Senate drug bill cracks down on users, dealers

WASHINGTON — The Senate overwhelmingly passed a comprehensive anti-drug bill Friday that cracks down hard on casual drug users as well as traffickers and calls for the death penalty against murderous drug bosses and their hired killers.

In addition to harsher penalties for users and dealers, the bill would provide new money for drug enforcement, education, treatment and rehabilitation programs. For the first time, over the next three years, more of that money would be devoted to prevention and treatment than to enforcement.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., called the measure "the strongest and most comprehensive anti-drug bill ever to be considered in this chamber."

Putting the bill's provisions into action will cost $2.6 billion. Senators acknowledged the federal budget couldn't fully fund it over the next two years. Only about $400 million this fiscal year and $1.4 billion next year would be available to cover the bill's cost.

In passing the bill Friday, the Senate adopted a non-binding clause that commits it to find the $2.6 billion to finance the measure — even if it takes new taxes — by next May 1. Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R.

Biden Jr. sponsored the clause.

Senators earlier rejected a move by Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., Biden and others to raise cigarette, beer, wine and liquor taxes to pay for new drug programs.

The Senate bill, which differs in several other respects from an even more far-reaching House bill passed late last month, allots 60 percent of the new money for prevention and treatment and 40 percent to enforcement.

In addition to providing more money for traditional enforcement programs — including international interdiction and eradication efforts — the bill lays down heavy penalties for casual drug use.

Anyone convicted of possessing even small amounts of illegal substances — such as marijuana, cocaine and "crack," a highly addictive cocaine byproduct — could be subject to civil fines of up to $10,000.

And, if they were receiving certain kinds of federal benefits — such as student loans, housing loans or farm loans — the benefits could be withdrawn by federal or state judges for up to one year upon conviction for a first offense and for longer periods for subsequent offenses.

Persons convicted of selling drugs would risk losing a wider range of federal benefits, such as access to public housing.

Some complained that strict enforcement of benefits cutoffs would lead to a further clogging of overtaxed courts and deny some users the chance to rehabilitate themselves.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., also charged the provision was unconstitutional because it imposed a civil penalty for a criminal act and called for state courts to enforce federal laws.

House and Senate conferees will meet over the next several days to try to work out their differences. Sponsors in both chambers expressed the hope that a final bill could be sent to President Reagan for his signature by the middle of next week.

Artist tells of finding girl at crash site

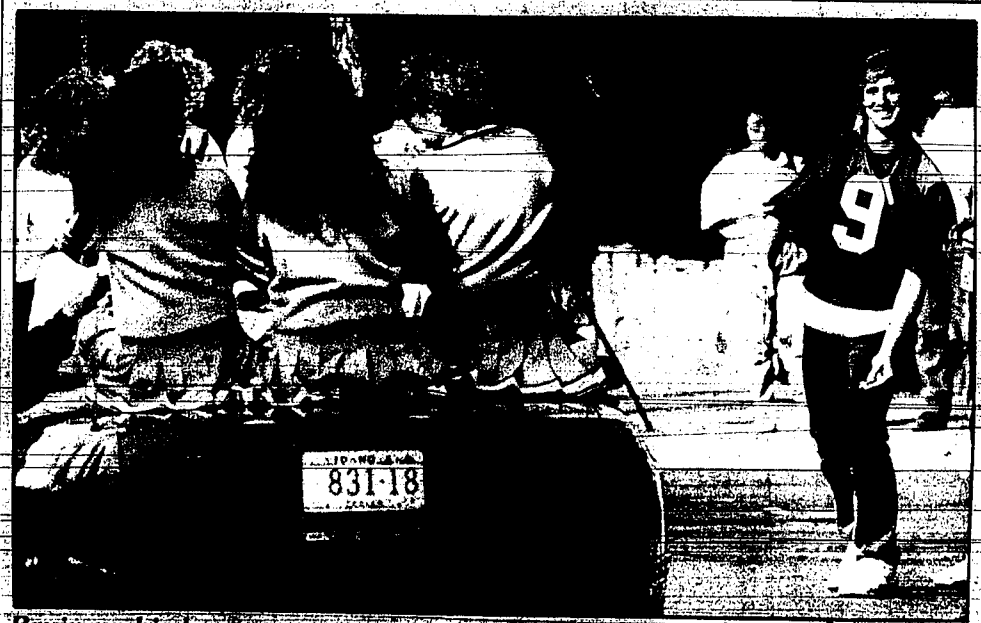

TWIN FALLS — Airplane parts were strewn over the hillside as Chris Burgeson scrambled down the slope.

At the bottom, strapped into the remains of a Piper Cherokee that lay nose-down at a 45-degree angle, was a 16-year-old girl, bleeding, barely alive and hanging from her seat belt.

"I could hear her making noise — wailing and moaning," Burgeson said. "At one point she said, 'Help, help.'"

The pilot's seat and the pilot, 19-year-old Jeff Fairfield of Hailey, were nowhere to be seen, Burgeson said in a phone interview from Roscoe, Mont.

Burgeson, a 35-year-old artist, was visiting the Ketchum area this week to do some painting. His presence on a secluded mountain ridge Tuesday has been credited with saving 16-year-old Joy Smith's life.

Farm Bureau tries to cut link to GOP

The Idaho Farm Bureau Federation on Friday tried to extricate itself from the escalating fray over a federal land development bill that has become the focal point of Idaho's 2nd Congressional District campaign.

In a critical statement, Farm Bureau Executive Director Bill Brown said the organization of 29,000 Idaho families was disassociating itself from current and past attempts by GOP congressional challenger Dane Watkins and the state Republican Party to deceive and mislead voters in the bid to oust Democratic incumbent Richard Stallings.

At issue is a letter, mailed throughout the conservative southern Idaho district, endorsing the Farm Bureau's opposition to the American Heritage Trust Act that has been supported by Stallings and vigorously opposed by Watkins.

The Farm Bureau charged the letter distorts the situation, suggesting it opposes Stallings and backs Watkins after the organization had objected to a similar tactic in a Watkins' campaign television ad two weeks ago. Watkins campaign and state GOP officials disputed the charge.

Dukakis may have lost chance to catch Bush

LOS ANGELES — With three and a half weeks to go until the presidential election, Democrat Michael Dukakis may have lost his last best chance to overtake Vice President George Bush.

The opportunities and potential surprises of the debates are over, and the 1988 campaign entered its final phase on Friday with the guilposts from now until Election Day clearly marked.

From now on, campaign packaging will assert an even stronger hold, with schedules and rhetoric more tightly controlled than before — and that should benefit Bush and make it even harder for Dukakis to find an opening to turn the tide of the campaign.

Even Dukakis' people conceded after Thursday's encounter at UCLA that the Massachusetts governor did not deliver the leveling blow that some had hoped for.

"We didn't expect a knockout. What we expected was a strong effort," said campaign manager Susan Estrich.

But whether that effort will be enough to make much difference in the dwindling days remaining, for a campaign that has been lagging in the polls since late August, seemed questionable.

The vice president — described by aide Sheila Tate as "good at dodging and weaving" — might have gloated that Dukakis didn't lay a glove on him, the phrase he had used after his on-air spat with CBS' Dan Rather last winter.

Instead, Bush merely said he was "very happy about the way things went." He had aides pronounce the victory for him.

For Bush, the stakes weren't as high as for Dukakis in Thursday's jousting; he only had to avoid making serious mistakes.

Most analysts seemed to agree that Bush looked more comfortable, Dukakis stiffer in the final debate, with no major gaffes on either side.

For his part, Dukakis was supposed to try to look warmer, more human.

And, in fact, both candidates seemed to be seeking less-negative, more-open images — although Bush aides denied that Dukakis had scored many points in the September food costs up, fuel down; wholesale price advance moderate

WASHINGTON — Food costs, showing further effects from the drought, accelerated sharply in September, but a big drop in energy costs kept the overall rise in wholesale prices at a moderate 0.4 percent, the government reported Friday.

The price report brought smiles at the White House, where the Reagan administration claimed it showed inflation was not heating up. But some private economists expressed worries about what could happen if world oil prices suddenly rebound.

The September increase represented a drop from an August increase of 0.6 percent. For the first nine months, wholesale prices have been rising at a rate of 4.3 percent.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the inflation report showed a "clear downward trend" indicating inflation was under control.

The government also reported Friday that retail sales fell for the second straight month in September, declining 0.4 percent because of weakness in auto sales.

Magic Valley wary of lottery

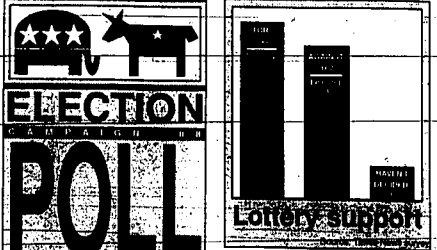

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley voters are eyeing the lottery with a new wariness, according to a Times-News poll.

About the same percentage, 41.4, oppose the lottery as opposed a similar measure in 1986. But some supporters may be having second thoughts: The poll found 9.2 percent of respondents undecided on the issue.

That 9.2 percent will be well courted by lottery opponents.

"We feel the Magic Valley is crucial and that the battle will be fought in the Magic Valley and Treasure Valley," said Randy Furniss, executive director of the anti-lottery group Consider. North Idaho is expected to vote for the constitutional amendment on the November ballot and Eastern Idaho against it.

To get an idea of how the Magic Valley would vote this time, The Times-News called 403 registered voters randomly selected from telephone directories covering the eight Magic Valley counties. The poll, conducted Oct. 6-11, has a margin of error of about 5 percent.

Respondents were asked, "A constitutional amendment to allow a state lottery is on the ballot. If the election were held today, would you vote yes or no?"

One-hundred-ninety-five respondents said they would vote for it. Another 167 said they would vote no. That left 37 undecided, three voters leaning toward saying no and one leaning toward yes.

 In another sign that the economy was slowing, the Federal Reserve said the operating rate for America's factories, mines and utilities was unchanged in September, the first month industrial production has failed to increase since last February.

 In the view of many economists, the sluggish reports on retail sales and industrial production were encouraging signs that the economy was not in danger of overheating.
 Those worries earlier in the year had prompted the Federal Reserve, in an inflation-fighting move, to tighten credit conditions and push interest rates higher.
 The big dampening effect on prices last month came from a 3.3 percent drop in energy costs, the biggest decline since January. All other categories showed decreases. Gasoline costs fell 3.8 percent, natural gas dropped 2.5 percent and home heating oil declined by 4.6 percent.
 The price declines reflected the current battle among oil-producing nations over production quotas. Offsetting the drop in energy costs, food prices jumped by 1.2 percent last month, three times the rate of increase in August, serving to offset the effects of the summer drought that have not played out.

Tuesday afternoon Burgess looked to the Pioneer Cabin northeast of Ketchum to take some pictures. On his way back down, "the airplane flew in and crashed," he said.

Fairfield and Smith, also of Hailey, had taken off from the Friedman Memorial Airport in a rented plane only a few minutes before. When Burgess first noticed it, the plane was already flying low.

"It was coming up the canyon, not very far above the treetops."

It looked as though the pilot was aware he wasn't going to make it over the ridge, and he turned down the canyon, Burgess said. Suddenly the nose dropped, and the engine noise got louder.

The plane then disappeared behind some quaking aspens.

"I didn't see it actually hit," Burgess said.

The plane apparently hit the ground nose first, then slid down the slope, scattering parts as it went. It came to a rest among the rocks and trees of Corral Creek's dry bed.

"I got down there as fast as I could," he said.

He found Smith semi-conscious in the wreckage.

GARY BURGESSON

"She was obvious, she was tough."

"It was obvious both her legs were broken," Burgess said. She was bleeding and her breathing appeared difficult, he said.

It was about 6:15 p.m.

He released her seat belt and pulled her from the plane. Though fearing to move her, he carefully laid her on the ground and covered her with his sweater.

Burgess started down the hill toward town for help. About 100 feet from the plane he found the pilot's body. Fairfield, who had rented the plane, had been flying since he was 17, friends of his family said.

Gauging his position from the contour of the creek, Burgess ran down the hillside toward his van. In less than an hour he was at the hospital in Sun Valley.

With search and rescue paramedics, he headed back up toward the wreck. In the quickly falling darkness it took nearly two hours to locate the plane.

When his rescuers arrived, Smith was "fairly coherent," Burgess said. "She was amazing, she was tough. She even put her arms into the sweaters."

The paramedics went right to work.

"They're a great bunch of guys. They really knew what they were doing," Burgess said. They got Smith on oxygen, started an intravenous solution and put her on a stretcher.

Then it was back up the slope to the ridge and the rescue helicopter.

The first quarter-mile to half-mile was "real steep," Burgess said. Then they followed the trail the rest of the way up.

Struggling with the stretcher on the steep slope in rough terrain and darkness, the rescuers took two hours to make the top near midnight.

The helicopter took Smith to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, where her condition Friday evening remained critical but stable in the intensive care unit.

The Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board are conducting a joint investigation of the accident, said Bob Rountree, aviation safety inspector of the FAA.

The two agencies have completed their on-site investigation and are examining records. Investigation records will be sent to the NTSB in Washington, D.C., which will issue a report in six months to a year.

Services for Jeffrey Palmer Fairfield will be at 2 p.m. today at his parents' Hailey home, 206 Willow Road.

Burgess, who has no permanent home since a recent divorce, plans to move to Ketchum next month. He has been painting seriously since 1975, he said.

Violent crime reports on rise in Idaho

BOISE (AP) — There was a big increase in reported cases of violent crime in Idaho in the first half of this year, but property crimes were down.

Overall, says a state report released Friday, reported crime was down 9 percent compared to the same period of 1987.

Lennie Gray, Department of Law Enforcement, said state law enforcement agencies provided information for the crime index.

Robberies showed the largest increase, 38 percent. F forcible rape fell 33 percent, aggravated assault was up 21 percent and there was a 25 percent increase in murders.

Miss Congeniality contest.

"I think I'm a reasonably likable guy," Dukakis told an audience estimated at a bit more than 60 million. "But I'm also a serious guy. I think the presidency of the United States is a very serious office."

Bush, who polls show has overcome most of the earlier perception of him as being aloof and "wimpish," had his own words on the issue of likability.

"I don't think it's a question of whether people like you or not to make you an effective leader. I think it's whether you share the broad dreams of the American people. I think it's a question of values, not likability or lovability."

Bush aides before the debate said they expected some kind of surprise assault from the Democrat. But it never materialized.

And what may have been Dukakis' harshest thrust, his criticism of Republican running mate Sen. Dan Quayle, who polls have shown is hurting the GOP ticket, brought what may have been a neutralizing parry from Bush.

"I've never seen a campaign where a presidential nominee runs against my vice presidential nominee," he said.

With no more debates planned, and with polls suggesting Bush is in good shape to win an Electoral-College majority, Dukakis' work appears to be cut out for him.

At the same time that controversy was erupting, another was subsiding. The Idaho League-of-Women Voters announced a new date has been agreed to for the Stallings-Watkins debate, the only scheduled face-to-face confrontation for the candidates before the election.

League President Joy Myers said the debate, originally scheduled for Monday night, will now be Oct. 31, again on the campus of Idaho State University in Pocatello.

Stallings asked for the new date on Thursday when it became apparent that Congress would not adjourn until late next week. Watkins quickly accused his opponent of trying to dodge the face-off so he could avoid explaining his support for what Watkins continually calls a $30 billion federal land grab.

Menwille, Democratic challenger Jeanne Givens began a five-day bus tour of northern and western Idaho in her bid to unseat incumbent Republican Congressman Larry Craig. The two-term state lawmaker from Coeur d'Alene continued emphasizing her commitment to better schools, more jobs and highway improvements, especially on U.S. 95.

the state's only north-south land link.

The failure of Congress to adjourn this week disrupted Craig's plans for a 2½-week tour of his northern and western Idaho district. Campaign officials said Craig will launch the tour as scheduled on Monday in Deary but then take a late night flight back to Washington for Tuesday's House session. The rest of the tour will be dictated by the congressional schedule.

Watkins offered to help Stallings make a late-night flight to Washington on Monday night in an effort to salvage the original date for the debate. But Stallings declined the offer, his campaign saying he would not jeopardize his work on Tuesday when the House has scheduled final consideration of a bill to preserve the City of Rocks and the Hagerman Fossil Beds in southern Idaho.

But the Farm Bureau controversy continued escalating what at one time had been a generally lackluster campaign in the 2nd District.

In Pocatello, Farm Bureau Executive Director Bill Brown said letters signed by former long-time Farm Bureau President Oscar Field but mailed by the state GOP were particularly disturbing because of their earlier confrontation over the television ad.

Those ads were pulled four days after they began airing. Brown said, once he advised Watkins and his campaign manager Dave Pearson that the ads were "deceptive in that they led the viewer to believe that the Farm Bureau was attacking Congressman Stallings and by inference supporting candidate Watkins."

"Now 80,000 letters carrying this same misleading inference of Farm Bureau opposition to Congressman Stallings have been mailed to voters in the 2nd Congressional District," Brown said in a statement. "These letters were mailed by the Idaho Republican Party even though the Watkins campaign team, even Dane Watkins himself, knew full well of our opposition to using the Farm Bureau in this matter."

State GOP Chairman Blake Hall and Pearson both maintained the Field letter made no endorsement of Watkins, and both labeled the letter as totally accurate in the positions the Farm Bureau, Watkins and Stallings have on the trust act.

"The letter only quotes the official policy of the Farm Bureau," Hall said, and Pearson added, "The Farm Bureau cannot find anything in that letter that it disagrees with."

"Frankly, I think they're embarrassing themselves a little bit," he said.

Brown acknowledged that the Farm Bureau remained unalterably opposed to the trust act, but he said the organization's objections were based on the fact that it was just one of 28 organizations that took that stand in a letter that was sent not only to Stallings but to all 435 members of the House.

The letter also suggests that the act as Stallings' liberal Democrat bill when Stallings has said out that 60 Republican House members were among the bill's 200 House sponsors.

Brown also pointed out the issue is

Those numbers show less support for the lottery than two years ago. In 1986, 57.1 percent of Magic Valley ballots were marked yes. But in the Times-News poll this year, only 48.3 percent of registered voters said they would vote yes.

That was a drop of 8.8 percent, just about equal to the 9.2 percent of voters who said they were undecided this year.

Statewide, 60 percent of the voters in 1986 approved of establishing a state lottery commission. But when the measure was blocked in the courts and voters were asked to decide whether the Constitution should allow lotteries, opponents organized.

They have told voters that a lottery would be an inefficient and unreliable source of revenue, that out-of-state gambling companies will be the big winners and that the wording on the ballot would allow charities to sponsor casino-type gambling.

Not everyone's convinced. One survey participant responded said he would the lottery passes because it would give a few poor people a chance for wealth. Another man said people will go to Nevada or gamble illegally in Idaho anyway, so the lottery might as well be legalized.

Other respondents said they would support an initiative if charity gambling were not allowed.

In recent months Consider called nearly every household in the state to ask how residents planned to vote. Now the group is mailing literature to reinforce or change those views, depending on their answers.

Door-to-door campaigns, a public meeting Friday and more talks to local groups are planned in the Magic Valley.

The pro-lottery movement has been less visible in the Magic Valley, mostly because of lack of money, but voters can expect some brochures and radio ads, said Kellogg Sen. Mike Blackbird.

"Frankly, we're trying very blatantly to counter (Consider's) untruths," he said.

Lottery supporters say education will benefit through a building fund for school districts, and only a small percentage of revenue would be spent out-of-state for printing lottery tickets.

Correction

A story in Thursday's Times-News mistakenly stated a public meeting with Federal Aviation Administration officials would be at 7 p.m., Oct. 19, at Wood River Junior High School. The meeting will be at Wood River Senior High.

Lottery foe says gambling a risk

REXBURG (AP) — A state lottery opponent contends a 26-year-old Idaho Supreme Court decision would allow nearly all forms of gambling if the constitutional ban against lotteries is lifted.

Joseph Groberg, pressing the campaign to defeat the constitutional change on the Nov. 8 ballot, said the 1853 high court ruling defined as lotteries any game of chance including roulette and slot machines.

Speaking at Ricks College on Thursday, Groberg said that judicial definition coupled with provisions on charitable gambling in the lottery amendment would allow any form of gambling operated by the state or any charitable organization.

Mountain Home trustee recalled

MOUNTAIN HOME (AP) — The first trustee recall election in Idaho history has resulted in the ouster of one of three Mountain Home School Board members targeted by opponents.

Mary Fran Aguirre lost her seat Thursday by a 267-255 vote, while trustees Duwain-Moose and David Humphreys were retained. Moose survived the recall effort by a 168-225 vote, and Board Chairman Humphreys kept his seat on a 201-344 tally.

Voters could only cast ballots for the trustee representing their particular area of the school district.

Idaho AIDS quilt honors victims

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — As a national commemorative AIDS quilt tours the nation, Idahoans are working on their own quilt in memory of AIDS victims in the state.

In Idaho Falls, a group met Thursday in a small room at St. Johns Episcopal Church to make a panel for a young Rexburg man, Eric Howe, who died of acquired immune deficiency syndrome in September.

"It's meant to be a personal tribute from you to the one who died," Don Hildebrandt told the half-dozen people who came to work on the panel. Hildebrandt is a regional representative of the Idaho AIDS Foundation, which is organizing the quilt project statewide.

Man fakes kidnapping to avoid prison

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — An Idaho Falls man who faked his own kidnapping last week to avoid prison may serve up to three years in prison.

District Judge Larry Boyle on Thursday gave David Floyd Holm, 27, a three-year indeterminate sentence on a probation violation. Sentencing on theft charges was postponed until Tuesday.

Holm appeared before Boyle and Judge H. Reynold George in consecutive sentencing hearings that lasted three hours.

Holm failed to appear at an Oct. 6 sentencing hearing, 12 hours after authorities received telephone calls reporting he'd been kidnapped and was being held for $50,000 ransom. He was apprehended Monday at the home of a friend.

He admitted Thursday to both judges that he faked the kidnapping because he was afraid of going to prison.

Outfitter locates body of hunter

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — The body of a Montana hunter lost in Idaho's Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness last year has been found near where his partner's body was discovered in July.

Idaho County Sheriff Randy Baldwin said Thursday that James Harold Steging, 23, probably died of exposure within two days of becoming lost in the wilderness last Nov. 13.

The decomposed body was found Tuesday by Hamilton, Mont., outfitter Art Griffith, in the Chute Creek drainage about 55 air miles from Grangeville, near the Idaho-Montana border.

Griffith rode out of the wilderness and contacted the sheriff's department, which sent officers into the woods to retrieve the body. Identification was made through dental records. Baldwin said Steging's wallet also was found with the body.

Andrus: Education support slipped

BOISE (AP) — In terms of real spending power, state support for education in Idaho slipped 6.6 percent in five years, Gov. Cecil Andrus says.

A new survey covering 1982-86 showed Idaho was just one of three states showing a decline in actual purchasing power of education, Andrus said Friday.

He spoke to a session of the US WEST-sponsored Symposium on Teaching at Boise State University.

Andrus said the National Center for Education Statistics, a research arm of the U.S. Department of Education, surveyed state education spending in terms of constant dollars, adjusted for the effects of inflation.

In contrast to Idaho's decline, Andrus said Montana went up by 21 percent, Utah by 15 percent, Washington by 12 percent and Wyoming led the nation with a 78 percent increase.

ACLU responds to attacks by Bush

MOSCOW (AP) — Vice President George Bush is giving people a false image of the American Civil Liberties Union, which is causing less support for the ACLU, a local member says.

"The things that Bush is doing gives people a false image of the ACLU," said Carl Mickelsen, a builder from Viola and a 20-year member of the organization.

Bush, the Republican presidential nominee, has been criticizing Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis for being a "card-carrying member" of the ACLU.

ACLU offices in Oregon and Washington said Bush's criticism of Dukakis during the presidential debate has spurred membership in the organization.

INEL officials stress safety during hearing

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Safety receives top priority in nuclear research projects at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, officials say.

INEL contractors outlined safety procedures, and supporters and critics debated INEL safety, as a Department of Energy panel wrapped up day-long hearings at Idaho Falls Thursday.

The DOE's Advisory Committee on Nuclear Facility Safety, a national panel of professors and nuclear experts, held nine hours of hearings Thursday. After discussing national nuclear policy and restarting ailing reactors at the DOE's Savannah River Plant in South Carolina, the committee discussed INEL operations.

During the highly technical session, contractors emphasized the importance of safety at project sites.

"We do have a strong commitment to safety," said Jim Zane, EG&G Idaho general manager.

For EG&G, the site's largest contractor, safe operations can create a competitive advantage, which can bring more contracts and increase profits, Zane said.

At EG&G's Advanced Test Reactor, the contractor has received $73 million in DOE funds in 11 years for reactor modifications, said Hank Zeile, manager of power-reactor programs.

A technical safety appraisal at ATR identified 52 safety concerns. EG&G filed a response to the report in July and has completed work on 23 of the concerns cited. EG&G officials disputed claims in the appraisal that staff attitudes have caused a "subtle compromise of safety programs."

Zane said he was offended by the remarks, which he called subjective. But he said the comments were "closer on target than I thought," and EG&G since has reduced its noncompliance rate significantly.

Reagan sends warning to Sandinistas

Special session due if Contras menaced

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Friday he "would not hesitate" to call Congress back in special session if the Contra rebels are threatened, a statement apparently designed to keep the rebels busy alive until a new president can take up their cause.

Reagan's message to Capitol Hill had been anticipated for days, following acknowledgments from both White House officials and GOP lawmakers that prospects were nil for obtaining a $16.5 million cache of weapons for the rebels in the waning days of the 100th Congress.

A special session is considered highly unlikely.

But White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said the administration would send the message that one of Reagan's most passionate causes is not being abandoned in the final days of his administration.

Fitzwater said the purpose of the letter "was to reassure those who are concerned about the Contras. The conclusion was that we didn't have the time — we may not have had the votes — and there was not a crying need to seek the military assistance at this time, he said.

"We want to reassure everyone that we stand behind the resistance, as the president has often repeated. And we're prepared to call Congress back if it's necessary," the spokesman added.

Earlier in the week, Fitzwater had said administration officials had come to the realization that "we will just have to wait until there is a new president and new Congress to see what happens next on aid to maintain the resistance as a fighting force."

At present, the dwindling Contra forces are subsisting on $27 million in food, clothing and medical supplies approved by Congress last month as part of a Pentagon money bill.

They have received no weaponry from the United States since February, when lethal aid was suspended in deference to efforts at reaching a peace accord between the rebels and the leftist Sandinista government.

The mood in Congress remains strongly opposed to sending new military aid. But under the defense appropriations measure, a complicated process was established for Reagan to request the release of the $16.5 million in weapons, if certain conditions were met.

But Congress would again have to approve the release, meaning that a special session would be necessary if the request came after Congress adjourns, which is expected next week.

In his statement, Reagan warned the Nicaraguan government against taking advantage of the fact that U.S. lawmakers were leaving town soon and would be unable to send any aid until a new Congress convenes in January.

"In the event the Sandinistas attempt to capitalize on this situation, they should know I would not hesitate to call the 100th Congress back into session to consider emergency assistance to the freedom fighters,

No automatic budget cuts this year, White House says

WASHINGTON (AP) — There will be no automatic, across-the-board cuts in federal programs in the just-begun fiscal year because the $146 billion deficit target in the Gramm-Rudman law has not been breached, the Reagan administration told Congress on Friday.

The announcement, which was expected, capped a year-of budget work notable for the unusual amount of harmony between the Republican White House and the Democratic-controlled Congress.

Had the automatic cuts been triggered, federal spending for defense and domestic programs would have been slashed by at least $10 billion, a microscopic part of the $1.1 trillion budget that nonetheless would have inflicted enormous political pain on lawmakers.

"Lots of people were disposed to avoid that," said Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

According to a letter from the Office of Management and Budget to congressional leaders, the final projection for the 1989 fiscal year deficit is just under $145.5 billion, as measured by administration budget officials. The fiscal year began Oct. 1.

If $345 million more in federal spending had been enacted, the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law would have required government expenditures to be cut by whatever amount would have reduced the deficit to $136 billion.

Because of delays in completing anti-drug legislation and other bills, Congress will continue working next week, rather than adjourning for the year Friday as planned.

That means that Congress could pass additional spending bills for fiscal 1989 that would add to the deficit. But under the Gramm-Rudman law, spending enacted after Oct. 15 — which is two weeks into the fiscal year — is not calculated, and there are no legal consequences to adding to the deficit after that date.

LaRouche, associates facing fraud, conspiracy indictments

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Political extremist Lyndon H. LaRouche Jr. and six of his associates were charged with conspiracy and fraud on Friday in a federal grand jury indictment which said they borrowed more than $31 million over a four-year period with no intention of repayment.

U.S. Attorney Henry Hudson said the 13-count indictment was the culmination of a two-year investigation which began in October 1986 with an FBI and Internal Revenue Service raid on LaRouche headquarters in Leesburg, Va. A truckload of documents and records was seized on that occasion.

LaRouche, who is awaiting a retrial in Boston on somewhat similar charges, was named in all 13 counts. He was charged with conspiracy to commit mail fraud, 11 counts of mail fraud and conspiracy to defraud the IRS.

The grand jury said that LaRouche had not filed a federal income tax return since at least 1979 and conspired to conceal the amount spent on his behalf by having his living expenses paid out of bank accounts in the names of corporations associated with his major organization, the National Caucus of Labor Committees.

Hudson said he expected LaRouche and the other six defendants to appear voluntarily for arraignment in federal court on Monday afternoon.

The grand jury charged that during the 1984 presidential campaign committees supporting LaRouche for president borrowed $4.3 million.

Democrats admit debate didn't help Dukakis' bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even Democrats acknowledged Friday that Michael Dukakis' race was made no easier by his final debate with George Bush, leaving the Democrat with a little over three weeks to make up a lot of ground — and to hope for a mistake by the vice president.

The first polls suggested a victory for Bush while both sides pushed the view that their man had won.

But the next day's judgment by leaders in both parties seemed to be that the debate was a lost opportunity for Dukakis — that he failed to recast the presidential race on his issues and did not appreciably warm his cool and detached personal image.

"I expected a very aggressive Dukakis and I didn't find it," said Republican Senate Leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

"I'm not sure these debates really amount to much," said Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia, in a remark that may have reflected Democratic disappointment Dukakis made no gains.

Top Dukakis aide John Sasso acknowledged the vice president had the edge in instant polling taken after the two presidential nominees met in Los Angeles Thursday night for their second and final debate.

George Bush, Michael Dukakis shake hands at the debate

He maintained, however, that Dukakis' performance was good enough.

"We scored with undecided and swing voters last evening. That's what we were looking for," Sasso said. "We're down a little bit (in the polls), there's no question about that," he added. "But it's well within range."

Bush, Dukakis shade truth about Social Security voting

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush says he did not vote to cut Social Security cost-of-living adjustments, and Michael Dukakis says he went on record at the National Governors Association against cuts in Social Security.

But both candidates shaded the truth in their final debate Thursday night in Los Angeles.

"Let me simply say for the record, I did not vote to cut COLAs," Bush said. "And I voted the same way that he did three months before in a national governors' conference."

But Bush did cast a tie-breaking

Senate vote on May 9, 1985, for a Senate budget freeze that included a one-year delay in a Social Security cost-of-living increase.

Dukakis, for his part, described a losing battle at the National Governors Association to exempt Social Security from a federal budget freeze that the governors — including Dukakis — eventually endorsed.

The Democrat never quite acknowledged that he voted for the final resolution in February 1985 backing a one-year freeze including Social Security payments. "Everybody knew that those of us who against the freezing of COLAs did so ... emphatically," he said.

Bush's tie-breaking vote allowed Senate Republicans to pass, 60-49, a one-year budget freeze that included Social Security COLAs. But President Reagan later withdrew his support and the freeze never took place.

At the governors' meeting, Dukakis was in a 26-17 majority who voted to exempt Social Security from their recommendation of a federal budget freeze. But they lacked the two-thirds majority needed to amend the freeze resolution the governors eventually approved.

Officials bulldoze house because of unexplained phenomena

ORLAND HILLS, Ill. (AP) — Experts couldn't explain the smoky mist that sometimes permeated a house, or a jet of flame that roared from an electrical socket. Some thought the home was haunted.

Fire officials recorded 26 separate reports of strange happenings, from March to August. Finally, everyone agreed on only one thing: the house wasn't safe to live in.

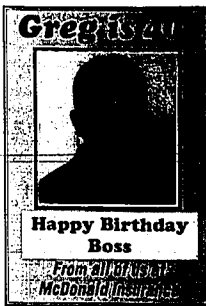

So the nine-year-old house south of Chicago was bulldozed Thursday on orders from the Travelers Insurance Co.

One of the most frightening incidents happened in April, when a flame one inch in diameter roared out of a wall socket in an upstairs bedroom and shot 21 inches into an electrical socket. Some thought the home was haunted.

The flame was witnessed by an Orland Hills police officer, an electrician who was a part-time officer and engineers investigating the mystery, Smith said.

"The fire was under pressure, and that kind of pressure can't build up in electrical conduit because it's open throughout the entire house," he said.

Some AIDS victims gain sympathy, poll shows

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans sympathize with AIDS patients, but only if they got the disease through some means other than homosexual activity or drug use, according to a poll published Friday.

Seventy-five percent of those surveyed for a New York Times-CBS News poll said they have a lot or some sympathy for people with AIDS, while only 19 percent said they had not much or no sympathy.

When asked about the two groups that comprise the majority of AIDS patients, much of the sympathy evaporated, apparently reflecting public dislike of homosexuals and drug users.

Only 36 percent said they had a lot or some sympathy for those who got the disease through homosexual activity, and only 26 percent had sympathy for those who got AIDS through intravenous drug use.

Homosexuals and drug users make up the overwhelming majority of people with AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

A total of 1,606 respondents were interviewed by telephone Sept. 8 to 11. The poll had a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

2 are found innocent after takeover of newspaper

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two Tuscarora Indians who staged an armed takeover of a newspaper office and held hostages for 10 hours, in what they said was a protest of local corruption, were found innocent of all charges Friday.

"Thank you, Jesus, someone in the federal courtroom shouted after the jurors returned their verdict. The jury began deliberations Thursday. Eddie Hatcher, 31, and Timothy Jacobs, 20, both of Pembroke, faced charges of making and possessing illegal firearms, conspiring to make those weapons and conveying false information about explosives. A federal charge of hostage-taking was dismissed earlier this week against Jacobs but remained against Hatcher.

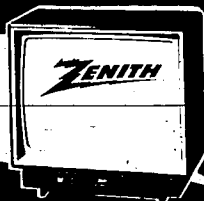

"The jury has made what is going to be a historic verdict, a verdict that people will remember," Hatcher said as he left the courthouse for the first time in two weeks without wearing shackles. "I don't think people realize yet how important this verdict is."

Hatcher and Jacobs never denied walking into The Robesonian office Feb. 1, chaining the door shut and brandishing sawed-off shotguns. They held as many as 20 people during the 10-hour siege, in which no one was injured.

They surrendered to authorities after they were told the governor had agreed to set up a task force to investigate their allegations.

Andrus will pay visit to nuclear repository

By N.S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Gov. Cecil D. Andrus is going to New Mexico to get some answers from the Department of Energy.

Idaho's governor and DOE's director at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory plan to visit the Waste Isolation Pilot Project site near Grants, N.M., Monday.

The WIPP site, the nation's first nuclear waste repository, was to have opened in October, but the Energy Department announced a few weeks ago that the facility would not open on schedule because of safety concerns.

"They started making promises to me years ago," Andrus said in a phone interview from his Boise office. Storing the waste temporarily for the Energy Department was a way Idaho could help the nation's defense effort, he said.

"I've had 15 years of promises, all of them broken," Andrus said. "DOE spent $800 million on the waste repository and now they say it's not going to open. Frankly, I've had all the broken promises I'm willing to put up with."

Andrus said he wants to know what the department's plan is for the waste stored in Idaho.

"If they don't have an answer, then the willingness to be nice and helpful will come to an end," he said.

Following a series of revelations about safety violation cover-ups at DOE facilities, including the Savannah River Plant in South Carolina, the DOE weapons plant at Rocky Flats, Colo., and facilities at Hanford, Wash., Andrus echoed the concern voiced at Thursday's debate by presidential candidate Michael Dukakis about safety violations that have been covered up for 30 or more years.

"The only way we're going to have a strong nuclear industry is if the people of this country are told the truth," Andrus said.

The shutdown of Rocky Flats means fewer barrels of waste. INEL already stores 2.4 million cubic feet of waste for the DOE, but "if DOE continues to play games, then we'll accept no more waste," Andrus said.

INEL receives about one boxcar full of radioactive waste per month from Rocky Flats, the governor said.

"If they don't show us they have an answer then we're going to say keep your boxcar."

Andrus expects to return Wednesday.

County seeks Stover retirement money

BOISE (AP) — Ada County has filed suit against convicted murderer William Murray Stover and the estate of his late wife June, asking for almost $21,400 in restitution for bills paid from a county-indigent medical fund.

The former Twin Falls elementary school principal ran up the bills almost a year ago when he was flown to Salt Lake City for treatment of his slashed wrists after a suicide attempt. Stover tried to kill himself after murdering his wife and two teenage daughters in November 1987.

Since Stover was considered indigent, the bill was paid by the county. But now Ada County commissioners want the money to be repaid from the $29,000 Stover holds in the Idaho Public Employee Retirement Fund.

Stover was sentenced last month to three consecutive indeterminate life prison terms for the slayings. He will be eligible for parole after 30 years.

"We are not treating this any differently from any other case," Commissioner Mike Johnson said Thursday. "When we find there is money available, we try to get that money back for the taxpayer."

Johnson said Stover has refused to authorize the release of the money held in the tightly controlled retirement fund. And Robert Williams, attorney for the estate of Stover's wife, said half of the $29,000 belongs to her surviving adult son and daughter.

From his client's perspective the estate is not responsible for debts that were incurred by Mr. Stover, Williams said.

He said a 1963 statute providing that public employee retirement funds are "inalienable" and cannot be tapped by creditors.

The county's suit requests an order of restitution from 4th District Judge Deborah Bail. If granted, the order would direct the state Public Employee Retirement System to forward the amount owed to the court, which would then repay the county.

St. Benedict's moves to prohibit smoking

By DENISE TURNER
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — "No smoking" is the new rule at Jerome's hospital.

St. Benedict's Family Medical Center, in a step being termed "a good example for the community," has adopted a new policy designed to provide a smoke-free environment for its patients, visitors, physicians and employees.

The new policy, effective this week, allows patients to smoke in their rooms only by order of their physicians. All other areas of the hospital, including "the cafeteria," will be smoke-free.

"Today's health care focus is on wellness," said Bev Taber, the hospital's director of nursing services. "And we feel this is a policy which really makes sense."

Behind the reasons for the policy, noted Taber, are Department of Health and Welfare reports documenting the fact that patients in health care facilities are considered even more susceptible than the general population to the ill effects of passive smoking, particularly children and those with lung or heart conditions.

Taber said St. Benedict's has decided to take action to protect patients from such hazards.

All of the hospital board members were included in the decision making process when this policy was discussed, Taber said. "And the feeling is that we want to make people more aware of the risks of smoking so that, if they have to go out of their way for a cigarette, perhaps they will be less likely to have one."

Taber explained that the policy is indicative of what is happening all across the country, with the approval of the American Medical Association.

"We are just jumping on the bandwagon," she said.

Forest Service emphasizes recreation

By N.S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

SUN VALLEY — The U.S. Forest Service is getting into the outdoor recreation and tourism business. Increased cooperation and attracting more visitors were the focus of a week-long National Recreation Area symposium at the Elkhorn Resort in Sun Valley ending Friday.

"We're not in the camping business anymore. We're in the recreation and lodging business, the tourism business," said Bill McLaughlin of the University of Idaho's Department of Wildland Recreation Management.

About 150 representatives of the Forest Service, the National Park Service, the Bureau of Land Management, the University of Idaho and the travel and tourist industry met this week to share ideas on the management of National Recreation Areas.

"NRAs are unique. They're special places, and they need special attention," Forest Service Chief P. Dale Robertson said. "It is the only congressional designation that has recreation as its middle name. It's the only designation that has recreation in its title."

NRAs, such as the Sawtooth NRA in central Idaho, are sections of federal land specially designated for recreation.

The future of NRAs is in the hands of the people who run them, Robertson said, "Not me up here waving my arms."

Leslie M. Reid of Texas A&M University's Department of Recreation and Parks prophesied a trend in recreation areas. He foresees more visitors with more money and more demands for increased facilities, more TVs, more electric blankets.

"NRAs should all be developed not as showplaces, but as headquarters of regional environmental beautification," he said. "If you can't get your own people to get out of their trucks and pick up a beer bottle, maybe you can teach the people who come to visit to do it."

Robertson emphasized the importance of considering those who visit NRAs as customers, and the No. 1 concern should be customer satisfaction.

"NRAs should be considered environmental and economic assets to the state," Robertson said. The measure of success of any recreation area is "how we use them to benefit the local area, the state and the nation."

"How well are we satisfying our customers? What are they saying when they leave an NRA?" Robertson asked.

The increased emphasis on recreation is not meant to displace other uses such as mining, timber and livestock grazing on Forest Service land, Robertson said.

"We're looking to round out National Forest management," he said.

"In no case do we have to curtail timber or grazing to accommodate increased recreational demands," said Stan Tixier, regional forester of the Intermountain Region of the Forest Service.

Sawtooth National Recreation Area Ranger Carl Pence said he felt the symposium left him with a better clarification of the mission and the identity of the Sawtooth area.

"That mission is to provide a wide variety of recreational opportunities to visitors. Though part of the national forest and a multiple-use area, the NRA primary focus is on recreation," Pence said.

Pence also noted the importance of cooperation among the private sector and state and local governments.

"I can't get anything accomplished without their support," he said. "This session really reinforced the importance of continuing that."

The push toward recreation came primarily from Robertson last year in the form of a "recreation initiative," directing districts to put more emphasis on recreation, Pence said.

It was a major turning point for the Forest Service, he said.

Ivan Miller, representing the Pacific Northwest Region of the National Park Service, reflected the mood of increased cooperation between the Park Service and the Forest Service when he said, "We're all going away with a better idea of how to provide services, a better sense of identity."

In a short meeting with the press following the symposium, Robertson spoke about the Forest Service's beleaguered let-burn policy.

A nine-member task force has been established to evaluate the fire policy and make recommendations by Dec. 15, Robertson said.

The fact remains, however, that fuel build-up leads to catastrophic fires, such as the ones in Yellowstone this summer, he said.

"Just by having nine guys review the policy, you don't change natural ecological laws," Robertson said.

Critic of schools praises phonics, religion

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — One-third of all American students graduate from high school illiterate, says a public-school critic who feels that statistics as evidence of a plot by school officials to promote communism.

Samuel L. Blumenfeld spoke to a group of about 100 in Twin Falls Thursday night, criticizing the public school system and telling parents to transfer their children to private schools or teach them at home.

However, local education officials said Blumenfeld's central objective — use of the phonics method to teach reading — already is a reality in their schools.

Blumenfeld contended that school administrators purposely choose a method of teaching basic reading skills that leads to a high percentage of illiteracy.

School administrators want to "dumb-dumb" the American public, he said.

Blumenfeld used studies such as "Learning to Read: The Great American Debate," by Dr. Jeanne Chall of Harvard, as proof that the phonics method — a method that teaches children to recognize letters and then associate a sound with each letter — is the best way to teach reading.

He said the "look-say" and "whole language" methods are commonly found in public schools. He said they teach children to associate each word with a picture without teaching children how to "sound out" words.

But Twin Falls, Jerome and Kimberly school officials said their schools do use phonics to teach reading.

"I am a total and strong believer in phonics, and our teachers do teach phonics," said Richard Kuger, Jerome superintendent.

After he heard the speech, Kimberly teacher Kent Anderson said Blumenfeld was "right on" with his comments about phonics, but he was disappointed with generalizations made and solutions offered.

Anderson, a sixth-grade teacher who moved his family and took a $10,000 pay cut to teach at a school using phonics, said the solution to education problems is to get parents more involved.

Blumenfeld criticized public schools for neglecting religion from their curriculums and for introducing "death education," which he contends can include having children write their own suicide notes.

He cited as an example a school in the Midwest. He also denounced the idea that learning disabilities such as dyslexia are hereditary or even diseases. He alleged they are diseases thought up by school officials to hide their poor teaching methods.

Crash near Burley kills Utah resident

BURLEY — An 18-year-old Utah resident died Thursday in a one-car rollover 20 miles southeast of Burley.

Stephanie Lynn Thomas of Sandy, Utah, died when the 1980 Ford Mustang she was riding in rolled 1 1/2 times off Interstate 84, state police said.

The driver, Julie A. Hayward, 17, was flown in a helicopter to Salt Lake City for treatment.

Hayward was westbound on I-84 about 4 p.m. Thursday when she fell asleep, police said. She drifted off the interstate into the median, overcorrected and rolled the car.

MVRMC begins faster surgery service

TWIN FALLS — A new "one-stop-shopping" service for surgery patients begins Monday at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Instead of wandering from admissions to the X-ray room to the lab, patients will complete all pre-surgery paperwork and testing in one place, said Sandy Dille, the new pre-admission coordinator.

Hospital officials said Dille is a registered nurse who will be able to answer patients' medical and personal questions such as what to expect from specific anesthetics and whether to bring a bathrobe or toothbrush to the hospital.

"This has been done in other hospitals and it's a step as far as trying to put the patient first," said Suzanne Summers, hospital spokeswoman.

She said the next phase will be to expand the "express-line" service to other patients.

Neveda man dies in Wendell accident

GOVADA — An accident five miles west of Wendell took the life of a Nevada man Thursday.

Dead is 48-year-old Jerry Bosley of Thnapah, Nev. Bosley was alone in his vehicle. He was ejected from the vehicle, which rolled over him.

Bosley was not wearing a seat belt. The accident occurred at 9 p.m.

Governor's office praises teen program

TWIN FALLS — A local program that helps teen parents finish high school received special recognition Friday from the governor's office.

Gov. Cecil D. Andrus announced that the Twin Falls Teen Parent Project is one of 10 Idaho groups earning Youth 2000 Recognition Awards. Presented by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, the awards are the result of a national effort aimed at reducing teen pregnancy, school dropouts and substance abuse.

"These award-winners have shown dedication and determination in their efforts to help Idaho's young people," Andrus said. "It is because of such work as this that our youth will be able to meet the challenges of the next century."

Operated by the state Department of Employment, the Teen Parent Project is located in the former nurses' facility next to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. The project serves teen-age parents by providing high school classes and free day care for their children.

Subdivision plan gains approval

HAILEY — Approval was obtained Tuesday for the final plat of the Sunset Meadows Estates subdivision four miles east of Hailey.

After complying with county regulations on several concerns, developer Robert Glenn of the GMMK Group received approval to proceed with plans for the 46-unit project. The county commissioners' approval was given provided the developers obtain a bond for improvements — primarily streets, although those improvements won't be completed before the final plat is issued, County Commissioner Alan Reynolds said.

Andrus announces appointments

KETCHUM (AP) — Molly Smith of Ketchum and Bonnie Brown of Sun

Valley are among the newest members of the Idaho Commission for Women's Programs.

Gov. Cecil Andrus also appointed Pete Rodriguez of Burley to the State Advisory Council on Aging.

Smith and Betty Penson Ward of Boise were appointed to the panel by Andrus on Tuesday.

Smith, an affirmative action specialist for a construction management firm, fills a new spot on the panel, while Ward, a long-time Idaho journalist, succeeds Debra Ann Heise of Wilder, whose term expired.

The governor also reappointed Chairman Milt Wasson Campbell of Pocatello, Brown, Dorothy Ellis of Meridian and Betty Turner of Moscow.

Other appointees are Ellis Harper of Boise to the Correctional Industries Advisory Board, Resburg Police Chief Blair Sierst to the Tele-type-Writer Communications Board and Wayne Krasloff of Pocatello to the Idaho Beef Council.

Robert Swanson of Pocatello was reappointed to the Beef Council.

Repair attempt leads to car fire

BURLEY — A Burley teen-ager suffered minor burns earlier this week following a bizarre chain of events that started with a backing car.

Tony Alvarado, 17, was taken by ambulance to Cassin Memorial Hospital, where he was treated and released, hospital officials said. Alvarado's left arm, hips and back were burned.

Alvarado's clothes caught fire around 7:10 p.m. Tuesday in front of his home at 1418 Almo Ave., according to Burley Fire Department reports.

Joe Barola of Burley was pouring gasoline into the carburetor of his 1977 Chevrolet Monza when the car backfired, igniting the gas can, according to reports. Barola threw the blazing can behind him, hitting Alvarado. Barola was trying to prime the car's stalled engine, according to reports.

Board approves U.S. 95 money

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Transportation Board has approved $124 million for 40 construction projects on U.S. Highway 95 over the next six years, an increase of $56 million.

Board Chairman John Ohman said Friday that 12 new U.S. 95 projects were added to the Idaho Department of Transportation's six-year primary highway construction program. The department's total six-year budget for primary highways is $239 million.

The previous primary construction program totaled $168 million of the available $138 million for U.S. 95, Idaho's main north-south land link. The mostly narrow, curving highway has been a perennial transportation problem, and has been called a "gout trail" by Gov. Cecil Andrus.

The new program represents the Transportation Department's continuing commitment to the improvement of U.S. 95, Ohman said. "It is vitally important for Idaho that this road be upgraded."

The Transportation Board voted to increase the primary highway budget after the recent designation by Congress of U.S. 95 as a priority route. That allowed the board to spend interstate highway reconstruction and rehabilitation funds to improve 504 miles of U.S. 95 from Eastport to Homedale.

The new projects scheduled for U.S. 95 include:

- During the current fiscal year: Major widening of 0.7 miles of a truck climbing lane south of Moscow, $650,000; major widening of 1.3 miles of the highway to Third Avenue South in Payette, $1.4 million.
- Fiscal 1990: Preliminary engineering of a Coeur d'Alene alternate route, $100,000; construction of passing lanes from Coeur d'Alene to Sandpoint, $2.3 million.

- Fiscal 1991: Intersection improvements at the Prairie Avenue and U.S. 95 intersection in Bonner County, $410,000; widening and resurfacing of the highway from Webb Road to Lapwai, $1.5 million.

- Fiscal 1993: Construction of additional lanes from Wyming Avenue to Idaho Highway 53, $1.44 million; relocation of the highway north and south of Sandpoint, $6.68 million; construction of a Homedale Alternate Route, $1.69 million.

- Fiscal 1994: Reconstruction and realignment of U.S. 95 from Plummer to Worley, $1.44 million; relocation of the highway at Bellgrove Mica Creek, $8.97 million; widening and resurfacing of the Craigmont Business Loop, $850,000.

Ice threatens 3 trapped whales

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Shifting ice may offer a glimmer of hope for three gray whales trapped in the ice-dogged waters off Point Barrow in the Arctic Ocean, a National Marine Fisheries Service official said Friday.

The whales have been stranded 18 miles northeast of Barrow by new ice for more than a week. They are in shallow water only a few hundred feet offshore. The three — an adult and two smaller whales — have been rising to the surface every four minutes or so to breath through two 15-by-30-foot breaks in the ice.

They are five miles from open water. Biologists this week said they feared the breathing holes could freeze over or be slammed shut by shifting ice.

"But the sea-viewers and sea-view analysis show there is some hope," said Ron Morris, the fisheries service's field office supervisor in Anchorage. "We're not closed in for the winter with pressure ridges and things haven't gotten to the point where it's all gloom and doom."

But more than in the position where they are going to go belly up. They are not that stressed."

He said a 96-hour forecast showed a strong potential for ice movement parallel to the Arctic coast. "There is the possibility that this ice will move and open up," he said.

An ice analysis showed that only 70 percent of the ocean in the whales' immediate vicinity was frozen, he said.

Efforts to obtain the services of an icebreaker were unsuccessful Friday afternoon.

"That's where it stands right now. There's nothing definite," he said. Carroll said bowhead whales, which grow up to 60 feet long, would be able to break through the relatively thin ice, and that the slightly smaller gray whales, at 40-50 feet, might be able to also if they left their tiny patch of open water.

"Bowhead are used to it; they've got more mass; they're bigger around," Carroll said. "They have their blowhole way up on top of a big bow on their head. I'm sure these whales could push up through. There's plenty of mass and strength."

One option is the use of explosives to blow holes in the ice; another involves the use of an ice-breaking hovercraft at Prudhoe Bay, some 210 miles southeast of the whales, he said.

Anglicans working to adapt

NEW YORK (AP) — Election of the first woman-bishop in the historic, apostolic succession ruffled some sectors, but safeguards had been erected in advance to cushion the shock.

These aimed, both in the U.S. Episcopal Church in which the election occurred and in the world-wide Anglican Communion of which the U.S. church is a part, to stave off ruptures as a result.

The event, nevertheless, heightened strains on the issue both domestically and internationally in that 70-million-member household of faith, and frayed unity talks with Roman Catholicism and Eastern Orthodoxy.

They also, along with Anglicans, claim a succession of bishops traced back to the time of Jesus's apostles and passed on by that lineage, but without women in it.

Other churches, including some Protestant bodies with bishops, a few women among them, don't maintain that ancient succession.

The first woman chosen for it, the Rev. Barbara C. Harris, 58, of Philadelphia, was elected Sept. 24 by a convention in Boston of the Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts, as suffragan (assistant) bishop.

"For many it is the occasion of great joy and celebration," said Episcopal Presiding Bishop Edmond L. Browning of New York. "For many it is a troubling time" that "will test our commitment to the unity of the church."

It sent tremors through the Anglican world, already in turmoil over the lesser ordination of women clergy in a half dozen of its 28 national branches, including the U.S. Episcopal Church.

Roman Catholic Archbishop John F. Whealon of Hartford, Conn., co-chairman of U.S. Anglican-Roman Catholic talks, called the action a "major setback" to sought-for unity. Similar Roman reactions came on the international level.

Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, leader of the world's Anglicans, said in London said the event would have "far-reaching consequences," and he pledged to uphold unity "as we begin to work out the implications."

Rumblings of dissent also arose, both domestically and internationally. The Rev. Jerome Politzer, president of the Prayer Book Society of the Episcopal Church, said its survey of lay members show a majority oppose women bishops.

The Church of England's Bishop Graham Leonard, a leading opponent of women priests, said the event will cause deep divisions.

World
Clashes in Israel continue

JERUSALEM (AP) — Protesters hurling bottles and rocks clashed with Israeli troops across the occupied territories Friday, the army said.

Arab sources and Israel radio said one Palestinian was killed and five wounded.

Soldiers demolished five homes and "seized" another "belonging to" a Palestinian suspected of assassinating an alleged Israeli collaborator last week, the army command said.

The Palestine Liberation Organization's mainstream Fatah group claimed responsibility for killing three alleged collaborators in the West Bank city of Nablus and warned that others cooperating with Israel would be killed.

Palestinians stayed away from their jobs and closed their shops in accordance with a strike order from underground pro-PLO and Islamic leaders. West Bank cities resembled ghost towns.

Protesters splashed oil on city streets to prevent people from driving their cars. Residents of the Dheisha refugee camp, near Bethlehem, stoned vehicles along the Jerusalem-Hebron highway.

Soldiers fanned out in several Palestinian villages to arrest alleged Arab protest leaders. The move was in keeping with the army's policy of taking the initiative on strike days to forestall violence.

In one such operation, troops opened fire on Palestinian demonstrators in Kfar Malik, killing one and wounding another. Arab reporters said. The army said two protesters were wounded in the clash.

The fatality brought to 297 the number of Palestinians killed since Dec. 8, when the uprising against occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip began. Six Israelis have died.

In a battle in the narrow, winding streets of the casbah in Nablus, troops shot and wounded three Palestinians after they were attacked by dozens of masked protesters, the army command said.

Two Palestinians were shot by Israeli troops in demonstrations in the Gaza Strip. Arab hospital officials said. The army confirmed one of the casualties.

In Jerusalem, two policemen were slightly injured in a brawl with Palestinian demonstrators in the neighborhood of Isawiyyeh, Israel radio reported. Police used tear gas to disperse the demonstrators.

U.S. envoy's actions draw
Lebanese ire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's Christian leaders Friday accused the new U.S. ambassador to Lebanon, John McCarthy, of interfering in the country's affairs and treating it as an American state.

Since his Sept. 24 appointment, McCarthy has been meeting almost daily with feuding Christian and Moslem leaders pressing to settle a crisis that has left the country without a president.

Parliament failed to agree on a successor to President Amin Gemayel's before his six-year term expired Sept. 22. Since then, rival Christian and Moslem cabinets claim they govern Lebanon.

"My government is trying to make a positive contribution in what must be the most complex and confused period of time in the history of Lebanon," McCarthy responded.

"I regret very much if I have offended any one. That was never my intention," he said.

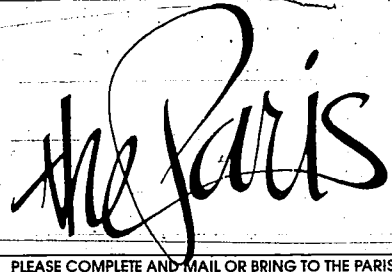

Foreign Ministry Undersecretary Farouk Abil-Lama, a Maronite Catholic, was quoted by several Beirut newspapers earlier Friday as saying he considered McCarthy as only an "American envoy and not an accredited ambassador."

The independent daily An-Nahar, the conservative Al-Anwar and the leftist As-Safir all said that Abil-Lama, a Christian, apparently was angered at McCarthy's refusal to present his credentials to the Christian government.

The Foreign Ministry is located in Christian east Beirut and is controlled by the Christian caretaker cabinet of army commander Gen. Michel Aoun.

Anglicans working to adapt Church news

NEW YORK (AP)—Election of the first woman bishop in the historic apostolic succession rankled some sectors, but safeguards had been erected in advance to cushion the shock.

These aimed, both in the U.S. Episcopal Church in which the election occurred and in the world-wide Anglican Communion of which the U. S. church is a part, to stave off ruptures as a result.

The event, nevertheless, heightened strains on the issue both domestically and internationally in that 70-million-member household of faith, and frayed unity talks with Roman Catholicism and Eastern Orthodoxy.

They also, along with Anglicans, claim a succession of bishops traced back to the time of Jesus's apostles and passed on by that lineage, but without women in it.

Other churches, including some Protestant bodies with bishops, a few women among them, don't maintain that ancient succession.

The first woman chosen for it, the Rev. Barbara C. Harris, 62, of Philadelphia, was elected Sept. 24 by a convention in Boston of the Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts, as suffragan (assistant) bishop.

"For many it is the occasion of great joy and celebration," said Episcopal Presiding-Bishop Edmond L. Browning of New York. "For many it is a troubling time" that will test our commitment to the unity of the church.

It sent tremors through the Anglican world, already in turmoil over the less ordination of women clergy in a half dozen of its 28 national branches, including the U.S. Episcopal Church.

Roman Catholic Archbishop John F. Whealon of Hartford, Conn., co-chairman of U. S. Anglican-Roman Catholic talks, called the action a "major setback" to sought-for unity. Similar Roman reactions came on the international level.

Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, leader of the world's Anglicans, said in London said the event would have "far-reaching consequences," and he pledged to uphold unity "as we begin to work out the implications."

Rumbblings of dissent also arose, both domestically and internationally. The Rev. Jerome Politzer, president of the Prayer Book Society of the Episcopal Church, said its survey of lay members show a majority oppose women bishops.

The Church of England's Bishop Graham Leonard, a leading opponent of women priests, said the event will cause deep divisions.

World Clashes in Israel continue

JERUSALEM (AP) — Protesters hurling bottles and rocks clashed with Israeli troops across the occupied territories Friday, the army said.

Arab sources and Israel radio said one Palestinian was killed and five wounded.

Soldiers demolished five homes and sealed another belonging to Palestinians suspected of assassinating an alleged Israeli collaborator last week, the army command said.

The Palestine Liberation Organization's mainstream Fatah group claimed responsibility for killing the alleged collaborators in the West Bank city of Nablus and warned that others cooperating with Israel would be killed.

Palestinians stayed away from their jobs and closed their shops in accordance with a strike order from underground pro-PLO and Islamic leaders. West Bank cities resembled ghost towns.

Protesters splashed oil on city streets to prevent people from driving their cars. Residents of the Dheisha refugee camp, near Bethlehem, stoned vehicles along the Jerusalem-Hebron highway.

Soldiers fanned out in several Palestinian villages to arrest alleged Arab protest leaders. The move was in keeping with the army's policy of taking the initiative on strike days to forestall violence.

In one such operation, troops opened fire on Palestinian demonstrators in Kfar Malik, killing one and wounding another, Arab reporters said. The army said two protesters were wounded in the clash.

The fatality brought to 297 the number of Palestinians killed since Dec. 8, when the uprising against occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip began. Six Israelis have died.

In a battle in the narrow, winding streets of the casbah in Nablus, troops shot and wounded three Palestinians after they were attacked by dozens of masked protesters, the army command said.

Two Palestinians were shot by Israeli troops in demonstrations in the Gaza Strip, Arab hospital officials said. The army confirmed one of the casualties.

In Jerusalem, two policemen were slightly injured in a brawl with Palestinian demonstrators in the neighborhood of Issawiyeh, Israel radio reported. Police used tear gas to disperse the demonstrators.

U.S. envoy's actions draw Lebanese ire

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon's Christian leaders Friday accused the new U.S. ambassador to Lebanon, John McCarthy, of interfering in the country's affairs and treating it as an American state.

Since his Sept. 24 appointment, McCarthy has been meeting almost daily with feuding Christian and Moslem leaders pressing to settle a crisis that has left the country without a president.

Parliament failed to agree on a successor to President Amin Gemayel's before his six-year term expired Sept. 22. Since then, rival Christian and Moslem cabinets claim they govern Lebanon.

"My government is trying to make a positive contribution in what must be the most complex and confused period of time in the history of Lebanon," McCarthy responded.

"I regret very much if I have offended any one. That was never my intention," he said.

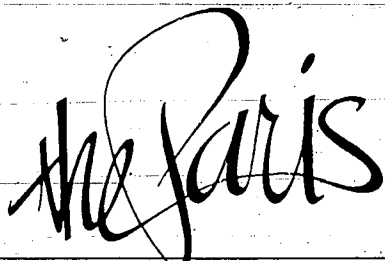

Foreign Ministry Undersecretary Fouad Abil-Lama, a Maronite Catholic, was quoted by several Beirut newspapers earlier Friday as saying he considered McCarthy as only an "American envoy and not an accredited ambassador."

The independent daily An-Nahar, the conservative Al-Anwar and the leftist As-Safir all said that Abil-Lama, a Christian, apparently was angered at McCarthy's refusal to present his credentials to the Christian government.

The Foreign Ministry is located in Christian east Beirut and is controlled by the Christian caretaker cabinet of army commander Gen. Michel Aoun.

What's what

Happiness hindrance

What people want most, as you might expect, is some way to make themselves happy. Two things tend to get in their way: 1. Impossibly high expectations. And 2. Self-hate. So says a scholar who has made a formal study of the happiness hindrance.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today is a banner day for using all of your talents. Contact some progressive friends and go visiting. You're likely to run into some very humorous, and profitable, situations. Be carefree and have fun.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You have some great ideas for weekend activities, so don't let them be ignored. Sports, drama, music, or all three can be included.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Discuss your plans for the future with superiors. They may be able to make some useful suggestions. Be sure to drive carefully.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): If there is a special person you've been wanting to meet, work at arranging a time and place. Don't neglect to do necessary shopping today.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Your business sense is especially keen today, so use it wherever you have the opportunity. Try to please your mate.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Great benefits can be gained if you maintain an enthusiastic attitude while dealing with the public today, but watch what you say.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Listen to be more efficient and productive very cautious in business.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You can make a big hit in some public activities today, but don't over-extend yourself or you'll regret it. Use your common sense.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): If you put a new idea into operation at home, life can be more interesting and harmonious there. Be congenial to your guests.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Adding a bit of humor to your correspondence would be a good idea. Get your shopping done early, and watch for bargains.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Listen to the advice of a financial expert. Show more devotion for your family this evening. They're feeling a bit neglected.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): A good friend can be very helpful with some unique ideas, so be sure you don't ignore this person. Take some time for relaxation.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Do something which you don't really enjoy, but which will please your mate very much. Take no risks while driving today.

If Your Child Is Born Today: He or she will be a "New Age" child, with a gifted ability to understand new scientific procedures and modern attitudes. Your progeny would do well in social service, any scientific field, or any other profession which deals mainly with helping people. There is also a great amount of musical ability which should be encouraged.

Gorbachev downgrades collective farms, supports enterprise

MIKHAIL GORBACHEV
Advocates private farming

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has signaled that the new hope for producing more food is in the hands of farmers, not the collective system built with the blood of millions of Soviets.

In a major speech published Friday on the front pages of Soviet newspapers, Gorbachev didn't say outright that collectivization was a mistake and should be scrapped.

But his stress was no longer on the collectively run farms or on those owned and operated by the state. They have been the backbone of Soviet agriculture since Josef Stalin's bloody drive in the late 1920s to collectivize farms by forcing individual farmers into state-owned and run enterprises.

Gorbachev wants a system in which families or small groups can lease land, choose their own crops and keep most of the profits. There have been experiments along these lines, and he made clear he wanted the nation's whole agrarian sector to move along that path.

He did not mention Stalin in his speech, which was delivered Wednesday to farmers and Communist Party officials, but praised Soviet founder Vladimir I. Lenin for recognizing the value of peasants and giving them more control over the land under the New Economic Policy in the early 1920s.

Without blaming collectivization by name, Gorbachev said the agricultural system had "torn the man from the land, from the means of production." He said people were driven away from farms and into the city in search of more consumer goods and better housing.

Gorbachev, the son of a southern Russian peasant and the Communist Party's top agriculture official before being named general secretary in 1985, made clear, however, that there are no plans to do away with state-run farms.

"Through the lease contract we must open up the potential of kolхозes and sovkhoses," he said. "A person's desire to own land and resources, to create his own family farm, does not contradict socialism comrades. Such an owner will work on land which is public property," he said.

A Western diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the speech showed that in agricultural policy, "ideological restraints are giving way to pragmatism."

On the political level, the diplomat said, Gorbachev is showing his promise at calming conservatives who think his reforms are going too far. In essence, he is "moving away from collectivization without saying he is doing this," said the diplomat.

Gorbachev's implicit criticism of collectivization has become more obvious in his recent speeches. A year ago, he acknowledged that "excesses" marred the transition from private farming to collectivization of agriculture. But, he added, it was "in the final analysis a transformation of great importance."

In March, he said the possibilities of cooperative farms were a "brilliant discovery" of Lenin that had been underestimated and even despised by subsequent rulers.

Gorbachev, increasingly impatient with the pace of reform, made clear that he wants improvements — and wants them by the spring harvest.

The speech appeared designed to address the increasingly open anger of citizens who complain that perestroika — the plan to restructure Soviet society — has had little effect on the quality of their lives.

Yugoslavia will relax austerity measures

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The government announced plans to ease an unpopular austerity program Friday, three days before it meets to consider widespread demands for resignations in its leadership.

Opposition Premier Jozef Zemanjic said Yugoslavia would import 1.5 million in emergency staples — triple the amount announced Oct. 8 by the government — to ease the worst economic crisis in the country in four decades.

Belgrade dailies said the government also would increase wages for workers in profitable companies and in social services.

The Central Committee of four of Yugoslavia's six republics and of ethnically troubled Kosovo province met Friday to iron out political rifts before Monday's meeting of the policy-setting national Central Committee.

National party chief Stipe Suvor has promised a shake-up of top personnel following three months of the economic and ethnic protests.

During the Kosovo meeting, Communists representing the province's ethnic Albanian majority and others from its Slav minority clashed on several issues, Belgrade radio said.

Serbia has demanded more control over its province in mass rallies and prompted an unprecedented power struggle. The mainly Christian minority accuse mainly Muslim ethnic Albanians of harassment.

At the Kosovo meeting, Serb and Montenegro representatives demanded the resignation of the province's mostly ethnic Albanian communist leadership, the official news agency Tanjug said.

In Albania, the Communist Party daily Zeri i Popullit charged Yugoslav's Serbian leader, Slobodan Milosevic, and his followers with spearheading a campaign of discrimination against Albanians similar to apartheid in South Africa.

"It seems the hothouses of Serb chauvinism seek to set not only Kosovo and Yugoslavia on fire, but the Balkans as well," said the newspaper in comments carried by the official Albanian news agency ATA. "We would advise them not to play with fire."

In Yugoslavia's liberal northern republic of Slovenia, its official youth organization demanded direct elections and the "formal abandonment of a one-party system."

U.S. makes plans for scrapping launchers

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — U.S. military officials outlined plans Friday for turning rocket launchers into scrap under the U.S.-Soviet treaty eliminating intermediate-range nuclear weapons.

Starting Wednesday, torches and electric saws will cut in half the first nine of the Pershing 2 launchers at a U.S. Army site in the Hausen section of West Frankfurt.

Work crews will don welding suits and helmets, safety glasses, leather gloves and safety shoes, said Chief W-1 Officer Richard Moore. U.S. and Soviet experts, wearing hard hats and goggles, will watch from behind a glassed-in partition about four yards away, the site supervisor told a news briefing.

Late Friday, the U.S. European Command in Stuttgart said the team of Soviet inspectors would arrive in Frankfurt Monday. It did not say how many Soviets were expected.

All 114 of the Pershing 2 rocket launchers stationed in West Germany will be destroyed in Hausen within a three-year period, said site commander Christopher Evans.

The launchers themselves are flatbed trucks outfitted with beams designed to raise the missiles into a vertical position for firing. The launchers were designed for both transport and firing of the mobile rockets, and each is about 31 feet long.

Evans, a civilian employee of the Army, stressed that the missiles themselves were being taken back to the United States.

"I would like to emphasize that this facility has nothing to do with the actual missile and never has had," Evans told reporters invited to the pre-destruction briefing. This facility only works with the launchers and ground support equipment."

Evans said the launchers will be brought one by one into a covered work area, where the trailer part and the erector mechanism will be cut in half.

The work will take about two days for all nine launchers, and the remains will be taken to a facility in suburban Frankfurt to be used as scrap metal, he said.

All personnel involved with the proper training and certification and there is no, I repeat, no adverse environmental impact," Evans said.

The first nine launchers to be destroyed were stationed at a base near Stuttgart and were hauled away along with the missiles Sept. 1. That was the first U.S. missile removal under the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Force treaty signed by President Reagan and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev in December.

U.S. officials said in September the remaining 420 intermediate-range U.S. missiles will be removed from Western Europe over a 36-month period. Of the missiles deployed, 108 Pershing 2 missiles and 96 cruise missiles were stationed at four bases in West Germany.

Stationing of the missiles had sparked massive protests in Western Europe, including a coordinated demonstration in several cities that drew hundreds of thousands of people to the streets in October 1983. Deployment of the missiles began the following month.

The Soviet Union began removing its missiles from Czechoslovakia and East Germany in February, before the U.S. Senate ratified the treaty.

Under the treaty, the Soviet Union and the United States agreed to eliminate all land-based, intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

Sweden expels Soviet official

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The government has expelled a member of the Soviet trade delegation who was suspected of industrial espionage, the Foreign Ministry said Friday.

The Soviet delegate left last week, said ministry spokesman Martin Hallqvist. He declined to identify him.

"I tried to get information about Swedish industry, economic and industrial conditions," the spokesman said.

No further information was released on the delegate's activities, but Hallqvist said he was caught before Swedish interests could be harmed.

Since spring 1987, the government has granted visas to 10 Soviet and Eastern European diplomats who were monitored by the Swedish security police as intelligence officers, the national news agency TT said.

Pileup injures 15

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Fifteen vehicles collided in a foggy highway Friday, injuring at least 15 people, the state Tanjug news agency reported.

The chain collision slowed down international traffic passing by Zagreb, the country's second-largest city, for several hours, the report said.

Frank grabs Open lead

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A pair of closing birdie putts — one of 35 feet on No. 17 and a tougher one of eight feet on No. 18 — propelled Burley Professional Tracy Frank into the first round lead of the Roy Raymond Ford-BMW Idaho Open golf tournament Friday.

Frank's closing putts substantiated the four-day talk about the Burley assistant who learned his game on this course and came into the event marked as perhaps the best putter in the field.

His four-under par 64 on the short Twin Falls Municipal course gave him a two-stroke lead over the man considered perhaps the second best putter in the field, Twin Falls amateur Perry Hanchev.

They were joined only by Caldwell's Tad Holloway and Las Vegas Tom Storey in the sub-par list as a wind that waxed as the day lengthened caused some early scoring problems.

But 19 other professionals were jammed in the 68 to 70-stroke area, promising competition through the next two days of the event.

The highlight was provided by Twin Falls amateur Bob Skrederstu who carded a hole-in-one on the par three 155-yard 14th hole, the first one in 61 years.

"I hit a six-iron thin, the ball bounced in front of the green, rolled onto the green and into the cup," said Skrederstu of the ace.

For a long while it didn't appear Mundy would be yielding the low scores it often does to this caliber of field.

Several golfers complained the greens were not holding half shots well and this was compounded by exaggerated bounces in front of the green on chip-and-run shots.

Frank was one of several to turn at one under but picked up only one more on the short opening five on the back nine.

Of the two closing putts that changed it all, however, Frank said the closer on No. 18 was the toughest.

"The birdie putt on 17 was about 30 feet, maybe 35, but it was uphill and I didn't have to worry about running the ball too far past," he explained.

No. 18 is a particularly difficult green because of its severe incline and not even the locals like putting it. Out-of-towners consider it largely unfair. With the cup at the top of the green as it was Friday, there is very little chance of stopping a three-foot putt within a few feet of the down-slope of the ball missing the cup hole.

Frank nearly killed the whole day with a chip from just in front of the five-par green that almost ran off the green, about eight feet beyond. One more roll of the ball and he would have been in jail in the long grass, four feet below the putting surface and no green to work with. Additionally, the ball was against the fringe.

"All I was thinking was two putt," Frank admitted. "If the ball went past I doubt it could have stopped within four feet. It might have gone 20."

Not only did he roll it in, it appeared to disappear on about its last momentum turn.

"That's the difference of a four-under and a par round, those two putts," host Pro Mike Hamblin said. "But putting is Tracy's game."

Meanwhile, there's no secret that an amateur's dream is to have the low score in the Open. Hanchev admitted I would love it before it started.

The way he opened, it appeared the romance was on.

"I hit a driver, sandwedge to within two feet for an eagle on the first hole and I thought I was off. I drove well all day. On No. 7 I drove the green and stopped about 20 feet before the cup. Halfway to the cup I would have hit $1,000 that putt was going in but it spun around the cup and ended up coming back at me for John Graham watches his birdie putt on 11 stop short.

Bob Skrederstu of Twin Falls aced the 155-yard 14th hole.

North Gem whips Richfield, 44-26

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

BANCROFT — Who says the inspirational half-time talk has gone the way of the Gipper?

"I just suggested to them in rather forceful terms that I was disappointed with the way they had played the first half," said North Gem Coach Frank Bunce after his fourth-ranked Cowboys rolled in on an 18-16 halftime deficit to knock No. 2 Richfield off a 26-26 tie in a Sawtooth Conference showdown here Friday. "I guess they got the message."

And how.

The Cowboys scored 22 points in a 10-minute, 34-second span of the third quarter, putting themselves squarely in the driver's seat for their first league championship in four years.

"We came out and took a 16-0 lead and I think we just relaxed too soon," said Bunce. "Our kids started making mistakes and found out real soon that they were in a ball game."

The victory, which improved North Gem's season record 5-2 and its conference mark to 5-1, means that the Cowboys can claim the league title outright and a host berth in the state eight-man playoffs with a victory over Camas County in Fair-Field next Friday. Richfield, now 6-2 and 5-2, wraps up at home with Rockland the same afternoon, meaning that the Tigers will have to settle for the Sawtooth's second berth in the playoffs unless North Gem loses its regular-season finale.

Camas can force a postseason, three-team playoff by beating North Gem next week, provided Richfield also wins. That playoff, run on an Oklahoma and then a Kansas format, would be held on a neutral field somewhere in the Magic Valley, probably a week from Monday.

It's also conceivable Camas and Richfield could tie for second place in the final standings if both teams lose next week. In that case the second berth in the playoff would be settled by a third meeting of the season between the two schools.

The key to the Cowboys' fast start Friday — in both the first and third quarters — was the presence of North Gem's running game and the absence of Richfield's Ray Stein, who went into the game with a 135-yard rushing average, had 47

Series starts tonight: Stewart vs. Belcher

By JIM DONAGHY
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Dodgers are hoping to use the words of an opponent to write another improbable finish.

Designated hitter Don Baylor said Oakland wanted to play the New York Mets in the World Series because the Athletics wanted to beat the best team in the National League.

The Dodgers beat the Mets 6-0 in Game 7 Wednesday night for the NL pennant and will host the first game of the Series tonight at 6:30 MDT.

The game will be broadcast in the Magic Valley on Boise station KTVB-TV, channels 7 and 38.

"We're past the point of looking for success," Dodgers catcher Mike Scarsella said. "If you don't have respect by the time you get to the World Series, you won't get it. It doesn't matter what people say. We might not have the best team talent-wise, but we had the best team."

Several Dodgers admit they may not have the best team, they just don't like hearing about it from the opposition.

The Mets rallied to win Game 1 with three runs in the ninth inning off Orel Hersher and reliever Jay Howell.

The next day, Mets pitcher David Cone wrote a first-person article for the New York Daily News and said Hersher was "lucky" to shut out the Mets for eight innings and Howell looked like a "high school pitcher."

The Dodgers used the article as a source of inspiration and beat Cone 6-3 in Game 2.

In Game 7, Hersher proved luck had nothing to do with it by pitching a five-hit shutout.

The Dodgers will need that kind of pitching to shut down the powerful A's who swept Boston in the American League playoffs and won 104 games during the season.

Rookie Tim Lincecum is expected to open the 85th World Series against Oakland's Dave Stewart, 21-12 with a 3.23 earned run average.

Belcher won Games 2 and 5 in the NL playoffs and was the first rookie to win two games in the playoffs since the form-

He finished the regular season 12-6 and won nine of his last 11 decisions.

The Dodgers had a workout Thursday and Manager Tommy Lasorda discussed his pitching plans with coach Ron Perrano.

Although it wasn't officially announced, the Dodgers are expected to start Hersher in Game 2 and John Tudor in Game 3 against former Dodger Bob Welch, 17-9.

The Dodgers, Mets and A's made a three-way deal last winter and the Dodgers ended up with Howell, Jesse Orosco and shortstop Alfredo Griffin. Welch joined the A's in the deal.

"We hated to give up Bob Welch," Lasorda said. "But we needed help in the bullpen. Griffin helped our defense and Orosco and Howell gave us a solid bullpen."

Hersher, the playoff MVP, also started Games 1 and 3 and got 6 innings in Game 4. He pitched 24 2/3 innings to set a playoff record.

Belcher, a right-hander, was acquired from Oakland on Aug. 29, 1987 for pitcher Rick Honeycutt.

The Dodgers were 17-10 in the games started by Belcher during the season and he was 7-2 with a 2.31 earned run average after the All-Star break.

Glenns Ferry wins, locks up playoff spot

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

GLENN'S FERRY — Defending Canyon Conference champion Glenns Ferry locked up a second straight appearance in the state Class A-3 football playoffs Friday night.

Of equal importance, in humbling the visiting Wendell Trojans 27-6 the Pilots brushed aside the challenge of the schedule's last legitimate pretender to the league crown.

The Pilots, who started Wendell 21-0 a year ago, marked their first successive victories over the Trojans since the 1975 and 1976 seasons.

Never headed in the contest,

Glenns Ferry mounted a drive in the waning minutes of the first period. Senior quarterback Duncan Farris rolled out for 34 yards capping an eight-play, 80-yard drive at 10 minutes, 35 seconds of the second period.

Jon Hartway kicked the first of three conversions for a 7-0 lead.

"We got some tools to work with," said second-year Glenns Ferry Coach Bill Brock, who went on to explain that absence of leading rusher Jon Hartway in that series. "Jon's been out with the flu and he's still not feeling real sharp, but we're a team. We don't just rely on one guy. We were running the option and Duncan did a good job of reading the defense."

Exactly seven minutes later, though Hartway's 31-yard punt returned to the Wendell 9 yard line set up Andy Allen's three-yard counter for the Pilots' second score.

Wendell running back Duane Packer fielded the ensuing kickoff at his own 9 and returned the ball to near midfield. Packer carried for a yard before a trio of penalties gave the Trojans a first down at the Pilot 13.

Chad Ruffing found Trevor Pope for the Trojans' only score on the next play, but a bad snap left Wendell down 14-6.

Taking over at its own 20, Glenns Ferry covered the remaining distance in 1-minute, 20-second, scoring when Farris — 5-for-10 passing with no interceptions in the contest — tossed three yards to Steve Alderman for his team's third score with nine seconds left in the first half. Hartway chipped in the point after to make it 21-0.

Defense dominated the second half punctuated only by Farris' second scoring strike. This one to Ross Kast for 20 yards following a holding penalty. Kast, a senior fullback, finished with 69 rushing yards on 11 carries and caught three passes for 55 yards.

Twin Falls wins in front of homecoming crowd

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Bruins assured themselves of their first winning season since 1982 here Friday night by outclassing the Rigby Trojans in a non-conference high school football game in front of a packed homecoming house.

With the victory, the Bruins' record stands at 6-2 with two games remaining on the slate. The two upcoming games will determine whether the third-ranked Twin Falls squad can make the playoffs.

It was a career night for Twin Falls runner Forrest Ward, who ran for 90 yards in the first half and added 99 more in the second half and scored twice in the game, as did teammate Alan Heck.

The game was expected to be a blowout, but wasn't until the second half.

After Heck took the ball in for the opening score, Rigby's Travis Moell connected with Garth Steed for a touchdown just five minutes later. The difference came on the extra point attempt where David McClusky's kick went through the uprights, while Rigby misrouted their snap.

With four minutes left in the half, Ward did the job getting the ball close and thanks to a fakesnap penalty along with an offside penalty by the Trojan defense, Ward easily took it in and after a McClusky kick, the Bruins held a 14-6 advantage.

—Twin Falls wanted to get one more score before the half, calling time out, but the Trojans turned the tables on the Bruins connecting on a 40-yard pass down to the five-yard line.

The Bruin defense held Rigby there as they had to settle for a 26-yard field goal by Lane Pursner cutting the lead to 14-9 at the half.

Were the Bruins looking past the 1-5 Trojans? "I kinda think so," said Twin Falls Coach John Jund. "I had no doubt in my mind that they'd take control in the second half."

Take control they did, scoring early in the third quarter on an eight-play, 65 yard drive, capped off by a Heck touchdown run.

The big play on that drive came on a third-and-long play when John Horner connected with Steve McLaughlin for a 21 yard gain keeping the drive alive.

In the fourth, Heck figured it was time he had the ball and romped 75 yards deep into Rigby territory just to see it brought back because of a penalty. Heck did help out the existing drive with a 12-yard run—but Horner connected with Brian Reed on a 12-play drive that put the game away.

Then it was time for the defense to take over as they held Rigby without a first down for the first 21 minutes of the second half.

Market finishes week down 17 points

U.S. pledges $1.3 billion to bail out 11 Texas S&Ls

NEW YORK — The stock market rode out alternating waves of buying and selling to finish little changed Friday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up about 14 points in early trading and down about 11 at its afternoon low, closed with a 18 loss at 2,133.18.

For the week the average was down 17.07 points. Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 8 to 7 in the daily tally of nationwide trading in New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 740 up, 647 down and 529 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 160.24 million shares, up from 154.53 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 188.61 million shares.

Analysts said the rise at the outset was blunted by weakness in the dollar and an upswing in interest rates, which had fallen in early trading.

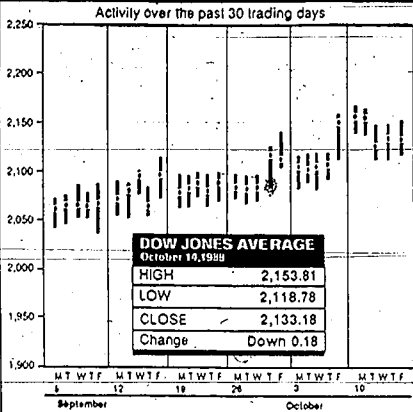

In the economic news, the government reported that the producer price index rose 0.4 percent in September. That was in line with advance estimates on Wall Street.

Meanwhile, figures showing flat industrial production and a 0.4 percent drop in retail sales last month provided support for the belief that economic growth was slowing to a more moderate, and presumably more sustainable, pace.

Brokers also said traders drew some encouragement from a favorable International Business Machines earnings report.

IBM climbed 1/4 to 110 1/2 in active trading after the company posted third-quarter profits of $2.0 a share, up from $2 in the comparable period last year.

MARKET REPORT

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose 0.38 to 316.70, and S&P's 500 stock composite index was up 0.28 at 275.50.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market gained 1.13 to 381.59. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 302.55, up .51.

AP International Business Machines earnings report.

IBM climbed 1/4 to 110 1/2 in active trading after the company posted third-quarter profits of $2.0 a share, up from $2 in the comparable period last year.

Hospital Corp. of America gained 3/4 to 48 1/4. A management group raised its offer to buy the company from $47 a share to $51 a share.

Wickes Cos. tumbled 3/4 to 7 1/4. A group of executives said it planned to withdraw a $12-a-share bid for Wickes stock, citing a deterioration in the company's operating income.

Polaroid rose 2 1/4 to 40. Brokers cited speculation that the company, which is the subject of a $42-a-share takeover bid by Roy Disney's Shamrock Holdings, might soon attract a rival offer or offers.

Sears Roebuck, which had been bid up of late on talk of a possible restructuring or other deal, fell back 1 1/2 to 41.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $2.17 billion, or 0.09 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks edged up .12 to 155.76.

U.S. pledges $1.3 billion to bail out 11 Texas S&Ls

WASHINGTON — Federal regulators on Friday pledged $1.3 billion to rescue 11 insolvent savings associations in Texas, selling them to a cable television company.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Board said the Adam Corporation Group of Bryan, Texas, a cable television station operator, has bought Dan A. Adam; it is investing $65 million now and an additional $5 million by the end of 1990 to acquire the 11 institutions.

They are being merged under the name of Olney Savings and Loan Association. All deposits, even those over the insurance limit, are transferred, the bank board said.

So far this year, regulators have closed or merged 135 insolvent S&Ls nationwide, 53 of them in Texas and Oklahoma. Those states were hard hit by the collapse of oil prices in 1986 and a subsequent break in real estate prices.

Many of the failures in Texas have been blamed on fraud and the abuse of the state's regulatory system.

Rep. Doug Barnard, D-Ga., said a study to be published next week by his House Government Operations subcommittee shows that three-quarters of all S&L insolvencies appear to be linked in varying degrees to misconduct.

U.S. pledges $1.3 billion to bail out 11 Texas S&Ls

At the end of June, there were 7,350 pending federal criminal investigations involving 357 failed institutions and thousands of open institutions, Barnard said in a statement released by an aide.

The Adam Corporation transaction is the ninth large rescue package in Texas since May, bringing total federal assistance to institutions in the state to $1.5 billion.

The accelerating pace of S&L closings and forced mergers by the bank board, which regulates the nation's 3,000 thrift institutions, has spurred new debate in Congress on how to reform the industry to health.

The bank board has not acknowledged that it needs more money, but nearly all private analysts say its insurance fund will have to be bailed out, very possibly with taxpayer funds. So far, all of the money used in rescues has come from fees charged the industry.

Legislation creating a blue-ribbon commission to study the problem and recommend a solution early next year is expected to pass Congress before it adjourns next week.

Reagan signs bill aimed at non-gasoline vehicles

WASHINGTON — President Reagan on Friday signed into law a bill aimed at spurring the manufacture of vehicles that can run on fuels other than gasoline.

The bill is a landmark in the quest for alternative forms of energy. Reagan said the legislation has been billed by its supporters as providing a means of lowering U.S. dependence on foreign oil, cutting pollution and curbing the trade deficit.

"The forms of energy encouraged by this bill are already in use," the president said. "Methanol, for example, is used in the Indianapolis 500 and in other race cars because it simultaneously enhances performance and safety.

"And cars that run on methanol have the potential to reduce emissions by an amazing 50 percent and improve efficiency," Reagan added.

The aim is to switch motorists from natural gas to methanol, ethanol and other fuels by creating incentives for manufacturers to develop vehicles to run on these substances, either alone or in at least a 50-50 blend with gasoline.

Each alternative-fuel car produced and sold would earn a manufacturer credit that would make it easier for the company to meet the government's minimum fuel economy requirements for its entire fleet.

A further incentive would be authorization for the Department of Energy to begin spending $18 million in October 1989 to buy and test alternative fuel cars, trucks and buses.

Advocates of the fuel switch-over say the United States has abundant supplies of natural gas, the coal used to produce methanol and the grain that is distilled and blended into gasoline to produce ethanol.

In the Roosevelt Room signing ceremony at the White House, Reagan said "this legislation also opens up new markets for natural gas and coal, our two most plentiful energy resources in this country."

"I believe we will look back on this as the single most important act of the 106th Congress," Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., said.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"Even if you're on the right track, you'll get run over if you just sit there."

— Will Rogers.

Today's South was on the right track in playing for a crossruff. Unfortunately he failed to notice the caution signal around the bend. Using proper technique, South cashed his side-suit high cards before starting the crossruff. He took the first spade, cashed the club and diamond aces and ruffed a diamond. A club was ruffed low in dummy and a third diamond was ruffed with the trump eight. This did not survive. West overruffed and returned a trump, putting an end to the party. South was left with only nine tricks, 100 points to the defense.

After ruffing with the three and four of trumps, South should take no chances on being overruffed. And instead of ruffing the third diamond with his eight, he should ruff with a high trump. He continues the crossruff with high trumps, and when his total reaches nine tricks, he has a trump left in dummy (the nine) and one in his hand (the eight). Finally, with the lead in dummy, he ruffs a diamond with his eight of trumps, assuring himself of 10 tricks regardless of where the trump-10 might lie.
