," explained an unhappy South. His post-mortem analysis was just as faulty as his play.

West led three top clubs, and the third round was ruffed in dummy. The ace and king of hearts brought a discard from West and a certain trump loser for South. South then drew one more trump before cashing the diamond king followed by a diamond finesse. East won and shifted to spades, but South escaped with only one diamond. Dummy's spade ace won and diamonds were played. South discarding two spades. The defenders got two clubs, a trump and one diamond.

A better line of play would have led to success. After South discovers the bad trump break, he should cash his third high trump and the king and ace of diamonds. The diamond jack is led from dummy. South ruffing when East plays the queen. South then heads his last trump, discarding dummy's last spade (one spade went on the third high trump). East is now on lead and must lead a spade. Dummy's blanked spade ace and the good diamonds take the remaining tricks.

Summing up, South would have made his game had West held Q-x or Q-x-x in diamonds but not if West held Q-x-x-x or better. Playing for the ruffing finesse against East was whenever East has the queen, however guarded.

John Friesz, Idaho

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

Can the Vandals repeat, becoming the first Big Sky Conference football team since 1975 to win successive conference titles? Of course they can, but will they? "I think we have a very good chance at repeating," says University of Idaho quarterback John Friesz, who rewrote all of the Vandals' single-season passing and total offense records in his sophomore season a year ago.

"It's going to be tough, because there are a lot of people shooting for us. But having all those people coming back should be a real positive thing for us. We're real anxious to see if we can do it. There's going to be a lot of talk that we can't because of the loss of the running backs, that sort of thing. But I think everybody has taken a challenge in their own mind and heart that we can do it."

But Weber State Coach Mike Price, whose Wildcats beat the Vandals in the opening round of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs last fall, isn't so sure. "We're going to win some games this year," predicts Price. "Our expectation level is going to be a little more this year."

A long string of good teams have failed to repeat in the Big Sky, including NCAA Division I-AA champion Idaho State and Montana State in 1980, 1981 and 1984, respectively, so history isn't on Idaho's side. Moreover, the Vandals have road games in some tough neighborhoods. Northern Arizona will field its best team since its conference championship ballclub of 1978. Nevada-Reno should rebound sharply from its disastrous 5-6 1987 season and both Montana and Boise State have young teams with a year's experience. But the philosophy in the Idaho camp is that this version of the Vandals will be merely an improved version of the 9-2 team of last year. "Last year I had a lot of doubts in what I could do and I think my teammates had some doubts, obviously," says Friesz. "I didn't have any experience. Now, hopefully now of us feel that way and we can continue from where we left off last year, especially with bringing so many people back from last year."

Idaho Although Friesz put up the inflationary numbers in '87 — 3,677 yards passing, 62 percent completions, 3,489 total offense — the worst-kept secret of Idaho's success last year was its offensive line, which returns intact. Tackle Greg Hale, now a 6-foot, 3-inch, 270-pound senior, and guard Todd Neu, a 6-1, 275-pound junior, were both first-team all-league a year ago; tackle Troy Wright (a 6-3, 270-pound senior) and Paul Unger (a 6-4, 245-pound senior) were honorable mention all-conference. "They're the same guys," says Vandals Coach Keith Gilbertson. "People may be tired of looking at them, but I'm not. It's obviously a strong group, maybe the strongest overall group we've had in awhile. It's a group that's played together two years and basically have one or two years left together. I'm excited about who we've been able to recruit and how they've played."

"We give a lot of credit to the offensive line just as we give a lot of credit to John Friesz," says wide receiver Lee Allen. "If there was no line, there would be no Friesz."

The straw that stirs the drink is Hale, a senior from Renton, Wash., who has started for 2½ seasons. "Greg Hale has all the tools to be the dominant offensive lineman in this league," says Gilbertson. "He benches around 500 pounds and runs a 4.7, 4.9 40. When he puts his mind to it, he can be the best offensive lineman in the league."

Apart from the line and its prize protectorate, the offensive picture is mixed. Receivers return — John Jake, Lee Allen, Chris Slater and David Jackson — who caught 117 of Friesz's passes for 1,702 yards and 16 touchdowns. But the Vandals' No. 1 and No. 3 rushers from 1987, Todd Hoines and Larry Leverett, are both beginning redshirt seasons as a result of injuries that ended their seasons last year. Together they accounted for 691 yards of Idaho's 1,044 rushing yards last year and puts a lot of pressure on sophomore Bruce Harris (101 carries for 429 yards last year).

"It's an area of major concern for us," says Gilbertson. "It was a place where we thought we had great depth, but now we are really in a position where we have to stay healthy. (Sophomore) Damon (Daniels) has to make a move to the front and become the kind of back we feel he can be. Obviously we have high expectations for Bruce Harris, but he also has to overcome some injuries and become a better running back than he was. (JC transfer) Rene Barton is a short, compact and very strong runner that we were looking for in a running back."

"I think we need to balance out of the run and the pass, like in '85 when we won the Big Sky," says Hoines, who suffered a shoulder separation against Boise State, underwent surgery last winter and missed spring ball. "We ran the ball more than we passed. It really made it hard for defenses to prepare for us. They couldn't come with a nickel package every time on third down because we could run on third down for 12 yards if we wanted."

freshman. First-team all-conference cornerback Virgil Paulsen and all-league strong safety Ernest Sanders have graduated, leaving sophomores and redshirt frosh in their places. "Because of our injury situation, some of those guys started playing a lot of football early in the season," says Gilbertson. "We lost some guys that will be hard to replace, but I feel like we have some guys that can come in and be really good players. And they'll certainly see plenty of passes come their way."

But filling the holes probably isn't the key to the Vandals' dreams of an encore title. With essentially the same group as a year ago, Idaho proved last year it could beat the best of the rest in the Big Sky. It hasn't proved it can beat Idaho State, which has finished no higher than sixth place in any of the past three seasons and has defeated the Vandals two out of their last three encounters.

Hoines puts it best. "It's going to take a lot of dedication from us and the coaches. Intensity. No letdowns. We can't have an Idaho State letdown."

Magic Valley note: Flier's Steve Crown, a sophomore offensive tackle who injured his knee last fall and underwent surgery, is listed third on the Vandals' depth chart. After being hampered by the knee in springs drills, he isn't expected to challenge Neu for the starting job, but will play on special teams.

Idaho State Idaho State Coach Garth Hall isn't thinking seriously about conference title, or even predicting the Bengals will win more games than they lose this year.

"I think we're rebuilding," said Hall, the conference's only- rookie-coach. "We've changed the attitude on the team and we've got a whole new personality. I don't know how long it will take us."

Hall inherited a team coached by Jim Kooter, which went 3-7-1 last year, 3-5 in the conference. It's a team filled with question marks.

Sophomore quarterback Jason Whitmer, who threw for 2,616 yards and 20 touchdowns as a freshman, returns with senior receiver Kevin Pettit, who caught 24 passes for 431 yards and five scores.

However, Whitmer, a player coaches say will be one of the league's premier passers, missed about half his spring practices with an injury.

"He didn't have a good spring because by the time we got into pads he hyperextended his elbow playing basketball one weekend," Hall said. "He had about six practices until he hurt himself."

Hall has high expectations for the 6-1-quarterback mainly because of the way he finished the 1987 campaign. In his final game last year, Whitmer passed for 469 yards against Weber State, which went on to play two I-AA playoff games.

"He was a freshman last year and he finished the season strong," Hall said. "Overall, his year as a freshman was outstanding. He has demonstrated he can play quarterback at this level."

Hall has brought in former Brigham Young quarterback Robbie Bosco to coach Whitmer and help the Bengals with their passing game. Bosco, who was cut this summer by the NFL's Green Bay Packers, said he has defenses and other tricks of the game.

"We've got people there, but we haven't been able to work with them," said Hall, who was an ISU assistant when the Bengals won the national title in 1981.

The former Oregon State assistant hopes to regain that past glory, and he's starting by recruiting heavily in the junior-college ranks. He signed two offensive linemen from Walla Walla, Wash., Community College, 320-pound Dave Buchanan and 260-pound Brian Knerr.

"We will have about 16 junior college players and we worked with about half of them in the spring," he said. "We've got eight or nine dew guys and that'll be another challenge. We've got a lot of work to do."

His offensive line does have at least one veteran, 262-pound center Joe Henderson.

"In reality, the junior-college players have got to get their feet on the ground," he said. "I think in time they'll be our answer for the first year."

Hall still has some gaping holes in several areas. Among them is finding a replacement for running backs Corky Federici, who had 570 yards rushing, and tailback Butch Caston, who gained 599 yards.

Last year's defense gave up 451.3 yards per game and was last in the conference in rushing defense at 210 yards per game. The Bengals were eighth in pass defense at 281.3 yards a game and eighth in scoring defense at 40.5.

Magic Valley notes: Wide receivers Torrey Sheets of Jerome and Todd Jones of Twin Falls are listed 1-2 on the Bengals' depth chart at split end, but both will catch a lot. Whitmer passes this fall. Sheets, a sophomore, may be ISU's fastest wideout, running an 850-yard shuttle run this summer in 2 minutes, 20 seconds. Murtaugh, Roy Nebeker, a transfer from Ricks College trying to catch on as an inside linebacker, is among a group of eight candidates for the two positions and is currently listed a third on the ISU depth chart. Twin Falls' Joel Jund, one of three first-year freshman quarterbacks on the roster, is vying for the backup position behind Whitmer.

Boise State The excitement is palpable at Boise State this summer as second-year Coach Skip Hall gets ready for Phase 2.

Phase 1 was a 6-5 season with a group largely inherited from Lyle Seatenich. But this is mostly Hall's team, especially at the key positions.

But it's still a ballclub with a lot of questions attached.

The biggest concerns around the Broncos' propensity last season to fold in the fourth quarter, getting outscored 106-77 and losing three games after leading at the three-quarter mark.

Then there's the graduation of Vince Alcide and Chris Jackson, who took with them 3,912 of BSU's 4,955 yards total offense from 1987.

There's also an offensive line with four newcomers, a redshirt freshman placekicker and new players in key positions on the defensive line, at linebacker and in the secondary.

Most fundamentally, this is a program that hasn't gotten out of second gear since it last reached the I-AA playoffs in 1981.

"The way our attitude is on the team is that there is no better time than the present and we figure, if it's going to be done, it's better to be done this year," says sophomore cornerback Kenny Kuehl, who earned second-team all-conference honors as a freshman with six pass interceptions. "We better start doing it right now. Why wait around 'til next year?"

The biggest source of enthusiasm is that Hall has managed to bring some big-time players to Boise.

"We felt like we had a tremendous recruiting year," says Hall, a longtime assistant coach at the University of Washington before coming to BSU. "We have 52 freshmen out for football — first semester freshmen this year — and about half of those were recruited and the other half are walk-ons." See BIG SKY on Page D4

Flagler scores three quick TDs to lift 49ers over Seahawks

By The Associated Press

Terrence Flagler got San Francisco back in the game then Steve Young hit Calvin Nichols on a 19-yard touchdown pass to beat the Seattle Seahawks 27-21 Friday night.

Young took the 49ers 56 yards for the winning touchdown, scoring with 6:55 remaining and lifting San Francisco to 3-2 in NFL exhibition games.

Flagler ran for three touchdowns within three minutes to give San Francisco its first lead, 20-14. Rookie Mike Coffey's extra point attempt was blocked after the first touchdown.

Flagler scored on runs of 9, 5 and 1 yard. Seattle lost the ball on two fumbles by quarterback Jeff Kemp and got a minus-yardage punt, to the Seahawks' 1-yard line, by Ruben Rodriguez.

Earlier, Seattle 3-1 had taken a 14-0 lead on a 7-yard scoring run by John Williams and a 1-yard TD run by Randall Morris.

After Flagler's scores, the Seahawks went back in front 20-14 on rookie Kevin Harmon's 7-yard scoring run.

In the first half, the 49ers had the ball seven times and had to punt each time. Quarterback Joe Montana completed seven of 15 passes for 79 yards and was sacked three times.

Webster Slaughter, and Kevin Mack ran for a 1-yard score. Kosar completed 17 of 25 passes despite constant pressure from a blitzing New York defense. He was sacked three times.

The Browns committed 16 penalties for 105 yards, and half of the penalties resulted in first downs for the Giants. New York, however, managed only 219 yards total offense.

Giants placekicker Raul Elgire had two field goals but also missed twice. Cleveland and New York each finished the preseason 3-1.

Bengals 27, Patriots 21—The Bengals rushing game had 25 carries for 178 yards in the second half and 38 for 239 in the game. Cincinnati, which finished the exhibition season 4-1, matching its victory total of last season, trailed 14-13 at half-time despite Boomer Esiason's two touchdown passes, to James Brooks and Eddie Brown.

They went ahead 20-14 on the opening drive of the third quarter on Stanley Wilson's 12-yard run. Stanford Jennings' 38-yard touchdown run on the last drive of that quarter padded the lead to 27-14.

Wilson, who was suspended for the entire 1987 season because of drug use, led all rushers with 83 yards on nine carries.

"If we don't stop ourselves, I think we have a great offensive football team," Esiason said. "We work hard at it. We can be the best."

Host New England finished 1-3. Vikings 24, Dolphins 17. At Minneapolis: Tommy Kramer led Minnesota to touchdowns on his only two series and may have won the Vikings' quarterbacking job back from Wade Wilson.

Kramer lost much of the 1987 season to a neck injury and Wilson led the team to the NFC title game. Against Miami, Kramer completed six of eight passes for 114 yards and took the Vikings on 87- and 90-yard scoring drives.

Kramer faced only two third-down situations and passed for touchdowns on both — to Steve Jordan for 22 yards pass midway through the first quarter and to Hassan Jones from 12 yards 3:47 into the second period.

Minnesota finished with a 3-1 preseason record. Miami ended 2-3.

Raiders 37, Bears 23—At Chicago, Steve Beuerlein threw three touchdown passes and Chris

Bahr kicked three field goals. Chicago had five fumbles in the first half and turned the ball over twice in the second half on interceptions.

Beuerlein hit James Lofton with a 26-yard touchdown pass in the first quarter, Willie Gault on a 19-yard TD pass in the third quarter and Mervyn Fernandez with a 32-yarder in the fourth period. He completed 19 of 33 passes for 303 yards.

Bahr connected on kicks of 31, 35 and 40 yards.

William "The Refrigerator" Perry, who missed all the Bears' training camp because of an eating disorder, made his debut in the game with one tackle and one assist.

Both teams closed the preseason 1-3.

Minico's late rally tops Burley

Upsets mark opening day of M.V. prep grid season

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Opportuning Minico, shut out for three quarters, converted four Burley mistakes into 13 fourth-quarter points and a 12-6 decision Friday night.

A fumble on the last play of the third quarter gave Minico its first scoring chance, but needed a 15-yard penalty for too many men on the field to keep it alive after Burley apparently had forced the punt.

After the penalty, Travis Schow hooked up with Donovan Terry on a 29-yard scoring strike to tie it. With 4 minutes, 21 seconds left in the game, Lance Anderson picked off a Burley pass at the Bobcat 27-yard line and two plays later, Jake Moore broke loose on a quick-opener for 26 yards for the clinching points.

Until those fatal mistakes, the smaller Bobcats had hung a shutout — although Minico contributed a costly penalty to make that true.

Minico's defense was stung for an apparent touchdown on the first play of the game but saved when a holding call nullified it.

But the final outcome followed a prediction by Burley assistant coach Dean Satterfield late in the third quarter.

"Their size is wearing us down. I don't know if we can stand up for another quarter of pounding like we've been taking," he said.

Minico Coach Ron Jones wasn't sure exactly what the cause was but he said "we were lucky. We made some mistakes in the first half and Burley's defense just did a super job. At halftime we told the kids they had to execute, to play better. We couldn't sustain anything, get a one or two first-down drive started and then foul it up."

Jones said he felt giving Burley the early touchdown on a 69-yard punt return by Mike Koffel and then losing a touchdown provided Burley with a lot of momentum.

"We had the ball on the six-inch line, put it in the end zone and get a five-yard penalty," he said. Then Burley steps us on downs and we lose the touchdown. We expected to see some mistakes but we didn't think we had tonight.

"But in the end, I'd say we won because our defense played a terrific game, especially in the second half," Jones added.

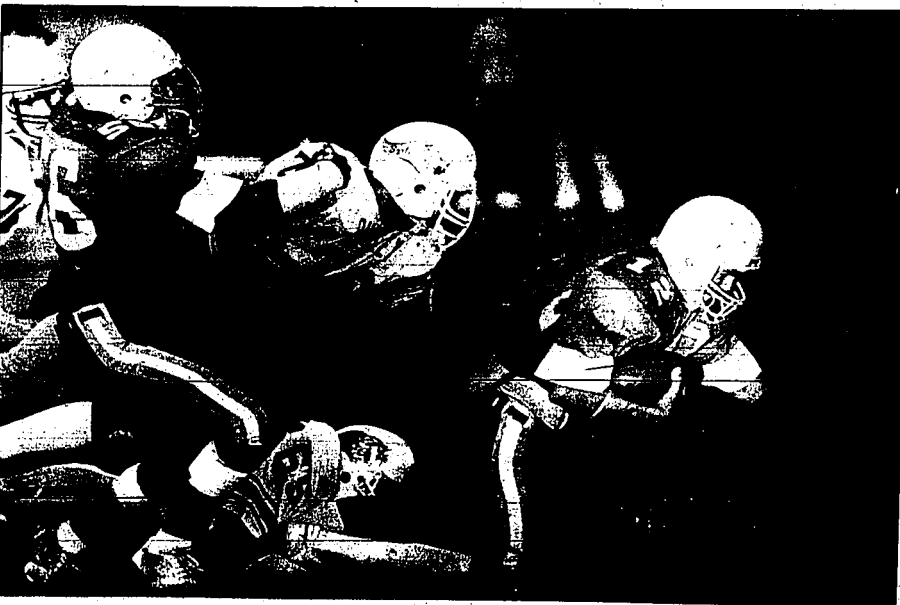

Burley Coach Jeff Savage said he felt going into the game the key would be Burley's ability to handle Minico's defensive tackle.

"We ran the veer and our offense depends on keeping the defensive tackles out of the play. We weren't able to do that," said Savage after his first game at the Bobcat helm.

Ruffell gave Burley that early heady moment when he romped 74 yards on the game's first play, only to see it killed by a penalty.

Burley ended up punting on its first possession and then gave up a first down before forcing Minico into a kicking situation.

Ruffell took the punt on his own 31, went to the right sideline where he picked up a couple of blocks and sprinted into the end zone. Minico stopped the two-point run attempt.

Minico quarterback Travis Schow dives for a few more yards against Burley in their Friday evening season opener Minico made its only scoring threat of the first half as the second half began, moving to that first down inside the one before coming up with the penalty.

Minico repaid the goal-line stand in the second half, watching Burley march to a first down at the 9 and coming away scoreless when a field goal attempt fell short.

It was shortly after that the turnover plague started wracking the Bobcats and Minico pulled it out.

Even after establishing the final score, Minico picked up another fumble and a game-ending pass interception to complete the fourth-quarter domination.

candidates and there's some real good candidates in that group too. I'm delighted with the freshman group. There's a good prospect at every position, at least one at every position. We also have about three junior college players that we feel can help us maybe right off the bat. I think we've had a real good year recruiting.

Hall likes to talk about the availability of borderline Pac-10 players to a Big Sky school willing to look for them, and he has evidently found a number of them. Some, like tight sophomore flanker Winky White, are surprises. Others, like redshirt freshman fullback Bart Hull — son of Bobby Hull and a high school star in Canada — have genuine marquee value.

"Bart's got a lot of talent, and if we keep him healthy and if we can learn the offense and come along well, he could be a real strong factor," says Hall.

"You know we had some really good, skilled people last year and my hope and my desire is that we can build a team that has a lot of people that we can go to. In other words, not just have to depend on one or two guys, that's what we're going to do at every position — all of the backfield positions and a quarterback and wide receiver — so that we can spread the load around."

"For the offense, Hall hopes, that comes very few changes.

"If we can come close to duplicating what we did last year, I'll be the happiest person in Boise," he says. "We were able to balance it with run and pass. We led the league in rushing. We also led the league in total offense and, to me, that's the key. We want to have a balanced attack and be unpredictable, so people can't tell what we're going to be doing and surprise a few folks along the way. That's the exciting offense I like and I think it's the kind of offense for us to watch."

That offense will be run by a sophomore, Duane Halliday, backed up by three freshmen — two of them first-year freshmen.

"I'm not comfortable yet because Duane Halliday hasn't played that much and Darren (Burchak) hasn't played at all," he says. "We can't feel real comfortable yet. I think they're both fine prospects and are going to be good players, but again, until someone proves himself, why you're just a little bit cautious."

Hall's plans were to buy Halliday and Hull and White a little time with an offensive line anchored by 6-5, 265-pound senior tackle Kim Hilliard, a two-year starter who missed the 1987 season after undergoing back surgery, and 6-4, 280-pound senior guard Eric Croll, who skipped spring practice after undergoing knee surgery. That changed this summer.

"Kim Hilliard right now looks like he's not going to be able to play this year now so we may not even get him at all," says Hall. "But Eric Croll will have to anchor our line. We've got some good young prospects, but Eric's the one with experience and leadership and he's going to have to do a great job for us."

The rest of the front consists of sophomore tackle Robert Miller (6-8, 293), junior center Pat McDade (6-8, 255), redshirt freshman guard Dave Cincomazzo (6-4, 260) and redshirt freshman tackle David Koch (6-7, 255).

"This may be the biggest offensive line in the Big Sky," says Hall. "If nothing else, we're looking good getting off the bus."

The kicker is the 5-6 redshirt freshman, Mike Black, backed up by another redshirt freshman.

"Well, I guess I'd have to say I'm real concerned because they haven't kicked one ball yet at the major college level and we're going to go into the season with a talented young guy he's not very big and he hasn't kicked once in college football — so I'm a little apprehensive. But I've also seen what he has done in practice and I feel confident about him."

The Broncos struggled on defense last year, finishing seventh in the league in pass defense despite the presence of Big Sky defensive player of the year Peter Kwiatkowski at end. It's a much younger, much smaller unit. Hall hopes quicker defense this year.

"Most of the teams we play are more of a throwing variety and so quickness is going to help us immensely there," he says. "But we're going to be a defense that is going to rely more on movement this year than maybe, standing toe-to-toe and slug-ging it out with people. We're going to be a moving defense, a stunting defense and I think that will help us against people who run the football just because we are going to be on the move and hopefully our quickness will be hard for them to handle."

One of the key will be defensive end Lawrence Hines.

"You know we've got two quick defensive ends," says Hines, 6-4, 233-pound senior who transferred a year ago from the College of San Mateo. "That's where most of the heat is going to come from. We'll have good pressure from the outside, that's for sure."

Ironically, the strength of the defense is the secondary with returning cornerbacks Kuehl, Keith Norioka and Chris Truitt, who missed most of last season with a knee injury after earning all-league honors as a kick returner in 1986.

"No, I want to get Chris solidified at corner and once he's solidified at corner — he looks great, he's worked all summer," says Hall. "He ran a 4.5 40 the other day in practice. We don't want to give him too much too so, so we're going to put him at corner, use him there, let him get comfortable with that. We may use him as a kickoff return guy later if we feel that will help us."

Magie Valley notes — Bob McLaughlin, a junior from Twin Falls, is the starting at nose guard for the Broncos' 4-3 front after being a part-time last year. Hailey freshman Bubba Street, trying to catch on as a defensive end, is one of eight candidates for the position; he's listed third behind Hines.
