Gilbert lashes Texas-Mexico coastal region

The Associated Press

BROWNSVILLE, Texas — Hurricane Gilbert slammed the Texas-Mexico coast with heavy rain, high waves and tornadoes Friday.

Thousands of Gulf Coast residents fled inland or huddled in public shelters and boarded-up homes.

Heavy rain fell on this southernmost Texas city and wind gusts to 62 mph were measured at the airport and to 65 mph at Port Isabel. Up to 5 inches of rain was forecast, along with tides 7 to 11 feet above normal.

Nearly two dozen tornadoes were reported around Brownsville as Gilbert made its way ashore, overturning cars and mobile homes and tearing the roofs from buildings. Some injuries but no deaths were reported.

Police in nearby Harlingen said the windows of 20 to 30 cars in a parking lot were shattered by high winds or a tornado. Low-lying coastal roads were closed by high water.

At 7 p.m. MDT, the center of the storm was near latitude 24.4 north and longitude 98.1 west, or about 110 miles south-southwest of Brownsville. Its highest sustained winds had slackened to 10 mph, to 110 mph.

Gilbert, which for a time earlier this week was the most powerful storm on record in the Western Hemisphere, weakened somewhat but remained a dangerous storm, responsible for at least 66 deaths and billions of dollars in damage as it roared across the Caribbean and through the Gulf of Mexico.

The calm eye at the heart of the hurricane made landfall about 120 miles south of Brownsville at 3:35 p.m. MDT, in Tamaulipas state, said Mark Zimmer, meteorologist at the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla.

It was moving west-northwest at about 12 mph, and was expected to follow that track through mid-day Friday.

Tupperware production shuts down

Amid tears and laughter, workers leave Jerome plant for last time

By DARLENE HUNER
Times-News writer

JEROME — There were some tears and there was some laughter as Tupperware employees left work for the last time Friday.

Friday was the last day of production for the Tupperware plant after 16 years of operation.

Five molding operators waited patiently outside the doors for molding supervisor Floyd Lamn after ending their shift. When he emerged, all five rushed him with spray bottles full of water — one last friendly gesture to their boss.

"We've been waiting for him all day," said Gwen Bartels. "We've been good to him all day, waiting to get him at the end."

Most of the workers were laughing as they left the plant.

"We've had a good time for the last three weeks," Bartels said. "We've been partying for the last year whenever someone got laid off, so instead of being sad, it's been fun."

"It's been my last day," she added, "but it's going to hit us when we get home."

"It's been hard telling everyone goodbye," said Neva Cox, who had worked at the plant close to 10 years. "(The last day) was OK until you started talking to someone," she said.

"Today has been pretty normal, but it's been emotional too," said Karen Black, personnel director. Black had been at the plant since the first day it opened and had worked in molding for several years before going to personnel.

"The majority of the people leaving here today were people I trained," she said as she watched workers leaving.

"I think a lot of people are feeling relief after all this time," Black said. "It's been up in the air for over a year."

At its peak, Tupperware employed more than 700 people and ran more than two dozen molding machines to produce the famous plastic containers, dishes and other products. The closure was announced last summer, and by Friday the plant was down to

Qualls may announce retirement Monday

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Public Safety Director Tim Qualls, a Twin Falls police veteran of 37 years, said he is considering retirement and may make an announcement Monday.

Qualls is expected to announce his plans during the City Council's work session. Mayor Doug Vollmer said Qualls, 59, is looking at July 1, 1989, as his retirement date.

"He's been around a good long time," Vollmer said. "Even though he's retiring at a young age, I'm sure he's good and ready."

Qualls, named chief of police 10 years ago, declined further comment until Monday.

City Manager Tom Courtney said there is a possibility that Qualls could still do some freelance work after his retirement.

"Tim has some extraordinarily sharp skills in the investigative area," Courtney said. "If he would want to work for us on a part-time basis, it would be to the community's benefit."

Vollmer said Qualls will "probably be in demand" from a host of agencies seeking investigative help.

"We're going to be after him," Vollmer said. "We'll probably use his expertise for some time to come."

The city manager will appoint the next public safety director, who must be approved by the City Council. Courtney said the position will probably be advertised in trade journals and newspapers.

"There's a good transition period," he said. "We're not in any hurry."

Vollmer said the city will welcome applications from both inside and outside the department, which has roughly 65 employees. The department was formed in 1984 through consolidation of the city's police and fire departments.

"We'll go out pretty widespread for this," Vollmer said. "That's a department that has about half the city employees and half the city budget."

Vollmer said administrative skills will be emphasized during the application process.

"We're not necessarily looking for someone who's a policeman or a fireman," he said. "We're looking for a department head who can manage people."

City officials said Qualls mentioned the possibility of retirement several times during the past couple of years. He is eligible for full retirement pay, Courtney said.

"He's been a good manager for us," Vollmer

Pageantry opens games in Seoul

The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — The 1988 Summer Olympics, the largest and most tightly guarded in history, began in a blaze of pageantry Saturday as marchers in traditional Korean costumes entered the main stadium to the beat of a "dragon drum."

About 70,000 spectators in the Olympic Stadium and to a billion-television viewers around the world watched the spectacular show that began at 10:30 a.m. (6:30 p.m. MDT Friday) in sunny weather.

It was the first Olympic opening ceremony with a prelude outside the main stadium. Before the performance in the Olympic Stadium, a flotilla of 458 boats sailed by on the Han River adjacent to the stadium.

The theme of the three-hour extravaganza, with 13,000 performers, was "Beyond All Barriers" — a phrase stressing the Seoul Games as a stage for the first East-West competitions at the "Summer Olympics in 12 years. Political boycotts marred the 1980 Moscow Games and the Los Angeles competition in 1984.

About 160 countries sent nearly 10,000 athletes to the Games to compete for 237 gold medals, making these 16-day Games the best-attended ever by competitors.

South Korean security forces ringed the stadium and an alert across the nation were on guard against terrorism. Officials called the measures the most extensive ever to protect a sports event.

Greece led the parade of teams, a tradition honoring the country as the site of the ancient Olympics.

Teams marched according to the Korean alphabet, with Ghana's second in the procession. As the host nation, South Korea was last.

Most teams were garbed in matching jackets and pants or skirts, but African delegations wore native garb of flowing robes with colorful print patterns.

The processions seemed less formal than at past Olympics opening ceremonies.

Soviet leader offers deal on key radar station, base

Knight-Ridder Service

MOSCOW — In a surprise turnaround, Mikhail S. Gorbachev offered Friday to convert the Soviet Union's controversial radar station in Krasnoyarsk into an international center for the study of outer space.

Although Gorbachev did not specifically pledge that the military capabilities of the radar complex would be eliminated, his proposal represents a concession to the Reagan administration, which has repeatedly said the station violates the Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) Treaty.

The Soviet leader said he is turning expected Washington to respond to Kremlin concerns about U.S. radar stations in the North Atlantic region.

The immediate response in Washington was skeptical. White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater, answering questions at a daily news briefing, said: "Our demand has always been that the station be dismantled."

Psychiatrist says Stover's fears for his family led up to slayings

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

BOISE — Severe depression, a sense of impending poverty, and nightmares about his family starving on the streets caused William Murray Stover to shoot his wife and two daughters and slash his own wrists, a psychiatrist testified Friday.

"On the day prior and the day of this incident, thoughts occurred he should kill himself and possibly his family," said Boise psychiatrist Michael Estess. "It was like he was compelled to do that."

"Bill doesn't separate himself from his risk to society if turned loose now. In fact, Stover is 'perhaps less likely' to be dangerous than other people, although he may again attempt suicide, Estess said.

Estess, called to the stand by Ada County Public Defender Alan Trimming, said a weak ego and extreme emotional dependency on his family tormented the 51-year-old Stover.

"He could not separate himself from his family in life and couldn't in death," Estess said. "That's why he involved his family rather than doing the more honorable thing and killing (only) himself."

Stover left his job with the Twin Falls School District the spring before the murders. He tried to earn a living on sales commissions and wasn't succeeding yet. He saw "no way out" of the situation, Estess said.

The patriarch of his family as the Mormon religion dictated, he felt guilty that his wife was the primary breadwinner, Estess said. Stover, listening to the testimony in orange jail coveralls, occasionally looked down at his hands on his lap. Stover is being treated with antidepressant drugs, Trimming said.

The day before the Nov. 30 murders, Stover's daughter interrupted him in a suicide attempt, Ada County Deputy Prosecutor

U.S. threatens to abandon bases rather than pay Manila's price tag

Knight-Ridder Service

WASHINGTON — The United States is threatening to abandon its two giant military bases in the Philippines because Philippine officials want at least $1.2 billion a year to keep them open. State Department and Pentagon officials said Friday that both Secretary of State George Shultz and Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci told Philippine officials this week the United States was prepared to move out unless they cut their demands.

Bases

Shultz told a meeting of the Asia Society here Thursday that "there are alternatives which we are now having to examine."

Carlucci, according to Pentagon officials, told Philippine Foreign Minister Raul Manglapus Wednesday, in blunt terms, that the United States was prepared to close its two biggest overseas bases unless better terms were offered.

The bases are the Subic Bay Naval base and the Clark Air base, which together employ about 40,000 Americans — more than 23,000 at Subic Bay and more than 16,000 at Clark. Negotiations over the bases broke down in August over how much for-sovereignty the United States would pay to keep them open. The basic U.S. aid program for the Philippines is $180 million. However, Philippine President Corason Aquino has insisted the basic figure be at least tripled and that they get special add-ons that would bring the total from all sources to the $1.2 billion figure.

The latest U.S. counter-offer was to double the basic figure, raising it to about $360 million, with add-ons that would make the total not quite $500 million.

The bases have long been described as vitally important strategic assets by American officials. strategic, or long-range, nuclear weapons.

Gorbachev also offered a seven-point peace plan for the Asian-Pacific region, the highlight of which was an offer to give up its use of a key naval facility in Vietnam if the United States agreed to eliminate its military bases in the Philippines.

Gorbachev also pledged to continue a Soviet freeze on nuclear weapons in Southeast Asia and called for talks among the main Asian-Pacific military powers on naval and air strength.

Gorbachev's speech, which came at the end of a week-long swing through Siberia, followed up on some of the same themes on Asian security the Soviet leader developed in a speech in Vladivostok two years ago.

But the most striking element was the initiative on the Krasnoyarsk radar complex, which is at the core of a U.S.-Soviet dispute that has stalled negotiations for reductions in strategic, or long-range, nuclear weapons. Gorbachev said his government proposed that "a center for international cooperation in utilization of space for peaceful purposes" be set up at Krasnoyarsk and that it be part of the development of a worldwide space organization.

The Soviet leader did not specifically say the radar station, which is still under construction, would be torn down. But he implied he was offering a significant concession when he criticized U.S. radar stations in England and Greenland as treaty violations and said: "We expect that Washington will take appropriate measures in response to our initiative."

Washington also denies that the U.S. radars in Thule, Greenland and Fylingdale, England, violate the pact.

Yellowstone fires pick up again but lines hold

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — Fires in Yellowstone National Park picked up again Friday, but fire officials were confident moisture from storms "last weekend and work since then would prevent the fires from growing."

"This week, I think they're fairly confident, with the measures they've taken during the early part of this week, that they'll be able to hold the fires," said fire information officer

Linda Miller. "I think they're fairly confident that they won't have any major problems."

The fires, which now form one huge blaze, have affected 1.1 million acres of the 2.2 million-acre park.

He's been a good police officer. He's been a good citizen of the community."

Qualls joined the Twin Falls Police Department 1951, after having spent part of the previous two years as a Kimberly police officer. After a stint as head of the department's detective division; he was named chief of police in May 1978.

Qualls received training at several schools, including the FBI National Academy and the Secret Service Questioned Document School. He has testified in court as both a handwriting expert and as an expert on fingerprint comparison.

"Tim has been a very valuable employee," Courtney said. "He's done a very good job for us under difficult circumstances."

"He has a record he should be very proud of."

After the hearing, Buzz Stocking of Twin Falls said Stover had a principal to Boise to look for a job as a mechanic but was turned down three times.

A final try for an education job — teaching in Twin Falls — failed when the school hired a 28-year-old woman, Stocking said.

"They could hire two teachers for the price of him," Duffy said.

Fourth District Judge Alan Schwartzman said he will announce his sentence Wednesday, after Trimming and Rosenthal give their closing arguments. Trimming said Stover may speak on his own behalf then.

Stover faces a minimum of three 10-year terms and a maximum of three life terms without parole.

Jay Rosenthal said. On the day of the murders, Stover couldn't act within the law and "did not appreciate the wrongfulness of his actions," Estess said.

Stover's wife, 50-year-old June Stover, and daughters, Korrine, 13, and Kristina, 16, died from Stover's shotgun blasts: Stover was found, wrists slashed and shirt covered with blood, on top of one of the bodies.

Stover, who was originally charged with three counts of first-degree murder, pleaded guilty to three counts of second-degree murder in a plea bargain.

The former Harrison Elementary School principal had repressed his guilt and anger while maintaining a "façade of adaptation," Estess said. Working in schools "propped up his weak ego," Estess said.

When the support of his school work was gone, Stover fell into depression, suffering from a kind of mid-life crisis and chronically angry, Estess said.

"He couldn't handle the limits of middle life," Estess said. "He's not the only person who has struck off on some adolescent fantasy in late life."

After Estess spoke, eight friends and fellow members of the Mormon Church testified that Stover was a caring, giving man. They testified a few yards from Stover, who had shouldered many a burden.

One of them said he would willingly take Stover into his home. In fact, "I would take him home today," said Dale Duffy of Boise.

"Duffy and the seven other witnesses said they were shocked when they heard of the murders. Nobody guessed Stover's mental condition was so serious, they said."

Duffy said Stover suffered stress from his son's cancer, from giving up the security of a regular job and from finding himself locked out of school teaching. Stover was selling Arway products and insurance annuities before the murders.

146 employees. Seventy-two of them were laid off that day, said John Forbes, plant manager. The remaining workers will be cleaning up, disconnecting and crating equipment, Forbes said.

We expect to be down to about 10 or 12 by the end of October," he said. All the molding machines except one had been shut down by Friday. Production was scheduled to cease after the third shift, which ended at 7 this morning.

The plant's last product was a toy called a Bookworm, Forbes said. During the past week, workers have also been making a toy called stencil art.

Joe Contreras, who has worked at the plant for 12 years, was one of the employees who will continue to work at the plant for two more weeks cleaning up and disassembling machinery.

"It'll be quiet on Monday," he said. Forbes said he thought a lot of the workers had found new jobs, pointing out that the unemployment rate in the Magic Valley hasn't gone up.

About 50 people had been transferred to the two other Tupperware plants, Forbes said. In addition, more than 100 had been going through some type of training, mainly at the College of Southern Idaho, he said.

Many of the workers leaving Friday said they had made no definite plans yet.

"I'm going to complete my GED, but after that, I don't know," said Wanda Cleveland, who had worked at the plant for almost 13 years. "I've got family in California who has me practically moved there," she said with a laugh. She added, however, that she'd like to stay in the area if she could.

Forbes said he planned to look for a job in the area. He turned down an offer at the Florida headquarters in order to remain in the area.

None of the employees seemed to have anything negative to say about Tupperware.

"They've been really good to work for," Cox said.

"They treated us very well," Barrels said. "It'll be hard to find a job to beat Tupperware."

Due to the large size of the hurricane, only a gradual weakening of the storm was expected through late today, and forecasters warned that rainfall up to 20 inches could accompany the storm inland.

Trimesters are deemed a success

BOISE (AP) — A study has found that a trimester scheduling system being used by nine eastern Idaho high schools has been a success, but the state Board of Education is not yet ready to recommend that other schools try it.

The trimester system appears to be a program that helps resolve the major problems concerned with increased requirements for graduation from Idaho high schools, said a report on a study conducted last spring. The nine-member committee was chaired by Robert Frossard, chairman of the Department of Education at Idaho State University.

At its meeting Friday in Boise, the Board of Education heard Frossard explain the results of the study, which concluded, "Other schools who have carefully prepared for this system should be allowed to initiate the trimester system in their schools."

But State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans said more research should be done on the impact of the five-period, 60-day trimester schedule.

"It's not a question that can be simply answered with one survey," Evans said.

The trimester system is being used by Aberdeen, Blackfoot, Firth, Idaho Falls, Madison, Marsh Valley, Skyline, Snake River and Rigby high schools.

Water board told rules are vague

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Water Resources Board has been taken to task at a Boise public hearing for drafting a vague set of rules to implement the state's comprehensive water plan.

But board Chairman Gene Gray told 15 in attendance Thursday at the Boise Interagency Fire Center that the rules are little more than enabling legislation creating authority for the water plan. The water board seeks Idaho opinion on how the rules should read, he said.

"We tried to put together a skeleton that you all can hang some meat on," Gray said. "There will be much more muscle in the final document."

Hearings also were held Thursday in Idaho Falls, Twin Falls and Coeur d'Alene. Gray said the board will incorporate public suggestions before its next meeting on Oct. 21.

The comprehensive water plan directs the state Department of Water Resources to set a water plan for each river basin in the state, using existing studies.

DOE announces hearings on Idaho Falls reactor plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Energy on Friday announced plans to prepare an environmental impact statement on the proposed placement, construction and operations of a new defense production reactor.

The agency invited public comment on the "proposed scope" of the environmental study and announced plans for hearings in November and December in South Carolina, Idaho, Washington state and Oregon.

Secretary of Energy John Herrington in August unveiled plans to build a new production reactor at the Savannah River complex near Aiken, S.C., and a smaller reactor at Idaho Falls at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Herrington also said the department would continue to study the possibility of converting a mothballed commercial reactor at the Hanford nuclear reservation in Washington state near Richland.

The new production reactors would produce tritium, a key ingredient in nuclear weapons.

Rose Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, said the study will help "concerned citizens and public officials better evaluate the potential safety, public health and environmental impacts" of a new production reactor.

Preparation of the environmental impact statement is the beginning step in what could be a long and difficult legislative process," said Stallings. "The final fate of the project, however, will rest with the new administration and Congress must still provide the necessary money to build it."

The first Idaho hearing will be Nov. 10 at Twin Falls.

An Idaho Falls hearing will be held Nov. 14, at the Shilo Inn, DOE spokeswoman Penny Phelps said. Two sessions will be held, with hearings running from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m.

Another Idaho hearing will be held Nov. 16 in Boise. DOE-Idaho officials will conduct a joint hearing with Washington officials Dec. 1 in Spokane, Ms. Phelps said.

Workers hope for cool weekend to fight Idaho fires

By The Associated Press

Wildfires continued to burn in most of Idaho's national forests Friday, but fire bosses looked with hope toward a fall-like weekend forecast of cooler, wetter weather.

"I don't know if we're over the hump as far as the fire season goes, but we've been saying we're guardedly optimistic," said Sandi Sacher, an information officer at the Boise Interagency Fire Center.

Fires that so far had consumed more than 190,000 acres remained out of control and outside wilderness boundaries in the Nez Perce, Challis, Panhandle and Salmon national forests, Ms. Sacher said.

Perhaps a dozen more continued to burn in the Frank Church-River of No Return, Selway-Bitterroot and Gospel Hump wilderness areas, manned by crews assigned primarily to keep the flames inside the wilderness and away from any private property.

Four backcountry blazes in the northeast corner of the Frank Church wilderness had charred about 100,000 by Friday. Altogether, officials say 300,000 acres of Idaho forest land has been blackened this summer.

Closures in some areas of the Salmon, Challis and Nez Perce forests remained in effect. And despite cooler, more humid days and overnight temperatures dipping near freezing, new fires still were being reported.

In the Nez Perce National Forest, the 200-acre McMeekin fire was reported early Friday on the southwest edge of the Gospel Hump Wilderness. Dozens of smokejumpers and about 80 firefighters immediately attacked the blaze, which spokeswoman Mary Zabinski said was burning in particularly dry timber 20 miles east of Rigby and about two miles north of the Main Salmon River.

Discovery launch set for Sept. 29

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA on Friday scheduled space shuttle Discovery for a Sept. 29 mid-morning launch on the first mission since the Challenger accident.

The launch was set for 7:59 a.m. EDT but could come any time in the following three hours, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said.

The announcement was made after a meeting at NASA headquarters between administrator James C. Fletcher and Richard Truly, the head of the shuttle program. Truly briefed Fletcher on the flight readiness review held earlier in the week at Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

"I'm delighted to have reached this point," Truly said. "My hat is off to all members of the shuttle team whose tireless efforts have brought us here to the brink of America's return to manned space."

That two-day meeting in Florida evaluated all of Discovery's systems and cleared the shuttle for flight.

A launch date had been expected following completion of the review Wednesday. But Truly delayed any announcement because of the possibility Hurricane Gilbert could disrupt operations at the Johnson Space Center in Houston where shuttle flights are controlled once they are launched.

Truly said late predictions were that the Houston area would be hit only by moderate winds and "no threat to Johnson Space Center facilities is projected if Gilbert continues on its current path."

The inaugural flight will be a four-day mission to deploy a $100 million Tracking and Data-Relay Satellite, a twin of one lost in the Challenger explosion Jan. 28, 1986.

Five veteran astronauts will be on the flight.

They are Navy Capt. Frederick Hauck, the commander; Air Force Col. Richard O. Covey, the pilot; and mission specialists George D. Nelson, John M. Lounge and Marine Lt. Col. David C. Hilmers.

In addition to launching the satellite, they will conduct 11 science and technology experiments and check out hundreds of design changes made to the shuttle.

U.S. may adjust escort setup in gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration may soon change its convoy escort procedures in the Persian Gulf in what would be the first major response to last month's ceasefire in the Iran-Iraq war, defense officials said Friday.

Under a new plan, U.S.-flag tankers plying the waterway would be kept within a "defensive zone" by American warships but would not be accompanied every step of the way by a Navy vessel as is now the case, the sources said.

That change in procedure would allow a slight reduction in the number of warships deployed to the Persian Gulf — probably one fewer ship — but would increase the flexibility of the task force commander and allow the Navy's ships to operate at a lesser alert level, the officials said.

The sources, who agreed to discuss the matter only if not identified, said the change in procedure had been tentatively approved by the Pentagon and

White House, but would not be ordered until allies with warships in the region and certain Mideast countries were consulted.

The Defense Department declined to discuss details of the plan on Friday.

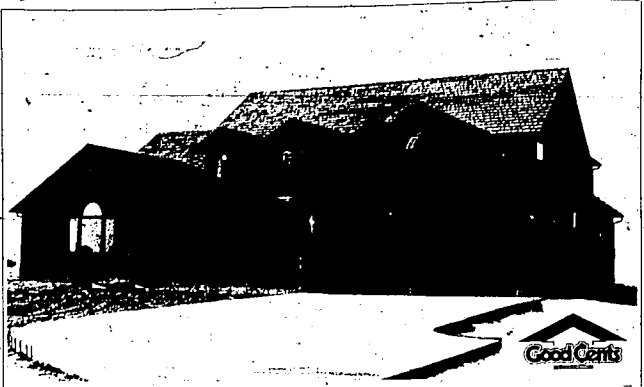

The United States has 26 Navy ships assigned to its Joint Task Force Middle East, including 17 inside the Persian Gulf itself. As of Friday, the Navy had conducted 85 convoy operations since the summer of 1987, when the escorts began.

Jury rules in favor of actress Harper

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jury decided Friday that Valerie Harper was right and Lorimar Telepictures Corp. was wrong in the dispute that ended her role in the "Valerie" television series, awarding her nearly $2 million in damages and a share of the profits.

The jurors gave Miss Harper and her husband, Tony Cacciatelli, who worked as a supervising producer for the show, $1.85 million in general damages.

Her lawyer estimated that her share of last season's profits could amount to $15 million.

Jaggers admits guilt in plea-bargain pact

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — His youth may have saved baby-faced murderer Jesse Ray Jaggers from execution.

Friday afternoon Jaggers, 18, pleaded guilty to one count of first-degree murder in the death and attempted rape of Virginia Westergren and to one count of robbery. The counts carry a minimum sentence of 10 years in prison before he would be eligible for parole and a maximum sentence of two life terms.

In a plea-bargain agreement, the prosecution modified the murder charge to prevent a death sentence.

Fifth District Judge Daniel Meehl accepted the agreement, even though there may have been sufficient evidence to support a finding of utter disregard for human life. Idaho Code allows the death penalty if there are aggravated circumstances such as utter disregard. Meehl said that fact appeared to be outweighed by two mitigating circumstances — Jaggers' youth and his diminished mental capacity the day of the crime.

"Because of his youthfulness, if he matures in the penitentiary he could gain control over his emotions," Meehl said. "There is a possibility of a life useful to society, even if within the confines of prison, if Jaggers matures, he said. A psychological profile, which has not been made public, shows Jaggers may have had diminished mental capacity at the time of the murder, Meehl said.

James Meservy, Jaggers' attorney, said earlier this week that Jaggers committed the murder under a borderline personality disorder, severe ongoing stress, caffeine toxicity and alcohol intoxication.

Although Jaggers is heavily to blame, he is not as much to blame as someone without diminished capacity.

"It appears the plea of guilt should be accepted," Meehl said. "A presentence report will be prepared."

Deputy Prosecutor Joel Horton said the reduced charges had the blessing of the Westergren family. Three family members attended Friday's hearing.

The family of the victim indicated they did not want the eye-for-an-eye, tooth-for-a-tooth, biblical justice, Horton said. Prosecutors believed that society could be protected without a death sentence, Horton said.

While the family's opinion was the most important consideration in the decision not to seek the death penalty, the prosecution also wanted to "minimize the downside risk," Horton said.

There would have been no guarantee that the prosecution would have gotten a first-degree murder conviction, he said. In addition, the cost to the county of a first degree murder prosecution resulting in a death penalty and the related appeals, would be "astronomical," he said.

The decision not to try for a death penalty has already drawn some protest.

A Buhl couple, Clyde and Lataine Hughes, wrote to the court asking that Jaggers be given "what he gave his victim."

"He is a total detriment to society and should not be allowed life of any kind," they wrote. "Please don't let us have to hear of

Merchants flock together to evict pigeons

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — An increasing number of pigeons roosting in downtown buildings are causing their own demise by irritating merchants with their filthy habits.

Sue Jones, coordinator of the Business Improvement District, said the birds have been a problem for several years, but lately they have gotten worse.

"The filth on the sidewalks is a real health hazard," Jones said.

The birds' nests and droppings have marred signs and ruined air duct systems, Jones said. "They spend an awful lot of time on buildings that are occupied," she said.

One approach to the problem is a private bird-trapping effort. Jones said Charles Browning captures the pigeons with wire traps, using grain to lure them. He keeps the birds in return for the service.

Browning reportedly has caught more than 150 of the pesky birds from several downtown locations in the latest extermination drive. But he is reluctant to talk about his project for fear of controversy.

"Eradicating pigeons can indeed be a touchy subject. Until recently, Twin Falls County took care of its own pigeon problems by shooting the birds with a pellet gun. But county commissioners were embarrassed when an election-day crowd witnessed a pigeon's demise.

The next day, told their method was illegal in city limits, the commissioners ordered it stopped. Commissioner Jim Fraley said the county will seek help from Idaho State University.

Ron Hicks, owner of the Canyon-side Gallery, said to combat the pigeons effectively, downtown businesses need to unite their efforts. Hicks is a veteran of the fight.

Last spring, flocks of pigeons entered the gallery's attic after a burglar tore the lid from a roof vent. They built nests from insulation.

"All of a sudden, the stench was unbelievable," Hicks said.

Cleaning the attic took two months of repairs, a $2,000 expenditure and the death of 260 pigeons.

Attorneys leasing upstairs offices in the building moved out for three months because the smell prevented them from conducting business, Hicks said.

Carolyn Baird of Sports Country, who has one of Browning's traps on the roof of her building, said the birds are constantly molting, and feathers come into her store. The birds' cooing also can be annoying, she said.

The droppings are acidic and eat away at metal, said Joel Hess of Hudson's Shoe Store.

Browning declined this week to talk about his project. In an earlier conversation with The Times-News, however, he said he was considering

Pigeons roosting downtown have caused considerable damage to signs and buildings selling the pigeons to bird hunters. But he said he did not want to elaborate or have that aspect publicized, because it might cause controversy.

Craig Kvale, regional wildlife manager for the state Department of Fish and Wildlife, said the birds are used to train hunting dogs. Dog trainers release the birds from cages with remote-controlled darts, Kvale said.

Browning, who is a falconer, also uses the dead pigeons as food for his falcons, Hicks said.

There are no laws protecting the local variety of pigeon, and anyone with a valid hunting license can capture or kill them, Kvale said.

Hicks backed Browning's efforts. "I think he needs to be encouraged every step of the way," he said.

Panel gives CSI boost for funds

The Associated Press
and The Times-News

BOISE — The Southern Idaho Development Center came a step closer to reality Thursday when the state Board of Education decided to ask the Idaho Permanent Building Fund Council to approve long-term financing for $42.4 million in "priority" construction projects.

College of Southern Idaho officials Wednesday made their pitch to the state board for complete funding for the Southern Idaho Development Center. CSI already has received a federal Economic Development Agency grant of $780,000 and the University of Idaho cooperative extension.

"If you don't use it for that purpose, you lose it," Glenn said of the federal money. CSI had asked for an additional $3.375 million to complete the project that will increase access to higher education in the Magic Valley, he said.

The development center would house an incubator for new businesses including technology transfer and small-business development. The center also would include:

- A telecommunications center with two classrooms and a central control room.
- CSI's agriculture department combined with the University of Idaho cooperative extension.
- Upper-division classes from Idaho State University and Lewis-Clark State College. The Boise State University outreach would be included in the telecommunications center.

• Classes from the ISU health science department.

The debt service request adopted by the board Thursday at its meeting in Boise would mean a state outlay of more than $4.4 million during the fiscal year that begins July 1, 1989.

Other "priority projects" that would be funded if the debt service request is approved, either through the sale of bonds or some other financing instrument, include:

- Boise State, $4 million, social science and public affairs building.
- Idaho State University, $924,000, renovation of the Idaho Museum of Natural History, $3 million renovation of Baldwin Hall and the $3 million first phase of renovation of the physical science building.
- University of Idaho, $11.8 million, second phase of renovation and addition to the library.
- Lewis-Clark State College, $5.8 million, construction of a new library.
- North Idaho College, $3.7 million, library-computer science building.

The debt service request was among more than $14.7 million in major capital improvements sought by the board for fiscal 1990.

Tax protester appears in court, says nothing

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Tax protester and Aryan Nations member Wayne Jones appeared without counsel at a preliminary hearing Thursday and informed the court he would remain mute.

He then honored that vow, calling no witnesses and choosing not to cross-examine those presented by the prosecution. Meanwhile, Magistrate R. Michael Redman ruled there was probable cause to believe Jones failed to collect sales tax on four occasions and bound those felony charges over to District Court.

A fifth count was dismissed. Authorities allege that Jones, who operates Jones Glass at 636 Main Ave. N., failed to collect sales tax four different times from 1985 to 1987.

Jones, as part of his ultra-conservative philosophy, contends he is a "preamble citizen" not bound by the Constitution's 14th Amendment and therefore is exempt from the court's jurisdiction.

Deputy Prosecutor J. Scott James called four witnesses Thursday morning, including Ken Fingersh, an investigator with the Idaho State Tax Commission. The other witnesses were involved in the business transactions during which Jones is alleged to have failed to collect sales tax.

Those transactions included two

Judge dismisses Front-Page suit

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A suit against a former adult bookstore and its landlord was dismissed Friday, but the landlord's lawyer says he isn't ready to drop the matter.

Fifth District Judge James May granted a motion filed by the landlord to dismiss the case and told everybody involved to pay their own attorneys' fees. Before Friday, deciding who would pay whose attorneys' fees prohibited dismissing the suit.

After the hearing, Boise attorney William Tway said he may file suit against the citizens group that sued his clients, Jay and Barbara Moyle of Filer. The Moyles owned the Blue Lakes Boulevard North building housing the Front Page Book Store.

Tway said he's considering filing a lawsuit for attorneys' fees and costs.

"The Moyles have been through some pretty tough times," Tway said.

"We were always, had been and were today willing to dismiss and bear our own attorneys' fees," said the opposing lawyer, Brent Neilson.

Neilson represents a group of 15 citizens calling themselves-Deter-

Buhl faces waste-water treatment plant fines

By DON PUDDER
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Mayor Tom Tappen hopes the City Council here can meet soon with engineers to take care of a problem with the city's waste water treatment plant.

Because of large volumes of industrial waste entering the city's sewerage system, the ultraviolet lights that normally sterilize bacteria in the sewage cannot handle the increased volume. As a result, the city faces a $20,000 fine per day from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency unless it can bring the sewage within state and federal compliance.

Tappen told the council Monday he is concerned the city may not be moving fast enough to get the problem handled.

"Time is passing us by," he said. "Things can be studied to death. We need the study and conclusions as soon as possible. I am urging that we have something to look at and follow very soon."

Public Works Director Gary Winn had hoped to meet with City Engineer Scott Bybee on Wednesday but couldn't because Bybee had other obligations, Tappen said Friday. The council had hoped they'd have a report on what specifically the problem is and what needs to be done to comply with state and federal regulations.

One major goal is to develop a method of monitoring and adjusting to the "shock loads" caused by local industries.

City officials are unsure of just what might be required, Tappen said. Different reports from different health agencies are compounding the problem, he said.

"I'm not really sure of how much we've been out of compliance because no matter who you talk to you get a different answer," Tappen said. "So it's a real can of worms."

Tappen said he hopes the city can find a solution and not have to turn the plant over to a private firm. But he said, "When it comes to penalties you do whatever you have to do."

In other action the council discussed the Comprehensive Plan for the city. The plan was adopted in 1981 and has not been updated since, which creates some problems for the city, Tappen said.

"With planning and zoning, and economic development needs, we have a lot of things we'd like to get in gear," Tappen said.

Council President Marie Maier said the plan needs to be updated every two years to be effective.

Also at the meeting, the council said after some discussion it will decide at a special meeting Monday whether to require a recently expanded business to comply with fire codes.

Valerie Boyer, owner of the Home-Plate Restaurant, said that she has expanded her business area by opening up the old fire side room, and invested $4,000 in remodeling the room, then found that she was in violation of the fire code.

"If a building is in compliance at the time of a code change, then the building is grandfathered in, but when a structural change is made, then the new code must be adhered to," Fire Chief Mark Grimes said.

The Home Plate Restaurant, Nancy Pierce's The Hair Affair business and Jim Wilson's R & R Bar are all adjacent to each other in one building. "Before, the building was treated as one building, but now with three businesses they are treated a separate units, which brings them under a different

Polygamist prosecutor asks judge for evidence

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Evidence from the federal trial of four polygamist clan members convicted in a church bombing and police standoff may be used in the state murder trial of three of the defendants, a judge ruled.

Prosecutors David Schwendiman and Creighton Horton asked U.S. District Judge Bruce Jenkins Friday to release evidence for possible use in the trial of Addam Swapp, 27, his brother-in-law, John Timothy Singer, 22, and Swapp's brother, Jonathan Swapp, 21.

The three are charged with second-degree murder in the slaying of Utah Corrections Lt. Fred House.

House was shot to death when a gun battle ended the clan's 13-day siege with police, triggered by the Jan. 16 bombing of a nearby Mormon chapel.

Evidence from the federal trial includes three frames, bullets, curtains riddled with bullet holes and a letter from Gov. Norm Bangert to clan leader Addam Swapp and Swapp's reply.

There were no objections to the requests made from defense attorneys. Schwendiman assured the judge the evidence would be photographed by FBI agents and the photographs would be left in place of the items until the trial ends.

The three homicide defendants and clan matriarch Vickie Singer were convicted in May on federal charges stemming from the bombing and standoff. Mrs. Singer was acquitted by a federal jury of attempted murder of FBI agents and was not charged in House's death.

Swapp and the others face arraignment in 3rd Circuit Court Sept. 20.

Man guilty for bringing in prostitutes

BOISE (AP) — The owner of a Boise escort service that went out of business two years ago has been sentenced to two years in prison after pleading guilty to importing prostitutes.

Bernard Swain, 33, was sentenced Friday by U.S. District Judge Marion Callister in Boise.

Under the sentence, Swain will be eligible for parole in 18 months. He remains free on a $10,000 bond and will be allowed to turn himself in to federal authorities by Oct. 12, court records show.

In a plea agreement announced July 21, Swain pleaded guilty to felony counts of transporting a prostitute across state lines and filing a false income tax return.

Six other criminal counts included in a December 1987 federal grand jury indictment were dropped. On Friday, Callister sentenced Swain to two years in prison on the prostitution charge.

Swain was arrested in 1986 after a tip from a confidential source.

Twin Falls man is acquitted of rape

TWIN FALLS — A jury took little more than two hours Thursday to acquit Twin Falls resident Steven G. Handcock on a rape charge.

The jury, composed of four men and eight women, deliberated from 3 until 6:10 p.m. before returning a verdict of not guilty, according to court records. The trial extended over three days, from Tuesday until Thursday.

Handcock, in his mid-20s, was accused of entering a 28-year-old woman's apartment Dec. 15 and raping her.

The defense argued that the woman invited Handcock into her apartment and that she consented to sexual intercourse.

Public Defender Michael Wood, who represented Handcock called four witnesses, including Handcock and Handcock's ex-wife. Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor J. Scott James called three witnesses, including the woman accusing Handcock of rape.

The case first came up for trial in June but was declared a mistrial.

First WPPSS witness takes stand

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The first witness in the Washington Public Power Supply System trial testified on Monday morning, and the trial will be in recess Tuesday and Wednesday in observance of Yom Kippur.

Kosmata was in the courtroom during a recess Friday, sitting at the witness stand and learning where the lawyers and jury will sit.

He will be interviewed by the bondholders attorneys over the weekend, said Chemical Bank attorney Tom Barr. Kosmata's presence in the courtroom is part of a settlement between the bondholders and the supply system, which agreed to make its employees available.

The plaintiffs originally planned to question Kosmata by satellite hookup with a courtroom in Washington.

Paul Bernstein, an attorney for the bondholders, asked Browning to instruct the jury that more than 80 original defendants have settled out of court.

Bernstein wanted those instructions, he said, because of opening statements by present defendants on Thursday that mentioned former defendants. As in arguments made earlier in the case, Bernstein said their mention would plant a question in the jury's mind as to the status of those former defendants.

He reminded Browning that Al Malanca, attorney for 12 utility defendants, mentioned during his opening argument "that the supply system is not here to defend itself."

Browning rejected the request, saying that to mention the parties who settled would mean detailing the amounts, which total $368 million in cash and a potential $96 million more in disputed insurance claims.

more crimes he might commit if he is released in a few years.

Jaggers had been scheduled to plead Monday, but he was given until the end of the week to consider his decision.

Friday Jaggers did not hesitate in his answers to the judge's questions. Yes, he killed Westergren with a knife, he said.

Yes, he was satisfied with his attorney. No, he had not been mistreated or coerced into his plea.

Jaggers did say he had taken a tranquilizer before appearing in court.

"It calms me down," he said. "I can think more clearly because I'm not as tense." He said he had been taking tranquilizers since St. Anthony's St. Anthony is the site of a state juvenile detention center, though officials have not disclosed whether Jaggers had an Idaho juvenile record.

Mechl noted for the court record that Jaggers "appeared relatively calm." Before the court session began, Jaggers had smiled and ducked his head when his grandmother waved to him.

Jaggers cut the throat of Westergren, 79, May 13 at her Twin Falls home. He made her disrobe before the murder and also was charged with stealing her car, a credit card and money. Her husband, Al Westergren, a former Times-News publisher, was out of town at the time.

Charges of use-of-a-deadly-weapon in the commission of a murder, attempted rape, use of a deadly weapon in the commission of a robbery, second-degree burglary, use of a deadly weapon in the commission of a burglary and three counts of grand theft were dropped Friday.

The robbery charge retained was in connection with the theft of money and a VISA card.

TV equipment reported stolen

TWIN FALLS — About $15,000 worth of equipment was stolen Thursday from the offices of K49AZ TV, according to police reports.

The offices, located at 2022 Fourth Ave. E., were broken into sometime between 12:30 and 6:50 p.m., according to police reports. Two doors inside the business had been kicked in.

Two television cameras, tape decks, an audio mixer and other equipment were reported stolen, according to police reports.

2 report flasher

TWIN FALLS — Two Twin Falls women reported they were walking their dogs Thursday night when a flasher jumped from a pickup truck and exposed himself to them.

The women, both 18, were walking in the 1100 block of Fourth Avenue East, according to police reports. The flasher, driving a red Toyota pickup, drove by and asked them if they would look at his private parts.

They said no, but the man jumped out of the truck, dropped his pants and exposed himself.

mined Citizens Against Pornography. In December, the group sued the Front Page, the Moyles, six people allegedly involved with the bookstore, nine videotapes and 16 magazines.

DCAP said it wanted to close the store, confiscate its inventory so the state could destroy it, close the building for one year and force the Moyles to forfeit all rent money. But shortly after DCAP filed the suit, the Front Page moved out of its location because the Moyles said they weren't going to renew the lease.

Everybody asked May to dismiss the case after the Front Page moved out of town, but nobody could agree on how to divide up attorneys' fees. May decided to schedule the case for trial.

Friday's decision cancels an eight-day trial scheduled for late this month. May decided that because the bookstore isn't in town, the case was moot. The Front Page joined his motion to dismiss the lawsuit, Tway said.

James has also been charged with two misdemeanor counts — operating without a business license and displaying a sign saying he won't collect sales tax.

In a notarized document of his own, Jones accused James of maliciously charging him with a fictitious crime, among several other things.

"I am well aware that Mr. James' crimes will be covered up by other ministers and high priests of the established religion," Jones wrote. "I am also aware that my lawful complaint will be ignored since the established religion prohibits any complaints against the demi-gods of this established religion, no matter how vile and evil their acts."

Bombing

Birmingham recalls KKK blast and forgiveness lesson

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(AP)—Twenty-five years ago, a Sunday school lesson about forgiveness ended with the blast of a bomb planted by a Ku Klux Klan member, and four black girls lay dead. Since then, Birmingham has learned much about forgiveness.

The bombing at the 16th Street Baptist Church sparked outrage that helped fuel the 1960s civil rights movement, which eventually eased the bitter racial divisions in this city, speakers noted at a memorial service on the anniversary Thursday night.

"There has been a turnaround in human relations in this city, which now has an improved image," the Rev. John H. Cross told a racially mixed congregation of 1,400 people gathered to remember Cynthia Wesley, Addie Mae Collins and Carol Robertson, all 14, and Denise McNair, 11.

"Twenty-five years ago the only blacks at City Hall were elevator operators and janitors. Now we have Richard Arrington as mayor," Cross said.

Cross was the church's pastor on Sept. 15, 1963, when the bomb, planted beneath basement steps, exploded after a Sunday school lesson on the theme of a love that forgives. The girls were killed as they were preparing to take part in a youth day program. Twenty-two other people were injured.

More than 40 earlier bombings had occurred in Birmingham during the civil rights struggles of the late 1950s and early 1960s, but no one was injured in those.

In a service that featured freedom songs of the civil rights movement, Arrington, who is in his third four-year term, said "the torch that we raise tonight is raised by two hands — one black and one white."

"We have the power to transcend that tragic event," he said. "We are determined it will have a redeeming quality."

Cross told the audience that he has never preached the sermon he prepared for the morning of the bombing, and doesn't intend to.

He said he had planned to tell young people at the church to "anchor their lives to the solid Rock — Jesus Christ — the same yesterday, today and forever."

A plaque in the church contains pictures of the four girls with the inscription: "May men learn to replace bitterness and violence with love and understanding."

All lower-level windows of the church now are covered with steel mesh, a sharp contrast to 1963, when glass shards from the windows covered virtually every square foot on the side of the building where the bomb exploded.

Prior to the memorial service, black and white church congregations served food to people gathered in Kelly Ingram Park, a rallying spot for civil rights marches led by the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

Mormons join values TV net

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—The Mormon Church has joined with 17 other religious organizations in sponsoring an interfaith cable television network that will provide "values-oriented" programming, a spokesman said.

Vision Interfaith Satellite Network, or VISON, is operated by the National Interfaith Cable Coalition in New York City. Its programming, beginning Monday, will be made up of offerings from several faiths, including Jewish, Catholic and Protestant organizations.

A Mormon Church news release issued Tuesday said agreements already have been made with cable systems having a total of 18.4 million subscribers, more than any other cable network has had when it started.

Man revises call-to-heaven prediction

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—The man who predicted all the faithful would be called to heaven by Tuesday morning, leaving a warning word of non-believers, has revised his prediction.

Edgar C. Whisenand now believes a process called the Rapture will begin at 9:55 a.m. CDT Wednesday.

said Dianne McArthur, general manager of Christian radio station KAAY at Little Rock.

Whisenand will not consent to interviews with the secular press, Mrs. McArthur said. Calls to Whisenand's Rapture 88 Ministries in Little Rock were greeted by an answering machine, and Whisenand did not return a call to The Associated Press.

Whisenand, 56, a retired civil engineer and self-taught Bible student, has predicted on broadcasts carried by more than 90 radio stations nationwide that Jesus would "rapture the church" — take the faithful to heaven — on Sept. 11, 12 or 13.

What's what

Biggest advance

What was the most significant technical advance of all time? Most scientists polled on this weighty matter say the control of electricity. Their second choice is antibiotics. Third, computers.

A Florida father gave his daughter Kim a convertible the day she got her driver's license, and put this bumper sticker on it: "Please report any discourtesy or reckless driving by Kim to her father at (phone number)." Lovely girl, Kim. Nobody reported anything. Phone rang constantly, though. Is Kim there?

SABER SCARS

As for Rocky Mountain spotted fever, only one case in 50 crops up in the Rocky Mountains.

Q. Don't the space people plan to send a craft to every planet in our solar system in this century?

A. To every one but Pluto.

Q. You mentioned scars on the faces of German gentlemen, inflicted in their saber duels as students. When were such duels stopped?

A. In 1899. Most students who fought any fought eight. Trading more than 300 strokes for 15 minutes in each duel.

When the Dionne sisters were born in 1934, reporters didn't know what to call them. Nobody carried her ever up with the word "quintuplets."

Q. Don't the space people plan to send a craft to every planet in our solar system in this century?

A. To every one but Pluto.

School year in the United States is 180 days. In Europe, about 220 days. In Japan, 240 days.

SUMMER DEATHS

Of all the people who die each year in the United States, 31.7 percent do so in the Summer. At least, that had been the case from 1906 through 1985. In 1986, though, Summer deaths jumped to 33.1 percent. Why the increase? Scientists don't know.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Previous limitations are tossed aside today as you focus on travel, style, material, variety, creativity, fashion and the pursuit of pleasures. Have a good time, and think of the sky as your only limit.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Mars is in your sign today, bringing you action, action, and more action. Keep on the alert for some instantaneous changes.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You may be formulating an idea that isn't going to work out. Be sure that all concerned are moving with the same commitment.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Hold-over conditions from yesterday find you still dealing with public relations and legal affairs. Take your time on these matters.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Keep your focus on how to be more productive. Some unwelcome attention and direction from home may prove helpful.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You are still catching up with the workload you are behind on. You are likely to be active in speculations of an unusual nature.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Others are still making many demands on your time and good nature. Learn to be more selective, and continue to LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Don't be surprised to still feel uncertain of your reaction to a (not entirely) vexing situation that has you in the air.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You could have held back longer at no cost to yourself. Are you certain that the explanations given meet with your approval?

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): If you did not say exactly what you wanted to yesterday, do not attempt to cover the same material today. Just let it rest.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): What you feel you have lost today will be recovered with little or no effort on your part. A Pices person plays a role in matters.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): A speculation from former times comes home to roost today. Be careful how you handle the situation this time around.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): New visions continue to unfold, and some unexplained elements will definitely come as a surprise to you before the day expires.

If Your Child Is Born Today: He or she will be a sure source of a great deal of joy and comfort. With both feet firmly planted on the ground, your child's practical nature will accomplish the impossible and please even the irrational and unpleasant without the extra effort others would apply.

Dukakis criticizes drug war; Bush hits hard in TV ad

By The Associated Press

Michael Dukakis pledged Friday to double the number of federal drug agents over the next five years as he charged the Reagan administration with using a "nickel and dime" approach to the war on narcotics. George Bush ridiculed Dukakis' attempts to portray himself as a defense-minded candidate.

"You cannot fool the Soviet leadership by knocking America's defense for 10 years and then riding around in a tank for 10 minutes," the vice president said, referring to his Democratic rival's visit earlier in the week to a tank factory in Michigan. "You can't fool the American people."

Bush played tough in his television commercials, as well, airing an advertisement in Dukakis' home state of Massachusetts that accused him of failing to clean up polluted Boston Harbor.

The vice president headed for Washington after a three-city tour of Ohio, while Dukakis was flying home to Massachusetts on Saturday night. Both men have set aside large parts of next week to prepare for their first debate of the fall presidential campaign, a 90-minute nationally televised session a week from Sunday in Winston-Salem, N.C. Democrat Dukakis has spent much of the week trying to regain the momentum in the race for the White House, and his tough anti-crime speech at a visit to the Los Angeles Police Academy was part of that effort.

In what has become the standard made-for-television element of every campaign day, he observed officer Jerry Mulford demonstrate "cover and concealment" tactics at a simulated street scene. Mulford ducked behind wooden boxes and a brick wall and fired at various moving and pop-up targets. Normally, live ammunition is used in such exercises, but the Secret Service protecting Dukakis vetoed that idea.

Dukakis said he would assign the first 100 new drug agents to Southern California. And he said he would double the total number of agents nationally over the next five years.

"We are going to hire the state and local law enforcement officers the money to fight the war," he said. "We are not going to try to nickel and dime you to death, as this administration has done."

Aides said he was prepared to spend $50 million to hire new agents next year toward a five-year goal of 2,800 agents, although a fact sheet issued to reporters said the cost of the agents would be offset by seized drug profits.

Aides also said Dukakis was committed to hiring 800 additional federal prosecutors.

"We're going to send a message to drug kingpins," he said. "As far as Mike Dukakis is concerned, there's nowhere you can run; there's nowhere you can sail; there's nowhere you can hide; there will be no safe haven for dope peddlers and drug profits anywhere on this earth."

Bush used his first news conference in two weeks to try and blunt some of the work Dukakis did earlier in the week to buttress his own defense credentials. He opened with a statement saying the tank Dukakis rode in "did not fit."

Later, he said, "He's gone to states like this, found that his message of cutting unilaterally on these weapons systems is not popular and so now he's been made over. He's coming out with policies quite different, but which ones do you believe? You believe this 30-day conversion as you climb out of a tank?"

Dukakis delivered a speech in Washington earlier this week in which he renewed his opposition to some weapons, but pledged support for others and criticized the Reagan administration for not devoting enough attention to tanks and other conventional weapons.

The vice president, who has moved up markedly in the polls in the last few weeks, acknowledged that some of his aides do not want him to take questions from reporters for fear it would distract from campaign themes he stresses in his other appearances. "It's just some lower-level hand-wringers who think I'm going to screw up," he said.

Candidates debate Dukakis' money record

BOSTON (AP) — George Bush's assault on Michael Dukakis' fiscal record renews a debate over statistics that are generally favorable to Dukakis, but show some holes in Massachusetts' economic rebound.

Bush struck at the heart of Dukakis' candidacy — his stewardship of Massachusetts during its economic boom — with a speech Thursday that selectively used statistics to point out chinks in the state financial record but that also gave a misleading characterization of the state's tax picture.

"You can pretty much do what you want with selected statistics," said Betsy Hodding, spokeswoman for Dukakis' Department of Revenue. "If you wanted to call day night you could probably find a statistic to support that."

An obvious example is jobs. Bush cited the state's loss of 26,000 manufacturing jobs since 1983. State officials have put the number closer to 100,000 but they also cite a net gain of more than 400,000 jobs since 1983.

Bush said Massachusetts spending increased between 1983 and 1987 at a rate faster than any other state, and that tax increases in that period were second only to Connecticut.

Dukakis administration officials did not dispute Bush's assertion on spending. State budgets have grown by nearly $1 billion a year since 1983, fueled by soaring state revenues. Much of the increased spending has been in the form of aid to cities and towns hurt by a voter-approved property tax cap and the Reagan administration's decision to halt revenue sharing with municipalities.

On the tax side, however, administration officials denounced Bush's figures, which do not take into account the record increase in per-capita income in Massachusetts over the four-year period the vice president cited.

During that period state taxes have been cut several times, including the repeal of a surtax Dukakis authored in 1975, his first year as governor. Dukakis initially opposed most of the tax cuts.

"(Bush) chose the per capita figures because they appear to show that taxes went up," said Hodding. "What they fail to show is that people here are making a lot more money so of course they are paying more taxes. Percentage-wise, taxes have been cut."

World Pope asks Africans for peace

MAPUTO, Mozambique (AP) — Pope John Paul II urged the Marxist government Friday to make peace with guerrillas and offered to let the church mediate in this war-torn country, where 6 million people live on the edge of famine.

"In the face of this lamentable situation, when the opportunity arose, I have never ceased to repeat, 'No to violence and yes to peace,' the pontiff told President Joaquim Chissano after arriving from neighboring Swaziland.

"The efforts of my brother bishops in Mozambique have always received my backing," John Paul told Chissano, who was baptized a Roman Catholic but now is non-practicing. About one-eighth of Mozambique's 11.7 million people are Catholic.

The bishops have been urging Chissano's government to start negotiations with anti-Marxist rebels of the Mozambique National Resistance, known by their Portuguese acronym, Renamo. The government has refused to negotiate and has criticized the bishops for attacking talk with "armed bandits."

Libyans stab 3 Americans in Greece

GLYFADA, Greece (AP) — Two Libyan workers stabbed three U.S. servicemen Friday during a brawl outside a bar in this Athens seaside suburb, police and embassy officials said.

The Americans "were injured in an unprovoked altercation," a U.S. Embassy statement said.

The servicemen were treated for injuries at Hygeia hospital and released, it said. The two attackers have been charged with aggravated assault and battery. No charges were placed against the victims.

A police spokesman identified the Americans as Sgt. William Carlisle, 24, Airman Kabil Martinez, 24, and Airman Michael Siler, 20, all serving at Hellenikon Air Force base next to Athens airport. Their hometowns were not available.

"This is not a terrorist act," the spokesman said on condition of anonymity. "Reports we have show that it was an early-morning brawl outside a bar."

Ethiopian jet crashes; 31 dead, 30 hurt

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — A state-owned jetliner carrying 101 people ran into a flock of birds, crashed and burst into flames shortly after takeoff, killing at least 31 people, the airline and sources said Friday.

Thirty more people were injured and two people were missing in the accident Thursday near Bahar Dar, close to the source of the Blue Nile on Lake Tana's southern shore in Gupaj province in the northwest.

The Ethiopian Airlines Boeing 737, which originated in Addis Ababa, was on a scheduled domestic flight when a flock of birds was sucked into both engines after it took off from Bahar Dar airport, the airline said in a statement.

Israel slaps curfews on Gaza refugees

JERUSALEM (AP) — The army clamped curfews Friday on 160,000 Arabs living in Gaza Strip refugee camps to prevent violence after activists called a general strike to mark the 1982 "massacre" of hundreds of Palestinians in Lebanon.

In south Lebanon, troops fatally shot three PLO guerrillas who the army said planned to attack Israeli settlements.

A Palestine Liberation Organization official told an Israeli daily that the PLO wants to negotiate peace, but would not abandon attacks against Israel.

Reds' Browning pitches perfect game

By JOE KAY The Associated Press CINCINNATI — Cincinnati's Tom Browning pitched the 14th perfect game in major league history Friday night, breezing past the Los Angeles Dodgers 1-0.

TOM BROWNING Hurls perfect game, needs only one pitch to hit no-hitter.

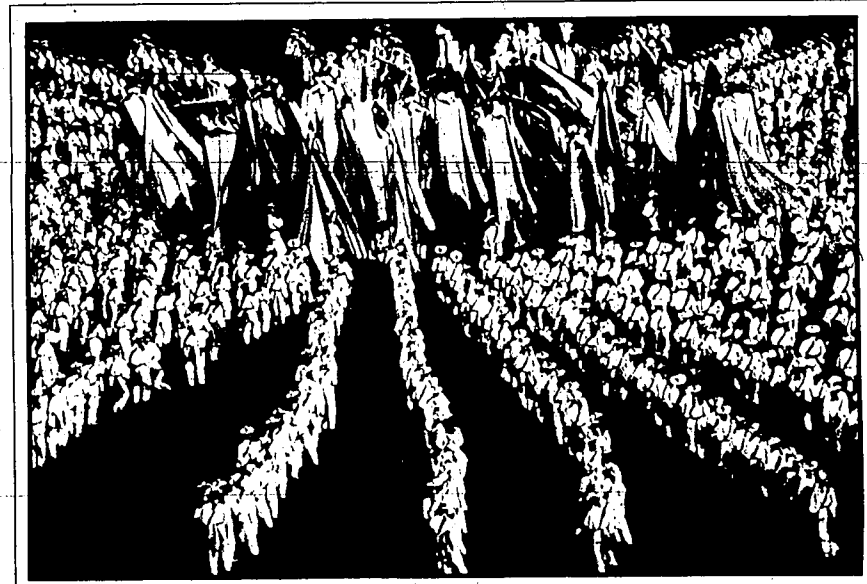

Ron Robinson was one strike away from a perfect game, but yielded a single to Montreal's Wallace Johnson in the ninth. Nolan Ryan, Doug Drabek, Odell Jones and Mike Scott also had no-hitters broken up in the ninth inning this season.

16-5. The last perfect game in the majors was by California's Mike Witt: a 1-0 victory over Texas on Sept. 30, 1984 — the last day of the season. It was the first time the Dodgers had been no hit since Sept. 26, 1981 when Houston's Nolan Ryan beat them 5-0. Ryan is the all-time major-league leader in no-hitters with five.

After his rookie season, Browning had a 14-13 record in 1986. He was 10-13 last season and spent part of the year in the minor leagues. Browning has won eight of his last nine decisions, and has lost just two games since June 6.

up Twin Falls with a first-and-goal situation. Ted Smack, a senior starting at quarterback for the injured John Horner, tossed his first pass and Heck caught it in the end zone and the Bruins led 7-0 after David McClusky kicked on the extra point.

McClusky added the extra point and Twin Falls led 14-0. Just three minutes later, Twin Falls' J.T. Eller picked off a Jason Allen pass, one of five interceptions for the Bruins, and took it to the 2-yard line where Ward punched it in, giving Twin Falls a 21-0 lead after the first quarter.

Stocks gain over triple witching hour

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained ground Friday, riding out the so-called triple witching hour involving a set of expiring futures and options on stock indexes.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 5.87 to 2,098.15, finishing the week with a net gain of 29.34 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 8 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 899 up, 562 down and 508 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 211.11 million shares, up from 161.21 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 238.33 million shares.

The session began and ended with outbursts of activity by professional traders closing out positions linked to expiring stock index futures and options.

Some of those September contracts were settled as of the opening, and others at the close.

In the last month of each calendar quarter, the simultaneous expiration of a set of index options, index futures and options on individual stocks has become a familiar phenomenon, dubbed the "triple witching hour."

Among the many smaller stocks not involved in this kind of computer program trading, analysts noted some cautious buying.

The economy has obliged Wall Street lately by showing signs of growing at a slower, and presumably more sustainable, pace, but the markets' response hasn't been as enthusiastic as many observers expected.

Among actively traded blue chips, Exxon rose 3/4 to 45 3/4; General Electric gained 1 to 43 1/4, and American Telephone & Telegraph was up 1/2 to 25 1/4.

Time Inc. jumped 9/8 to 106 1/4 amid reports, unconfirmed as of the market close, that the company had retained a prominent firm specializing in mergers and buyouts. American Brands gained 3/4 to 5 1/4. A New York investor sought regulatory approval to acquire a large stake in the company.

Reebok International fell 1/4 to 12. The company projected lower earnings for the third quarter and the year, citing pressure on its margins and heavy advertising costs.

Hospital Corp. of America rose 3/4 to 44 3/4 on a report of a 6 1/2-point gain Thursday, when a group of company executives proposed a buyout at about $47 a share.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $19 billion, or 0.71 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks added 1.19 to 152.79.

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose 2.87 to 310.81, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 2.52 at 270.65.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market gained 1.21 to 389.91. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 298.22, up .52.

Yankee-Onsite partnership plans to build power plants

BOISE (AP) — Yankee Energy Inc. of Boise has formed a partnership with a subsidiary of Portland-based PacifiCorp to build small power-generating plants.

The new company, known as Yankee-Onsite, is a collaboration between Yankee Energy and Onsite Energy, a spokesman for the two companies said Thursday.

Under the agreement, Onsite Energy paid an undisclosed amount of money to become associated with Yankee Energy, which builds power plants for companies that need their own source of electricity or want to sell power to utilities.

Onsite Energy will continue to exist as a separate company, while Yankee Energy will be restructured to become Yankee-Onsite, based in Boise.

The partnership plans to continue the business entrepreneur Ron Yanke established in Boise six years ago.

"It was a dual deal," Yanke said. "We've got the marketing and the sales (experience); we've got the (experience) in the construction end of it."

Yanke Energy has five fire-generating facilities, including a five-megawatt plant at the Evergreen Forest Products Inc. sawmill in Tamarack, Idaho, and a similar facility for Pacific Crown Timber Products Inc. in Plummer.

Both plants burn wood scraps to produce steam which turns turbines.
