Buhl couple feels fortunate to be alive

By JODY DICKSON
Times-News writer

—BUHL— Wilbur "Bud" and Bernyce Hill feel fortunate to be alive.

"We were both sure this was our end," Bernyce said. "After all the violence, it was so peaceful. We were surprised we were still here."

The Hills, who were aboard Delta Flight 1141 when it crashed on take-off Aug. 31 in Dallas, returned to their rural Buhl home Saturday.

Thirteen people died in the crash, and Bernyce was among the many seriously injured. But the Hills say no lawsuit is in their plans.

The Hills, a retired farm couple, were in Dallas to celebrate one grandchild's second birthday and to meet another grandchild, 2 1/2 months old, for the first time. Delta 1141, from Dallas to Salt Lake City, was to be the first leg of their trip home.

They don't remember much about the crash. "We just knew it (the plane) was in trouble from take-off," said Bud, 64. "I saw the wing hit, but don't remember much else. I did see a big fireball come up."

Gilbert menaces wide area

The Associated Press

BROWNSVILLE, Texas — Thousands of coastal residents from Mexico to Louisiana fled to higher ground Thursday as fierce Hurricane Gilbert sent the first of its storms against Texas after thrashing the Yucatan Peninsula.

"This is a killer storm," said Gordon Guthrie, director of the Florida Division of Emergency Management. "I feel sorry for anybody wherever this hits."

The death toll from the storm's onslaught through the Caribbean islands and the Yucatan was at least 47, and damage estimates reached $8 billion. Jamaican Prime Minister Edward Seaga declared a one-month state of emergency.

By early evening, the first thunderstorms and showers in the outermost spiral bands of the storm had reached southeast Texas, forecasters said.

At 7 p.m. MDT, the storm center was near latitude 22.6 north, longitude 94.0 west, or about 300 miles southeast of Brownsville, moving west-northwest between 12 and 15 mph, with maximum sustained winds of 120 mph, according to the National Weather Service.

The weather service issued a hurricane warning for Mexico's northern coast and the southern half of the 370-mile Texas coast from Brownsville to Port O'Connor, including 250,000-resident Corpus Christi. A hurricane watch remained in effect for the remainder of the Texas coast, from Port O'Connor north to Port Arthur near the Louisiana border.

The weather service said warnings might be extended northward, depending upon Gilbert's path.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements sent National Guard units to Alice, McAllen and Corpus Christi, the first such deployment for the hurricane, to assist in communications and rescue duties.

Clements also issued an emergency proclamation allowing local authorities to suspend laws "to preserve the health, safety and welfare of the public," including such things as the direction of travel on highways.

Grocery stores ran low on bottled water, batteries, canned tuna and bread as people laid in supplies. Homeowners covered windows and doors with plywood and shatter-proofing hurricane tape. Offshore oil workers left their rigs in the Gulf of Mexico.

Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center in Miami, said the 450-mile wide storm would likely make landfall Friday afternoon along the northern coast of Mexico or southern Texas.

Dukakis looks over charred Yellowstone region

Knight-Ridder Service

—YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. — Michael S. Dukakis Thursday visited fire-scarred Yellowstone National Park, posed for pictures beside a small canyon and received a public briefing on efforts to control the blazes.

But Dukakis, who declared himself a conservationist during a trip to Colorado last summer, did not take a stance on the federal government's policy of letting fires in national parks burn until they threaten human life or property.

The policy has been assailed by people living near the park and some Western senators.

"I think we've got to put out these fires first and make sure they're under control and they're out," Dukakis said. "After that,

Andrus on meeting — A3

I think it'll be time to sit down and review the policy."

The Democratic presidential nominee added: "I think most people think there ought to be some controls. What they are, how they're implemented, should be the subject of review."

For his trip to the western side of the park, near the Montana border, Dukakis shed his normal suit and tie for a suede jacket borrowed from an aide, khaki pants and hiking boots. The area he toured had been swept by fire about two weeks ago; fires have now burned nearly 1.5 million acres in and around the park.

Dukakis said he came to the park at the request of several Western governors. Four Democratic governors — Mike Sullivan of Wyoming, Ted Schwinden of Montana, Roy Romer of Colorado and Cecil Andrus of Idaho — joined him for the brief visit to the park.

"He cares. He came because we asked him to come, and (he) looked at the situation," said Andrus, who was interior secretary under President Carter.

The political purpose of the visit was an effort to further Dukakis' chances of breaking the Republican dominance of the West in presidential elections. As with two visits to Colorado this summer, the fact of his coming was much of the point.

Dukakis was also reluctant to respond to Republican rival George Bush's latest assault on his economic record. Bush, dismissing the "Massachusetts mirage," as the "Massachusetts mirage," declared: "If this were the Olympics his composite score would make him the gold medal winner in the tax-and-spend category."

Asked about Bush's statement, Dukakis initially replied, "I'll be responding to that some time next week ...," a reference to the scheduled Sept. 25 debate between the two presidential contenders.

But a few minutes later, Dukakis volunteered. "Let me say this with respect to my own state. If this nation had 3 percent unemployment and had 10 years of balanced budgets and had the record that we have, we could be looking forward to a future of strength and optimism and jobs for everybody. My state has more jobs than people to fill them. We're very proud of what we've done."

House rejects wait to buy guns

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The House Thursday soundly defeated a provision in its omnibus drug legislation that would have required a seven-day waiting period before purchase of a handgun.

The 228-to-182 vote to strike the "Brady amendment" from the drug bill was a major victory for the National Rifle Association and demonstrated that the gun lobby's political muscle has withered little, if at all, on critical congressional votes.

The NRA launched a furious lobbying effort to defeat the provision against an equally vigorous campaign by law enforcement organizations, individual police officers and Sarah Brady, whose husband, presidential press secretary James Brady, was seriously injured in the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan.

In place of the seven-day waiting period, the House accepted an amendment offered by Rep. Bill McCollum Jr., R-Fla., that requires the Justice Department to craft a proposed system by which gun dealers could identify felons who seek to purchase handguns.

Under existing federal law, felons, illegal aliens, persons who are mentally incompetent and individuals who have been dishonorably discharged from the military are banned from buying handguns.

Rep. Edward F. Feighan, D-Ohio, author of the waiting-period provision, called Thursday's vote a "bitter disappointment" and said it was the result of being "outgunned by the forces of the National Rifle Association because of their campaign of deception and distortion."

"We are going to go at it with renewed vigor and next time we are going to win it," Sarah Brady said.

The House vote was the second time in two years that Congress has cast a landmark vote in support of the NRA.

'Landslide' — A6

In a new book by two newspaper reporters, Cannon is quoted as saying that after interviewing 15 to 20 White House aides, he wrote a memo to Baker that began: "Consider the possibility that section four of the 25th Amendment might be applied."

The 25th Amendment, added to the Constitution in 1967, provides the president may be removed if the vice president and a majority of the cabinet declare him "unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office."

Reagan, returning to the White House after speaking in a nearby building, was asked what he thought of Cannon's story. When he appeared not to understand the question, another reporter shouted, "25th Amendment."

"There's no truth to any of this," the president responded.

Cannon, in an interview with Cable News Network, said that of the staffers he talked to, "not all but most" said in one way or another that the president was inattentive, that he had lost interest in his job.

He later said on the CBS Evening News, "My concern then and today is that they were more loyal to Don Reagan than they were to Ronald Reagan."

"There's nothing to this," said Fitzwater. "This is fiction by staff people who for their own reasons chose to say this."

Birds' wishbone found to be a spring to help them breathe while flying

The Associated Press

BOSTON — The first X-ray movies of birds in flight have revealed the function of the wishbone: It's a spring.

Scientists who made the discovery suspect that the flexible, V-shaped bone helps birds breathe while they fly. Bird experts had assumed that the bone was simply a strut between the shoulders.

The idea that this bone is simply a spring probably won't come as a surprise to anyone who has made a wish after Thanksgiving dinner and tried to snap a turkey's wishbone before it's had time to dry.

"This is well known to everybody in the world," said Farish A. Jenkins Jr. of Harvard University. "It's only scientists who discover the obvious."

Jenkins made his observation by coupling two common research tools: the wind tunnel and the X-ray movie, similar to those used by doctors to study heart disease.

He and two colleagues, Kenneth P. Dial of Harvard and George E. Gogolow Jr. of Northern Arizona University, took X-ray films of starlings flying in place against 20-45 mph winds.

The movies allowed a look inside the birds at how the various bones work during flight. Until now, researchers have tried to figure out such functions by looking at the skeletons of dead birds or the cut, sides of live ones.

"It's a pioneering new method of studying birds," said Robert Ralkow

Farish Jenkins points to wishbone on model of a bird of the University of Pittsburgh. "We can actually see the movement of the skeletal elements during flight. That's pretty exciting."

In a report in today's issue of the journal Science, the team described the way the wishbone bends each time a bird flaps its wings.

"The wishbone turns out to be a spring," Jenkins said in an interview.

At rest, the upper ends of the starling's wishbone are 11 or 12 millimeters apart. But when the wings descend, that distance stretches to 18 to 20 millimeters.

Bush hopes North found innocent; refuses to rule out pardon

By The Associated Press

George Bush said Thursday he hopes Oliver North is found innocent of charges in the Iran-Contra affair and declined to rule out a pardon if the former White House aide is convicted.

Michael Dukakis toured Yellowstone National Park and said he was "awestruck" by the summer's fire damage.

Bush seized the role of campaign aggressor for the day, saying that under Dukakis, Massachusetts has fared poorly on job creation. He derisively awarded his Democratic rival a gold medal in the "tax and spend" competition.

But the vice president's attack was marred when he omitted a word from his prepared text and said Massachusetts had lost jobs since 1983. Official figures show the state has lost manufacturing jobs — as Bush's prepared speech said — but overall employment has risen by more than 200,000 jobs.

Dukakis' aides in Massachusetts rushed to criticize Bush's claim, but the governor himself at first said, "I'll be responding to that sometime next week."

Later in the same session with reporters, without further prompting, he said: "If this nation had 3 percent unemployment (the rate in Massachusetts) and had 10 years of balanced budgets and had the record that we have, we could be looking forward to a future of strength and optimism and jobs for everybody."

"My state has more jobs than people to fill them," he said, asserting that the Reagan administration has left a "fiscal mess" in Washington.

Later, en route to Los Angeles, he added, "What Mr. Bush has given us is a mountain of debt, record deficits, a record trade deficit and an economic future that does not bode well for the American people."

Bush was on the attack, the battle of the television commercials, as well, airing an ad in environmentally minded California that accused Dukakis of permitting the harbor in Boston to become the dirtiest in America. Dukakis ran advertisements outlining his own record on crime fighting and other issues.

Both campaigns were pointing toward the first campaign debate, a 90-minute televised session in Winston-Salem, N.C., on Sept. 25.

Bush's office released a schedule showing the vice president with limited campaigning outside Washington next week and large blocks of time at home.

Dukakis also will have a curtailed travel schedule next week, and aides disclosed that Washington attorney Bob Barnett will join the group of advisers preparing him for the debate. Barnett played the role of a Bush stand-in when Democrat Geraldine Ferraro was preparing for the vice presidential debate in the 1984 campaign.

Many polls in recent days have found a slight advantage for Bush, although a Washington Post-ABC survey conducted Sept. 7-13 reported Dukakis with 48 percent support and Bush with 45, a statistical dead heat.

Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle was in Oklahoma City during the day, where he indicated he was tired of having Dukakis refer to him as "J. Danforth Quayle."

He said the name Danforth comes from a friend of his family who was killed during World War II. "It is not a family name," he said.

Drug overdose sends Hofmann to hospital

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Confessed pipe-bomb murderer and forger Mark Hofmann was rushed from his prison cell to a hospital comatose and in critical condition from a drug overdose Thursday, officials said.

A hospital helicopter brought Hofmann to the University of Utah Health Sciences Center for Utah State Prison at about 1:30 p.m. MDT after prison officials reported a critically ill inmate, said hospital spokesman John Dwan.

Hofmann initially was in "critical and unstable condition and comatose" from an overdose of an under-treated tricyclic anti-depressant drug which showed up in lab tests at toxic levels, Dwan said.

Four hours later Hofmann was improving "slightly," a possible indication his body was metabolizing the drug, he said.

Hofmann was treated in the emergency room and then taken to intensive care, where he was placed on a ventilator to keep him breathing.

"It's the judgment of the doctors that this is a drug overdose," Dwan said. He said five corrections officers and two SWAT team members had the inmate under guard.

Hofmann also suffered "minor to moderate burns" on his right forearm and chest. Dwan said the cause of the burns was not immediately known, but they were not considered serious.

Hofmann, 33, was serving a 5-years-to-life prison term after pleading guilty in January 1987 to having killed two people with homemade pipe bombs on Oct. 15, 1985, in order to avoid discovery as the forger of the lucrative Mormon and other historical documents in which he trafficked.

Weather continues helping crews battling fires in Yellowstone Park

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Firefighters at Yellowstone National Park on Thursday began building "water bars" on hiking trails so the precipitation that has fallen on the park this week would not create the paths.

The lags placed across hiking trails divert runoff from melting snow, park officials said.

As more 7,200 firefighters and 1,200 soldiers worked to take advantage of continued good weather, Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis and the governors of Wyoming, Montana, Colorado and Idaho got a firsthand look at the destruction wrought by fires that have consumed about 1 million acres of the nation's oldest park since July.

"This week is a lull in the battle, it's quiet and nothing is really going on," said fire information officer Bob Valen at Yellowstone.

There was no such luck for firefighters in Montana, Oregon and Idaho.

Soldiers began relieving weary firefighters on the smoldering Canyon Creek fire in west-central Montana, while afternoon winds and higher temperatures kept crews busy on a blaze in Glacier National Park.

Forecasters, meanwhile, predicted another Canadian cold front may hit Montana this weekend, bringing rain or even snow at higher elevations.

"With just a little bit of luck, maybe we could get enough (precipitation) to put the doggone fires out," said National Weather Service meteorologist Jack Poppe.

Temperatures rose into the 80s Thursday on the 32,200-acre Red Bench fire in Glacier Park, where nearly 1,000 firefighters were trying to complete the final mile of fire line and prevent the flames from escaping.

The fire has destroyed 21 homes and numerous outbuildings, killed one firefighter and injured up to a dozen others since raging out of control Sept. 6.

In Oregon, Willamette National Forest crews worked on a 4-day-old fire that grew to 6,350 acres overnight and put out so much smoke firefighters sometimes couldn't find the fire, said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Norm Hesselstahl.

"It was a pretty frustrating day," he said. "One of the fellows told me he was standing on the dam at Hills Creek Reservoir and couldn't see the dam, the smoke was so thick."

Idaho still has about 300,000 acres of forest fires, and several wilderness and forest areas have been closed to public entry until the fire danger eases.

Gilbert

• commemorated Thursday evening that the city's 62,000 residents start evacuating.

"We are dealing with people's lives therefore at 8 o'clock we are recommending evacuation of the island. We feel that we cannot wait until the morning to make that decision," said Matthew Sudd, adding that roadblocks would be set up at midnight on Interstate 45 to limit access to the island.

In Brownsville, Texas' southernmost city, winds began to pick up around noon under overcast skies. Police said they were asking residents to consider evacuating, but they were not ordering it.

"We've begun evacuating the city and the point is, where are you going to move 100,000 people?" said Sgt. Dean Pous.

A Greyhound-Trailways bus spokesman said the company was doubling its schedule of outbound buses to accommodate those fleeing the storm.

Lorena Curry, who has lived in Brownsville since 1935, said she plans to ride out the storm. "I've been through them before. I'm going to stick around at my home." But she added, "I could get along without a hurricane very well."

Gilbert surged into the gulf after battering the Yucatan Peninsula in Mexico with 160 mph winds, forcing tens of thousands to flee.

After crossing the peninsula, Gilbert's winds weakened to 120 mph, but forecasters predicted the storm would intensify again as it moves over open water.

The shower and thunderstorm activity that we see taking place around the hurricane itself is getting better organized, more vigorous, so we think it's starting to strengthen," said Shick at the Hurricane Center.

Sheets said the hurricane's sustained winds would "certainly increase to 130, 140 miles per hour."

In the coastal resort of South Padre Island, about 25 miles southeast of Brownsville, the mayor ordered his 1,000 residents to evacuate.

"We can't force them to leave, but electricity make not sense to stay," said Mayor Bob Pinkerton Jr., adding that water and electricity would be turned off Thursday afternoon.

Tropical storm force winds, at least 39 mph, extended outward up to 250 miles to the north and 200 miles to the south of the center.

The storm's first landfall earlier this week left at least 26 people dead in Jamaica, five in the Dominican Republic, 10 in Haiti and the six in Mexico. It also left a half-million people homeless in Jamaica and caused widespread damage to the Cayman Islands.

The storm barreled into the Yucatan coast at dawn Wednesday, thrashing beaches with 23-foot waves, uprooting trees, knocking out electricity and water supplies and severing telephone lines.

In Campeche, the state capital on the peninsula's west coast, boats and seaweed littered the streets of hundreds of yards from the shore after Gilbert passed through.

"The whole city is flooded. Everything is dark," said Ramon Castillo, a watchman at the newspaper Novedades de Campeche. "I've lived here all my life and I have never seen bad weather like this. People are scared."

Mexican officials reported six deaths, including two babies who drowned, and at least seven people were injured, but authorities were unable to reach many isolated villages.

Gilbert pounded the provincial capital of Merida and the gulf port cities of Puerto Progreso, Campeche and Ciudad del Carmen, closing airports and roads and knocking out communications and power and flooding streets and highways.

About 20,000 people were evacuated from Puerto Progreso and other coastal cities in the state, said the Interior Ministry in Mexico City said by telephone Thursday. Hundreds of homes were destroyed, he said.

On Mexico's northern coast, people were evacuated from fishing villages and towns into shelters in Matamoros, a city of 400,000 about 12 miles inland near Brownsville.

The hurricane center said Gilbert at one point was the most intense storm on record in terms of barometric pressure, which was measured Tuesday at 26.13 inches, breaking the 26.35 inches recorded for the 1935 hurricane that devastated the Florida Keys.

The storm, spawned Saturday southeast of Puerto Rico, appeared to have hit Jamaica the hardest. Seaga said it destroyed about 100,000 of Jamaica's 500,000 homes. He estimated damage at $9 billion.

Seaga said in a nationwide radio broadcast Thursday that the one-month state of emergency, including a dawn-to-dusk curfew to prevent looting, was put into effect to allow normalcy to resume in the shortest possible time and to allow the rebuilding process to begin.

On Wednesday, Gilbert was classified as a Category 5 storm, the strongest and deadliest type of hurricane. Such storms have maximum sustained winds greater than 155 mph and can cause catastrophic damage.

By Wednesday night, the National Hurricane Center downgraded it to a Category 4 and to a Category 3 by Thursday morning.

Survivors

The passengers stayed calm. "I didn't feel a people panic," said Bernyce, 71. "There was an urgency to get out, but everyone maintained a feeling of helping others. Some pushed their way past us, but they were nice about it."

The Hills made their way down the aisle to a place just behind the cockpit where the fuselage had cracked open.

"Too many of the crew were not capable of helping," Bud said. "There were some fellows hollering to get down out of the smoke and to get moving to the exits."

There was "so much debris between the stewardesses and the captain's cabin," Bernyce said. "Only one escape hatch opened. Most everyone got out of the plane through the cracks."

The couple escaped through a crack behind the main entrance door. Bernyce exited first and slid down the side of the plane. Her leg broke when she landed. Earlier reports erroneously said Bud Hill came out first and tried to catch his wife.

The hole allowed only person one out a time. About 25 people escaped through that hole. Most of the survivors exited through the main crack in the rear of the plane, where the fire was.

"Our concern was to get away from the smoke," Bernyce said. "There was always that feeling that the plane would blow."

Rescue workers moved Bernyce near a fence away from the wreckage. A gross fire forged firefighters to grab her again. Then they moved her a third time, to the hood of a police car until the ambulance came.

"The hood of the car was great. It was so warm and comforting," Bernyce said. Bud added, "I had to hold her leg to keep it from flopping around while two big guys carried her."

The couple was impressed by the staff at the suburban Dallas hospital, where they were taken. Many hospital workers had been involved in the aftermath of the crash of a Delta L-1011 in Dallas in 1985, in which 137 people died.

"They were ready for us at the hospital," Bernyce said. "I was out of surgery by 3 o'clock. The doctor was almost happy to see me. He said, 'Here is one I can fix. There were so many in the other crash he couldn't help. I was so fortunate.'"

She spent 10 days in the hospital, being treated for a compound fracture of her left leg. She has a steel plate and four or five screws in it. Both Hills suffered bumps and bruises in the crash.

"We are so grateful we weren't burned. Those who were burned where much worse off than I was," Bernyce said.

The trip back on Delta did produce some apprehensions for the Hills, who say they are not avid fliers.

"We were ready to come home. If I got frightened I just shut it off," Bernyce said. "Delta did bring us home. A person accompanied us to make sure we got home OK."

The Hills are most appreciative of everyone who helped during the crisis. They mention a passenger, Bob Anderson, who continually checked on them after the crash until the ambulances came. They also remember a fireman who helped them get away from the burning plane.

"They were very important. And then, our family and friends. Without their support we couldn't have made it," Bernyce said. "And we send regrets and love to those who didn't make it and to their families. We were so fortunate."

State Board of Education OKs $176 million in funding requests

BOISE (AP) — With praise all around for a new budgeting process featuring on-campus hearings, the state Board of Education has approved $176 million in pared-down higher-education funding requests for the spending year that begins next July 1.

For the state's one four-year college and three universities, which account for $118 million of the total, the increase would be 13.5 percent from the general account and 11.1 percent overall.

The institutions' presidents agreed with Alvarez that the result was a strictly needs-based budget, but they seemed more than happy with the board's recommendation and how it came about.

Board strengthens description for executive director's job

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Board of Education voted Thursday to strengthen the job description of its executive director, but not as much as originally planned.

The board's Personnel-Administrative Committee proposed language changes in the job description for the executive director that would have given position more authority over the state's often fractious higher education system.

But the entire board finally agreed on a toned-down version drafted by the committee after University of Idaho President Richard Gibb and Lewis-Clark State College President Lee Vickers and Boise State University Executive Vice President Larry Selland all called the new budgeting process a big step forward.

"It's going to have some lasting effects," said Selland, sitting in for BSU President John Keiser.

He said having board members and staff on campus helped improve communication and boosted morale among faculty and staff at the schools.

But the bottom line, all agreed, was that the resulting budget recommendation was barones. Legislators used to assuming some excess built into agency budget requests will have to look elsewhere next year, they said.

The budget recommendations approved Thursday at the board's meeting in Boise now will go to Gov. Cecil Andrus, who will review them before making his own higher-education spending pitch to the 1989 Idaho Legislature.

"It's a reasonable request in terms of need. In fact, in terms of need it's a moderate request," said George Alvarez of Boise, chairman of the board's Finance Committee. "The next issue becomes what do the people who appropriate the money think we can afford."

The requests for fiscal 1990 represent a 14.4 percent increase in funding from the state's general account, and an 11.1 percent hike overall.

University of Idaho President Richard Gibb, Idaho State University President Richard Bowen, Lewis-Clark State College President Lee Vickers and Boise State University Executive Vice President Larry Selland all called the new budgeting process a big step forward.

"It's going to have some lasting effects," said Selland, sitting in for BSU President John Keiser.

He said having board members and staff on campus helped improve communication and boosted morale among faculty and staff at the schools.

Andrus views forest fire damage

WEST YELLOWSTONE, Mont. (AP) — After flying with other Western governors over the huge forest fires in Yellowstone National Park, Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus says, "I think we have an understanding of how broad that devastation is."

Andrus and his counterparts from surrounding states met in West Yellowstone Thursday for a meeting with Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis. Dukakis and the others flew over some of the areas ravaged by forest fires.

Andrus, in a telephone interview, said it was important to get a firsthand look at the fire damage.

"But I think more than anything else, it demonstrated — that — Mr. Dukakis accepted an invitation from four Western governors who asked him to come out and look at the problem," Andrus said.

"It is the second time in the last month that he has come out to meet with us in the West," the governor said. "I think he's the first person to demonstrate that he is willing to understand that there is a difference between the East Coast and the Rocky Mountain West."

Andrus had to field some heat of his own. Republican Sen. Steve Symms said the controversial "let burn" policy of the Department of the Interior dates back to 1978, when Andrus was secretary of the interior under President Carter.

Andrus has been among those critical of the policy, calling it "a prescription for disaster."

Symms said the National Park Service's official statement of fire policy has not changed since 1978.

"Anyone attempting to make a political issue of this disaster may be walking into a fire storm," said Symms. "It will backfire, especially if it is the same person who initiated the same policy currently the focus of so much understandable public dissatisfaction."

Andrus said the problem is not only putting out this year's fires, but also planning for rehabilitation.

"Next year, resources will need to be made available to help regenerate the land," he said. "We need help for the economy of the area, that has been destroyed."

Reagan honors Idaho Falls school

States News Service

WASHINGTON — President Reagan and Education Secretary William J. Bennett honored Idaho Falls Westside Elementary School and 286 other public and private elementary schools for school excellence at a ceremony in Washington Thursday.

"You've proved excellence cannot be bought," Reagan declared standing under an "Excellence is Elementary" banner at a downtown hotel. "When we lose our desire to learn, the world around us begins to shrink."

According to Westside Elementary school principal Craig Ashton, it's Westside's computer lab, character building programs and the cooperative spirit among the staff, students and parents that make the school special.

"We wanted kids to take pride in their work, and be motivated for the right reasons," explained Ashton. "That's the real reason we did this — apply for the award — not for prestige and recognition for the school, but to intellectually motivate the kids."

"It's something to build on," Ashton said. "Now the challenge is to stay at this level and improve."

About 600 children attend Westside Elementary School, which offers classes from kindergarten through the 6th grade.

The Department of Education, which sponsored the department's fourth annual "School Recognition Program," based its evaluations on a myriad of characteristics, from organization and curriculum to character development and school philosophy.

This year's awards emphasized exceptional math and science programs.

Westside's computer program helps the school stand out in these subjects, explained 2nd grade teacher Ann Shively and past Parent-Teacher Organization president Pam Gale.

Bishop pushes 'Temptation' boycott

BOISE (AP) — The bishop of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Boise, the Most Rev. Sylvester L. Treinen, on Thursday urged people to stay away from the Boise opening today of the controversial movie, "The Last Temptation of Christ."

Bishop Treinen and other southwestern Idaho religious leaders of several different faiths held a news conference to announce plans to boycott and picket the movie, which is to be shown at the Egyptian Theater in downtown Boise.

Treinen said he feared the film would have a harmful effect on "teenagers and young people and those who are wavering in their faith to Jesus. I think it will produce a great deal of harm for them," he said.

Those strong in their faith, he said, could see the film and continue in their love of Christ and serve him well.

Others criticized the film as "a harmful, blasphemous film, with no good purpose."

Dr. Buck, pastor of Central Assembly Church, announced an indefinite boycott of the Egyptian Theater, even after "The Last Temptation of Christ" leaves, along with another movie house, the Eighth Street Marketplace.

Both are operated by Cineplex Odeon. Cineplex Odeon Films is distributing "The Last Temptation of Christ" with Universal Pictures.

"They've basically said that their showing the movie is more important than conviction," said Buck.

Theater managers have declined comment.

Among other religions represented at the news conference announcing the boycotts were spokesmen for the Nazarene Church and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Activist urges action against supremacists

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — The white-supremacist movement still looks with longing eyes toward the Pacific Northwest, where citizens should make it clear they do not accept such views, a human-rights activist said Thursday.

"One of the mistakes we made in Coeur d'Alene is that we were slow in our response," said Bill Wassmuth, a consultant to the Northwest Coalition Against Malignant Harassment. "Silence is interpreted as tacit approval, if not support."

Wassmuth helped found the coalition while he was a priest in Coeur d'Alene which is near the headquarters of the white-supremacist group Aryan Nations in Hayden Lake.

His became a critic of the group and its views. His home was bombed in September 1986 by suspects who espoused neo-Nazism. Four suspects pleaded guilty this summer to a variety of federal charges in connection with the bombing.

Wassmuth left the church earlier this year and said he works in Seattle as a freelance human-rights consultant.

Wassmuth was in Helena to deliver an address at Carroll College and meet with members of the Helena Human Rights Task Force.

Rollover near Challis kills Boise man

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A one-car rollover northwest of Challis has claimed the life of a Boise man.

Thomas Robert Munsey, 30, was driving on Idaho 21 late Tuesday or early Wednesday when the accident occurred, Idaho State Police dispatcher Debbie Braun said.

Munsey apparently drove his pickup off the side of the road and rolled the vehicle twice, she said. Munsey was not ejected from the truck.

Emmett woman dies after being hit by car

EMMETT (AP) — An elderly Emmett woman has died after she was hit by a car, the Idaho State Police reported.

Ellen Schneider, 72, was walking westbound on Idaho 52 about five miles west of Emmett early Wednesday when she was struck by the vehicle. Schneider was hit by Edith Jensen, 50, from Sweet. The dispatcher said Schneider was in the middle of the highway — possibly crossing it — when the collision occurred.

The dispatcher said no citations will be issued in the incident.

CSI must regain confidence of public

Lloyd J. Walker

Gatlin Brothers, etc., and it struck me, and frankly incensed me, that this was also the day set for the CSI levy vote. The stunt became obvious. There are many, including me, who firmly believe that CSI has been the single greatest addition to this community since I. B. Perrine.

It appears however that its current direction and controls is limited to the group that will participate in the CSI golf tournament and not the general community.

We hear almost every day that government should be run like a business, and that suggests some accountability for the money being spent. This whole affair indicated that a group at CSI decided that $7 million dollars was a nice round number and so they asked for that amount. Dollars, whether they are raised by tax or received by Federal grant, should be spent with some degree of reason and planning. This whole proposal appeared to be utterly unplanned. The truly serious impact of this whole episode is a loss of credibility for the administration of CSI, including its Board of Trustees.

Until this proposal, the relationship between CSI and the community has been excellent. I'm sure it will remain on a high level, but with a requirement that its operation regain the confidence of the public. Public statements must not be insensitive to the community. Many in the past have been. The huge turnout and resounding vote certainly did not represent a mandate against growth and development at CSI.

It was primarily a response to an extremely badly prepared and presented proposal. The administration should seriously consider its role in this matter and not blame the defeat on community attitude.

Kistler case damages city police integrity

Two years ago, Twin Falls police officer Patrick Bermingham confessed to federal agents that he had intentionally falsified federal vouchers and taken money to which he was not entitled.

Despite admitting to being a thief, Bermingham is still with the city police department as a commander.

Now, the chief and the Twin Falls city manager have looked the other way in a second case, essentially saying the matter is "closed" on police commander Jim Kistler, who beat a drunken driving case last week despite registering .16 blood alcohol after wrecking his car.

Unless chief Tim Qualls or city manager Tom Courtney decide otherwise, or unless the city council steps in, Kistler apparently will also be allowed to keep his job as the department's training officer, responsible for training young rookies.

No doubt, he will be able to give an excellent lecture on drunken driving. It might go like this:

Out at night behind the wheel of your car and had too much to drink? Concerned about getting busted for driving while under the influence? No problem. Just keep a few beers in the car. If you have an accident or are stopped, then have a few.

This act will make it difficult, if not impossible, for the state to win the case in court, for it will jeopardize the state's ability to establish what your blood alcohol level was at the time of the accident. That is the essence of the "recent consumption" defense.

Intent is sometimes hard to prove in a criminal case and no one except Kistler probably knows whether he intended to try to beat the case by having a couple of beers after the accident.

But the case leaves the uneasy feeling that the inattentive driving plea was not the right outcome here, and that, even if it was, Kistler is probably not the right individual to be training young officers.

Most Magic Valley law enforcement officers are dedicated, conscientious people who believe they have a special public trust to uphold.

Quietly, many were embarrassed, ashamed and disgusted by the Bermingham incident in 1986. They feel the same way today.

Why, they ask, should a police agency in the valley have two top-ranked commanders who have had problems with the law? It is good question.

The Kistler case, as city manager Tom Courtney and chief Qualls both say, may be over. Both may be content to keep Kistler, as well as Bermingham before him, in positions of authority.

But we do not think those actions win much respect in the community at large, among average citizens who are just old-fashioned enough to believe that police ought to follow higher standards of conduct than theft and drunken driving.

A police department is a public agency which serves the community. Its integrity is paramount. In our view, both Bermingham and now Kistler have damaged that integrity.

This situation will not change until people tell the department, its chief, the city manager and the Twin Falls City Council which employs them all that they want it changed.

Until then, as with most other aspects of life, we will get the kind of leadership we deserve.

I was not disappointed at the results of the vote Tuesday because I was one of the many that voted no.

I'm sure this is the first major community project in which I have participated on a negative basis.

I was disappointed, however, at the comments quoted in The Times-News from Chairman LeRoy Craig, President Meyerhoeffer, Karl Black, etc., about their assessment of the reasons for the negative vote.

Perhaps, it will be helpful if you all take a look at the meetings that you held prior to the presentation of this matter to the public.

It seemed clear to many of us that you intended the quick vote as a maneuver to slip by real public scrutiny and the maneuver showed through.

To attempt to pass a very major community monetary project in five weeks, and those weeks being in August, September and over Labor Day, is just plain bad judgment.

As I returned to Twin Falls Tuesday morning, the radio was full of the opening of the County Fair, the Vietnam a war for the poor

It was Aug. 29, 1968, that Kenny Rose, a Vietnam veteran took Fort Vancouver, in Washington state.

All the news media had to say was that someone had taken the fort to bring attention to the plight of veterans.

One-third of all the homeless are veterans and half of them are Vietnam vets. Rose had been living in his car for several months. Rose knew he was going to be arrested when he took the fort. When it comes time for the trial I know who I'd call as the first witness for the defense if I were Rose's lawyer.

I'd call Dan Quayle and Paul Harvey. Because Kenny Rose actually believed all those things that Dan Quayle and Paul Harvey talk about so well.

The Communist Menace. Self-determination for the South Vietnamese. The Domino Effect. If we don't stop them there, pretty soon we'll be fighting them in Idaho, that sort of thing.

Kenny Rose in his 17-year-old heart believed all that stuff, and enlisted in the Marines. 20-years later Kenny is finding that those back home were right... he was a fool. The government that sent him to fight for the slogans of Quayle and Harvey now hope he and his kind will go away. Cut and treat his nightmares and war wounds are aye and Kenny has been left on his own.

We already know where Dan Quayle was. We all know that Paul Harvey so believed in his press releases he sent his son to Canada so he could return to parrot his father's slogans.

But that's OK. We need lawyers and columnists, too. Someone had to stay safe and go to school. And besides, Vietnam was a war for the poor. Quayle and Paul Harvey were rich, and Rose wasn't.

The two prosecutors, who will have the final say on what happens to Kenny Rose both missed the war...they were going to law school.

But that's OK. It wasn't much of a war anyway. And if it weren't for prosecutors, who else would we have to put the screws to one of those whacked-out Vietnam vets when he gets out of line?

Stallings fine, decent man

I have been fortunate to meet Congressman Stallings and know him to be a fine and decent man. He represents his congressional district in a fair and honest manner. Idahoans can be proud of him.

It is insulting to the voters' intelligence when a person like Dane Watkins fills the news media with dirty campaign practices. The citizens of Idaho do not need two embarrassing Republican representatives in Washington DC, one is too many.

I hope the voters of the Second Congressional District will get behind the right Congressman Stallings.

Watkins pursuing wrong line

Dane Watkins is now buying radio time to spread his smear campaign against Congressman Stallings. How can a man running for a congressional office expect to earn the respect and support of the voters displaying such a low caliber of character? I think anyone who will vote for him or support him must possess the same character flaw.

If I were part of the Republican party hierarchy, I would feel obligated to the party to advise Mr.

Watkins to wake up and smell the flowers, get off the "beating a dead horse" plank, and confront the real life issues of the people of the 2nd congressional district.

I consider myself as an independent thinking voter, and therefore feel I can try to prevent the smoke screen Watkins is trying to present. And, as an independent thinking voter, I can appreciate the fine attitude displayed by Congressman Stallings when he addresses the issues which are of concern to me and my neighbors.

Clean up your act, Dane ole boy, learn from the fine example set by the Stallings campaign.

Takes pride in congressman

It is too bad that Dane Watkins, Republican candidate for US Congress, cannot develop some issues of his own and conduct a reputable and honest campaign. I feel his campaign conduct is good enough reason to show he is not qualified for an important office as US Representative.

Congressman Stallings has always conducted an open, honest, and clean campaign. He speaks to the issues which interest the voters in this district. He is a friend to the farmers, aware of environmental problems, concerned about the senior citizens, and is interested in bringing a good quality of life to all the people of Idaho and this great nation.

I am proud we have a man with excellent character representing us in Washington like Richard Stallings. Several of my Republican friends have expressed embarrassment for their party and Mr. Watkins over Mr. Watkins' malicious campaign behavior.

Support for Mothershead

On Sept. 13, I was told that one of our custodians, Alton (Tiny) Mothershead had been given notice that he would not be with the Hansen school district as of Oct. 1.

I could not believe it. My daughter came home from school crying, because she has known Alton all her school years in Hansen and considers him to be a friend almost as if he were her Grandfather. She was hurt and angry.

Why would anyone fire Tiny? I know for a fact, that he has been the most dedicated worker at Hansen school of anyone I know.

Working nights, using his own pickup to run errands for the school with no compensation for that, working in the community with the Volunteer Fire Dept., VFW, church and in any way he can to help anyone. He is such a giving person, loves his work, the students and teachers, who in turn love him; at least I know the students do.

What's the motive behind all this? Is it Alton's age? He is 59 years old and will be of retirement age in three years.

Is it Superintendent Dick Smith; one of the members of the school board? I cannot believe anyone could treat this man in this manner and still have a clear conscience.

Let's all get behind Alton with our total support. Parents, students, teachers, speak up. I know it's a difficult situation for the teachers to speak up because they have to work under Supt. Smith, but remember teachers, it could be you.

What about the other custodian, Bud Standlee? How does he feel? When will his turn be and why? Because he's been ill quite a lot the past year or so, or maybe because he can't do the work of two men, as Alton was expected to do while Bud was ill?

We don't want a dictatorship in Hansen schools. We only want what's right for our children.

Responsibility precedes liberty

We proclaim to the world and to ourselves that we are a nation under God deeply committed to the protection of each person's inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Ours, we say, is a government of, for and by the people. It is sadly all a lie.

We have forsaken our ideals and principles as we clamor for "economic development" in an unduly pursuit of a Madison Ave. marketed, materialistic happiness.

On the way to this unattainable state of material bliss we have run up an incomprehensible debt, damaged or destroyed much of our environment, and torn apart our cultural fabric.

Because of our phony money (Federal Reserve Notes) and loose credit we were able to roll on unchecked by any economic factors to snap us back to reality. A number of opportunities for a "depression" and a chance to get real were washed away by an influx of "Mr. Greenstuff." He'll make it all right, they say.

Having been robbed of those opportunities we continued the high life. We now are not only faced with an economic deficit of catastrophic proportion, but we have to face the realities of environmental, cultural, intellectual and spiritual deficits as well.

The worst problem of addiction faces this country: it is not drugs or alcohol, it's our addiction to materialism and money. It's doing us in, folks.

Our priorities are all screwed up. We should be more interested in spiritual, intellectual and cultural growth that we are with economic growth. We should be more concerned about living and the source of life than with making a living that is destroying life.

There can be no liberty without responsibility and self-discipline. Instead of take, take, take, we must learn to give back. Sadly the political leadership of both parties is blinded to the truth and will gladly lead us into material bondage.

If we are to truly call our government a government of the people, we must lead. It makes no difference who you elect to any office, if you yourself are not willing to "just say no" to materialism.

I suggest you start by cutting your consumption 25% and prepare to go lower. Purchase from local-owned businesses.

Turn off the TV and start training your kids again. Teach them self-discipline and give them values. Observe and learn from nature rather than destroying it at every opportunity to make a buck.

Remember Christ said "I am the Way." It was simple and kind. Tempted by the things of this world Christ said "No." We should at least try to live up to our beliefs; to do otherwise is hypocrisy.

Money loss did not occur

It seems to me that a responsible citizen who takes the time to write a guest editorial would also check the content of the editorial to be sure it is correct.

This morning you published an editorial from Ulahwti which wrongly accuses the City of losing, or misusing public funds. The editorial discusses investigations which were allegedly started and dropped. An example includes "the $100,000 or so that turned up missing from the Twin Falls City Treasury several years ago."

I have been employed by the City for 11 years and I know this event did not occur.

Lax discipline is bad for all

Where are the "good old days" methods of handling people? Starting in the home, discipline has changed much. The schools' hands have been tied when correcting students. Police have been restricted in handling, arresting, detaining violators. Attorneys, most often the public defenders, challenge the authorities and the courts with the violation of a person's civil rights. Felony violators, when charged, shouldn't have any rights until they have been found "not guilty" or complied with the sentence.

Fear of consequence in school discipline, police handling and now court ruling, has disappeared. What's wrong with arresting either or both parents, when the school or the police establish this is a "juvenile delinquent?"

Society can't get any closer to a problem child. Let's hope a sizable percentage would be correctable before it's too late.

Fear of what my parents would do to me; what the teachers might do to me; what the police could do to me; what the courts are empowered to do to me; is no more.

Disruption in the school room starts many delinquents on the "road to ruin." So until things get better - happy hoping.

No justice in man's losing job

I think Mr. Alton Mothershead got an unfair deal being taken off his job. He is a veteran. I do know this coming November will be three years he has had to work lots of two weeks and a week and lots of days by himself, the other junior, Mr. Bud Standlee has been sick a lot.

The board members or the superintendent think the work should be perfect. One man doing the work of two men, do you people of Hansen call that justice? I think it is no justice at all. Our government just justice for all. Why is it not done?

Bush takes shots for gun-control stand

MICHAEL DUKAKIS
Calls for stricter gun control was one of four people shot during John Hinckley's March 1981 attempt to assassinate President Reagan.

Mrs. Brady's lobbying group, Handgun Control Inc., wants a 7-day wait on handgun purchases from licensed dealers.

Under the amendment, a dealer would have to send law enforcement authorities a sworn statement including the gun's serial number and description and the buyer's name, address and birth date. The police, at their option, could perform a background check.

GEORGE BUSH
Opposes waiting period

Dukakis told the police organizations: "I support legislation that allows law enforcement officials adequate time to review the criminal record or competency of anyone applying for a handgun permit."

Dukakis' record in support of gun control, including a proposed ban on cheap "Saturday Night Specials" used in many street robberies, has angered gun owners in his home state of Massachusetts. Signs at the state's borders call attention to its mandatory prison sentences for illegally carrying a gun.

Dukakis says government should respect the right of citizens to use firearms for hunting and target shooting, and "to own firearms to protect their homes and businesses, subject to the regulation of state and local governments."

But the governor says "there are too many illegally owned handguns across this nation, and we must act strongly to control the use of handguns by criminals." He says homicides committed with handguns claim 22,000 lives each year.

Bush, in his campaign literature, says, "I have always opposed federal gun registration or licensing of gun owners." But he adds that "we must balance the legitimate interests of gun owners with the rights of society."

"We must do all we can to keep guns out of the hands of convicted criminals."

In a debate with other Republican candidates before the Gun Owners of New Hampshire last Feb. 2, Bush said, "I'm not only a hunter but I'm a lifetime member of the NRA. I do have a deep appreciation for the Second Amendment rights to keep and bear arms."

He assured the gun owners he would, as president, veto a bill drafted by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, that would ban undetectable plastic handguns as a security hazard, but he urged gun owners to work with police organizations to fashion a compromise.

Engines didn't cause crash, officials say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators Thursday ruled out engine failure as the primary cause of the crash of a Delta Air Lines jet last month, saying no evidence was found indicating "the engines suffered a mechanical breakdown prior to impact."

The Aug. 31 crash as the Boeing 727 was attempting to take off from the Dallas-Fort Worth airport killed 14 of the 108 people aboard. The pilots survived, but none was able to shed light on the cause of the crash in initial interviews.

Early speculation on the cause of the accident centered on the plane's three engines because witnesses saw flames coming from an engine and one of the pilots was heard on the cockpit recorder to refer to "engine failure" shortly before the crash.

But the National Transportation Safety Board said Thursday a detailed examination of the three Pratt & Whitney JT8D engines at the company's facilities in Connecticut "indicated there was no evidence of pre-impact failure."

There was evidence that all engines were running as commanded and capable of producing full power at the "time of impact," the NTSB said in a brief statement.

The findings also ruled out the possibility that an object was sucked into an engine, since that would have been evident when the engines were disassembled.

tion could result from the aircraft having an unusual angle.

But the NTSB said there was only slight rotational damage found in one of the three engines and that was in an area of heavy damage due to the crash. Generally, serious compressor stalls or a series of stalls leave evidence of damage, but not always, according to aviation experts.

According to investigators, the cockpit voice recorder tape includes at least five noises that could be engine compressor stalls, but all of them occur after the plane already was having serious problems remaining aloft.

The NTSB's statement did not address the continuing questions of what might have caused an engine compressor stall — if one or more occurred — or why the aircraft failed to climb after reaching adequate lift-off speed.

Investigators have focused on whether the plane had the proper wing flap setting. For takeoff, the flaps at the trailing edge of the wings should have been extended to 15 degrees to gain proper lift.

The cockpit recorder includes an acknowledgment by co-pilot Carey W. Kirkland that the flaps had been set for proper takeoff and it shows no evidence of an alarm going off that should have warned of an improper setting.

But investigators found the flap control level in the retracted position. The position of the jack screws on the wings also indicated the flaps were retracted. Kirkland has told investigators he does not remember anything about the flight after the plane pushed back from the gate.

Oil firm indicted for January spill near Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A federal grand jury on Thursday indicted Ashland Oil Inc. on charges it violated federal environmental laws when more than 700,000 gallons of oil spilled into the Monongahela River in January, fouling drinking water in three states.

The indictment charged Ashland with misdemeanor violations of the federal Clean Water Act and the Refuse Act. Environmental laws do not contain felony provisions in such cases, so the misdemeanor charges were the most stringent allowed, said U.S. Attorney J. Alan Johnson.

The spill occurred Jan. 2 when an Ashland Oil storage tank in Jefferson, near Pittsburgh, collapsed as it was filled with 3.8 million gallons of oil. About 1 million gallons escaped the containment dikes at the facility, and more than 700,000 gallons spilled into the Monongahela River. The government said it was one of the largest inland oil spills in the nation's history, affecting drinking water supplies and plant and animal life in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia. About 23,000 suburban Pittsburgh residents went without tap water for almost a week.

The criminal charges disappointed Ashland Oil "in light of Ashland's efforts to mitigate the spill's impact and the fact that the company quickly accepted responsibility for the incident," said Ashland spokesman Roger Schrum.

Ashland has voluntarily paid more than $11.4 million for clean-up costs associated with the spill and to reimburse claims from individuals, businesses and government agencies, Schrum said.

"We think such actions impair rather than promote environmental compliance," he said.

Ashland disassembled a 48-year-old oil storage tank at Whiskey Island, Ohio, in 1986 and then reassembled it at its Jefferson terminal. It was placed in service in August 1987 and then collapsed four months later, the indictment said.

In May, investigators for the Battelle Memorial Institute, an independent research group that studied the accident, said a dime-size flaw in the tank's brittle steel walls caused the collapse. Aggravating the condition were the relative weakness of the World War II-era steel, pressure from the diesel fuel and cold weather.

White House staff considered removing Reagan, book states

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Most high-level White House aides believed that President Reagan was so depressed, inept and inattentive in the wake of disclosures about the Iran-Contra scandal early in 1987 that the possibility of invoking the 25th Amendment to remove him from office was raised in a memo to Howard H. Baker Jr., then Reagan's chief of staff.

Former White House aide James Cannon, confirming facts reported in a newly published book, said in an interview Wednesday that he wrote a March 1, 1987, memorandum based on the aides' concern and raising the possibility of applying the amendment.

Baker took the recommendation seriously and, with Cannon and two of his own aides, spent part of a day observing Reagan's behavior before concluding that the president was sufficiently competent to perform his duties, according to the book.

However, Baker later said that even though he accepted Cannon's concerns as legitimate, he never seriously considered invoking the 25th Amendment.

"I didn't take Cannon's memo lightly," Baker said in an interview Wednesday, "but from the first time I saw him (Reagan), he was fully in control and I never had any question about his mental competence."

The White House declined direct comment.

The existence of Cannon's memo and facts leading up to it are reported in "Landslide: The Unmaking of the President, 1984-88," by Jane Mayer, a Wall Street Journal reporter who covered the Reagan White House, and Doyle McManus, a Los Angeles Times reporter who has covered the Iran-Contra scandal.

The book gives a detailed behind-the-scenes look at the presidency during Reagan's gravest political crisis and discloses new details about Vice President George Bush's role.

Bush has contended that he did not know that the administration's secret deal to sell arms to Iran centered on a swap for hostages and involved radical elements in Iran until the chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee spelled out those details to him in December 1986, a month after the news media exposed the scandal.

But "Landslide," amplifying on news reports that Bush had been repeatedly briefed about the deal before the scandal surfaced, provides a detailed description of a July 1986 briefing in which an Israeli official told the vice president that the Iranian initiative had turned into a sequence of arms-for-hostage swaps and that it involved "the most radical elements" in Iran's government.

Bush was briefed at that time, according to the book, because Oliver L. North, then a White House National Security Council aide, viewed the vice president as one of his key supporters and wanted him to promote more arms deals with Iran.

Bush had a chance to intervene at that point in the arms-for-hostage deal — either to urge that the deals go on or to raise questions and urge that Reagan reconsider what his aides were leading him into, wrote Mayer and McManus. "Yet he did nothing."

"Landslide" reports that Baker, on the weekend before becoming chief of staff early in 1987, sent long-time aides Cannon and Thomas Griscum into the White House to look into reports of internal disorder in the wake of the Iran-Contra scandal.

Cannon and Griscum were shocked by what they found. "Chaos," Cannon reported in his memo to Baker. "There was no order in the place. The staff system had just broken down. It had just evaporated."

Even more chilling, Cannon told Mayer and McManus, was the portrait that White House aides drew of Reagan himself: "They told stories about how inattentive and inept the president was. He was lazy; he wasn't interested in the job. They said he wouldn't read the papers they gave him — even short position papers and documents. They said he wouldn't come over to work — all he wanted to do was to watch movies and television at the residence."

Cannon told the Los Angeles Times that he interviewed 15 to 20 White House officials, including senior aides, and "the overwhelming majority" painted that portrait of Reagan.

The portrait was so deeply disturbing to Cannon, who had served as an aide to Vice President Nelson Rockefeller and as domestic policy adviser to President Ford, that he began his memo to the incoming chief of staff with this startling recommendation:

"1. Consider the possibility that section four of the 25th Amendment might be applied." The amendment, added to the Constitution in 1967, provides that the president may be removed if the vice president and a majority of the cabinet declare him unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office.

According to "Landslide," Baker was skeptical, but did not dismiss the idea. "It doesn't sound like the Ronald Reagan I just saw, but we'll see tomorrow," he told his aides.

They decided to observe Reagan first-hand before making any decision. At a meeting in the White House on March 2, Baker, Cannon, Griscum and Baker said.

A.B. Culvahouse bracketed Reagan at the Cabinet table so that they could watch his every move. To Cannon's surprise, Reagan seemed attentive and alert, charming and glib — the same Ronald Reagan he had known for years.

Nevertheless, Mayer and McManus argue that the situation did involve a brush with a constitutional crisis. They quote several Reagan aides who described the president as inattentive and indecisive and report that both Secretary of State George P. Shultz and then-national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane repeatedly offered to resign to break the White House's internal paralysis on foreign policy issues.

Deaver's memory impaired, lawyers say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawyers trying to minimize the perjury sentence Michael K. Deaver faces contended Thursday that alcoholism impaired the former presidential aide's memory during sworn testimony about his lobbying.

Defense lawyer Randall J. Turk said there was medical evidence that "at all times relevant to this case" Deaver's memory was impaired by alcoholism.

The disease "clouded Deaver's memory both at the time of the lobbying contacts and when he was later questioned about them under oath by a grand jury and a House subcommittee," Turk said.

The former deputy White House chief of staff and close friend of President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, faces a possible five-year term and a $8,800 fine for each of three perjury convictions.

Deaver was found guilty of lying by saying he couldn't recall certain contacts with former Reagan administration officials for high-paying lobbying clients. Sentencing is scheduled for Sept. 23. The evidence was offered to give "the court understanding of the offense behavior for which Mr. Deaver was convicted."

Turk said doctors would testify that Deaver's memory might have been impaired because he took a Valium tablet before questioning in May 1986 by the House Energy and Commerce investigations subcommittee. The panel and a grand jury investigated Deaver's lobbying for possible ethics-law violations.

Deaver's willingness earlier that year to pose holding a telephone in a rented limousine near the U.S. Capitol for a Time Magazine cover photo for a story about his lobbying shows how alcohol had impaired his judgment, Turk said.

"His trust of Time Magazine staggers the mind," Turk said, noting that Deaver would not have allowed Reagan to expose himself to the press in that fashion.

Trees hurt pollution control, Georgia researchers believe

ATLANTA (AP) — Regulations ignoring the effect of trees on the atmosphere are undermining America's pollution control efforts, researchers suggest in a study of heavily wooded Atlanta, which frequently fails air quality evaluations.

While not endorsing Ronald Reagan's theories of "killer trees," the Georgia Tech scientists say ignoring vegetation's impact on the environment has sent regulators chasing the wrong culprit, a class of chemical compounds called hydrocarbons, in the battle against ozone.

Ozone can cause lung damage to humans and hurt crops when it exists in the lower atmosphere.

Lead researcher W.L. Chameides admits the conclusions place him and his colleagues out on a scientific limb. "But I think there are other scientists that are coming along with us. I think that it will be accepted," he said, despite what he called "institutional inertia."

The study, published in Friday's Science magazine, says the Environmental Protection Agency's decision to attack ozone through limiting hydrocarbons is doomed to failure because trees give off as much, if not more, of the hydrogen-carbon compound as cars and factories.

Retail sales slip in August as consumers curb their spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales declined in August for only the second time this year, the government said Thursday, indicating to analysts that inflationary pressures in the economy are easing.

The Commerce Department said sales fell by 0.2 percent last month to $133.5 billion, adjusted for seasonal variations but not for price increases. Economists have been worried since the spring that rising export sales coupled with strong demand from U.S. consumers would put too much strain on the economy and fuel inflation.

The small drop in retail sales is an indication that American consumers are curbing their appetite for goods enough to allow factories to make more for sale abroad, analysts said. The Federal Reserve, in an effort to slow the economy by curbing domestic demand, has been pushing interest rates higher since late March and economists say the Fed tightening may be beginning to take hold.

"I think things are looking just fine inflationwise," said Michael K. Evans, head of Evans Economics, a Washington consulting firm. "I think the Fed deserves an A. I think they tightened just enough to slow down the economy without sending it into a tailspin.

Richard W. Kahn, chief economist of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, was critical of the Fed.

"The threat of accelerating inflation is declining," he said. "It no longer makes sense for the Fed to continue tight money policies which endanger economic growth."

In a second report providing good news for inflation watchers, the Federal Reserve said Thursday that the operating rate at the nation's factories dropped in August for the first time since February, by 0.1 percentage point to 83.8 percent of capacity. The rate also dropped in the mining sector, but both declines were offset by a temporary rise in rates at utilities related to the summer heat wave.

Factory operating rates had been creeping higher over the past year, raising concern that prices could rise if manufacturers had trouble producing to meet both the boom in export sales and strong demand from domestic buyers.

The August fall in retail sales, the first overall decline in sales since April's 0.4 percent drop, followed a revised 0.1 percent gain in July, which had originally been estimated at a stronger 0.5 percent.

Auto sales fell 1.8 percent in August to a seasonally adjusted $29.1 billion. It was the sharpest decline in this volatile category since October.

Excluding autos, sales last month rose a modest 0.2 percent following a slight 0.1 percent gain in July.

David Wyss, an economist with Data Resources, Inc., a forecasting firm in Lexington, Mass., said strong car sales earlier this year were contributing to the weakness in August.

"Dealers don't have as many leftover models to promote this year," he said. In the past several years, they have been forced to offer sales incentives in August to clear their lots in preparation for the new model year beginning in the fall.

Sales at department and other general merchandise stores were also weak, held back, according to analysts, by hotter than usual weather in August along with consumer indifference to new fashions in women's clothing.

The sales in that category fell 0.4 percent last month to $15.1 billion, following a 0.1 percent drop a month earlier.

Sales of durable goods, "big ticket" items expected to last three or more years—dropped 1.0 percent—last month, dragged down by autos and by a 1.2 percent decline in furniture sales.

Furniture sales had fallen 2.1 percent in July. Rising mortgage interest rates have cut into home buying and when home sales drop, analysts say fewer home furnishings are sold.

Sales at building supply, hardware and garden stores were up 0.6 percent in August.

Sales of non-durable goods rose 0.4 percent last month, despite the decline at department stores.

Sales were up 1.3 percent at gasoline stations, 1.1 percent at drug stores, 0.8 percent at food and grocery stores, and 0.4 percent at specialty clothing shops. They declined 0.6 percent at restaurants and bars.

Wyss linked the increases at gasoline stations and at food stores to higher prices. Gasoline prices should come down, he said, but food prices, spurred by the summer drought, will stay high.

Coin redesign wins approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — With little debate, for a change, the Senate has approved a bill to redesign the reverse sides of the penny, nickel, dime and quarter.

The legislation, approved on a voice vote Wednesday, also calls for issuing special coins commemorating the centennials of six states and the 100th birthday of President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The Senate sent the three separate bills to the House where at least one and possibly two of them may face strong opposition. The most controversial measure, at least in the House, calls for modernizing the coin designs.

The bill suggests the redesigned coins reflect such American constitutional ideas as freedom of speech and assembly, the right to trial by jury, the right to vote, the separation of powers, and the right to equal protection under the law.

The first redesigned coin to be issued would be required to have a design commemorating the 200th anniversary of the Constitution.

A second bill would require the issuing of five-dollar commemorative coins to celebrate the centennials in 1989 and 1990 of Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota, Washington and Wyoming.

Pope comforts hijack victims in Lesotha

Denounces violence as end to conflict in southern Africa.

MASERU, Lesotha (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Thursday comforted pilgrims injured in a bus hijacking in this mountain kingdom and criticized militants who believe violence can solve southern Africa's conflicts.

"I am saddened to learn that others on their way to join me on this pilgrimage have been victims of a hijack that has caused such anguish and ended in bloodshed," John Paul said the day after police stormed the bus with four hijackers and 71 hostages aboard.

All four hijackers and two passengers died, including a 14-year-old girl, officials said. Twenty others were injured.

The pope spoke to a crowd of about 15,000 standing on a soggy field. Organizers expected 1 million and blamed the hijacking, rainy winter weather and expensive accommodations — such as $25-dollars-a-night tents — for the small turnout.

Speaking at an afternoon youth rally, John Paul urged his followers to "renounce every form of violence and hatred."

"The increase of violence in the world can never be halted by responding with more of the same," he said.

In an apparent criticism of some militant, "including acts" that could end passive resistance cannot overcome South Africa's system of racial segregation, the pope said, "There could be nothing further from the truth. There is nothing passive about non-violence."

A South African police anti-terrorist unit, working with Lesotho security forces, gunned down the hijackers Wednesday night, 27 hours after the bus driver and the pilgrims, including nuns and schoolgirls, were taken hostage.

The shootout occurred only 20 minutes after the pope drove across the border from South Africa, where his plane had been diverted because of bad weather in Maseru.

John Paul on Thursday visited the Queen Elizabeth II Hospital where the injured — 11 men and nine women — were being treated. He passed out Vatican medals and rosaries as he chatted with them.

Earlier, at an open-air Mass, he blessed the Rev. Joseph Gerard, a 19th-century French missionary in Lesotho. Beatification is the first step on the road to sainthood.

The Lesotho government, run by a military council that has good relations with South Africa, said hijacking ended with the "inevitable" and unavoidable" cooperation of our "one and very powerful neighbor."

The government said the hijackers ordered the driver to crash the bus through the closed gate of the British High Commission while they began shooting. The government did not say why the hijackers decided to move after more than a day's standoff, but there were unconfirmed reports that the gunmen may have been alarmed by police searchlights that suddenly were focused on the bus.

Several of the rescued hostages said the hijackers rigged the bus with explosives.

The government tried to forestall any criticism from African countries that have accused it of being too cooperative with South Africa. It said it uses police advisers from Britain, West Germany and Israel and has a military training program with the United States.

The gunman called for a return to civilian rule in Lesotho. They also demanded to meet the pope, King Moshoeshoe II and Britain's high commissioner.

King Moshoeshoe II, a practicing Catholic, skipped the beatification ceremony without public explanation, although his name was listed on the program.

Queen Tabitha, however, was present as well as the chairman of the ruling military council, Maj. Gen. Justin Lekhanya.

The 50-year-old Oxford-educated king scheduled a meeting Thursday evening with the pope at the royal palace. The ceremony was to include some traditional Basotho ethnic festivities that were canceled Wednesday when the papal plane from Botswana was diverted to South Africa.

Sakharov says Soviets should cut military duty

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union should cut mandatory military service in half because it is not threatened with attack, leading dissident Andrei D. Sakharov said in an interview published Thursday.

The weekly "Pravda" magazine, New Times quoted the 67-year-old Nobel Peace Prize laureate and nuclear physicist as saying the Kremlin should cut service time, now two years, to reduce the size of the military and use the resources elsewhere.

"At present, the Soviet Union is not threatened by any aggression," he said. "There are no Hitlerites now."

In addition to Nazi Germany's aggression under dictator Adolf Hitler, World War II was brought on by Soviet dictator Josef Stalin's "mistakes and crimes" that frightened the West, he said.

But he said the Soviet Union — and the West's attitude toward it — have changed.

"There is really not a single government which would threaten the USSR," he said, "and the rest is given with a halving of Soviet armed forces. This is absolutely excluded," Sakharov told New Times.

A reduction of the Soviet armed forces would help improve conditions for "scaling back conventional weapons in Europe and the entire world," he said. A force reduction also would "allow" the Soviet Union to transfer resources and manpower now used for the military to civilian uses, he said.

Since the United States and Soviet Union agreed in December to eliminate their arsenals of medium-range nuclear weapons, many Western politicians have called on the Soviet Union to cut back conventional arsenals in which they claim the Kremlin has an advantage.

New Times said it interviewed Sakharov while he was in the Black Sea resort of Dagomys at an international conference of scientists this month.

Sakharov, who was virtually blacklisted before Mikhail S. Gorbachev became Soviet Communist Party general secretary, has been quoted with increasing frequency in the Soviet press in the past six months.

Last December, the weekly Moscow News published a letter from Sakharov proposing that the Kremlin change its position on how to cut the superpowers' long-range nuclear arsenals.

Gilbert gains strength as it soaks Mexico

CAMPECHE, Mexico (AP) — More than 50,000 people fled rising floodwaters Thursday as Hurricane Gilbert battered the Yucatan Peninsula and its posh resorts. Two babies drowned.

Gilbert, the strongest storm on record, left much of the Yucatan without communications, electricity or drinking water. Airports were closed, most roads were blocked and supplies were running short.

Looting was reported in the resort city of Cancun on the east coast of the peninsula and officials said many people were afraid to evacuate their homes for fear of burglars.

In Campeche, on the peninsula's west coast, "there is no light, there is no radio, there is nothing," said Ramon Castillo, a nightwatchman on the newspaper Novedades de Campeche. "The whole city is flooded. Everything is dark. I've lived here all my life and I have never seen bad weather like this. People are scared."

Later Thursday, the storm continued on its west-northwest path heading toward northern Mexico and the coast of Texas.

"It's still moving west northwest, which is good news for Texas but not so good news for the northern part of Mexico," said National Hurricane Center director Robert Sheets. He said it appeared that the storm was strengthening.

Despite the vast damage, Mexican officials said they had reports of only a handful of minor injuries.

Town near U.S. base in Sicily hit by tornado

COMISO, Sicily (AP) — A tornado raged through this town outside the U.S. cruise missile base in southeastern Sicily on Thursday and injured at least 35 people, officials said.

The twister damaged many buildings and cars, felled trees and antennas, tore down signs and hurled blocks of marble dozens of yards. It also caused some damage in Ragusa, 10 miles east of Comiso.

There were no reports of damage at the missile base.

Comiso Mayor Salvatore Zago immediately asked for help from civil defense and that the town be declared a disaster area to make it eligible for relief funds.

Officials said 10 people were hospitalized.

Walesa holds line in meeting with Polish officials

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa met for four hours with government officials Thursday and stuck to his position that "there is no freedom without Solidarity."

Walesa, the chairman of the banned independent union movement, and Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak agreed to continue working toward an early start of talks on the future of Poland.

The problems are very difficult but the atmosphere is encouraging," a smiling Walesa told reporters after his second meeting with senior government officials in more than six years.

The government agreed to the talks after Walesa agreed to halt a wave of strikes last month that posed the most serious threat to the government since Solidarity was crushed in 1981.

After the meeting, Krzysztof Sliwinski, a journalist close to Solidarity, said "both sides are not terribly far apart as far as the basic things are concerned."

But he said the two sides still must negotiate how a relegalized Solidarity would differ from the Solidarity of the early 1980s, and under what conditions it would operate.

Kiszczak and Walesa scheduled another meeting for Friday with an expanded group of people to agree on topics, composition and the work schedule for the meeting, the state-run PAP news service said.

Walesa, Kiszczak, alternate Politburo member Stanislaw Ciosek, church representative the Rev. Alojzy Orszulik and mediator Andrzej Stelmachowski met from noon until about 4:30 p.m. at a government guest house in southern Warsaw.

"The talks were long," Walesa said.

"We are keeping our position which I have always put forward. There is no freedom without Solidarity."

Walesa said that even though Poland faces many problems, he believes that the relegalization of Solidarity is the most important. Solidarity was chartered in 1980, suppressed in 1981 with the imposition of martial law and outlawed in 1982.

Walesa appeared in an expansive mood as he spoke to reporters waiting for him after the meeting at the church complex where he is living while in Warsaw.

He said Friday's meeting would include a close adviser, journalist Tadeusz Mazowiecki.

Solidarity strike committee representatives and members of the government-approved OZZZ trade unions also will take part, said Franciszek Ciemy, an OZZZ spokesman. A PAP communique on Thursday's meeting said: "The parties agreed to call the proper round table meeting as soon as possible on the principles settled on Aug. 31, that is without preconditions and with the possibility to discuss all topics in order to consider the most important issues for Poland."

"Solidarity" activists have argued that the issue of relegalizing Solidarity "after a six-year interval is paramount and should top the agenda."

In another development, an official newspaper published an interview with Walesa for the first time since the imposition of martial law.

The interview in the September issue of the monthly publication Konfrontacja, which came out Thursday, seemed to underline Walesa's return to official respectability and the new emphasis on considering divergent views.

What's what

Of arson-on ships.....

Arson aboard ship is "an act of God," according to the Harrier Act in the maritime laws. Doesn't mean the fire-setter can't be prosecuted for the crime. But it relieves everybody of civil responsibility. You can't sue for damages.

The aggressive man tends to be most vulnerable to the charms of the woman who wears something white. A shy fellow is more likely to take a lively interest in the woman who wears something accented with red. So say those who claim to know color psychology. Clearly, notes our Love and War man, she who pays attention to such notions first has to understand the nature of the male in question.

Don't cut off a kangaroo's tail. It will tip over. It will fall on its face, if it tries to hop.

WITCHES

In a public square of Oudewater, a village in The Netherlands, is a witchcraft hysteria of the 16th century. Town elders knew the witchhunts were bunk. So when a woman was pointed out as a sorceress, they'd march her to that scale, weigh her, then turn her loose, solemnly announcing, Not a witch, too heavy to ride a broomstick.

Q. What's the oldest living language in Europe?
A-Welsh.

Password to get into a beehive is some sort of noise just like a queen bee makes. The pipehead sphinx moth is the only insect not a bee that can utter this password. It oftentimes lays its eggs in hives.

Ordinance writers in Natoma, Kans., were quite specific: It's against the law there to practice knife-throwing at men wearing striped suits.

Don Johnson admits keeping up relationship the toughest job

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Johnson says "trying to maintain a relationship is the most grueling task of our lives."

The three-divorced "Miami Vice" star and current beau of Barbra Streisand says in the Oct. 3 issue of US magazine that it's not just stars who have trouble:

"Over a period of time, people let little things build up: the sound of someone's slippers slapping against their feet as they go across the floor, the way they let the hair build up in their hairbrush, the way she slurps her cereal, the way he has a propensity for belching — it's these little inconsiderations, and the inability to communicate those to each other, that tend to erode the passion and the freshness and joy of a relationship."

As for marriage, Johnson says, "I don't have any definite plans." But, he adds, "I always have in the back of my mind that eventually I am going to be married again ... and I'm encouraged of late."

Brooke Shields pursues a career daughter's life anytime soon. Rather, she sees a small statue.

"She's going to win an Academy Award," Teri Shields predicts in the Oct. 3 issue of US magazine.

"I'm extremely ambitious," said the 23-year-old actress. "I used to take my career lightly. It was just a game. Not now. Now it is much more a way of life for me."

The first glimpse the public will get of the new, grown-up Brooke

Shields will be in the television movie, "The Diamond Trap," in which she plays a larcenous jewelry photographer.

The world wants Brooke to have a torrid love affair, so that they can write about something new," Mrs. Shields said. "But she knows that she's got to get on with her career. That's more important right now."

Prince's love tour opens at home

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Rock star Prince received a royal welcome as he kicked off his first U.S. tour in four years before a cheering hometown crowd.

Prince dazzled the near-capacity crowd Wednesday night, performing on an elaborate $2 million stage designed for his "LoveSexy" tour.

Prince gyrated with his female dancer, Cat, amid a giant urban playground that included a basketball hoop and a swing set.

"Love. Can it be trusted?" the 30-year-old singer asked at one point. He led the crowd in chanting "Love is God; God is love."

"We can love. It's so much easier than hating. ... It's easier than dying," he said.

Prince's U.S. tour, which continues through October, follows a successful tour of Europe.

Greek premier to divorce his wife

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — One day after Premier Andreas Papandreu was pictured in Greek newspapers strolling hand-in-hand with his girlfriend, the government announced he had plans to divorce his American-born wife Margaret.

Papandreu, 69, will end his marriage when he returns to Greece after undergoing heart surgery in London, the government said Thursday. Doctors say the surgery to replace a heart valve will probably take place later this month.

A government spokesman did not say whether the premier plans to marry his 34-year-old girlfriend, airline stewardess Dimitra Liani, who also is married.

Prince Harry celebrates his 4th

Panel recognizes bona fide heroes

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Fred A. Thomas Jr. thought he was going to die with a 3-year-old boy in his arms as flames roared through an apartment last October.

But Thomas survived, and Thursday he was one of 20 Americans and Canadians honored as heroes by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission. Two died in the performance of their deeds.

Thomas, then a 16-year-old student home from school in Wilkes-Barre with a sore throat, said he didn't think about the danger when a fire broke out in his apartment building. He said Brenda Toole, who also lived in the building, screamed that her son Christopher was inside.

"I couldn't let the kid stay in there," Thomas said Thursday. "I had a chance to save him. I didn't think about it."

Thomas raced back into the building, "I lost all hope," he said. "I tried to get out and succeeded."

He suffered smoke inhalation. The boy suffered second- and third-degree burns to 30 percent of his body.

Heroes receive $2,500 and a medal from the commission, which was established by industrialist Andrew Carnegie in 1904 to recognize heroism by civilians in the United States and Canada. It has honored 77 people this year and 7,259 people since 1904.

Others recognized Thursday were:

• Jeffrey G. Chipley, 17, of Estevan, Saskatchewan, who died helping in the rescue of a 16-year-old boy in an abandoned mine on Nov. 11, 1987. The other boy survived.

• James Michael Paradis, 28, of Chelsea, Mass., who died of stab wounds after saving a woman from an assailant who had broken into her apartment in Lynn, Mass., on Oct. 26, 1987.

• Bruce Dobbs, 46, of Fairfax Station, Va., who saved a man from drowning in the Potomac River on Dec. 22, 1987.

• Todd Allen Brill, 24, of Elkhart, Ind., who saved two women from drowning in their car, which had plunged into the St. Joseph River on Oct. 21, 1987.

• John E. Conner, 45, of Trenton, N.J., who saved a girl from a burning car in Columbus, N.J., on Sept. 26, 1987.

• Thomas William Luzak, 42, of Walton, Ky., who saved a woman from drowning in her car, which had plunged into a lake on Dec. 4, 1987.

• Arthur H.C. Ham, 32, of Arnprior, Ontario, who saved a man from exposure in a river near Galesita, Ontario.

Sanitation, sewer rates to increase

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Inflation and higher county landfill costs will result in increases in sewer and sanitation rates this year, city officials said.

Sanitation rates will increase 15 cents to $61.8 per month, said financial clerk Rick Thompson. Sewer rates will rise slightly too but the city won't know how much for about two weeks.

Parks & Sons Intermountain Inc., the company that collects residential trash for the city, raised its contract with the city by 2.5 percent due to wage hikes and higher operational costs, Thompson said.

He said the rise is in line with inflationary increases experienced by the city. "It seemed reasonable," Thompson said.

Rick Parks, president of Parks & Sons, refused to comment on the increase.

The sanitation increase was also due to higher county landfill rates that went to $2 per cubic yard from $1.50 per cubic yard.

Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said the county raised its rates because of an increase in the cost of operations and a desire to make the landfill more self-sufficient.

The rate increase will generate $70,000 more a year for the county, Hempleman said.

The amount sewer costs will increase will vary for residential, commercial and industrial users, said City Manager Tom Courtney.

Although residential rates are expected to rise it will probably not be as high as inflation, Courtney said. He said the biggest increases will be to users that have increased the amount of waste they contribute to the system.

He said it will take another two weeks to determine how much fees will be affected.

Wood problem in Bliss burns itself out

By DENISE TURNER
Times-News correspondent

BLISS — The wood problem in Bliss is not kindling any more neighborhood spark. Or so it seems.

Last month, there was plenty of fireworks when 12 Illinois Street residents petitioned the City Council to do something about Mayor Roland Zollinger's wood piles. One resident called the wood, located in a storage yard on their street, "a fire hazard and terrible eyesore."

Zollinger contended that moving the lumber, which belonged to his Cedar Specialties Co., would put three people out of work.

The controversy became even more heated after Zollinger did, in fact, haul away several truckloads of the lumber and then told residents that other piles of lumber and firewood should not be allowed in the neighborhood since he had to move his.

The City Council eventually sent a letter to the residents of Illinois Street, giving them until this past Wednesday to either comply by moving that wood or hire an attorney to try and get their neighborhood zoned.

The city currently is not zoned, so there is no legal prohibition against piles of wood in a resident's yard.

But, as the days passed, the mood of the neighborhood began to soften.

"We're not going to fight about this," Gerald Weeks, one of the petitioners said Wednesday. "September 15 will come and go, and everyone will forget this."

Weeks noted that he is done complaining, "unless someone does something stupid."

Zollinger, too, has eased his stance. He said the council won't pursue the issue, despite the terms of the letter.

"It's too bad this whole thing had to come up to begin with," he said, noting that last week's City Council meeting took place without incident.

"I was just upset about the way these people went about this — and because of the young people who work for my company."

Zollinger has said all along that he feels strongly about his company because he provides the lumber for people to work out of their own homes making cedar boxes and earning more money than they could at other jobs.

"I don't want to hold any grudges," Zollinger said. Several people originally involved in the incident have actually become very friendly during the ensuing days, he added. "I don't want anyone mad at me," he added.

Jerome hires Twin Falls lawyer as defender

By DENISE TURNER
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Twin Falls lawyer Dan Grober is the new Jerome County public defender.

Grober, who holds degrees from Eastern Illinois University, Boise State and the University of Idaho, has been practicing law in Twin Falls for three years. He also has taught courses at the College of Southern Idaho.

He becomes public defender on Oct. 1 and replaces Twin Falls attorney Randy Stoker, who has been Jerome's public defender for five years.

Grober said he'll bring to the position an intense interest in criminal law. As public defender, he will defend people found by the court not able to afford legal counsel.

"I will be carrying a full case load for the county, although I still plan to continue working in private practice law," Grober said. He expects he'll handle about 250 different matters annually, based on recent years in Jerome.

Those who are interested in becoming a public defender in Jerome County are required to submit bids for the contract to the county commission. The commission then chooses someone for one fiscal year. Those who apply must hold degrees in law.

Grober's salary will be $25,500 a year, which was his bid.

"We also look at applicants' references from lawyers and judges," County Commissioner George Andrus said. Grober plans to remain in Twin Falls and commute to his new job in Jerome.

"I've already spent all day reviewing files of county carry-over cases, and I haven't even officially started working yet," Grober said Wednesday.

CSI enrollment rises 17 percent since 1987

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Enrollment has risen 17 percent at the College of Southern Idaho since last year, college officials say.

"Enrollment is up in all areas," Registrar Bob Wright said. As of Friday, with registration largely completed for the semester, 2,353 students had signed up for one or more academic classes, Wright said. The full-time-equivalent (FTE) is up about 12.6 percent to a total of 1,368 students, Wright said. FTE is the number of students CSI would have if all were taking 16 credits.

Last year at this time, 2,012 students had registered for academic classes, adding up to an FTE of 1,214 students, Wright said.

In addition, 592 vocational students had registered by Friday, although Wright said that number might change because registration for vocational students had not yet closed. Continuing education students were not included in the figure because they register throughout the semester, he said.

CSI's outreach centers in Burley, Hailey and Wendell also have attracted more students this year, Wright said. The number of students using the outreach centers was included in the enrollment figure.

A final enrollment count will be taken at the end of the semester and at the end of the school year, Wright said.

Wright attributed the enrollment increase to varying factors. The Tupware plant's closing had an impact, he said. Many who worked at the plant were coming back to school to train for new jobs, he said.

He also said he thought more younger students were staying at home and taking classes at CSI before moving on to four-year schools.

Last year, CSI had a 12 percent enrollment increase over the fall of 1986.

Lawyer thwarts robbery with brute force

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

RUPERT — When a short, slight young man tried to rob a Rupert law office late Wednesday night, it was his 140 pounds and a brick versus 280 pounds of unarmed lawyer.

Weight won.

"I sort of did a combination of the old football days and a wrestling move," said Raymond Pena, an imposing attorney who specializes in personal injury cases and criminal defense. "I grabbed his wrist that had the brick in it, hit him in the chest with my shoulder, then, as he was falling back, I did an ankle sweep."

"He hit with his head and shoulder on the ground, with me on top of him."

Pena wrapped matters up with an arm bar and a half nelson. "He wasn't going anywhere," said the attorney, whose sister-in-law, Tammy Lopez, pitched in by planting her knee on the robber so he couldn't roll around.

"I think if I would have let him up, she would have worked him over," Pena said jokingly.

Meanwhile, Pena's wife, Yolanda Lopez, called police who came and arrested the pinned man, 24-year-old Ronnie Cantu of Rupert.

Cantu was charged Thursday with aggravated assault, first-degree robbery and first-degree burglary, according to court officials. Bail was set at $25,000.

Law enforcement officials said Cantu was released Aug. 31 from the state penitentiary.

Pena's visiting sister-in-law, who lives in east Los Angeles — a high-crime area, found some irony in the night.

"It's kind of weird," she said. "Nothing has ever happened to me down there. Then I come up to this nice, peaceful place, and this happens."

The robber walked into Pena's law office, at 601 Seventh St., a few minutes before 11 p.m., according to police reports. He was holding a brick that he apparently picked up outside the door.

"I didn't know him from Adam," Pena said. "I asked him what he needed, and the first thing he asked me was if I was alone."

Pena said he wasn't. Nevertheless, the robber then told Pena that he wanted the keys to his car, a 1987 Ford Thunderbird.

"I said, 'Sure, you can have them. What else do you want?'" Pena said. "I was trying to get him outside."

The robber decided he also wanted two purses, those belonging to Pena's wife and his sister-in-law. Furthermore, he wanted Pena to come with him and drive the car.

Again, Pena was agreeable.

"I kept trying to get closer to him," Pena said. "He was just out of range."

Pena finally got the chance to practice his wrestling moves when he spied the robber fiddling with the car keys.

The bearded attorney, who weighs in at 280 pounds, wrestled during his junior year at Minico High School in the mid-70s.

"I was a terrible wrestler," said Pena, who grappled in the 167-pound weight class. "I was like 50-50 on the year."

Not so for two of his brothers. One wrestled at Stanford University and the other was a top-ranked heavyweight at Minico.

"I sort of went around the house as a practice dummy," Pena said.

As for the tackle he threw at the robber, Pena played both football and basketball at Occidental College in Los Angeles. He also went to law school in California, then returned to Rupert about five years ago.

Brother-in-law thinks Stover deserves prison

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

BOISE — The brother of a woman who died of a shotgun blast fired by her husband, William Murray Stover, testified Thursday he thinks Stover should spend the rest of his life in prison.

"I don't know what he'd ever do on the outside," said Henry Reid, a dairyman from Jerome. "He's going to have to make a life of his own on the inside. He can be an asset there."

"I feel he chose that the morning he picked up the shotgun."

Stover, 60, pleaded guilty to three counts of second-degree murder on July 22, when prosecutors reduced their original first-degree murder charges. He pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in the deaths of his wife, June Stover, 50, and two daughters, Kristina, 16, and Korrine, 13.

Reid said he was testifying as spokesman for June Stover's family.

He said he has visited Stover in prison and his family still cares for Stover. "I haven't heard anyone say they don't still think the world of him," Reid said.

A third daughter, Shola, attended the first day of the sentencing hearing Thursday. Stover's attorney, Ada County Public Defender Alan Trimming, will present testimony today.

Stover faces a minimum of three 10-year terms and a maximum of three fixed life terms in prison. He worked for more than a decade in Twin Falls schools, including 14 years as elementary school principal.

Before Reid testified, Ada County Deputy Prosecutor Jay Rosenthal played a tape recording of a phone call made by Kristine the morning of the murders. The 16-year-old hurriedly called the 911 emergency number at 5:03 a.m. Nov. 30. Coroners said her mother died at 5 a.m., and the two sisters at 6:05 a.m. — within five seconds of each other.

In a quiet courtroom, Rosenthal turned the tape player on.

"Can you send the police please?" a hurried voice asked.

"What's your address?" a dispatcher responded.

The voice answered with the address over screams and noise in the background.

"What's your problem there?" the dispatcher asked.

"No, dad, no, don't, please no," the voice pleaded. Then more loud, sharp noises were heard.

"Can you tell me what's going on there?" the dispatcher asked again.

The question wasn't answered. "Hello?"

I'd not know what he'd ever do on the outside. He's going to have to make a life of his own on the inside. He can be an asset there.

—Henry Reid, brother of June Stover

Rosenthal turned the tape player off. He said about 6 1/2 minutes of silence remained. The loud noise coming over the line were shotgun blasts, he said.

One of the bodies was found near the phone in the kitchen.

Ada County sheriff deputies entered Stover's home around 7 a.m. They found Stover with slashed wrists. He spent several days in a Salt Lake hospital.

Stover, whom Trimming earlier said was an anti-depressant medicine, lowered his head onto his hand during the recording.

Reid's testimony didn't reveal a motive for the murders, although 4th District Judge Alan Schwartzman quizzed Reid about statements Stover made to police shortly after the incident.

"If he could do this unprovoked, what would happen if he got mad?"

Residents oppose hydroelectric project

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Hoping to continue research on its proposed Shelley Hydroelectric Project, Idaho Falls has offered about 20 residents along the Snake River $500 apiece for access to their property.

Most residents have responded, "Thanks, but no thanks," and some are willing to fight through condemnation hearings over the issue.

"If Idaho Falls wants it, they're going to have to go through the courts to get it," said Shanna Wardell of Save Our Snake, a group opposing the Shelley project.

The city mailed its $500 offers Aug. 12. Residents had until Monday to accept or refuse the money, SOS member Peggy Balmford said.

Between 18 and 20 residents received offers, Electric Division Manager Steve Harrison said. About 15 turned down the offer. Others failed to respond in time. A couple accepted.

Those who accepted the $500 could receive more money, Ms. Balmford said. If the city has to pay more than $500 for access to other property, landowners who accepted $500 would receive the difference, she said.

Ms. Balmford said the city is requiring by state law to make two offers to landowners before it can begin condemnation. A second offer has not been made, she said Wednesday.

City Attorney Dale Storer said the law requires only one "fair market value" offer before condemnation can begin.

"It doesn't mean that you don't try to negotiate," he said.

The city has not started paperwork on condemnation, Storer said.

"That is one of the options under consideration," he said Wednesday. The city is committed to going forward with the project ... and that's certainly one of the options."

The nearly completed Gem State project is located on the Snake River near the Bonneville-Bingham county line. The Shelley project would be built downstream on the Snake River in Bingham County north of Shelley.

Storer said he was unsure if it would cost the city more money to acquire land access through condemnation. The city needs land access to study the Shelley project's impact on wells and sewers, and for soil tests, city officials say.

State Board of Education requests building funds

BOISE (AP) — Advised it was the only way to get them off the drawing board and onto the campus, the state Board of Education decided Thursday to ask the Idaho Permanent Building Fund Advisory Council to approve long-term financing for $42.4 million in "priority" construction projects.

The debt service request adopted by the board Thursday at its meeting in Boise would mean a state outlay of more than $4.4 million during the fiscal year that begins next July 1.

It includes an initial $500,000 installment on the lease for the proposed $5.2 million first-wing of the Boise State University College of Technology.

But technical difficulties Thursday stalled board approval of a lease agreement on the technology building between BSU and the private Boise State University Foundation, which plans to arrange financing and construction for the project.

Attorneys for Boise State, the state Division of Public Works and the BSU Foundation were working to iron-out legal glitches in the lease agreement late Thursday.

Other "priority" projects that would be funded if the debt service request is approved, either through the sale of bonds or some other financing instrument, include:

- At Boise State, a $4 million social science and public affairs building.
- At Idaho State University, a $924,000 renovation of the Idaho

Museum of Natural History, $3 million renovation of Baldwin Hall and the $3 million first phase of renovation of the physical science building.

- At the University of Idaho, the $11.8 million second phase of renovation and addition to the library.
- At Lewis-Clark State College, the $5.8 million construction of a new library.
- At the College of Southern Idaho, $4.9 million for construction of the Southern Idaho Development Center.
- At North Idaho College, $3.7 million for a library-computer science building.

The debt service request was among more than $14.7 million in major capital improvements sought by the board for fiscal 1990.

Silver Valley cleanup set for summer

BOISE (AP) — The massive task of cleaning up northern Idaho's Silver Valley, contaminated by a century of mining and smelting, is on schedule to begin next summer, according to officials.

"But health officials told the Board of Health and Welfare here Thursday they're concerned about health problems until lead-contaminated soil is removed."

"The problem is still real and it's still exists," said Dr. Charles Brokopp, state health official.

"Until it closed in 1982, the Bunker Hill mine and smelter deposited considerable lead and other contaminants in Smelterville, Kellogg, and other communities around the smelter. The contamination has caused the Silver Valley to be placed on a list of areas with hazardous waste, for cleanup under the Superfund act."

Susan Martin, who has headed the bureau working with the Environmental Protection Agency and the former owner of the property, Gulf Resources, said actual cleanup is scheduled to start next summer, but it's not clear how much Superfund money will be available to pay for it.

The state-federal effort has conducted studies of homes and yards in the affected area, she said. "In October and November, local residents will be informed what those studies show. A public meeting is scheduled to explain the reports."

"We will be telling people the levels of contaminants found in their yards and what it means in terms of health risks," she said.

A priority list is being prepared on which areas should be cleaned first. A draft report should be available for public inspection in December, and public meetings are planned on it in January, she said.

Charles Moss, state budget director who is working on the cleanup effort, warned that after the November elections, Congress will be under great pressure to cut deficits and reduce federal spending.

He said that makes it highly uncertain how much money will be available for the Silver Valley from the Superfund.

Blood-lead tests over the years have shown high concentrations in children living in the Silver Valley. Brokopp said the latest sampling, which covered more than 200 children, showed a general decline in blood-lead levels in the valley. But there still are areas of concern.

Six children, one age 6 and the others age 3 or under, showed unhealthy concentrations of blood-lead, he said.

Ore-Ida Foods gives $50,000 to CSI
BURLEY — Ore-Ida Foods Inc. announced a $50,000 gift to the College of Southern Idaho Thursday.

The gift, from the H.J. Heinz Foundation of which Ore-Ida is a wholly-owned subsidiary, will be used to buy a building and equipment for a CSI Mini-Cassia Center in Burley. Ore-Ida has been a steady supporter of CSI and has awarded many scholarships to employees and employees' children. Six Ore-Ida employees graduated from the first class of the two-year program. The employees earned industrial management certificates through CSI and Lewis-Clark State College programs. The industrial management program at CSI and LCSC was initiated by Ore-Ida so employees could earn degrees without leaving home.

The CSI/LCSC program allowed the six employees to complete bachelor degrees and move into better jobs. One of the graduates, promoted to line foreman at Ore-Ida, now is working on a master's degree through Idaho State University.

Fourteen people showed up at the Idaho Water Resource Board office Thursday to comment on proposed rules and regulations for the development of a state river plan. The river plan would be part of the state's comprehensive water plan.

Most of the comments were about unclear language and points that could be more specific, said Loren Holmes of the Water Resource Board.

The hearing was part of the adoption process of a comprehensive water plan that may include protected rivers. The plan was mandated by the State Comprehensive Water Plan Act, Idaho House Bill 760, passed during the 1988 legislative session.

The rules will establish the method "for designating a waterway as an interim protected river, adopting a comprehensive plan for a waterway" and provide adequate notice to interested parties.

The public has until Sept. 30 to submit written comments on the proposed rules.

Service academy deadline approaches
WASHINGTON — Idaho Sen. Steve Symms announced Thursday that the deadline for applications to attend the nation's military service academies will be Oct. 31. Interested high school seniors may contact Symms' district office at 401 Second St. N., Twin Falls.

Students will be judged on scholarship, leadership and physical aptitude. Elements to be evaluated include a complete high school record, class standing, grades and college aptitude tests.

Participation in school-related activities, community activities and church-oriented activities will be taken into consideration. In addition, there will be physical fitness tests.

"Only the best Idaho has to offer will be admitted to America's service academies," Symms said. "These students will one day be called on to lead our country's military. For that reason alone, we need the very best to defend the United States."

Biker earns $50,000 for Alzheimer's
TWIN FALLS — David Robinson, who pedaled through Twin Falls on July 18, arrived in Seattle with $55,000 to fight the disease that stole his mother's mind.

The trip was a success, he said, although he had hoped to raise $100,000 on his 100-mile, cross-country trek to fight Alzheimer's disease.

"I believe the ride helped many people across this country understand the magnitude and devastation of AD and, significantly, where they can get help if needed," he said. "We also experienced one-on-one encounters that were very rewarding. ... Without fail, we met interesting and varied people every day, and all were very helpful and generous. It has strengthened my faith in people of this country."

Robinson, 26, of Columbus, Ohio, left Miami April 15 and reached the Space Needle on Aug. 11. He averaged 50 to 60 miles a day.

He undertook the ride after watching, powerless, for nine years as his mother lost her reason and all ability to take care of herself.

Alzheimer's disease afflicts more than 3 million people in the United States and is the fourth leading cause of death among adults.

Stover

Reid asked, "Does that answer your question?"

"I don't know if there is an answer," Schwartzman said.

Later in the hearing, Schwartzman characterized those statements. He said Stover tried to commit suicide on Sunday, the day before the murders, Schwartzman said on Monday. Schwartzman's wife interrupted him, and he "didn't want the rest of the family to know what happened. He was doing it for them," Schwartzman said.

Nearly 20 people attended the hearing in a small courtroom with three benches in the Ada County Courthouse. The hearing lasted a little over an hour, and Reid was the only witness. Schwartzman said he will announce his sentence next week.

Reid called Stover a "Rock of Gibraltar" whom the Jerome dairyman respected. "I've always listened to him because he knew the answers."

But, "there's something he's done that he has to pay the price for," Reid said.

Stover was a respected and active member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and at one time was a bishop.

Reid said he visited Stover twice in the state's secure medical facility shortly after the murders. His contacts with Stover tapered off when farming started, Reid said.

Reid painted a picture of Stover rich with charity and love. "He would go without sleep to help anybody," Reid said.

But the Stover family also was close-mouthed about their problems, Reid said.

"He and sis kept their troubles to themselves," Reid said. "I wish they hadn't."

But Reid, looking at Stover sitting a few yards away, said the family hasn't forgotten the man who killed his wife and two daughters.

"Bill, we want you to know this," Reid said. "We love you, and we thank the world of you."

Stover lowered his eyes.

"Anything you need, we'll get it to you," Reid said.

Housewife questions supermoms

DEAR ABBY: I have had it up to my eyeballs with phrases like "working mom" and "supermom." Just because I don't have a job outside my home does not mean that I am illiterate, lazy or brain-dead.

So many people say, "So you're just a housewife" or ask, "What do you do all day?" Some assume that my husband is a male chauvinist who demands that I stay home. Abby, my husband and I made this choice together. I stay home raising my children because we believe it is best for our family.

I am also bored with this "quality time is better than quantity time" baloney. By the time supermom gets her super self home from her job downtown, prepares a super dinner, then gives the kids a super bath and has them in bed by 8 or 9 p.m., how much time does she have to read to them, sing songs, bake cookies, go for walks or build a snowman?

Who saw her child's first steps? Noticed his first tooth, or heard his first words? She, or a daycare worker?

I would never assume that all children growing up with two "working" parents are destined to be losers, so I respectfully ask that you supermoms keep your opinions about us who are somewhat less than super to yourselves.

— GOT IT TOGETHER IN IOWA

DEAR GOT IT: You surely must be aware that many moms have jobs outside their homes because they can't make ends meet with one paycheck. Others are single parents.

After this runs, some of those supermoms may sit down and write some rebuttals. And if they do, I'll print some of the super ones.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I bought a lovely home in a very nice neighborhood a year ago. We have three children, ages 6, 4 and 2 years old. I am 29 and my husband is 30 — quite young to have so much going for us.

So why am I writing? Our next-door neighbor has propositioned me to have sex with him. The fact that I am married with three children doesn't seem to bother him. He says married women are safe sex partners (safe from AIDS, etc).

I have herpes. Do you think if I told him, he would leave me alone? He is very persistent.

I love this house and don't want to move. I haven't told my husband about this because I don't want to start an uproar.

TWIN FALLS — The last "Exploring Idaho" trip this season offered by the College of Southern Idaho. Continuing Education Department will be held Saturday.

Virginia Ricketts will lead the tour to Jarbridge, the site of the last mining rush in Southern Idaho. En route, the towns of the Salmon Trest will be visited along with Murphy's Hot Springs, where the rock fence built for Kitty Wilkins will be seen. Other points of interest will include the site of Berger, Hollister, Amsterdam, Salmon Dam and Three Creek.

When word came the spring of 1910 that gold had been found on the Jarbridge River, the last big gold rush of the area started. By October that year, the camps had 18 men in residence and following spring it swelled to 1,500.

A 1912 report on the Jarbridge Mining District shows there were more than 800 mining claims, both patented and unpatented in the district. Best known of the operations were the Bourne, Pavlak and Buster. Of the stamp mills built at Jarbridge, the Buster still stands. It is estimated about $9 million was realized from the gold recovered at Jarbridge during its mining history.

Those interested in taking the tour should pre-register in the Taylor Administration Building. The fee is $30 and includes lunch. For more information call 733-5554, ext. 270.

Norway gains games

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Lillehammer, Norway, on Thursday won the right to hold the 1994 Winter Olympics, beating out bids from the East, the West and a Scandinavian neighbor. Anchorage, Alaska, was among the losers.

The announcement by International Olympic Committee President Juan Antonio Samaranch in the gardens at the Hotel Shilla triggered a dance for joy by members of the Norwegian delegation, one of whom waved his nation's red, white and blue flag.

Besides Anchorage, the losers were Sofia, Bulgaria and Östersund, Sweden.

The loss for Anchorage, the second in two years, left the organizers so upset that they said they might not bid again.

"I think it's time to pull back, to think about it," said Rick Mstrom, president of the Anchorage Organizing Committee.

Lillehammer's presentation was made by Norwegian Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland, who called on the IOC to return "the cradle of winter sports."

The Winter Games have been held in Scandinavia only once, in the Norwegian capital of Oslo in 1952.

"I'm a little surprised, but it's a wonderful feeling," said Ole Sjøten, chairman of the board of the Lillehammer Olympic Association. "It just feels very good. It may be the greatest moment of my life. It makes up for all the disappointment of two years ago."

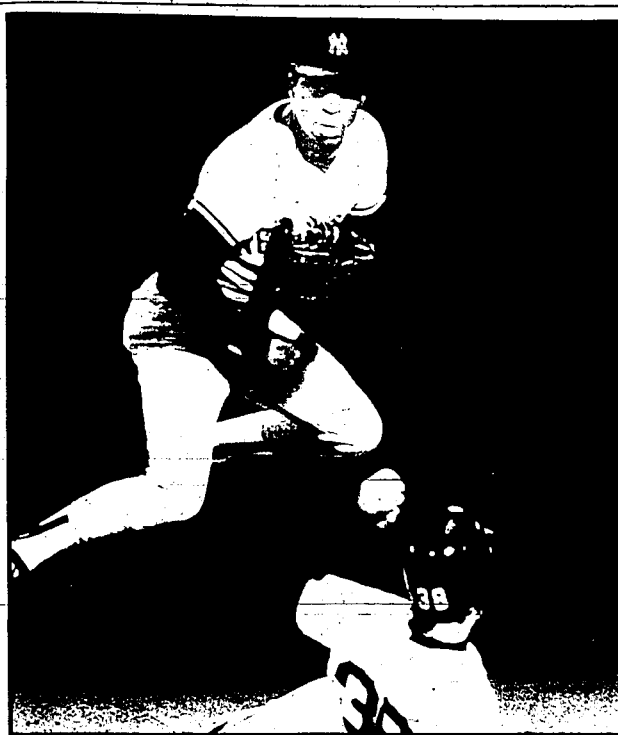

In 1986, Lillehammer finished third behind Albertville and Sofia in the choice for the 1992 Games.

American IOC member Anita De-Frenco asked if it was surprising at the winner, thought for a minute and said: "Yeah. But then why should I be surprised? It's all done by votes are counted."

Lillehammer won by a 45-39 vote over Östersund on the third ballot, after Sofia was eliminated when it got only 17 votes in the initial count and Anchorage lost out when it received 22 on the second balloting.

Östersund pulled ahead 33-30 in that second vote, but the bulk of the Anchorage votes went to the Norwegians in the final tally.

Forty-four votes were needed to win, a majority of the 86 IOC members present and eligible to vote. Officials said the discrepancies in the vote total probably were due to members being out of the room part of the time.

Yankee Rafael Santana puts out Boston's Todd Benzinger and throws to first

Yankees get by BoSox, 5-3

BOSTON (AP) — Mike Pagliarulo homered, doubled and hit an RBI single as the New York Yankees beat Roger Clemens and the Red Sox 5-3 Thursday night, cutting Boston's lead to three-and-a-half games in the American League East.

Clemens' 6-3 lifetime against the Yankees but 1-2 this season; last for the sixth time in his last seven decisions, dropping his record to 17-11. The two-time Cy Young Award winner, who pitched a one-hitter against Cleveland last Saturday, allowed nine hits and walked four in 6 1-3 innings despite striking out eight, raising his major league leading total to 277.

Rick Rhoden, 11-10, won his fourth consecutive start and led the Yankees to their seventh victory in eight games. He gave up six hits, walked four and hit a batter in 5 1-3 innings but escaped most of the time as Boston hit into two double plays and stranded eight runners in the first six innings. The Red Sox left 11 in all.

Four relievers from New York's oft-battered bullpen followed Rhoden, and Dave Righetti held on through the eighth and ninth for his 22nd save in 31 opportunities. Pagliarulo broke out of a 5-for-52 slump in the second with his 13th home run, putting New York ahead 1-0. He doubled and scored in the fourth, when New York scored two runs to snap a 1-1 tie, and was credited with an RBI single in the seventh when left fielder Mike Greenwell missed his fly ball.

In game two of the series on Friday night, rookie Al Leiter, 4-4, pitched against Wes Gardner, 7-4. There were 35,320 at Fenway Park, Boston's 50th consecutive crowd of 30,000 or more. The Red Sox are 50-25 at home this season.

Pagliarulo hit a 1-0 pitch from Clemens into Boston's bullpen in right-center to put New York ahead. The Red Sox loaded the bases on two walks and a bunt single by Marty Barrett in the third, but Dwight Evans' sacrifice fly drove in their only run that inning.

In the fourth, New York went ahead. Jack Clark singled to left with one out and raced to third on Pagliarulo's double off The Wall. Willie Randolph grounded to short to score Clark and Skinner singled to shallow right to make it 3-1.

Pagliarulo figured in another run in the fifth. Claudell Washington walked, took third on Don Mattingly's two-out single and broke for the plate as Pagliarulo squared away to bunt. At the last second, Pagliarulo pulled his bat out of the way and Washington slid across the plate for New York's first steal of home since Dave Winfield did it on Sept. 7, 1985, against Oakland.

In the Boston sixth, Greenwell singled and scored on Ellis Burks' one-out double to left. After Jim Rice walked, Dale Mohoric replaced Rhoden. Jody Reed walked, filling the bases, but Rich Gedman ruck out and Hiroto Noma relieved, ending the threat by getting Wade Boggs on a popout.

Celtics' Walton off his feet for another season

By DANA KENNEDY
 Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Bill Walton, the free agent center who has been plagued by injuries throughout his career, has undergone surgery that will sideline him for at least another season.

Even his most diehard fans may be wondering if Walton finally, in the words of his favorite band, The Grateful Dead, will be "trucking" away from the NBA for good.

Doctors and Boston Celtics officials say it is "impossible" to speculate about Walton's return to basketball. But as Walton approaches his 36th birthday Nov. 5, he may be running out of comeback.

"He's suffered a major setback," Celtics general manager Jan Volck said. "Because of his history, it's hard to say what will happen. But we know we can't count on him for next year."

Walton's recent surgery — an operation on his right foot performed Tuesday in Whittier, Calif., for the second time in 15 months — was the latest in a career dogged by injuries.

BILL WALTON Sidelined for good?

In September 1987, the 6-foot-11 Walton first had surgery on his right foot. An operation designed to correct a "similar" problem on the left foot was performed in 1981. He worked out on his own last season, but finally decided he was not up to being reactivated.

Last season, the Celtics paid him a full salary of $425,000, even though they were under no obligation to do so.

Besides missing all of last season, Walton played in only 22 games for the Celtics the season before.

A foot injury sidelined Walton for all 1978-79. He played 14 games with the San Diego Clippers the next season, then sat out the following two years after undergoing surgery on his left foot.

Volck called Walton a "star-crossed" player who now may face a "bleak future."

"When he was healthy, he was the best," Volck said. "I don't know if we would have won the (1986) championship without him. But he's been star-crossed and he hasn't had that opportunity that often."

But Dr. R. William Wagner, who performed the recent surgery on Walton's foot, won't be the one to deflate the Walton comeback legend.

"People should not be surprised if Bill is able to play this year," he said. "This is not as big a problem as the surgery a year ago, nor the surgery in 1981. His recovery is going to absolutely depend on how rapidly the tissues heal."

After winning 40 consecutive games in high school, Walton led his UCLA team to two straight NCAA titles. He was a first-team All American three years in a row. He was the first player chosen in the 1974 draft. In 1977, he led Portland to its only NBA championship. In 1978, he was the league's most valuable player. Then his world came crashing down.

He missed the next season with a foot injury, then signed with the San-Diego Clippers as a free agent. He played only 14 games in 1979-80, when they were 35-47.

In 1981, doctors told him he'd never play even recreational basketball again.

But he returned in 1982 and played 33, 55 and 67 games during the next three seasons. But the Clippers' best record in that stretch was 31-51 and Walton despaired of ever reaching the playoffs again.

But four years after being told he'd never play again, Walton became a Boston Celtic and a team he worshipped from childhood.

But times have changed. Three weeks ago, Walton went to Italy to confer with officials in Naples about playing in the Italian League.

Though the Celtics were said to be irritated by the move, Volck voiced nothing but support for Walton this week and said the team did not mind paying Walton even when he didn't play.

Olympic Games won't settle Lewis-Johnson battle

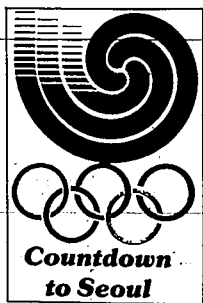

By SALLY JENKINS
 The Washington Post

The fascination of the 100-meter dash lies in the brief nature of the event, a gut and a few hectic strides. Ben Johnson of Canada and Carl Lewis of the United States have been arguing this matter for four years now, counting themselves alternately faster than the other on the basis of a few absurdly infinitesimal hundredths of seconds, with the result that neither can claim definitive superiority.

That equivocal state of affairs may remain no matter who wins the gold medal at the Summer Olympics. Rather, Lewis and Johnson will resolve a competitive dispute that has more to do with style and philosophy than this simple, perhaps unanswerable, question of who is faster. For in sheer factual numbers, they are virtually indistinguishable, because Lewis won the Olympic gold medal four years ago in addition to their best recent race while Johnson won the world championships in Rome, when he ran a 9.83, the fastest time ever, to defeat Lewis' 9.93, the second fastest ever.

Under those circumstances, nobody could presume to label one a better runner than the other. It is a matter of personal preference, an olive or a twist, what do take in your sprinter? Ben is Ben, and Carl is Carl," shrugged Charlie Francis, Johnson's coach.

Instead, only the peripheral issues can be examined, such as whether Johnson can return to his world-record form after six months off with a hamstring injury in his left leg. Although the Canadian is healthy and claims his training times indicate he can run well under 10-flat again, he has yet to do it publicly. But Lewis had lost five straight races to Johnson prior to their meeting in Zurich on Aug. 17, and so his victory there may have been misleading.

Johnson has a driving power, while Lewis runs on fluid elasticity. Johnson possesses more immediate velocity and then holds steady, while Lewis has greater endurance and a timely kick. In short, the Canadian has the start, the American the finish. They are openly dismissive of the other's methods; they do not like each other and they say so frankly.

"My main concern is winning the gold medal," Johnson said. "Carl is going to be there and he says he is the man to beat. So we will see."

Johnson is dour and subdued and eschews displays of wealth in favor of rumpled warmups. Lewis is loquacious and likes his finery. The Canadian is a single-minded sprinter who rarely competes in anything but the 100, while Lewis won four golds in Los Angeles, wants four more, and fancies himself an entertainer.

"I just don't believe there's anyone more naturally talented than I am," he said recently.

Relations between the sprinters became particularly testy during the world championships, when Lewis irritated Johnson by predicting he would win. When he did not, he accused Johnson of benefiting from a false start, and then implied that the Canadian was one of several athletes using banned substances.

Johnson replied by saying he didn't care so much about the world record as he did about beating Lewis. In the interim he has also belittled Lewis' manners, scoffed at his wind-aided times at the U.S. Trials, and pointed out that his five-meet winning streak indicated Lewis couldn't beat him anymore.

Each accuses the other of starting it. "I'm not the bad guy," Johnson said. "I never once said something about Carl unless he said something first." It may even date back to 1984, when Lewis was the center of things while Johnson tried desperately to court the attention without success, and then finished third. When the pendulum finally swung heavily to Johnson in Rome, Lewis watched the Canadian sign endorsement contracts for record amounts that he had not received despite his four Olympic medals.

Like the back and forth in their competitive rivalry, it may simply be a predictable result of two great egos going after the same thing. "There's obviously some friction there," said Johnson's agent, Larry Heidebrecht. "There can only be one number one, and they want it badly. So it's natural."

What is anticipated in Seoul is some sort of decisive race, a quantity that can be appraised once and for all and break the tie in this seething rivalry, perhaps even a reprise of Rome. Both have predicted that the winner will have to run at least a 9.90 or better. Their losses and victories have depended on fractional differences at the start and the finish, and each has labored to analyze their races and find that extra bit that could mean a gold medal.

The world championship in Rome was a race that could be broken down and analyzed clearly. Johnson beat Lewis by six one-hundredths of a second out of the start, and Lewis was able to make up only two of those hundredths with his famous kick at the end. Johnson's superb reaction time in the start was clocked at 129, while Lewis was a slower .196, which meant he trailed by .067 from the very beginning.

And he maintained that margin through 80 meters, which meant that not only did Johnson beat Lewis at the beginning, but held that through the middle of the race, making him flat out uncatchable no matter how Lewis kicked in the last 20 meters.

Lewis feud 'smoothed over' as track team arrives

By BOB BAUM
 AP Sports Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The U.S. Olympic track and field team arrived in South Korea Thursday night with men's sprint coach Russ Rogers insisting he and Carl Lewis have "pretty much smoothed over" their rift over the makeup of the men's 400-meter relay team.

"We had a meeting in Chiba (Japan) with the whole group," Rogers said when the U.S. team arrived in Seoul Thursday night. "We all sat there and sort of ironed it out."

Rogers said he is "95 percent certain, not 100 percent," that he won't go along with Lewis' desire to replace Albert Robinson with Lewis' training partner, Joe DeLoach.

Rogers said Johnson will remain a part of the team "provided I'm satisfied with the way they pass the baton."

The U.S. 400-meter relay team, the prohibitive favorite to win the gold medal, has worked out only twice with all members of the squad and Robinson has had problems handling the baton.

DeLoach, meanwhile, has looked good when he practiced with the relay team. Rogers may not change the makeup of the team, but he is not confident the team would be faster with Robinson than it would be with DeLoach.

"I can't say that based on some of the work-outs," Rogers said. "Joe DeLoach handled the stick well being it was his first time with the system."

Rogers uses a so-called "silent" baton exchange system, while most relay teams use shouted words, to indicate when the exchange will be made. Robinson has had trouble with Rogers' system.

New York pitching stops Cubs 4-1

NEW YORK (AP) — David Cone owns a 17-3 record this season, but on the New York Mets he's not a star, just another supporting actor on the best pitching staff in baseball.

Cone won Thursday for the eighth time in nine decisions as the Mets beat the Chicago Cubs 4-1 behind Kevin McReynolds' two-run homer and Len Dykstra's two-run double.

Cone struck out 10 — his sixth double-digit strikeout of the season — and allowed five hits in seven innings. Some are beginning to consider him as a longshot behind the Reds' Danny Jackson and the Dodgers' Orel Hershiser for the National League Cy Young Award.

"It's hard to go against the stats of Danny Jackson. And you can put up a case for Orel Hershiser," said Cone, who came up in the Kansas City farm system, as did Jackson. "I'm just happy to be mentioned in the same breath with those guys."

"It's just like the Oscars, it's honor enough to be nominated."

Cone lowered his major league-leading earned-run average to 2.18. The Mets staff has allowed just 41 earned runs in the last 23 games, propelling New York to a 17-6 record and an 11-game lead in the National League East.

The Mets have won seven of their last eight games. Coupled with Pittsburgh's 9-4 loss at Montreal Thursday night, the Mets reduced their magic number for clinching the NL East to seven.

"The pitchers have been phenomenal lately, every one of them," Mets manager Dave Johnson said. "The cool weather has made them strong. They came through the hot weather in great shape physically. Now they're feeling their oats."

Chicago, 1-6 on the completed road trip, continued its traditional September tailspin.

"We're not hitting, but Cone is a hell of a pitcher. He's not 17-3 by mistake," Cubs manager Don Zimmer said. "But the last 12 days have not been respectable at all in any aspect, hitting or pitching."

On the other hand, McReynolds is surging. His 22nd homer, a drive into the third deck in left field, gave New York a 2-0 lead. He says it's about time the Mets offense powered up.

Shane Rawley, 7-15, gave up nine hits and three runs in 6 1/3 innings. The game was played before 10,344, the smallest crowd at Veterans Stadium since Sept. 7, 1987, when the Phillies drew 10,308.

St. Louis, which hit seven doubles, went ahead in the second when Jose Oquendo scored from second on shortstop Steve Jeltz's throwing error.

Montreal 9, Pittsburgh 4 — Andres Galarraga pitched in three runs with a two-run homer and a triple as the Montreal Expos defeated Pittsburgh 9-4 Thursday night and dropped the Pirates further out of the NL East race.

Coupled with New York's 4-1 victory over Chicago earlier in the day, the second-place Pirates fell 11 games behind the Mets. The combination reduced the Mets' magic number for clinching the division to seven.

Johnson, recalled from the Expos' AAA affiliate at Indianapolis, became the tallest player ever to appear in a big league game. The six-foot-10 Johnson is one inch taller than Johnny Gee, who pitched with the Pirates and the New York Giants in the 1940s.

St. Louis 3, Philadelphia 1 — PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Scott Perry won his seventh straight decision and the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-1 Thursday night.

The Astros rallied from a 6-2 deficit on sixth-inning homers by Billy Hatcher and reliever Danny Darwin off starter Norm Charlton, but were shut down by the Reds' bullpen over the last three innings. John Franco Cincinnati 7, Houston 5 — CINCINNATI (AP) — Eric Davis and Barry Larkin drove in two runs apiece to lead the Cincinnati Reds to a 7-5 victory over the Houston Astros Thursday night.

The Astros rallied from a 6-2 deficit on sixth-inning homers by Billy Hatcher and reliever Danny Darwin off starter Norm Charlton, but were shut down by the Reds' bullpen over the last three innings. John Franco Minnesota 10, Chicago 3 — MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jim Dwyer's pinch grand slam capped a six-run sixth inning and Frank Viola became major league baseball's first 22-game winner Thursday night as the Minnesota Twins defeated the Chicago White Sox 10-3.

After single runs in the first and second by Chicago, Viola retired 13 straight batters until one out in the sixth when he walked Carlton Fisk.

Minnesota took advantage of a wild streak by Chicago starter Melido Perez, 11-9, to score six runs in the sixth.

Shoshone rebounds with double victory — SHOSHONE — The Shoshone Indians rebounded from a double loss Tuesday to sweep a triangular meet from Bliss and Hagerman Thursday.

Behind the hitting of Shell McClure, the Indians trimmed Hagerman 15-9, 15-11 and Emily Stimpson 15-10, 15-11, 15-11 decision over Bliss.

Shoshone won both jayvee matches.

A's cut magic number to 5

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Dave Parker drove in three runs with a pair of singles as the Oakland Athletics beat the Texas Rangers 6-2 Thursday, moving another step closer to the American League West title.

The A's magic number for clinching the division race was cut to five. They began the day with an 11-4 record and over second-place Minnesota, which played Chicago at night.

Rookie Todd Burns, 7-2, pitched his second complete game, allowing seven hits, striking out six and walking one to best the Rangers Bobby Witt, 6-10. Storm Davis was scratched after complaining of a stiff neck while warming up.

Dave Henderson and Parker had RBI singles in the first inning. The Rangers made it 2-1 in the second on a single by Ruben Sierra, who had three hits, and a triple by Chad Kreuter.

NFL drug scope unknown

WASHINGTON (AP) — With 18 players already suspended this year for violations of the league's drug policy, the NFL isn't sure just how widespread the problem is.

Jan Van Duser, the NFL director of operations, told the Washington Post that the league doesn't "have a handle" on how extensive drug use is in the NFL.

Van Duser did not cite any specific instances. Repeated attempts by The Associated Press to reach Van Duser were unsuccessful.

The Post reported Thursday that Van Duser said several teams already had addressed their drug problems as well as they might have, but through putting football considerations first or just not knowing enough about the problem.

Frost, Hammond hold lead

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — David Frost and Don Hammond, who together have only one PGA victory in a combined 10 years on the Tour, shot 67s Thursday to share the first round lead in the $600,000 Bank of Boston Classic.

Frost, 140 on this year's money list with $46,140 but still seeking his first Tour victory, shot 34-33-67 over the 7,110-yard Pleasant Valley Country Club course, but complained bitterly about the wind and the cold he endured due to his 7:38 a.m. tee-off time.

Hammond, who has won only the 1986 Bob Hope Classic in six years on the Tour, shot 35-32-67 after rushing into the pro shop and buying a sweater before teeing off a half-hour after Frost.

Tour officials and players estimated that temperatures were in the 50s and the winds at approximately 25 mph, creating a severe chill factor during the early-morning hours. But the Worcester Weather Bureau said the low reading in the area at 7 a.m. was 46 degrees with winds about 15 mph.

Early starters staged a run on the club's pro shop for heavier clothing before teeing off, and weather forecasters warned that the temperature could be close to 40 degrees on Friday morning, though winds are expected to be calmer.

Hammond, 31, who has won $229,285 this year, said the new sweater took the edge off the chill.

He scored a pair of birdies, on 30- and 7-foot putts on the second and seventh holes; and bogeyed the eighth after hitting behind a tree and into a bunker.

He managed three birdies on the back nine, chipping in from 30 feet on the 12th and sinking birdie putts of 4 and 3 feet on the 16th and 18th for his 4-under total.

Fuzzy Zoeller posted an erratic 68 that included three birdies and four bogeys on the front side before he rallied to birdie three of the last four holes. That tied him with Larry Rinker, Steve Pate and D.A. Weibring. Lennie Clements, Nick Price and Fiesta Bowl switches kickoff — PHOENIX (AP) — The Fiesta Bowl announced Thursday it has renegotiated its television contract with NBC and will play participants about $2.5 million each starting in 1989, which kickoff will be switched from late morning to early afternoon.

The Fiesta Bowl, played at 72,000-seat Sun Devil Stadium in nearby Tempe, traditionally started at 1:30 p.m. EST but now is moving into the Rose Bowl's former slot at 5 p.m. EST.

The Rose Bowl ended its 36-year affiliation with NBC by signing a reported nine-year, $100 million deal with ABC-TV on June 30.

The 75th Rose Bowl and the 18th Fiesta Bowl will be head-to-head on competing networks this Jan. 2.

"NBC was urging us to move into that time slot. Otherwise, somebody else would," Don Meyers, the Fiesta's team selection chairman, said at a news conference at the bowl's headquarters. "Until we could get into that time period, we were like a warmup bowl to the other one. We were in mid-afternoon and they were in prime time in the East."

"This is a much better time slot," said Fiesta president Phil Motta. "More households will be tuned in at that time of the day. We anticipate better TV ratings."

Ashford to bear flag

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Sprinter Evelyn Ashford, the 1984 Olympic gold medalist in the women's 100 meters, was selected Thursday to carry the United States flag into the opening ceremonies of the 1988 Games.

Ashford, a three-time Olympian from Walnut, Calif., was chosen by a vote of the captains of the U.S. teams.

Ashford, 31, won the women's 100 meters at the Los Angeles Games in 10.76 seconds, which broke her own world mark in the event. In her first Olympics in 1976, she finished fifth in the same event.

In the 1988 Games, Ashford again will race in the 100 meters, as well as running a leg on the 400-meter relay.

Dent's suspension lifted

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — The NFL on Thursday lifted the 30-day suspension imposed on Richard Dent for refusing to take a drug test, and the Chicago Bears' defensive end says he'll be glad to put the matter behind him.

"I'm just glad everything is over, that everything is said and done," said Dent, who appeared with his agent, Steve Zucker, at a news conference at training camp.

"I just want to get back to work in a proper way. Life is full of chances. Nothing is promised to you. Sometimes you have to do more to get things done," he said.

"I think the commissioner has a good, fair drug policy and I support him on that," Zucker said.

Dent challenged the Sept. 7 suspension last week, saying he had not been given notice of the test, and was allowed to play Sunday against Indianapolis pending a league decision.

"I was willing to suffer the consequences. I think everything has been worked out and I can go on about my business," he said Thursday.

"I think it's over unless I fall into a drug addict or something," Dent said.

NFL drug scope unknown

WASHINGTON (AP) — With 18 players already suspended this year for violations of the league's drug policy, the NFL isn't sure just how widespread the problem is.

Jan Van Duser, the NFL director of operations, told the Washington Post that the league doesn't "have a handle" on how extensive drug use is in the NFL.

Van Duser did not cite any specific instances. Repeated attempts by The Associated Press to reach Van Duser were unsuccessful.

The Post reported Thursday that Van Duser said several teams already had addressed their drug problems as well as they might have, but through putting football considerations first or just not knowing enough about the problem.

Mackay, Oakley eye rematch of last year's state title game

By STEVE CRUMP

Prep football Prep game of the week

MACKAY — Grudge matches in high school football tend to lose their urgency from one season to the next. The participants graduate, memories fade, new rivalries emerge.

But it's safe to say tonight's rematch of last fall's state Class A-4 championship game between second-ranked Oakley and fourth-ranked Mackay will be plenty emotional.

"It's always a tough game," says Coach Don Tompkins of the Hornets, who came out on the losing end of the state title game last fall in Moscow after beating the Miners for the Magic Valley Conference championship during the regular season. "We went up there two years ago and it was one of the most physical games I've ever coached. They hit hard, they play tough, and in this league, Mackay's always a contender."

"We have some kids who played in those two games, so they remember," says Mackay Coach Jack McKeely. "But the thing you have to remember is that this is just a conference game for both of us. Last year, maybe Oakley and Mackay would decide the league title, but not this year. We still have five (MVC) games left after Friday."

Both teams are 2-1 headed into tonight's 7:30 contest at the Mackay High School field, both having won their conference opens a week ago. There are few familiar faces met. Mackay quarterback Jeff James, running back Shane Jarvis and wide receiver Lance Rosenkrantz — all athletes — have graduated, as have Oakley's all-state linemen Joe Schaefer and John Wells and running back J.J. Coe.

"I haven't seen Oakley nor have I heard much about them except from what I read in the newspaper, but I have a pretty good idea of what they're like," says McKeely. "I'm sure they have a good running back who's tough out of the wishbone, a good offensive line and a good option quarterback. They always do. The difference this season seems to be that they're throwing the ball a little bit more. They haven't had to in the past."

"James and Jarvis and Rosenkrantz are gone, but they still have some tough kids," says Tompkins. "They moved the (Darin) Morgan kid from flanker to running back, and he has great speed. The (Sean) Hughes kid is a great end, very quick. They've got a tackle, Jason Vorhees, who's about 6-1, 235 (and) who's very tough. We tried to intimidate him when he was a sophomore, but he just wouldn't be intimidated. And the (Darin) Irvic kid is probably an all-state center."

Although Mackay put the wraps on the season finale a year ago, Tompkins said the real secret to the Miners' success in that game was Mackay's ability to set up the pass with the run out of its single-wing offense and James' ability to throw on the run.

"They have a sophomore quarterback this year (Bred Lambson), but I'm sure they're doing the same thing," says Tompkins. "We absolutely have to stop that if we're going to have a chance to win."

QB's notwithstanding, defense may decide Glens Ferry-Gooding

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

GOODING — Tonight's showdown between two of the premier quarterbacks in the Canyon Conference will get top billing when Glens Ferry and Gooding hook up in a battle between two of four remaining unbeaten teams in the league, but the outcome will probably be decided on the other side of the ball.

"You have to be impressed with Glens Ferry's defense," says Gooding Coach Jeff Jeffries, whose Senators roared past previously undefeated Valley 26-8 in their league opener a week ago. "Their ends are so quick and so aggressive, they pinch in and really make it tough to throw. And with (linebacker Ross) Kast, it's hard to take it up the middle."

"Their linebackers really limit the things an offense can do," says Glens Ferry Coach Bill Brock, whose Pilots shut out Kimberly 28-0 last week to run their streak of shutout quarters to nine. "(Linebacker Steve) Swanner is the kid who stands out, but there are a lot of good players in that defense."

Kickoff time is 7:30 p.m. at Gooding High School.

Both coaches are expecting something like the 19-14 ballgame in Glens Ferry a year ago that propelled the Pilots toward the conference championship.

"I would expect it to be a defensive type of game," says Jeffries, whose Senators, like the Pilots, are 2-1 for the season. "I would think it would be decided by a touchdown, maybe 10 points."

Oddly enough, these two teams are approaching this impending defensive struggle from opposite directions. Gooding began the season with an explosive offense, led by senior Mike Simis, who passed for 778 yards last year and has already thrown for 280 this season. By contrast, the Senators' defense, with the exception of Swanner, free safety Brent Hocklander, tackle Jay Bevermore and Simis — who doubles as a strong safety — was new.

Glens Ferry, on the other hand, returned six starters on defense, including Kast and defensive ends Duncan Farris and Jon Hartway, who were all-state last year. Although Farris, Glens Ferry's standout quarterback, and Hartway, its 1,000-yard running back, returned to the offense, there were significant holes to fill in other positions.

That showed up most prominently in the Pilots' offense, which they were shut out by Rimrock at home. A week later, the Senators gave up 47 points to Jerome in Gooding.

But since then, the Gooding defense has limited the opposition to a single touchdown. Glens Ferry's offense, which scored three touchdowns two weeks ago against Shoshone, added four more against Kimberly last week.

"Our offense started the season slow; but it's been improving," says Brock. "Duncan has done a real solid job for us the last couple of games at quarterback. Jon has been running the ball well and catching passes and our new kids in the offense have been doing the job."

"I was impressed by the way our de-

Pilots' Jon Hartway has nearly 300 yards in three games

ense performed against Valley," says Jeffries. "Anytime you can hold an offense like that — which is capable of throwing and running the ball so well — to a touchdown, I think you have to feel pretty good about it."

Gooding's defense will get the unenviable task of trying to keep Farris from connecting with Hartway, which he has done twice for touchdowns this year, and of preventing Hartway from breaking outside.

"They do a lot of things to get Hartway — the ball," says Jeffries. "Sometimes they'll line up in the wishbone, sometimes they'll put him in the slot. They have some other good kids, but I think Hartway is the key because of his speed."

The Senators' rhodose sophomore fullback Phillip Rhoads is a good example. Rhoads has rushed for 374 yards in three games and has caught five passes for 85 yards.

Early SCIC showdown in Buhl may be pivotal

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

BUHL — "In a three-team conference, the first game is very important — you lose it and you're done."

That summary about tonight's South-Central Idaho Conference battle between Wood River and the Indians at Buhl pretty by Wolverine Coach John Blackman speaks for both sides.

Each team, off to a 2-1 start, has to win this one because the other stumbling block to a state playoff berth is No. 1-ranked (in the A-2 division) Jerome.

"It is our biggest game thus far," said Blackman. "There's a lot riding on this one and I think our players realize the importance of the game. I know Buhl embarrassed us up here last year (42-7) and I'm sure the kids remember that as much as the coaching staff."

Blackman says the major problem will be containing the variations of the option play from Buhl's veer offense.

"Against Filer, Buhl ran the ball very well off-tackle. They run that option and consistently use the dive off it. We're pretty high on our defensive tackles so we hope we can contain that. But the other problem is they throw the ball underneath very well," he said.

From the Wolverine standpoint, Blackman believes his Wolverines have to become more of a throwing team.

"I doubt we've thrown the ball 20 times in our first three games," the coach said, referring to the competition's propensity for ganging up against Wood-River's bread-and-butter running game. "We have the bu-ple who can throw it and we have to work on that. We've been working on it this week."

Buhl Coach Keith Mietzner points to Wood River defensive tackles Mark Botta (6 feet, 3 inches, 200 pounds) and Matt Riemann (6-4, 210).

"We feel that we have slightly better quickness in our skill period and our overall team might have a little speed advantage. If we do, that's what we'll need to offset their size," he said.

"They have two good running backs (5-11, 175-pound senior Tom Sluder and 5-7, 130-pound senior Lee Anderson) and we have to control them," he continued. "They have used the passing game to subvert the run but they haven't thrown the ball a lot. They give you a lot of looks defensively with that run-and-shoot and then the I-back with one slot. They use a lot of power and lead options because they have two good running backs."

Mietzner said his major concern at midweek was a number of nuisance injuries and a couple of worse ones.

Greg Paulson, a 5-9, 180-pound junior starter at guard and linebacker, will be out perhaps for the year with a back problem of unknown origin. Mietzner listed three more players in the questionable category and added that Ryan Eby, a 5-11, 205-pound junior linebacker, may see his first action in this game. He sustained an ankle injury in practice the night before the season opener.

Kickoff time is 8 p.m. at Bowers Field.

Twin Falls, Bobcats resume longstanding series tonight

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Twin Falls and Burley renew another of those longstanding — but seldom-played — football rivalries tonight with the Bruins invading Budge Field at 7:30 p.m.

Since the late 1940s, the teams have played only three times and two of those have wound up in a draw. The teams tied at 14 in 1957 and Twin Falls beat the Bobcats 27-13 in 1980. The teams grappled to a 6-6 draw in their last meeting in Twin Falls in 1981.

Twin Falls comes into the contest with a 2-1 record while the Bobcats are winless in three games.

Bruin Coach Jon Jund says the defensive key simply is to stop the Bobcats' run-and-shoot offense from hitting home runs.

"They rely on the big plays to score," he said. "Of their six touchdowns scored this year, all but one have come from 50 yards or farther."

Jund says the makeup of the Bobcat team rather dictates those statistics because Burley isn't particularly big. But it does have pretty good quickness, particularly in their primary offensive weapon, running back Mike Ruffell.

"After they watched our game last week I'm sure they are going to be throwing at us and we expect a lot of play-action passing," Jund said.

"Although they like to use Ruffell as a decoy at times, in critical situations you can expect them to get the football to him in some fashion. They like to line him up wide and bring him back on reverses, they like to throw it to him and, of course, at times he plays in the backfield."

"Sometimes on short-yardage situations they like quick hitters with ball-val King up the middle," he said.

"Defensively they stunt a lot and in many cases bring eight people," he continued. "We have to pick up their linebackers because they are the ones doing most of the damage defensively."

Burley Coach Jeff Savage said the main emphasis on offense will be to cut-down on those mental mistakes we've had the past couple of weeks."

He said the major problem for his Bobcats is "we are (physically) so weak. Only four (members of the team) can bench over 200 pounds and it goes down quickly from there. The other problem is youth. We'll be playing six sophomores a lot Friday night."

Hansen and Castleford, which had their undefeated records spoiled last weekend in their Magic Valley Conference openers, will try to get back on track when they meet tonight in Castleford.

That's among the 12 games that will highlight the third weekend of the Magic Valley high school football season.

Hansen, 2-1 and ranked fifth in this week's Associated Press Class A-4 rankings, will visit Castleford, 2-1, at 7:30 p.m. in a game that will pitting much knock the loser out of the race for the MVC title, if not a spot in the postseason season A-4 playoffs.

Hansen fell to Oakley 45-6 last weekend and Castleford lost to Shoshone 15-0, leaving the Hornets and Indians, along with Mackay and Raft River, the unbeaten teams in the MVC after the first week of play. Oakley and Mackay, both 2-1, will square off tonight in Mackay (see accompanying story), while Shoshone will visit Hagerman (1-2 overall, 0-1 in conference) at 7:30 p.m. Raft River, 1-2, is scheduled to host Murtaugh (1-2 and 0-1) Saturday afternoon at 1:30 in Malta.

Elsewhere in the Magic Valley tonight, Minico (1-2) will entertain third-ranked Highland (2-1) in a 7:30

Montana St. bravely seeks its first victory...

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

Two of the Big Sky Conference's early-season surprises, Montana and Boise State, take their show on the road in key league football games on Saturday.

Montana and BSU both were picked to finish in the middle of the pack this season, but have started with two straight victories in nonconference games.

Montana is at Idaho State and Boise State travels to Northern Arizona, one of the pre-season favorites and the only Big Sky team to win a league contest so far.

Montana State is at Eastern Washington, in a matchup of two teams seeking their first victory of the season.

In nonleague games, Idaho is at Division I-A Pacific, Nevada-Reno is in Division II Cal-Davis and Weber State hosts Nicholls State, a Division I-AA independent.

College football

ISU might have the strongest resume. Last season in Missouri, the Grizzlies demolished Idaho State 63-0, the second-worst loss in school history.

But Grizzly quarterback Scott Waak still is listed as doubtful, after suffering a concussion and being hospitalized in Montana's victory over South Dakota State last weekend.

"We expect them to play well against us, considering it's their home opener and they're dedicating their football field, said UM Coach Don

Read. "They are a solid team and gave Utah a tough game through almost 35 minutes of football."

The ISU Mandomie officially became Holt Arena at the game, in honor of former football coach and athletic director Milton "Dubby" Holt.

"I don't think it (last year's rout) will have quite the effect on us it might have, with a new coaching staff and over half our players new to the program," said Idaho State's Garth Hall.

"I've always felt the Montana game will be one of the toughest on our schedule. They are much improved and their scheduling puts them further along," he said. ISU has played only one game to Montana's two.

Montana State has scored only once in two games, and Coach Earle Solomonson said it is vital for the offense to show more life and give the defense a break.

"We need to become more of a consistent unit, especially on the offensive side. We would begin to move the ball, but then we would break down in the backfield and on the offensive line."

"There isn't any doubt that Eastern Washington is a very strong opponent for us. They work hard at controlling you and making you go long distances to score," he said.

Nicholls State will be making its first trip to play a game west of Texas. But Coach Phil Greco says he's heard of Weber State, which was the Big Sky entry in the Division I-AA playoffs last year.

"Every game is like a conference game when you're an independent. You end up losing one and it really puts you back because there are just so many independent spots available," he said.

Mike Price of Weber said Nicholls State is similar to Texas-El Paso, which beat Weber last weekend.

"It really doesn't do anything for us as far as the conference, as far as our goals of winning the national championship or winning the conference. It's just a fun game to play a school like this."

"We will be able to tell, however, how far we've come along and how good we are against another school that is well-respected in Division I-AA football," Price said.

Northern Arizona Coach Larry Kentera said his team may be unbeaten, but it's wary of Boise State.

"Boise has always played us tough," Kentera said. "They give us a lot of problems every year. It's a great series. We're playing well right now and we're just hoping to keep the momentum going."

Northern Arizona has won two straight at home, 55-13 over Southern Utah State and 34-24 last week over Eastern Washington.

Boise State is also 2-0 after victories over Long Beach State, 29-10, and Sam Houston State, 14-10. Northern Arizona has never won at Boise, but the series is tied 4-4 in games at Flagstaff.

The offense has been doing well, but Kentera said he'd like to do something about NAU's penalties. In two games, the team has been penalized 27 times for 269 yards.

"That's something we have to cut down on," said Kentera, who is in his fourth season. "Penalties can really get you in trouble against some of the better teams."

... as Columbia battles overconfidence to end 41-game losing streak

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
The Associated Press

Bear Bryant used to lament that Alabama would have trouble making a first down against the Little Sisters of the Poor.

The Bear was famous for his crying towel as well as his houndstooth hat.

Legions of coaches have pummeled like the Bear but without coming close to his 323 victories and five national championships.

Keeping that in mind, guess which coach made the following positive comments this week:

"We have athletes who can run. Our offense looks as if it's going to be very explosive. I think we're going to have the capability of scoring from any place on the field."

"Whether a team is punting to us or kicking off to us, we'll have the capability of breaking it any time we touch it."

The speaker? None other than Larry McElreavy, whose Columbia University Lions will take a 41-game losing streak, an NCAA Division I record for futility, into Saturday's game at Harvard.

McElreavy's problem — other than trying to end the losing streak? Overconfidence, believe it or not.

Not his — "I'm trying to be pessimistic — optimistic" — but his players.

"They're not going up to Harvard to compete, they're going up to win, and they're talking about winning big," said McElreavy, who is 0-20 at Columbia, which hasn't won a game since 1933. "There's something to be said for confidence, and God love 'em for that."

Columbia may not beat Harvard — the Lions are 22-point underdogs — but McElreavy fully expects to win some games this year.

"It's the first football team since I've been at Columbia that feels that they can go out on the field and actually line up with somebody and play," he said. "That's a good feeling."

"We are a good football team in terms of our athletic ability. We have athletes now that can play with just about any Ivy League school. Right now, the only thing that I can't measure is inside the head to see where they are."

"We've been recruiting speed now for two years going on three years. We have speed. It's bonafide speed, not just something you talk about. The kids can run, and if you can do that and you play hard and aggressively, you can win any football game you play."

Unfortunately, Columbia's defense is largely untested, with only three seniors scheduled to start. Yet there's some good news on that side of the ball, too.

"We will make some mistakes defensively," McElreavy said. "But we've got athletes that can run and we're going to go after some people."

"When you do that with a young defense, you leave yourself open to a big play here and there. That's going to happen to you and you've got to understand that going in. But I feel confident enough that our offense can get that big play back for us."

Win or lose, it's important for Columbia to be competitive on Saturday.

"If we don't play well early we'll struggle for the season again," McElreavy said. "It'll be a matter of getting their heads back and making them believe. Right now, they believe."

Vanderbilt hasn't been known for stopping people in recent years so Coach Watson Brown sent his staff to Michigan State last spring to learn Coach George Perles' stunt 4-3 defense.

Perles was the architect of the "steel curtain" defense that helped the Pittsburgh Steelers win four Super Bowls in the 1970s.

"We totally took their package," Brown says.

On Saturday, Vanderbilt plays Rutgers, which upset Michigan State last week.

"You spell the word misery when you go to Michigan State and put their defense in and the team you're fixing to play goes and beats them at their place. That really makes you feel real good," Brown says.

Brown also says that "the four top things in winning football games are this — number one is recruiting, number two is scheduling, number three is having mature, experienced players — keeping them in your program for a long time" — and "the fourth thing is coaching, in my personal opinion."

Washington practiced last Sunday, the day after beating Purdue, which is something the Huskies never do.

Are they getting ready to play Miami or UCLA? Nope, only Army.

But Army, like all the service academies, utilizes the wishbone offense and Washington Coach Don James says that "one of the greatest advantages of running the wishbone is that nine out of 10 teams you play will have seen it but maybe once a year."

"Normally, we would never practice on Sunday, but it's hard in four days to get ready to play that thing. It requires so much discipline to play it."

Study: Most Prop 48 players black

By RONALD BLUM
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The overwhelming majority of college football players disqualified because of Proposition 48 this year are black, according to a survey by The Associated Press, and the overall number of academically ineligible players has stabilized.

The AP was able to identify the race of 213 of the 274 football players disqualified this year by Proposition 48, or 77.7 percent. A total of 185 of those are black, 86.8 percent.

Critics feel these numbers show that standardized tests such as those used under Prop 48 are culturally biased.

"We know that standardized test scores are correlated with socioeconomic status," said Ursula Walsh, director for research for the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Walsh said blacks accounted for 81 percent of football ineligibles in 1986 and 90 percent in 1987, according to an NCAA survey.

Those who put together the tests disagreed that the tests are culturally biased.

"It's being very simplistic to blame the difference in scores on the test and not look for the reasons behind it," said Frank Moreno, associate director of public affairs for the College Board, which sponsors the SAT. "It's not so much cultural difference as much as educational backgrounds of blacks, their having appreciably less academic courses in high school."

Proposition 48 requires players to achieve a minimum score of 700 out of 1,600 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test or 15 out of 36 on the American College Test and have at least a 2.0 high school grade-point average in 11 mandatory courses.

In 1987, the average SAT score nationally for all students was 906. The average score for blacks was 728.

The 274 football players who failed to meet the NCAA's academic requirements this year was a slight improvement over the 278 last year.

There were 401 ineligible players for the 1986 season, the first year the academic requirements went into effect, according to the AP survey.

Of 1987's ineligibles, 201 returned to their schools and are eligible this year, or 72.3 percent. Of 1986's ineligibles, 69.3 percent returned last year.

Overall, 9.2 percent of college students are black, according to a survey taken in 1986 by the U.S. Department of Education. The only data on minority football players is a survey taken by the College Football Association last year that showed 41 percent of the players at its schools were minorities. The CFA is comprised of 66 Division I-A teams.

All 192 colleges and universities playing Division I-A and I-AA football responded to the AP survey, conducted from Aug. 26 to Sept. 2. Auburn State and Bethune-Cookman, two predominantly black colleges, had the most ineligibles, 12 each. Alabama State and Grambling, also predominantly black, tied for third with eight each.

Of the Division I-A schools, Mississippi Southern, Mississippi and Southwestern Louisiana tied for the most with seven each. Clemson and Oklahoma had five each, the most among schools in the AP Top 25.

The two predominantly black conferences, the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference and the Southwestern Athletic Conference, accounted for 28.5 percent of the ineligible players, although they are 7.8 percent of Division I-A.

"I'm sick of Prop 48. It just makes me want to throw up," said Theophilus Danzy, athletic director at Auburn. "The test is about what have you read. Just as sure as I'm born to die, I think there's a definite correlation between socioeconomic background and ACT scores."

Danzy was not just expressing the opinion of a school but by Prop 48.

"Right from the beginning, the fear in Prop 48 was that the SAT and the ACT were culturally biased," said Richard Lapchick, center for the Study of Sport-in-Society-University-at Northeastern University, which has done similar studies. "I don't think there are more educators in the country who would deny this."

"This is further evidence that the SAT must be comprehensively overhauled because of its biases or come me want to throw up," said Bob Schaefer, public education director of the National Center for Fair & Open Testing, an anti-SAT group.

Because of Prop 48, coaches have altered their recruiting. They can't afford to have that many ineligibles on their roster.

"It's a two-year penalty," Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer said.

with four or five of them starting."

Defensively Savage feels the Bobcats have to swarm.

"Twin Falls has a multiple offense in that you have to be ready to defend against the pass as well as the run at any time," he said. "We have to run to the football and cut down on our missed tackles."

He said it all boils down to "executing, not heating ourselves as we've done the last couple of games. We have to get the job done against their offensive line."

Looking at his own team, Jund said "our concern is our offense is not producing — just one touchdown last week and one the week before. Two TDs in two weeks doesn't say much for offensive consistency."

A couple of things work against Twin Falls' hope of correcting that as usual starter John Horner will not be at quarterback because of a kneecap dislocation.

The Bruins again will be without junior halfback Lyle Hudelson who is very slow recovering from an ankle sprain sustained two weeks ago. It might be another two weeks before he gets back.

Those factors mean that Ted Snack, a senior, will be the quarterback after tasting his first action last Friday when Horner was injured. Snack had just received medical approval to begin playing after a mid-summer broken collarbone.

Jund said Steve McLaughlin probably will see more time at running back this weekend. He has been alternating between offense and defense and three positions.

Waived Falcon lives dream with Skins

By Jack Mann
The Baltimore Evening Sun

HERNDON, Va. — Ron Middleton went to work on Monday, Aug. 29, fully expecting to be fired. He was.

He had not played in any of the Atlanta Falcons' preseason games. The coaches were "looking at the younger players." Middleton had just turned 23.

But now, called by the Washington Redskins to stand in for the injured Reggie Branch, Middleton has come as close as he can to his teen-age dream.

On the team: John Riggins once played for. Everything has seen the picture. Riggins is chugging along in the 25th yard of his 43-yard run to put the Redskins ahead in the fourth quarter of Super Bowl XVII. Dragging along, hanging onto Riggins' shirt and pants leg is Miami Dolphins cornerback Don McNeal, of Atmore, Ala.

It was Jan. 30, 1983. Back home in Atmore was McNeal's young friend, Ron Middleton, watching fascinated.

"I've been a Redskins fan ever since," said Middleton, standing alone in the Redskins' locker room as reporters and TV people swarmed about Doug Williams and searched for Billy "White Shoes" Johnson, the other emergency replacement.

As a rookie out of Auburn in 1986, Middleton played in all 16 Atlanta games, starting three. Playing tight end and H-back in the Joe Gibbs-like system of Coach Dan Henning, Middleton caught six passes.

Last year, as the Falcons went 3-12 under conservative Marion Campbell, Middleton caught one pass. But Middleton played all the games — on the kicking teams and with the wedge in the kickoff return alignment.

"I don't think there's any comparison between me and Reggie Branch," Middleton said. "But I think I can play." Middleton runs the 40-yard dash in "about 4.8," which is in Branch's class.

Philadelphia Eagles rookie Keith Jackson was appropriately demure about Coach Buddy Ryan's pronouncement that he is "the best tight end in football." But he added that he hoped to be, especially this week against the Skins.

"That guy Jackson wasn't a hard worker," Jackson said. That guy was Redskins General Manager Bobby Beathard, who said at draft time that he and his staff were not impressed with Jackson's "work habits." The Eagles then drafted the consensus All-American in the first round.

For practice, White Shoes catches punts two at a time.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars
But in ourselves that we are underlings."
— William Shakespeare

It may have been the position of the moon that projected two trump trumps for today's declarer. Nevertheless, it was his own fault for losing his vulnerable game.

South won dummy's heart ace to lead a trump to his queen and West's ace. A second heart knocked out South's king, and the king and jack of trumps revealed the bad split. South struggled for a white, but there was no escape. He lost two trump tricks, a heart and a club, sending the game one down.

How does South overcome the bad trump break? By giving himself an extra free chance.

South should win the first heart with his king, lead a diamond to dummy's ace and ruff a diamond. The trump king is lost to West's ace and the heart exit goes to dummy's ace. South ruffs another diamond and then cashes the queen and jack of trumps. If trumps are 3-3 or if the 10 appears, South has an easy 10 tricks. When the trumps break badly, there's still another chance. The king and ace of clubs are cashed and South ruffs dummy's last diamond with his last trump. The ruff survives and South has his 10th winner. What happened to the defenders' four winners? They still had them. However, two of them had to be played on the same trick.

Craft show draws local talent

By DENISE TURNER
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — After the Art in the Park event became limited to "original" art only, Donna Ferrenburg and Pam Webb decided to try their own arts and crafts show.

For their Twin Falls Arts and Crafts Show, fifty-six crafts enthusiasts set up booths and joined in the fun, playing host to some 3,000 people who came to buy their wares during the two-day event.

This kind of success surprised even the show's organizers and encouraged them to try again.

This year, a "second annual" arts and crafts fair will be staged Saturday and Sunday in the Twin Falls City Park from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Ferrenburg and Webb have decided to set a permanent show date for the weekend after the Twin Falls County Fair and Rodeo.

"We had always encouraged all of our talented friends to enter their crafts in the Arts in the Park event," said Ferrenburg. "But, when they went to set up their booths, they were told that only original art could be sold at the event."

Then she added, "I guess quilts or dillies made from a pattern are not considered original art."

"Original" or not, this year's arts and crafts show offerings are impressive. Those scheduled to have booths, according to Ferrenburg, include painters Carol Barton and Floyd Brown, bronze sculptor Dan Edwards, and Rhonda Painter, who Ferrenburg says makes "the most beautiful doll and infant clothes you have ever seen."

Ferrenburg characterizes the craft items for this year's show as "different and neat." There will be Rock Creek metal art, unusual crocheted items, unique kinds of ceramics and Western art, even wooden ducks and shirtings made in the shape of ways made and sold various craft items.

Ferrenburg noted that she and Webb once had their own joint business, making concrete lawn ornaments and selling them to Kelley's Garden Center. "We also take lunch wares to fairs," she said. "In fact, I don't think there is anything we haven't done."

Ferrenburg and Webb have few rules for their crafts show. Items must be hand-crafted, of course; and booths, priced at $10 for a craft booth and $25 for a concession stand, are allotted on a first come first serve basis. Still, the work involved in stag-

Disney characters.

"We have women from Arcu and Hailey who make long jacket-type Western dusters and saddle blankets," said Ferrenburg. "There will also be an artist from Boise who fashions his oil paintings on saw blades and shovels."

Even Mother Nature will not intervene in the fun of the show, according to Ferrenburg, who explained that crafters generally have booths that can be prepared for rain.

Food booths will provide corn on the cob, snow cones, cotton candy, elephant ear scones, mini-doughnuts, burgers and hot dogs. A group from the Immanuel Lutheran Church will also sell corn dogs and pop.

When Ferrenburg and Webb decided to begin their own crafts show, they drew on their past experiences. "I'm a cook at the Senior Citizen Center, and Pam is manager of Circle K," said Ferrenburg. "Both of us have al-ing a show like this is no small task.

"We make posters and signs, dispense applications, visit other craft shows, and work on advertising methods," said Ferrenburg. When asked how much time the work takes, she replied, with a laugh, "It takes all of our spare time."

Ferrenburg and Webb have decided to donate all of this year's booth fees to United Cerebral Palsy. "We plan to keep the fair non-profit," said Ferrenburg. "If we make enough money, we would like to eventually donate some to the Special Olympics."

Next year, they would like to expand their show even more and possibly rent the entire park. They are big on achieving their goals, too.

"We are so happy about our success with this project," said Ferrenburg. "We didn't know we had so many talented people in Idaho."

Donna Ferrenburg, left, and Pam Webb are hoping their arts and crafts show will eventually fill Twin Falls City Park

New arts council director sets goals

By MICHELLE COLE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Her New York buddies laughed when they heard Alice Elwood had taken a job promoting the arts in Idaho.

Let them laugh. Elwood, the new executive director for the Magic Valley Arts Council, says Easterners who see "arts" and "Idaho" as an unlikely combination may someday support Idaho arts groups through foundation grants. At least they will, if she has anything to say about it.

"There are good foundations in Idaho, but they're pumped to the hilt," Elwood says. "I would also like to get after out-of-state money."

Dr. Allan Frost, Arts Council president, says the selection committee received six applications for the part-time executive director's job and Elwood was hired for her "excellent background in the arts."

With a bachelor's degree in Art

ALICE ELWOOD
New arts council director

History, Elwood teaches a class on Italian Renaissance art at the College of Southern Idaho. Last year she held a position at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City where she was responsible for monitoring more than $8 million worth of museum artworks which traversed the world on loaned exhibits.

Along with her husband, Fred, and family, Elwood moved to Twin Falls in 1982. Last year they spent a sabbatical in New York, where she landed the coveted museum job on a fluke. She says she applied for a position as a volunteer docent when a Metropolitan employee suggested she apply for a "real" job.

She has also had considerable experience chasing grant money. Elwood held another part-time job researching grants for the New York Public Library, and an organization called The Foundation Center.

"I wanted to come back here and do something like that here," she says.

Fund raising is only one of the responsibilities Elwood took on when she accepted the Arts Council job last week. But, she says, "first I have to have something to raise funds for.

The Magic Valley Arts Council was resurrected a year ago with the hope that a cohesive organization could pull together members of a diverse arts community, and might eventually give the Magic Valley a stronger voice when grants are divided up by the state Commission on the Arts and other funding sources.

The Idaho Commission on the Arts awarded more than $140,000 to not-for-profit arts organizations in the state last year, with the Magic Valley Arts Council receiving $3,950.

So far the renewed Magic Valley Arts Council has generated a mailing list of more than 300, published separate newsletters and planned an Arts on Tour performance series which will bring the American Festival Ballet and the Utah Symphony to town.

But Elwood says some from the local arts community are still reluctant to accept the Council.

Protests surprise 'Temptation' star

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Willem Dafoe is a modest man, but he couldn't help thinking the time was right to play the title role in "The Last Temptation of Christ."

"It made all the sense in the world," he said. "I thought, 'Yes, of course. Perfect. It's a good role. I feel right for it right now. I'm just at the point in my life where I'm concerned with some of the things he's speaking about. The struggle between the body and the spirit is something I'm interested in.'"

Few films have generated as much controversy as Martin Scorsese's "The Last Temptation of Christ." Based on the novel by Nikos Kazantzakis, it depicts an angst-ridden Jesus, torn between desires of the mind and body. In a dream sequence, he is spared the cross, sleeps with Mary Magdalene and has children. The movie, which opens today in Boise, has drawn fierce protests from some religious groups.

"I was a little surprised," Dafoe said. "I knew there was some resistance. ... I never thought it would be to this extent and take this kind of shape."

Protest is 'always a terrific thing for a publicity campaign. But it colors everything in a negative light. Maybe that's a trade-off to the publicity.'
— Willem Dafoe, star of 'Last Temptation'

However, the publicity generated from the protests has helped the movie at the box office. "It's always a terrific thing for a publicity campaign," Dafoe said. "But it colors everything in a negative light. Maybe that's a trade-off to the publicity."

Dafoe was eager to work with Scorsese, the director of "Mean Streets," "Taxi Driver" and "Raging Bull."

Play recreates days of wild, woolly West

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — "Porter Rockwell Returns," a one-man play which recreates the life of a Western gunfighter, lawman, tracker and bodyguard to Brigham Young, will be performed Saturday night in the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Auditorium.

The play is a homecoming of sorts for Larry Anderson, a 1981 CSI graduate and an award-winning speaker on the CSI forensics squad. Sporting a full beard, long hair, five guns and two knives, Anderson brings Rockwell's colorful life to the stage for a 90 minute production.

"It's packed with action," Anderson says. "What I'm trying to do more than anything is to give people a taste of what it would have been like to live in the 1860's Western Frontier."

Anderson began researching Porter Rockwell in 1985 when he was a graduate student studying LDS history at Brigham Young University. Out of that research he wrote and produced this drama.

"Porter Rockwell Returns" made its debut in 1987 at Dixie College in St. George, Utah, where Anderson was a faculty member. He then produced the play for Salt Lake's Repertory Theater throughout the summer of 1987.

Now Anderson is marketing director for a Salt Lake City computer company and says he performs his play only on special occasions. Anderson says he's received calls from several colleges throughout the West.

"The first 50 times, I did it for myself. Now I'm doing it for others," he says.

"It's difficult for an actor to put on a one-man show, it takes a lot of energy," says Dr. Fran Tanner, CSI drama instructor who taught Anderson when he was here as a student. "I haven't seen the play yet. But he does good work and I'm anxious to see it," Tanner says.

Anderson will donate proceeds from his CSI appearance to CSI's speech and drama scholarship fund. Curtain time is 8:16 p.m. Tickets are $3 and can be purchased at the CSI box office, Crowley Pharmacy, and in the Burley/Rupert area at The Bookstore and The Booknook.

Hollywood films new closer to reality

By MICHAEL CIEPLY
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Maybe Hollywood was listening to David Puttnam after all.

In 1985, the crusading British producer launched his stint as head of Columbia Pictures with a plea for movies that hew closer to real life.

Now, Puttnam is gone. But studio release schedules are suddenly heavy with — all things — movies that hew closer to real life.

"It's amazing! ... think it's our influence," said Catherine Wylar, who headed Columbia's non-fiction movie department — the only such division at a major studio — during Puttnam's brief tenure.

High-profile projects among the current non-fiction movie crop include Warner Bros.' "Bird," about jazz great Charlie Parker; Universal's "Gorillas in the Mist," about naturalist Dian Fossey; Orion's "Eight Men Out," about the 1919 World Series scandal, and Atlantic's "Patty Hearst," about the kidnapped heiress.

But that's not all. Between now and Christmas, at least a dozen more "reality-based" feature films will cover topics that range from sordid crimes ("A Cry in the Dark") and wartime heroics ("BAT 21," "Hanna's War") to run-of-the-mouth radio ("Talk Radio") and religious rapture ("Bernadette").

In fact, the current surge in "reality-based" film making may owe less to Puttnam ("The Killing Fields," "Chariots of Fire") than to pressure from maturing audiences and a sharp increase in the total number of films being made.

These films generate a lot of media attention. That's a big plus when there are a lot of movies out there. There's also an audience swing toward more realistic movies. People

"Patty Hearst," directed by Paul Schrader, for instance, is rigorously faithful to the heiress' book, and star Natasha Richardson is a startling look-alike for the kidnapped Hearst.

But the facts are allowed to evolve a bit more loosely in other cases.

Reality-based 'films generate a lot of media attention. That's a big plus when there are a lot of movies out there....

There's also an audience swing toward more realistic movies. People like real stories.

— Jeff Sagansky,
Tri-Star production president

like real stories," said Tri-Star production president Jeff Sagansky. His studio is planning to produce a Mel Brooks-directed comedy based on the true story of a woman who murdered her philandering husband. It's called "I Love You to Death." It's a very black comedy," said Sagansky.

As "Tucker" proved, however, "reality-based" movies sometimes get more attention from the media than from audiences. "Traditionally, (non-fiction films) just don't have as much word appeal. People want to be entertained," said John Krier, president of Exhibitor Relations, a Los Angeles-based theater consulting firm.

They also pose a classic Hollywood problem: Exactly how much reality is enough?

Among the current non-fiction crop, some films aim for dead-on realism.

Tri-Star's "BAT 21," for example, is based on a novel that, in turn, was based on Air Force Lt. Col. Icahn Hambleton's odyssey behind enemy lines during the Vietnam War. The real Hambleton braved infection, starvation and hand-to-hand combat while hiding from the Viet Cong for 12 days. In the movie version, Gene Hackman crams the same woes into about a third as much time.

Among the other offerings: "Imagine: John Lennon" (Warner Bros., Oct. 7). Timing couldn't be better, coming on the heels of Albert Goldman's Lennon-bashing biography. David Wolper's film remembrance of the ex-beatle promises to be downright reverential. It's based on footage from Yoko Ono's private films of her husband, who would have been 48 years old on Oct. 9.

"Hotel Terminus: The Life and Times of Klaus Barbie" (Goldwyn, Oct. 26): Documentary look at the Nazi "Butcher of Lyons," by German-born director Marcel Ophüls ("The Sorrow and the Pity"). At 4 hours, it's probably the longest film of the fall, nonfiction or otherwise. But relax. It was 120 hours before Ophüls started cutting.

"Talk Radio" (Cineplex, December): Oliver Stone is back, with a movie based on an Eric Bogosian play, which, in turn, was loosely based on the 1984 murder of Denver radio talk-show host Alan Berg. Bogosian plays the fictionalized hero, Barry Champlain. Stone has kept unusually quiet about this one. One associate says that's because the writer-director believes that excess publicity hurt "Wall Street" last year.

"Mississippi Burning" (Orion, December): Gene Hackman again — this time as a Southern-sherriff-turned-FBI agent, who comes to terms with a Northern-born superior during the red-hot, summer of 1964. The film deals with the real-life disappearance and subsequent killing of three civil rights workers in a Mississippi town. Directed by Alan Parker.

"U-2: Rattle and Hum" (Paramount, Nov. 4): Directed by California whiz kid Phil Joanou, who caught Hollywood's eye with a hot student film, but bombed with his first feature, "Three O'Clock High." This one documents a concert tour with one of the world's hottest bands and coincides with a double album to be released on Island Records. Paramount's hoping to outdo "Raw," which grossed $50 million for the studio in 1987.

"To Kill a Priest" (Columbia, Oct. 21): Christopher Lambert ("The Sicilian") plays Polish priest Jery Popielusko, who was murdered by secret police in 1984. The film is directed by Polish-born Agnieszka Holland, best known here for "Angry Harvest," which was nominated for a best foreign-language film Oscar in 1968. Even Wylar concedes this may be one of the toughest sells left over from the Puttnam regime.

"The Beast" (Columbia, Oct. 7): A fictional, but highly topical, film about a Soviet tank crew dinged by Mujahideen guerrillas in the wilds of Afghanistan. In a weird twist, Columbia tried to bring the film closer to home by having the Soviet tank crew speak in American slang, while the Afghans speak their native language, with subtitles. It all started when writer William Mastrosimo saw videotape of an Afghan boy run over by a tank, and wrote a play about it.

"A Cry in the Dark" (Warner Bros., Nov. 4): Meryl Streep and Sam Neill replay a bizarre Australian case, in which a mother tries to prove she is innocent of killing her infant daughter. Directed by Fred Schepisi ("Roxanne"), based on a book by John Bryson.

"Hanna's War" (Cannon, Oct. 26): According to director Manochan Golan, Israeli freedom fighter Hanna Senesh was a combination of Joan of Arc and Anne Frank, who might have rivaled Indira Gandhi and Golda Meir if she hadn't been killed by the Nazi puppet regime in Hungary. With reality like that, who needs fiction? In the movie version, Senesh is played by Dutch-born Maruschka Detmers.

"Bernadette" (Cannon, October). Jennifer Jones won an Oscar for her touching 1943 portrayal of Bernadette Soubirous ("The Song of Bernadette"), a woman who saw the Blessed Virgin at Lourdes. This time around, Cannon decided to stick with the facts. "Our movie is more from a historical perspective. It's based on written transcripts."

Bruce Willis helps 'Die Hard'

The following are capsule reviews of some of the films playing locally in the Magic Valley. The ratings are by the Motion Picture Association of America and opinions are by Los Angeles Times reviewers.

BRUCE WILLIS
Manages to carry 'Die Hard'

DIE HARD (R). Archtypal big deal Hollywood exploitation, technically breathtaking yet disgusting and silly. Bruce Willis, however, is terrific as a witty New York cop conducting a one-man war against a bunch of terrorists who have taken over a Los Angeles office tower. With Reginald VelJohnson, Bonnie Bedelia and Alan Rickman.

BULL DURHAM (R). What we have here is sweet and sexy comedy set around a rat-poor minor-league baseball team, the Durham Bulls; and in it, writer-director Ron Shelton shows himself as the diamond of baseball friend. He has packed his offbeat love story with a handful of resonant characters, shows off a rowdy knowledgeability in these ferociously funny baseball scenes. He knows firsthand the jargon, the fears, the acid smell of these miserable locker rooms and touring buses, and he makes sure we listen up and breathe deeply.

Whether you believe Shelton's lusty, uninhibited love story is another matter, but it's seductively easy to want to, with the warmth and brightness that Susan Sarandon and Kevin Costner bring to their roles.

BAMBI (G). Based on Felix Salten's novel, Disney's 1942 animated feature about a young deer coming of age stands out as an example of visual storytelling. The film contains only 500 words of dialogue, yet touches us deeply. Few scenes in animation or live action can match the poignancy of the death of Bambi's mother. In contrast, Thumper's gleeful escapades on the ice epitomize the freewheeling joy that can only be created in animation.

BETRAYED (R). Director Costa-Gavras has always been drawn to extraordinary political subjects, but in "Betrayed," which is about the white supremacist movement in the American heartland, he has apparently trusted the instincts of his American screenwriter and co-producer Joe Esterhas ("F.I.S.T.," "Flashdance"). The result is a loosening of the trademark Costa-Gavras tension. Debra Winger is radiantly warm, smart, and, against all odds, believable. Tom Berenger does the best he can with an even harder role — the decent American with two young children to raise who has completely swallowed the line of the crackpot right.

BIG (PG). Funny, warm, sophisticated and highly imaginative comedy-fantasy in which a 12-year-old boy's wish to be transformed into a man comes true. Then the 12-year-old with the body of a 30-year-old winds up vice president of development at a toy company. Wonderful fun. With Tom Hanks, Elizabeth Perkins, John Heard, Robert Loggia, Jared Rushton and David Moscow.

COCKTAIL (R). Tom Cruise plays Brian Flanagan, whose dreams of high-powered jobs in advertising, banking, stockbroking or what have you are shattered by his lack of higher education. He settles, finally, for bartending in Manhattan, under the wing of Douglas Couglin (the magnetic Bryan Brown). Cruise even gets his own bartending solo: juggling bottles, tossing ice and cocktail shakers behind his back, doing tidy little spins and discreet foot movements, all the while twinkling, twinking, twinkling until his dimples must have ached. Unfortunately, none of the film makers, including director Roger Donaldson and writer Heywood Gould, seemed to notice that Flanagan, climber-user-apologist extraordinaire, lacked a little something as the hero of the piece.

HOT TO TROT (PG). What is the worst movie idea we can dream up? How about a randy talking-horse movie called "Hot to Trot" — with Bob Goldthwait as a stockbroker, Debra Cokerman his buck-toothed stepfather, Burgess Meredith as a horse's and John Candy as the horse's — uh — voice? To late; they have already made it. And it is a movie to make nineties whinny, audiences gag and horses hang their heads. Mr. Ed and Francis, too should be living at this hour; High Concept Land hath need of thee.

A NIGHTMARE ON ELM STREET 4: THE DREAM MASTER (R). By far the best in the series about the English child-killer Freddy Krueger (Robert Englund) who seems invincible. It is a superior horror picture that balances wit and gore as it mirrors the anxieties of the teen-age audience for which it is intended. Newcomers Lisa Wilcox and Danny Hassel star.

YOUNG GUNS (R). As a new version of the "Billy the Kid" legend, it pales beside some of its predecessors. But this new Western, a kind of teen-movie "Seven Samurai," has some slick, smoky vigor. Emilio Estevez is remarkable as a notably psychopathic Billy; Kiefer Sutherland, Lou Diamond Phillips and Charlie Sheen make a fine ensemble. But the movie's other intentions — its paeon to teen camaraderie in the face of universal corruption and its sappy young love in the jaws of death — do not always jibe.

Olympics will give NBC head start on season

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — But for the summerlong writers' strike, the fall television season would have begun Monday with typically fervent competition among the three networks and an advertising blitz for their new shows.

But network competition has been sidelined for the next couple of weeks as the 1988 Summer Olympics play in prime time on NBC, while ABC and CBS — their new fall shows delayed for weeks by the strike — basically twiddle their thumbs.

CBS is even hoping the Olympics do well for NBC.

"We face, absent the Olympics, an audience that's going to be more restless than usual," said David Poltrick, CBS vice president for marketing. "If they're going to find a place to be diverted to while waiting for the season to be launched late, the Olympics is where I'd like to see them go, not to independent stations or cable networks.

"So at this point in time, we'd like to get the majority of the audience that the Olympics don't get, but I'd like to see the Olympics do well."

CBS is also hoping good NBC numbers will help when CBS sets advertising for the 1994 Winter Olympics. CBS is also seeking rights to the 1992 summer games.

ABC is counter-programming the Olympics with half-hour comedies, but it, too, has basically forfeited the lion's share of television viewers to NBC.

"We tried to do it with a little bit of fun, a sense of humor," said Alan Wurtzel, ABC's vice president for marketing. "Recognize something comes along every four years, and we know we're not going to beat it."

CBS is running movies and first-run sitcoms against the Olympics in an effort to draw as many kids and older people, the groups least likely to be avid watchers of the Olympics.

ABC has decided that if the Olympics are high drama, they'll counter-program with laughs. The network has scheduled a month of repeats of top ABC sitcoms, plus comedy movies and specials.

"What we did was, we looked at basically what did best against us when we had the Olympics in the past, how our competitors fared," said Wurtzel. "What we learned was people kind of dipped in, and out of the Olympics. They don't necessarily like every event. Programs that did best were half-hour comedies."

NBC is predicting it will average about a third of the prime-time viewing audience with Olympics.

Because of the strike delay, the networks are at odds over when the new television season should be declared open.

Advertisers buy commercials based on viewership of individual shows, so they don't care who wins the seasonlong horse race in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings. But it is an image contest.

Not surprisingly, NBC believes the new season should begin Monday, since it will have undoubtedly big ratings for the Olympics which would count on the season.

"We did not have the start-time problem that some other people may have, so we're taking the traditional outlook and starting on the 19th," said Jeff Boehme, director of audience measurement at NBC. "Several broadcasters don't have original programming. I'm sure they would prefer to start it at a later time. From our perspective, we have our programming in place, and we don't think it would be fair to us to delete first-run programming from the season," he said.

Wurtzel says ABC is marking the new season from about Oct. 24, the week in which it will have half its new programs on the air. Poltrick said CBS would also have the season start Oct. 24 for the same reason.

If the late start is confounding the networks, viewers could benefit. Even though the television season is starting late, the networks have nevertheless put in orders for a full season's supply of episodes for most series.

Charlie Tickner returns to the ice after hip injury

Tickner heads last show

SUN VALLEY — The final performance of the Sun Valley Ice Show's longest season ever is set for Saturday night with Charlie Tickner along with Judy Bloomberg and Michael Seibert.

Tickner, returning from a hip injury sustained last week, is a U.S. Champion, World Champion and Olympic Bronze Medalist. Bloomberg and Seibert are also U.S. and World Champions. Other skaters include Holly Cook, a member of the U.S. International Team, Frank Swedling and Anita Harahon, U.S. Professional Pair Skaters, and Gary Bencom, Canadian Freestyle Champion.

The buffet dinner and dancing begins at 7 p.m. with the ice show beginning at 9 p.m. General admission for adults is $10 and $8 for children. Seating on the Sun Room Terrace is $15, and the buffet and ice show for adults is $37.50 or $25 for children. For further information call 622-4111, ext. 2431.

Old TV Japanese gobbling it up

The Associated Press

TOKYO — Captain James T. Kirk of the starship Enterprise looks skyward from a lonely wind-blown planet and says: "Entapuzaru, riku kara tenso shite kure."

For those listening to the English version of "Star Trek," Captain Kirk would have said "Enterprise, beam me up."

Dubbed in Japanese, "Star Trek" is just one of many vintage American TV programs being explored by the late-night Tokyo airwaves. During a typical week, insomniac-stricken viewers in the Tokyo area can watch "Burke's Law," the 1980s adventure show starring Gene Barry as a debonair Los Angeles police chief; "The Twilight Zone," the acclaimed sci-fi fiction series; "Bananza," one of television's longest running Westerns, starring Gene Green; "The Beverly Hills Cop," the antics of a backwoods family in Los Angeles' artist neighborhood; "Mission: Impossible," the acclaimed Bruce Geller adventure series; and "The Addams Family," a sitcom based on Charles Addams' bizarre magazine cartoon characters. "I don't have any statistics on this," said Yoshihiro Mishima of the TV Tokyo network, "but we think the people who stay up to watch these programs are looking for a bit of the good old days, when they might have been too young to watch the original broadcasts."

Mishima said the viewers are mainly college students or adults in their 30s. "It's part of the 'retro boom,'" he said, referring to a recent trend among some Japanese to seek out things from the past.

But American TV shows are nothing new to the Japanese audience. There have been American programs on Japanese TV for decades, going back to "Ben Casey" and "Lawwide," Mishima said. They've lost popularity to domestic programming, but people still watch them to get a look at America.

Yuji Tagami, an editor with TV Station magazine, added, "They can't avoid devoted fans, but ratings for late-night American programs in general are not very high."

Limited viewership did not stop the Tokyo Broadcasting System from putting the "Nostalgic American TV" series on its schedule last October. Since March, the series has included "Surfside 6," a 60s detective series set in Miami Beach, starring Troy Donahue and Van Williams.

Magic Valley Symphony now offers season tickets

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Season ticket sales are under way for the Magic Valley Symphony. Brochures outlining the 30th season of the orchestra have been mailed to more than 200 patrons.

Madeleine Hsu and Del Parkinson, Boise pianists, will be guest artists for the fall concert at 8 p.m. Nov. 12 in the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Auditorium, when they play Poulenc's "Concerto for Two Pianos and Orchestra."

Highlight of the season will be the appearance of the Kingston trio at the Pops concert in May, says Dennis Heidel, symphony president.

Season tickets include patron for $25, which admits two people to all three concerts; sponsor at $40, admits four people to all three concerts; contributor, $60, which admits six people and includes advertising space in the symphony program, and trustee for $100, which admits 10 persons to each concert and a larger advertising space.

For more information call Carme Smith, 733-2782, or Doris Willis, 733-2382, Symphony League members.

Yoko dismisses book's views of John Lennon

NEW YORK (AP) — Yoko Ono, widow of slain rock star John Lennon, dismissed a book by Allan Goldman that presents a controversial version of the couple's life together and apart as "totally fiction" Wednesday in a nationally broadcast radio show.

YOKO ONO Quickly discounts book

the basic human dignity that we're entitled to," she said shortly after the broadcast opened with Lennon's song "Gimme Some Truth."

"It's amazing that somebody took such a poetic license. I don't see John in there. ... It's a very dramatically described something, but it's not about John," said Ono. "It's totally fiction."

The one-hour broadcast was taped Aug. 28 at the Dakota, where the Lennons lived — and Yoko still lives — in Manhattan. The broadcast coincides with the book's official release date, which was also on Wednesday. Lennon was fatally shot by Mark David Chapman outside the Dakota on Dec. 8, 1980.

Ono doesn't fare much better: Goldman presents her as a gold-digger who snorted heroin up to the time of Lennon's death and had several affairs while they were married. Goldman also charges she was responsible for Paul McCartney's 1980 marijuana bust in Japan and was just as intent on a divorce as Lennon. Ono denied virtually all of these charges, and countered with taped interviews with Lennon friends and employees that Goldman's book was based on unreliable sources and misquotes.

For some reason this book is attempting to rob both John and I of Jane Pauley to remain in New York to take care of "Today" show duties

By PAUL ELIE

What could possibly be more demanding than covering a national election? Try covering the Olympic Games. The fact that election years and Olympic years always coincide makes every fourth year a marathon for the press.

For the "Today" show, which airs weekday mornings on NBC, 1988 has been particularly demanding. In April, the show aired for a week from aboard the Orient Express, broadcasting from Paris, Zurich, Munich, Vienna and Venice. The show traveled to the Moscow summit in June, the Democratic Convention in Atlanta in July, and the Republican Convention in New Orleans in August. Now, in September, NBC is airing the 1988 Summer Olympics from Seoul, South Korea.

Still to come are the World Series in October, election night in November, and the presidential inaugural next January.

"Today" co-host Bryant Gumbel is acting as host of the network's Olympic coverage, while Jane Pauley remains in New York, hosting a three-hour morning program that alternates Olympic coverage with the news and weather segments that are always seen on "Today." NBC sports commentators Gayle Gardner and Jimmy Cefalo will anchor the parts of the show that originate in Seoul.

"Sure, it's been a long year," says Marty Ryan, the show's executive producer. "But that's our niche in the morning — to bring people to places and places to people."

'Main Street' proves ironic cancellation

WASHINGTON — NBC News' "Main Street" came to the end of the road Friday.

Ryan should know: As the senior producer of "Today" from 1982 to 1987, he oversaw the show's trips to China, Rome, Vietnam, South America and Australia, as well as broadcasts originating from an Amtrak train and the U.S.S. Norway.

It's disconcerting to wake up and turn on the TV wanting to find out the weather, and instead hear about the climate halfway around the world. Ryan contends, however, that morning audiences want variety, as well as information. And, he says, on-the-road production helps to boost the "Today" staff's morale.

"It not only gives viewers something different to look at; it also gives us something different to work on," he says. "On the Orient Express, for instance, we broadcast from five different countries in five days. So there were logistical, editorial and political problems for us to set our minds to."

This week, with a genuine news event unfolding in Seoul, Ryan has stayed home. "I want to babysit the show," he says. In fact, though, the present morning program is not really the "Today" show. Until the Olympics conclude on Oct. 2, "Today," in effect, is being pre-empted — for the first time in its 36-year history.

Why? Because of the 14-hour difference between Seoul time and U.S. Eastern time, the early morning is a prime hour for Olympic programming. Events that are taking place in the evening in Seoul will air live in the morning here.

"Basically, the reason is that we need a lot of air time for the Olympics," Ryan says. "We expect two or three times our normal audience. The reason is pretty obvious: We need a lot of ad minutes to pay the bills."

Personally, Ryan has a disinterested view of the Games. "I'll watch because I like watching Bryant," he says. "But I'm a real baseball fan, and in September I watch as much baseball as I can."

On The Cover: During the Summer Olympics, Jane Pauley will remain in New York and host a three-hour morning program, which will alternate Olympic coverage from Seoul, South Korea, with the regular "Today" news and weather segments. "Today" airs weekday mornings on NBC

Book to reveal Warhol secrets

Q: Now that Andy Warhol's dead, aren't there going to be a lot of books about his bizarre public and private lives? — H.T.

A: Yes, and one of the first is "Famous for 15 Minutes: My Life with Andy Warhol" by Isabelle du Fresne — better known as Ultra Violet. The book, due in November via Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, has some shocking secrets from the Warhol inner circle.

A: Life has not been kind to Dino lately. His film production company has filed for bankruptcy and now his wife, actress Silvana Mangano, has filed for divorce after more than 34 years of marriage.

Q: My aunt has come up with a great idea for the sequel to "Gone With the Wind" that's now being written. Should she send a letter to author Alexandra Ripley, or should she write to her publisher? Naturally we're hoping she'll want to buy the idea. — J.D.

A: Save your stamps. Ms. Ripley has been instructed by her lawyers not to open any of her mail. The lawyers were expecting that she would be flooded with suggestions from "Gone With the Wind" fans, who could conceivably sue if any of their ideas appeared in the plot. In other words, whatever she doesn't know won't hurt her.

Q: I didn't know Dena Kaye, Denny's daughter, was a writer, but recently I picked up a book she wrote years ago. Why doesn't she do a biography of her late father? He certainly had many fans all over the world. — L.C.

A: The late actor was no fool. In his will, he specifically forbade his only child from doing a biography, stating that if she did she'd be disinherited from his considerable estate. Seems like Dena is no fool either.

STEREOPHONIC MEGA-PHONE? Most actors would say that one director per movie set is more than enough. But "Stealing Home," the new movie with Mark Harmon and Jodie Foster, has two directors. Steven Kampmann and Will Aldie directed "Stealing Home," from their original screenplay. Since they had previously collaborated as writers and actors, they shared the same concept for "Stealing Home" and had strong rapport. It was decided that Kampmann would run the set, with Aldie siphoning his own instructions to actors and crew through Kampmann when the camera wasn't running. Since the reviews have been less than terrific, maybe they're both off cry-

Q: Are there any big Hollywood producers who are women? — N.R.

A: Certainly Ava Fries thinks so. She's producing the new Shelley Long film comedy, "Troop Beverly Hills," which is based on Ava's own life as a Girl Scout in Beverly Hills. She also has a new syndicated TV series, "Born-Famous," about celebrities and their offspring. And that's just this month!

DRUG PROBLEMS: Monaco, long the playground of Europe's richest jet setters, is a lucrative market for drug dealers. Twice this year the royal family was touched by drug scandals. The chauffeur who drives Princess Caroline's husband Stefano Casiraghi was caught with five bags of hash. And a night-clubbing friend of Prince Albert was arrested carrying drugs. Prince Rainier has ordered drug surveillance increased in the principality, including adding on more drug-sniffing dogs.

Q: What's Rod Steiger been doing lately? — S.P.

A: The Oscar-winning actor, looking fitter and trimmer, has jumped into movie-making with renewed vigor by starring in "The January Man" and "White Roses." Says Steiger, "I feel fine now — I just got off an eight-year depression!"

Q: I've heard that Gregory Peck was the one who discovered Audrey Hepburn and made her a star. This seems strange — how would it have happened? — L.P.

A: "Discover" isn't quite the right word. When Peck was cast as the lead in the movie "Roman Holiday" he agreed to have an unknown-actress named Audrey Hepburn play opposite him. Peck was a major star in those days and had total say over who would be his leading lady. Hepburn has always said that without Peck giving her that chance, and even allowing her co-billing, she would not have had a career in movies.

MORE ROYAL GAMES: Everyone in Britain is whispering about the affair a member of the royal family has been having with a married British actor. The royal's husband is no stranger to scandal, as his own extracurricular activities have already landed him in the tabloids. But so far his wife's escapades haven't yet hit the scandal sheets, despite the fact that she manages a trip to wherever her actor is working.

Q: Could you settle a bet? We've tried and can't track down the answer. In the movie "The Last Emperor" there's a scene set in 1928 where John Lone sings "Am I Blue?" I say that song was certainly around by that time, but my friend claims it wasn't written until the late '30s. — S.D.

'Days of Our Lives' climbs to top with Patch and Kayla

By JOHN N. GOUDAS

The writers' strike wasn't quite the catastrophe the doomsayers had predicted, at least in the world of soaps. Fans endured the ragged dialogue and survived.

And NBC's "Days of Our Lives" surprised everybody by climbing to first place on the handsome back of Kayla (Mary Beth Evans), who finally married Patch (Stephen Nichols) in late July. "Days" then promptly slipped back a notch, but the show had found its angle by playing to girls aged 12 to 24.

"Our Salem mystery story and our long-run romance between Patch and Kayla paid off," says Brian Frons, NBC Vice President of Daytime Programs. "It's quite a jump from the early days with Patch, our most unpopular character at the time."

The formula at NBC is clever: more comedy and youthful love stories in the afternoon. It works for "Santa Barbara," now a network money maker and an Emmy prize-winner as the best soap on the air. Although "Santa Barbara" doesn't come close to beating "General Hospital" in its time slot, young audiences are watching and name actors are joining the roster.

Deaf actress Phyllis Froelich joined the cast and will remain for a short run. John Cypher of "Hill Street Blues" later signed on as Dr. Arthur Donnelly, with Leigh McCloskey from "Dallas" playing his protegee Dr. Zack Kelton.

Four years ago, nobody wanted to be seen on "Santa Barbara" because it appeared doomed to fail. But after a year and a half on the air, the new soap moved into the black and now makes more money than any game show.

"Santa Barbara" isn't expected to collar "General Hospital" for a long time, but NBC has no plans to move the show to an easier time slot. Moving shows means breaking viewing habits, and the networks consider that a no-no.

Frons is so pleased with "Santa Barbara's" performance that he and his cohorts are looking at storylines

Newlyweds Kayla and Patch helped lift 'Days' ratings and the projected book for a new soap, "Generations," by "Young and the Restless" writer Susan Sussman. An April airdate looms if Susan gets the green light.

"There's always room for another soap," says Frons.

On cable, or on the big three networks, research indicates that soap operas are money in the bank. So breathe easy, fans, they'll be around for a long time.

CHANNEL CHATTER

Thao Penghis has played two of the soaps' most memorable anti-heros — Count Anthony DiMera in "Days of Our Lives" and Victor Cassadine in "General Hospital." When he left the world of soaps, Thao candidly said he wanted to see if he could make it in films. Well, his film career didn't exactly take off, but he'll be back on the home screen in the new "Mission: Impossible" series, which will debut on ABC Oct. 23. Thao will play Nicholas Black, a counterpart of the role played by Martin Landau in the original series.

Thao was born in Australia, and that's where "Mission" is being filmed, so he is enjoying special attention from the many relatives who visit the set.

PLOT PORTENTS

Can unlucky Beth bounce back from Eric's rejection and love Stéphan again on "The Bold and the Beautiful"? Brooke doubts it but will take revenge on Stephanie. Caroline needs help in cutting Thorne off cold but it's time for Thorne to grow up, and hot with Caroline.

Jack is willing to play dirty in Senate race against Mickey on "Days of Our Lives." AIDS victim Johnny brings Frankie and Jennifer closer. Kayla can't let Benjo go after his recent emotional blows.

B.J. swallows nail-polish remover and goes into a coma on "General Hospital." Sean tracks down Ripley. Rob-

He steals. He lies. He comes home high. Your harmless little prankster has turned into a teenager with dangerous problems. But you can reach him in time.

Seems like only yesterday he was content to clown around with the neighborhood kids. Now he has a different set of friends. And a whole new set of problems.

At some point, he tried alcohol and drugs. Now he's addicted; his hunger for drugs is stronger than anything else. That's why you have to find help.

The number below will put you in touch with some of the best chemical dependence experts in this area—and a family-based recovery program that's helping many kids like yours break free of drugs. Your teenager will be with a group of his peers. Together, and with the help of professional counselors, they'll work through their pain.

A teenage drug and alcohol problem doesn't get better by itself. It just gets worse. Our program is covered by many insurance plans, so call us now. We can help you get back to the stable relationship you had with your teenager—before drugs came into the picture.

A: Actually, you're both wrong. The song was written in 1929, three years after that scene was set.

Q: I think Steven Bauer is one of the cutest actors around. What's he doing now? — G.K.

A: The "Wildfire" star is taking bullfighting lessons! It's for his new role in the third remake of "Blood and Sand" with Steve doing the Valentino/Tyrone Power part. Says Bauer, "I want to do films of substance. Years from now, I don't want my son to be ashamed of my career."

Q: I read somewhere that the nanny hired to take care of Fergie's baby had to have special training. Does the infant need some extra care or something that we haven't been told about? — L.G.

A: Baby Beatrice is perfectly healthy, if that's what you mean. The nursemaid, Alison Wardley, has been trained to fight off terrorists and kidnapers and is an expert in a range of self-defense techniques, including karate.

EGO TRIPPED: A well-known actor who radiates an affable, regular-guy public image, was something less than smiley after finishing his dinner at a Manhattan restaurant. When the star attempted to write a check, the proprietor's wife sized him up as he stood there beaming and waiting to be asked for an autograph. But the woman had never heard of him. She briskly asked for his driver's license, and seemed to be annoyed that he wasn't carrying one! By the time she finally OK'd his check, the actor had become sullen and left with a weak half-smile and a muttered "Goodbye."

Q: I know there are many Olympic athletes who've gone onto professional sports, but are there any who've gone onto movies? — B.McK.

A: Quite a few. One of the most interesting is mentioned in David Walchinsky's "The Complete Book of the Olympics." Back in 1948, Harold Sakata came in second in weightlifting, winning a silver medal for the United States. After completing a successful career as a pro wrestler (under the name of Tosh Togo), Sakata became an actor — and reached stardom in the role of Oddjob in the James Bond film, "Goldfinger."

junction with the annual fall beginning of the school year.

NBC News president Michael Gartner Friday told the staff of about 10 of the cancellation, which had been rumored for some time.

Gartner cited the grim fact behind the decision to stop production of the award-winning series: lack of advertiser support due largely to the failure of at least a third of NBC's 210-plus affiliates to clear the program.

The show's $2 million annual budget had been reduced from $3 million a couple of years ago as part of an earlier network cost-cutting drive. Efforts will be made to find places for the "Main Street" staff but it won't be easy. NBC is already on the record that more than 100 layoffs can be expected at the end of the year, once the national political campaigns are concluded.

Natalie gets off but Palmer faces charges on "All My Children." Jeremy pops the question. Andrew says the day for Erica and Bianca. Skye makes a big decision regarding Barbara. Sean's past is revealed, while Cecily tries to make him jealous.

Gartner told the staff that the division had learned much from the "Main Street" series. Just last Tuesday, "Main Street" anchor Maria Shriver had hosted a one-hour primetime special, "It's Not Easy Bein' Teen," that incorporated the techniques and a few of the best of previous "Main Street" programs. That special earned a 9-plus national Nielsen rating and a 16 percent audience share.

Gartner said Friday that NBC News plans another primetime special next year for young audiences. The show, which was fed to affiliates at 4 p.m. eight times during the regular season each year, debuted in 1985 with "Today" co-anchor Bryant Gumbel as host. Shriver, who co-anchors "Sunday Today," took over the assignment, which included taped and live segments and a discussion among eight children each week of current issues of interest.

Don Bowers has been executive producer of the program, which had won an achievement award from Action for Children's Television and the Humanities Prize for its efforts on behalf of a sadly undernourished slice of over-the-air network audiences.

The annual Miss America Pageant on NBC Saturday night averaged a 20.8 rating and a 40 percent audience share in Nielsen's 16 major markets.

That compares with a 15-city overnight Nielsen figure of 19.7-38 for last year's Pageant on Sept. 19. That one ended up with a 20.4-42 national Nielsen count.

Saturday's program ran over 12 minutes past midnight when judges decided to re-ballot their choices for second and third runners-up.

In case you missed the fanfare, Gretchen Elizabeth Carlson, Miss Minnesota, won the crown.

PBS led the winners in last week's annual news and documentary Emmy awards with a total of 14.

ABC News was next with nine, five of which were won by "20-20," followed by CBS News with seven and NBC News with two.

CBS News' awards included two each for "CBS Evening News With Dan Rather," "Sunday Morning" and CBS Reports, "60 Minutes" took one.

You won't be totally surprised to learn that PBS had also led in total nominations with 37, followed by CBS with 34, ABC with 28 and NBC with seven out of a total of more than 800 submitted entries.

Two Bill Moyers' PBS programs, "The Kingdom Divided," from his "God and Politics" series, and "The Secret Government The Constitution in Crisis," won in the "Outstanding Background-Analysis of a Single Current Story, for Programs" category.

ABC News has announced that Ken Prewitt, formerly of CBS News, has joined the network, effective immediately, reporting on business and economic issues out of New York.

Sad news from NBC: Jay Michael, who began his career with the network as a page in 1959 and rose to vice president for corporate and media relations for the West Coast, died at his home in Pasadena, Calif. Saturday, apparently of natural causes. He was 50. Associates said he had put in a full day at work Friday at NBC's Burbank headquarters.

'USA Today' sprays electronic ink

The Baltimore Evening Sun

It was neither the beginning of the electronic media's 21st century nor the end-of-serious-journalism as we know it, but somewhere Monday night you had to think that Marshall McLuhan was casting a wry grin down on the debut of the television version of "USA Today."

For the most part, the stories were somewhat more serious than "Evening Magazine" and somewhat less serious than the feature pieces on the network news programs. They were in no way disturbing, offensive or, despite the occasional bit of insight, even that interesting.

What was noteworthy was the way they came at you from McLuhan's cool medium, bathing you in a torrent of information and images. Imprinted on your skin were the facts and fashion tips, the serious and silly, the run of the mill and the race for the president, all emerging in the same fine mist of electronic ink.

Separating the important from the fluff was up to you, but there was no time to figure out what building big pianos had to do with the economy, lest you miss the cost of mailing a letter in three different countries (it is half the price in the United States as in Japan — what a country!) or the first 48 hours in the life of the new Miss America reduced to 30 seconds.

In some ways the first edition of "USA Today: The Television Show" was reminiscent of one of the informational TV's big bombs, that decade-old debut of "20/20," an odd geyser of images and interviews that made absolutely no sense. Hugh Downs was brought in to stem the flow the next week and the rest is history.

The difference is that "USA Today" seemed to understand McLuhan's assessment of television as a cool medium. That first "20-20" had a radio-like heat, a frenzied jackhammer approach that emphasized its incoherence.

But "USA Today," from the carefully-composed theme music to the perfectly chosen anchors somehow manages to keep you relaxed as it fires its soft shotgun blast of information toward your eyeballs and eardrums. In such a state, you hardly notice that there is no rhyme or reason to what you are receiving, that it is not packaged in a way that will help you make sense of the world — you just relax and enjoy it.

The McLuhanesque atmosphere is thickened by the self-reflexive birth of the daily program, a TV show based on a newspaper that was based on television. That was only further emphasized by the setup Monday night in which we were constantly joining the four anchors — Kenneth Walker, Robin Young, Bill McAtee and Edie Magnus — watching television. Indeed, the show's last scene had that quartet sitting around watching a big screen that was carrying the interview with Michael Dukakis that we were watching. It is cosmic! Far out!

The TV version of "USA Today" doesn't seem on its way to building McLuhan's global village of an electronically connected world; it is more like a step toward a global trailer park.

PBS helps produce major movies

By JOHN HORN
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "The Thin Blue Line," the documentary movie about a Texas murder that has audiences buzzing, owes its origin to an unusual source — public television.

The film, playing in selected theaters across the country, is among the latest fruits of an innovative financing deal created by the Public Broadcasting Service's "American Playhouse" series.

The arrangement, by which PBS helps pay production costs in exchange for first television rights, has yielded some of the most critically acclaimed independent films in recent years, including 1983's "Testament," 1984's "El Norte," 1985's "Smooth Talk," last year's "Stand and Deliver" and now, "The Thin Blue Line."

"I don't think any of those movies would have happened without 'American Playhouse,'" said Lindsay Law, the series' executive producer.

In an age of soaring production costs and diminishing underwriting, the "American Playhouse" formula stands as a cost-efficient programming breakthrough.

For the investment of about $500,000, PBS not only obtains movies costing as much as $4 million, but it also enjoys all of the publicity the movies generate in their theatrical runs. "The Thin Blue Line" is a case in point.

The cinematically inventive documentary, directed by Errol Morris, centers on a prisoner's 12-year effort to clear himself in the murder of a Dallas police officer. As Morris tells the story, there are a number of questions about the guilt of Randall Adams, serving a life sentence for the 1976 murder of officer Robert Wood.

The possible culprit, as the film implies, is drifter David Harris, a career criminal who was the star prosecution witness against Adams. The movie has gathered glowing reviews, fairly brisk box-office business and a petition drive aimed at clearing Adams' name.

The documentary will not appear on PBS for at least a year — that, too, is part of the deal. But if it continues to receive the acclaim it now attracts, "The Thin Blue Line" will arrive on public television with a built-in audience and be a hit.

"The biggest problem that we have isn't that we don't have good programs," said Suzanne Weil, PBS' senior vice president for programming. "We have terrific programs. It's that nobody ever knows about them... Every once in a while, though, we do one of these (movies), and the word gets out. So it's a great way of getting some attention."

"And we kept saying, 'Listen. This will pay off. These two titles will be known to people when we put them on television...' And 'Testament' and 'El Norte' had twice 'American Playhouse's' normal audience."

The financing idea was born, in part, out of the inability of "American Playhouse" to attract the kind of talent its producers hoped it would lure. "A lot of very interesting writers and directors who we thought might come running did not," Law said.

Writer's strike forces re-evaluation of the fall

By JAY SHARBUTT
Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — In Ecclesiastes it is written that "to everything there is a season." This has been especially true in network television, where new seasons usually begin at this time of year amid waves of wahoo.

But this may become known as The Season That Dribbled In, with production of new and returning series delayed by the 22-week writers' strike, which didn't end until Aug. 7. The first series won't begin appearing until early October; others will follow intermittently over the next two months.

Advertising executives say that viewer uncertainty about what's afoot this fall probably will lead to lower overall network ratings in the new season.

Not so, say CBS and ABC officials. Too early to tell, says NBC.

But there is general industry agreement that:

— True competition of regular prime-time network programming won't start until late October.

— The so-called "official" 30-week ratings season, about which so much is written by the news media, has little meaning to the industry, save for bragging rights for the victor, which again is expected to be NBC, winner of the last three seasons.

"It's almost become sort of a media spectator sport," ABC research chief Alan Wurtzel says of the tally, in which reporters using Nielsen estimates dutifully report each week how many households watched what network.

"Anybody who deals with the business realizes that household ratings are simply not the way in which programs are bought and sold anymore. It's demographics," he said, referring to the age and gender breakdowns of who is watching the programs.

Nevertheless, the A.C. Nielsen Co., the show-biz trade publication Variety and NBC agree that next Monday is the official start of the new TV season, such as it is. ABC and CBS are balking at that date.

NBC likes the Sept. 19 start because its prime-time schedule between then and Oct. 2 consists of the Olympic Games telecasts from Seoul, South Korea. Those ratings were expected to be strong even without the strike. Now, without major competition, they are likely to be even better, and NBC would dearly like them included in the official tally of the 1988-89 season.

ABC has not pegged a date for starting the season. But Wurtzel jokes, "I want the season to begin the first night of 'War and Remembrance' and end on its last night," referring to the Nov. 13 debut of the seven-night, 18-hour miniseries about World War II.

More seriously, Wurtzel says he thinks it would be logical to mark the official start of the season on Oct. 31, just before the important November ratings "sweeps" period begins, because by then the networks "will have half of our schedules on the air."

At CBS, where executives hope to escape a second consecutive season as

at Walt Disney World in Florida.

4:35 CIN-MOVIE  "Emmanuelle" (1974, Drama) Sylvia Kristel, Alain Cuny.

4:45 HBO MOVIE  "Blind Date" (1987, Comedy) Bruce Willis, Kim Basinger.

No. 3 in prime time, research chief David Poltrack thinks the week of Oct. 24 is a "natural week to start looking at the new season" ratings.

He picks that week, he says, because by then, "60 percent of all regularly scheduled prime-time programs and 55 percent of all new programs will have premiered."

More important than when they start counting the numbers is what those numbers will be. There is disagreement over how serious an impact the season's late start will have on viewership.

"Nobody wanted the disruption, and I think we're going to pay for that in some viewer confusion," says ABC's Wurtzel. "But, overall, I suspect that once people become aware the stuff is back, they'll be there."

In fact, he says, he thinks the three-network ratings for this year's fourth quarter probably will be up from last year, because of NBC's Olympics and World Series coverage and ABC's baseball playoffs and "War and Remembrance" miniseries.

Some advertising executives are skeptical that the networks will rebound quickly.

The most dire prediction — a 10 percent drop in overall ratings by season's end — comes from Richard J. Kostyra, executive vice president of J. Walter Thompson, USA, a major ad agency.

Because of competition from cable, independent TV stations and videocassettes, the networks have been steadily losing their share of audience for the past decade. Where once they collectively accounted for 90 percent of the viewing in prime time, they now are at the 70 percent mark.

The late start of the season may speed up that decline, Kostyra says.

"It's almost become sort of a media spectator sport," ABC research chief Alan Wurtzel says of the tally, in which reporters using Nielsen estimates dutifully report each week how many households watched what network.

"Anybody who deals with the business realizes that household ratings are simply not the way in which programs are bought and sold anymore. It's demographics," he said, referring to the age and gender breakdowns of who is watching the programs.

Nevertheless, the A.C. Nielsen Co., the show-biz trade publication Variety and NBC agree that next Monday is the official start of the new TV season, such as it is. ABC and CBS are balking at that date.

NBC likes the Sept. 19 start because its prime-time schedule between then and Oct. 2 consists of the Olympic Games telecasts from Seoul, South Korea. Those ratings were expected to be strong even without the strike. Now, without major competition, they are likely to be even better, and NBC would dearly like them included in the official tally of the 1988-89 season.

ABC has not pegged a date for starting the season. But Wurtzel jokes, "I want the season to begin the first night of 'War and Remembrance' and end on its last night," referring to the Nov. 13 debut of the seven-night, 18-hour miniseries about World War II.

More seriously, Wurtzel says he thinks it would be logical to mark the official start of the season on Oct. 31, just before the important-November ratings "sweeps" period begins, because by then the networks "will have half of our schedules on the air."

At CBS, where executives hope to escape a second consecutive season as

at Walt Disney World in Florida.

4:35 CIN MOVIE ★★ "Emmanuelle" (1974, Drama) Sylvia Kristel, Alain Cuny.

4:45 HBO MOVIE ★★ "Blind Date" (1987, Comedy) Bruce Willis, Kim Basinger.

No. 3 in prime time, research chief David Poltrack thinks the week of Oct. 24 is a "natural week to start looking at the new season" ratings.

He picks that week, he says, because by then, "60 percent of all regularly scheduled prime-time programs and 55 percent of all new programs will have premiered."

More important than when they start counting the numbers is what those numbers will be. There is disagreement over how serious an impact the season's late start will have on viewership.

"Nobody wanted the disruption, and I think we're going to pay for that in some viewer confusion," says ABC's Wurtzel. "But, overall, I suspect that once people become aware the stuff is back, they'll be there."

In fact, he says, he thinks the three-network ratings for this year's fourth quarter probably will be up from last year, because of NBC's Olympics and World Series coverage and ABC's baseball playoffs and "War and Remembrance" miniseries.

Some advertising executives are skeptical that the networks will rebound quickly.

The most dire prediction — a 10 percent drop in overall ratings by season's end — comes from Richard J. Kostyra, executive vice president of J. Walter Thompson, USA, a major ad agency.

Because of competition from cable, independent TV stations and videocassettes, the networks have been steadily losing their share of audience for the past decade. Where once they collectively accounted for 90 percent of the viewing in-prime time, they now are at the 70 percent mark.

The late start of the season may speed up that decline, Kostyra says.

TV coverage changes presidential campaign

By JOHN HORN

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Presidential race draws closer. Flashy, computerized graphic at 11.

American television viewers may not be sure how the presidential candidates differ, but so what? With a quick glance at the set, they'll know who's ahead in the polls.

Television news, especially at the networks, has a fascination with the horse race, not the horses. Polls and instant analysis clobber in-depth issue reporting. "It's easier and quicker to deliver that kind of succinct information," said ABC political analyst Jeff Greenfield.

After all, there's only so much you can do in 5 minutes, about the time the three networks spend each night on the campaign. "What television does well is brief, telegenic episodes," said columnist George Will. "That's why television has traditionally had difficulty delivering economic news — because you can't take a picture of supply and demand."

Television's inability — or reluctance — to delve into the issues isn't new. But is it more of a problem this time around?

For the first time in history, more than half of all Americans depend on television as their single source of information, according to the Television Information Office. In a campaign where precise contrasts between Michael Dukakis and George Bush may be difficult to grasp, are charts, graphs and 10-second sound bites enough?

Opinion, like the electorate, is split. "It's not even a political campaign anymore, where political issues are discussed and people analyze the issues," said Jeff Cohen, director of the media watchdog group Fairness and Accuracy in Reporting. The coverage "reduces us to mindless fans instead of active citizens."

William Wheatley, executive producer of "NBC Nightly News," disagrees. "It's a long campaign, and with 4 to 6 minutes a night, you can do a lot of reporting. It adds up," Wheatley said. "I don't think there's any doubt that the viewer gets enough information and a good idea of where the candidates stand on the issues."

Who decides how television covers the election? It's a tricky question. Television viewers exhibit increasingly shorter attention spans and, armed with remote controls, won't tolerate a moment of boredom. Channels magazine reported in its September issue that a majority of 18- to 34-year-old viewers with remotes in hand watch two or more shows at once.

"You could certainly argue that if voters wanted to learn more about issues, then The MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour would beat out Brokaw and Jennings and Rather," said Robert Lichter, co-director of the Center for Media and Public Affairs. "So a more issue-oriented news presentation is available on PBS, but few people take advantage of it. The mass of the public is not that interested in issues."

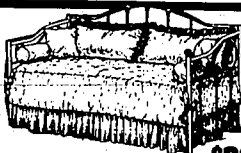

"If the network research departments came up and said, 'Wait a second! There's a market for issues!' then you'd see more of that coverage."

A recent Lichter study found that in 1,338 reports on this year's primaries, the networks did almost three times as many stories on campaign strategy and tactics — the horse race — than it did on campaign issues — the horses.

"For all practical purposes, voters are interested in brevity," said Michael Robinson, an associate professor of government at Georgetown University. "They have always been interested in brevity, and we have this romantic notion that at some point the voters were really actively involved in the process. They weren't."

"Those people for whom television is 80 percent of their news don't want the whole picture," said Will. "Why are they watching television? Because they are happy with that."
