President, lottery votes top Magic Valley ballot

By ANNETTE CARY Times-News writer

Heavy Idaho turnout — A3

TWIN FALLS — Idaho voters go to the polls today to elect a president, to decide on a state lottery and to pick congressmen, legislators and some county officials. The polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. If you haven't registered, you're too late. You must be registered in your county to be allowed to vote today. If you live in Twin Falls and need a ride to the polls, Randy Hansen Chevrolet will have a van available. You can call the dealership between 8 a.m. and 7 p.m. to arrange a ride. State liquor stores will be closed today, and bars may not serve anything harder than beer or wine until after voting stops at 8 p.m. Registration is up from the May primary in most counties. But in Twin Falls, fewer voters have registered than for the 1984 presidential election. County officials say there are 30,160 voters registered for today's election, up from the 25,670 registered for the May primary. In 1984, 30,638 voters were registered in Twin Falls County for the November election. Here's what you'll be voting on today: • H.J.R. No. 3 A "yes" vote will mean you want a state lottery. A "no" vote will mean you do not. The language of the ballot issue for a constitutional amendment could be confusing because of double negatives in the wording.

The amendment says the state would prohibit any lottery — except a state lottery. The amendment will also allow pari-mutuel betting and charitable games of chance. • Advisory vote on an amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The amendment would let Congress raise its own pay only for future sessions — so that an election would always be held between any pay raise vote and the date the pay raise takes effect. A "yes" vote would advise the state Legislature to ratify the amendment. • President and vice president. Republican, Democrat, Libertarian and independent candidates are all listed on the ballot. Beneath the president and vice president's names are the names of each party's four Electoral College candidates. Winning electors will meet in the governor's office Dec. 19 to cast Idaho's votes for president and vice president. • Congress. Both Idaho's congressmen are up for election this year, but Magic Valley voters vote only for the 2nd District representative. Democratic incumbent Rep. Richard

Keep eye on these 4 states

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After a year-long presidential campaign, how long will Americans have to wait Tuesday night to find out who won? Four states where the polls close early could provide the answer. The winner could be known early if Republican George Bush is making a strong showing. But if Democrat Michael Dukakis is doing well, it could be a long night with the result hanging on returns from the West Coast. The four states cited by election analyst William Schneider of the American Enterprise Institute are Connecticut, Kentucky, Ohio and Vermont. "If Dukakis wins Vermont and Connecticut, it's good news for the Democrats," said Schneider. "Keep tuned. If Dukakis wins Kentucky and Ohio, it's very good news for the Democrats." On the other hand, he said, "If Bush wins all of those states, it ought to be a good night for him." Dukakis campaign spokesman Leslie Dach said, "We'll be looking clearly at places like Vermont and Connecticut. ... We'd like to win, which we think would be a strong signal for us." He also cited the big Midwest industrial states, and then "as we head further out, Colorado, Montana and South Dakota" are states where the Democrat hopes to show strength. George Bush sent his case to the voters Monday, leading in the polls as he pledged a "steady hand" to build on the accomplishments of the Reagan years. Michael Dukakis campaigned into overtime, vowing a "November surprise" that would land him in the White House. Some polls suggested Bush's support might be ending as both men raced across America in a final-day search for votes. Both campaigns spent nearly $1 million apiece on competing half-hour appeals on network television, and the vice president also aired a new five-minute commercial that sharply attacked his Democratic rival. "It's in the hands of the gods and the American people," the vice president said before heading for Houston and the final rally of his candidacy. "I'm going to do my best to be a fine president and a good leader and somebody you can be proud of," Dukakis said in the closing commercial of his campaign. "No retreat, baby, no surrender," said Democratic running mate Lloyd Bentsen, echoing rock star Bruce Springsteen. Dukakis was on a 48-hour campaign blitz through 8,500 miles that wouldn't end until election morning in Boston. He held a crowd of 20,000. See CAMPAIGN on Page A2

Sakharov warns of ill consequences if Gorbachev's efforts fail

The Associated Press

BOSTON — Nobel laureate Andrei Sakharov, on his first trip to the West, warned Monday that Mikhail Gorbachev's political restructuring of the Soviet Union faces a domestic backlash that could endanger world peace. The 67-year-old physicist and father of the Soviet dissident movement said political prisoners continue to languish in labor camps while new laws have increased police powers and restricted public demonstrations.

"It seems to me that this is extremely dangerous and could destroy the process of perestroika (political and economic restructuring) and turn it around," Sakharov said. "If Gorbachev's reforms do not succeed, he warned, internal failure could be accompanied by external expansion. For the preservation of the system, expansion would be a necessity. ... It would be a catastrophe from which would arise a great threat to all humanity." Sakharov spoke through a translator at a two-hour news conference promoting the International Foundation for the Survival and Development of Humanity, of which he is a board member. The foundation, formed in January by Soviet and American scientists and educators, is trying to raise approximately $10 million worldwide to support research on global problems, including arms control, hunger, disease, energy conservation and pollution. Sakharov, who received the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize for his human rights activities, portrayed the current political climate in his homeland in starkly contrasting terms. He said five "prisoners of conscience" who were convicted of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda have been released in recent days, but listed eight others who remain in prison camps or exile. He called perestroika "a genuine, real process" but said the crackdowns on demonstrations, including the violent breakup of a meeting in Minsk on Oct. 30, gave him "very great anxiety" over the course of the reforms. Asked to explain these contradictions, Sakharov said: "I think it was not my words that were contradictory but the situation itself. I have purposefully accentuated the positive and negative elements so that this contradiction would be clear." Sakharov is scheduled to spend two weeks in the United States visiting relatives, undergoing medical tests and attending the new foundation's first board meeting outside the Soviet Union from Nov. 13-17 in Washington. He is traveling without his wife, Yelena Bonner, who remained in Moscow. He had some kind words for the United States, saying that he respects America for its democracy, work ethic, dynamism, self-criticism and generosity. "The phrase you often hear in the U.S. is, 'Can I help you?'" he said.

New estimate says atom-smasher's price tag may climb to $6.4 billion

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration's most ambitious civilian scientific project, a gigantic atom smasher called the Superconducting Supercollider, may cost nearly 50 percent more than the $4.4 billion estimated by the Department of Energy, according to a new study by the Congressional Budget Office. The project that President Reagan has called a "doorway ... to a new world" also risks draining money from other areas of basic research, the congressional study said. It noted that the federal research budget is already so tight that the National Institutes of Health manages to fund only one-third of grant applications for biomedical studies it considers worthy of support. The Congressional Budget Office said that if the cost of the supercollider follows the pattern set by the last two, much smaller particle accelerators built by the Department of Energy in recent years, the price tag could be expected to rise by as much as 46 percent to $6.4 billion. Even at its officially estimated cost, the report noted, the project would consume 7 percent of the entire federal budget for basic research at the current level for half a decade and double the proportion now spent on high-energy physics.

The 120-page study notes that the cheapest alternative — besides simply postponing the project — would be to join CERN, the European nuclear research organization based in Geneva, in building its own next-generation machine, the Large Hadron Accelerator. Both the cost and the power of this accelerator would be about one-third of the supercollider's. The congressional study conceded that this makes the European machine potentially less rewarding in scientific terms, while American participation would have the effect of shifting the focus of world research in high-energy physics from the United States to Europe.

Doomsayers try to find ways to educate world on warming

The Associated Press

HAMBURG, West Germany — Ecological doomsayers and wary scientists gathered Monday for a brainstorming session on how to educate people about the consequences of global warming without scaring them. In an address opening the World Congress on Climate and Development, former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt spelled out the ecological evils that have plagued the Earth with droughts and floods and threatened ultimate destruction of the environment. He also pointed to the emergence of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and the imminent change of the U.S. presidency as a hope for new attention on the environment. "I think one should not be too optimistic about it, but regard it as a first step that Washington and Moscow have made some progress on arms control and regional conflicts," Brandt said at a reception following his speech. The congress, which has drawn more than 400 participants from East and West and from industrialized as well as developing countries, aimed to get the diverse nations and interests working together to slow down a trend that portends drastic environmental change. Former Swedish Prime Minister Ola Ullsten pointed to this year's drought in the United States as an example of climatic consequences that are "emptying the world's food baskets." If U.S. farmers are hit by an equally severe drought in 1989, food shortages will result, Ullsten said. "We are not talking about the distant future, we are talking about next year," he warned.

Stallings, Libertarian; Donovan Bramwell and Republican Dane Watkins are running.

County ballot measures. In the Magic Valley, only Twin Falls County voters have county measures. They will vote on a measure directing the county to add up to $1 a month to all residents' telephone bills for a countywide 911 emergency telephone system. They will also cast advisory votes on whether the county should allow liquor to be sold by the drink on Sundays.

Legislative candidates. Voters in all eight Magic Valley counties will vote in the District 25 federal election. The only contested race is Republican Larry Anderson vs. Democrat William Chisholm for the Senate. Republican House candidates Gary Robbins and Ralph Peters are both unopposed.

Other contested races in Twin Falls County include Republican Joyce McRoberts vs. Democrat Walter Mueller for the Senate; and for the House, Republican Ron Black vs. Democrat Sally Gulek, Republican Cole vs. Democrat Joe Gulek, Republican Lee Barnes vs. Democrat Virginia Ash, and Republican Doug Jones vs. Democrat Alvie Johnson.

In District 24, covering the east and end of the valley, the only contested race is between Republican Lynn Tomingas and Democrat Dick Russell for the Senate.

In District 22, covering the northern Magic Valley, Republican John

Computers recovering from virus

Knigh-Ridder Service

CHICAGO — Computer users struggled Monday to catch up with the flood of communications that had backed up during last week's virus-related shutdown of major computer systems.

As the virus was traced over the weekend to the work of a sophisticated vandal, users of the affected Internet network began working on the system again — and breathing a sigh of relief with the apparent lack of any lingering effects or hidden damage from the attack.

Major systems, such as those at universities, reported Monday they were back on the network and that "floods" of backed-up electronic mail messages were pouring into their computer mailboxes.

The virus' designer was identified as a 23-year-old graduate student at Cornell University, Robert T. Morris Jr., whose father is chief scientist at the National Computer Security Center in Bethesda, Md.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government will not change its position regardless of which party wins the U.S. elections, Nicaragua's former ambassador to the United States said in an article published Monday.

"Facing a new administration, whether it be Democrat or Republican, Nicaragua's position will be the same: The search for a negotiated solution to the conflicts, within the mark of absolute respect for the principles of international law and sovereignty and self-determination of the people," Carlos Tunnerman said.

In California that Democrats would kick Bush "right out of our future" — and then flew off into the night.

Democrats expressed confidence they would command majorities in the 101st Congress that will govern alongside the new president. They also angled for modest gains in the dozen statehouse races on Tuesday's ballot.

Both presidential campaigns relied on their 30-minute network commercials to reach the millions of voters that the pollsters said hadn't yet chosen a candidate with certainty.

Bush's blended snippets of biography, family tenderness and praise from Reagan with a final taped appeal from the vice president. "Americans are better off that they were eight years ago, and if you elect me president you will be better off four years from now than you are today," he said.

Networks to make call on electoral vote basis

WASHINGTON — The three major television networks will declare a winner of the 1988 presidential race as soon as their projections show a candidate collecting the necessary 270 electoral votes, but only if those votes come from states where the polls have closed.

The policy represents an attempt by ABC, CBS and NBC to avoid criticism they received after past presidential elections in which they used exit polls to declare a winner in some states, even as voting in those states continued.

Under it, the three networks will not use their surveys to call the winner of any state until a majority of the polls in that state are closed.

"But," said Roone Arledge, president of ABC News, "when a candidate has achieved 270 electoral votes, we will report that."

That number represents a majority of the 538 electoral votes.

Today's weather We'll vote for this forecast any time

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding:
Today, rain likely. Highs mid 40s. Southwinds 10 mph. Tonight, chance of evening showers, otherwise partly cloudy. Lows near 30. Wednesday, cloudy. Highs mid 40s.

Camas Prairie and Wood River Valley:
Today, snow likely except rain below 5,000 feet. Accumulations near 3 inches. Highs upper 30s to lower 40s. Tonight, chance of evening snow showers, otherwise partly cloudy. Lows lower 20s. Wednesday, cloudy. Highs upper 30s to lower 40s.

Northern Utah and Nevada:
Utah — Scattered showers today. Decreasing clouds and showers tonight then partly sunny on Wednesday. Nighttime lows in the 30s. Highs today in the 50s and Wednesday from 45 to 50.

Nevada — A slight chance of showers today. Ending over the west by the afternoon. Snow level between 5,000 and 6,000 feet. Partly cloudy tonight and Wednesday. Highs mostly in the 50s. Overnight lows in the mid 20s to near 40.

Summary:
The National Weather Service says a storm system off the West Coast spread clouds over all of Idaho Monday afternoon and was moving across the Gem State Monday night. The snow level over northern Idaho will be near 4,500 feet and near 5,000 feet over the south. Another storm system was expected to arrive in Idaho late Wednesday afternoon.

By late afternoon Monday, clouds had spread across all of Idaho but no precipitation was reported. Winds were mostly light with speeds generally less than 10 mph. The Magic Valley was the exception with winds of 10 to 15 mph. Midday temperature readings were cool with valley stations in the 40s, and mountain stations only in the 30s.

The warmest temperature in the state Monday was 56 degrees at Emmett. Sunday reported the coldest at 15 degrees.

The extended outlook for Southern Idaho shows a chance of rain valleys and snow mountains Thursday and a slight chance Friday and Saturday. Highs in the mid 40s to mid 50s. Lows in the mid 20s through the 30s.

Elsewhere in the nation Monday, the highest temperature was 96 degrees at McAllen, Texas. The lowest was 8 degrees at Lake Yellowstone, Wyo.

state where the polls close early and the vote is tabulated fairly quickly is Illinois.

The results from Chicago should indicate how successful Dukakis was at persuading blacks to get out and vote for him. A large black turnout in Chicago is essential for a Democrat to overcome Republican majorities in the city's suburbs and elsewhere in the state.

If Dukakis doesn't get that majority, it would indicate he's probably in trouble wherever black turnout is a factor.

Other states to watch — for various reasons — are Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island and West Virginia.

Turnout exceeding 400,000 forecast

By The Associated Press

Despite the absence of any statewide-elective offices on today's ballot, Idaho election officials said the heated debate over a proposed state-run lottery could push voter turnout over 400,000 for only the third time ever.

"There's a lot of activity out there," Deputy Secretary of State Ben Yursa said. "Certainly, the lottery issue and the built-in advantage of getting the absentee for the presidential election have been factors."

The anti-lottery campaign, meanwhile, kept the pressure on as Attorney General Jim Jones used the eve of the election to re-issue his warning that the proposition would open the way to high-stakes gambling.

Lottery backers continued discounting the charge, renewing their claim that Jones' office was involved 18 months ago in drafting the proposition. He has just begun to criticize. Jones repeated his denial of any involvement.

An estimated 575,000 eligible Idahoans registered to vote with a number of the state's larger counties reporting record registration in a rush during the closing weeks of the fall campaign.

Most county election officials attributed the estimated 10 percent hike in registration from the May primary to debate over the proposed constitutional amendment to allow the lottery.

And while the May primary saw just 25 percent of the registered voters go to the polls, the combination of the presidential balloting and the lottery should run turnout up to 70 percent or more.

Signaling that likelihood, Yursa said, was a huge demand for absentee ballots throughout the state. Several counties ran out of absentee ballots, he said, and demand "is up everywhere."

Only two daily newspapers in the state endorse presidential candidates, The Idaho Statesman in Boise and the Times-News in Twin Falls, and both backed Bush last weekend. State Democratic leaders conceded Bush's attacks—in the closing two months of the campaign were devastating on their nominee, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis.

Idaho's record turnout was 446,000 in 1980 when the presidential election was augmented by the heated U.S. Senate race between Democrat Frank Church and Republican Steve Symms. The only other time turnout was over 400,000 was four years ago for President Reagan's re-election. Over 421,000 voters went to the polls then.

The candidates wrapped up their campaigns on Monday with the most hotly contested races involving incumbent state legislators. The Democratic minority hoped to pick up some ground in both chambers.

Stallings among 6 refusing pay boost

State News Service

WASHINGTON — Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, is one of six U.S. representatives who has refused a 3 percent pay raise announced by a survey published by Ralph Nader's Center on Congressional Accountability.

The list of pledges was sent to all Congressional incumbents and challengers. Of those questioned, only 22 representatives and one senator — Dennis Deconcini, D-Ariz., responded.

The key pledge is a refusal to accept any pay increase enacted into law during the 101st Congress.

Very few incumbents want to address this issue, said Nader coordinator Craig McDonald. They're sitting pretty, most have a 99 percent chance of being re-elected — they just don't want to talk about it.

The Center on Congressional Accountability, formerly known as Stop the Salary Grab Campaign, is opposed to Congressional salary raises and to honoraria or speaking fees.

"We believe they (congressmen) are paid adequately now," McDonald said.

In October 1987 Congress approved a pay increase that raised salaries from $77,400 to $80,000. The Center calls for a mandatory roll-call vote for new legislation. The 1987 Salary Act automatically approves pay raises in the absence of formal opposition.

Stallings accepted the last pay increase, but used it to establish a scholarship fund in the Second District.

One scholarship is awarded per year to provide job retraining, an aide in Stallings' office said.

Larry Craig, 4th term incumbent for Idaho's First District, was among the majority of representatives who did not return the survey. Craig's press secretary, David Fish, said that the questionnaire had not been answered because it was inappropriately addressed.

Craig is opposed to new pay increases on principle, Fish said. Craig voted against a proposed 4 percent pay increase for federal employees last June.

Both Idaho senators, Steve Symms and James McClure, are on record as opposing pay increases, but neither returned the questionnaire.

Nagel heads environmental arm of HAW

—BOISE (AP) — Joe Nagel, a former member of the administration of Gov. Cecil Andrus, has been named new chief of the environmental arm of the state Department of Health and Welfare.

Nagel, who once headed Health and Welfare on an acting basis in 1975-76, was named Monday to succeed Ken Brooks, who resigned to accept an Oregon job with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. The appointment was announced by Health and Welfare Director Rich Donovan in a meeting with environmental staff in Boise.

Nagel, director of Parks Planning and Resource at King County, Wash., will head the Division of Environmental Quality as of Feb. 6, Donovan said.

Nagel, 46, heads a staff of 700 full-time employees and 2,000 part-time employees in the Seattle area. He managed Idaho Health and Welfare operations as a regional director in northern Idaho before moving to Washington in 1982.

Nagel was an environmental affairs assistant to Andrus 1977-80 when Andrus was U.S. secretary of the Interior.

Before that, he worked for the governor's office and other state agencies in a variety of programs.

Snake flows cut before hearing day

POCATELLO (AP) — Flows on the South Fork of the Snake River have been cut even before a hearing could consider the possible damage to fish and wildlife on the stream.

A hearing to determine if flows legally can be decreased to 750 cubic feet per second was scheduled in Pocatello this morning. A coalition of Idaho sportsmen's groups brought suit against the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, seeking a court order to halt flow reduction at Palisades Dam.

Irrigators say the outflow at the dam must be lessened to ensure adequate water is available next year in the event the state suffers its third straight year of drought.

The sportsmen are seeking a permanent injunction against reduced flows until an environmental assessment is done to determine how they will affect the fish.

The coalition claims the Bureau of Reclamation has not conducted an environmental impact statement required by federal law. And they say the river flow should be maintained at 2,000 cfs until that study is completed.

The releases from Palisades were cut from 1,100 cfs to 750 cfs Saturday to store irrigation water, said Mike Beus, a bureau hydrologist in Burley.

Irrigators recommend a flow of 550 cfs and the Idaho Fish and Game Department is pushing for a 1,200-cfs release to sustain the fishery.

Poverty has increased despite the economic recovery

WASHINGTON — George Bush wants a "kinder, gentler" nation, free of social and racial antagonisms that would divide Americans. He accuses Mitt Romney of being "driven in pointing out that the rich got richer and the poor got poorer under Reagan-Bush policies."

What are the facts? From an economic standpoint, the most appropriate comparison is between 1987 (the latest data) and 1978, comparable years of high economic activity. During 1978-1987, real income fell for the poorest 40 percent of Americans an amount of middle income? 20 percent, while the upper 40 percent gained. More striking, income for the richest 5 percent went up by more than 13 percent. However, even in comparison with the recession year of 1980, real incomes have fallen for the lowest 20 percent and barely increased for those somewhat better off. Meanwhile, incomes for the top 5 percent grew by a staggering 22 percent. Whatever the year of comparison, the gap between rich and poor is now the widest in the post-war era.

Not surprisingly, more families were pushed into poverty. In 1987, 32.5 million Americans — 13.5 percent — lived below the poverty line (a meager $9,056 for a family of three). This reflects higher poverty rates than in 1980 for all races. Twenty-one percent of all children — 13 million youngsters — live in poverty, up from 18 percent in 1980. Nearly one of every two black children is poor.

Perhaps more disturbing, however, is the increase in the very poor, the outcast and most vulnerable in society. The number of families with incomes below $5,000 is up 65 percent since 1978 and 26 percent since 1980. It remains that the economic conditions should prevail after six years of economic recovery. Rising poverty in a growing economy is unprecedented in our postwar history. What accounts for it?

Part of the explanation surely lies with the unbalanced nature of this economic expansion. Real wages have failed to grow during the 1980s as the "supply-side miracle" failed to materialize. And despite the fall in the unemployment rate to pre-Reagan levels, long-term unemployment is higher, pushing up the number of poor.

However, much of the rise in poverty can be traced to the Reagan-Bush budget policies, which constituted an attack on the poor, legitimized, as David Stockman confessed, by the rhetoric of "trickle-down."

First, the regressive tax cut of 1981 helped increase income inequality. Then the Reagan-Bush budgets, despite occasional backsliding in election years, consistently sought to reduce funding or benefits for programs assisting the poor. And, in spite of congressional resistance, they have significantly succeeded.

The strongest evidence for this is the effectiveness of federal benefit programs in reducing poverty. At the end of the 1970s, these programs raised 18.9 percent of families potentially in poverty above the poverty line. In 1987 the figure dropped to 10.5 percent. And the "poverty gap" — the total dollar amount by which the poor fall below the poverty line — is up by 52 percent since 1978 and by 26 percent since 1980.

Republicans often claim — as Sen. Dan Quayle did in the vice presidential debate — that policies cannot be at fault because "we are spending more in poverty programs today than we were in 1981." Unfortunately, that comparison is grossly misleading. First, the need has grown far more rapidly than spending. Second, about 62 percent of the increase in spending on low-income programs went to Medicaid and subsidized housing, both of which distort the picture of low-income funding.

Expenditures on Medicaid increased by an enormous 78 percent, driven primarily by rapid increases in the costs of medical services; this hardly has improved the well-being of the poor. Indeed, Medicaid covered as much as 65 percent of the eligible poor in the late 1970s and now covers only 46 percent — a striking example of losing ground. Dollar outlays on subsidized housing also rose in the 1980s — driven primarily by long-term commitments made before 1981. Inflation-adjusted funding after 1981 (particularly reflecting a change in funding mechanisms) fell by 81 percent.

In other low-income programs, the results of this administration's priorities emerge more clearly. Entitlements per poor person fell by about 4 percent in real terms. The administration's 1981 attack on aid for families with dependent children threw nearly a half-million families off the program, with income losses on the order of $1,500 to $2,600 per year. Food stamps were reduced even more, with a million recipients cut off the rolls and a decline of about 15 percent in inflation-adjusted spending; even in child nutrition programs, real spending has fallen during the 1980s. Unemployment compensation, while not strictly means-tested, was "reformed" to reduce eligibility in 1981; benefits now have fallen to a record low of about 30 percent of the entitlement.

These entitlement reductions, however, look positively benign in comparison with the cuts in discretionary programs for the poor. Apart from subsidized housing, inflation-adjusted funding was up by 29 percent from 1981 to 1988, led by a two-thirds reduction in training and employment services. Housing assistance for the elderly is down 47 percent; social services down 31 percent; community services down 46 percent; low-income energy assistance down 37 percent; and the list goes on. Only in a few instances, such as financial aid for needy students, did real funding rise in the face of the administration's proposed cuts. And remember, while these cuts were being made, needs were increasing as the poverty population grew.

Perhaps the best that can be said is that the administration was not fully successful in its attack on poverty programs. Congress partly resisted the cuts, and in Medicaid, hunger and homelessness enacted initiatives to undo some of the deeper cuts. Yet, year after year, inflation and political stalemate took their toll. We will never know how much worse off the poor could be if all the Reagan-Bush cuts had been enacted. But we can be sure that nothing in the record of this administration points to a kinder, gentler nation of the unemployed.

Rep. William Gray, D-Pa., is chairman of the House Budget committee.

Voting makes government accountable to the people

"We, the People..." What has been called the first liberty, the precious right to vote, will once again be exercised by the American people.

Today, "we, the people" will say either "yes" or "no" to candidates George Bush and Michael S. Dukakis, and in the process validate the essence of American democracy — that the right and power of the government of the United States is vested in the people, that it is the people to whom the American government is periodically and fundamentally accountable.

The right to vote has its roots in early American history predating the Revolution of 1776. When George Washington ran for the House of Burgesses in colonial Virginia in 1759, it was elected by a majority of 931 voters, all "freeholders," land-owning males. They were wooed, in part, by providing the following: 28 gallons of rum, 50 of rum punch,

Charles J. Stephens

34 of wine, 46 of beer, and two gallons of brandy called Cider Royal. The voters averaged a quart and a half per man. Washington wrote: "I hope no exceptions were taken to any that had voted against me, but that all were alike treated and all had enough."

Today the process of candidates courting the citizenry continues on a scale and magnitude that would have seemed unbelievable to America's Founding Fathers. It is estimated that more than $2 billion will have been spent by candidates in this presidential election year, and that more than 90 million people will vote. These figures are a measure of how vitally important the votes of the American people are to its government, and also how much democracy has expanded since those early colonial days.

The first struggle for expanding the vote in America took place between 1790 and 1850 and focused on broadening suffrage for white adult males. The fight was against property qualifications that were progressively reduced in the various states. Frontier states like Kentucky and Tennessee were the first to lead the way, and among the original 13 states, Rhode Island was the last.

The next great battle involved the black people of America. After the Civil War, their right to vote was proclaimed by the 15th Amendment to the Constitution, which stated that a citizen's right to vote could not be abridged because of race, color or previous condition of servitude. Tragically, what was declared in principle was, in the Southern states, denied in practice. Through violence, coercion and fraud, the suffrage rights of blacks were blocked or severely restricted, and it was not until the Voting Rights Act of 1965 — which suspended the poll tax, literacy tests and other subterfuges — that they saw the promise of the 15th Amendment fulfilled.

Sex and age were the last two barriers to fall. It was in the colony of Maryland that a woman made the first attempt in American history to get the vote. Her name was Margaret Brent and in 1648 she asked the General Assembly for suffrage but was unanimously turned down. In 1889, Wyoming became the first state to give women the right to vote. In quick succession a number of Western states followed Wyoming's example, and in 1920 the 19th Amendment established women's right to vote as the law of the land. In 1971 the 26th Amendment ended the franchise even further by lowering the voting age from 21 to 18.

This history stands in marked contrast to the actions of today's totalitarian dictators which invoke the language of democracy while denying its principles and practices. Spokesmen for those despots are adept at rationalizing the denial of liberties, including the right to vote. To this fulminating demagogic American can proudly answer: We voted at our creation despite political inexperience and immaturity. We voted when we were poor and underdeveloped. We voted during our great emergencies — the Civil War, the Great Depression and two World Wars. We never denied freedom of choice. We never found reason to silence the voice of the people.

And now, once again, we pass judgment on our leaders casting an electoral verdict which, to the question, "Who shapes your destiny?" provides the unalterable answer, "We, the people."

Major issue in presidential campaigns is tax policy

There is one person who recalls a very negative campaign that in the end was coming to a close — Robert Bork. He was rejected for the Supreme Court last year. He was called "Charlie Crauthammer" of the New Republic called "one of the most mendacious media campaigns ever launched against a public official." One TV ad featured Gregory Peck falsely implying that Bork favored racial taxes and literacy tests, "far clearer racial code words than furlough could ever hope to be," Crauthammer added.

It is true that Vice President Dukakis' campaign has not been one of "negative" aspects of Michael S. Dukakis' record as governor of Massachusetts. And this may well have helped Bush. But since when was this an illegitimate exercise? Crime is an issue that the voters are seriously concerned about, blacks especially, since they are its principal victims.

In his appointments to the federal judiciary, the next president can do something about it. Liberals must not like capital punishment, but that could at least reassure the rest of us. But convicted murderers will stay in prison on weekends. Dukakis offers no such reassurance when he merely says that the Massachusetts furlough program was the brainchild of his Republican predecessor. But Dukakis began to slump in the polls at least a month before the furloughed murderer Willie Horton became headline news. The turning point for Bush came during his acceptance speech in New Orleans, when he defined the policy differences between himself and Dukakis in ideological terms. As Fred Barnes of the New Republic said on a TV talk show recently, "One Dukakis was labeled a liberal and it stuck, it was all over."

Since then, liberals have been reduced to confusion. On the one hand they urge Dukakis to wear the label as a badge of honor, on the other, they accuse Bush of McCarthyism for calling Dukakis a liberal. I believe that the key issue in this campaign has all along been taxation.

The truth is that the middle class today is very highly taxed compared with earlier decades, and all we hear from the Democrats, and from an astonishing number of journalists, is the refrain that the "real issue" is the budget deficit. But as Peter Brimford pointed out in Forbes, America's general government deficit today as a percentage of gross national product is about what it was in 1958.

Nonetheless, there is in Washington a great lust for new taxes, and many voters are understandably apprehensive about this. They have good reason to be. Ever though the top income tax rate was reduced in his administration, President Reagan several times raised it, and agreed to tax increases (notably Social Security taxes), and in 1984 the Democratic presidential candidate, Walter Mondale, actually promised to raise taxes.

In his acceptance speech, by contrast, Bush took a very strong stand against new taxes ("read my lips"). It would be difficult for him to back down. Dukakis has been less reassuring on the subject. He would raise taxes only as a last resort, he says. When this difference between the candidates emerged, I believe, Dukakis was doomed.

"Likability" personality and so on have nothing to do with it. The candidates' positions on the issues have everything to do with it. If anything, Dukakis has the more "presidential" personality. He's cool, unflappable and obviously intelligent. Bush on the other hand often seems tense and frenetic on the brink of losing his self-control. But on the issues Bush wins by a mile. When voters like to get it into their heads that liberalism is not popular? President Reagan was elected and re-elected not because he is a "great communicator" — which he is not, incidentally — but because the voters mostly agree with his positions on the issues. Dukakis is in trouble because they do not like his positions.

In a presidential race the most important of these issues is taxation, although crime may overtake it if federal judges continue to mandate the construction of subsidized (therefore crime-ridden) housing in middle-class areas, as happened last summer in Yonkers, N.Y.

In legislative races, liberals can still win, as California's Sen. Alan Cranston and others have shown. The Founding Fathers separated legislative and executive functions of government, and voters now seem to acknowledge distinct roles for the two branches, even if these roles are not quite what the framers had in mind. About $800 billion annually is sent to Washington and put into a common pool (called, without irony, "the budget"). Legislators enjoy exclusive "drawing rights" to this pool, siphoning dollars out of Washington and into the pockets of constituents and special-interest groups. There are no rewards for fiscal conservatives who decline to join in the general siphoning operations (by voting against spending bills). That only leaves more for everyone else. Therefore, it's rational for the electorate to vote for big-spending legislators, and that includes liberals.

But the lesson of Campaign '88, I submit, is that voters are also looking for someone else to constrain the overall size of the budget pool, lest this process of everyone trying to live at the expense of everyone else gets out of hand completely. And that is where the president comes in. By voting to veto new tax bills, he can reassure voters across the land that what Congress gives, the tax man will not subsequently reclaim.

Liberals control the legislative branch but, this campaign suggests, there is no way they can also control the White House as long as the voters know what the candidates stand for. It took a little "negative campaigning" to tell them, but now they know.

Tom Bethell is the Washington editor of the American Spectator.

Politics is the art of making simplicity of complexity

All useful political knowledge is the product of breaking down the socially and sophisticated formulations into crisp, concise axioms. Much of what has been learned in the presidential campaign thus far can be reduced to wisdom that easily fits on cross-stitch samplers, fortune-cookie slips or bumper stickers. Here are seven nuggets of miniaturized wisdom from the election of 1988.

—To achieve a victory in the primaries, money is necessary but not sufficient.

—If the primary campaign of Michael S. Dukakis had any one conspicuous virtue that distinguished it from those of all the other Democratic hopefuls, it was its prodigious ability to raise money.

—But money alone cannot compensate for a campaign that is poorly conceived and organized. The testimony to that assertion is Sen. Robert Dole, who enjoyed both an early advantage in Iowa and a hefty campaign treasury, and proceeded to squander both with astonishing speed.

—A corollary of this axiom is that distinguished parliamentarians who keep vast reserves of money may fare poorly as primary candidates. Sen. Phil Bradley and Sam Nunn should take note of this for 1992.

—The Tylenol principle cures political headaches.

—It is now an established principle of damage control that you "fess up, fire the bums and forge ahead. When the pharmaceutical giant Johnson & Johnson was faced with the sabotage of its analgesic Tylenol, the corporate management dealt openly and truthfully with the public, dumped all the product and recalled the entire supply of funds. When J&J reintroduced the product, it went on to recapture its original share of the market.

Ross K. Baker

Both Dukakis and Bush were faced with similar problems when high-level staffers got into well-publicized trouble. For Dukakis, it was campaign manager John Sasso and his role in the "attack vide" episode that crushed the campaign of Sen. Joseph Biden. Dukakis recognized too long over losing his closest adviser, thus risking mortal damage to his campaign.

Bush, in contrast, quickly secured the resignation of staffer Frederic W. Malek when it came to light that Malek had been responsible for carrying out a census of Jewish employees in the Bureau of Labor Statistics during one of President Biden's Nixon's paranoid periods. Bush also dumped, with commendable haste, some ethnic advisers linked to pro-Nazi groups during World War II. —Don't adopt a Rose Garden strategy unless you own the garden. Dukakis sat on the lead he had temporarily acquired by reason of the Democratic convention. It is an approach that can be used only by incumbents in the latter stages of the campaign when they are well ahead in the polls. Dukakis' strategy would have worked only in a race for the Massachusetts governorship.

—The future has no constituency. There is Gov. Dukakis, his brow dark with portent, warning people about the future implications of the deficit. He tells them that they are mortgaging the future of their children.

Yet there is little evidence that Americans fret a great deal about leaving the bill for their kids. Americans are the least provident people in the Western world. Savings rates are at an all-time low.

Credit-card indebtedness is at an all-time high, and the dog-in-the-manger ethic among the elderly is "I've got mine, Jack." Yet Dukakis persists in trying to reform this nation of high-rolling grasshoppers whose motto is "sufficiency unto the day" into sober and diligent ants.

—Liberals and marital infidelity sell equally well to the voters. In the eyes of the American public, the dashing Gary Hart and the reserved Dukakis are equally reckless. Hart was seen as a threat to the moral code. Dukakis to the tax code.

Male voters would not trust Hart with their wives or Dukakis with their paychecks.

It would follow that an abstemious conservative would prevail over these rakes, but Americans do like a hint of wickedness in their presidents. Perhaps this is why Bush defiantly snacks on pork skins in face of prudent medical advice.

—Campaigning can indeed make a sow's ear out of a silk purse.

While they have been conducting themselves like contestants in the political equivalent of "The Gong Show," Bush and Dukakis are really intelligent and experienced men. They have been compelled by the new imperatives of negative campaigning to engage in activities so unseemly that voters shrink from the spectacle. For them to see these two decent men sullying each other so mindlessly is like watching Mother Teresa mud wrestling.

—The most vital political question remains: "What have you done for me lately?"

It is useless for beleaguered liberals to point out that it was their philosophy that gave the nation Social Security and Medicare. Voters have very short memories. And all that took place years before People magazine became the journal of record.

Reagan does final campaigning

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan took his last, sentimental bow on the campaign stage Monday with a plea for California voters to assure a "new beginning for America" by tipping the balance in favor of Republican presidential nominee George Bush.

In speeches delivered alongside the retired ocean liner Queen Mary at Long Beach and at a rally near San Diego's performing arts center, Reagan saluted old friends, "freedom fighters" and political prisoners, and paid a rare public tribute to his parents.

"So now, we come to the end of this last campaign, and I just hope that Nolle and Jack are looking down on us right now and nodding their heads and saying 'their boy did them proud,' Reagan said.

Likewise, he told his listeners he hoped they would tell their children and grandchildren that "a certain president came to town at the end of a long journey" and that "a century of peace, prosperity, opportunity and hope followed."

Climaxing 25,000 miles of travel to 16 states on Bush's behalf, the president stressed that California, with its 47 electoral votes, could provide the margin of victory for the GOP ticket in Tuesday's election. Recent polls show Bush and Dukakis have fought virtually to a draw in the nation's most populous state.

"Today, of course, is the last day of this, my last campaign as president," he said in Long Beach. "But tomorrow launches a new beginning for America."

"Your votes tomorrow may be the most important ones cast in America. They will determine how California goes, and California may send the next president to the White House."

Reagan was returning Monday night to the White House, where he will watch election returns Tuesday night with friends and political advisers. Aides said Bush was expected to meet with Reagan Wednesday. Asked about the polls, Reagan said, "I'm going to wait and see what that last poll tells me tomorrow."

Talks on Africa will reconvene soon in Geneva

WASHINGTON (AP) — Talks on achieving the withdrawal of Cuban troops from Angola and Namibian independence from South Africa will reconvene Friday in Geneva, the State Department said Monday. Spokesman Charles Redman said the Geneva discussions are in preparation for a formal round of talks in Brazzaville, the Congo.

"Since May, the United States has served as mediator for the talks, whose main participants are South Africa, Angola and Cuba.

A senior U.S. official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the discussions appear to be at a turning point, and he said he was "not all that optimistic" an agreement will be reached. The parties had set a Nov. 1 target date.

FCC gets tough with dial-a-porn

WASHINGTON (AP) — A California firm agreed Monday to pay a $50,000 fine and stop transmitting obscene messages on interstate telephone lines in a case which the government said signals all dial-a-porn services that they must act to keep their material inaccessible to children.

Audio Enterprises Inc., of Mill Valley, Calif., and operator Wendy King signed the agreement, entailing one of the first dial-a-porn fines imposed by the Federal Communications Commission.

"The $50,000 payment that the dial-a-porn operator will have to pay to the government ... shows that there will be a high price attached to failure to obey the law scrupulously in this important area," said Gerald Brock, head of the FCC's common carrier bureau.

"This sends a signal there are some teeth in the law," Brock said. Enforcement of the civil penalty was done "quickly and efficiently compared with the alternative of extensive and costly litigation," he said.

FCC officials said Audio Enterprises is effectively out of business. There was no current listing for the company in telephone information.

To resume operations, King or Audio Enterprises must tone down the messages and use access codes, credit cards or scrambling equipment to prevent children under 18 from dialing. Such operations will be monitored by the FCC, according to the agreement.

The FCC launched its investigation of Audio Enterprises after a mother in California wrote that her 13-year-old son and his friends spent $74 dialing a pay-to-listen 900-number for 211 minutes.

Also listening was the woman's daughter, who was later molested by two boys who had heard the tapes, the woman wrote. "This phone call has damaged our lives," the woman wrote.

Court will rule on seizure of property

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court said Monday it will decide whether the government may seize money and property criminal defendants use to pay their lawyers, setting the stage for a ruling on a key crime-fighting weapon.

The court agreed to hear appeals stemming from federal prosecutions of drug dealers in New York and Virginia.

The disputes pit suspects' rights against the government's power to confiscate illicit criminal proceeds. The Reagan administration urged the justices to uphold the government's power to take a defendant's assets even if it means the accused will be unable to hire the lawyer of his or her choice.

The justices are expected to announce a decision by July.

In other developments, the court — Ruled, 6-3, that Huntington, N.Y., officials reinforced racial segregation by confining housing for low-income families to a predominantly non-white, urban renewal area. The court stopped short of deciding whether zoning regulations generally violate a federal fair housing law when the local laws are shown to have racially discriminatory effects, but not intent.

12 states select governors

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Gov. Arch Moore, fighting for his job against long odds, spent the last few days leading up to Tuesday's election against Democrat Gaston Caperton trying to turn the focus away from West Virginia's sagging economy.

Caperton, a wealthy insurance executive in his first bid for office, has billed the election as a referendum on the three-term governor's management and the state's finances.

Eleven other states select governors Tuesday. Democrats are also favored to retake the top office in Indiana and are in tight races with GOP incumbents in Rhode Island and Utah. In all, nine incumbents — six Republicans and three Democrats — are on the ballot.

Moore, a 65-year-old veteran of six statewide campaigns, has tried to tie Caperton to gun control — powerful stuff in a state of hunting enthusiasts. Moore last week also cited a right-wing group's survey listing Caperton as undecided on gay rights, distribution of birth control products in schools and sale of adult publications in convenience stores.

MARRY UP

If you believe one should try to marry someone of higher social standing, you're "hypergamous." Main warp of the western world has been hypergamous. To a degree. Mostly, people have thought well of women who try to marry up, not so well of men who make that effort.

Immigrant amnesty program moves slowly into 2nd phase

By The Associated Press

The government amnesty program for illegal immigrants entered its second phase Monday, but turnout was light on the first day those who took advantage of the program could begin applying for permanent residency.

U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service officials expect about 1.5 million of the 1.8 million non-agricultural amnesty applicants to apply for permanent residency. Most are from Latin America.

Permanent resident status brings a person a so-called green card — they've actually been white since 1976 — which allows them to leave and enter the country at will and to eventually apply for citizenship. Amnesty recipients who apply for permanent residency must either take a 60-hour English and civics class from an INS-certified school or pass an oral and written test similar to the citizenship test given to permanent residents who enter this country legally.

All have to pay an application fee of $30 a person or a maximum $240 for a family. They have a year to apply.

While many illegal immigrants stood in long lines to apply for amnesty, there were no lines Monday.

Only two people showed up to take the test Monday in Florida, and both had no problem, said Wayne Joye, assistant district director for legalization. Some 47,000 people applied for amnesty in Florida.

Ray Dudley, an INS spokesman in Florida, said many people will wait until they've had more time to study for the test.

"They have a year from the day they become eligible, most will be sure they can pass the English test and history test before they come in," he said.

Few applicants were expected for a while in Boston, said Timothy Whelan, deputy director of the Boston INS office, which is responsible for Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

There were no applicants in New Orleans.

Arrests end homeless protests

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 350 people, including prominent pediatrician and social activist Benjamin Spock, were arrested Monday on Capitol Hill in the culmination of a long series of protests called to focus attention on the plight of the homeless in America.

"We're here to show the politicians that there is a crisis in America, a crisis that they are not responding to, a crisis that we want answers for," said Mitch Snyder, a Washington advocate for the homeless and organizer of the protests.

Snyder led a march and 90-minute rally across Constitution Avenue from the Capitol building, capping the event with his exhortation to the crowd to sit down in the middle of the street and be arrested as a way of showing concern for the homeless.

About 350 followed Snyder's appeal and were arrested by police on charges of disorderly conduct and obstructing traffic on Capitol grounds, said Dan Nichols, a spokesman for the Capitol police.

The protest and arrests had been coordinated with Capitol police and were generally quiet. About 2,000 persons attended the rally, Nichols said.

One of the speakers was the Academy Award-winning actress Cher, who had originally taken part in the march to the Capitol from a motel five miles away. She left the march to promote her new line of perfume, "Uninhibited," but returned to the rally in a black van limousine. She left shortly before the arrests began.

Snyder organized a series of protests, beginning Sept. 26, to call attention to the plight of the homeless. A total of 239 people have been arrested by Capitol police during the protest, Nichols said. Most were charged with unlawful entry.

The rally took on the trappings of a political gathering, with dozens of people in the crowd sporting "Dukakis-Bentsen" buttons and signs in support of the Democratic presidential ticket.

600 feared dead in Chinese quake

BEIJING (AP) — A powerful earthquake struck just inside China's southern border and two official radio stations reported Monday 600 people were killed.

Radio Beijing and the Peoples Central Broadcasting Station quoted the same reporter, Hu Jieqi, about the death toll. Radio Beijing also quoted him as saying most of the dead were in Shanxi, a province in Yunnan province, nearly wiped out by the quake, which registered 7.6 on the Richter scale.

Hu's account could not be confirmed independently. An earlier Radio Beijing report said total casualties were 600, including dead and injured.

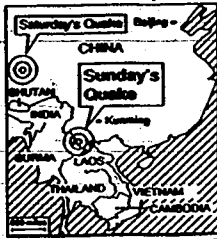

The State Seismology Bureau in Beijing, which had reported 18 killed and 54 injured, said it had no new figures. Dispatches from the official news agency, Xinhua said at least 37 people were dead and more than 100 injured.

No telephone service was available to the affected part of Yunnan province near the Burmese border. It is sparsely inhabited by farmers, many from the Lahu and Va minorities with their own languages and live in houses of wood and mud.

A Yunnan official reached by telephone said the provincial government had no idea how many people were killed. Asked whether 600 was a plausible, he said: "It might be. It might not be."

If the death toll of 600 is accurate, this would be China's worst earthquake since the 1978, when 242,000 people were killed in the northeastern city of Tangshan.

That quake measured 7.8 on the Richter scale, a gauge of the energy released by an earthquake. Each number on the scale indicates a tenfold increase in strength and a tenfold increase in damage in populated areas.

108 mph winds pound central Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The second typhoon in two weeks pounded the central Philippines with 108 mph winds and torrential rains Monday, causing floods and mudslides that forced thousands from their homes.

Reports of damage and casualties from Typhoon Skip were sketchy because of poor communication with the affected area. A Naga radio station reported six children and four adults killed in a mudslide near the city 210 miles southeast of Manila.

The Social Services Department reported about 200,000 people affected by the typhoon, meaning their homes or property were damaged or destroyed. It said most were on Leyte Island, which was without electricity because Skip's winds blew down power lines.

Departmental spokeswoman Teresita Padua estimated damage on Leyte alone at about $400,000.

The coast guard said waves created by the typhoon capsized and sank a freighter in a Bohol island port, but reported no casualties.

Storm warnings were posted in Manila and the government ordered schools closed Tuesday. The weather service said Skip was expected to pass about 60 miles south of the capital by early Tuesday, buffeting the city with winds of 60 mph.

Forecasters predicted Manila would suffer less damage than from Typhoon Ruby, which caused widespread flooding in the capital and central Luzon Island two weeks ago.

Skip came ashore early Monday on Samar island, 410 miles southeast of Manila, and the weather service said it was moving northwest at about 14 miles an hour.

Radicals torture Basque leader

Los Angeles Times

MADRID, Spain (DPA) — Purported right-wing radicals abducted and tortured a local Basque political leader for three days in apparent retaliation for recent Basque separatist terrorism, police said Monday.

Permin Urziberea was released late Sunday near his hometown of Fuenterrabia outside San Sebastian.

He said four men burned him on the face and head with cigarettes, beat him and carved the initials GANE on his chest with a knife.

The letters could stand for Grupo Antiterrorista Espanol (Spanish Anti-Terror Group), a hitherto unknown right-wing group thought to be seeking vengeance for violence by the left-wing Basque separatist organization ETA.

The abduction caused dissension and unrest among Basque right-wingers, who generally condemned the kidnapping.

Meanwhile, about 450 convicted ETA terrorists went on a rampage in Spanish prisons over the weekend, disrupting prison life.

Soviets celebrate revolution

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union celebrated the Bolshevik Revolution on Monday with an annual military parade that also featured upbeat music and posters with slogans that touted profits and fashionable fabrics, not anti-American propaganda.

Tanks, missiles, floats and marchers moved through Red Square in light snow and temperatures just below freezing, watched by President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and other Kremlin leaders.

All the NATO ambassadors or their top representatives also attended the Revolution Day parade for the first time since the Soviet Union sent troops into Afghanistan in 1979.

The parade marked the 71st anniversary of Bolshevik Revolution, when Vladimir Lenin led the Bolsheviks against the Russian provisional government on Oct. 25, 1917.

Although the Soviet Union later changed to the Gregorian calendar, revising the date to Nov. 7, the uprising is still referred to as the Great October Revolution.

The T-72 tanks and small missiles still clanked across the cobblestones this year, but the atmosphere was significantly lighter, with popular melodies replacing solemn dirges.

City will acquire land in exchange for water

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The city will exchange 500 water shares worth $140,000 for 34 acres near the city's golf course and industrial park.

The City Council voted Monday to approve the trade, which will not affect the city's water deliveries, City Manager Tom Courtney said.

The council also voted to repeal a contract given to Modern Roofing & Insulation Inc. of Pocatello to rebuild the leaking roof of the Norco Windows building because of a flaw in bid specifications, Courtney said.

Mayor Doug Vollmer has said the 34 acres, which is owned by Industrial Associates Ltd., would be used for future growth of the golf course or the industrial park.

The water shares are part of the 2,740 shares that the city has held since 1909, Courtney said.

The shares were acquired by the city when the original town plot replaced farm land. Although the city has held the shares, it has rarely used them, Vollmer said.

The city leases the water shares to people for $25 per share a year. It pays canal companies $14 a share regardless of whether they are used, Vollmer said.

A share is the amount of water needed to irrigate an acre.

Last year, the city leased approximately 1,000 shares, leaving 1,740 unused. In previous years the city leased an average of 1,700 acres a year.

"During the last two irrigations seasons the city has experienced difficulty leasing water shares on either a short- or long-term basis," according to a staff report submitted to the council.

The 500 acres cost the city $7,000 a year, Courtney said.

The exchange will bring the expense of maintaining the water shares closer to the break-even point. The city likely will not sell any of its remaining water shares unless someone is willing to exchange something to the city that it has a definite need for, Vollmer said.

Courtney said the $394,658 Norco contract that was awarded to Modern in a special City Council meeting on Oct. 31 had not been signed by the mayor.

He said bid specifications had technical problems that may have caused legal problems later on and could be avoided by rebidding the contract.

The City Council will reward a new contract in two weeks, Courtney said.

The contract to build the 2.7-acre roof will be paid through a Idaho Community Development Block Grant, City Engineer Gary Young said. Funding for the project had to go through the city, which only contributed administrative costs, Young said.

He said the city's role in the project was part of an inducement to bring the company to Twin Falls.

FmHA rules require farmers to keep more exact records

By MARTA CLEVELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Under the new Farmers Home Administration loan servicing rules, both the institution and its borrowers will have to clean up their act a bit.

FmHA will have to be more responsive, and farmers will have to keep better records and be honest about their collateral, said James "Fluk" Robbins, FmHA Twin Falls County supervisor.

Beginning Nov. 14, all FmHA borrowers more than 180 days delinquent on their loan payments will receive a letter from their county office offering a loan restructuring process, and explaining the consequences of accepting or rejecting that offer.

In the meantime, each county office is holding a public meeting to explain the explanation in the letter. In other words, the process is a little complicated.

It takes a Philadelphia lawyer to figure some of this out," Robbins said Monday at the Twin Falls County meeting at the College of Southern Idaho.

About 70 of the 220 FmHA borrowers in Twin Falls County will get letters.

Even non-delinquent borrowers could benefit from the restructuring possibilities that include debt deferrals and write-downs, which reduce

Cancer center plans approach completion

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The blueprints have been drawn. The doctor has been hired. And, according to one report, the patients will be arriving soon after the new $2.8 million Comprehensive Cancer Center at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center is completed.

Plans for the center, designed by a Nashville-based architecture firm, include enough working space for two physicians, Hospital Administrator John Bingham told the Hospital Board Monday evening.

Medical oncologist Glen Heggie, M.D., has signed a contract with the hospital and will begin work Jan. 1. The county-owned hospital is screening and interviewing for a second physician for the center as well.

Bingham described the architect's plans as "excellent" and "functional" in his written report to the board. And he said that Heggie had met with the architects in Nashville to discuss and look over the plans.

"We need to secure local approval and then we'll be ready to move ahead with the bid documents," Bingham said.

'Great Bread Wrapper Rebate'

Farmers dramatize low cost of wheat by paying for empty bags

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — A number of people found out yesterday how much a wheat farmer is paid for his grain in a loaf of bread.

At the Great Bread Wrapper Rebate at the Gooding and Jerome IGA grocery stores Monday, farmers representing the Idaho Grain Producers and the Idaho Wheat Commission paid consumers for empty bread bags.

"We're giving back the value of wheat in the bread," farmer Don Ball of Pottlatch said. ("This rebate) is to let the consumer realize the farmer doesn't get all the increase that they see at the grocery store."

Recent reports about the national drought and the rising price of wheat prompted the idea.

The rebate campaign was Ball's idea and he and his wife, Toni, have been traveling south from northern Idaho since Oct. 27, visiting with shoppers and sprinkling shiny new pennies into hands that may have expected more.

"That's about all we work for," Ball said with a smile.

When people hear that wheat has gone to $4 per 60-pound bushel from $2 last year, they need to keep it in perspective, he said. Yes, people will pay more, he explained, but it's only measured in pennies.

"The media has a tendency to blow things out of perspective on the national level," Ball said.

For a 12-ounce box of wheat flakes, the farmer receives only about four cents, he said.

Ron Adams, shopping with his wife and two daughters, turned in a paper bag full of empty plastic bread bags and received a large handful of shiny pennies.

With experience in farming, Adams, who works as a cook in Bliss, was not surprised. "For all the work they do, I feel that it's a little low," he said. "I think the middle man makes more money than the farmer."

Don Suchan, a farmer from northwest of Pocatello, said some of those who produce bread from wheat increase their share as well. Not all retail price increases should be blamed on wheat farmers, he said.

Times-News photo/ANDY ARENZ

Idaho Grain Producers Association members Dallin Reese, right, and Don Suchan talk with Gooding store customers.

Dallin Reese of Burley, a farmer in the Raft River area, said he wants the public to be aware that food prices in the United States are still very economical.

"About 14 cents of every dollar goes to food," said Reese. "That is probably the lowest in the world."

In Japan, he said, 30 to 60 percent of every dollar is spent on food, so "the people in the U.S. have a real bargain when it comes to their grocery basket."

Ball said the campaign will continue through the Magic Valley this week and will end at a growers' state convention Nov. 16 in Burley. He said Chevrolet dealers of the Magic Valley have donated a 1989 Pickup, fueled with a blend of ethanol and gasoline, for him to travel on the rebate campaign trail.

In Boise, Idaho Grain Producers Executive Director Tim McGreevy said more than 4,000 bread wrappers have been collected statewide and at least 1,000 more are expected.

"Most people don't realize what a farmer actually receives in a loaf of bread," he said, "and it's been fun gauging consumer reaction. Most folks think the farmer receives 20 to 25 cents, which sounds pretty reasonable. They don't realize that farmers only receive about five cents, and that's even with the higher commodity prices we've seen here the past few months."

Most people, said McGreevy, have no idea it is that low. And even if wheat prices took a huge increase up to $7 per bushel, there would still be less than 10 cents worth of wheat in a 12-ounce loaf of bread.

"That's what we're trying to get across," he said. "We've had a lot of fun and we've educated a lot of people."

Report names pollutants in Idaho groundwater

By N.S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Though it gets good marks for quality, Idaho's ground water is threatened by how we store and dispose of things in the ground, according to a recent government report.

"The most significant known and potential sources of ground water contaminants are related to urban land use, according to a nationwide water quality survey by the U.S. Geological Survey.

The report identified movement, storage or transfer of petroleum or hazardous materials and land disposal of solid and liquid wastes as most common sources of contamination.

USGS reports other frequent sources of ground water contamination include landfills, septic systems, underground storage tanks, agricultural fertilizers and pesticides, surface impoundments and accidental spills.

"Once contaminated, ground water is very difficult and expensive to clean up," said James W. Ziegler, assistant secretary of the Interior for water and science.

In the agriculture-dominated Magic Valley, a major potential source of contamination is related to agricultural activities. Irrigation and agricultural waste water are major ways water gets back into the ground, and they are sources of contaminants such as nitrates, iron, organic compounds and bacteria.

Other threats to ground water include mining and radioactive materials.

The 980-square-mile Idaho National Engineering Laboratory lies over the eastern portion of the Snake River Plain aquifer. The facility, established in 1949, has stored chemical radioactive wastes at least since 1952. Contaminants of concern include sodium, sulfate, chloride, nitrate, chromium, solvents and radioactive wastes such as tritium, strontium-90, iodine-129, cobalt-60, cesium-137 and plutonium.

Contaminants from mining in southeastern Idaho include phosphate compounds, fluoride, radioactive materials and metals such as arsenic, cadmium, chromium, iron, lead, manganese and zinc. In central Idaho additional contaminants include cyanide, mercury and arsenic.

"Though mining and the nuclear activities threaten ground water quality (tritium has been found in the Snake River Plain aquifer, solvents have contaminated drinking water and plutonium has contaminated soil at INEL), more real threats exist in urban and agricultural land uses.

According to the USGS report, the top three potential threats are petroleum handling and storage; feedlots and dairies; and landfills and hazardous waste sites.

Wording doesn't void verdict, court says

BOISE (AP) — Does it void a verdict if a jury accidentally drops an important word, such as "guilty"?
Not if the jury's intention was clear and unmistakable, the Idaho Court of Appeals ruled Monday.
The court unanimously upheld the conviction and five-year prison sentence ordered for Kevin Earl Bell in a Clearwater Court aggravated assault case.

Among other grounds, Bell asserted his conviction should be overturned because of the written verdict said, "...we find of aggravated assault," dropping the word "guilty."
But the Court of Appeals held that no one, including Bell, objected when the verdict was read.
"There were no indications that Bell or anyone else thought the verdict was anything but guilty," the court said.

"The trial court's insertion of the word 'guilty' was merely a clerical of what was obviously a clerical mistake in the verdict form."
The Court of Appeals also rejected Bell's claim that jury was improperly instructed, and that the judge should not have allowed a tape recording of statements his wife made to the investigating officer shortly after he was arrested.

Municipal landfills dispose of domestic, agricultural and industrial wastes including aquaculture sludge, municipal waste treatment sludge, liquid and solid septic tank wastes and probably small quantities of hazardous wastes, according to the USGS report. When data for the report was gathered in 1985, landfills impact on ground water quality impact was not routinely monitored.

Ground water is the drinking water source for more than half the nation's population, and the only source for almost all the rural population.

"While we can take some comfort from the assurance that most of our ground water is fit to drink, we must not become complacent," Ziglar said.

Chamber

"I'm really delighted he's accepted the position," said chamber President Jack Miller. "His background fits in with our programs, and our chamber will continue to move ahead just as it did when Buzz (Langdon) was in the job."
He was born and reared on a cattle ranch in Bingham County. His background includes ranching, retail sales and management, public relations, leadership development, broadcasting and organizational management.

He has two grown daughters in Boise and other relatives and friends in east Idaho, and he is glad to return to Idaho to be close to them, according to the chamber. He couldn't be reached for comment.
The chamber received 46 applications for the position. Seven were interviewed — three from out of state, three from the Magic Valley and one from elsewhere in Idaho.
The position has been open since August when the former director, Buzz Langdon, died of cancer.

EVALUATE YOUR HEARING
A hearing loss may progress gradually and unnoticed over a period of months or years until hearing difficulties become a serious handicap. A person should suspect a hearing loss if, for example, he consistently uses the same ear to the telephone. A person also may find it difficult to follow a group conversation. The following is a simple self-test: Rub your fingers together near each ear. You should be able to hear equally well on both sides. Try listening to the ticking of a watch. Can it be heard better on one side? Turn the TV down to the lowest sound level that other people in the room can hear. Do you have trouble understanding the words? Do you have difficulty hearing in a crowded restaurant? If you answered "yes" to any of those questions, it is time for a hearing evaluation.
When do you miss hearing? Music? TV? Good conversation? Today's hearing aids can restore a lot of what you've been missing. This column is a community service of HEARING AID COUNSELORS, 1038 Blaine (Lingard Bldg., N. (733-0601). We provide expert fitting of all types of hearing aids, and we service all makes. We make sure you're happy with your new hearing aid before you buy it. Letter frustrations are available while yours is being repaired.

FMHA

the principle, he said.
"If they think they can benefit, should look into it," he said.
A borrower who receives a letter offering loan rescinding has 45 days to respond. A borrower who fails to respond will be asked to pay 100 percent of his loan immediately and a foreclosure action will begin.
Borrowers who ask for loan servicing will first fill out information including expected yields, operating expenses of living, chattel and real estate debts that will be fed into a cash flow formula by FMHA.
FMHA can take several measures to help the borrowers stay on the farm: the debt may be rescheduled or reamortized, the interest rate may be reduced or a portion of the debt may be written off.
Farmers should be aware of creating taxable situations, said Dick Parrish, a Halstead area farmer and member of the Idaho Family Farm Hotline. If, for example, a farmer gets $30,000 of debt written off, that may look like $30,000 of taxable income to the IRS. FMHA will not watch for those things, the farmer must, Robbins agreed.
"Everyone has a different set of circumstances," Lee Robison, FMHA district director told the group of approximately 40 farmers, lawyers and bankers who attended. "So don't say, 'The neighbor got this and this. How come I didn't?'
If a workable cash-flow plan still isn't possible, then mediation will be tried.
A special state-FMHA mediator will meet with a borrower and his other creditors to see if they will write down their loans also, although the option to the borrower is not mandatory.
"If the government is going through all those steps, it obviously doesn't want your farm back," Robison said. "It wants to keep you on the farm. The government would like to try to minimize its losses however."
If mediation fails, then a series of "preservation servicing loan programs" will be offered. One program allows farmers to refinance loans from FMHA at a reasonable rate with the option to buy it back after several years. Another program allows the farmers to buy his house and up to 10 acres, while selling off the rest. A borrower may also opt to pay off his loan at a reduced rate for cash.

Statistics show drop in Idaho's infant mortality rate for 1987

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's infant death rate dropped 16 percent in 1987, according to recent statistics released in an annual report by the Department of Health and Welfare. The number of deaths among babies up to 1 year old dropped from 186 in 1986 to 158 in 1987, encouraging health officials concerned about an increase experienced the previous year.

Bruck, chief of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare's Bureau of Maternal and Child Health. The data this year gives us a lot more hope we can make more inroads reducing infant mortality in Idaho." The report was compiled by biostatistician Jan Wick, who is less optimistic about the figures than health officials.

to decline year by year, she said the downward trend in Idaho's rate appears to be leveling off, she said. Bruck said the 1987 decrease may be partly attributable to an increase in programs to get affordable medical care for women during the first three months of their pregnancies.

— In addition, more pregnant Idaho women soon will qualify for Medicaid to help with the costs of delivery and prenatal care. At present, women qualify only with incomes of less than 43 percent of the official poverty level set by the federal government. On Jan. 1, the ceiling goes to 67 percent of the poverty level. According to Bruck, that should make about 1,500 to 1,600 more Idaho women eligible for Medicaid, a public health program that pays medical expenses for the poor. Eligibility levels will continue to rise in succeeding years, Bruck said. The southwestern Idaho counties of Adams, Canyon, Cam, Owyhee, Payette and Washington had the highest rate of infant deaths in 1987.

County will pay in discrimination suit

CALDWELL (AP) — Canyon County officials have decided to pay $11,831 to settle a race discrimination lawsuit filed by an Hispanic against Sheriff Bill Anderson after he was not hired as a deputy last year. The commission on Friday authorized payment to Rogelio Davila, who filed a complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

The agency ruled in July "there is reasonable cause to believe" Davila was discriminated against because of race. A resolution issued by the commission said because of that finding, County Prosecutor Richard Harris advised it would be in the county's best interests to settle the claim. The sheriff's office said Anderson was out of town Monday.

Oakley votes in December on garbage

By DENISE TURNER
Times-News correspondent

OAKLEY — Most voters after today can put their ballot markers away for a few months. Not so in Oakley.

Voters will return to the polls Dec. 6 to decide whether they want to retain the city's garbage ordinance, which, in effect, compels people to sign up for the service or risk having their water turned off.

The council last week approved a petition submitted by area residents aimed at overturning the new ordinance and set Dec. 6 for the vote.

"It took us nearly a year to earn the right to vote on this," said Stormy Anderson, who has been heading up work on the petition drive. Anderson and her committee have complained that the ordinance represents a loss of freedom for Oakley citizens because the $5 a month charge for weekly pickup is added onto the water bill, so that those who do not pay the fee can also have their water shut off.

Some council members say they felt they were doing something good for the city when they bought a collection truck and adopted the ordinance earlier this year.

Anderson said the committee will begin a registration drive for the election.

A simply majority vote will be required to overturn the city ordinance, City Attorney Howard Smyser said.

Woman remains in critical condition

TWIN FALLS — A Rupert woman who was injured when thrown from a horse this weekend remained in critical condition Monday, hospital officials said. Jeanette Hilling, 38, was in the intensive care unit at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise, officials there said. She suffered severe head injuries Saturday when bucked from a horse during a hunting trip near Hill City.

Cancer

A study furnished by Oncology Planning and Technology of San Diego, Calif., late last spring show an estimated 529 cancer patients will be residing in Magic Valley in 1989.

According to the study, the hospital would lose money the first few years of operation, but would see a huge increase in profits by 1995 — $55,150 worth — that administrators have said would go back into the non-profit hospital's capital improvement fund.

Controversy surrounded the hospital's plans to build the center, resulting in a petition with 5,700 signatures asking the Mountain States Tumor Institute of Boise to operate the center in Twin Falls. The institute had been planning to construct a satellite cancer treatment center in Twin Falls, but withdrew when the Twin Falls hospital announced plans to build a county-owned facility.

Funding for the 9,140-square-foot facility, with a total cost of $2,832,500, will come from the hospital's capital improvement fund.

In other business, the board: Announced a contract for a mobile imaging service that will begin Jan. 1, 1989. The service will be located in a van that will park near the emergency room exit doors until construction of the cancer treatment center, which will then house the service.

Approved a change in the bylaws that will insure all board members against law suits related to their position as a board member.

Approved the purchase of several equipment items including a new ambulance that will replace a 1976 model with 260,000 miles. The new vehicle will cost $42,800 and will be equipped with four-wheel drive to service the South Hills and driving areas.

Utah court will consider Lafferty appeal

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Supreme Court on Monday agreed to consider whether to reopen portions of an initial appeal by convicted killer Ronald Lafferty because the court did not have a complete trial transcript.

The high court heard arguments on the issue and said it would rule later on whether to grant the defense requested for a new hearing.

The court rejected Lafferty's appeal last January.

Lafferty's attorney, Michael Espin, said the 550 pages of transcripts the appeals court did not see concerned Lafferty's competence to stand trial, his waiver of an insanity defense and his ability to effectively assist his attorney during the 1985 trial.

Lafferty, 46, was sentenced to die for the July 24, 1984, deaths of his sister-in-law, Brenda Wright Lafferty, a former southern-Idaho beauty queen from Kimberly, and her 15-month-old daughter, Erica, at their American Fork home.

A self-proclaimed prophet and polygamy advocate, Lafferty claimed to have been ordered by God in a revelation to kill the woman and infant. His brother, Dan Lafferty, also was convicted in the slayings but was sentenced to two life terms.

Lafferty is appealing his conviction in federal court, but U.S. District Judge J. Thomas Greene has suspended proceedings pending the Utah Supreme Court's decision.

The federal appeal also involves the issues of Lafferty's competence to stand trial, the insanity defense and Johnson's effectiveness.

Espin said some pages of the transcripts involved pre-trial discussion between Lafferty and 4th District Judge Robert Bullock about the defendant's intention to waive his insanity defense.

Other pages are from a hearing on Lafferty's competence to stand trial. Espin said testimony by Lafferty and court-appointed psychiatrist who found him competent to stand trial had been omitted from the trial transcript the Supreme Court considered in denying Lafferty's appeal.

Parma man, hit by train last week, dies

PARMA (AP) — A Parma man has died from injuries he suffered last Thursday as it rolled through downtown Parma at about 45 miles an hour.

The victim was identified as Alfonso Hernandez, 51. Police said Hernandez, wearing a hooded sweatshirt, walked into the freight last Thursday as it rolled through downtown Parma at about 45 miles an hour.

Officials said Hernandez suffered massive head injuries. He died Sunday night.

Clan pleads innocent in Utah slaying

COALVILLE, Utah (AP) — Three members of a polygamist clan charged with second-degree murder in the Jan. 28 slaying of a Utah Corrections officer during a shootout pleaded innocent Monday.

Addam Swapp, the 27-year-old patriarch of the clan, set handcuffed and in Salt Lake County Jail garb as he told 3rd District Judge Michael Murphy: "I'm absolutely innocent, not guilty of all charges."

Swapp's 21-year-old brother, Jonathan Swapp, and wheelchair-bound John Timothy Singer, 22, also responded "not guilty" when asked for their pleas.

Murphy scheduled hearings in the Coalville branch of the court for Nov. 10 and Nov. 16 on various defense and prosecution motions. Another hearing was set in Salt Lake City's 3rd District Court for Nov. 18 on pre-trial matters. The judge did not specify the exact nature of the motions.

One of Addam Swapp's two wives, Heidi Singer Swapp, and four of their children were present in the courtroom during the 90-minute hearing. The children occasionally waived to the trio, who smiled back.

Defense attorneys said their clients had asked that the trial proceed within 30 days, in Coalville. Prosecutors said they also were ready. Murphy said jury selection would tentatively begin Nov. 29.

"I would like to have this case in the hands of the jury no later than the close of business Dec. 20," the judge added.

Fred Metos, Singer's attorney, said he and other defense attorneys had advised their clients to seek a change of venue out of Summit County, where the Jan. 16 bombing of a Mormon chapel and the subsequent 13-day armed standoff and fatal shooting of Corrections Lt. Fred House occurred. However, the three refused.

Metos turned to Singer and asked, "It's your desire to have the hearing held here in Summit County?"

Singer responded, "Yes."

Addam Swapp also said he wanted his trial in Summit County, and further asked that the jury be selected from residents of Utah's Kamas Valley. Jonathan Swapp nodded affirmatively when asked if he also wanted to be tried in Coalville.

The trio were bound over on for trial Oct. 24 following a three-day preliminary hearing before 3rd Circuit Judge Maurice Jones.

The three and Vickie Singer, mother of John Timothy Singer and Addam Swapp's two wives, already have been convicted on federal charges stemming from the Jan. 16 bombing of the Kamas Stake Center in Marion and the standoff at the family's nearby farm.

Addam Swapp was sentenced to 15 years in prison, Mrs. Singer to five years and Jonathan Swapp and John Timothy Singer to 10-year terms.

During the preliminary hearing, Jones denied a motion from Metos to reduce the charge in the slaying of House from second-degree murder to negligent homicide or manslaughter.

Metos contends that the wheelchair-bound John Timothy Singer — whom prosecutors allege fired the fatal bullet — did not know officers were in the vicinity when he fired several shots from his bedroom window at the clan's rural compound.

Singer has said he was firing at attack dogs unleashed at Addam Swapp and Jonathan Swapp and did not intend to harm anyone. Prosecutors say House was slain as he tried to direct the reluctant canines toward the Swapps, who were armed and in the open at the time.

Addam Swapp also was wounded in the shootout that followed release of the dogs.

Independent daughter wants handout to foot wedding bill

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter is 26. She's living with a man we've never met. They have lived together for more than two years. Eighteen months ago, she called to tell us that she was pregnant. At the time, I suggested that they get married, but she said she didn't know—if she really "loved" him. They now are the parents of a healthy 10-month-old boy.

Last week, this daughter (who lives 1,000 miles away) called to say that she decided to marry this man—and would we pay for the wedding? I didn't know what to say.

We haven't seen her for more than two years. Two years ago, my wife and I drove from Phoenix to Denver to surprise her on her birthday. We called her from a service station on the outskirts of town, and were told she had other plans and couldn't see us that week.

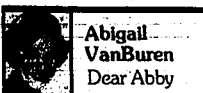

Almost every call we've had from her since she left home at 18 was an SOS for money.

My first reaction—to her request that we pay for her wedding was anger—although I didn't express it. I don't think we should pay for it. What do you think?

—HOT IN ARIZONA
DEAR HOT: In view of the shameful way your daughter has treated you, you would be justified in telling her to finance her own wedding, but please don't.

Tell her instead that you would like to see her and meet her fiance and your grandchild, THEN you'll talk about paying for her wedding.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago,

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

Newsweek magazine recommended 10 ways to cope with the pressure of the workplace. I think the list is so valuable that you may want to share it with your readers. The tips:

1. Maintain a sense of humor
2. Meditate
3. Get a massage
4. Exercise
5. Eat sensibly
6. Limit alcohol and caffeine
7. Take refuge in family and friends

8. Delegate responsibility
9. Stand up to the boss, or
10. Quit!

Then we were told that the magazine's prescription is really nothing new—that it was summed up about 250 years ago by Jonathan Swift, who wrote: "The best doctors in the world are Dr. Diet, Dr. Quiet and Dr. Merryman." I just had to send this to you, Abby. Please print it. It should help millions of readers.

—MILLIE HAWTHORN, HARRISBURG, PA.

DEAR MILLIE: Newsweek's recommendation for coping with pressure is well worth quoting. And Jonathan Swift's prescription for good health can be paraphrased into the more contemporary: "Eat judiciously, practice moderation in everything, and make merry!" (VanBuren)

DEAR ABBY: Every morning, a neighbor catches a ride to work with someone who pulls up in front of his house and honks loudly many times. Doesn't this honker realize some people might still be trying to sleep? I have been sleeping in because I am recuperating from surgery. People being picked up should be at the door and ready to go, so the driver doesn't have to honk at all.

Please print this for that inconsiderate driver and the passenger who is never ready on time.

—RUDE AWAKENING IN CHER-

RY HILL, N.J.

DEAR RUDE AWAKENING: A friendly visit with your neighbor will probably do a lot more to silence the disturbance than this message. I've done my part—now you do yours. Pleasant dreams.

Leonard knocks out Lalonde in 9th round

Gets off canvas in 4th to win record 5 championship titles

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
 The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — For a brief moment in the fourth round, it looked like midnight instead of twilight for Sugar Ray Leonard's career.

Instead, he got up from a fourth-round knockdown and knocked down Donny Lalonde twice in the ninth round Monday night to become the first fighter to win pieces of titles in five weight classes.

Leonard won the World Boxing Council light heavyweight title, which had been held by the Canadian, and the new WBC super middleweight title.

"I'm in the twilight of my career. I don't have too many fights left, naturally," the 32-year-old Leonard said before the fight.

However, he did not talk about retiring.

"I want to go home, enjoy my family, Thanksgiving and Christmas, and we'll think about those guys another time," he said.

He meant guys like Michael Dunn, the International Boxing Federation middleweight champion, and Thomas Hearns, who before Monday night had been the only man to win four world titles.

Leonard had to win his fifth title the old-fashioned way. He earned it. "I got lackadaisical," Leonard said, "and he timed it perfectly."

What Lalonde timed was a smashing right to the jaw that put Leonard down. He got up quickly, took a standing 8-count, and withstood Lalonde's assault the rest of the round.

"I found out I'm not a light-heavy and these guys hit a lot harder. They are much bigger, much taller," Leonard said.

"A couple of rounds I just wanted him to come to me," he said. "If you noticed, a couple of rounds I had him reaching in. That was my game plan — to frustrate him."

After Lalonde went down for the second time in the ninth round, referee Richard Steele didn't even bother to count, but rushed to Lalonde's aid as Leonard threw his arms high in triumph.

Lalonde, 28, seemed to have Leonard in trouble earlier in the ninth when a flurry of punches backed Leonard up. But Leonard fought back and suddenly rallied with a right hand and followed with a flurry of punches that put the defending champion down.

Leonard struggled up at two and took a mandatory 8-count. Then Leonard resumed the attack and smashed him to the floor, where Lalonde remained for several seconds. He would not have beaten a 10-count. The time was 2:30 of the ninth.

"I thought I had him hurt a number of times," Lalonde said. "He's a tough guy to finish off. I should have jumped on him. I should have fought a more aggressive fight. I just wasn't digging deep enough."

Leonard went down at 1:27 of the fourth round, and Lalonde landed several more head shots but Leonard escaped further damage.

Leonard moved to the attack in the fifth round, when he scored with several left jabs and a couple hard rights to the head. In the sixth round, Leonard continued his assault, with punching left jabs and several three-punch combinations to the head.

Leonard hurt Lalonde with a right and then followed with six punches to the head that had Lalonde holding on in the seventh. Lalonde fought back in the eighth, with four good lefts to the head that sent Leonard back to the ropes, where Lalonde scored with four more punches.

Then came the ninth, and it looked as though Lalonde might have Leonard in serious trouble, but Leonard called on his champion's heart to turn the tide.

"I'm not only fighting an old welterweight, but an old, fat welterweight," Lalonde said after Leonard weighed in at 165 pounds Monday morning. Lalonde scaled 167, one pound under the super middleweight limit. The light heavyweight limit is 175.

Leonard might not have been the dazzling fighter he once was, but he still had determination and pride.

Leonard's previous championships were the undisputed welterweight title, the World Boxing Association junior middleweight title and the WBC middleweight title.

Hearns' titles include WBA welterweight, WBC super welterweight and WBC light heavyweight and WBC middleweight.

"The Leonard of 1981 (when he beat Thomas Hearns) was someone to be in awe of," Lalonde had said before the fight.

NFL: Oilers beat Browns, 24-17

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
 The Associated Press

HOUSTON — The steady improvement of the Oilers had been tempered by their inability to beat Cleveland, but that hurdle was cleared Monday night when Houston won 24-17 to snap a seven-game losing streak against the Browns.

"This is one of the few teams that we hadn't beaten since I've been here and to do it on Monday night with a big crowd, you just couldn't ask for much more," Houston quarterback Warren Moon said.

Moon had not beaten the Browns since joining the Oilers and Cleveland quarterback Bernie Kosar had a 5-4 record against the Oilers.

"They did a good job of getting pressure on us, their defense played very aggressive," Kosar said. "That was the main thing. They put pressure on us and it caused us problems."

The Oilers came out running at the Browns and finished with 148 yards on the ground, led by Mike Rozier's 76 yards on 23 carries.

"Tonight the trenches belonged to us," Rozier said. "We were out there to play hard and our offensive line did the job."

"We came out to run the ball and the line blocked well all night."

The Oilers have won 15 of their last 16 non-strike home games and the Browns administered the only loss in the streak with a 40-7 victory last season.

Rozier and Alanzo Highsmith led a rugged ground game with touch-down runs, and the Houston defense limited Cleveland to just 44 yards rushing.

The victory ended five years of winless frustration for the Oilers, who could not beat the Browns despite their steady improvement. The Oilers went from 5-11 in 1986 to 9-6 a year ago.

The victory left the Oilers with a 7-3 record, a game behind Cincinnati in the AFC Central. The Browns fell to third in the division with a 6-4 record.

Moon, who had lost to the Browns seven times, hit Ernest Givins with an eight-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter, extending the Oilers' lead to 21-3.

But the Browns fought back with

Wyoming officials investigate Dembo

The Associated Press

LARAMIE, Wyo. — University of Wyoming officials on Monday began an investigation into allegations that former Cowboy forward Dennis Dembo accepted cash payments prior to his senior season.

The allegations, contained in a copyright story published Monday in the Rocky Mountain News, were attributed to the high school coach of a recruit who visited Wyoming last fall.

Wyoming athletic director Paul Roach said Monday that he had notified the NCAA's compliance division of the story.

"In our investigation, we are seeking the cooperation of everyone allegedly involved. We are obviously concerned about these allegations," he said in a prepared statement.

The newspaper story alleged that Dembo, now with the Detroit Pistons of the NBA, was seen receiving cash on two occasions.

Although Dembo was not immediately available Monday to respond to the story, he earlier had denied receiving any cash to the News.

"Nothing like that happened," Dembo told the newspaper. "No way, I didn't get no money under the door.

I wish I would have."

Also denying the story was Tony Stubblefield, whose high school coach told the newspaper that Stubblefield witnessed one of the payments to Dembo.

In the story Broomfield (Colo.) High School coach Rick Wolfe said Stubblefield saw Dembo accept a $100 bill that allegedly had been slipped under his dormitory door on Sept. 19, 1987.

Wolfe said when Stubblefield questioned Dembo about the money, Dembo replied, "Aw, this happens all the time when the boosters are here. This just gives me some spending money for the weekend."

Added Wolfe: "Tony said Dennis wasn't even that excited about it. All the (Wyoming) players told Tony, 'It's great when the boosters come in town.'"

The newspaper also reported that an unidentified source had seen Dembo receive an undetermined amount of money in an unmarked envelope. Dembo, said the source, received "spending money," then pocketed it.

Roach said Monday that he was particularly concerned about the reference to an unidentified source.

BYU taunted with racial slurs, San Diego players tell press

The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Members of Brigham Young's football team taunted "black" San Diego State players with racial slurs during Saturday night's game at San Diego, several San Diego State players alleged in a newspaper report Monday.

"I can't believe those guys," San Diego State center Kevin Wells said of BYU.

"They were calling our black guys 'punks' and 'niggers,'" Wells told The Tribune of San Diego.

The Aztecs upset BYU, 27-15, on Saturday night.

In a telephone interview Monday, BYU Coach LeVell Edwards said he was unaware of the allegations but added he would look into them.

"I don't put a lot of credence in a lot of what the players say. That was one of those games where there was a lot of taunting back and forth," Edwards said. "There was a lot of emotion going into the game... There's not a whole lot of love lost (between the schools), so the potential is there. Certainly, we're going to follow through and look at it. If that's the case, appropriate action will be taken. That's something we don't condone and will not tolerate."

Asked what he meant by appropriate action, Edwards declined to elaborate except to say, "I'll handle that part." He reiterated that neither he nor the Mormon school would tolerate that kind of behavior.

Fred Miller, San Diego State's athletic director, said he, too, planned to make inquiries to determine whether there was any substance to the allegations.

"That doesn't sound like them (BYU) and I'm surprised," Miller said. "I'd like to know the source of it because, obviously, BYU has black players, too."

According to San Diego State wide receiver Alfred Jackson, Saturday night's game wasn't the first time BYU players yelled racial remarks at Aztecs players during a game.

"Every time they started calling us 'niggers' and stuff, we just kept our composure and executed," Jackson said. "We knew it was coming, because they did that to us last year up there (in Provo, Utah), too."

Kentucky center Kemp leaves controversy for junior college

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Center Shawn Kemp, embroiled in controversy since he arrived at the University of Kentucky this fall, will enroll in a Texas junior college instead of a Florida community college as earlier reported.

In a statement issued by the University of Kentucky on Sunday night, UK coach Eddie Sutton said, "We are sorry to see him go, but we wish him the best of luck in junior college and in all his future endeavors."

Sutton is a former College of Southern-Idaho coach.

The 6-foot-11 player had indicated he would enroll at Trinity Valley Community College in Athens, Texas, according to the statement.

Earlier, it had been reported earlier that Kemp would enroll at Brevard Community College in Cocoa, Fla.

Leon Spencer, the coach at Trinity, told the Elkhardt (Ind.) Truth: "Some people don't know all the circumstances. We approached it from a positive standpoint. All things considered, we feel he deserves an opportunity to continue working on his (basketball) career."

"I talked to him and his mom. We discussed his problems, and I mentioned we have had transfers before who went on to have good careers."

Kemp will not be eligible at Trinity this season.

"He will hopefully get the necessary grades now and next summer, and he can do that here to have three remaining years at a major college. We plan for him to play on year here, then three after that at another school. At least that's the way I interpret the NCAA rules."

UK athletic director Cliff Hagan said Saturday that Kemp had not been comfortable at Kentucky and apparently wasn't making the necessary effort in his studies.

Hagan said Kemp's decision was somewhat of a relief for the athletic department, given the athlete's recent problems. "I think it's for the best," he said.

Last week, police said Kemp had pawned two gold chains teammate Sean Sutton, Sutton's son, earlier had reported stolen. Sean Sutton refused to press charges, and the police case was closed.

But university officials were investigating the incident to determine whether Kemp had violated the school's code of conduct.

Kemp, a native of Elkhardt, Ind., was one of the top high school basketball players in the nation last year.

But he was ineligible to play for the Wildcats because he had not met Proposition 48 requirements for incoming freshmen.

Kemp's mother, Barbara Brown, said in a statement to the Elkhardt Truth late Sunday: "As of tomorrow (Monday), Shawn will withdraw from classes at the University of Kentucky. He will enroll at Trinity Valley Community College on Tuesday."

She gave no specific reason for transfer, but said, "I've read enough things (written about Kemp) that have no truth to them."

Lasorda named ML top manager

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy Lasorda, already named manager of the year in the National League by the Baseball Writers' Association of America, now has received the same honor for both leagues from The Associated Press.

Lasorda was the overwhelming choice as the AP Major League Manager of the Year for 1988 in voting announced Monday.

The Los Angeles manager, who led his team to the World Series championship, received 571 points in voting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Boston Red Sox Manager Joe Morgan was second with 26 points, Oakland Manager Tony LaRussa was third with 25 points, and Detroit Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson was fourth with 11 points.

Ricks will play in 1st Centennial Bowl

POCATELLO (AP) — The teams for the second annual Centennial Bowl have been set, and the Nov. 18 game in Pocatello will be a rematch of the inaugural contest.

Officials of Ricks College in Rexburg advised officials Monday they would participate again in this year's game at the Idaho State University Holt Arena.

Walla Walla, Wash., Community College had previously accepted an invitation. Walla Walla has a 6-2 record with a game remaining. Ricks finished its season at 8-2.

Last year's game saw Ricks squeak out a 42-38 victory.

Girls' hoop star admits to drug use

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A star player on Nevada's 1986 state championship high school girls' basketball team says she and two other teammates regularly used drugs during the season.

In a published report in Sunday's editions of the Reno Gazette-Journal, former Reno High School guard Laurie Roza said the three snorted cocaine before practices and games and at halftime games.

Roza said one player for McQueen High, the school Reno defeated for the 1986 state championship, also used illegal drugs. In fact, Roza said she gave the player drugs before the title game.

Roza, a 1986 first-team all-conference and second-team All-State selection, said she stole from her parents to support her drug habit and has suffered permanent physical damage.

NCAA I-AA home may be Pocatello

POCATELLO (AP) — After drifting from town to town for years, the NCAA Division I-AA football championship may have found a long-term home in Pocatello.

But NCAA officials say the community will have to continue to show the kind of support the game received last year.

"We hope the event has found a home and a future," Dennis Poppe, director of men's championships for the NCAA, said last week after meeting with the Pocatello Sports Committee.

Poppe and Alfred Wade, NCAA media director, met with Sports Committee members to review plans for the second consecutive I-AA title game at Holt Arena, on the campus of Idaho State University.

More than 12,000 tickets were sold for the 1987 title game, and 9,000 already have been sold for this year's event.

Dal Ames is 2nd in coaching honor

TWIN FALLS — Dal Ames of Twin Falls has been named a runnerup for Idaho's 1988 Golden Diamond Volunteer Amateur Baseball Coach of the Year Award.

The award was presented by the United States Baseball Federation and sponsored by Oscar Mayer.

Twin Falls coach recuperates

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls High School baseball coach Bill Ingram is recuperating in a Scottsdale, Ariz., hospital following open-heart surgery Saturday.

Ingram suffered a heart attack while visiting his brother in Scottsdale and underwent quadruple bypass surgery on Saturday. He is expected to be in Scottsdale Memorial Hospital for two weeks and to recuperate for another week in Scottsdale before returning to Twin Falls.

Ingram is listed in satisfactory condition.

Pavelec named to all-league team

CALGARY — Former Twin Falls High School football player Mike Pavelec has been named to the first all-Western Intercollegiate Football League team.

Pavelec, a sophomore offensive tackle at the University of Calgary, was one of four Dinosaur offensive linemen to be named to the first all-conference unit.

The WIFL includes all football-playing colleges in Alberta, British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

Pavelec won the WIFL championship this year.

Calgary was a 1986 graduate of Twin Falls High School.

YFCA offers youth martial arts class

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley YFCA will offer a martial arts program for boys and girls ages 8 to 13.

The Judo classes will be taught by Shepard Reale and will meet Tuesdays from 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. The first two sessions will be offered for free.

The Judo classes will emphasize fun, self-confidence, security and self-discipline.

Further information can be obtained by phoning the Y at 783-4384.

Roesberry, Fleming take 3rd spot

POCATELLO — Sue Roesberry and Curtis Fleming of Twin Falls placed third in B-C doubles and Jim Jenkins of Twin Falls combined with John Rieck of Pocatello to finish second in the open doubles.

The Harrison Jewellers Open racquetball tournament over the weekend.

Newman, Spencer lead tournament

TWIN FALLS — Barbara Newman and Bill Spencer lead the all-events standings in both scratch and handicap, while the Bowldrome Inc. leads the A team division and Moser Machine and Valley Mishits are the Class-B leaders after the first weekend of the Twin Falls Women's Bowling Association Tournament.

In the A division, Newman leads with a 1,924 handicap score and with 1,614 scratch. In Class B, Spencer holds a 35-point lead in all-event handicap and a 20-pin advantage in scratch, in both cases over Karma Van Buren.

In the team competition, Bowldrome Inc. leads the A division handicap with eight pins over Magic Bowl Travel and the B team scratch standings by 130 pins over the same team.

In the B division handicap, Moser's has a 22-pin advantage over the Valley Mishits, while the Mishits led the scratch scores by 124 points over Falls Brand.

The tournament will continue next week at the Magic Bowl.

Seattle Mariners hire A's coach Jim Lefebvre for new manager

JIM LEFEBVRE Will lead Mariners

SEATTLE — (AP) Jim Lefebvre, a former major league and coach for Oakland last season, was selected on Monday as manager of the Seattle Mariners.

Lefebvre, 46, becomes the eighth manager in the Mariners' history and seventh under current owner George Argyros. The Mariners, who never have had a winning season, are headed into their 13th season and ninth under Argyros, a Southern California land developer.

"Jim was our No. 1 choice to manage the Mariners because he's a winner," said Woody Woodward, the Mariners vice president for baseball operations.

"Jim's background as a major league player, as an instructor, as an (Class) AAA manager and as a major league coach shows success in all his endeavors."

Lefebvre said the Mariners "have a chance to do some exciting things. It's going to take a little time, but I'm ready."

Lefebvre reportedly was asking for a two-year contract and the Mariners reportedly were offering $1,600,000 a year.

The Mariners thought they had the ingredients to finish at least .500 last season, but went 68-93 under

The Mariners finished 35½ games behind Oakland in the American League West. The Athletics won the AL pennant with a league championship series victory over Boston, but lost to the Los Angeles Dodgers in the World Series.

Lefebvre's professional baseball career spans 25 years including being named National League Rookie of the Year in 1965 while playing with the Dodgers.

He began his professional coaching and managing career in 1978 with the Dodgers and moved to the San Francisco Giants' organization in 1980.

While with the Giants, Lefebvre managed the team's Triple A Phoenix farm club, winning the Pacific Coast League title in 1985 and reaching the championship series in 1986.

In 1987, he joined the Athletics as a hitting instructor and third base coach.

The Mariners could lose starting pitcher Mike Moore, a former 17-game winner in 1985, during the winter because Moore is a free agent, who can sign with another major league club.

The Mariners reportedly are considering trading third baseman Jim Presley, an All-Star in 1986.

Howe is new Astros manager

ART HOWE Returns to Houston

HOUSTON — (AP) Art Howe, who played seven seasons for Houston, came home as manager Monday with a two-year contract and a vow to return the Astros to the playoffs.

Howe, 41, a coach for the past four seasons with the Texas Rangers, replaces Hal Lanier, who was fired at the end of last season. His only managing experience was four years in Puerto Rico.

"My most vivid memories as a player here were the 1980 playoffs, probably the most exciting playoff series that was ever played," Howe said.

"I like the talent we have here right now and we hope to bring that excitement back and go farther than we did in 1980."

Howe and Astros first base coach Matt Galante were finalists to become the 10th manager in the franchise's history.

Howe said his first priority would be to fill the remaining coaching vacancies and said former Astros player Phil Garner would be among the candidates.

Galante will remain with the team, Howe said, and likely will move to third base.

He said Yogi Berra, also retained from the Astros, would serve as hitting coach.

Les Moss remains as the pitching coach.

The Astros won the National League Western Division title in 1986 with Lanier as the rookie manager.

But the Astros faded in September the next two seasons and finished in fifth place last season, 121 games behind first-place Los Angeles.

Astros General Manager Bill Wood stressed Howe's player communication skills, for which Lanier often was criticized.

"His communication skills checked out well with every source, and his motivational skills ranked high with all those we talked to," Wood said.

Howe left the Astros as a free agent after the 1983 season and closed out his career with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Howe had a .250 batting average and hit a career high .296 with the Astros in 1981.

Howe said he would continue the aggressive style of baseball that Lanier brought to the team.

"I agree with Hal on that phase of the game and we've got some guys on the team that can steal bases, especially (center fielder) Gerald Young," Howe said.

Astros second baseman Bill Doran said his brief experiences with Howe in 1982 made him feel comfortable with him as manager.

"He was really a good influence on me when I first came up," Doran said. "Some older guys go out of their way to help younger players and he was one of those who helped me a lot."

"I really appreciated that. He didn't have to do that and no one asked him to do it."

Howe played through several injuries with the Astros, including a broken jaw in 1978 when he was hit in the face by a pitch from Montreal's Scott Sanderson.

"He was bad playing three days later wearing a protective mask."

"He was a hard-nosed, aggressive player, and I'm sure he'll bring the same style back to the Astros," Wood said.

Richter Jim Deshaies said he liked both Howe and Galante.

"When they reduced the finalists to Matt and Art, I knew we couldn't lose," Deshaies said. "Art won't have to go through that get-acquainted stage. He can go right to work because he already knows the organization."

Howe said another priority would be to resign free agent Nolan Ryan and that former Astros outfielder Jose Cruz would be considered for a coaching position on the club.

Howe missed the 1983 season with the Astros with surgery on his left ankle and right elbow. He signed with the Cardinals in 1984 and was released in 1985.

He became the Rangers' hitting instructor under Bobby Valentine and was a candidate to manage at Pittsburgh in 1986 and interviewed with Seattle and the Chicago White Sox this year.

College football: Colorado, Washington State break AP Top 20

By The Associated Press

Colorado's football team is back in the Top Twenty for the first time in 10 years. But the stay could be a short one.

The Buffaloes ranked 19th in this week's Associated Press poll, visit No. 7 Nebraska Saturday. Colorado, coming off a 45-8 victory over Missouri, has lost 19 of its last 20 games against the Cornhuskers.

"The game we have this weekend will determine if we can stay in," said Colorado Coach Bill McCartney, whose team is 7-2. "But in the meantime, it's great to be ranked. It means a lot for the program."

Washington State, 6-3 after a 24-21 win over Stanford, returned to the Top Twenty after a seven-year absence.

"For us to be ranked No. 20 is good recognition for the job we've done," Washington State Coach Dennis Erickson said. "It's a very good thing for our program."

While Colorado and Washington State moved into the Second Ten, there were no changes in the Top Ten.

Notre Dame remained No. 1 with a 64-11 victory over Wake Forest, receiving 42 of 59 first-place votes and 1,160 of a possible 1,380 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Second-ranked Southern California, which trounced California 35-3, gained some ground on the Irish. The Trojans, who host Notre Dame on Nov. 26, received 15 first-place votes and 1,122 points.

Last week, with 68 members of the 60-man panel participating, Notre Dame led 44-11 in first-place ballots and 1,144-1,097 in points.

Third-ranked Miami and No. 4 West Virginia each received one first-place vote. The Hurricanes, who beat Tulsa 34-3, had 1,065 points while the Mountaineers, who routed Cincinnati 51-13, had 979.

Rounding out the Top Ten are

Florida State, UCLA, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Auburn and Wyoming.

Florida State, which blasted South Carolina 69-0, received 933 points.

UCLA, a 16-6 winner over Oregon, received 864 points; Nebraska, which defeated Iowa State 51-16, had 840; Oklahoma, which edged Oklahoma State 31-28, received 752; Auburn, which downed Southern Mississippi 38-3, had 719; and Wyoming, which crushed Texas-El Paso 51-6, received 655.

The Second Ten consists of Arkansas, LSU, Michigan, Oklahoma State, Syracuse, Clemson, Georgia, Alabama, Colorado and Washington State.

Last week, it was Arkansas, Oklahoma State, LSU, Michigan, South Carolina, Syracuse, Clemson, Georgia, Alabama and Georgia, with Brigham Young and Indiana tied for 20th.

BYU was upset by San Diego State 27-15 Saturday and Illinois nipped Indiana 21-20.

for the fight. "He was a great fighter then; time takes its toll."

"There were indications Monday night that time might be catching up with Leonard."

"I knew the guy could fight," Leonard said of Laloche. "Hell, he fought like a champion."

Laloche did give an estimated crowd of 12,000 in the outdoor arena their money's worth.

"He's a hell of a fighter," Laloche said. "He was a better man tonight."

For Leonard, the victory was his 35th and his 25th knockout. He has lost once.

Laloche now is 33-3 with 26 knockouts.

Leonard earned a minimum of $15 million from the match, which was shown on pay-per-view and closed circuit. Laloche earned about $5 million.

There had been some disparaging remarks about the fight also being for the junior middleweight title, a class launched four years ago by the WBC and was being recognized by the WBC for the first time Monday night.

"They say it's contrived," Leonard said. "Every title means something to me."

a 20-yard double reverse by Reggie Langhorne for a touchdown and a four-yard touchdown pass from Kosar to tight end Ozzie Newsome with 7:26 left in the game. The reception was the 600th of Newsome's NFL career.

The Browns made it close in the fourth quarter but couldn't complete the rally, Cleveland Coach Marty Schottenheimer said.

"I was proud the way we came back," Schottenheimer said. "I felt we had the opportunity to win the game but Houston made the plays when they had to."

The Oilers struck quickly in the third quarter after Johnny Meads blocked a punt by Cleveland's Max Runager at the Browns' 30.

On the third play, Moon scrambled out of the pocket and hit Givins in the end zone with just 1:54 gone in the second half.

Givins started on the left side and zig-zagged his way to the end zone to make the diving touchdown catch in front of Browns safety Felix Wright.

Houston scored again later in the period on a three-yard run by Rozier before Langhorne scored.

season, on a one-yard run in the second quarter, gave the Oilers a 7-3 lead after a defense dominated first half.

Moon hit passes of 22 yards to Givins and 24 yards to Drew Hill and then the Oilers ran six straight times with Highsmith scoring on the final rush.

Kosar, who finished 16 of 33 for 219 yards, hit passes of 16 yards to Langhorne and 15 yards to Earnest Byner in the first quarter to set up a 40-yard field goal by Matt Bahr.

Cleveland reached Houston's six-yard line late in the second quarter, but Tim Manoa was dropped for a four-yard loss on a pass completion and Kosar's final pass into the end zone was incomplete as time expired.

The first half ended with Glanville angrily confronting two officials after time had expired.

Glanville thought the Browns had 12 players on the field for the final play.

Glanville was flagged for coming on to the field but the penalty was withdrawn because time had expired in the half.

was 8-31, gave the Oilers 148 yards on 40 attempts.

That enabled Houston to hold the ball for nearly 36 minutes, 12 more than Cleveland, which ran the ball just 16 times.

Two plays before Langhorne's run, Houston's Doug Smith received an illegal use of hands penalty that erased an interception by cornerback Patrick Allen.

After Cleveland drew within 21-17, Moon completed a 42-yard pass on third down to Leonard Harris, who caught the ball between defenders Mark Harper and Brian Washington and was tackled at the Browns' 35.

"They wanted to give Harris the game ball but it took all our players," Oilers Coach Jerry Glanville said. "We'd have to give out 50 game balls."

Idaho within 2 games of 2nd Big Sky title

BOISE (AP) — With an incredible comeback victory over Nevada-Reno last weekend, Idaho is within two victories of capturing its second straight Big Sky Conference football championship.

And Vandal quarterback John Fries is on track for some honors of his own.

Latest I-AA statistics show Fries is the national Division I-AA leader in total offense, averaging 270 yards per game.

Idaho, 7-1 and 5-1 in Big Sky, is ranked No. 2 in the latest NCAA poll, trailing only Stephen F. Austin. Boise State, 7-2, crept up to No. 16; Montana, 8-2, was ranked 18th in the poll this week, dropping four places despite defeating Montana State on Saturday.

A big reason is Fries, last year's Big Sky player of the year. The junior quarterback has gained a net of 2,160 yards in eight games, completing 169 of 207 passes, 55 percent good for 2,261 yards and 15 touchdowns.

Overall, the Vandals, who need only victories over winless Idaho State this weekend and next week against Boise State to clinch the league crown, are third in the nation in total offense, averaging 445 yards per game.

Heading into the final games, Nevada-Reno's Jim Zacheo holds only a tiny lead over Northern Arizona's Greg Wyatt in passing efficiency. But Wyatt won't be able to challenge, because he suffered a severe knee injury in last week's victory over Northern Arizona, underwent surgery on Friday and will be eight months recovering.

Weber State's Jeff Carlson is third in passing efficiency, followed by Fries.

Weber's Fine Unga, meanwhile, has a huge lead in rushing, heading into the final two games.

He has become the Big Sky's first 1,000-yard rusher, with 1,067 yards in 189 carries, an average of 5.6 yards per carry.

Unga also has scored 11 touchdowns rushing, the same number as Nevada-Reno's Chavez Poger. Poger has 933 yards in nine games, averaging 104 yards per game to 118 for Unga.

Reno's Tony Logan, with 47 catches for 859 yards, holds a narrow lead among receivers over Weber's Wade Orton, who has 46 receptions for 859 yards.

Consumer debt is smallest in 10 months

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans took out $1.8 billion more in consumer debt than they paid off in September, the smallest advance in 10 months, the government reported Monday.

The Federal Reserve said that the September increase in consumer debt was down from an August rise of $5.32 billion and was the smallest monthly advance since a $1.79 billion rise in November 1987.

While much of the decline in September was traced to weak auto sales, economists said that the pattern of the past several months showed that consumers had grown more cautious in their buying plans. The July 1988 consumer debt rose at an annual rate of 6.75 percent, down significantly from a 10.2 percent growth rate in the first six months of the year.

Consumer debt in the third quarter grew at one of the slowest rates of this recovery, said Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm. There are increasing signs that consumers are becoming more cautious as they cut back on spending and try to reduce their debt loads.

Consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of all economic activity. Evans said the consumer slowdown is a primary reason he is looking for economic growth next year to be less than half of this year's pace.

The overall economy, as measured by the gross national product, is expected to rise by 3.6 percent this year, the best performance since 1984. Evans predicted 1989 growth would be a lackluster 2 percent.

For September, auto loans edged up a modest $49 million following a $2.2 billion increase in August. The big drop in auto loans reflected the absence of widespread auto sales incentive programs, the government said. These programs to reduce swollen inventories had boosted sales in the three previous years.

The category which includes credit card debt rose by $1.5 billion in September, down from a $2.6 billion August increase.

Bank and credit union loans not secured by real estate edged up $242 million, compared to an August increase of $449 million, while loans for mobile homes actually fell by $29 million following a $53 million increase in August.

Saying goodbye to Goldie and Silvie

It was early in the morning when I received word that Goldie and Silvie had gone to that Big Fishbowl in the Sky.

"Dad, the goldfish aren't swimming," said the kids.
"Of course they're swimming," I said. "It's like the poet said: Birds gotta fly; fish gotta swim. Now let Daddy go back to sleep and I'll give you lots of money."

The room was quiet for two minutes. Then the children returned with another bulletin: If the fish were indeed swimming, they were doing a real slow backstroke.

This time, no amount of money would make the kids leave the room. So we all went downstairs to the fishbowl.

And sure enough, the fish weren't swimming.
In fact, the fish weren't doing much of anything. They were sort of floating at opposite ends of the bowl, completely ignoring each other.

This I recognized as a bad sign. It meant one of two things: Either the two fish were becoming incompatible, in which case we needed a new

And you can forget about Hicks, too. These goldfish, they don't fetch; they don't jump through hoops - and they don't roll over until it's too late, if you catch my drift. It's like having an Iguana as a pet. But at least with an Iguana, he might get lost and turn up over at the neighbors, maybe stir up a little excitement.

fishbowl, or they had bought the farm, in which case we had a spare fishbowl.

Frankly, I was leaning toward Door No. 2, because the fish were showing absolutely no enthusiasm.

So now it became a question of how to break the news to the kids.

I mean, how do you tell them their little fish buddies have checked out and will never again swim monotonously around in circles?

"The fish croaked, didn't they?" said my son.

"Kicked the bucket," I said. "They're history. Pushing up daisies. It's Davey Jones' locker for these two."

The kids got the idea. Say what you want about the state of education in this country. But when kids see fish floating belly up, you won't stump them with a round of "What's Wrong With This Picture?"

I myself had mixed emotions about the sudden demise of the goldfish.

They were sort of a pain in the neck, if you want to know the truth. My son had won them at the state fair, after spending half my paycheck toosing a Ping-Pong ball into some fishbowl.

One fish was gold, the other silver, so he named them Goldie and Silvie, which I thought was a nice touch.

At least he didn't go with any of these new-wave fish names: Moon Unit or Ambrosia, something like that. No, it was Goldie and Silvie.

Solid, respectable, All-American fish names.

But let me tell you something about winning goldfish at the fair: Be prepared to keep reaching for your wallet.

Because they hand you the fish in a plastic bag filled with water.

Go now you have to buy a bowl for the fish.

And food for the fish.

And tablets to purify the water for the fish.

And goofy little decorations for the bottom of the bowl, pebbles and plastic moss and stuff, so he doesn't think he's living in some sort of fish cement in the South Bronx.

Expensewise, it is like being responsible for Flipper, at least that's the way I felt.

But of course the guy at the state fair didn't mention I'd have to see a pawnbroker to keep these fish alive.

Genealogist may have found Camelot

The Associated Press

LONDON — The ruins of a castle owned by generations of a Scottish Kennedy family could have been King Arthur's Camelot, a genealogist said Monday.

Greenan Castle, high on the Ayrshire cliffs of southwest Scotland, was built on the site of a 6th century fort that "matches almost exactly" the description and location of a fortress in Arthurian legend, said Harold Brooks-Baker.

Although the story of King Arthur and his court at Camelot are legend, historians believe there probably was a British ruler named Arthur who fought Saxon invaders from what is now the Netherlands and the north German coast. The shadowy figure was embellished by storytellers into a chivalrous hero, slayer of monsters, leader of the Knights of the Round Table and seeker of the Holy Grail.

Brooks-Baker, publishing director of Burke's Peerage, said researchers had discovered the castle site was a key military post for King Arthur and his knights.

They made the discovery, he said, while carrying out research to prove that the medieval Scottish barony of Greenan is an active title of nobility.

Norma L. Goodrich of Claremont, Calif., a specialist in Arthuriana, carried out separate research into the fort's history and believed it was one of Arthur's six castles and "the most important one from a military point of view," Brooks-Baker said.

He quoted her as saying: "It was the custom of the king to refer to the castle he was using at the time as 'Camelot.' ... In my opinion, Greenan was one of King Arthur's forts."

The seventh marquess of Ailsa, Archibald David Kennedy, will refer the barony, including the castle site, "to somebody who will allow the historical research to continue," Brooks-Baker said.

The title of baron is tied to ownership of the land and not to a blood lineage, he said, adding there was likely to be a blood tie between the Scottish Kennedys and the Irish Kennedy family from whom the late U.S. President John F. Kennedy was descended. JFK's form often was referred to as "Camelot."

"We're trying to establish a blood relationship," Brooks-Baker said.

Mother becomes undercover agent

By CHARLES E. BEGGS
The Associated Press

SALEM, Ore. — A woman who became an undercover agent for six weeks to try to free her grown daughters from the grip of drug dependence also helped break up a major methamphetamine operation, authorities say.

The 44-year-old bartender, who asked to be identified only as Pat, aided in the arrests of two of the five men taken into custody Wednesday, said Police Chief Jim Harper of nearby Dallas.

Several additional suspects were being sought, Harper said Thursday.

Pat, a grandmother of two, said she decided to get involved because her daughters, ages 24 and 21, use methamphetamine and had been virtually living out of their cars.

"The people were getting all their money for drugs," Pat said.

The woman, who often wore a hidden microphone during her undercover work, was accompanied by police early Wednesday to a state park west of Salem, where she had arranged to sell chemicals to a suspect.

Harper said 45 officers from six agencies later served search warrants at three Polk County residences. Two men were arrested at the park and three others were arrested at a farm in Dallas, a town of 8,900 about 16 miles west of Salem.

Officers also seized an ounce of methamphetamine and several gallons of chemicals used to manufacture the drug, Harper said.

"This lady really came through," the chief said. "Talk about being involved and making that sacrifice, she really did."

Pat said she had accompanied her daughters to a farm where they allegedly purchased drugs, then gave the address to Dallas police. The department was aware of the farm but didn't have enough evidence at the time, she said.

"I led the people (at the farm) to believe I needed money and I needed it bad and told them I knew some people where I could get some chemicals," she said. "They really took the bait."

She became well-acquainted with the people and most of the time wasn't too worried about the environment, she said. But once she became afraid when she was carrying a hidden microphone and one of the suspects said, "I want the wire (listening device) you're wearing."

"I didn't realize he was kidding," she said. "You can't tell when he's kidding. I was scared to death."

Dying woman attends her own funeral

By ELIZABETH LIGHTFOOT
The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — A woman who is dying of pancreatic cancer collected material for the final chapter of her autobiography Saturday when she attended her own funeral.

Carrie Munson planned the funeral before her death because she wanted to see the faces of "friends, associates and enemies," she said.

Munson, 62, is a former heroin addict with a fourth-grade education who went on to get a college degree in her 40s and become a broadcaster and social worker.

She is writing an autobiography, "Bury Me in My Cap and Gown," and said the funeral would be the perfect way to end the book.

"You can't communicate with your friends and tell them how you feel inside a box," Munson said.

"This is a moment in my life that I will never forget and after I'm gone I'll remember it too," said Munson, wearing the cap and gown she wore when she graduated from University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee in 1975.

The outfit made her stand out among the more than 100 people who paid their respects at the New Hope Baptist Church. "As I look around, I don't see any enemies. All I see is friends," she said.

The Rev. R.L. Lathan used his eulogy to praise Munson's determination and faith in God.

"You have stood up with faith," he said. "Carrie, there is no guarantee you won't be able to wear that cap and gown again. Many of us here with you may beat you to the grave."

For Munson, the cap and gown are something to be proud of.

Until she was in her 40s, Munson had only a fourth-grade education. After 25 years of drug addiction and small-time crime and several suicide attempts, she decided to do something with her life.

Munson said she prayed, began to hate the drugs and set out to prove herself by attending college.

"I knew I wasn't stupid. I knew I wasn't dumb," she said. "If I take what I learned on the street and put it into this B.A. ... I'll have a masterpiece."

Munson graduated with a degree in journalism and mass communications in 1975. Since then, she has worked as a radio jazz show host and as a social worker with Wisconsin Correctional Services.

"The doctor says I'm dying. I know I'm a very sick woman. I have a lot of pain," Munson said. "But I don't plan on going home, lying down and dying."

Ziff Sistrunk said he took a bus from Chicago to attend Saturday's ceremony of reading about Munson's funeral plans in a newspaper article.

He sang the Frank Sinatra hit "I Did It My Way" during the ceremony, saying he had read that Munson cherished the song.

Michael Jordan to appear on 'breakfast of champions' box

General Mills, the cereal company, has named its new Wheaties box cover champion: Chicago Bulls basketball star Michael Jordan. He admits to having tasted the "breakfast of champions" for the first time less than two years ago. It's not known how much Jordan will get for his three-year box-cover reign, but he estimates his endorsements total about $5 million annually. Being on the box isn't all fame and fortune. Olympic polo vaulter Bob Richards, the first cover champion in the 1950s, says, "The standard joke for years at breakfast where I spoke was to get me a bowl of Wheaties while everybody else ate steak." Now that would be a real test of an endorsement.

Jury awards Koo Stark damages from newspaper

Remember Koo Stark, the porn actress that the then-Randy Andy romanced to Mummy's consternation in the days before Fergie? Well, she's back in the news. A British jury has awarded her $534,000 in damages on charges London's Sunday People newspaper libeled her by saying she carried on an adulterous affair with Prince Andrew after she was married. The court also awarded her $90,000 in legal costs. Stark told the jury she had never spoken publicly to confirm or deny an affair with Andrew before she married, despite six years of harassment by newspapers.

The lawyer for the 32-year-old Stark, who is now a photographer, said allegations made in the newspaper in 1985 that she indulged a "lingering love" to have secret meetings with the prince were made at a time when her marriage was in trouble and destroyed hopes of a reconciliation with her then-husband, Timothy Jeffries, the Green Stamp heir. That marriage lasted less than a year. A spokesman for the tabloid's owner Robert Maxwell said the paper would appeal. Sunday People's lawyers did not claim the articles were true but said they were not defamatory.

Fitzwater is not a 'Doonesbury' fan

The "Doonesbury" strip has been hammering away at Vice President George Bush and the Reagan White House for years, but White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says he personally doesn't read it. During a routine White House briefing, Fitzwater was asked if he had seen the latest Garry Trudeau strip with Reagan showing an elected Bush where the National Security Council meets. The vice president, a member of NSC, reportedly had little if anything to say during NSC meetings about weapons sales to Iran or the use of those profits to fund Contra activity. As to reading Doonesbury, Fitzwater said, "I don't read Doonesbury. He glorifies drugs." One wag observed, "How does he know if he doesn't read the strip?" A spokesman for Trudeau's syndicate, Universal Press Syndicate, said the president's spokesman is "perfectly entitled to his opinion. I don't find that an accurate description of the cartoon."

Oliver North speaks before crowd of hecklers

Oliver North spoke at Boston College before a vigorous crowd of hecklers. He didn't speak about his Iran-Contra scandal, trading arms to the ayatollah for hostages or his criminal indictment. His topic was "Family Trust and Commitment." He told his crowd the "good news is that in six days you're going to have a full-time governor back here." And then in answer to the jeering, the former Marine lieutenant colonel said, "In a previous occupation I would have gotten combat pay for this." He didn't get combat pay, but he received something a bit better from the university — a $25,000 speaker's fee.

Whales receive procrastinators' top award

MIAMI (AP) — The Procrastinators Club of America issued its top award to the California gray whales that dalled so long off the coast of Alaska after they became stuck in ice, a club official said Monday. "They exemplify the highest standard of procrastination," said Joseph Weiss of North Bay Village, the club's secretary-treasurer. "They waited until the last minute to go down to their spawning grounds." The Philadelphia-based club has not yet decided what the prize will be or when and how it will be awarded; Weiss said.

King Tut mask, 1597 map of New World challenge college administrators

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — A 19-foot-tall King Tut mask, 200 old-time music machines and a 1597 map of the New World are testing college administrators' ingenuity in finding uses for the sometimes odd gifts of well-meaning alumni.

The one-ton King Tut mask was donated to the University of Mississippi two years ago by a Houston developer who was an Ole Miss grad. The mask had hung in a building sold by the developer, said university spokeswoman Barbara Lago.

The school has put the disassembled bronze, gopper and aluminum mask in storage for possible use in the foyer of a new library now under consideration, Lago says. "We've had all kinds of gifts given to us," the school's development director, Don Fruge, said. "We even had somebody build a 2 million gallon reservoir on our golf course to provide water for irrigation." The music machines, part of collection valued at $500,000, were donated to Mississippi State University last year by a 1949 graduate who once played in the school's band.

The music machines and other memorabilia dating to the Civil War will be put on public display. More than 20,000 pieces of sheet music also included in the collection will be used for research by music students, school officials said.

The 400-year-old map was donated to the University of Southern Mississippi by James Riley, a retired Hattiesburg insurance adjuster and his wife.

The library has been the beneficiary of so many gifts from them over the past 30 years, they've dubbed it the Riley collection, assistant public relations director Phil Hearn said. Among the Rileys' gifts: old books and a 1962 mechanical pencil. All have been put on display.

Sandra Guest, a development assistant at Ole Miss, said the gifts, referred to as "in-kind donations" because they do not involve money, sometimes are extremely valuable. The King Tut mask, for example, is worth about $100,000.

"It doesn't represent a significant portion of the school's budget, however," Guest said. "I really can't give a number because we may get one really valuable gift every five years."

Some in-kind gifts, however, do generate income.

Three acres of Palm Beach real estate was bequeathed to Ole Miss in 1986 by an alumnus. A Bonanza Steakhouse and a gas station sit on the property and the school now receives rent from the two businesses, Fruge said.

Tugaloo College, a private school in central Mississippi, receives a portion of the purse from an Ohio breeder every time a horse of the same name wins. So far this year, the school has gotten nearly $11,400.

Would-be Sinatras, Madonnas live out their singing fantasies

CHICAGO (AP) — Larry Williams once sang professionally, Tara Drzal has never sung in front of an audience before and Mike Sternberg has been singing for months with a voice described as fingernails scraped over a chalkboard.

Even so, the three were among the would-be Sinatras, Madonnas and Elvises living out fantasies of being a singing star at a recent Record-A-Hit show at Choice's.

Tuesday night patrons of the saloon can get up on stage, grab the microphone and sing along with tapes of hit songs recorded without the lead vocal.

"It makes you feel like a rock star once you loosen up," said Jennifer Nicoll, a college student.

Larry Conoran, a bartender at another tavern, said, "You can be anybody you want to be up there. It's a fantasy."

The singers got a free tape of their performance, said Rob Broms, a former sales manager who saw a similar audience participation show in San Francisco 2 1/2 years ago and founded Record-A-Hit in Chicago.

Record-A-Hit sets up shop at five different Chicago-area nightclubs each week. The company also does private functions, special video tapings and even goes on band tours.

The concept is big business in Japan, where it is known as "karaoke," or "empty orchestra."

"Everything is free for the customer except the beer," said Rick Asta, Choice's owner. "This really helps my place's Tuesday bluffs, with bigger crowds."

Record-A-Hit offers over 600 selections — songs from the 1930s to the 1980s.

"I pick songs whose words I'm familiar with," said Ms. Drzal, a computer programming trainee.

Singers get plenty of help — copies of lyrics, tips on vocalizing, echoes and other electronic effects, backup singers and props like sunglasses and cowboy hats.

Master of ceremonies Steve Morse coaxes people on stage like a carnival barker.

"Make a tape. They're great little stocking stuffers for Christmas," he implored.

The show attracts an occasional Elvis or Michael Jackson impersonator.

At Choice's one Tuesday, Dave Fanning, who works for Record-A-Hit, did Presley's "I Can't Help Falling In Love With You."

"Then you, you're too full," he kept telling the crowd, a la Elvis.

"Gee, Elvis lives," yelled Williams, a former professional singer and current AT&T supervisor who had done Sinatra's "Summer Wind" earlier.

Judge sentences bride to 30 days for embezzling to pay for wedding

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — A 26-year-old woman has been sentenced to 30 days in jail for embezzling almost $5,000 to pay for her wedding to a sheriff's deputy because she "wanted to look better than her sister did."

Kelly Susan Horton was sentenced Monday after pleading guilty Aug. 28 to embezzling $4,870 from what was then American National Bank in Plainwell, where she worked as a teller. Horton used the money to pay for her wedding in August 1986, according to court records.

U.S. District Judge Richard Enslsen also ordered Horton to pay full restitution to her creditors.

"This isn't the worst crime I've ever seen," Enslsen said, "but it's the shallowest."

"You say that what you wanted was to look as good as your sister or better," Enslsen said. "Your father had already contributed money that he probably did not have and you repaid that kindness by stealing."

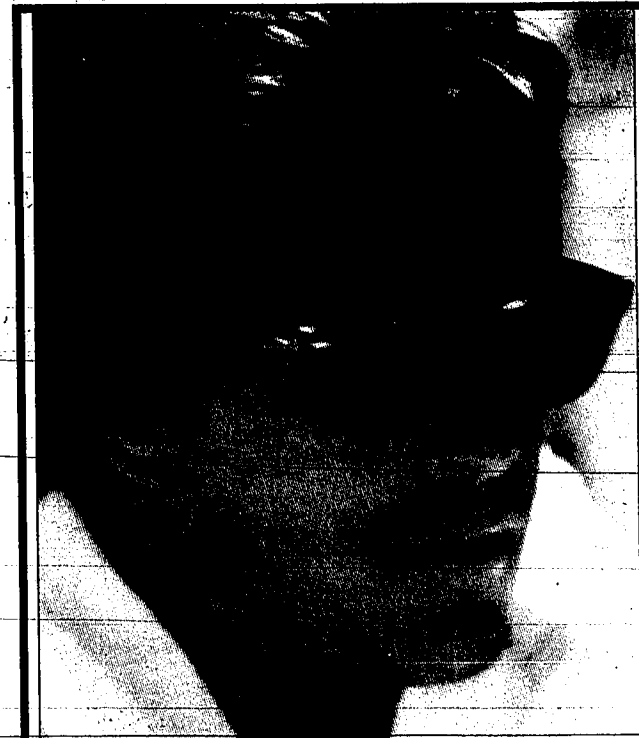

Because Horton's husband, Ken Horton, is an Allegan County sheriff's deputy, she will serve her sentence in the Kalamazoo or Kent County Jail.

Horton declined to comment on his wife's sentence.

"You knew that your husband was a law enforcement officer, but it wasn't important to you that he might be embarrassed," Enslsen said. "What a terrible crime to commit."

According to court records, among the items Horton purchased with the embezzled money were a wedding dress veil that cost $300, wedding invitations that cost $200, a wedding cake that cost $150 and a band for the reception for $500.

No Life Insurance is Worth Dying For

Lifeline Ultimate

Is the most revolutionary advancement in life insurance since life insurance began.

RETIREMENT BENEFIT

$40,000 CASH PAID DIRECTLY TO YOU!

($40,000, example) Payable in cash direct to you at your retirement age 65. This ($40,000, example), is based on a plan that is started at age 40, therefore the amount may vary depending on the age at which it is taken out. Also, this benefit as well as the rest of the benefits can be increased with larger deposits. The retirement cash of ($40,000, example) can be taken in one lump sum at age 65 or paid out over your entire lifetime at the rate of $403 per month. By age 90 that's $120,900 total. MORE GOOD-NEWS! Don't wait until 65. Start by age 60 and take $275 per month. By age 90, that's a total of $99,000.

*Based on current life annuity factors.

NEW! INNOVATIVE! DIFFERENT!

$25,000 CASH PAID DIRECTLY TO YOU!

An Accelerated Benefit which makes an immediate cash payment equal to 25% of the Policy face amount ($25,000, example) payable in cash direct to you if (or when) you suffer from life-threatening, catastrophic illnesses, such as: •Heart Attack •Stroke •Coronary Artery Surgery •Life-Threatening Cancer •Renal Failure •Lifeline Ultimate is the only life insurance policy that can provide living benefits when they're needed most. ($25,000, example) after plan has been in force for two months - cash paid directly to you.

The Accelerated Benefit pays cash direct to you regardless of any other hospital or medical benefits you have (or don't have). Cash may be used to pay medical costs, debts, home mortgage, income while out of work, children's education, etc.

THERE ARE NO RESTRICTIONS ON THE USE OF THIS MONEY!

$100,000 CASH PAID TO YOUR WIDOW OR OTHER BENEFICIARY!
Traditional Death Benefit Protection

($100,000, example) Payable in cash to your widow or other beneficiary upon your death from any cause to any age. The Death Benefit ($100,000, example) is cash to be used so others depending on you can go on living as if you were here to support them, paying for food, mortgages, education, clothes, Christmas presents, braces on their teeth, bicycles, etc. Would a banker or a mortician deliver $100,000, to your widow? We Will!

Cost Of This 3-Way Plan?

This illustration was based on a Male, Age 40 (non-smoker). The premiums were $137 per month for only 7 years. Benefits continue for LIFE. The projected values are neither guarantees nor estimate, but are based on the company's current interest rate of 9.2% which it has been crediting on its Ultimate Life plans since June 17, 1986.

The total premiums at age 65 have been $137 per month x 12 months x 7 years = $11,508. His retirement account at age 65 is $40,045 in cash or $403 per month for life. Would $137 per month paid in to an individual Retirement Account (IRA) provide similar benefits - NOT EVEN CLOSE!

Lifeline Ultimate is available only from Jackson National. This company is rated A+ (Superior) by A.M. Best company, the independent insurance company rating service. Plan Code 61702 Policy Form L1000

Fish

No wonder he had that evil grin on his face as he walked away.
Let me tell you something else about goldfish: They are not exactly the most affectionate little critters around.
Our goldfish didn't say a word in the three months we had them. In fact, they hardly looked at me the whole time. I'd walk by their bowl and wave, nothing.
"Miming, boys. I'd say cheerfully. Nothing. It was like three months of the silent treatment."
And you can forget about tricks, too. These goldfish, they don't fetch; they don't jump through hoops — and they don't roll over until it's too late, if you catch my drift.

It's like having an iguana as a pet. But at least with an iguana, he might get lost and turn up over at the neighbors, maybe stir up a little excitement.
Hell, I practically begged these goldfish to take a walk on me. Forget it. I was wasting my breath.

Anyway, the kids were pretty broken up about the fish, at least until the Pee-wee Herman show came on.
But we did have a little fish funeral for Goldie and Silvie. We buried them over by the rosebushes, which seemed fitting to me, since the rosebushes had more personality than those stupid fish.

Now the children want to replace

Goldie and Silvie with new fish. But I told them replacing twin legends, two giants of the fish world, would take time.

At least until the pet store opens.

Mother

She eventually supplied some chemicals given to her by the Dallas police.
Pat said she's heard talk of marijuana and cocaine in her jobs but knew little about methamphetamine.
"I just can't believe the chemicals that go into it," she said. "I just can't believe the chemicals people put into their bodies. One of them is used to develop pictures. That tells you something."

Her experience convinced her methamphetamine use is rampant.
"It's like an epidemic. They can't make this stuff fast enough," she said. "A pound sells for $16,000."

She said her daughters knew nothing of her undercover work before the arrests. But now that her actions have been disclosed, she said, her oldest daughter is angry at her but her youngest daughter isn't.
Now that her cover is blown, she says she's a bit worried about her safety.

"But it's not going to stop me" if there's more she can do, she said.

Police arrest couple after fight on their wedding night

LORAIN, Ohio (AP) — Newlyweds were booked into the Lorain County Jail on their wedding night after being arrested in a drunken fight with each other, a bystander and police, authorities said Monday.

Roger McGee, 28, and Tamara Lynn McGee, 19, were married Saturday afternoon.

About 10 hours later, early Sunday, the Lorain Police Department says it received a report that Mrs. McGee had been assaulted.

When police arrived at the couple's home, they discovered McGee fighting with Miles Burch, 28, also of Lorain, said patrolman Raymond West. According to a police report, Burch said he was attempting to help Mrs. McGee.

When police tried to break up the fight, both McGees fought with officers and had to be handcuffed, police said. Once in a police car, McGee tried to kick out the rear window, the police report said.

Mrs. McGee had an asthma attack at the jail and was taken to St. Joseph Hospital and Health Center, where a hospital spokesman said she had to be put in restraints before she could be treated. She was returned to the jail after treatment but was taken to the hospital again because of another asthma attack, police said.

McGee was released from jail Monday after pleading no contest to resisting arrest, said municipal court clerk Cindy Paysor. Charges of disorderly conduct and disorderly conduct while intoxicated were merged into that count, she said.

Municipal Judge V. Paul Timko sentenced McGee to 10 days in jail and ordered him to pay $250 and court costs, but suspended the jail time and all but $50 of the fine and the court costs, Ms. Paysor said.

Mrs. McGee was released Sunday on $700 bond, Ms. Paysor said. She was charged with resisting arrest and disorderly conduct while intoxicated. Reached by phone Monday, she declined comment.

Burch was released on $50 bond Sunday and pleaded innocent to charges of disorderly conduct and persisting in the conduct after police told him to stop. He is not listed in the telephone directory and couldn't be reached for comment.
