Bush declares he'll lead way in deficit battle

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President-elect George Bush told the new Democratic leader of the Senate Thursday that he will take the lead in proposing ways to pare the huge federal budget deficit.

Faced with calls from Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell and other top Democrats to make the first move on deficit reduction, Bush said, "That is exactly what I intend to do" once he becomes president.

"I am confident that we can work together," Bush said as he and Mitchell faced reporters on the White House driveway after breakfast together, the latest in a series of culinary goodwill gestures toward congressional leaders.

"I'm not naive about it, but it is, and there will be different approaches on some of these major problems facing this country," said the vice president. He said he will take the lead on the deficit and then there will be, I'm sure, active discussion ... negotiation with whoever he designates to try to solve these problems.

Bush also said he won't be rushed into making Cabinet appointments despite persistent news media speculation that may be troubling to prospects such as John Tower, the former Texas senator keeping a long vigil for the Pentagon opening.

"We're trying to be prudent and do the proper work required to back up appointments at all levels," Bush said.

Asked about reports of internal strife within his camp over whether to give the Pentagon post to Tower, a former Senate Armed Services Committee chairman now a paid consultant to several major defense contractors, Bush said, "Any time there seems to be stories that may be hurtful to somebody it concerns me no matter who it is. Senator Tower's a friend of mine but he knows that the process takes a while to go forward."

Mitchell said he and Bush did not discuss taxes or any budget-cutting specifics, but he called the vice president "keenly aware of the seriousness of the deficit situation."

The senator called the discussion cordial and productive. "He understands that it is his responsibility to proceed first and he will do so," he said Bush deserves time to get his economic team in place and set the pace on a deficit-reduction strategy.

The vice president had lunch with President Reagan and joined him at a meeting with Trade Representative Clayton Kretz to discuss next week's General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade talks in Montreal.

Bush and Reagan were both speaking Thursday night at a testimonial dinner for retiring Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, one of the foes Bush vanquished for the GOP nomination.

Grower panel, Hawkins board to confer

FILER — A steering committee representing a newly formed bean grower organization plans to meet with the directors of Hawkins Co. Ltd. this morning to discuss the inventory report on beans in the company's warehouse.

The seven-man committee was elected Thursday night in Filer shortly after a gathering of approximately 200 farmers voted to form the Hawkins Bean Growers Association.

The association members instructed the steering committee to inform the Hawkins directors and the company, primary lender, First Security Bank, that they want to work out an agreement with the company and avoid a legal battle.

Twin Falls attorney Harry DeHann, who organized the meeting, said the Hawkins directors want to meet with a small group of grower representatives today to share the results of the state Bureau of Warehouse Control's physical invenry of the beans in the warehouse.

The inventory is part of a broader state audit — begun after company directors reported inventory "inconsistencies" last week — that will compare what is in the warehouse with what records say should be there. A large shortfall could pit farmers and creditors in a legal battle over the company's resources.

Bob Weaver, an attorney in Buhl, said he learned from Hawkins that the state completed the physical inventory Thursday but has not released the information.

Growers' well-being main concern of bean firm, one owner declares

By MARTA CLEAVELAND

TWIN FALLS — Bean growers' well-being is the main concern of the owners of Hawkins Co. Ltd., one of those owners said Thursday.

"These farmers are our friends and they are very supportive of us," said Norma Blass, a Twin Falls County commissioner-elect. "They know how this has hurt us."

Blass said the owners of the Filer bean warehouse don't plan to file for bankruptcy, a move that would jeopardize farmers' interests.

"All the owners want to work to a solution for them," she said.

Blass made her comments in an interview Thursday. She is the first co-owner of the financially troubled bean warehouse to discuss the problem publicly.

The company's directors asked the state Bureau of Warehouse Control to step in Nov. 22 after they discovered "certain inventory inconsistencies." The state suspended the company's warehouse license pending a complete inventory and audit.

"We've acknowledged a problem from the beginning," Blass said. "When you call the state in you are ready for anything. You put the cards on the table. You don't want anything hidden."

The physical inventory began Monday and was supposed to be completed Thursday, but an attorney representing the Warehouse Bureau for the Department of Agriculture said no one in the department will comment at this time about the inventory or when it is likely to be finished.

Scott Campbell, an attorney with the Boise firm of Elam, Burke & Boyd, said he has been retained by the department. He had no comment as to why the department has hired outside counsel when it has attorneys on staff.

Blass expressed confidence that Guide cites failings of nursing homes

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The most recent surprise inspections of the nation's nursing homes showed that 43 percent failed to meet food sanitation standards and nearly 30 percent didn't properly administer drugs or ensure good personal hygiene, the government reported Thursday.

In a 75-volume "guide" for consumers, federal officials released grades for each of the 15,000 nursing homes on 32 of the approximately 500 standards by which they are measured at least once a year in on-site inspections.

Overall, the failure rate exceeded 15 percent in 10 categories. But about 2,400 nursing homes received passing marks in all 32 categories.

The massive report, a compilation of material previously available only on a piecemeal basis through state regulatory agencies, amounts to the first federally sanctioned catalog for people looking for a nursing home.

"I think this is a landmark achievement, not because it's an end to itself but because it will help people pose thoughtful, further questions in seeking out a nursing home," said Dr. William L. Roper, head of the Health Care Financing Administration that oversees Medicare and Medicaid.

But neither the nursing-home industry nor its severest critics greeted the report with enthusiasm. Elma Holder, director of the National Citizens' Coalition for Nursing Home Reform, said Roper should be embarrassed and ashamed to present these documents so proudly. "At best they provide a teaser to the consumers to try to obtain a copy of the full survey report of the facility."

Dr. Paul Williging, executive vice president of the 9,000-member American Health Care Association, the major nursing home trade group, called the report unreliable and "in fact, the guide could be harmful to consumers who use it as a shortcut to selecting a nursing home."

Roper acknowledged it should not be viewed as a one-step guide, and conceded that a major shortcoming was that the 32 performance indicators were listed only as having been "met" or "unmet," rather than showing the severity of failures.

For example, a nursing home that needed 30 nurses on staff to meet patient-nurse ratios and had only 20 would receive the same "unmet" citation as if it only had 10 nurses.

Soviet legislators approve Gorbachev's reforms

Knight-Ridder Service

MOSCOW — The legislature of the Soviet Union on Thursday approved a historic, far-reaching package of political reforms, amended at the last minute in a significant concession to those seeking more autonomy for individual Soviet republics.

The vote by the Supreme Soviet was not unanimous, however, indicating continuing displeasure with the final form of the changes in the Soviet constitution and electoral laws.

Five of the 1,376 deputies who participated voted against the constitutional changes and 27 abstained in an act almost as revolutionary as the reforms themselves.

Almost all of the protest votes came from deputies of the Baltic republics. Activists in Estonia and to a lesser degree Latvia and Lithuania, have criticized the reform package as putting too much power in Moscow's hands.

The changes in the law on elections were passed unanimously.

By the end of the 30-minute session — a formidable landmark in the 71-year-old history of the U.S.S.R. — the Supreme Soviet had voted itself out of existence, created a new super-legislature called the Congress of People's Deputies and given President Mikhail S. Gorbachev the political tools he has said are vital to engineering the full success of his economic reform program, per-

Furthermore, the Supreme Soviet set a date for the first multi-candidate elections in the history of the U.S.S.R. — March 26, 1989, when the new congress will be chosen. It created a 35-member Electoral Commission to arrange procedures for the vote.

In the most significant change — a major concession to activists in several republics — Article 119 of the Soviet Constitution was amended to require that a state of emergency could be declared in a republic only after consultation between Moscow and the republic's leadership.

In other words, before Moscow can send tanks and troops to a restive area of the Soviet Union, local officials must approve.

Deficit reduction to be major factor in farm program

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Pressure to reduce deficits can be expected to be a major factor as the Bush administration searches for new farm program formulas, Agriculture Secretary Richard K. Lyng said Thursday.

"You cannot avoid having the problems of trade deficit and fiscal deficit intrude heavily on agricultural policy in the new administration," the outgoing Cabinet member told a meeting at the Agriculture Department.

As much as $3 billion may have to be cut from farm programs by lawmakers in 1989 to meet targets under the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law, said Lyng and two economists on a panel with him at USDA's Annual Agricultural Outlook Conference.

Lawmakers might be able to negotiate a lesser cut, they said. But they added that the full $3 billion could be needed if Congress goes ahead with the across-the-board reductions envisioned by the Gramm-Rudman law.

Farm subsidy programs operated by the government's Commodity Credit Corp. are running at about $13 billion a year, down from $26 billion in fiscal 1986.

The three panelists at the closing session of the Outlook Conference suggested Congress might decide to pass a 1989 farm bill and hold off until at least 1991 on any major revision of the array of five-year programs expiring in 1990.

The crystal ball-gazing session was attended largely by government officials, agribusiness executives and the news media, and Lyng reiterated that he will not be at the helm of the department in the new administration. Numerous possible successors have been mentioned, but thus far no word has come from President-elect George Bush or his transition team.

Lyng said current farm programs, approved in 1985 when agriculture was reeling from plunging crop prices and land values, have proven highly popular and "I don't think we would have any changes in farm programs if it weren't for budget pressures."

"You've got $3 billion to save in some shape or form and it's going to drive changes, I think, in 1989," the secretary said.

All the same, there is no certainty that the Bush administration will propose extensive changes in the year ahead, said Lyng. Duff, an agricultural economist and former USDA official.

With farmers largely satisfied, Congress could well decide to extend the 1985 law for a year or so and tackle any major overhaul later.

Jones calls for lottery limits to keep charitable games in hand

BOISE (AP) — Some restrictions are needed on Idaho's new lottery amendment to keep charitable gaming from getting out of hand as has happened in North Dakota, Attorney General Jim Jones says.

He suggested Thursday that the Idaho Legislature should adopt immediate legislation placing some restrictions on charitable gaming. Then, a constitutional amendment could be put before voters in 1990 to determine if they approve of the restrictions, he said.

vide a good source of revenue for worthy organizations, there is a lot of potential for this type of activity to get out of hand," Jones said, in a letter to Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Jones said charitable gaming started small in North Dakota 10 years ago but has grown to a $200 million per year business.

"The point is that limitations must be laid out and adhered to so that these gaming activities do not get out of hand," the attorney general said.

Idaho voters in the general election approved a constitutional amendment clearing the way for a state lottery. But it will be several months before the lottery starts. A section of the amendment covered charitable gaming.

"It is my belief that limitations on charitable gaming should be written directly into the Constitution," Jones said.

Otherwise, he said, future Legislatures could be influenced to liberalize the rules, such as has happened in North Dakota, which does not have a state lottery.

In 1977, the Legislature in North Dakota allowed bingo and related games. Soon the Legislature extended it to blackjack, poker, and professional sports betting, Jones said.

Charities were allowed to deduct up to one-third of the gross proceeds for expenses. Jones said that later was increased to 35-38 percent, and then to 40-45 percent, depending on the size of the operation.

His recommended limitations:

- That no more than half the annual income of a charitable organization can be derived from gaming activity, Jones said
- That an organization must run its own games; there should be no compensation paid to those who sell, dispense or distribute chances.
- A limit on the purchase price of tickets, such as North Dakota's $2 limit.
- A restriction on the amount of gross proceeds that can be taken for operating expenses, such as one-third.
- A dollar limitation on gross proceeds or handle that any organization could take in one year, such as $1 million.

New youth detention facility opens doors

ST. ANTHONY (AP) — The Southeast Idaho Regional Detention Facility opened for business Thursday when Fremont County sheriff's deputies delivered five boys to the state Youth Services Center campus.

YSC Administrator Kurt Friedenauer said "the detention center has five-year contracts with all 16 eastern Idaho counties.

For now, the five students are using a portion of the newest YSC building, a three-year-old structure, until a separate detention facility is built there.

An uncompleted portion of that building will be renovated for use as a detention center, with 12 individual student rooms and space for other programs including a regional evaluation center, Friedenauer.

He said he hopes construction can start in January and be completed by late spring or early summer.

For now, each county must provide its own transportation of juveniles to the detention center.

Jones backs agreement on cleanup

BOISE (AP) — Attorney General Jim Jones has called for an agreement between the state and the Department of Energy on a timetable for cleaning up 2 million cubic feet of buried low-level radioactive waste at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

"I don't think it is a safety concern at the present time," Jones told reporters Thursday. "If we get an agreement forged between the two parties we can give all parties including the public assurance that things are going to be taken care of in a timely fashion."

Jones said he believed the attitude of INEL officials was positive toward working out such an agreement, based on his tour of the eastern Idaho facility earlier this week.

"They clearly want to work and cooperate with the state in taking care of this problem," the attorney general said. "It is a high priority for both parties, and I am encouraged that we can work together to get it resolved."

CBS challenges judge's Moscow case gag order

MOSCOW (AP) — CBS News is challenging a gag order barring Latah County Prosecutor Craig Mosman from discussing a dismissed involuntary manslaughter charge against a Nevada mail-order pharmaceutical company.

A CBS television crew is in Moscow this week, filming interviews for an upcoming segment of CBS This Morning.

But a gag order imposed by 2nd District Judge John H. Bengtson prohibits Mosman from discussing the case. CBS will hire a local attorney to file a request asking the judge to reconsider the order, executive producer Tom Anderson said Thursday.

"Our counsel (in New York) feels it may be over broad and we are now attempting to have that gag order lifted," Anderson said between interviews at the Latah County Courthouse. This is Moscow, Idaho, not the Soviet Union.

Mosman filed an involuntary manslaughter charge against Las Vegas-based National Prescription Services in June, alleging the company had mailed an improperly labeled prescription to Iris Hemmelman of Princeton. She died in January of coumadin poisoning at a Lewiston hospital.

Mrs. Hemmelman had been prescribed prednisone, an anti-inflammatory drug. Coumadin pills were found in a prescription bottle labeled as prednisone and mailed to her from National Prescription Services.

But Mosman asked Bengtson to dismiss the charge in October. He said the company had made changes in its methods of dispensing coumadin.

After the dismissal, attorneys for Medco, National Prescription Services' parent company, asked that Mosman be prohibited from discussing the case, due to a civil suit filed by the victim's husband, Wayne Hemmelman. That suit is pending.

CBS is planning a segment on the national mail-order pharmacy business, Anderson said.

"We'd like to know is it safe? Is it cheaper?" he said. "Many people are not going to their neighborhood pharmacist anymore, who knows about their previous history and can keep tabs on their prescriptions."

Anderson and reporter Bob Arnot, who also is a physician, chiefly cover health and medicine issues for CBS This Morning.

Court upholds county claim of indigency

BOISE (AP) — University of Utah Hospital, Salt Lake City, will have to absorb a $35,000 bill for treatment of an Idaho man, the Idaho Court of Appeals has ruled.

The court on Thursday unanimously upheld a district court finding that Elmore properly notified the hospital within a 60-day time limit that Steven Cassell did not qualify for medical indigency.

The hospital argued it never received the notice, and if written notice is not received within 60 days that a claim for indigency is denied, it is considered approved.

Cassell was admitted to the hospital in 1983 with serious burns, running up a $35,000 bill before he was discharged three months later.

In another decision released Thursday, the court on the second time around approved a search warrant used in a Bonneville County drug case.

Keith Prestwich contended that there was insufficient cause to issue the warrant, which resulted in the seizure of growing marijuana plants and other drug paraphernalia. On the first appeal, the court threw out the search warrant.

'Granny bashers' attack formidable older generation (CHICAGO — It's not quite granny-bashing, yet. It's more like generational jealousy, so far.

But, interestingly, the nation's elderly are under attack for having too much money, yielding too much political clout, taking an unfair share of federal tax dollars and leeching money from a hard-pressed younger generation.

Young adults' efforts to protect themselves and their own children from their greedy elders may set off a new kind of class warfare between the generations, according to some predictions.

Already, dozens of serious and semiserious proposals are being floated to increase taxes on Social Security payments, to renege on long-standing promises of benefits and to let the federal government help itself to Social Security trust funds.

The U.S. Office of Management and Budget this week called for a $5 billion reduction in projected spending for Medicare for the next fiscal year. Medicare costs are expected to be a major target of federal budget-cutters. The new Catastrophic Health Care Act stops a new income surtax on those eligible for Medicare that will steeply raise tax rates for the middle-class elderly.

There's also more talk about making all Social Security benefits subject to income tax (even though the money, not taxes, contributed to the system was already taxed). Or ending Social Security benefits completely for those who have an income higher than the median earnings of current workers. Or limiting benefits to the amount each retiree originally paid into the system, adjusted for interest (but not inflation). Or turning Social Security into a welfare program for the old poor and ignoring the perception, deliberately fostered by the government, that it is an insurance system, an entitlement.

A recent article in Forbes, for example, complains that wealth is being transferred from the poor young to the affluent elderly who don't need it. As a result, young families can't afford to live as well as their parents do.

Home ownership is down. Couples can afford fewer children, which will jeopardize their own Social Security benefits decades hence.

The only way young families can manage to live well is to have two incomes, according to Forbes. The net effect has been to put mother to work to support grandpa and grandma, it says.

Major transfers of wealth from young to old come from Social Security and from high housing costs, Forbes says. Social Security payroll taxes bleed the young directly and indirectly as employers' costs push up consumer prices. The elderly own a disproportionate share of houses and grab more money by selling to the young at inflated prices.

Those who complain about elderly affluence cite a lot of selective statistics. For example, only 12.2 percent of people over 65 have incomes that put them below the poverty line, while the national average is 13.5 percent and for children, 20 percent. Social Security and Medicare take a quarter of all federal spending, much of the money going to middle-class elderly who don't really need it, the arguments say. 18 percent of Social Security recipients have other income of $25,000 a year or more.

That 12 percent of the population over 65 runs up 34 percent of the medical bills, their critics point out. And they are cashing in handsomely on Social Security, getting back 2.5 to 4 times as much as they put into the system, a bonanza today's young workers cannot expect when they are old, even though they pay much steeper Social Security taxes.

But the granny bashers are taking on one of the most formidable, successful generations in this country's history. The elderly have powerful arguments on their side and many politicians are wary of doing battle with them, especially with their powerful special-interest organization, the American Association of Retired Persons.

The generation just retired and retiring grew up in the Depression, many of them in poverty unrelieved by the welfare programs available today. Most of them spent their young adult years fighting World War II, not for one dangerous year but several, with long disruption of their personal lives.

And they are determined to get a good, solid education. Most of today's older generation created stable marriages, parented a baby boom, took out long-term mortgages, built up the suburbs, scraped together money to send their own offspring to college in record numbers. Most had little discretionary income when they were the age of today's baby boomers.

If today's older people have assets, most of them come from 20 years of never missing a mortgage payment, a pension that is actually deferred earnings and savings accumulated after paying children's college bills. If they could have invested their own Social Security taxes, allowing for inflation and growth over 40 years, many would have made much more than what they will get from Social Security.

If they are fiercely protective of their assets and Social Security benefits, it is because their primary financial goal for the rest of their lives is not to spend lavishly on themselves but to avoid becoming a burden to their children or to the welfare system.

Joan Beck writes for The Chicago Tribune.

Wall Street's lack of limits threaten fiscal security

If there is any one belief in which most sensible folks would agree, it is this: Greed and lack of reasonable limits are going to undo this fortunate, free and loving land unless our national leaders reasonably conclude that this is a fact. In the name of deregulating markets, we are eating our young.

Witness the wild, unruly ferocity on Wall Street that is uprooting the fiscal sanity of the country.

There is no known common-sense rebuttal to the piling on of interest and debt, otherwise sensible and intelligent businessmen are gobbling up enterprises, stuffing them — like engorged geese ready for luxurious palates — with bled paper and forfying their lack of long-range foresight with short-term gains of millions of dollars.

Jack Valenti

The pity of it is that pension funds, the life root of so many American working people, are the forage on which much of this debt feeds.

Moreover, the buyouts, or "recapitalizations," add not one penny to the gross national product; indeed, they infect the body of business, dislocate and disemploy working men and women, savage local communities and relentlessly draw sustaining blood from a squeezed public enterprise.

Who cares about the human element when there are fees of hundreds of millions of dollars to share and rising equity profits to reap?

Who cares how many hundreds of thousands of jobs have been lost when these debt overruns occur?

Who cares about families who give their entire working life to an organization and suddenly a faceless thing called "debt" tells them that they are no longer needed, while a tiny little band of "entrepreneurs" grow megarich?

Doesn't anyone remember John Law and his "Mississippi scheme" or Sir John Blunt and his "South Sea Bubble"?

Millions of innocents were ruined and government, rotted when, as always happens, these Ponzi schemes finally burst.

There is nothing in canon law or civil statute that certifies the onward and ever upward rise in today's economy.

One day, and it will surely come to pass, the mountain of debt, living so close to the edge of ruin, will confront a statter in the economy and all the debris will fall upon us, much as the savings and loan institutional mess is about to collide with our future, costing us up to $100 billion.

The solution to the leveraged buyout, unlike a lot of problems that we have, is astonishingly simple.

All that the president and Congress need do is refuse to allow tax deductibility of debt after it leaps beyond a fixed debt-equity ratio.

Boom, boom, a home run, ball game's over and the feeding time is done. Debt, lestatate, and the geese grow fatter and more susceptible to demise.

But isn't this inviting government intervention, and isn't that unsuitable in a free society?

Yes, it is. Except: Whenever the public has no alternative choice, whenever monopoly or semi-monopoly or enormous wealth favored by greed, tilts the market, the market is no longer "free" and the government — our government — is the only source of redemption for those who are put upon by overvaluing power before which they are utterly defenseless. Alexander Hamilton, no democrat he, saw this clearly.

Said Hamilton, in the Federalist No. 11: "Why has government been instituted at all? Because the passion of men will not conform to the dictates of reason and justice, without constraint." Bingo.

Letters/CSI, INEL and creationism draw comment

CSI is too important to waste

CSI must regain the confidence of the Magic Valley Residents.

This is most important! Not only for the college, but for the community. Because CSI is one of the most important assets — potentially the most important asset in the future — for this area.

I believe one way to regain that confidence is to have more of a letter communication between CSI and the community. We must develop a group of key civic and interest groups, community leaders and especially the general public that would review, discuss, and agree on important projects needed as presented by CSI. Then these projects will be presented to the community at large for feedback. Depending on the feedback, a proposal would then be submitted.

That way, the community will be able to see the realistic needs, modify as their desires with their input and help put into action.

This will not be easy and poses many problems. But when you deal with a community effort, it is bound to be more difficult. But the results are worth the extra effort!

I have been going to CSI over the last 13 years on a regular basis enrolled in the Adult Recreation Program. I have also taken some adult enrichment courses over the years. CSI is an important part of my life. I also have five children and I hope that they choose CSI for their beginning education.

I am very proud of CSI — It would be an honor to represent you on the Board of Trustees.

This presentation is one of many ways to build confidence between CSI and the community. What do you think? What are your ideas? Any comments or suggestions from any readers, would be greatly appreciated. I would like as much input from residents as possible in order to build a workable platform.

Evolution, too, is only a belief

I agree with Dot Pader in reference to Dr. J.R. Stander's opinions on teaching creation and evolution in science classes. I also sense attitudes of arrogance and bigotry from evolutionary scientists toward anyone else not as "enlightened" as they are, as if anyone could be so stupid as not to believe evolution is true.

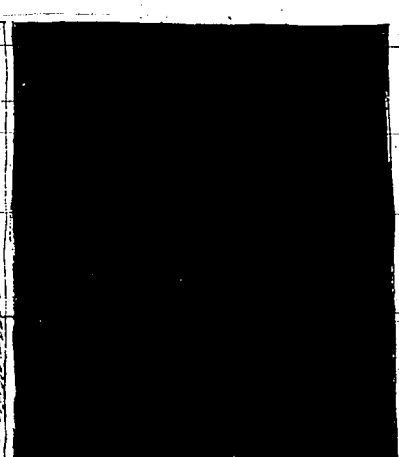

The key word here is "believe." Evolutionary scientists believe evolution to be true. Creation scientists believe their viewpoint to be true. The point is that neither theory can be proven by the scientific method. And that is the crux of the debate nationwide, and an issue that has never been stripped down and examined by the courts, but I suspect will be eventually.

The same so-called "mountains of evidence," i.e. scientific, observable fact, do exist, but have alternate interpretations that also support the creationist theory. These, I might add, have nothing to do with the "twisted view of science" from the ICR that Dr. Stander alludes to but does not define.

Dr. Stander, I applaud your comment "the business of science teachers is to teach science." But, do you realize, if the school board was to adapt this as policy that, by definition of scientific method, both theories of evolution and creation would be harred from the classroom?

HELLO? ANYBODY HOME? IS THIS THE UNITED...

...NATIONS?'

DOE lacks incentive for safety

INEL hopes to "symbolize" their new public relations image with the reannouncement they will cap the injection well "by the end of next year." This summer they wanted a permit to use it, now they "respect" the aquifer.

"Steve Symms wanted a trust fund for the Contras, but the purchasing of safety equipment for the American people can wait. The filters at the Fernald Olme uranium plant that released 300 tons of uranium had to wait, also.

Why is there no fund for the immediate purchase of safety equipment at the DOE sites? Why did the private company that runs Fernald get over $1 million in bonuses? Lack of priorities. Lack of incentive for safety. If they built them in Washington D.C. I bet they would have purchased triple filtering systems and plenty of backup filters and pumps. I think a toxic radioactive evaporator pond would look nice in the Rose Garden.

The DOE partial schedule for clean-up avoided the buried transuranic waste, once again. They are very good at the art of diversion, our tax dollars at work.

articles within the past year opposing scientific creationism and justifying "scientific evolution."

Arguments aside, since Mr. Stander considers creationist theories "inconsistencies and absurdities" (Times-News 11-25-88), I would prefer to place before Mr. Stander and other evolutionists of this community, comments which I believe prove the Bible to be a divinely inspired work of a supernatural intelligence, through the well established science of mathematics.

As a Panin, an 1892 Harvard graduate, a brilliant mathematician and literary scholar, who also spoke several languages, was an agnostic, but was converted to Christianity and studied the Biblical texts in their original languages.

Both Hebrew and Greek are languages whose characters have numerical value. As Panin, a brilliant mathematician, studied the texts, he noticed a numerical pattern emerging. Before his death in 1942, he presented over 46,000 pages of these numerical values to the Nobel Research Foundation, along with his statement that these pages were his evidence that the Bible was indeed the Word of God. He then challenged the scientific world to offer a "natural explanation" or to refute the facts he had presented.

Panin found that patterns of prime numbers such as 11, 13, 17, and 23 were found in large clusters, but the number 7 was the most prominent of all. He would stay on a passage only long enough to prove beyond reasonable doubt that the numerical evidence was of divine origin and then he would go on to the next one. But he said that the longer he stayed on a passage, it would continue to give further patterns until it staggered the imagination, and Panin had over 43,000 pages of these patterns before he died.

However, the caption is this: If you were to take even one word out of the structure, it would damage the entire numerical pattern. With these patterns, we can see that the Bible was created from a single mastermind. Though many men wrote it, they wrote as they were inspired by that mastermind — God Himself.

No other alleged holy writings were found to contain this numerical harmony.

Vote McMurrian for CSI board

Several people are seeking to be elected to the Board of Trustees of the College of Southern Idaho. Donald McMurrian is one candidate seeking one of the two positions available, and I believe he is well qualified for the position.

Don has demonstrated his ability as a community leader by his concern for the clean-up of the INEL. Don has generously given much of his time to help disadvantaged children. Don is a devoted family man.

I for one would like to express my appreciation to Donald McMurrian for giving of his time and abilities, and for offering them to the community to serve on the Board of Trustees of the College of Southern Idaho. Get out and vote. This election affects us all in Twin Falls and Jerome Counties — get out and vote for Donald McMurrian.

Trial by ordeal was a farce

I was recently made to answer to a charge where no loss, injury or harm was claimed, plead the presence of the face of the bogus complaint made by an accuser who was not even required to face me during my trial by ordeal. This bogus accuser then asked the jury to find me guilty of not paying my fair share; whatever that might be. This was known as embezzlement in the days of courts of justice, and was a crime. The charge against me was not a charge of "not paying my fair share," yet the bogus accuser asked the jury to find me guilty of that charge.

After reading the Times-News article concerning my trial by ordeal, my sane, person would believe I had been tried on a charge of not paying my fair share. I was never accused of not paying my fair share. I was accused of not seeking permission from the state/god to exercise my rights and for enjoying freedom of speech.

I don't believe there is any hope for the state because zombies who sat on the jury. I do believe there is hope for this younger generation to seek after truth and justice, and rectify the injustices permitted by their elders. Let us hope a new generation cares more about freedom and justice than does the generation before.

Reagan against pardon for North, blocks file release

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said Thursday he is against a pardon for former aide Oliver L. North, but "duty requires" his administration to block release of secret documents that may be needed for North's trial on Iran-contra charges.

Reagan commented in response to reporters' questions after his spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, said disclosure of documents sought by North's lawyers for use in his defense would reveal "state secrets of the highest order."

"We have indicated there are categories of information included in these documents which cannot be declassified at any point," Fitzwater told reporters.

Reagan, questioned at the beginning of a meeting on trade issues in the Oval Office, said: "The things we are blocking are the things that duty requires we block."

"These are things that are national security secrets," he said. "This is something that from the very beginning we knew we would have to do."

He denied that the move was an attempt to sabotage North's trial and said, "The law must take its course."

Asked whether he still believed, as he stated earlier this year, that North and former national security adviser John M. Poindexter will ultimately be found innocent, the president said:

"At this stage, I don't think I should comment on guilt or innocence or anything of this kind."

OLIVER NORTH
Defense needs files

When asked whether this meant he would not grant pardons for North and Poindexter, he replied, "From the very beginning, I said that to consider a pardon would leave them under a shadow of guilt for the rest of their lives. I think we have to let the judicial process proceed."

On June 27, Reagan responded to a question on the subject by saying, "I believe in the innocence of the two men and I would like to see that established once and for all."

Fitzwater said the White House has offered a briefing to U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell, who is scheduled to preside over North's trial, but had not received a response.

Groups urge Bush to lead AIDS battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Groups pushing for greater efforts against AIDS urged President-elect George Bush on Thursday to help lead the fight and to champion federal anti-discrimination laws to protect victims of the deadly disease.

The National Organization Responding to AIDS, a coalition of groups, criticized President Reagan, who accepted only some of the recommendations of his presidential commission on AIDS, refusing in particular to embrace its call for anti-discrimination legislation.

"The silence from the White House and from the executive branch has been overwhelming, and I think all of us are looking to a dramatic change in that regard," Jeffrey Levi, head of the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, told a news conference held on World AIDS day. His group is part of the coalition.

During the presidential campaign, Bush expressed his support for legislation that would make it a crime to

Many teens misinformed about AIDS

ATLANTA (AP) — A new survey of high school students has found that many teen-agers are misinformed about AIDS and more than a few are at risk themselves for the deadly disease, a federal agency said Thursday.

According to the survey, many high school students mistakenly believe AIDS can be transmitted by mosquito bites, toilets and giving blood.

The national Centers for Disease Control and local school officials surveyed students in ninth through 12th grades last spring about their knowledge of AIDS and their own personal risks. The surveys were conducted in eight states as well as in seven big-city school systems.

Some of the findings were surprising, said Dr. Laura Kann, a researcher with the Atlanta-based CDC.

"They clearly know the primary sources of HIV (AIDS-virus) transmission, but where it does come to things like blood donations, mosquitoes and public toilets, there are a whole lot of misconceptions," she said.

Officials at HHS referred questions about their budget request to the Office of Management and Budget, where spokeswoman Barbara Clay said the agency could not confirm any budget figures in the midst of appeals and stronger leadership. "The discussion about AIDS must be coming out of the mouth of the president and out of the voice of the executive office," said Jean McGuire, chairman of the coalition.

Members of the coalition met with the president-elect's transition team on Wednesday to discuss their report, "A Call for Executive Action," and spoke briefly with Bush, who was visiting his transition offices.

Bush expressed his support for the coalition's efforts, Ms. McGuire said. According to the coalition, the Health and Human Services Department had proposed $1.9 billion for AIDS research for fiscal 1990 but the Reagan administration has cut the request to $1.6 billion.

Officials at HHS referred questions about their budget request to the Office of Management and Budget, where spokeswoman Barbara Clay said the agency could not confirm any budget figures in the midst of ap-

Reagan orders military out of southern Lebanon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has ordered American military officers assigned to United Nations peacekeeping duties in the Mideast out of the unit that patrols southern Lebanon, officials said Thursday.

The decision comes 9 1/2 months after the abduction of the senior U.S. military officer assigned to that unit, which is known as the Observer Group Lebanon of the U.N. Truce Supervision Organization.

Lebanese city of Tyre and the border town of Naqura, where the U.N. observers have a headquarters.

He became the ninth American to be seized as a hostage in Lebanon, all apparently by pro-Iranian Muslim fundamentalists.

The administration officials, who agreed to discuss the matter only if not identified, said the Americans assigned to Observer Group Lebanon were ordered out after the capture. They are no longer in southern Lebanon. They've been withdrawn over the last several days, said one source.

Soviets lift barriers to Jews' emigration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet authorities have notified at least 42 Jews who had been denied exit permits on grounds of state secrecy that the barrier to emigration is being removed, the National Conference on Soviet Jewry said Thursday.

Assistant Secretary of State Richard Shiflet said he heard of the barrier being lifted from Jewish sources after several conversations with Soviet officials. He said he had no official confirmation from Moscow.

The move followed the apparent ending of Soviet jamming of American-financed Russian language broadcasts. Together, the two steps represent an improvement in human rights by Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev before his meeting next week with President Reagan and President-elect George Bush.

The Jewish group announced, meanwhile, that 2,334 Soviet Jews had been granted exit permits in November — the largest monthly total this year. Permits this year total 15,640, making the exodus the biggest since 1980.

Among the "refuseniks" informed of the change was Yuli Kosharevsky, who has been waiting for more than 17 years for permission to go to Israel. He had been denied a visa for classified work he performed as an electronics engineer until 1968.

Kosharevsky, who lives in Moscow and first applied for a permit in 1971, was also a strong human rights activist, said Jerry Strober, public information officer of the National Conference on Soviet Jewry.

"He was told his secrecy ban had been lifted and to submit papers to leave the country," Strober said. "He expects to hear in a month."

The official of the private group, which has lobbied in behalf of Soviet Jews since 1971, said the Soviet emigration office had told "refusenik circles" in Moscow that a total of 120 people would have their secrecy restrictions lifted.

Also among those notified were Vladimir Kislik, a Moscow physicist who first applied in 1973, and Roald Zehlebonok, a Leningrad electrical engineer trying to leave since 1978.

Kislik was arrested in 1981 on charges of malicious hoaxing and served a three-year labor sentence. Zehlebonok was arrested in 1985 on charges of defaming the state and served eight months.

Economic forecasting gauge points to late '89 sluggishness

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Commerce Department on Thursday said the index of Leading Indicators, the government's main gauge of future economic activity, edged up a slight 0.1 percent in October after falling the previous month, signaling some sluggishness in growth by the end of next year.

But analysts said the moderation, which would be welcomed by financial markets worried about inflation, isn't evident yet. And they cautioned against drawing any firm conclusions until the index establishes a consistent pattern.

The index now has declined in five of the past 12 months. It dropped a revised 0.3 percent in September, a bit more sharply than the previous estimate of minus 0.1 percent. It also fell in July and May, but rose in June and August.

Michael Penzer, senior economist with Bank of America in San Francisco, said the index since early 1987 has been underestimating future growth. Nevertheless, he said the economy probably will slow by next spring.

Growth, as measured by the gross national product, averaged a 3 percent-annual rate through the first nine months of this year, even though the Federal Reserve Board from late March to early August pushed up interest rates, hoping to curb GNP expansion to a non-inflationary 2 percent to 2.5 percent.

The Fed has been tightening in order to slow the rate of growth down, Penzer said. "Many times in the past they have overshot and pushed the country into a recession, but this time they'll probably luck out."

That would put the economy well into the middle of its seventh year of expansion, a peacetime record.

At the White House, spokesman Martin Fitzwater said the latest economic figures "continue to suggest slower but continued economic growth in the months ahead.... It looks very good."

However, at least for October, the latest month available, economic statistics portray stronger growth than desired by the Fed. Unemployment is at a 14-year low, use of factory capacity is at an 80-year high and personal income posted the biggest gain in a year.

In a separate report on Thursday, the Commerce Department said construction activity climbed 0.9 percent in October to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $99.2 billion, the fourth consecutive monthly increase.

Economists and the markets are now awaiting the release Friday of the Labor Department's employment survey for an indication about whether October's vigor continued into November.

In October, four of nine available leading indicators were pointing to faster growth, while five were pointing to slower growth.

The factors pushing the index up, in order of magnitude, were an increase in building permits, a rise in stock prices, a jump in new orders to manufacturers for consumer goods and a drop in initial claims for state unemployment insurance.

The negative factors, ordered from largest to smallest, were faster deliveries to companies, a sign of slackening demand; a drop in the price of industrial materials; a decline in the inflation-adjusted money supply; a shortening in the length of the average workweek; and a fall in orders for business equipment.

The various changes left the index at 100.0 percent of its 1967 base of 100, up only 0.5 percent from October 1987, compared with a 6 percent gain during the previous 12-month period.

Maury N. Harris, chief economist of PaineWebber Inc., said the two strongest positive factors — building permits and stock prices — likely will turn negative when the government calculates the November index.

"There's nothing there that signals recession, but there's a lot that signals slower growth," he said.

Economists caution against drawing immediate conclusions from the index even though since its creation in 1982 it has correctly predicted all eight recessions by dropping three times in a row. It also has falsely predicted a recession four times.

Preliminary estimates of the index often are revised substantially in later months. For instance, declines were reported initially for five consecutive months — from September 1987 through January — but later revisions wiped out all but two of the drops.

In an attempt to improve the accuracy of the index, the department said Thursday it was dropping two of the indicators: changes in business and consumer credit, and changes in manufacturing and trade inventories.

Effective with the report for January, it will add a series of consumer expectations and changes in unfilled orders to durable goods manufacturers.

Buyout firm wins bidding war, takes control of RJR Nabisco

NEW YORK (AP) — A top buyout firm won the tumultuous war for RJR Nabisco with the biggest takeover on record, a $24.5 billion offer that derailed a rival bid by Nabisco executives who triggered the bidding frenzy.

Helfr Nabisco Inc. directors approved the $109-a-share offer by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts & Co. Inc. late Wednesday, capping a day of frantic, confusing maneuvering in the auction of the cigarette-and-food giant.

A member of the competing investment group led by RJR chief executive officer F. Ross Johnson said their last-minute offer — $25.42 billion or $112 per share — had been higher, but suggested the group had been cheated by an unfair bidding process.

The value of Kohlberg's offer for America's 13th largest industrial company was nearly double the bid taken over, $12.3 billion for Gulf Corp. in 1981.

Although the Johnson group's offer appeared to be higher, RJR said its board of directors concluded Kohlberg's offer was substantially equal. Kohlberg's offer per share broke down to $91 in cash, $18 in stock and additional securities worth $10.8 billion.

The Board of Directors of RJR Nabisco, by unanimous vote of all directors present, adopted the Kohlberg offer as being in the best interest of the company and its shareholders, the company said. RJR did not say exactly why Kohlberg's offer prevailed.

The breakdown of the Johnson group's bid was not disclosed, but Shearson Lehman Hutton, the Wall Street firm that was one of its key financial partners, said, "From what we know, our bid was the best."

We are mystified about the process and the standards that the board used to reach its decision, it said in a statement. "We are going to continue to keep our options open. We believe the RJR shareholders will have a lot of questions as well."

Kohlberg, the undisputed leader in buying companies with borrowed money in deals known as leveraged buyouts, said it was happy with the outcome.

We are also pleased that this process has come to an end so that the employees of RJR — consumers and suppliers and the communities it serves, can be assured that business will now return to normal and stability will be restored. Kohlberg's two principals, Henry R. Kravis and George Roberts, said in a statement. However, the deal raised the prospect that some businesses in one of America's biggest consumer product companies might be sold to help Kohlberg pay for its prize.

Kohlberg gave no indication which of RJR's worldwide operations might be discarded. There was speculation that candidates could include some or all of RJR's food businesses, RJR's tobacco business roots still account for about 40 percent of its sales.

Atlanta-based RJR is one of the largest consumer products companies, with more than 120,000 employees worldwide. Its brands include such well-known products as Camel cigarettes, Shredded Wheat and Life Savers.

Probe brings nepotism count

HOMINY, Okla. (AP) — A misdemeanor charge of nepotism is the only charge that came out of an investigation of the town's former police chief, a black man who charged racial bias after he was fired amid allegations of misconduct.

The nepotism charge was filed against former chief Charles Crawford, 45, who had been accused of sexually harassing female employees.

Crawford is accused of appointing a sister-in-law as a temporary police department employee Sept. 7. He was fired Oct. 6, and his sister-in-law no longer works in the department.

District Attorney Larry Stuart said state law prohibits an elected official from appointing or firing any person related to him by marriage or blood within the third degree. The charge carries a fine of between $100 and $1,000 and forfeiture of office.

Changeable Florida weather has long haunted space shuttle program

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The space shuttle is a blue-sky flier that has been haunted by unpredictable Florida weather since early in the program.

The postponement of Atlantis' launch Thursday was the eighth time that winds, clouds or storms have forced NASA to change shuttle liftoff plans. Three Florida landings have been canceled because of weather.

And weather played a role in NASA's worst moment — the explosion of Challenger on Jan. 28, 1986, that claimed the lives of seven astronauts. NASA's Kennedy Space Center ocean-side launch site is a perfect place to send rockets safely roaring out over open water. But it sits on a marshy island that is captive to the shifting winds, frequent rain and powerful fronts moving in from the north that keep the coastal weather in a turmoil of change.

The temperamental weather has only a minor effect on conventional aircraft, but the shuttle, which goes higher and faster, and then returns to Earth as a glider, is more sensitive to the forces of nature. Even days that are perfect for sunbathing on Florida beaches may be miserable for launching a shuttle. The shuttle, in effect, is a weather wimp.

Weather rules regulating the launch of the shuttle fill a thick volume and it takes a small army of forecasters and observers to monitor the subtle atmospheric changes that can affect the space ship.

Some of the rules are new, created after sub-freezing temperatures are thought to have contributed to the failure of a solid rocket booster that caused the Challenger accident. Flight of the shuttle depends not only on the weather in Florida, but also on conditions thousands of miles away. Since the spacecraft would be forced to land on emergency runways in Europe, Northern Africa or California, bad weather at those distant sites can force a launch delay.

Launch-area winds as low as 20 miles an hour, mostly a brisk breeze by sailboat standards, can keep the shuttle on Earth. High-altitude winds, smashing into the shuttle as it races upward, can be violent enough to destroy the spacecraft. It was the threat of such winds that forced the postponement on Thursday.

Air Force weather expert Col. John Madura said there was a stream of air in the shuttle's flight path that was streaking along at 194 miles an hour.

It would not have caused anything significant for an aircraft, he said. But NASA engineer Lawrence G. Williams said the sudden encounter, with such high winds could have been enough to rip away a wing on the shuttle.

Pentagon cuts links to computer network

WASHINGTON (AP) — An unknown computer intruder forced the Pentagon to cut links between an unclassified military network and a nationwide academic and corporate network for several days, defense officials said Thursday.

The academic and corporate computer network, known as Arpanet, was the same one crippled last month by a computer virus, an incident that is being investigated by a federal grand jury in Syracuse.

The New York Times reported the Pentagon had insisted on Wednesday the temporary severing of computer links was due to technical difficulties.

However, several unidentified computer security experts told the paper that Pentagon officials informed them the network connection was severed after an intruder illegally gained entry to several computers operated by defense contractors and the military.

Defense sources contacted by The Associated Press agreed with the latter account, saying the illegal intrusion led to the severing while experts doublechecked security procedures.

The two networks were severed on Monday and were expected to be re-linked sometime Thursday, the sources added.

The officials, who insisted on anonymity, said the Pentagon acted after a computer at the Mitre Corp., a Bedford, Mass., think tank with several military contracts, was entered illegally several times over the past month.

Mitre spokeswoman Marcia Cohen said one of the company's computers had been entered, but said the computers involved had not handled any classified or sensitive information. She said the problem was fixed within hours of being detected.

The decision to disconnect the military computer network, known as Milnet, from Arpanet upset a number of computer users around the country.

Last month a computer virus crammed an estimated 6,000 computers nationwide.

Promotion for Powell

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Gen. Colin L. Powell, White House national-security advisor since 1987, has been chosen for promotion to full general and command of all Army troops stationed in the United States. President Reagan announced Thursday.

Powell, 61, would become only the fourth black officer to attain four-star rank in the U.S. armed forces if the Senate confirms the nomination.

The move from national security adviser to Forces Command was described by Army officials on Thursday as "a great leap to a choice assignment," and one that would put Powell back in the running to eventually become Army chief of staff.

Powell has been mentioned as a contender for the Army's top uniformed job for several years, but some in the service thought his chances were harmed when he agreed to take a political job at the White House.

In taking over Forces Command at Fort McPherson in Atlanta, Ga., Powell would succeed Gen. Joseph T. Palastra Jr., who has held the post since June 1986 and is retiring after 35 years of active military service.

Farm Credit works, bank officials say

BOISE (AP) — Farm Credit System officials take exception to reports they are not working with financially troubled farmers to restructure their loans.

Under 1987 federal legislation, loans are required to renegotiate loans to farmers if that is less costly than foreclosure. And that is what the Farm Credit banks have been doing since the first of the year, said Blair Wilson, Caldwell branch manager for the organization.

But the banks are under no mandate to "bail out" such farmers, he said.

"Everyone's got a right to succeed, and everyone's got a right to fail," Wilson said. "But we can't ensure that everyone is to be assured of succeeding in the farming business."

On Monday, farm advocate Paul Slade with the Idaho Rural Council said the Agriculture Credit Act of 1987 helped Farmers Home Administration borrowers, but did next to nothing for Farm Credit borrowers. He said that could dry up the pool of borrowers.

And Pam Baldwin, president of the Rural Council, said her dairy farm was the only case she had seen in Idaho where a Farm Credit case has successfully been restructured.

Farm Credit is a government-created system of farmer-owned banks nationwide that hold $50 billion in loans. Idaho is in its 12th District, covering the Northeast and Alaska.

Farm Credit Services has approved 226 restructured loans for Idaho farmers with delinquent loans, said Richard Hill, regional manager of special credits in Boise. "That restructuring" can mean forgiving a loan, reducing the interest rates or accepting a deed to part of the property.

Hill said Farm Credit sent out 1,043 notices to distressed farmers between Jan. 1 and Sept. 30. Of that number, 469 restructuring applications were received, 108 were rejected. Through Sept. 30, there have been 102 new foreclosures, he said.

Tape with alleged confession expected to end trial

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — A 2nd District magistrate is allowing prosecutors to introduce evidence a tape recording in which an Illinois man allegedly confesses to killing another man in the Idaho wilderness.

Playing of the tape was expected to wrap up the first-degree murder preliminary hearing for Dennis Orr, 45, and Karen Tucker, 25, both of Plano, Ill. The hearing opened Wednesday before Magistrate Michael J. Griffin in Grangeville.

Orr and Tucker have been charged with killing her brother-in-law Joseph Tucker, 27, whose badly decomposed body was found Sept. 16 by a hunter near Izole Pass.

The tape court officials said, was made by Orr, who stored it at his mother's house with instructions that it be played by his attorney if he disappeared or was killed.

Dennis Smith of Idaho Falls found Orr's body under a discarded seat cover at Shotgun Creek while on a hunting trip with three friends. Tucker had been killed by bullet and shotgun wounds to the head and chest, Idaho County Sheriff Randy Baldwin said.

Baldwin said he discovered a receipt in one of the trouser pockets with the name "Billy B. Tucker" printed on it. Billy Tucker, Joseph Tucker's brother, was traced to the Illinois state penitentiary, where he is serving a term for murder. Investigators eventually were led to Orr and Mrs. Tucker, Billy Tucker's wife.

Investigators obtained a search warrant for the home of Orr's mother and there they found the tape recording sealed in an envelope and addressed to Orr's Illinois attorney.

Mrs. Tucker's attorneys, Wayne MacGregory and Darin Fales of Grangeville, and Orr's attorney, Wilfrid Longeteig, argued against the admissibility of the tape. But Griffin concluded it could be played during the hearing.

Orr's former wife, Cheri Bullock, also testified Wednesday that Orr confessed to her about the killing in October.

Lawyer contends Balla should stay in prison

BOISE (AP) — Not only should Walter "Bud" Balla remain behind bars, but the Idaho Supreme Court should dismiss his petition for release without further review, a deputy attorney general says.

Balla was treated fairly when Idaho State Penitentiary officials erased 329 days of "good time" from each of his two concurrent sentences, Deputy Attorney General Timothy Wilson contends.

In a response filed this week with the high court, Wilson defended the agency's calculations of giving and taking of good time on concurrent sentences as "consistent with the law."

Balla has spent 20 years in prison for robbery, kidnapping, escape and assault with a deadly weapon. In his petition, Balla said he should have been released Oct. 4, but prison officials added the 329 days to his sentence following three prison disciplinary hearings, held four years ago.

"I feel we're going to win hands down," he predicted in a telephone interview Wednesday. "There's no law that supports their position."

Corrections officials have set his release date for Aug. 29, 1989. Balla insists he made up the good time in the first of two concurrent sentences on escape. He is serving a final, 10-year indeterminate sentence for assault in the knifing of a prison guard during a 1984 escape. He contends he is being punished twice for the same offense.

"Good time earned on concurrent sentences is earned for all sentences at the same time and forfeited for all sentences," Wilson said.

Public favors Payette River stream flows

CASCADE (AP) — About 125 rafting and kayaking fans have shown their support for minimum stream flows on the North Fork of the Payette River that would hamper a proposed hydroelectric project.

Testimony at a Cascade public hearing Wednesday night leaned heavily in support of the flows. Some landowners also favored adequate water to support fish and wildlife along the 25-mile stretch of the river.

"Just the other day, I sat on my deck and watched 20 trumpeter swans," said Jack Kitchens, whose family has lived near Smith's Ferry on the river for 18 years. "We watched geese and their young. We help the deer raise fawns on an island ... I tell you, we have a paradise."

Then, directing his comments to Marie Auth, vice president of Western Power Inc., Kitchens said, "I'd hate to see you screw up my paradise."

Western Power, backed by industrialist J.R. Simplot, is studying the construction of a 330-megawatt hydro plant on the river.

Proposed by the Idaho Water Resources Board, the flow would range from 1,300 cubic feet per second to 1,800 cfs from May 1 to Sept. 1.

That conflicts with Western's proposed project from Smith's Ferry to Banks. Its competing water right calls for 2,200 cfs.

However, Western has not applied for flows in the upper end of its project proposal, from Cabarton Bridge to Smith's Ferry, and the board's minimum flow application may preclude developing that section.

Auth said it would be premature for Water Resources to grant flows until Western has progressed in its hydropower study.

Department Director Keith Higginson is not sure if he will rule on the minimum flow applications before the Legislature convenes. But development on the river has been postponed until July 1, 1991 under state legislation to study the river values.

Jeff Hennessey, a guide for Cascade Raft Co., said 515 people were taken down the Cabarton run this summer.

Utah Power & Light pays $33.2 million in property taxes

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A total of $33.2 million has been paid this year in state property taxes by Utah Power & Light Co., with payment checks going to 27 of the 29 counties, the utility says.

Daggett and Wayne are the only counties where the utility does not own taxable property, UP&L officials said.

Emery County received more than $17 million, with $1.1 million of that figure representing taxes on the company's coal properties. UP&L's five newest coal-fired power generating units also are located in Emery County.

The second largest check, $7,216,633, went to Salt Lake County, and Utah County was third with a check for $1,463,184.

Mineral expert elected president of mining group

SPOKANE (AP) — A Denver mineral expert has been chosen president of the Northwest Mining Association. Tom Li, vice president and general manager for Behre Dolbear-Riverside Inc., was elected this week by the mining association's board of trustees. He succeeds Bill Booth of Hecla Mining Co. in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. Li assumes his new duties as head of the 2,200 NWMA members in January. The election coincided with the Northwest Mining Association's 95th annual convention this week in Spokane.

Man gets stuck in snow, dies of hypothermia

ST. ANTHONY (AP) — The son of Fremont County Sheriff Terry Thompson died of hypothermia Thursday after the vehicle he was in got stuck in the snow overnight, authorities reported. Terry "Butch" Thompson Jr., 20, was taken by helicopter ambulance to Madison Memorial Hospital in Rosburg after searchers found him in the Sand Creek area about 10 miles north of St. Anthony. He was pronounced dead shortly after 11:30 a.m., hospital supervisor Keith Steiner said. Thompson had no pulse when he was found, officials said, and his core body temperature was only 79 degrees — nearly 20 degrees below normal. About two feet of snow has built up on unplowed back roads in the Sand Creek area, and temperatures overnight dipped to just below zero. A search for Thompson and three teenagers was launched after they failed to return from a "four-wheeling" trip Wednesday night following a wrestling match at South Fremont High School. Officials said Thompson and Cory Hansen, 18 — a fourth teenager on the outing — left the vehicle to find help after it apparently got stuck in the snow about 2 a.m. Hansen managed to make it to a telephone about 7:30 a.m. and advised authorities of the group's location. The other three teenagers — Michelle Watkins, 15, Rob Howell, 18, and Tina Sommer, 17, all of St. Anthony — finally left the vehicle early Thursday morning and were walking toward town when they were found about 9:30 a.m. "If it wasn't for that boy (Hansen), none of them would have made it out," said Sue Sommer, Tina's mother. Miss Sommer was treated and released from Madison Memorial. Howell and Miss Watkins were admitted for observation.

Friend testifies that Archuleta was cruel to child for months

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — A friend of Frank Archuleta, who is on trial in the battering death of a 2-year-old boy, testified Thursday that the defendant treated the child cruelly for months before his death. Raymond Herrera's testimony came in the second day of Archuleta's trial on a charge of second-degree murder in the July 31 death of Preston Sherman. He is accused of repeatedly beating the boy over a period of several months. Archuleta, 29, of Ogden, waived a jury trial in favor of 2nd District Judge David Roth hearing the case. Roth heard evidence Tuesday, then adjourned for a day and resumed proceedings Thursday. Herrera said Archuleta, the boy and his mother, Nancy Delgado, lived with him for about four months earlier this year. He testified that Archuleta would pour cold water over the boy's head and hold him underwater in the bathtub, and that he forced the child to sit on the toilet for hours on end for wetting his pants. Archuleta has maintained the boy died after falling from a toilet. Delgado's sister, Valerie Valenciano, also described how the boy was forced to sit on the toilet, and said she had repeatedly called state authorities to report bruises on her nephew. Sherman was removed from the home in March by the state and placed in foster care. Valenciano testified that when he was returned two months later, the abuse continued.

Pavilion plan would promote culture

SPOKANE (AP) — A California developer's proposal to rebuild the downtown Riverfront Park pavilion would emphasize cultural exhibits rather than amusement attractions. "It's a very delicate balance," David Mariani of World Odyssey Inc. told Spokane's City Council and Park Board on Wednesday. "You don't want to over-commercialize the center, or you lose part of the community asset you have." World Odyssey is one of two firms that have submitted proposals to lease, improve and operate the pavilion attractions at Riverfront Park, site of the 1974 World's Fair. On Monday, LARC Inc. of Dallas outbid to board and council members a $9 million proposal, which includes high-tech exhibits and entertainment, a rooftop miniature golf course and an aquarium. "The other proposal is more ride-oriented, and ours is more culturally oriented," Mariani said.

State education officials launch AIDS plan

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — State education officials have finally launched their five-year plan to provide a public school curriculum on the deadly acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Action by the Idaho Department of Education came after it finally got the initial $26.6 million of a federal grant for the program from the Centers for Disease Control. "It would've been nice if we could've gotten funding last year like some other states," said Shannon Page, the department's health consultant, and some school districts were not satisfied to wait. "As the nation marked World AIDS Day on Thursday, an AIDS curriculum was already in place in the Lewiston School District where it began this fall, and the Lakeland district expected to have a course in place this winter. "I know a lot of districts are working on some type of curriculum," Page said. "We tell them to develop and make policy decisions. They can revise them later, but it's important to get something in place." These changes could be dictated once the state completes its five-year plan. The initial step this year, Page said, is a survey by an advisory committee of exactly what each of the 116 school districts is doing about AIDS education. "I know they're interested," she said. "But it's not an easy project for them to take on." Ultimately that advisory committee will develop policies and guidelines for the districts along with a kindergarten through high school curriculum on AIDS that can be integrated into a comprehensive health curriculum. "There are things you can teach to the young ones," Page said. "They need to know basic hygiene, how to deal with blood spills, and at that age, we can set the stage for more involved lessons." The five-year federal grant will cover development costs, teacher training and educational materials for the districts. In Lewiston, district special services director Mont Hibbard said involving the community was the key to setting up that district's AIDS program. The district spent a year working with teachers, health experts, parents and civic leaders in developing its curriculum. "It was well accepted," Hibbard said. "Parents are looking for any help they can get in this area." The program, that runs from kindergarten through high school, does involve values like respect for self and good citizenship. "But we're not looking at an issue of morals and values here," Hibbard said. "We're looking at life and death."

Chemical processing plant goes up in Soda Springs

SODA SPRINGS (AP) — A Washington-based mining and construction company is building a $2.25 million chemical processing plant in southeastern Idaho to extract gallium and silver from Monsanto Co.'s elemental phosphorus plant. M.A. Degerstrom Inc. of Spokane has poured concrete foundations for the 15,000-square-foot facility. The company expects the plant to be operating by early next summer, pending approval of state environmental permits. It will be located near Monsanto's Soda Springs facility, on 17 1/2 acres about two miles north of Kerr-McGee Corp.'s vanadium extraction plant. Gallium is a bluish-white, metallic element mostly imported from Switzerland, France and West Germany. The United States electronics industry consumes about 20,000 kilograms of gallium a year in the production of semiconductors, transistors, diodes and lasers. "We plan on producing somewhere around 4,000 kilograms a year. We'll be a fairly large producer," said Hal Snell, who was hired as plant manager after doing consulting work on the project earlier this year for Degerstrom. In addition to the gallium, Degerstrom plans to extract 180,000 ounces of silver a year, which will be sold on the open market. The gallium and silver will be retrieved from "treater dust" collected by pollution control equipment used on Monsanto's three large electric furnaces, Snell said. Kerr-McGee processes vanadium from molten slag tapped from the furnaces. An idled operation in southern Utah once produced gallium and germanium, a chemical element also used in semiconductors, and an Oklahoma company recovers gallium from scrap metal, but as far as recovering from the byproduct, this is the only plant in the country that goes that route, Snell said. A tailings pond will be constructed to store left-over solids and a furnace will be installed to melt the silver that will be poured into billets. Snell estimated it would take about five months to secure state environmental permits, but said extracting byproducts is an efficient means of eliminating industrial wastes. "It's not too labor intensive," he said. "We'll have 19 to 20 employees there." Degerstrom's metallurgical laboratory in Spokane has been studying the feasibility of constructing a gallium-silver extraction plant for seven years, but got serious about the commercial prospects during the past year, Snell said. Degerstrom has been in the mining and construction business for 23 years and has about 600 employees. It has mined phosphite in the Soda Springs area for Monsanto for about 18 years, along with a partner. The company also has two of its own mines in Nevada and operates mines for six other companies primarily involved in gold and silver production.

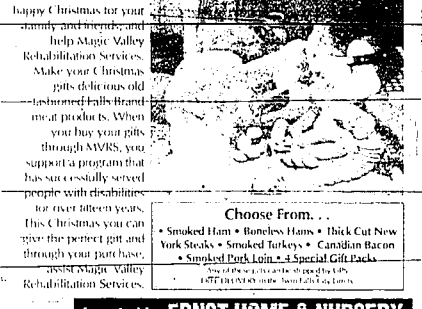

State to approve hospital remodeling despite lawsuit

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — The state is slated to approve the remodeling of Grangeville's Springs General Hospital on Monday despite a lawsuit by property owners' group against Idaho County and the hospital board. Springs administrator Arel Thacker said Wednesday the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development had approved a $700,000 grant from the Idaho Department of Commerce, but recommended two additional issues be resolved by the board. The first is a question of a conflict of interest by one of the board members, Wayne Hollopeter, who also is a Grangeville physician. Thacker said that question will either be settled by the state attorney general or by Hollopeter's resignation from the board. HUD also recommended local matching funds for the $1.2 million project be spent first and the grant money later. The board already had discussed that, Thacker said. The Idaho County Property Owners' Association strongly opposes spending county funds for the project and has filed a suit against the county and the hospital board to stop it.

Faculty seeks to change rule on teacher-student relations

LEWISTON (AP) — Lewis Clark State College faculty are considering going over President Lee Vickers' head to establish a policy on consensual relations between teachers and students. The Faculty Senate asked Vickers to take its case to the State Board of Education, but he refused. A meeting of the Faculty Association will be held Wednesday about his decision, said Patricia Reate, chairwoman of the Faculty Senate. In October, the senate told Vickers its belief that a consensual relationship between a professor and student is not sexual harassment. The policy bans relations between teachers and students enrolled in their classes or under their supervision. Those violating the guidelines may be warned, reprimanded, suspended, expelled, demoted or dismissed. Vickers said he rejected the faculty request because, "We feel it is inappropriate for a faculty member to have a relationship with a student in his or her class." He pointed out that the policy does not prohibit faculty from being with a student they are not instructing.

Drug bill includes declaration of war on 'eco-terrorists'

States News Service

WASHINGTON - "Eco-terrorists," radical environmentalists who allegedly sabotage timber sales, are among the targets of the drug bill which President Reagan signed into law two weeks ago.

The new law, sponsored by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, carries tough federal penalties for "tree-spiking" and "road-spiking" on a national forest land.

Radical environmental groups, such as "Earth First," have been charged with driving thick metal spikes into trees to thwart timber harvesting on forest areas. In some cases, spike-boards have been placed on logging access roads to puncture truck tires.

Tree-spiking was reported in Idaho's Salmon National Forest in 1987. Incidents involving so-called "revenge," or environmental sabotage, have been reported from Texas to Washington.

McClure's provision was inserted in the section of the drug bill that deals with marijuana growing on national forest lands. Marijuana growers have been known to use tripwires, explosives, and other devices to protect their crops.

Tree-spiking has been responsible for substantial losses in timber industry profits and costly damages to mill equipment, said Ed Few, a law enforcement officer for the U.S. Forest Service.

Contract sales of timber have been delayed when mills have refused to take trees from threatened forest areas and manhours lost in time spent combing forest areas with metal detectors, Few said.

One case of serious physical injury was also reported in 1987, when a Californian millworker suffered head and neck wounds when his hand saw hit two imbedded spikes in a log.

Although no tree-spiking incidents have yet been reported in Idaho's national forests, a spiked log damaged a lathe blade at the St. Maries mill at Lewiston last year.

Under the new federal law, those found guilty of placing a "hazardous or injurious device" on national forests will be subject to fines of up to $500,000 and imprisonment terms ranging from 1 to 20 years, depending on the damage and personal injury caused.

But Earth First! founder Mike Roselle argues that the law will not act as a deterrent to committed tree-spikers.

"I don't think it's going to deter anyone from a last ditch attempt to preserve cathedral forests," Roselle said, referring to the ancient forests threatened by Forest Service sales to the timber industry.

"It will be difficult to prove once someone has left the site," he said. Earth First! advocates tree-spiking as a means of preventing timber harvests in centuries-old areas of national forests, but has never claimed direct responsibility for reported cases.

All spiked trees should be clearly marked to alert forest service officials, Roselle said. Marking has the effect of delaying planned sales and preventing injury to loggers.

"The group, which has bases across the West and a mailing list of over 10,000, has also staged 'sit-ins' over its old-growth trees to save them from being harvested."

"Properly damage is occurring on national forests to such a degree that drastic measures are called for," Roselle said. "Which crime do you think is worse, the crime of messing up logging equipment, or tearing down ancient forests?"

"These people are eco-terrorists, they're the scum of the earth," said American Forest Council spokesman John Bennett in Portland, Oregon.

Bennett cited instances of trail-spiking in the Salmon National Forest, where thin metal wire was found strung at chest-height across trails in national forests. Earth First! has disavowed any connection with that incident.

The Forest Service reported a number of incidents across the northwest for 1987. Although findings for last year have yet to be collated, most Forest Service officials say that tree-spiking has not been a widespread problem this year. "There are no real problems in this region," said Forest Service officer Wally Shiverdecker, from the regional office in Ogden, Utah.

"With the fire season we had, there hasn't been a lot of logging," said Northwest Forestry Association President James Geisinger in Portland, Oregon.

But a recent instance of tree-spiking was reported this year at a mill in California, where timber salvaged from last summer's forest fires was found to be riddled with spikes.

Roselle has received reports of fresh tree-spiking in Washington's national forests from activists sympathetic to the Earth First! cause. Those spikes have yet to be discovered by Forest Service officials, he said.

The scale of spiking in Washington has quadrupled, Roselle said. "There are people involved in that right now, but they haven't published the results yet. The logging industry won't be told until the next logging season."

"If they know in advance which areas have been inoculated, they won't buy that timber," Earth First!'s Roselle said. "That's what we want."

"I hope it's not true," Forest Service Special Agent Bob Winchell said in Seattle. "But the possibility exists that it is."

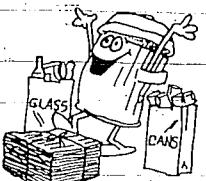

Idaho Is Too Great To Litter Campaign...

RECYCLING PROJECT

Saving natural resources, keeping Idaho beautiful, and raising money for our schools are three reasons 26 schools are participating in the second annual Idaho Is Too Great to Litter Education Program. The elementary schools are competing for Apple-Computers and playground equipment and each individual school has goals for the money they raise.

Secondary Schools are competing for audio/visual equipment and individual students can earn chances at a 1989 Subaru!

Everyone wins by getting involved in recycling! This is a terrific opportunity to get involved in our student's education. Most of the schools have had at least one successful drive already.

Here is a list of those schools & organizations participating along with their collection dates.

Commission questions procedure of land purchase

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — County commissioners have "no problem" with the hospital buying land for future expansion, says Commissioner Jim Fraley, but they have questioned whether the board went through the proper procedures before laying its money on the table.

Magie Valley Regional Medical Center purchased the 26-unit Canyon Villa Apartment, 125 Martin St., last week for $341,623.90.

The hospital wrote a check for the purchase from a reserve fund kept with the state treasurer's office.

In a Nov. 29 letter sent to the hospital board, to Administrator John Bingham and to the board's lawyer, Kent Taylor, the commissioners stated that County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter "will be reviewing the procedure followed in the recent land negotiations to assure us that all county budget law requirements were met."

Baxter's opinion, issued late Thursday, is inconclusive. It says that with the information she now has, the land purchase does not appear to exceed the $401,496 allocated in the hospital budget for "capital improvements."

Baxter adds that the purchase is legal unless it pushes the hospital's non-salary expenses over the authorized figure of $14.2 million. She does not have that information, her letter says.

Commissioner Judy Felton said the commissioners will discuss Baxter's opinion to-day and decide what the next step should be. Both Bingham and Taylor were reluctant to comment on the situation. Bingham said legal issues are Taylor's responsibility. Taylor said he has no opinion yet because he has not studied the issue.

But I am going to give both letters due consideration," he said. "I have no reason to believe the county law has been violated."

The second letter is a letter from a Boise attorney hired by a competitor of hospital, questioning the reserve fund's legality. It refers to a state law that requires any surplus funds be allocated for hospital operations for the fiscal year after such funds are received by the hospital.

The attorney, Rudy Barchas, represents Gary A. Dittman, president of Idaho Home Health & Hospice, a Twin Falls company that competes with the hospital for home health clients.

County commissioners said they will look at the reserve fund as part of the process of studying the land deal's legality. Fraley said the commissioners have no record of how much money is in that account.

"I have an idea how much money is available," he said.

Thar's gold in them there hills Champagne Creek site of 'pilot test'

By N.S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

ARCO — No burros or pickaxes or wizened prospectors here. The miners of Idaho's new gold rush have fresh young faces and degrees in geology, engineering and metallurgy.

A narrow, icy road winds up Champagne Creek about 14 miles east of Arco. At the end of the road is the site of the Champagne gold mine, a full of pickup trucks, construction equipment and a semi-trailer office.

Beyond the trucks and trailers are three piles of volcanic rock covered with snow and two pits lined with black plastic. Beside the pits two more trailers stand side by side. They house the mill where the Idaho Gold Corp. extracts minute gold and silver deposits from the ore.

This 20-pound gold and silver bar is worth about $26,000.

Idaho Gold Corp. is producing at the Champagne site in October and has mined about 10,000 tons of ore, producing 200 to 400 ounces of gold and 1,600 to 1,800 ounces of silver so far. The company plans to mine and process another 20,000 before the pilot run is finished.

The pilot run is designed "to see what we have to do with this ore," Project Manager Colin R. Fay said. The test will determine whether it is necessary to crush the ore or if blasting leaves it in small enough pieces, and it will show whether the gold can be recovered at a profit.

Based on pilot-run results and the procurement of the necessary permits, the company plans to build a full-scale processing plant next year to process up to 700,000 tons of ore annually.

The recovery process uses a 0.05 percent sodium cyanide solution, slowly dripped over the 100-by-25-foot ore piles on specially prepared surfaces called leach pads. The cyanide solution dissolves, or leaches, gold and silver deposits in the ore, which contains about a fifth of an ounce of gold per ton.

The metal-laden solution runs into the larger of the two ponds from where it is pumped into the mill. Inside the trailers the solution is filtered, and zinc is added. The process generally removes about 70 percent of the gold contained in the ore and about 50 percent of the silver. Some ore, however, yields up to 90 percent of its gold, Fay said.

The silver is basically just "pravy," Fay said. A bar of refined metal containing a combination of gold and silver is on display at the mine. It is about four inches wide, eight inches long and two inches thick and weighs about 20 pounds. It is worth about $26,000.

The mill that removes the gold processes a little more than 200 gallons of solution per minute. The full-scale plant would employ another parallel mill, increasing the capacity to more than 500 gallons per minute.

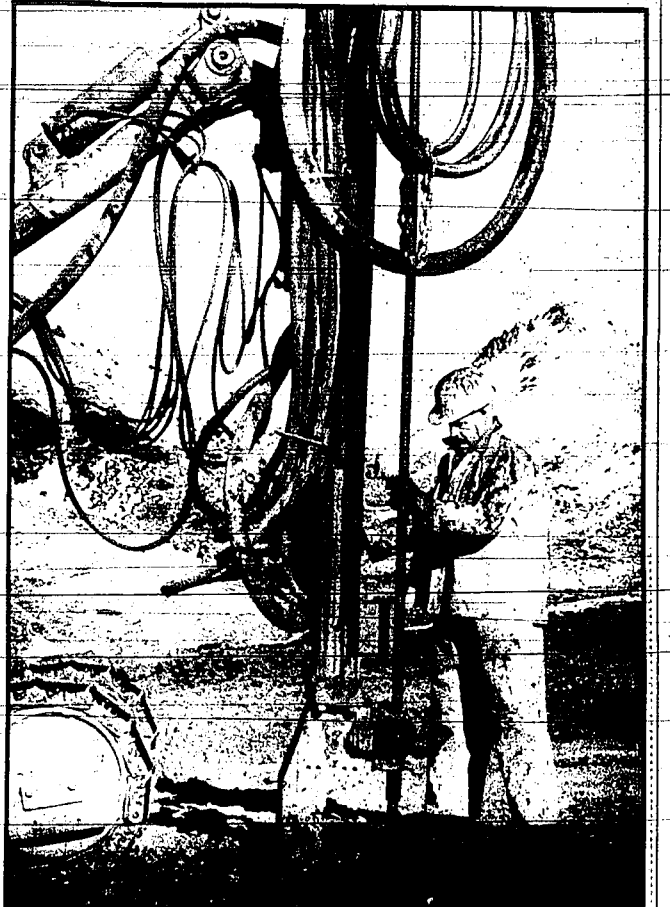

The whole process, from blasting to recovery, would employ about 45 people full-time when it is in full swing. It now employs 12 people from the Arco area.

The operation is under the watchful eye of the Bureau of Land Management. Concerns to be addressed before the full-scale operation is allowed include sediment from surface run-off, loss of deer and elk winter range, containment of the cyanide solution and safe chemical transportation. BLM spokesman Chuck Horsburgh said.

The mining company also must apply for a permit to drill a well to supply water needed for operation. It must secure approval of its operation and reclamation plans and ab-

Magic Mountain to open Dec. 9

By N.S. NOKKENTVED

TWIN FALLS — Skiing at Magic Mountain will celebrate its 50th anniversary when the resort opens Dec. 9. "We look forward to seeing Magic Valley skiers back at Magic Mountain," said Sherrin Jacobs, who with her husband Magzy bought the financially troubled ski resort this summer.

Claude Jones inaugurated skiing on the hill during the winter of 1938-39. He built the first lift at Magic Mountain using a 1929 truck engine to pull a 10-passenger sled up the hill, making it one of the first small resorts in Southern Idaho.

The Jacobses worked during the summer and fall to get the lodge cleaned up and the lifts repaired. A few

Jerome to call for ambulance bids

By DENISE TURNER
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The Jerome County commissioners are preparing to call for bids on a new ambulance.

When the bids come in, meanwhile, the commissioners will begin work on establishing an ambulance taxing district in the county, Commissioner George Andrus said.

The commissioners passed the resolution to form the taxing district in August following an approach from St. Benedict's Family Medical Center that it didn't want to continue running the ambulance service, which was losing money.

The county will administer the district

when it goes into effect on Oct. 1, 1989.

St. Benedict's was losing money and did not want to continue to run the ambulance service so this is the only alternative we had," Andrus said. At a public hearing on the matter, held last March, feelings about the taxing district were favorable, he said.

The commissioners plan to meet with St. Benedict's personnel to outline new ambulance services in the near future. The commissioners currently estimate a $50,000-$75,000 increase in property taxes to run the district, about $2 for every $10,000 of assessed property value.

"But these figures are just estimates," Andrus said, "and we probably will not be."

4 growers file lawsuit to reclaim their beans

By CRAIG LINCOLN and MARTA CLEVELAND
Times-News writers

TWIN FALLS — Four growers with beans in the Hawkins Co. Ltd. warehouse at Filer have filed a state lawsuit in an attempt to reclaim their beans.

"We're just asking that the beans that belong to us be returned to us," said Lloyd Walker, the attorney who filed the lawsuit.

The four growers, Lyle Abel, Roger Blass, Dan Shank and Jim Hurley, have asked the 4th District Court to convert the suit to a class-action lawsuit, Walker said. They will ask for a hearing as soon as possible, he said.

Blass is the son of Hawkins Co. part owners Robert and Norma Blass, Walker said.

If the judge says yes, then all known owners of beans stored at Hawkins will be notified of the suit in writing and will be included among the plaintiffs unless they specifically ask not to be included, Walker said.

Defendants in the suit are Hawkins Co. Ltd., its directors, Jerry

Magic Valley legislators to head majority caucuses

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Magic Valley picked up both House and Senate majority caucus chairmanships and appeared, close to an additional committee chairmanship at Thursday's legislative organizational session.

Burley Rep. Bruce Newcomb was picked to head the House Republican caucus and Rupert Sen. Lynn Tomimaga was voted Senate majority caucus chairman. Their election by fellow Republicans marks the first time in two years that the Magic Valley has been represented in Republican leadership positions.

Cary Sen. John Poavey will continue as Senate minority caucus chairman.

"I campaigned on a regional ballot," Newcomb said. "The Magic Valley has a need to be represented in leadership.

At the close of the first day of the two-day organizational session for the 1989 Legislature, no house committee chairmanship positions had been decided upon.

But Republican Sen. Denton Darrington of Deelo had been named chairman of the Senate Judiciary and Rules Committee.

Darrington, elected for a fourth term, has served as chairman of the Senate Education Committee but requested the change to Judiciary. It carries the prestige of being one of three privileged committees, which are allowed to introduce bills later than other committees may.

Darrington is also expecting the committee to deal with some of the more important issues of the 50th Legislature, including child sexual abuse, the juvenile justice system and criminal law issues.

He also will continue to serve on the Health and Welfare Committee.

"I look forward to it. I'll have the best of both worlds," he said.

Republican Sen. Larry Anderson, representing the Magic Valley National district, has asked for the Health and Welfare chairmanship and appeared to have a good shot at it by the end of Thursday's session.

Republican Sen. Laird Noh of Kimberly will continue the committee assignments he held in the 49th Legislature — chairman of Resources and Environment and vice chairman of Agricultural Affairs and Education. Tomimaga was one of four Republicans nominated for majority caucus chairman, the fourth of four majority party leadership positions in the Senate.

He was opposed by Anderson, Jerry Thorne of Nampa and Herb Carlson of Eagle.

"I think in the past good ideas have been killed by both sides because of politics," Tomimaga said. At a five-hour closed-door caucus to pick leaders Wednesday night, he told Republicans that should change.

"Whenever Republicans have a disagreement with the Democratic governor, it's up to the caucus to come up with alternatives," he said Thursday.

Newcomb was opposed by Reed Hanson of Idaho Falls. Newcomb characterized himself as more con-

U of I to get largest part of state education research funds

COBIR DALENE (AP) — The University of Idaho will get the lion's share of $800,000 approved by the Idaho Board of Education on Thursday to support research activities at the state's four-year colleges and universities.

The bulk of items before the board during the first two days it meets here were housekeeping items. Discussion of a policy on pesticide research conducted at state universities was tabled because a study of the policy had not arrived.

The $800,000 in so-called "infrastructure" research funds are part of $2 million to be distributed among the four institutions during the next three years, as part of a new research policy, said Robin Dobson, acting chief academic officer.

The monies are to be used to support research activities, such as library support, maintenance contracts, technical support equipment, post-doctoral fellowships, among others, Dobson said.

The funds could be used as incentives to reward faculty for research achievements, he said.

The board approved a distribution formula suggested by the Higher Education Research Committee that gives each institution $50,000, then divides the remaining $400,000 based on the average of competitive non-state grants they have secured during the last three years.

The formula awards Idaho a total of $341,960, Boise State University $103,920, Idaho State University $99,160, and $84,960 to Lewis-Clark State College.

Idaho pulled in nearly $7 million in external grants last three years, compared to $8.1 million for Boise State, $2.8 million for Idaho State and $287,000 for LSC.

A request to substitute or waive a speech requirement for out-of-state students seeking admission to Idaho colleges and universities was sent to an ad hoc committee for further review.

The requirement, which is part of Idaho high school curricula, caused out-of-state students to enter as provisional students, making it difficult for recruiters to attract students from neighboring states, Dobson said.

But board member Jerry Evans questioned adoption of a policy that makes it easier for students from Washington, Oregon and California to attend universities in the state than for Idaho students.

In other action:

—The board approved a proposal to start a new bachelor's program in Physics, Health Physics at Boise State and gave preliminary approval to establish an Institute for Rural Health Studies and to reorganize the College of Health-Related Professions at BSU.

—Adopted a policy for naming or memorializing campus buildings or facilities.

—Adopted an amendment that places the Office of State Board of Education staff under the same annual leave policy as faculty and staff at other state institutions.

Farm Bureau delegates vote to form statewide PAC

MOSCOW (AP) — Delegates to the Idaho Farm Bureau Federation convention here have voted to form a statewide political action committee that could rival the Idaho Education Association's PAC in power by the time the 1990 elections are held, members said.

About 200 federation delegates voted Thursday to establish a PAC to further farm positions, said Ray C. Jacobsen, political education coordinator.

Delegates also approved a recommended $1 PAC donation per year from its 28,657 member families, money managed separately from regular membership dues.

This is an exciting and formidable move for an organization this size, and we expect to give this process slow and thorough consideration as we proceed," said Ms. Jacobsen, executive director.

Funds will be dispersed to support various campaigns at the state level.

Money will be used for candidate endorsements, agricultural support groups, advertising, polling and other activities that enhance communication of the issues we are concerned with in Idaho," Ms. Jacobsen said.

A seven-member committee will decide how the money is spent.

It's the third agriculture-oriented organization to take similar action this year. The Idaho Cattle Association formed its first political action committee earlier this year and contributed $5,000 in the campaign.

The Idaho Wood Growers voted last month at Peacelton to form its own political action committee.

Former state senator Dave Bivens, Farm Bureau public affairs director, said, "We'll be cutting our teeth on the 1990 elections."

The Cattle PAC has managed to raise about $6 per member, said Gary Glenn, vice president of the Cattle Association.

If the farm bureau can even come close to the kind of fundraising success Cattle PAC has had, its PAC will be a leading player in state politics, he said.

The chair of the PAC, Glenn said, "I said if Farm Bureau members contributed $6 each, farm interests would have close to $200,000 to spend in the next election, including the other groups, he said.

The IEA spends about $90,000 on political action each year, according to Jim Shuckelford, IEA's assistant executive director in Boise.

Glenn, Jacobsen and Bivens agreed the pursuits of the three PACs were likely to overlap, but they added that the organizations would maintain their autonomy in management and leadership.

"The biggest kick on the block is now in the game," said Glenn, who also is a Farm Bureau member. "Ag has the potential to become the major PAC in the state in the 90s."

Glenn said agricultural groups have been considering the formation of PACs for nearly five years, and he predicts the idea will catch on.

"I think these groups were waiting for the ground to be broken," said Glenn.

Farmers and ranchers are conservative by nature, but we've been left with no other choice... It's coming from an agricultural point of view to think that the concerns of our communities will now be put before the public."

Hawkins, Robert Blass and William Xongster, and the Idaho Department of Agriculture.

Walker's suit also seeks a restraining order to prevent the defendants from transferring or moving the beans from the warehouse.

The state Bureau of Warehouse Control, which began an audit Monday, already has frozen all assets.

Hawkins Co. suspended trading Nov. 22 after Hawkins directors said they discovered certain inventory inconsistencies. The state suspended its license the same day.

Walker said farmers could be in a better position to recover their beans with this lawsuit. If Hawkins files for bankruptcy, a federal judge could allow an existing state lawsuit to proceed, and state laws are much better at protecting the rights of growers, he said.

More than 325 farmers have filed liens against the warehouse.

Lawrence P. Berni
 GLENS FERRY — Lawrence P. Berni, 99, of Glens Ferry, died Wednesday, Nov. 29, 1968, in a Mountain Home nursing home.

His body will be cremated at 7:40 p.m. Sunday at Our Lady of Loretto, Catholic Church. Burial will follow at Glens Ferry Cemetery. Arrangements are under the direction of Humphreys Funeral Home in Glens Ferry.

Chair lift seats still need to be recovered and a few other odds and ends need to be finished before next week. But the snow has fallen, 40 inches at the top and about 25 at the lodge with a hard base.

The owners previously had said they would open the resort Dec. 16, but they are ready sooner.

The chair lift and the rope tow will begin operating on Dec. 9. The Panda lift will be ready until sometime in January, Sherrie Jacobs said.

On Monday they will sign an operating permit with the U.S. Forest Service. The resort is built on public land and its operators must have a special-use permit from the Forest Service to begin operations.

Conditions on the mountain are good for the operators, and a grand opening celebration is planned for the future, probably January, she said.

Lot tickets for an opening day will cost $5, Saturday and Sunday all day tickets will cost $12.

State Republicans reconstruct chamber's committees

BOISE (AP) — The reconstruction of a smaller Republican majority in the Idaho Senate continued Thursday as the GOP shuffled the chairmanships of the chamber's committees.

The top spots on all but two panels were tentatively set following an afternoon of meetings between Republican members and their new leaders.

The chairmanships for the Education and Health and Welfare committees apparently depended on the size of a number of panels, including the budget-writing Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee, is changed in response to Democratic gains in the Senate. That decision should come Friday.

The Democrats picked up three Senate seats in the November election, cutting the GOP majority to 23-19.

There was no clear decision on whether John Hansen of Idaho Falls or Dennis Hansen-of-Soda Springs, both starting their second terms, would head the Education Committee, and that decision could ultimately be made by the GOP caucus.

The change in the Senate majority began

Wednesday when Assistant Floor Leader Michael Crapo of Idaho Falls was elected President Pro Tem to replace defeated James Tisch of Boise.

Judiciary Chairman Roger Fairchild of Fruitland was selected floor leader when outgoing Floor Leader Mark Rieks of Rexburg decided not to run. Caucus Chairman Jerry Dwigs of Blackfoot moved into the assistant floor leader's job, and Lynn Tommings of Rupert took over as caucus chairman.

Rieks will now head the State Affairs Committee, replacing Phil Batt of Wilder who retired.

Rachel Gilbert of Boise, who won an intra-party confrontation with Riech during the May primary campaign, will chair the Local Government and Taxation Committee, and Health and Welfare Chairman Denton Darrington of Declo will take over the Judiciary Committee from Fairchild.

The majority was also considering expanding the scope of the former Investment and Resources Committee by changing its name to the Human Resources Committee with responsibility for personnel and industrial relations issues as well as retirement and investment matters.

Three-term Sen. Rod Beck of Boise will head that panel, replacing William Ringert of Boise. Ringert, who lost to Democrat Brian Donnelly by just 51 votes, has asked for a recount.

Retaining the chairmanships they had in the last Legislature were Herb Carlson of Eagle on Agriculture-Affairs; Ann Rydalek of Idaho Falls on Commerce and Labor; Atwell Parry of Melba on Finance; Laird Mohr of Kimberly on Resources and Environment; and G.A. Snyder of Parma on Transportation.

'John Doe' charged with stolen items

JEROME — Authorities here charged an unidentified man Thursday with possession of a motor home that had been reported stolen in Oregon.

The man, booked and charged as 'John Doe,' was charged with two counts of grand theft and one count of petty theft, said Jerome County Prosecutor John Morgan. Bail was set at $50,000.

The man identified himself as George Keith Williams, 37, but authorities could not confirm the name or age.

Sheriff's deputies arrested the man Wednesday night after discovering that the 1984 Winnebago he had been driving was reported stolen out of Medford, Ore., authorities said. The man was staying at the Anchor Inn near Bliss at the time of his arrest.

Sheriff's officials said the man also had a credit card that had been reported stolen in a burglary in Boiseburg, Ore.

Claim forms available for grocery credit

TWIN FALLS — Elderly and disabled Idaho residents who may qualify for 1988 Unused Grocery Credit refunds can pick up claim forms at a State Tax Commission office in Twin Falls.

The Unused Grocery Credit is designed to benefit eligible people who are not required to file regular income tax forms. It refunds a portion of the sales tax money they pay for food.

The tax commission is mailing forms to people who received refunds last year, but other potential applicants can pick up the orange Form 21 at the local field office, at 1038 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., Suite C. The phone number is 733-7153.

Frank to appear in court on charges of forgery, theft

CALDWELL (AP) — Wallace Wally Frank, 48, Council Bluffs, will appear in district court here Dec. 9 on criminal charges connected with the financial problems of his Caldwell insurance agency.

After the conclusion of a preliminary hearing that started in October, Magistrate Jack Swafford on Tuesday ordered Frank to district court to face charges of forgery and theft. The charges stemmed from operation of the Harrison-Frank Agency, one of Idaho's largest independent insurance agencies.

It filed for financial reorganization, which was later changed to bankruptcy, and the company was sold to another company.

Frank and David F. Beck, former stockholder in Harrison-Frank and an insurance agent for the company, were named as defendants in a civil lawsuit filed last week by federal bankruptcy trustee Jerome Hagan under the federal racketeer-influenced Corrupt Organization, or RICO, law.

The suit for $500,000 claims that money and property were illegally transferred to groups and individuals prior to July, when Harrison-Frank filed for financial reorganization.

Timber company wants to move from McCall

MCCALL (AP) — Anybody interested in 4.2 acres of land in McCall, complete with buildings with historic significance?

The Southern Idaho Timber Protective Association, which has used the site since 1904, wants to move its operation away from McCall because of traffic congestion.

Some groups are working to have the old log buildings placed on the National Register of Historic Places. Besides being used for fire protection efforts for more than 80 years, the buildings housed the cast of 'Northwest Passage' when the Spencer Tracy movie was filmed at McCall.

The Southern Idaho Timber Protective Association is a cooperative of the state and private timber owners. It fights wildfires on both state and private land. Funds are provided by the state and through assessments on private forest lands.

The agency covers an area from the Little Salmon River on the north to Smiths Ferry on the south, about 428,000 acres. It employs five full-time and 25 seasonal workers and has an annual budget of about $429,000.

The McCall site has plenty of room but problems come when fire trucks must contend with heavy summer traffic, said association fire warden Bob Kirk.

We feel we can do a better job not operating out of downtown McCall with fire trucks,' he said.

The association is looking for a new site, preferably out of McCall. Kirk said once a site is found, work will start on raising money to purchase it and develop the land.

The new site is planned both as a location for the timber protective association and the new office for the Department of Lands McCall office.

Linda Holden, McCall, who has worked as a fire lookout for the association for 10 years, said she is working to find a way to preserve historic buildings on the site and convert them into a museum dedicated to forestry, fire and wildlife.

The former fire warden's house and the SITPA offices were built in the 1930s by crews of the Civilian Conservation Corps.

The warden's house has been used by Idaho's governors for entertaining.

Polygamist clan trial begins today

COALVILLE, Utah (AP) — Attorneys for three polygamist clan members charged with killing a lawman say their case will center on psychological stress from police floodlights and loudspeakers.

An eight-member jury and two alternates were empaneled Thursday and opening arguments were to begin Friday in the trial of clan leader Adam Swapp, 27, his brother Jonathan Swapp, 21, and brother-in-law John Timothy Singer, 22.

All are charged with second-degree murder in the Jan. 28 death of Corrections Lt. Fred House.

After questioning nearly 250 prospective jurors over three days, attorneys said they were pleased with the outcome.

I think they will be a very good jury, said Fred Metos, Singer's attorney. They all seemed very serious about their jobs and duties and I think they will work hard and pay attention, and that's all you can ask.

House was killed during a brief shootout that ended in a standoff between the clan and 100 lawmen fearful of storming the rammed compound because of the clan's nine children. The impasse had begun 13 days before when Adam Swapp bombed a nearby Mormon chapel.

House, a member of a SWAT team that had infiltrated the compound, was ordering a hustler police dog to subdue the armed Swapp brothers when he was shot. Adam Swapp was seriously wounded, but recovered.

Prosecutors contend it was the wheelchair-bound Singer who fired the fatal shot from a bedroom window of the main log residence, but he told officers later that he was aiming at the dogs and never intended to harm anyone.

Adam Swapp's attorney, John Bucher, said the defense would place more of an emphasis on the psychological state of the defendants. During much of the standoff authorities aimed floodlights and recordings of high-pitched sirens at the 15 clan members inside the compound.

Officially, authorities said the tactic was a diversion to allow movement by FBI observers, but some officers said privately that the barrage amounted to "psychological warfare" intended to force a surrender.

During pre-trial hearings, Jonathan Swapp's attorney, Earl Spafford, said the sound and lights created an atmosphere of stress and strain that provoked the defendants to carry guns and ultimately use them.

WPPSS liaison ridicules conspiracy idea

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The idea that utilities expected a federal agency to eventually buy two Washington state nuclear power plants under construction was "science fiction," Hagan testified Thursday in the Washington Public Power Supply System securities fraud trial.

There was, however, a hope during the six years of constructing the plants that the cost would be shared with other customers, said Kosmata, the WPPSS liaison with 88 utilities that contracted with WPPSS to build the plants.

Kosmata completed his appearance on the witness stand and the trial, which began Sept. 7, was recessed until Jan. 9 for the holidays.

He spent 27 trial days as the first witness in the case stemming from the 1983 WPPSS default of $2.25 billion in municipal bonds sold to finance the plants.

The plants were unfinished when they were abandoned in 1982.

More than 21,000 bond investors claim in the class-action suit that former WPPSS financial adviser, William Hagan, conspired with utilities as part of a conspiracy to lie and hide information that might have jeopardized bond sales.

Defendant attorney James Hagan spent Thursday cross-examining Kosmata on a number of issues, brought up earlier this week by plaintiff attorney Paul Bernstein.

Bernstein on Wednesday tried to suggest that the motive for the conspiracy was to keep selling bonds for the plants, which by 1980 were over budget and behind schedule, while the utilities tried to get the federal Bonneville Power Administration to buy the plants.

That would have saved the utilities from having to scrap the projects and allow them to share construction costs with other power purchasers, he said.

Under Hagan's questioning, Kosmata said there was "no indication at all" that Bonneville, which markets power in the Pacific Northwest, had the authority or desire to take over the plants in the early stages of construction.

Even after new federal legislation was passed in December 1981 giving Bonneville more authority in buying power, he said, it didn't mean that Bonneville would "necessarily" buy the projects.

Kosmata said Bernstein's suggestion of a motive for the conspiracy is "just science fiction. That's what it is, science fiction."

Canyon Conference: Declo Hornets are favored

By LARRY HOVEY Times-News writer

There's no doubt in the minds of Canyon Conference basketball coaches that the Declo Hornets are the pre-season favorite.

The coaches gave them a unanimous pat on the back in that category — a fact that doesn't exactly overwhelm Declo Coach Ron Knowles who watched his Hornets lose in their opener last week.

They're excited about us in every department as far as I could see and I know they definitely out-busted us," he said.

The coaches weren't nearly as certain about second place, finally giving the nod to Filer with 36 votes, just two more than Gooding while Valley, getting a pair of second-place nods, was third at 30.

Basically, the coaches appeared most impressed with a little better size and the presence of two three-year starters in Shane Osterhout and Greg Kowitz in their assessment.

Filer returns almost everyone but will be one of the shorter teams in this alignment. But there is great hope here because the Canyon does at least a lot of size this time around.

Declo

Declo has some likely ingredients to support the coaches in their No. 1 selection.

Kowitz, 5-11 senior, brings back 9.8 points per game average and 3.5 rebound while 5-9, 6-1, had 11.1 points and 7.4 rebounds. The top scorer-rebounder is 6-5 senior Jeff Steadman, who had 12.1 points and 8.6 rebounds last year and senior guard Jay Hamilton, 5-8, checked in with 11.5 points and 2.9 rebounds.

Newcomers and returning squad members expected to help at Greg Turner, 6-0 senior guard; Nathan Kinwles, 5-10 senior forward; and Thayne Shaffer, 6-7 senior center.

We have the nucleus of a good team returning, Knowles confirms. Kowitz and Osterhout should give us good leadership. But we'd like to be a little quicker.

If they had any height, it would be difficult to place Filer as low as second, but, as Coach LaRell Patterson told his team "we have 11 guards and one forward."

Don't construe that to infer Patterson is giving up on these Wildcats, it's just that rebounding may come harder than he'd like.

There are four returning starters and two seniors who had part time starter service last year.

The return starters at Clint Lutz, 5-9 guard, who had 10 points and just under four rebounds per game; Steve McCandless, 6-11, who average 10.5 points and 3.3 rebound; Shane Blakelee, 5-11 forward, 11.4 points and 6.3 rebounds, and Mike Brady, 6-1 forward, 9.6 points and 5.1 rebounds.

All of those are seniors while the junior class provides the remainder of the roster.

These include Brian Coon 6-0 forward; Corey Coon 6-0 forward; Mark Lutz, 5-8 guard; Shaun Hawker, 6-1 forward, and Tim Dronnan 6-1 forward.

Our seniors have a lot of experience and we will rely on them for leadership and we have three solid jayvee players moving up to help out, Patterson said.

Gooding

There's a new coach but a lot of conference familiarity at Gooding this year as Rich Thompson takes over the helm. Thompson had two head-coaching stints at Kimberly, including last year, and knows each individual and team as well as anyone.

The major change for Thompson, however, is having players taller than him at Gooding. It hasn't been that easy in Kimberly of late.

And Thompson is aware of that height. Past play should be main man stream with 6-6 Dan Sumner, 6-6 Chris Dewatt and 6-3 Mike Johnson.

son in the middle," he says. Any of those three could develop into a dominating player inside.

"As a new coach to the school, I was very interested in gauging the work ethic of our players. I must say that I've very pleased with the willingness to work hard. If that continues, I'm very optimistic about our chances of becoming a solid basketball team."

The pre-season improvement in perimeter ballhandling has been pleasing this far and Thompson doesn't consider the team quick.

Our biggest weakness just may be a new coach with a new defensive system. I'm very stubborn when it comes to certain facets of aggressive defensive play and we may take some bumps because of that," he said.

Kimberly

"After a year of being very young, the Kimberly Bulldogs will simply be young this time around.

New Coach Randy Potter inherits a team that went 5-17 last year but returns three starters and lists only one senior among those expected to see the most action this year.

"Our depth is going to be a strong asset. Also, I feel our team quickness is very good this year," he says.

The long senior with experience is 5-11 Trent Jackson, who averaged seven points and 3 rebounds. The height is found in return starters Kelly Holcom, 6-4, and Luke Kelsey, 6-2. Those two accounted for 17 points and 11 rebounds between them.

Jeff Dehaard, a 6-2 senior, adds some maturity and height to the roster.

The juniors provide another bit of height with a familiar name, Mark Holcomb, a 6-4 junior point man.

The other juniors counted on are Brad McDonald 5-9 guard; Randy Collins, 6-0 wing; Sam Wormsaker, 5-9 guard; Jason Way, 6-0 wing, and Brad Heidenman, 6-0 wing.

Being ranked everywhere from sixth to second comes as no major surprise for Coach Bill Mitchell.

MV Conference: Shoshone has tradition

By RON GATES Times-News writer

Since dropping classification and joining the A-Magic Valley Conference in 1985, Shoshone High School has had things very much its own way.

Although it was state edict rather than choice that sent the Indians down, so much to their liking is the smaller school game that their hangers have notched 36 consecutive conference victories and, in fact, lost only once in a league opponent that line defeat in state play three years ago.

Second at state in '86, they won the championship a year later, then scalped two more titles to garner fourth place at that level last season after dropping a first-round squeaker to eventual state title Mackay which, incidentally, plays its football in the MVC.

Ranked second by the Associated Press without yet walking on the court, Shoshone's dominance seems assured and a dissertation on current prospects an exercise in futility. Don't bet your life savings on it.

Only Oakley returns fewer starters than the Indians while Murtagh and Castleford remain virtually intact and Hagerman qualifies as a genuine contender as well. For suspense three new faces appear on the coaching scene, including two up from the junior varsity.

Brett Patterson, a Minico grad via Utah State University, takes over at Raft River after a year with the JV, while it stays in the family at Castleford where Andy Wiseman replaces brother Sam as headman. Rounding out the newcomers is Steve Behrens, who directed Burley's sophomore girls to a 194 season last year, now looking at turning around an 8-14 boys program at Hansen.

"I've got to be kidding," responded Shoshone Coach Larry Messick when informed that his charges were favored on the coaches' ballots. The conference is more even-steven that it ever been — any of six teams could win it. We lost everything.

Well, not quite everything coach, but you might well be looking over your shoulder a little more than usual.

Shoshone

While it's obviously going to require more than tradition for the Indians to duplicate last season's 24-3 state and return to the state finals, attaining a fourth straight conference title could prove equally difficult.

We have only eight players on the varsity, four seniors and four underclassmen with no varsity experience, says Messick, who has coached Shoshone through 13 winning seasons. Depth could be a problem.

What Shoshone fans do have to smile about is the return of 6-foot, 3-inch, all-state guard Jim Messick, who averaged 19.3 points and 8.1 rebounds as a junior. Another senior, 6-2 Richard Shiner 6-4 with 5.2 boards moves into the middle of Shoshone's passing game and pressing defense where Messick hopes he will give them what they had been getting from graduated 6-5 pivot Ross Spainson.

After three two, who the coach says, should carry most of the scoring load, only sophomore backup center Kevin Stankinson still reaches six feet.

Richard 15-11 senior guard Linn Davis and Bryan Sologala to 5-11 senior forward, have improved in the Shoshone's all-state guard Jim Messick is a driving force in the we've had the past few seasons, but last year, the coach adds. "We don't (un)experienced or not" Joe Messick have the height or big inside player.

Northside: Camas boasts size, depth

By LARRY HOVEY Times-News writer

The Camas County Mushers have much of the size, most of the experience and a lot of depth.

So it is small wonder that the other Northside Conference schools have put the favorite's tag on the Mushers and Coach Dave Shirts.

The Mushers were the unanimous pick to the point that Shirts coached Camas County with Richfield and Dietrich for the year's choice.

That left the Mushers with 24 of a possible 25 votes with Richfield second at 19, Dietrich at 14, Carey at 10 and Bliss with seven.

The Northside Conference is down in numbers this year as both Gooding State and Ketchum Sun Valley Community School have elected to conduct a junior varsity schedule and program this year.

The league does return its top gun in Carey 5-foot, 8-inch senior guard Tim Tingey who averaged 28 points last year.

Camas County

The overall size that Coach Shirts can call on probably is as good as any A-M school in the area can muster. In fact, only one player, 5-6 junior guard Jerry Dilard, is under the 6-foot mark and it stretches up to 6-5 and 6-6.

Shirts has six returning veterans who were either full or part-time starters a year ago — and yet one remains a sophomore and two are juniors.

The usual starters returning from last year are 6-0 senior guard Eric Frostensen; 6-3 senior forward Kit Barron; 6-6 senior forward Ben East; and 6-2 sophomore wingman Eddie Hansen.

The two juniors in the club, 6-1 Andy Emmonson and the 5-6 Dilard, started at various times.

Shirts is moving 6-5 sophomore Ryan Barnes up from the jayvee and the Mushers received another plus when 6-2 senior guard Tim Yore transferred in from Gooding.

We will have good depth and we'll have decent overall quickness which will help us defensively, Shirts said. Also, we have a lot of experience returning and we have the added bonus of having smart players who pick up things very quickly.

He said adjusting to the new system may take some time but the players seem to be adapting well.

Richfield

The phrase "from now" aptly applies to the Tigers who are charging this 20-game season with a total of 13 players for varsity and jayvee matches.

If we are to have a successful season, says Coach Shawn Nilsson, we will have to stay out of foul trouble and away from injuries.

Nilsson does not find the cupboard bare in some of the major phases of the game.

That key to not basketball team will be the experience and leadership on the floor, he says.

That means 6-1 senior forward Laine King, 6-2 senior center Casey Riley, and 5-7 guard Spence King. Those three have logged varsity time over the past three years for the Tigers.

Nilsson expects good help from 5-11 sophomore guard Robby Appell.

After that it will be a matter of juggling lineups and rosters to meet the contractual obligations.

Dietrich

The paradox for the Dietrich Blue Devils is they return five men from last year's varsity and still might be the youngest team in the league.

Coach Gene Paul list 6-3 center Jevly Jennings as the only senior among the 11-41-man squad, which is bolstered by a good group off the jayvee unit.

Jennings averaged 12 points and 3 rebounds last year while sophomore Craig Sorenson, a 6-3 forward, brings back the top scoring mark at 14 points per out. He also had four rebounds, six-foot Verlon Southward, another sophomore, had eight points and two rebounds, while juniors Robert Hirschman, 6-1 forward, was points and two rebounds and Walk Bowman had four points and two rebounds.

Up from last year's jayvee club is sophomore guard Bert Matco, who averaged 16 points, and Ace Shaw, a 5-7 freshman guard who averaged 14 points. Two other freshmen on the team are David Kimmen, a 6-10 forward, and Arnon Sorenson, a 5-9 forward. The list is rounded out with junior Dan Green, a 5-10 guard, and 5-11 Cole Greenfield.

Jackpot: Preparing for school's 5th year

By STEVE CRUMP Times-News sports editor

JACKPOT — They're coming off rebuilding seasons, Jackpot High School's girls' and boys' basketball teams, "but both Jaguar boys" coach Chris Klekas and girls' coach Michael Strom are hoping for much, much better this time.

"We have the physical and intellectual talent to do well, but first we must learn to overcome our fears," says Strom, in his second season at Jackpot High. "My team has to forget the past and concentrate on this year."

Pahrump Valley High School of Alamogordo. We have good speed and quickness," says Klekas, who has compiled a 14-12 record in two seasons at Jackpot High. "But we will be very young and inexperienced. We will also be one of the shortest teams as our tallest player is 6-1."

Klekas, who started the Jackpot boys' basketball program in 1984, returns 6-foot, 1-inch senior forward-center Shanon Felman, who averaged 12 points and seven rebounds a game last year, and Delano Brown, a 5-10 guard-forward who averaged eight points and four boards.

The newcomers include Lynn Heiersgaard, a 5-10 sophomore forward-guard; Aveliano Ruiz, a 5-11 freshman guard; Jeff Bloom, a 6-1 senior center; and Shannon Mendive, a 6-9 freshman forward.

There is much more varsity experience available to Strom, who has all five starters back, including 5-3 senior guard Yogi Gomez, 5-6 senior forward Teresa Vicente and 5-7 senior forward Sherrice Carter. Also returning are Kellie Roberts, a 5-8 junior center, and Alicia Torero, a 5-0 junior guard.

The newcomers include a junior, two sophomores and five freshmen, led by 5-2 senior guard Lisa Barton.

Coming from a school system that strives for academic success, intelligence is our greatest strength," says Strom.

Strom's girls' team is also preparing for its fifth year. The team is led by 5-10 senior guard Lisa Barton, who averaged 12 points and seven rebounds a game last year, and Delano Brown, a 5-10 guard-forward who averaged eight points and four boards.

The newcomers include Lynn Heiersgaard, a 5-10 sophomore forward-guard; Aveliano Ruiz, a 5-11 freshman guard; Jeff Bloom, a 6-1 senior center; and Shannon Mendive, a 6-9 freshman forward.

Canyon

 Mitchell sees a couple of question marks like height but feels quickness could more than offset it. If it does, the coach sees the upper division as the more likely finish. If rebounds are hard to come by...

We had a good quality back from last year plus some nice players up front. We will be ready to go for the league championship. Mitchell points out. The conference should be evenly balanced this year and we hope to be right in the thick of it.

Northside

 Paul lists "good attitude and good work habits" as major pluses of the team.

"They have a burning desire to play very hot," he added with a smile. "But it is a very young team."

Carey

Breaking the mental doubts of two losing seasons and replacing it with positive drive is the early-season goal of Carey Coach Les Cook.

In a small school everybody plays both football and basketball. We've had two losing seasons in both sports and it is very difficult for the team to play with any confidence. We are working hard in that area," Cook says.

The Panthers aren't toothless by any means. They return the 5-9 sharpshooting Tim Tingey, who averaged 28 points in 17 rebounds last year. But moving beyond him, Cook notes "we have pretty good height and some good bench support, which will help. If we can get a couple of newcomers (6-4 senior Perry Maguire and 5-11 senior David Pyrah) to play with intensity and scoring from John Conrussa and Lance Kirkland, we could be tough. Tim Tingey always plays hard and will be a key to our success."

Conrussa second-year in scoring last year with nine points and was the top rebounder with eight takeaways. Kirkland is a 5-7 senior returning for another starting year at guard.

The Panthers seek support from 5-9 senior Kelly Whitworth and 6-0 junior forward Travis Peterson.

The Panthers, who were 9-13 last year, will stick with their 3-2 offensive and multiple defense concepts.

Bliss
 It wasn't too many years ago that

The Vikings return as the offensive firepower in 5-11 junior David Black who averaged 15 points and five rebounds last year, and 6-2 Herard Mutschmann, 15 points and 10 rebounds. Another return starter is 6-2 Pete McDonald who had six points and five rebounds from a forward spot.

Further senior maturity is provided by Nathan Heuting, 5-11, and Gary Johnson, 5-8 guard.

Bliss Coach Jerry Couch now entering his 13th year at the helm, wished aloud for "the height and quickness of the Bliss girls team."

"That is improving for Couch this year, with four players six feet tall or better."

Now what he has to look for is call his players by their first name because he has three Millers (Justin, Jeff and Jason) and two Jennens (Shawn and Shane).

They should be a pretty good passing team and will have three returning starters who will help the newcomers develop, Couch says. The players have a good attitude and are hard workers.

On the debit side, Couch joins with a couple of other coaches in wishing for a little better speed and quickness, which he places below average.

We have no experience beyond the three returning starters. The rest are up from the JV level. He pointed out, and then added "At this point our shooting is suspect."

The returning starters are 6-1 Justin Miller, who had 8.5 points and 6.3 rebounds last year; 6-2 Jeff Miller who had 10.7 points and 4.5 takeaways and Shawn Jensen, 5-8, who was 3.8 and 1.8.

Kraig Kestio, 5-11 senior center, and junior David Taylor, 6-0, add something to the Bliss height. The guard and forward lines will be backed and filled by 5-9 junior, Shane Jensen, 5-11 senior Corey Treveling, 5-8 junior Todd Victor, 5-8 sophomore Jason Miller and 5-5 freshman Shawn Wood.

for Allen Kelsey as he returns to Magic Valley after a three-year absence.

Kelsey, who guided Kimberly for a couple of years, finds good average size among his 12-man roster, including 6-4 return starter Dean Surplus and 6-3 exchange student Jens Rutenkjer.

"It's been a while since we've had an outstanding year in basketball and there is great basketball tradition here," Kelsey said.

"Kelsey says being a new coach brings good and bad news."

 Re-establishing some of the winning tradition of Wendell's basketball program has become a talking point.

A new coach usually brings a fresh start and new enthusiasm. We are seeing that in a good team attitude and the desire to be more than an also ran," he says. "But a new coaching philosophy takes time for the players to adjust and learn the different system."

The Trojans have two return starters in Surplus and James Lessly, a 6-0 senior, Duane Packer, a 6-0 senior, has some starts as well while Rob Siver, 6-0 senior, and 5-9 guard Shane Fitzpatrick saw considerable game time.

Behind those five seniors are Rutenkjer and six juniors. The juniors include Trent Sparks, 6-4 post, Terry Jasper, 6-0 wing, Robert Lessly, 6-0 swingman, Chuck Shirley, 6-2 swingman, Scott Clark, 5-10 wing, and Jay Collins, 6-0 swingman transfer from Gooding.

Glenns Ferry
 It isn't that the conference would collapse but figure Glenns Ferry will topple a couple of them, the problem seems to be there are not enough places or height to get everyone listed in high school.

 and Alex Ugalde (5-9 and 5-10 freshmen guard, respectively) are as fundamental as anyone we have in the school. Our outside shooting attack and free throw shooting will be drastically improved over last season."

Murtaugh
 With six of nine players at six-foot or better, the Red Devils hold only a slight height advantage over the defending champs and practically no edge in depth, but four starters, one part-time regular and the top sub are back from last year's 1-11 fourth place in the MVC at 6-6 varsity making Murtaugh a force to be reckoned with.

Coach Hal Jardine, in his third season at Murtaugh, welcomes back Shannon Widmer, a 3-10 guard who scored 14 points per game, 6-1 forward Red Bates (9 points) and an even dozen rebounders and sixth-man Brett Czumins, a 5-8 guard, all seniors.

"Three juniors, led by 6-foot, 2-inch leading scorer Evan Nebeker (19 points and 11 boards) and including six-foot guards Kelly Reig (14 points and 5 rebounds) and Forrest Anderson lend additional firepower."

Like Behrens at Husson, Jardine steers clear of a discussion of his game plan. With all that talent at his disposal, does it really matter?

The Wolves finished third in conference at 7-5 under Sam Wiseman a year ago, then ousted second place Oakley in sub-district play, ran past a Northside Conference challenger in district and joined Shoshone at the state tourney.

Probably to the relief of their Shoshone counterparts, whose 1986 team dropped an all-MVC state championship contest to Castledorf, the Wolves weren't around very long. Still, on eight teams got that far and the experience left six who were there to get going for more.

Andy Wiseman, 27-13 with the javeyes, but a rookie at the varsity level, opts for a strategy calling for the flex offense combined with pressure man and matchup zone defenses and believes the chances for success are good.

If we can stay healthy and eligible by the grade requirement we should be competitive, he said. We need to think and play like winners."

The potential is there with four seniors, Shane Wiggins, a 7-11 guard, 5-11 wingman Troy Ruter, Mike Darow, a 6-1 backup center, and six-foot wing Jason Allred teaching with wing Jace Hahn, a 6-5 center who Wiseman calls "the best big man in the conference" and 5-9 outside threat Jeremy Burgess. Three in three more-6-2 juniors for the league's tallest outfit.

"Hagerman" is the term usually associated with the town annual softball extravaganza. For the 1987-88 season it might aptly describe expectations of the local high school basketball team.

The Pirates compiled a 4-8 record in the MVC last year (9-13 overall) and though just two part-time starters, 5-6 guard Mark Henslee and 5-11 forward Shawn Butler, both seniors are back in the fold, the cream of the crop may just be arriving.

"We have good depth," says sixth-year Coach Randy Clark. "We seem to have good intensity all the time during our practices and can use a number of combinations. Our JV went 17-1 last year and that should help us."

Senior frontcourtmen Toby Miller (6-3) and Brandon Foster (5-10) return for their final season and are joined by juniors Mike Yarbrough and Jason Varr, at 6-6 and 6-4, respectively, Hagerman's tallest, and 5-10 forward Judy Ladd, whose outside shot has to be respected.

Oakley
 Listing the Hornets, runners-up at 9-3 in the MVC and 12-11 in the year, in the college echelon is akin to saying that North Carolina's Tar Heels won't crack basketball's top 20. But the poll is right on according to Coach Neal Wyatt, whose teams have been at or near the top in most of his 18 years with the Oakley varsity.

"We are short on practices due to injuries and state football," he said. "Aid lack of practices will be a early problem. Returning experience is lacking as we have only one returning part-time starter back."

That lone occasional regular is 6-2 Doug Pickett, a senior center who can post up his man, but still needs to become a more potent defensive stopper.

Yiping to join Pickett up front are seniors Todd Haines, 6-3, Cole Elquist (5-11) and six-footer Mike Poulton along with juniors Carl Judd (5-11) and Joseph Whitlow (6-0). Seniors Clayton Adams (5-7), Linden Severe and Guy Corring, both 5-7, as well as 5-8 junior David Miller will try their hand in the backcourt.

Hansen
 In Behrens the Huskies have finally landed a coach who stresses fundamentals and fits a system to the talent on hand. It's already paying dividends.

The Huskies dropped their non-conference opener by a single point — one usual starter substituted hunting for practice, thus rode the bench all night. Still, the 66 points last year's best by one and is 15 higher than that season's average.

"Our team has a lot of quickness," says Behrens. "We hope to use our abilities to play pressure defense and keep our opponents from getting good percentage shots. The thing I see as our major problem is defense. We must learn to play a lot better on the defensive end."

Senior Brian Hall, a 6-1 post who paired-up in 32 points in the 590er, shares the inside with classmate Chris Hill (9 points) and 8 rebounds as a junior, while 5-8 junior Scott Youre is back at one guard and Rob Larson, a 5-9 senior and defending state champion at 200 meters in track, is healthy again after missing most of last season. Backup help comes in the form of 6-4 sophomore post Scott Barnwell and 5-11 Ryan Larson, a junior guard.

"This group has a great work ethic and will be learning an all new system this year that should work well for the Behrens added."

Raft River
 Brett Patterson inherits a 3-20 (1-11 in conference) team that displayed only flashes of good play under departed coach Tom Harrison last season.

"We aren't strong from the three-point line," Patterson says. "And we won't be as strong inside. We lack a big man who can really dominate underneath."

Seniors-Rob Berrier, a 6-1 guard who averaged 6 points, and 4 rebounds last season, 5-10 Erich Telford (4 points) and six-foot Erich Hope will form the nucleus of this year's ballclub.

Soingman Cam Bell, a 6-3 senior, is back in good form, but the team lacks rebounding and physical play in a 6-4 post Karl Rasmussen and Scott Hitt, a 6-2 junior guard, is looked to for more scoring.

"I think that if we could utilize the quickness that we have this year, we can do fairly well," adds Patterson. "We have some real good shooters that could help us. They can hit from around 16 feet fairly consistently and we have some inside players that may come along through the season and help us."

Valley, Kimberly will meet tonight for tourney championship

HAZELTON — The Valley Vikings and Kimberly Bulldogs will rematch tonight for the championship of the annual Snake River Holiday Tournament.

The two A-3 teams saw to that Thursday night when Valley overpowered Hansen 74-41 and Kimberly thrashed Murtaugh 57-51.

It means Hansen and Murtaugh line up at 7 p.m. today for consolation honors with Valley trying to wrap up the title from the 8:45 p.m. championship.

Kimberly had a lot of trouble putting the pesky Red Devils away as the teams jugged through a tight game. Murtaugh had a one-point lead but didn't score again as Kimberly hit the final seven points of the game.

Valley turned to its inside game senior Bernard Oussman, and sophomore Travis Mossman to break away from Hansen in the second quarter. The Vikings were within five minutes in the second quarter when Mussmann came up with eight points and Olsen added seven more to explode the Vikings into a 42-20 halftime advantage.

Cleveland Cavaliers rally to overcome Milwaukee Bucks 99-96

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Mark Price hit a go-ahead 3-point jumper with 29 seconds left and Ron Harper scored 23 points Thursday night as the Cleveland Cavaliers rallied for a 99-96 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.

Price's three-point made it 93-90 and his two free throws with 16 seconds to go gave Cleveland a 95-92 lead. Milwaukee's Jay Humphries then made a long jumper with 13 seconds left — it was ruled a two-pointer — and Harper and Brad Daugherty made two free throws each in the final seconds to seal the victory.

Friesz wins back-to-back MVPs

BOISE (AP) — University of Idaho quarterback John Friesz has become only the second football player in Big Sky Conference history to win back-to-back league most valuable player awards.

Friesz, a senior, was named MVP last season. He was named MVP again this season.

Montana outside linebacker-strong safety Tim Hauck was named defensive MVP, and Northern Arizona running back Lavon Worley the Big Sky's top newcomer of the 1988 season.

Stephenson said coaches were not allowed to vote for their own players.

Friesz's first-team, 24-pound junior from Cedar Falls, Iowa, was named Idaho quarterback Ken Hobart as the only Big Sky player to win two consecutive league MVP awards. Hobart was honored in 1982 and

A first-team all-Big Sky selection the past two seasons, Friesz helped guide the Vandals to their second straight Big Sky championship this year. Idaho is the conference's first team since the 1973-75 BSU Broncos to win back-to-back football titles.

The Vandals met Northwestern State of Louisiana Saturday at the quarterfinals of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs.

Friesz led the Big Sky in total offense for the second straight year, averaging 275.1 yards per game and accounting for 20 touchdowns. He passed for 2,874 yards on the season, completing 55.42 percent of his passes for 18 touchdowns.

Also receiving votes for the league's offensive MVP honor were Weber State running back Fim Uga and NAU tight end Shawn Collins.

Hauck became the first Montana player since Greg Anderson in 1976 to win the Big Sky's defensive MVP award.

The 6-0, 180-pound junior from Big Timber, Mont., collected four pass interceptions and was the leading tackler with 101 stops on a Montana team that led the Big Sky in every defensive category.

Hauck also was credited with five pass deflections and three fumble recoveries on the year by the Grizzlies who were invited to the I-AA playoffs for the first time since 1982.

Also receiving votes on defense were Boise State end Erik Helgeson, Idaho linebacker Jerry Medved, Montana State nose guard Jon Wang, Eastern Washington cornerback Andre Carr and Northern Arizona linebacker Peter Donovick.

Among newcomers, Worley, a 5-7, 180-pound sophomore from Phoenix, Ariz., finished the 1988 season with 1,085 yards rushing, averaging 98.6 yards a game and 4.7 yards per carry.

Denver plans Olympic bid

DENVER (AP) — A group of Colorado business and government leaders, believing that financial and environmental questions about staging the Olympics have been answered, announced today that Denver will make a formal bid for the 1998 Winter Games.

The decision drew the endorsement of Governor Roy Romo of Colorado, Mayor Federico Pena of Denver, House Majority Leader Chris Paulson and various business leaders.

The announcement came after completion of a $12,000 feasibility study which indicated significant public support for hosting the 1998 Winter Olympics in Denver.

Denver previously was awarded the 1976 Winter Olympics, but Colorado residents, citing the cost to taxpayers and potential environmental damage, rejected the choice in a 1972 vote. Those Games subsequently were held in Innsbruck, Austria.

The Denver-Colorado Olympic Development, headed by KICNC Channel 4 executive Roger Ogden, will submit its formal presentation to the U.S. Olympic Committee in October 1989. Other U.S. cities known to be interested in the 1998 Winter Olympics are Salt Lake City, Utah; Reno-Lake Tahoe, Nev.; Anchorage, Alaska; and Lake Placid, N.Y.

expanded infrastructure to support the Olympics and a track record that it didn't have 17 years ago for hosting international events.

Ogden admitted that Denver was a "dark horse" in the competition because of its late entry into the bidding process. Nagano, Japan, for instance, was designated by Japan as its bid city 11 years ago.

"Nagano might very well get the '98 Games," Ogden said. "We're going into this with our eyes open. We're aware of the challenge. This is not necessarily a one-shot process. If we fail in '98, we might go for 2002."

Pena called the bid process, which would cost a total of $2 million if taken to the limit, "basically a private-sector effort."

Steve McConahy, chairman of Boettcher Investment Corp. and a member of the committee, said the goal is "to minimize or eliminate any government funding."

Most facilities — except for luge-bobsled runs, a speed-skating oval and an Olympic Village — already are available, committee members said. Those that must be built, Romer emphasized, must be permanent and "must fit in with Colorado when the Olympics are over."

Walsh prefers winning to Heisman

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — If University of Miami quarterback Steve Walsh goes one for two Saturday, he will be happy.

Despite an outstanding year, Walsh expects to be an also-ran when the Heisman Trophy winner is announced in New York. But he hopes to be a winner — when he goes to be a winner — when he is named Heisman.

Walsh and his teammates conclude their regular season Saturday night against Brigham Young.

"It's not a matter of life or death if I win the award," Walsh said. "It is a matter of life and death if we win or lose football games, though."

Oklahoma State's Barry Sanders is favored to win the Heisman, and Walsh said the junior running back deserves it. But Walsh also has completed Heisman-caliber statistics — 213 completions in 364 pass attempts for 2,878 yards with 28 touchdowns and only 10 interceptions.

Because of the BYU game, Walsh can't be on hand for the Heisman announcement. But his father and 15-year-old brother will be.

"I never really made the Heisman main goal," said Walsh, a junior. "It hasn't been on my mind all season, and it won't be when they present the trophy."

Walsh led Miami to the national championship last year, but he began this season as a longshot for the Heisman, partly because the school decided against nominating him heavily for the award. That was fine with Walsh.

"It's ironic that Barry Sanders, who this year really had no preseason publicity, more than likely will win the award," Walsh said. "That's the attitude we have down here — you have to go out on the field and prove it."

"We're not going to spend thousands of dollars on campaigns trying to promote somebody. We'll be on national TV enough times during the season so if you go out on the field and show that you're a great player, you'll probably win the award."

Quarterbacks Troy Aikman of UCLA and Rodney Peete of Southern Cal were preseason favorites for the Heisman, but Walsh might finish ahead of them in this year's balloting.

"Steve got a heck of a lot of attention this year," said Rich Dalrymple, Miami sports information director. "But he didn't have the preseason buildup — the two guys on the West Coast had."

Dalrymple said if Walsh matches this season's performance next year, he will win the 1989 Heisman "going away. I think I'll be hard for Steve or Sanders to put up better numbers than they did this year. But if Steve does, I think he'll be it."

Walsh will decide after the season whether to return to Miami next year or turn pro. But he likes the thought of making another run at the Heisman.

"I feel good about my chances," he said.

Former Miami quarterback Vinny Testaverde visited a Hurricanes practice earlier this week and had a few words of wisdom for Walsh.

If designated as the USOC's choice, the Denver committee would then submit a second bid to the International Olympic Committee, which will make its final site determination in 1992.

A poll conducted on behalf of the committee indicated that 69 percent of Colorado voters surveyed were in favor of hosting the 1998 Winter Olympics. Only 18 percent were opposed, and 22 percent were undecided.

Eighty-five percent of the respondents cited economic benefits as the reason for their support of the Olympic bid.

"Today's situation is dramatically different than it was in 1972," Ogden said. "Colorado now has a greatly various venues are yet to be determined, although the committee noted the choice among several excellent ski areas and also said Colorado Springs would be involved, possibly as a site for Nordic events at the Air Force Academy.

Romer noted that Interstate 70, the Eisenhower Tunnel and the Denver Convention Center, which weren't in place in 1972, will be in 1998.

"The Olympics would benefit Colorado in a number of ways," Romer said. "This would help to let the world know who we are. We spend $8 million to $10 million a year advertising this state. We would be foolish to turn away from the free advertising the Olympics provide."

NBC wins Barcelona rights

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC stunned CBS with a record bid of $400 million Thursday to win the U.S. television rights to the 1992 Summer Olympics in Barcelona, Spain.

NBC, which televised the Summer Olympics in Seoul, had been considered a longshot to get the Barcelona rights. CBS was favored because it already owns the TV rights to the 1992 Winter Games in Albertville, France.

The Barcelona fee topped the previous Olympic record of $309 million paid by ABC for the Winter Olympics in Seoul.

NBC president Robert Wright said at a news conference: "Our plan was designed to minimize losses. It's not designed to make a lot of money."

Wright also said that as part of the agreement NBC agreed to spend $10 million to promote the city of Barcelona.

Michael Weisman, executive producer of NBC Sports, said he was a "little bit surprised" that the network got the Barcelona rights.

"The first call after I found out was to Terry Ewert, our coordinating producer in Seoul," Weisman said. "I said, 'I sure hope you saved all your notes because I threw mine out.'"

Bryant Gumbel, who anchored NBC's prime-time telecasts in Seoul, said: "I think it's terrific news, especially for the guys who worked in Seoul. I'm a little surprised, though. I naturally assumed that CBS had the inside track."

Neal Pisanic, president of CBS Sports, said the record fee indicates that his network may have gotten a bargain when it won the Albertville rights for $243 million.

"Certainly the magnitude of NBC's bid far Barcelona reaffirms the marketplace value of Albertville," he said.

ABC Sports president Dennis Swanson said, "We are disappointed but we congratulate NBC on the acquisition."

It was not immediately known how much CBS and ABC bid, but a source said NBC's offer was "substantially higher." Olympic officials were seeking a minimum of $350 million.

ABC lost an estimated $75 million in Calgary. NBC said it made a "modest" profit in Seoul, although it was much lower than expected due to disappointing ratings that forced the network to give sponsors free advertising.

NBC is expected to recoup some of its Barcelona fee by selling about 75 hours of Olympic programming to cable network for between $50 million and $75 million.

Arthur Watson, the president of NBC Sports, said the network had a "detailed cable plan," but would not elaborate. He also said events probably would not be shown on cable at the same time NBC was broadcasting.

Unlike Seoul, prime-time coverage from Barcelona will be taped because of the six-hour time difference with New York. But that drawback may be offset by the earlier starting date of the 1992 Games, which won't have to compete with football and the final weeks of baseball's pennant races.

The Seoul Olympics started Sept. 17. The Barcelona Games begin July 25.

"Every Olympics has its own feel and I think Barcelona will have a totally different look than Seoul," Weisman said. "I think we're in a very good position having done the Seoul Olympics. We were very proud of what we did in Seoul; but I would be less than honest if I said I didn't expect to do this one better."

Briefly

Finalists named for Thorpe award
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Deion Sanders of Florida State, who finished third in balloting last year, is among 10 finalists announced Thursday for the Jim Thorpe Award.

The award, in its third year, goes to the top defensive back in college football and is based on performance on the field, athletic ability and character.

Sanders, a senior cornerback, finished behind co-winners Rickey Dixon of Oklahoma and Bernie Blount of Miami, Fla., last year. He also was among the 10 finalists in 1986 when Thomas Everett of Baylor won the award.

The other finalists this year are safety Steve Atwater of Arkansas, safety Mark Carrier of Southern Cal, safety Marc Foster of Purdue, cornerback Darryl Henley of UCLA, cornerback Johnny Jackson of Houston, safety Louis Oliver of Florida, safety Markus Paul of Syracuse, cornerback Rodney Rice of Brigham Young and cornerback Donnell Wolford of Clemson.

Carrier, a sophomore, is the only underclassman.

NL won't name president right away
NEW YORK (AP) — The National League is unlikely to name a new president until after next week's winter meetings, Los Angeles Dodgers owner Peter O'Malley said Thursday after a meeting of the search committee.

"While the annual meeting was a goal, it is never a deadline," said O'Malley, the head of the search committee. "The committee is being as deliberative as possible so as to make sure it chooses the right person before the position."

Simon Gourdin, a former deputy commissioner of the NBA, is believed to be the leading candidate for the job. A. Bartlett Giamatti, the current NL president, becomes commissioner of baseball April 1.

"Recent press accounts that the search committee has either completed its work or fixed on final candidates are not accurate," O'Malley said.

Couples leads Australian tournament
MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — American Fred Couples led a spectacular 60-foot bunker shot at the 18th hole for a 6-under-par 66 Thursday and took a one-shot lead over the first round of the $1.25 million Australian Bicentennial Classic golf tournament.

Couples fired four birdies on the front nine at the Royal Melbourne course to make the turn in 31 and then birdied the 14th and 18th holes.

Couples, an All-America golfer at Houston, missed a short birdie putt for the outright lead on the 17th hole but then closed with his long-distance shot from a sandtrap.

Couples used a 7-iron from the bunker at the 18th. He planned only to get close to the hole. "I was worried about a bogey, so it was a great way to finish," he said.

Couples led ploddering fellow American Mike Colandrea and Japan's big-hitting Masashi "Junho" Ozaki. Both shot 5-under-par 67s to share second spot. Each had six birdies and solitary bogeys over the par-72, 6,985-yard course.

Minister praises anti-drug efforts
LONDON (AP) — Government plans to crack down on the possession and supply of anabolic steroids represent a major breakthrough in the fight against drug abuse in sports, British sports minister Colin Moynihan said Thursday.

Speaking on a tour of one of the world's major drug-testing laboratories, King's College at the University of London, Moynihan revealed that the Home Office had proposed banning possession anabolic steroids without a proper medical prescription.

He said he was committed to stop the trafficking of steroids by making them prescribed drugs, under the relevant legislation.

"The legal action being considered, Moynihan said, was "one of the most significant breakthroughs in tackling the problem of drug abuse in sport."

Alabama coach receives support
COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Coach Bill Curry is safe at Alabama until at least 1992.

He got a concrete vote of confidence for the remaining three years of his contract before Thursday night's regular season college football finale against Texas A&M University.

Alabama officials were so concerned with rumors about Curry's job they called a press conference to deal with them nine hours before kickoff.

Curry has a 14-8 record in two years at Alabama and this year's team is 7-3 but some Crimson Tide alumni haven't been satisfied.

"His contract is not for sale," said Dr. Roger Sayers, Alabama's interim president.

"There were rumors that Curry would be fired after Alabama's Sun Bowl game Dec. 24 against Army."

Bill Curry will be our football coach tomorrow, next week, next month, next year and at least the next three years," Sayers said.

Americans hold lead in Sun City tourney

SUN CITY, South Africa (AP) — Ken Green and Don Pooley of the United States shared a four-stroke lead over the rest of the eight-man field after Thursday's first round of the Men's Dollar Challenge, golf's richest tournament.

Both fired 5-under-par 67s as intermittent showers developed into heavy mid-afternoon rain that may have prevented Pooley from breaking the course record of 65. He completed the first nine holes in 31, but bogeys on the 15th and 18th thwarted his bid.

"Nothing was going wrong until the rains came and then I had some trouble," Pooley said. "On the last four holes I ran up and it costed me some problems. The ball was just out of the club face gets wet, and I hit a squaring drive on 15."

"That just barely made the rough and made bogey there," he said. "I couldn't hit it out of that rough, and then on 18 I thought I hit a good second shot. But the water did something funny. I guess, to the ball, and I came up short and I three-putted."

He acknowledged it was "not a very good finish after playing fairly well at first. I wasn't expecting any runways but it was fun to birdie seven of the first 11 holes. That was a real treat."

Green started with seven consecutive pars. But then he sank a four-foot uphill putt for a birdie on the eighth hole and cagled the ninth to make the turn in 33.

South Africa's two best players, David Frost and Mark McNulty, were the only others in the eight-man battle for a $1-million first prize to better par. They had 71.

The total purse for the 72-hole tournament is $1.65 million.

Trailing in a tie for fifth place, at even-par 72s, were last year's winner, Ian Woosnam of Wales and South African Fulton Allem, a rookie this year on the U.S. pro tour.

American Chip Beck, No. 2 on the U.S. money-earning list this season, was seventh at 74, and Bernhard Langer of West Germany was last with 76.

"I was hitting some good shots and putted pretty good, and then I made a double bogey on the ninth hole, which was quite easy today," said Langer. "Most guys would make four there or even three. I made seven and that kind of upset me a lot and took the steam out of my game."

Langer said, "I'm usually not the type who gives up unless it's impossible and 10 shots (behind) is not impossible in three days, especially on this golf course."

The four-day event is being played on a 7,665-yard course designed by South African golfer Gary Player.

VALVE LEAKS

Exhaust Valves allow the gases of every cylinder to enter the combustion chamber. Valve parts are precision-ground so that when they close, they will hold compression and combustion tightly within the cylinder. When they leak, performance will suffer, and it will be necessary to perform a potential problem is burning oil. Engine lubricating oil may leak into the cylinders. If the clearance between stem and valve gets too large, valve action gets sloppy. Oil that leaks into the combustion chamber causes a talltale blue exhaust smoke. An engine that runs rough at low speeds is a sign of oil burning caused by bad valve sealing.

Duper suspension related to tests
MIAMI (AP) — Miami Dolphins wide receiver Mark Duper's failure to appear for two drug tests last week apparently was the cause for his 30-day suspension by the NFL, his agent said Thursday.

"They think he's trying to avoid these drug tests for a reason," said Dan Bakst, a West Palm Beach attorney. "He's taken 15 or 20 of them over the year. Everything that we have says that Mark has tested negative on those. We've never heard anything to the contrary."

The NFL suspended Duper on Wednesday, saying he had violated the league's substance abuse policy. As usual, the league declined to elaborate or discuss specifics.

Duper also had little to say.

"I'm not sure what is what," he said. "I'm disappointed in the situation as far as my family name."

Georgia makes freshman ineligible
ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — The University of Georgia temporarily has made freshman basketball starter Elmore Spencer ineligible pending a review by the NCAA's Legislation & Interpretations Committee.

The NCAA recently ruled that Spencer's term of residence at Georgia included the fall quarter of 1987, when Spencer enrolled but then withdrew because of medical reasons. Georgia had been using his term of residence to begin with the 1988 winter quarter.

Because of the earlier residency rule, the NCAA ruling, Spencer failed to be eligible because he lacked enough hours of credit to meet the NCAA's satisfactory progress requirement.

140 nations help observe 1st World AIDS Day

By The Associated Press

The first World AIDS Day was marked Thursday by a concert in Beijing, a march through the streets of Harare, Zimbabwe, and a speech by a San Franciscoer who has had the deadly disease for six years and says his life was "made richer" because of it.

The World Health Organization sponsored the event aimed at encouraging people to talk about the virus that infects an estimated 5 million to 10 million people worldwide.

President Reagan, Pope John Paul II and U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar sent messages to the opening ceremony at the agency's headquarters in Geneva, calling for stepped-up efforts against the disease.

"It is the responsibility of each individual to learn about HIV (the AIDS virus) and to treat those infected with HIV with respect and compassion. And it is the responsibility of infected individuals not to infect others," Reagan said in his message, which was read by singer Pearl Bailey.

The agency said 140 nations held special AIDS prevention activities Thursday.

In Zimbabwe's capital, more than 200 young men and women marched through the city center with placards saying, "We have the power to stop the spread of AIDS."

In Lusaka, the capital of neighboring Zambia, hundreds watched plays and films about the dangers of AIDS.

China held a nationally televised lecture on AIDS and a concert in Beijing to benefit an AIDS foundation and the Public Health Ministry.

Groups distributed free condoms at Gatwick Airport outside London. In Stockholm, Sweden, 2,000 scientists called for an end to discrimination against AIDS victims.

About 200 posters bearing witnesses to the suffering of AIDS victims and their loved ones were displayed on Paris' esplanade of Human Rights at Trocadero.

"Thursday night, we will be there for you with your friends, one poster read. You fought until the end, we tried to help but we lost ... My dear, where are you? We hope it is better than here ...

On Earth ... Love, Your Mama and Papa."

In the United States, New York's Times Square zipper flashed news messages about AIDS prevention and Mayor Edward I. Koch played the first bulbs of a "Hope Garden" that authorities hope will grow a flower for each person with the disease.

A rally was staged in Albuquerque, N.M., a prayer breakfast was held in Atlanta, and part of a quilt with 8,288 names — each stitched with the name of an AIDS victim — was displayed in Boston.

In the Geneva ceremony, another speaker called World AIDS Day "the opening paragraph in a new chapter of our worldwide effort to stop AIDS."

Richard Rector, 32, said he has had the disease for six years, during which he says he has traveled to three continents to teach people about AIDS.

"I have gladly had my world turned upside down, and made richer," through having the disease, he said.

"Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is caused by a virus that damages the body's immune system, leaving victims susceptible to infection and cancer.

It is spread most often through sexual contact, needles or syringes shared by drug abusers, infected blood or blood products, and from pregnant women to their offspring. There is no known cure.

"Officially, 142 countries have reported 129,385 cases of AIDS to the World Health Organization.

But the agency estimates that the true number is more than twice that, and that 5 million to 10 million people may be infected with the HIV virus. Once infected with the virus, victims have a 50 percent chance of developing AIDS within 10 years.

The focus of the WHO's AIDS prevention program is education and information to fight the spread of the virus.

The Baltimore Sun

JERUSALEM — With the Labor Party's refusal to join the Likud Party in a coalition government, Israel's ultra-Orthodox parties jockeyed to increase their influence Thursday.

Labor signed an alliance with one of them, Agudat Yisrael, preventing Likud from forming a new government.

The center-left Labor Party and the right-wing Likud Party both courted-unlikely allies Thursday, but with an apparent stalemate. Israel still has only a caretaker government, 23 days after national elections.

For Likud, led by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, the latest bargaining prevented him from fulfilling a day-old pledge to form a governing coalition with the parties of the extreme right and the ultra-Orthodox.

For Labor leader Shimon Peres, the negotiations gave hope that his party could outwit Likud and emerge as at least its equal in the eventual government.

presumably be forced to make concessions either to win back Agudat or to tempt the Labor Party to join Shamir in a partnership.

If no government is formed over the weekend, Israel's President Chaim Herzog must designate a party Monday to try again up to 21 days to form a workable coalition. He would not be obligated to designate Likud again.

The latest talks came a day after the Labor Party rejected Peres' plea that he continue to negotiate with Likud over forming a partnership. Party members voted narrowly in favor of going into the opposition, unless the Likud offered Labor better terms for power sharing.

Younger Labor members criticized Peres for reopening talks with the ultra-Orthodox. After the party's decision, the only alternative is to go into opposition, said Moshe Shahal. "We must learn from our experience that decisions like these are not respectable."

Labor and Agudat are unlikely partners.

Agudat is pressing for passage of legislation calling for Israel to recognize conversions to Judaism only if they are performed by Orthodox rabbis.

Peres, however, has promised delegations of American and Canadian Jewish leaders, who fiercely oppose the "Who is a Jew" measure, as it is known, that Labor will not agree to supporting it as a condition for forming a government.

Under the agreement between Labor and Agudat, Labor Party members will be allowed to vote however they wish on the measure rather than be compelled to vote with Agudat, according to reports on state radio. With Labor members given the freedom to vote their conscience, it is doubtful that the measure could win the necessary 61 votes to become law.

Elementary schools open in West Bank

RAMALLAH, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Thousands of Palestinian children streamed to West Bank elementary schools Thursday as the army lifted an order that shut down classes for most of 10 months.

There were no reports of violence in the 612 private, state and U.S.-run schools attended by about 230,000 first-through-sixth graders.

But elsewhere Thursday, 15 Palestinians were wounded when troops opened fire on stone-throwing demonstrators in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, hospital officials said.

Among the wounded was a 10-year-old boy from Dair Balah refugee camp south of Gaza City, said the officials, who insisted on anonymity.

They said the boy, identified as Hamad Hassan Abu Dan, was in critical condition with a bullet wound in his chest and was transferred to Barzakh hospital in Israel for further treatment.

The army confirmed that four Palestinians were wounded in clashes in the market of Nablus and said it was checking the other reports.

At least 316 Palestinians have been killed and hundreds wounded since they launched their uprising against Israeli rule in the occupied territories last Dec. 8, 1987. Eleven Israelis also have died.

The start of elementary school classes was the first step in the army's three-stage opening of 1,194 West Bank schools.

Mexico's Salinas takes office

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Carlos Salinas de Gortari took office Friday as opponents protested in congress and in the streets, and he promised to push for political and economic modernization.

"I take office in a complex hour ... It is a singular moment in our history, heavy with risks but rich in opportunity," Salinas said in his inaugural address. He said he would govern for all Mexicans and promised nationalist, democratic and popular reforms.

Salinas, a 40-year-old economist, succeeds President Miguel de la Madrid for a six-year term. He inherits an economy threatened by both recession and inflation, growth since by a $102 billion foreign debt and a population impatient after six years of austerity that reduced earnings about 50 percent.

He said efforts to reduce Mexico's foreign debt would begin immediately.

About 140 delegates from the National Democratic Front walked out of the Legislative Palace just before Salinas was inaugurated, and members of the National Action Party held up signs declaring "Fraud."

"We are walking out because we don't want to endorse with our presence the legitimacy of the Salinas de Gortari government," said delegate Jaime Hernandez. The opposition maintains that Salinas' Institutional Revolutionary Party cheated to win the July 6 presidential election and that the real victor was Cuauhtemoc Cardenas.

Outside the Legislative Palace a crowd of several thousand Democrats. Front supporters threw rocks at police. Many in the volatile crowd were carrying sticks and several police and demonstrators were injured.

Police used tear gas to disperse about 1,500 demonstrators in the Zocalo, the central square in front of the National Palace where a post-inauguration parade was being held. One woman held up the bodies of two dead rats and said they had killed Salinas.

Red Cross paramedics Carlos Daniel Ramirez said around 150 people, including police and soldiers, had been injured and were being treated at the scene. A police spokeswoman said they were many arrests.

Tactically bowing to the disputed nature of his victory, Salinas invited the opposition to a political dialogue that would include "perfecting" the electoral process.

But political change is not enough, Salinas said. Unless the economic crisis is overcome, he said, "stagnation will lead to democracy, political competition will turn into social conflict and frustration aims for social justice."

Salinas said negotiations on the nation's debt will begin immediately with the goal of cutting debt payments to a level that will leave Mexico with enough funds to invest in development and growth.

In an unusual arrangement, opposition leaders were permitted to make televised speeches questioning Salinas' election before Salinas was inaugurated. In return, the opposition agreed not to disrupt the actual ceremony.

Although the speeches were televised, the Bhutto becomes prime minister

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Benazir Bhutto became the first woman to lead a Muslim nation when the president chose her Thursday to be prime minister, the post her father held when he was deposed and hanged a decade ago.

President Ghulam Ishaq Khan said in a televised address that Ms. Bhutto had "the best qualities of leadership and foresight as a statesman."

Thousands of supporters celebrated in streets of the nation's cities after the long-awaited announcement. They danced, held drums and chanted "Long live Benazir!"

Ms. Bhutto's party gained 12 more seats in the National Assembly when it voted Wednesday on candidates to fill 20 seats reserved for women.

With those her populist Pakistan People's Party won in the Nov. 16 election, it holds 165 of the chamber's 237 seats, and she is said to have enough support among minor parties and independents for a majority coalition.

President Reagan sent a letter of congratulations expressing "his hope that the recently conducted elections will usher in an era of democratic rule in Pakistan," a close ally of the United States, presidential spokesman Marjorie Fitzwater said in Washington.

"We are encouraged by this renewed commitment in Pakistan to constitutional procedures and look forward to continuing our close relations with Pakistan's new government," Fitzwater said.

Zulfikar Ali Bhutto founded the Pakistan People's Party. In 1977, after a landslide victory in the last previous free election, Gen. Mohammed Zia ul-Haq ousted him in a coup.

Bhutto was convicted of complicity in a political murder conspiracy and hanged in 1979. Zia was killed in plane crash Aug. 17 after the election date had been set.

An eight-party grouping called the Islamic Democratic Alliance, which included Zia loyalists, won only 60 seats in the election and Wednesday's assembly vote.

Ishaq Khan, the 73-year-old Senate chairman who replaced Zia as president, said Thursday he was convinced Ms. Bhutto could command a majority in the National Assembly.

He also declared the end of a state of emergency imposed after Zia's death "so the new prime minister can take up her responsibility in an environment of complete democracy."

The president said he had received the resignations of the caretaker government effective Friday, when Ms. Bhutto, 45, was to take the oath of office.

Radio Liberty jamming ends

BOSSN, West Germany (AP) — Radio Liberty officials on Thursday rejoiced over an end to 35 years of Kremlin-led radio jamming as they examined how to take advantage of the newly cleared air waves to the Soviet Union.

"This is a great challenge for us," said S. Endera Wimbush, director of the U.S.-owned network based in Munich. "It's caused tremendous excitement around here, because they (radio employees) see an opportunity they've long waited for."

Robert Redlich, spokesman for Radio Liberty and its sister station Radio Free Europe, which beams its signal to Eastern European countries, said news that the jamming stopped was broadcast to listeners in the Soviet Union.

"This was very much in our news.

We get it good play," Redlich told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from his Munich office.

The end of Soviet jamming against Radio Liberty appears to be part of the glasnost, or "openness," policy of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev. The Soviets ceased jamming of the U.S.-operated Voice of America service more than a year ago, and some East European countries dropped efforts to block Radio Free Europe broadcasts.

Czechoslovakia and Bulgaria continue to interrupt RFE service.

In Washington, the State Department welcomed the end to jamming of Radio Liberty.

"This is a positive development which, if it becomes permanent, will further contribute to the improve-

U.S., Vietnam plan search

Los Angeles Times

HANOI, Vietnam (AFP) — Hanoi and Washington Monday will begin a third series of joint searches for U.S. soldiers missing in action in the Vietnam war, an official Vietnamese source said Thursday.

The number of joint teams will increase from two to four, said Ho The Lan, director of the Foreign Ministry press department.

Three teams will do excavation work at six sites in Nghe Tinh and Binh Tri Thien provinces in central Vietnam and conduct searches in three others. Another team will stay in Hanoi to deal with the remains, she added.

The joint search between Dec. 5 and 15 is part of a three-month plan agreed by Vietnam and the United States in July aimed at finding 70-MIA cases considered by Washington as "priority" before the end of the year. The two previous searches took place in September and October.

Experts on the MIA issue from both countries will meet in Hanoi Dec. 19 to 21, Lan said.

Some 2,387 U.S. soldiers have been listed as missing in action, including 1,751 in Vietnam, according to U.S. military statistics. The Joint Casualty Resolution Center in Honolulu, Hawaii has identified the remains of 168 U.S. soldiers, according to an official at the center.

Amerasian center to be opened

Los Angeles Times

HANOI, Vietnam (AFP) — Vietnam and the United States have agreed to open a reception center in Ho Chi Minh City for Vietnamese fathered by U.S. servicemen who served during the Vietnam war, it was announced Thursday.

The decision followed a meeting in Hanoi Wednesday between U.S. and Vietnamese experts on American families seeking to emigrate to the United States, according to Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Ho The Lan.

The reception center is to be opened "as soon as possible," Lan said.

Vietnam has furnished the list of Amerasians and members of their families in the United States, and it has asked the U.S. side to simplify the formalities and arrange for their prompt departure, she said.

Under the agreement, the reception center is to handle orphaned Amerasians as well as those who have come to Hanoi with their families from outlying provinces for interviews relating to their departure.

The two sides have come together to quickly overcome the technical obstacles encountered by the American departure program, such as transportation and formalities," Lan said.

Last April a Foreign Ministry official said there were an estimated 5,000 to 10,000 Vietnamese with U.S. fathers, though the precise number was not known.

Lan reaffirmed Hanoi's position that the Amerasian issue was a humanitarian problem that must be resolved on a humanitarian spirit.

The U.S. delegation was led by Bruce Beardsley, director of the Orderly Departure Program at the U.S. Embassy in Bangkok, Thailand. The Vietnamese side was headed by Hoang Quoc Tin, deputy director of the Foreign Ministry's consular department.

Emigration of Amerasians falls within the framework of the Orderly Departure Program, initiated by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to streamline the outflow of Vietnamese refugees.

Last January, Hanoi and Washington agreed on a 24-month plan for the departure of 30,000 Amerasians and their relatives. It took effect in March.

U.S. statistics indicate that 3,500 Amerasians emigrated to the United States between 1979 and 1982. Most were processed through refugee camps in the Philippines.

Lisa Davi, 28, of San Francisco, receives a wedding gift from father-in-law Sultan Abdul Aziz Shah

American weds Malaysian prince

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — A Malaysian prince married an American Thursday after she converted to Islam.

Crown Prince Tengku Idris Shah, 43, of western Selangor state, married Nurlicia Idris Abdullah in a simple ceremony at Bukit Kayaangan Palace in Shah Alam, 18 miles west of the Malaysian capital. Both wore white Malay costumes.

Nurlicia, 28, formerly Lisa Davi, on Monday converted to the Moslem faith and acquired the Moslem name.

Selangor state Mufti (Moslem priest) Isahak Baharum led the wedding ceremony in the presence of 150 guests who included Tengku's father Sultan Abdul Aziz Shah, his mother Tengku Ampuan and other members of the royal family.

Nurlicia's mother, Bernice Davi, who arrived from San Francisco this week, also attended with a friend of her daughter, Elena Ronald. The Americans' hometowns were not immediately available.

A dowry of $30 was in the form 80 one-tinggit coins—worth .37 cents each, wrapped in lace-fabric in a carved wooden container. A diamond ring, beetle leaves, scented flower and a make-up set also were presented in four containers.

Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad and members of royal families from other Malaysian states were among the 200 people who attended the wedding feast.

walkouts and protest signs were not shown and PRI delegates filtered into the empty seats. Cameras also avoided showing the brief spots of violence in the Zocalo.

The new president outlined a vision of modern Mexico in keeping with his free market ideas, in which a paternalistic state would give way to a partnership of political parties, business, labor, citizens' groups and the church.

Democratic Front delegate Marcela Lombardo said in her speech that the people of Mexico had actually voted for a radically different program.

During his campaign, Cardenas called for increased government control of the economy and a moratorium on debt payments.

According to official figures Salinas won barely more than 50 percent of the presidential vote, while Cardenas won 31 percent and the conservative National Action Party candidate Manuel Clouthier had 17 percent.

During his speech Salinas introduced heads of government in attendance; the biggest rounds of applause went to Presidents Fidel Castro of Cuba and Daniel Ortega of Nicaragua.

Cardenas has said the government invited heads of state to an inaugural for the first time in an effort to make up for lack of support inside Mexico.

The Salinas transition team says the invitations are a courtesy because the Mexican president has been invited to other inaugurations.

Others attending were presidents Virgilio Barco of Colombia, Raul Alfonsin of Argentina, Jose Napoleon Duarte of El Salvador, Jose Azcona Hoyos of Honduras, Amico Cerezo Arvalo of Guatemala and Prime Minister Manuel Esquivel of Belize.

The U.S. delegation was headed by Secretary of State Shultz and included Bush's son, John, and his Mexican-American wife, Columba.

ment in East-West relations," said Phyllis Oakley, deputy spokeswoman. She urged Czechoslovakia and Bulgaria to end their jamming.

The Helsinki Commission, a U.S. government panel set up in 1976 to monitor Soviet human rights, lashed the end to the jamming of German and Israeli radio as well as Radio Liberty, whose signal was distorted since it went on the air in 1953.

This demonstrates a new seriousness on the part of the Soviet regime in addressing its citizens' right to the freedom of information," said the group, formally known as the Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Western broadcasts have kept Soviets and East Europeans informed on such important historical events as the failed 1956 Hungarian revolt, the 1968 Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia and the 1986 Chernobyl disaster.

Wimbush said a listener from the Soviet Union called the Radio Liberty offices in Munich on Thursday and expressed astonishment the programming was coming through without the usual interference.

He had just turned the radio on and could hear us, he said.

Wimbush plans to add more human interest stories to the broadcast. We're going to be reaching out for a younger audience and report on topical matters that would interest young people, such as AIDS, drug problems, relations between men and women, the kind of fear that you would likely find on Western radio," he said.

Radio Liberty plans to set up a call-in system to talk with its Soviet listeners and incorporate more music in its broadcasts.

The Polish government this summer said that with new press freedom in parts of the East bloc, Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty had no real purpose anymore.

But network officials flatly reject those kinds of suggestions and contend their efforts helped pave the way for glasnost.

The Soviet media have made great strides, Wimbush said. But they aren't always saying everything, and there are a lot of issues they don't treat at all.

Wimbush also said that only a small minority of urban Soviets see publications like Moscow News and Ogonyok, which have carried some of the most surprising and controversial articles in the age of glasnost.

There is an enormous black hole in the countryside, Wimbush said, noting that Radio Liberty can now reach rural residents.

The Soviet Union began using radio waves to try to block Radio Liberty signals the same day the station opened for business in March 1953, said Redlich.

Despite efforts by officials to jam the broadcasts, some Soviet citizens were able to pick up the service on short wave radios. Jamming used to be concentrated on major cities, where most Soviet intellectuals and dissidents live.

The Soviets this week stopped jamming Russian-language broadcasts by Deutsche Welle, a West German broadcasting network.

Orthodox Judaism difficult for women

Knight-Ridder Service

JERUSALEM — The black-garbed Orthodox rabbi turned red in the face as he watched 55 Jewish feminists defy Orthodox rituals by reading from a Torah scroll at a dawn prayer session Thursday at the Wailing Wall.

"In the name of God, I protest! the rabbi shouted over the screens that separate men and women worshippers at Judaism's holiest site. "Sacilege! You are defiling this place!"

Wearing prayer shawls and yarmulkes usually reserved for men, the women did not heed his shouts, but they did wear blue and white that youths from a nearby Orthodox school were on their way to disrupt their prayer.

While American Jews have been outraged by Israeli rabbis' efforts to reject non-Orthodox conversions to Judaism under the "Who Is a Jew" law, the issue of Orthodox discrimination against women has gone largely unnoticed.

Although the Reform and Conservative branches of Judaism prevalent in the Diaspora, especially in North America, allow broad participation by women in religious rituals, Orthodox treats them as little more than child-bearers.

Such intolerance is especially galling to Israeli women, many of who are drafted into the army of a Jewish country that once elected Golda Meir prime minister.

Reform Judaism even allows for women rabbis such as Debra Brin of Canada, who led the half-hour prayer at the Wailing Wall, also known as the Western Wall, on the first day of the First International Jewish Feminist Conference.

But following ancient rabbinical precepts for female modesty and the proper role of women, Orthodoxy long has required a strict separation of the sexes in some rituals and has banned women from others.

Women cannot carry or read from Torah scrolls, the Jewish holy scriptures, and must sit separately in synagogues and swim separately. Married women are required to cover their hair in public.

No longer observed is the ancient precept, "He who teaches his daughter Torah teaches her obscenity," pronounced by Rabbi Eliezer Ben Azaria more than 2,200 years ago.

The feminists' prayers Thursday did not alter Orthodox Rabbi Meir Goetz, religious affairs director at the Wall, although he seemed put off by the presence of many journalists witnessing the women's challenge to tradition.

"The Wall belongs to all the people of Israel, all Jews and even non-Jews," Goetz told The Miami Herald, "but if the purpose was to cause an incident, this is not the place."

Orthodox women usually accept their lot with piety and faith. But in Israel, where there is no separation of church and state and Orthodox monopolizes all registries of births, deaths, marriages and divorces, friction between rabbis and non-Orthodox women is growing.

Rabbi Meshe Feldman said shortly after the Nov. 1 elections that male and female deputies must sit apart in the legislature.

Former S. Korean president is in exile

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Former President Chun Doo-hwan spends his days in exile in an isolated Buddhist temple living the way his ancestors might have — sleeping on a mat, reading by candlelight, chopping wood for heat and praying.

While many Koreans are riveted by televised parliamentary hearings probing corruption and human rights abuses under his presidency, Chun passes his days in the timeless pattern of Buddhist monks, sharing a solitude that is centuries old.

In the isolated 14th century temple Chun and his wife sought as refuge, there is no television, no telephone, and the toilet is a temporary latrine set up outside his room.

"I made a great mistake," Chun was quoted as telling monks at Paektum-sa mountain retreat, five hours drive east of Seoul. "I hope that future generations learn a lesson and do not repeat the same mistakes."

The former president left Seoul to go into internal exile Nov. 23 after apologizing to the nation on national television for abuses of power. Dissatisfied dissidents and students have staged mass protests demanding his arrest and return to Seoul for punishment.

Internal exile is a traditional form of repentance for disgraced Korean officials. President Roh Tae-woo hopes Chun's banishment will persuade Koreans to forgive the former general who took power with military backing in 1980.

Chun has denied any personal wrongdoing, but took moral responsibility for widespread corruption and abuses under his tough rule. Many Koreans detest the man who ruled with an iron fist for more than seven years.

The temple is in a northeast region called Sorak, or "Snow Hills," a tourist idyll of picturesque mountains, forests, waterfalls and deep ravines. There, temples such as Paektum-sa have sheltered many political refugees in Korea's turbulent 5,000-year history.

Makeshift guard posts for Chun's bodyguards and about 200 security police dot the perimeter of the grounds. Police increased security after several dozen radical students tried to storm the gate.

Head monk Kim Do-kong said he did not know the former president was coming until a few hours before his arrival. Kim said he has been told his guests want to avoid contact with outsiders, and with few exceptions they have.

Chun and his wife talked with reporters the day they arrived, but since have kept to themselves and have not left the temple grounds.

A daughter, her husband and several friends have visited.

Korean reporters say visitors usually arrive with faces covered to hide their identity.

Walesa debate boosts Polish morale

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The vision of a freer Poland shaking off the last shackles of Stalinism that was presented by Solidarity leader Lech Walesa in an unprecedented TV debate has given the opposition an electric emotional boost.

Walesa dramatically broadened the scope of Wednesday night's live debate from the stated topic of trade unions to include fundamental questions such as liberty, Soviet perestroika and the obligation of Poland's leaders to enforce aid for all the 'Stalinist epoch.'

It is the official unions' duty to join him in "creating freedom" and not to ban it to anybody, Walesa said.

"We should not discuss any more whether pluralism is needed in Poland; because it is already proven to work in the world," the Solidarity leader said. "But we should think how to implement systems that have worked everywhere else."

With perestroika being encouraged by the Soviet Union, the time for bold changes is now, Walesa said.

His debate partner — official unions' chief Alfred Miodowicz — seemed to struggle for answers to Walesa's broader themes. He repeatedly tried to bring the talk back to phrases like "one union, one factory" and "no divisions among workers."

He had nothing to say. He was repeating slogans from (Communist Party newspaper) Trybuna Ludu editorials, said one veteran Polish journalist, dissecting the performance the next day.

Authorities had hoped to beat Walesa before millions of Poles, "It backfired," said the journalist, speaking on the condition he not be identified. "It was Walesa who stole the show."

Supporters and even many people with no political connections seemed energized and refreshed by the no-holds-barred discussion, virtually free from the normal TV diet of censorship and euphemisms.

Although television provided no figures, an evening TV news show said it was viewed by a record audience.

Analysis

Walesa made great remarks. I waited seven years to hear them, said Grzegorz Szrzedzinski, a young engineer watching the debate at a public TV in Warsaw's Central Station.

The official press said nothing Thursday about who won the debate — a tacit admission of Walesa's victory, according to opposition activists — but was filled with comments expressing the view that the debate was beneficial and would open the way to further dialogue with the opposition.

After all the hoopla, will the debate bring any change in the political stalemate with the government? Not necessarily, said Andrzej Stelmachowski, president of the Warsaw Club of Catholic Intellectuals and a key player earlier this year in trying to begin a dialogue between the government and Solidarity.

Stelmachowski said it remains "psychologically impossible" for a dialogue to take place with any credible representatives of the opposition until authorities accept a legal future for Solidarity, and so far there are no signs that it will.

The stalemate was made clear last month when plans for broad talks with the government broke down, he said.

Makeshift guard posts for Chun's bodyguards and about 200 security police dot the perimeter of the grounds. Police increased security after several dozen radical students tried to storm the gate.

Head monk Kim Do-kong said he did not know the former president was coming until a few hours before his arrival. Kim said he has been told his guests want to avoid contact with outsiders, and with few exceptions they have.

Chun and his wife talked with reporters the day they arrived, but since have kept to themselves and have not left the temple grounds.

A daughter, her husband and several friends have visited.

Korean reporters say visitors usually arrive with faces covered to hide their identity.

Chun's exile is a traditional form of repentance for disgraced Korean officials. President Roh Tae-woo hopes Chun's banishment will persuade Koreans to forgive the former general who took power with military backing in 1980.

Chun has denied any personal wrongdoing, but took moral responsibility for widespread corruption and abuses under his tough rule. Many Koreans detest the man who ruled with an iron fist for more than seven years.

Two of the homeless thousands sit with their belongings near Khulna in Bangladesh

Cyclone toll may exceed 1,000

TALTALA, Bangladesh (AP) — Rescuers searched the ruins of mud-and-straw huts Thursday for survivors of a cyclone that shrieked ashore like "thousands of demons," killing at least 596 people and leaving half a million homeless.

Unofficial counts put the number of dead at well over 1,000. More than 1,000 people still were officially reported missing Thursday, nearly 48 hours after the storm raged in from the Bay of Bengal to devastate southern Bangladesh and eastern India.

Officials said strong winds and cloudy skies hampered helicopter search-and-rescue operations.

"It looked like the end of the world, as if thousands of demons were out to kill us," said Kazi Mansoor, a government official in Khulna, 55 miles north of the coast.

Osmán Ghani, a messenger at the Khulna newspaper Janabarta, said:

"I thought the entire town would be blown away. The storm felled trees and power supply lines in hundreds and thousands."

The cyclone struck Tuesday night, whipping up 15-foot tidal waves that submerged low-lying coastal islands lashing the flat mainland with wind gusts of more than 100 mph.

It struck while Bangladesh still was recovering from summer floods that took about 1,500 lives and left nearly one-fifth of the 110 million people homeless in this impoverished land, most of which is a vast river delta.

Military officials who accompanied President Hussain Ershad on an inspection tour Thursday said at least 496 people drowned, were electrocuted or died when their homes collapsed. Police sources in neighboring India said at least 100 people were killed in West Bengal state.

Official tallies in both countries usually are much lower than independent estimates, reflecting bureaucratic delays and difficulty in obtaining accurate information from areas where communications are poor even in normal times.

Dhaka newspapers said at least 1,000 people were killed in Bangladesh and Indian news agencies put the count in West Bengal at 200. Ershad flew to the region and toured it by car rather than helicopter because of the rough weather. Flattened houses and trees, snapped power poles and devastated croplands were everywhere.

In Taltala, a village of 500 people 40 miles west of Khulna that lost 13 of its 21 houses, he said: "Let us brave the cyclone as we did the recent flooding."

Tuesday's storm covered the greatest area of any recent cyclone in Bangladesh.

Israeli linked to Iran-Contra affair may be victim of crash

MORELIA, Mexico (AP) — An Israeli who was linked to the U.S. Iran-Contra affair and who briefed Vice President George Bush on arms deals with Iran apparently died in a plane crash while traveling under an assumed name, officials said Thursday.

The man was tentatively identified by a passport found on his body as Amiram Nir Nisker, a former adviser on counterterrorism to two Israeli prime ministers, said a statement from the Michoacan state attorney general's office.

Nir's former newspaper colleagues in Israel said Thursday his name was Nisker before he changed it to Nir. They gave his age as 38.

The pilot of the Cessna T200 also was killed in the crash Wednesday in western Michoacan state and two people were badly hurt, the Mexican statement said. It said engine failure may have been the cause.

Officials and sources in Israel, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Nir was in Mexico on a business trip, but would not disclose its nature. Nir was an important liaison in secret arms deals involving sale of U.S. weapons to Iran, according to testimony heard by U.S. congressional investigators. Nir's activities included trips to Tehran, the capital of Iran, and Western Europe.

Former White House aide Oliver North, who was deeply involved in the transactions, suggested during congressional testimony that the Contra link — diverting funds from U.S. arms sales to Iran to Nicaraguan rebels — was Nir's idea. Nir denied it.

Nir was sought for questioning by Special U.S. Prosecutor Lawrence E. Walsh. Israel insisted Nir be granted immunity from prosecution.

The state attorney general's statement said Nir's passport was issued in Tel Aviv and contained a Mexican visa issued by the Mexican Embassy in London on Nov. 25.

It said the passenger carrying the passport had registered as Pat Weber for the flight, prompting authorities to pursue their investigations for a positive identification. The plane, belonging to the Aerotaxis of Uruapan line, took off from Uruapan Wednesday afternoon and crashed on a ranch near Rio de Salto, near Ciudad Hidalgo, 30 minutes later, the statement said. Ciudad Hidalgo lies 110 miles west of Mexico City.

"According to preliminary reports, the plane crashed ... because of an engine failure, obliging the pilot to try an emergency landing," the statement said.

It identified the dead pilot as Pedro Espinosa Hurtado, 34, and injured as Guillermo Juarez Amescua, 35, and Ester Areaga, 23. Cmdr. Arturo Martinez, an airport official in Uruapan, said the flight plan showed the Cessna was bound for Mexico City.

Sources in Israel said Israeli Embassy officials were traveling from Mexico City to the crash site for positive identification of Nir.

Nir was a close associate of Shimon Peres, now foreign minister of Israel. He rose to prominence after

Gorbachev demands restoration of order

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev told officials in Armenia and Azerbaijan on Thursday to restore order in their neighboring — southern — republics, where 28 people have been killed in recent ethnic violence.

Gorbachev called the Communist Party leaders of the republics, and deputies to the Supreme Soviet, to a meeting after the national parliament issued an appeal for calm in the Caucasus at the end of a three-day session.

Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, said the death toll in the past two weeks had reached 28, which brings to more than 60 the number of people killed since trouble began between Armenia and Azerbaijan in February over control of the Nagorno-Karabakh region.

Nagorno-Karabakh's population is predominantly ethnic Armenian but the territory does not have a common border with Armenia. It was assigned to Azerbaijan in 1921.

Armenia and Armenians in the territory want it annexed to Armenia, but Azerbaijan and the Kremlin have refused.

In a report on Thursday's meeting, the official news agency Tass said: "It was emphasized that inter-ethnic conflicts, strikes on this basis and antisocial phenomena cause serious damage to the economy and are objectively directed against the democratic processes of renewal."

Police seeking crash charges

TOKYO (AP) — After three years investigating the worst single-plane crash in history, police on Thursday sought criminal charges against employees of the aircraft maker, airline and Japan's Ministry of Transport.

Police said the crash that killed 520 people was caused by professional negligence of 20 people, including four Boeing Co. employees, Japan Air Lines employees and four from the transport ministry.

They were responsible for aircraft repairs, maintenance and inspection.

The Seattle-based aircraft manufacturer Thursday rejected the report and denied Japanese charges it hindered the investigation.

Gunma Prefectural Police handed results of the probe to the Maebashi District Prosecutor's Office, which will decide whether to press charges for negligence, a criminal offense in Japan.

Peru police arrest scores

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Police fired tear gas, arrested scores of protesters and ripped down barricades of burning tires Thursday during an illegal general strike against government austerity measures, officials said.

Police said 78 people were arrested as they tried to march into downtown Lima, but strike leader Valentin Pacheco claimed police had arrested more than 500. Authorities said leftist guerrillas seized and burned a city bus.

No injuries were reported.

It was the fourth general work stoppage this year and fifth against the 8-year-old government of President Alan Garcia. The strike comes during growing unrest caused by Peru's most serious economic recession this century.

Prime Minister Armando Villanueva charged the strike was being manipulated by the Maoist guerrilla movement Shining Path to destabilize and eventually topple the elected government. Labor leaders denied that.

Yellowstone fire uncovers WWII B-17 bomber

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK (AP) — Old timers with long memories knew it was there and archivists gave it a special place in the history books, but millions of people passed it by without a clue.

Then, in the summer of '88, a woodcutter dropped a cigarette and started a 450,000-acre forest fire that laid bare the bones of the World War II bomber. Forty-five years after the B-17, tail number 42-30260, went down on a frigid spring night carrying 10 young airmen to their deaths, the airplane's scattered remains have finally been cleaned up in Yellowstone National Park.

dumped and burned their powder. The biggest piece we recovered was a wing tip. We also found the vertical and horizontal stabilizer on the tail section a mile from the main crash site.

Even the archivists had missed that one on their maps and charts because, during the past half century, the forests of Yellowstone had grown up around the site to create a living green shroud that obscured all but the biggest chunks of debris.

Hardly any wreckage was recognizable. Park records indicate that a few years after the crash a Yellowstone ranger salvaged enough Tim Hudson, maintenance chief, and landscape architect Lore Williams look at the remains of a WWII B-17 bomber.

'We vaguely knew about all that stuff, but over the years trees had grown up around it and it became hard to get to, too expensive to remove or people forgot about it.'

— Tim Hudson, Yellowstone maintenance chief

Besides blackening hundreds of thousands of acres in America's first national park and triggering an upsurge in fire-fighting policy on public lands, last summer's intense blazes in Yellowstone also revealed some of its old secrets.

The fires exposed a lot of old road cuts, torn up culverts and bridges, and abandoned dump sites, said Tim Hudson, Yellowstone's maintenance chief and a sanitary engineer. "We vaguely knew about all that stuff, but over the years trees had grown up around it and it became hard to get to, too expensive to remove, or people forgot about it."

minum to make a snow plane, forerunner of the modern snowmobile. The area also showed signs of earlier scavenging and looting. Nothing recovered this fall was deemed usable, so the Park Service, with Department of Defense approval, plans to sell it as scrap to the highest bidder.

Poking through the forest fire's ashes, park employees also stumbled across small reminders of the airmen who died.

"We found part of a leather jacket, a shoe, some pieces of belts, and rings off of parachute harnesses," said Dick Bahr, Yellowstone's air operations supervisor. "There was no identifying markings on any of the personal gear so we sent it to a mortuary to be incinerated."

Our rehabilitation efforts following the fires have also given us an opportunity to do some monumental cleanup of old junk because we have the helicopters here to help us do it."

Precious little to commemorate the burial ground of an airplane once hailed as "The Queen of the Skies" and singled out by the Smithsonian Air and Space Museum as the most powerful weapon in the war against Hitler's Germany.

Besides rebuilding burned out bridges, trying to repair bulldozer and hand-cut firelines and fixing trails and public facilities, park crews also raked the winter to remove all debris from the B-17 crash site.

Ground teams carefully collected the shattered, rusted pieces of 50 caliber machine guns, splinters of practice bombs once filled with sand and dozens of bullets. Much of the aluminum and steel already twisted into unrecognizable shapes by the crash was charred from the North Fork Fry. The weathered metal was loaded into helicopter slings and hauled four miles north to a sorting area inside the park near West Yellowstone, Mont.

In 1983, Park Service historical archivist Andy Beck collected every scrap of information he could find about aircraft No. 42-30260 and compiled it in a plastic ring binder now kept at Yellowstone's headquarters.

The plane, with 11 men on board, was flying from Marysville, Calif., to its home base at Lewiston, Mont. According to an Army Air Corps investigation, the pilot climbed to 15,000 feet above Reno, Nev., and soon hit rough air. He was flying on instruments.

A 20-foot crater created by the massive bomber when it plowed into the ground around midnight on May 23, 1943 had been covered over by initial rescue crews, so Hudson's cleanup team left the filled-in hole undisturbed.

Next to the line citing "Nature of Accident" there was the notation: "Airplane encountered icing conditions. No definite knowledge of what happened."

The state was pulled out of totals about 25,000 pounds, said Hudson. "We flew all the bullets out first, then Retired Yellowstone Park Ranger Tom Ela never knew the cause of the crash, but he has definite knowledge of its occurrence.

"My wife Betty and I'd been to a birthday party and had just gotten home when we heard the plane go over. I went to the window because I knew it wasn't sounding right. We could hear it go into a scream as it went down."

Ela rushed to a nearby observation plateau and saw the sky lit with flames. The plane, carrying live ammunition, burned on impact. Ela had no compass with him so he placed matchsticks in a log to provide a day-light bearing, a primitive directional aid that later helped the Army find the wreckage.

There was confusion about the number of men aboard, so Ela was among searchers looking for survivors. On the third day when he climbed a tree and hollered "halo halo" for the hundredth time, an answering call came back to him.

"He said his name was McDonald, he was very, very cold, and he asked 'Where am I?' because he had no idea," recalled Ela, who now lives in Santa Fe, N. M.

When told him he was in Yellowstone National Park he couldn't believe it. He told me he'd been sleeping right by the hatch with his parachute on. Apparently he'd had a tight squeak before on a flight and he was the only one in the crew who had his chute on.

"When I heard in his headphones 'THIS IS IT! THIS IS IT! GET OUT!' he just rolled out the hatch and pulled the cord. He saw the plane crash below him and knew he made it but didn't know if anybody else did. That was bothering him a lot."

McDonald told Ela that later, as he'd wandered alone in the empty woods for the next two days, he'd wondered if he'd just had a nightmare and bailed out by mistake as his plane flew on to its home base.

The Army Air Corps listed Lt. William McDonald, bombardier, as the only survivor.

After leading McDonald out of the woods and turning him over to a military rescue team, Ela returned to the crash site and helped pack out on horseback the dead servicemen and the plane's top secret equipment, perhaps even the Norden Bomb Sight.

The official investigation concludes that 2,000 square feet of Yellowstone was damaged, the aircraft was destroyed, and the pilot (no signature available, deceased) absolved the park service of any blame.

Hudson, Bahr, and other park employees agreed that working on the B-17 cleanup had been an interesting chapter in the saga of the Yellowstone fires. Next summer they hope to tackle an even bigger rehabilitation project.

"There's a B-47 bomber still out there in an area that didn't burn," said Hudson. "It crashed in 1963, killing four Air Force crewmen, without any fire or explosion. We estimate its wreckage at 85,000 pounds. If we can get the big helicopters back in here next summer that ought to keep us busy."

"We're also looking for a car that somebody said they'd spotted but we haven't been able to find yet."

There are still some Yellowstone secrets left to find.

Unusual photograph shows different angle of B-2 bomber

NEW YORK (AP) — An aerial photograph of the B-2 stealth bomber, taken from directly overhead, was published in the Nov. 28 edition of Aviation Week & Space Technology magazine.

The official view of the plane was head-on, from a reviewing stand.

William G. Hartenstein took the picture from a private airplane on Nov. 22, the day the plane was put on display for the first time, David Quast, assistant managing editor of the magazine, said Wednesday.

"We had a private airplane flown by one of our writers, who is also a pilot," said Quast. "It was not restricted airspace. There was no restriction and no rule broken. There was a possibility President Reagan was going to be there. Had he been, it would have been restricted."

The stealth bomber was put on display Nov. 11 after more than 10 years of secrecy-shrouded development.

The bomber is a subsonic, all-altitude flying wing formed from non-metallic composite materials that are intended to let it absorb radar transmissions rather than reflect them. Its shape and lack of sharp angles also help make it nearly invisible to radar.

Air Force officials say it makes the same impression on a radar screen as a bird.

Environmentalists give Bush 'wish list' with 700 items

WASHINGTON (AP) — Environmentalists gave George Bush a wish list of more than 700 recommendations Wednesday, topped by a plea for action on fighting global warming, and were cheered by his response.

The differences between Wednesday's reception and the past eight years of the Reagan administration was like "night and day," said Jay D. Hain, president of the National Wildlife Federation and one of the 35 leaders of environmental groups who spent 45 minutes over breakfast with the president-elect.

"I am an environmentalist," Bush proclaimed in the campaign. Among specifics, Bush has endorsed the goal of no net loss of wetlands, has urged new acid rain controls if the government's $5 billion, five-year "clean coal" demonstration programs prove disappointing and has said he plans to sponsor an international conference on global warming.

The few environmental groups endorsing candidates backed Bush's opponent, Michael Dukakis, and some that made no formal endorsement still attacked Bush for his leadership of the regulatory reform task force early in the Reagan administration.

view surrounding a crowded post-breakfast news conference arranged by a coalition of 30 environmental groups organized under the name "Blueprint for the Environment."

Bush said "we would be rather surprised and really pleased with some appointments he planned to make in the near future," according to Tom Halson, executive director of Renew America, a group concentrating on energy efficiency. Bush also said he would arrange pre-confirmation meetings of his nominees with environmental leaders.

Hain said he told the vice president, "Mr. Bush, read my lips: Protect the environment," and Bush reacted positively to the wordplay on his own no-taxes campaign phrase, replying, "I will, I will."

"We will be on his team," said John Adams of the Natural Resources Defense Council.

Hain said the early 1980s were a time of "ideological shrillness, anti-environmental actions and lack of stewardship" in the administration. Though Bush was the second-ranking member of that administration, Hain said, "I didn't sense any of that this morning."

The "greenhouse effect" warms the Earth when gases, notably carbon dioxide from burning fossil fuels, trap infrared radiation that normally would escape into space.

Most scientists agree that the Earth has warmed by almost one degree Fahrenheit over the past century, and the warming will accelerate to another three to eight degrees sometime in the next century. The major remaining uncertainty is over timing, with some estimates putting such a warming by 2030 and others in 2075 or later.

When it comes to the greenhouse effect, Bush "knew what we were talking about," said Adams, who called it "the single most serious problem facing the world" because of the massive shifts in crop patterns, weather and sea-level changes that could follow.

Though Bush gave no commitments on that or any issue, "he was concerned and he was prepared to take action," said Adams.

The greenhouse effect is clearly the top priority of the group. The first four of 61 recommendations singled out as important enough for a separate listing all dealt with it in one way or another — promotion of an international agreement, ending use of chemicals that destroy the ozone layer, reforestation and aggressive energy conservation programs.

The environmentalists, who have spent a year drawing up recommendations in 16 green books for distribution to affected government departments and agencies, also called for tax and fee increases and other tax-law changes that would increase government revenues by $17.1 billion, spending cuts totaling $2.2 billion and spending increases aimed at benefiting the environment totaling $5.5 billion.

The new taxes would include a 10-cent increase in the current 9.2-cent-per-gallon gasoline tax to raise $10 billion.

The new spending would include $2 billion to improve mass transit and $325 million or 20 percent more for the Environmental Protection Agency, which the group said should be elevated to cabinet status.

Like many committees, Blueprint for the Environment seemed to have trouble relegating the concerns of any members to lower status. For example, in 33 italicized recommendations in a summary pamphlet, something as urgent as "immediate steps" or "some-thing or other" or "urgent-sounding synonym" 19 times.

GEORGE BUSH: Another lip message

Teller machine theft of nearly $350,000 largest of its kind

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A special card given to some employees at California's second-largest bank may have been used at automated teller machines to steal nearly $350,000 from about 300 customer accounts, authorities said Wednesday.

The money was withdrawn over the Veterans Day weekend, Nov. 11-13, bank officials said. It is believed to be the largest theft of its kind.

Security Pacific spokesman Deborah K. Lewis refused Wednesday to say what type of card may have been involved. She said the bank has referred the matter to authorities.

The FBI said Wednesday that the Secret Service had taken over the investigation. Secret Service Special Agent Don Chucus said the Secret Service had various devices to detect fraudulent use of automated teller machines from another person.

He refused to say anything about the investigation other than to add, "They used a device to circumvent the normal procedure" to withdraw funds.

Lewis said the bank reimbursed about 300 depositors after discovering through an ongoing audit that almost $350,000 was stolen. She would not say how many branches were hit.

They were primarily concentrated in Southern California," she said.

Steve J. Pears, a Hollywood cameraman, said he discovered Tuesday that $120 had been illegally withdrawn from his account. He said the money was withdrawn in separate transactions — that seemed to take place at more than one automatic teller machine.

"I was really hot when I saw that," said Pears, who has an account at a Security Pacific branch in Malibu. "I went to the branch and was screaming at the manager. She told me that they thought it had to be an inside job. That was the phrase she used, inside job."

Lewis declined to say whether a bank employee or employees are at the center of the investigation.

"I can't say that it was an inside job," she said. "That hasn't been totally determined. The exact details of how this thing occurred are still under investigation."

Security Pacific, the state's second-largest bank after Bank of America, has instituted security procedures to prevent similar thefts, Lewis said.

Moreland youth survives shooting

MORELAND (AP) — Aaron Neal, 14, is returning from an LDS General Conference in Salt Lake City on Oct. 1 when the van in which he was riding suddenly was fired on by three young California runaways.

A bullet tore through his back and lodged near his spine, ripping a bowel and severing a major vein to his heart. The shooting occurred about 11 p.m. on Interstate 15 south of Malad.

Apparently intent on robbing the van, the California teens — two 16 and one 15 — tried to shoot out the van's tires.

There were three other boys in the van, in addition to driver Steven Dance of Moreland. At first, Dance thought his passengers were kidding when they said Aaron had been wounded, but a noise that sounded like a hand blown prompted him to pull over.

Aaron had fallen over on the floor and grabbed his stomach. Steve saw a bullet hole in his back, recalled Aaron's mother, Joyce Neal, who was at home in Moreland with her husband, Gary, at the time.

A nurse who was in another vehicle that pulled over jumped into the van before Aaron was rushed to the Oneida County Hospital. He was suffering from severe shock, but wasn't bleeding too badly," Mrs. Neal said.

After the Snake River High School freshman was treated for shock, a Life Flight helicopter whisked him to Bannock Regional Medical Center in Pocatello, where Dr. June Heilman had been alerted and was ready to perform emergency surgery.

The surgery recently succeeded in halting a couple of hours," said Aaron's father, an Idaho Power Co. employee, but it stretched into six hours after Dr. Heilman discovered that Aaron's bowel was torn pretty bad and his vein cava pierced, requiring extensive blood transfusions.

Neal was willing to donate blood to save his only son's life, but crossing, cleaning and checking it for the AIDS virus would have taken too long. And the need for blood was urgent.

Neal said the hospital told the family not to be surprised if Aaron died on the operating table. An anesthesiologist said he had never seen anyone in his experience survive such a wound," Mrs. Neal said.

Idaho State Police sped additional blood from Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center to Idaho Falls. By the time the surgery was completed, 11 units had to be used.

After surgery, Mrs. Neal said, her was in critical condition, but all vital signs were looking good. After that, he did nothing but improve."

A few days later, he contracted a slight case of pneumonia, but it was caught soon enough to prevent a more serious setback. He was released after 15 days.

Oneida County is prosecuting the California teens-agers who are being held in Pocatello County, Mrs. Neal said. The suspects were apprehended by a police officer in Inkom the night of the shooting.

"You might hear about things like this in big cities, but around here this is really a different kind of wild thing," she said. "You can expect to hear about it on a accident, but this was so unusual."

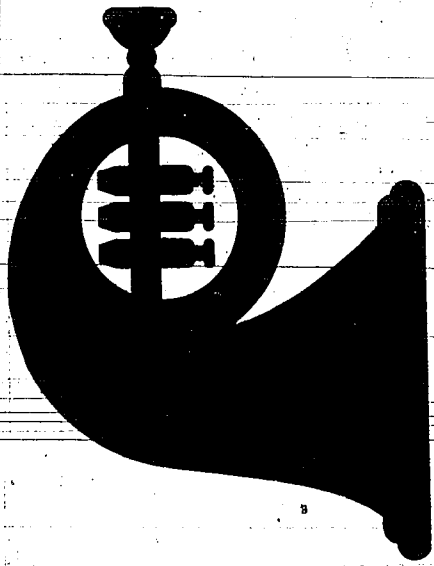

Aaron, who will turn 15 in a month, returned to school Nov. 3. His fellow students "were just glad to see me back. They wanted to play the scare and all that," he said.

Remembering that terrible night in October, Aaron said, "I thought I was hit me in the stomach, but I thought about it and heard that boom and knew I was shot."

Standing five feet, Aaron — who has four sisters — saw his weight drop from between 95 and 100 pounds to 88 pounds, but his spry appearance belies his recent ordeal. In fact, he's raring to play basketball.

Sharansky's wife gives birth in Jerusalem to 2nd daughter

JERUSALEM (AP) — Former Soviet prisoner Natan Sharansky's wife, Avital, has given birth to the couple's second daughter since they were reunited almost three years ago, Sharansky said Thursday.

"They are both fine. We still haven't named her, that we will do in synagogue on Saturday," Sharansky told a reporter, smiling, as he shook hands with well-wishers at a World Conference on Soviet Jewry in Jerusalem.

He said the birth occurred Wednesday at Jerusalem's Hadassah Hospital. The baby weighed 6 pounds, 8 ounces.

Sharansky's eldest daughter, Rachel, is 2.

Sharansky was released from Soviet prison as part of an East-West swap in February 1986, after spending nine years of a 13-year sentence on charges of anti-Soviet espionage.

Boxer plans wedding but hasn't told bride-to-be

LONDON (AP) — Welterweight boxing champion Lloyd Honeyghan said Thursday he is getting married a few days before his Feb. 4 world welterweight title defense against Marlon Starling.

"Now he has to tell his future wife," something big is going to happen. I'm getting married, "the 28-year-old Briton told reporters as he bearded a flight to Miami. "I'm serious, I'm going to do it a couple of days before the fight."

"Honeyghan wouldn't say whether his bride would be Jennifer Green, mother of his two youngest children. The fighter has five children by three different women.

In fact, he said, the lady of his choice was not even aware she was going to a wedding.

"The only thing is, my girl doesn't know anything about it yet. I haven't told her," Honeyghan said. "You'll have to work it out."

Writer files lawsuit over 'Good Morning, Vietnam'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Martin Burke, a writer who says the hit movie "Good Morning, Vietnam" was based on his 1980 book "Laughing War," has filed a $30-million lawsuit against Walt Disney Productions and its Touchstone Pictures company.

Burke, who filed suit Wednesday, says he spoke with Jeffrey Katzenberg, then president of Walt Disney Productions, and a representative for actor Robin Williams in 1982 about developing a movie from his book, said Burke's attorney, Gregory James Owen. Williams starred in the movie.

Katzenberg and Williams' representative, Larry Brezner, declined to purchase the rights, the lawsuit said. Disney officials did not return telephone calls seeking comment.

The plot of "Good Morning, Vietnam," a film about Armed Forces Radio broadcaster Adrian Cronauer, is based on Burke's book, the Superior Court lawsuit claims.

"Defendants used the purported life story (of Cronauer) as a substitute to conceal the substantial misappropriation of 'Laughing War,' the lawsuit said.

Former astronaut Ride disgruntled at Stanford

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Former astronaut Sally Ride, a Stanford University physicist since 1987, says she might quit the institution over a dispute involving the school's Center for International Security and Arms Control.

Ride, who works on arms control and space policy, said Tuesday through a colleague that she was seriously looking around for other things because of the resignation last week of noted arms control expert and physicist Sidney Drell and concerns about university hiring procedure.

"Drell, a government adviser on arms control since the 1960s, accused the university of dragging its feet over attempts to create a more permanent center staff for the study of technical, political and economic aspects of arms control. Since the center is not a formal department, it has no power to offer faculty status and the hiring is done by the university.

Frank Sinatra praises restored 1930s theater

DETROIT (AP) — Frank Sinatra is singing the praises of Detroit's refurbished Fox Theatre.

Memories of deadly school fire still vivid

CHICAGO (AP) — In the 30 years since fire at Our Lady of the Angels School took the lives of 92 children and three teachers, the neighborhood is changed, the school rebuilt. Stronger safety measures are in effect at schools nationwide.

But scars remain and sadness returns in the memories of those who survived the elementary school disaster.

"I suppose it's a memory that will never go away," said Jean Kobus, mother of two children who escaped the blaze.

It was mid-afternoon on Dec. 1, 1958, when the fire broke out. Authorities think it started in a pile of trash in a stairwell.

Sinatra, who performed at the Fox before the building began crumbling in the late 1950s, brought his national tour to a crowded house at the 1930s theater Wednesday night.

"Wonderful old theater," he said during the opening act of what new Smoke and flames traveled quickly up the open stairwell, spreading out on the top floor and trapping many of the school's 1,300 students and teachers in their rooms.

"The fire alarm went off... and children were hanging out the windows yelling 'fire.' It was just mass pandemonium," recalled the Rev. John Kobus, Mrs. Kobus' son, who was a 7-year-old second-grader at the time.

Efforts by firefighters, teachers and some neighbors couldn't lessen the death toll that stands as the third worst in the city's history.

In the aftermath, sprinkler systems were installed in schools with wood-based construction, Edward Prendergast, chief fire prevention engineer with the Chicago Fire Department, said Wednesday.

School systems nationwide also began requiring enclosed stairwells, alarm systems, more fire-resistant material and more fire drills.

Kobus, now director of pastoral care at Chicago's St. Mary of Nazareth Hospital, remembers escaping from his first-floor classroom and being wet and cold outside.

But his mother recalls the anxious moments of uncertainty as she and her family searched for her children.

"We... started running toward the school," she said in an interview Wednesday from her suburban Glen Ellyn home. "If we meet anybody, we'd ask if they knew Milt (then a seventh-grader) or John, and they'd say no."

Just outside the school, "You could see the crowd was anxious and frightened," she said.

"My father... finally found John, who was kind of wandering around," she said.

Milton, now an executive with a technology school, had been huddled with others in a second-floor classroom until a firefighter knocked in the door, and made the children form a "human chain" to walk to safety, Mrs. Kobus said.

Milt's grandmother found him, his face black with soot, and took him home.

DEDHAM, Mass. (AP) — The trees are bare and the slanting sunlight of late autumn does little to ease the chill in Brookdale Cemetery, but Anthony Scaccia's young friends still congregate at his grave.

More than a year after Anthony was killed at the age of 13 by a drunken, hit-and-run driver, his friends still spend hours at his burial plot, talking, sharing funny stories and keeping him company.

They leave flowers, loose change, pumpkins at Halloween, dials, chewing gum, wreaths — anything they think Anthony would like. Etched with Anthony's name on his headstone are a dirt bike and a fishing pole, emblems of his greatest passions.

It has become a place where the pain of death can be confronted and, sometimes, eased.

Before Anthony died, if I'd come home late and told my mother I was at the cemetery she'd have been wary," said 14-year-old Billy Fox. "But now if I say it she understands why we're there. It's a place to talk and think about things. It's a peaceful place to talk to Anthony.

"You don't want anybody to walk by and say, 'Oh, it's a typical grave,'" said Fox, who brings his friend toy soldiers and flags. "We want people to say, 'Wow, that kid must have been real.'"

"They all sit around in front of his headstone and talk to Anthony about what's going on in their lives. They ask how he's doing up there and what he's like," said Anthony's mother, Dianne Scaccia. "Billy Fox said sometimes in the summer he lays out and stretches his arms across the grass and feels Anthony's hand."

The outpouring of love and allegiance to her son does not surprise Mrs. Scaccia, who has four other children.

"Anthony was a kind of special kid. He had a great many friends," she said Wednesday. "He was adventurous and the kids got into the habit of following him around and depending on him to plan out what to do. It wasn't unusual for us to wake up at 8 a.m. on summer mornings and have 16 or 17 kids waiting outside for him."

Public Works Commissioner Dominic DiVirgilio, who tends the cemetery, has watched from a distance as small groups of Anthony's friends have gathered.

"I have never stopped or interfered, mainly because I know what they are going through," DiVirgilio said. "They've been going down to more or less deal with losing someone as young as that, to deal with death and reality. I've never seen it as anything other than respectful and healthy."

Anthony was struck by a car on Oct. 3, 1987, when he and several friends were crossing a highway.

Thirty of his friends showed up at the hospital that night to await word. School officials had to call in extra guidance counselors from neighboring schools to help students deal with their grief.

The man driving the car turned himself in four days later. He was convicted of motor vehicle homicide while under the influence of alcohol and was sentenced to five to eight years in prison.

Mark DeFilippo, 41, said he and his friends find it easier to wrestle with Anthony's death at grave-side.

"I think it's a way of keeping him alive," he told the Dedham Daily Transcript recently. "We go there to keep him with us. But we also go to talk. Talking helps me and everyone."

Teen-agers said they leave sentimental gifts for Anthony, things that might give him a chuckle or keep him from feeling out of step with the latest fad.

Landfill closing brings festivity

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Residents popped champagne corks and cut a cake as they celebrated the closing of a nearby landfill that fouled the air and lured thousands of seagulls into the area.

About 50 residents on Wednesday applauded from across the street as they watched a city worker close the gate for the final time.

"We're celebrating. The seagulls will finally leave," said David E. Gann.

The 137-acre landfill opened 14 years ago and received about 1,500 tons of garbage daily. Garbage is piled more than 100 feet high.

"It's long overdue. The odor is terrible," said Regan Askwith.

Although the dump is now closed, some residents fear groundwater filtrating through the dump will pollute nearby Greenfield Creek, a tributary of the St. Johns River.

THE MAGIC VALLEY REGIONAL MEDICAL CENTER FOUNDATION PROUDLY PRESENTS:

THE FOURTH ANNUAL "FESTIVAL OF TREES"

The Festival of Trees features dozens of especially decorated Christmas trees and wreaths that have been decorated by individuals, organizations, clubs, churches, schools and businesses who then donate the trees to the Foundation. The decorated trees are in turn sold to local patrons. In addition, homemade food items, Christmas gifts, Santa Claus, and continuous entertainment by local performers are all part of the Festival of Trees celebration.

Held in the old Bon Marche Building, Downtown

The Medical Center Auxiliary, the South Central Medical Auxiliary, The Twin Falls Lions Club, and the Twin Falls County Junior Club will assist the Foundation in presenting this event.

The four day Festival will be open to the public on:

Sure, it's opera — but try it

By LORAYNE ORTON SMITH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Don't let the word "opera" scare you.

When this entertainment genre began in Europe several hundred years ago, it wasn't the "fur coat crowd" that appreciated the often ribald plots, says Roger Vincent, Filer, one of Magic Valley's best known singers who also will perform next week in 'Amahl and the Night Visitors' in Twin Falls.

It was the peasants who first applauded Mozart's operatic efforts.

But, because the European operas were written in a foreign language and were produced at places like the prestigious Metropolitan Opera House in New York City, the idea grew that opera is "high brow."

"Too many Americans are turned off by the word opera," Vincent says.

The only real difference between opera and other performing art forms, Vincent says, is that opera is not just singing, or acting, or dancing, but combines all three and the words are sung.

Vincent says we are now in a transition period in the United States, moving from traditional opera to contemporary productions.

'Amahl and the Night Visitors,' composed in English in 1951, is one of the best-known modern operas, he says.

Written by Gian-Carlo Menotti, an American composer born in Italy in 1911, 'Amahl' was the first opera commissioned especially for television in the United States. It premiered on NBC-TV Opera Theatre on Christmas Eve in 1951.

'Amahl' is a heartwarming story of the three kings who are following the star of Bethlehem.

Learning they are taking gifts — including a live parrot — and gold to a child they don't know, she is puzzled because she badly needs money for someone she does know well — her crippled son.

She steals some of the gold from the kings' sacks, but when the theft is discovered Amahl offers to give his crutch for the kings to take to the Christ child.

And then a miracle occurs. What follows is the emotional highlight of the show — to be revealed only to the audience.

Vincent plays the part of King Balthazar, the same role he sang 15 years ago when the opera was first produced in Twin Falls.

The other two kings are Bill Sweet and the Rev. Mike Bullard, both Twin Falls. Bullard is pastor of the First Presbyterian Church.

Balthasar Sony Buhidar, laboratory manager for Stukenholtz Lab, Twin Falls, is directing the performance.

We are lucky to have him in Twin Falls, Vincent says. Buhidar, who holds Ph.D. degrees in both theatre arts and music and chemistry, moved to Twin Falls four years ago.

His wife, Sue, is president of the Twin Falls Music Club, which is co-sponsoring the Christmas program with the Northwest Opera Associa-

'Amahl and the Night Visitors'

'Amahl and the Night Visitors,' produced by the Northwest Opera Association and the Twin Falls-Music Club, will be presented at 8:15 p.m. Dec. 8-10, with a matinee at 2 p.m. Dec. 10.

All performances will be held in the Vera O'Leary Junior High School auditorium.

Tickets are $5 for adults and $4 for children and senior citizens. They are available at Idaho First National Bank, Jud's Bookstore and Larson Arts in downtown Twin Falls—The Homestead at the Lawson Mall; Ann's Hallmark at Blue Lakes Mall and Little Red Hen in Magic Valley Mall; at the Bookmark in Jerome and Sav-Mor Drug in Dahl. tion, a group of local opera enthusiasts who have introduced this art form to Magic Valley.

Jeanne Wilson is chairman of the production and Lori Hild is choreographer. Musicians include Barbara Mix, pianist; Georgia Bluestek, synthesizer, and Nicole Galay, oboist.

Vincent says the best praise an opera could receive, especially in the United States, was said of 'Amahl' after its premiere: "I was touched. I thought it was going to be opera."

Vincent says, "If you aren't touched by 'Amahl and the Night Visitors' you have to be dead."

KBSU: Magic Valley scores an Idaho radio first

By MICHELLE COLE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After a drought of jazz and classical music, come spring the Magic Valley will be the only community in Idaho with two public radio stations.

The Federal Communications Commission has approved KBSU's proposal to build a transmitter at the Jerome Butte, said James Paluzzi, general manager of the Boise State University radio station. By March 1, Magic Valley listeners will be able to turn their dials to the BSU radio network.

KBSU announced its plans to extend into the Magic Valley more than a year ago. But the Boise station lost the race to become the area's first public radio station when KRIC-FM, the Ricks College radio station, began broadcasting in the Magic Valley last July.

The Ricks station can be heard at 98.3 FM during weekdays from 5:30 a.m. until midnight, and on weekends from 6 a.m. until midnight.

KRIC has had difficulty maintaining a clear signal in the past few months. "We're having problems with interference from another station," said John Haebler, KRIC general manager. "Engineers are working to correct it."

Static won't be a problem with the BSU radio network, Paluzzi said.

The new KBSU transmitter will be nearly 2,000 watts compared to the 10-watt KRIC transmitter. "We expect crystal clear reception as far east as Hazelton and as far west as Hagerman," he said.

Seventy-five percent of the transmitter's $85,000 cost will be federally funded. Paluzzi said in order to pay the balance, the radio station plans to launch a membership drive after the BSU radio network is in place at 91.7 on the FM dial.

"I think you're very fortunate to be the only community in the state of Idaho with two public radio stations," Haebler said. Both general managers agreed that differences in programming mean that Magic Valley won't be flooded with the same radio shows.

KRIC dedicates six hours daily to national, local and college news. The station also broadcasts classical music, jazz and popular radio shows including Garrison

The Stones help Santa tell his story in words, pictures

The Times-News

KIMBERLY Beverly Stone has a pact with Santa Claus. He reveals his secrets to her and she writes about Santa's life in a new book.

Last Christmas, Stone told the tale of Santa's youth in her first book, 'The Secret of Santa Claus.' Stone chronicled Santa's tragic separation from his parents and his adoption by the 'lees,' a family of snowy creatures who live near the North Pole. Stone's readers also shared Santa's first Christmas and learned how he began delivering toys to good girls and boys.

The book is illustrated by Stone's husband, Gary, and is filled with magical beings who live in such familiar places as the Snake River Canyon and the Magic Valley.

This year the Stones have produced a sequel, 'Santa + Martha.' As the title suggests, it's an old-fashioned love story that details how Santa discovers his soon-to-be wife while visiting his look-alike brothers in the sunny land of Faraway.

"I have a pact with Santa to get his story out to as many as possible,"

Stone says.

Tonight Stone will be working to keep that pact when she makes a special, book-signing appearance at Jud's Bookstore in downtown Twin Falls. She and Gary will be available to meet the public and sign books from 6 until 8 p.m.

Dev Stone says she hopes to have an opportunity to read from her new story and Gary Stone will bring along his magical illustrator's pens which bring the impish 'snowie elf' Flower Blue to life.

Readers of the new book will find Santa's road to romance rocky at first. When he first meets Martha, Santa experiences a "strange sensation that made him feel sort of like he could float on air." But the object of his affection is shy and runs away whenever she sees Santa looking her way.

Frustrated and confused, Santa finds the 'Old One' who lives in a place called Magic Mountain. The Old One tells Santa to be patient and it will all work out — and by the happily-ever-after end of the story, it does indeed.

"I wanted the story to teach children when they have a big problem, it's worth the effort to fix it," says Dev Stone. "I was kind of hoping the Old One would encourage children to consult older people with their problems."

The first book was a hit with the younger set and the Stones spent a busy year reading (and quick-illustrating) Santa's life story for assemblies of school children. Stone says she is nervous about how the new book will be received, but she adds with a laugh, "I'm not quite as scared as last year."

CSI holds Magic Mud show

By DENISE TURNER
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — There's more to mud than meets the eye.

At least that will be true at the College of Southern Idaho's Second Annual Magic Mud Invitational, a holiday ceramic exhibition and sale to be held Dec. 6-10 at the Herrett Museum Art Gallery on campus.

Herrett curator Mike Green says this year's sale will feature quality ceramics displayed in exhibition fashion and ranging in price from $3 to $30. A portion of the sale proceeds will be used to help support art gallery programs.

The featured Idaho artists at the 1988 invitational are Kirk Christensen, Shelly Christensen, David Christensen, Jean Fay, Eric James, Virginia Schmitt, LeVar Stool, Bill West, Sheryl West and Jim Woods. Many of the area artists dig their own Idaho clay, noted Green, and some even build their own kilns and make their own glazes, including Schubert, whose textures, shapes and glazes are inspired by lava flows.

"This is a great opportunity for people to find special quality Christmas gifts unique to our area at reasonable prices," Green said. He added that this year's selections have been expanded to include 200 to 300 pieces, because last year's sale was so successful.

Ceramic pieces set for this year range from teapots to covered casseroles and jars to shallow bowls and platters to nested bowl sets.

The public can get a sneak preview of the items for sale at a reception to be held for the artists and the public on Tuesday night from 7 to 9 p.m. at the museum. Refreshments will be served that night by the Friends of the Gallery, and ceramic pieces may be purchased during the reception. The sale will continue Wednesday through Friday from 9:30 to 4:30 and Saturday from 1 to 4:30.

Willie Nelson can still phrase a song, but his 29th album lacks old creative spark

By The New York Times News

Willie Nelson is on the road again, but this time, he's coasting.
His newest album, "What a Wonderful World," is his fourth Tin Pan Alley golden oldies package in a decade and he could have done it with a phone call from the 10th tee.
In fact, he may have.
It's limp, like the idea itself of a Texas-outlaw country singer and all-around hellraiser resurrecting the Parade songs from the '30s, '40s and early pre-rock '50s.
"Willie begs to differ. Musically," he says, "I haven't changed. I'm doing basically what I've done all along. Well, maybe. He's always had a weak spot for popular ballads and has written some fine pop songs. Crazy is probably his best known." But now, the difference is increasingly that he sings somebody else's music, not his own.
Not that it hurts him at the box office. He has four concerts set at the Westbury Music Fair in New York, starting Oct. 20. Seats are priced at $28 per, which is what Frank, Liza and only a few other heavies in the business command.
Certainly, the new album — and the New York shows — come at a time when he could use an invigorating shot of his own considerable creativity, which has produced hundreds of songs — some of them, he says, still on tapes stored in boxes here and there.

WILLIE NELSON 29th album disappoints

The oldies concept worked with "Stardust," because of the novelty of a honky-tonk hero reworking some of the great evergreens, even some where "Over the Rainbow" and, despite some slipshod, without a song.
But the new album, his 29th on Columbia, finds him Andy Williams did it, and Some Enchanted Evening, OK on Broadway, but not OK with harmonics and backup singers.
"Lord knows, he's got distractions enough to break his concentration. He and his wife split in a messy, other-woman affair that kept the scandal sheets humming for weeks. ("Willie Begs Wife, 'Make Friends With My Pregnant Mistress,'" topped the front page of one supermarket tabloid.)

He's juggling so many deals in so many areas codes that his lawyers have hired lawyers.
He's 55 years old and after 25 years of ups and downs in the business, he understandably is shifting gears. He talks about diets and exercise now as he once talked about booze and all-nighters.
"I still love what I do," he said a couple weeks ago when he played in Newark, Conn., "but there's a lot of things I love. Music plays the bills — hell, music is what keeps me going."
Trouble is, more and more, Willie sounds like he's singing for geese. Sure, his voice, weary and whiskey, still cuts through the crowd on the radio dial, and nobody has copied his jazzy phrasing. But new country acts, like Randy Travis, Dwight Yoakam, George Strait, the Judds and Reba McEntire, are making waves as well as music.

For the first time since "Stardust" entered the charts in 1978, nothing by Nelson is among the top 75-selling albums ("What a Wonderful World" is a week or two away, with an uncertain future). And for the first time in years, he was not nominated for anything at the big annual Country Music Awards show.
His autobiography, "Willie," written with Bud Shrake, is just out, but already have made the rounds, and his opinions on life, love and the rest sound a little weary.
"I don't know how long I can keep going," he says, "but I don't worry too much about it. The people who hear my music like it and maybe that's all it's about."
A collector's call from Maryville, Ind., from one of the guys who keeps the Willie Nelson Machine oiled, puts it another way: "What Willie wants, Willie does — the guys say."
And Willie himself jokes, "I had turns to worse. I can make a living in cocktail lounges for the rest of my life."
He's kidding, right?

Laser disc videos mostly appeal to elite

By The Washington Post

The term "CD video" is not particularly accurate, but that doesn't matter; it contains the seeds of the next revolution in home entertainment.
What matters is that, through the merger of the two most potent buzzwords in the recording industry, the state-of-the-art technology for home video software may finally get the attention it deserves.
Digitally encoded, laser-scanned video discs, that's what "CD video" means have been on the consumer market for a small, discerning clientele since the late 1970s, under such names as Pioneer LaserVision and MCA Discvision. The technology is essentially the same as was used later to develop audio compact disc, and is now revolutionizing the storage of computer memory.
For 10 years, laser video units produced under the auspices of Pioneer remained a consumer medium while Beta and VHS tapes took over the mass market. The tape medium has shown great technical progress in the last few years, but the laser medium is still technically superior — i.e., an equipment of comparable quality a laser disc can give better pictures and sound and more useful special features such as indexing, instant access to any part of the program, undistorted freeze-frame, slow motion, reverse, etc.

The success of the audio compact disc has now paved the way for wider acceptance of its older video counterpart. Video discs, however, are not necessarily compact. In the past, most of them were 12 inches in diameter, like LPs, but they had a less mirror-like surface that is seen on CDs. Like LPs and unlike CDs, the 12-inch laser videodisc can be played on both sides, offering a full hour of sound and picture per side. Now, there is a whole range of comparable audio and video formats, ranging from the 3-inch CD singles through the standard 5-inch CD and 5 1/2, and 12-inch video discs. And a half-dozen manufacturers in the United States are turning out combination players that will handle any and all of these formats. This should eventually put laser video playback hardware in millions of homes and create a demand for more laser-scanned material of all kinds.
But at the moment, the VCR is a mass-market product, while laser video still has an elitist reputation. And with economies of scale, tape hardware can be priced lower than laser players. A careful shopper can find VCRs discounted for about $200; a laser player, even with discount, is likely to cost at least $500. This may change if a mass market begins to develop for the laser medium, but don't hold your breath.

There are two primary reasons why tape took the lead over discs in home video. First is the fact that video discs, unlike video tape, cannot at present be used for recording as well as playback on home equipment. A laser video disc on which you can do home recording will probably be available in a few years. But whether that happens, discs are superior to video tape right now as CDs are to audio tape. And look how CDs are booming.
A second reason for videotape's market pre-eminence is that most of the video-disc industry went at a lumpy way to a blind alley, developing and promoting the stylus-scanned compact-disc system used and then abandoned by RCA and many other companies. That system is now, for all practical purposes, dead, and one problem faced by laser discs in the mid-'80s has been making the world aware that video discs have survived the demise of that technology.
But with the RCA system out of the way, video discs now enjoy one substantial advantage over the various videotape formats: standardization. Like CDs, audio cassettes and LPs, but unlike VHS or Beta, laser videodiscs are all compatibly encoded. That laser discs are the same around the world greatly simplifies the logistics of production and distribution and should help lower the price.
For mass production, other things being equal, the unit cost of discs should be lower than for tapes because disc-duplication systems are more efficient. The disc's program material can be stamped instantaneously on its surface, while each tape must be run through its full length while it is being copied — a time-consuming process. But the cost of videotapes has been driven down by economies of scale — below $20, with discounts, for some very popular tapes. Disc and tape list prices for the same material tend to be fairly close, but it is a lot easier to find discounts on videotapes.

VCRs in American homes now outnumber laser-disc players by a factor of something like 20 to 1, but that still allows a substantial market for laser videos. Pioneer, the leader in the field, has upgraded its plant in California to allow production of 600,000 laser videodiscs per month — double last year's figure — and an enormous repertoire has already been built up. 85 to 90 percent movies. "The Last Emperor" is available in laser video, as well as dozens of "Star Trek" episodes, "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," Paul Newman's new stage production of "Phantom of the Opera," Earl Moad jacket and thousands of other titles. Some material released on tape is not duplicated on disc, but the repertoire is large and growing rapidly, and there is some material on discs not available on tape.
A useful monthly newsletter containing information and critiques on laser videos is the Laser Disc Gazette, RP 2, Box 651, Harper's Ferry, W. Va., 25125.

Final Autumn Candlelight Concert in Sun Valley features Music by Three

The Times-News

SUN VALLEY — The final performance of the Autumn Candlelight Concert series will be held Saturday night with Music by Three at the Sun Valley Lodge Dining Room.

These three young musicians — Daniel McKelway on clarinet, Christopher Costanza on cello and Rina Dokshinsky on piano — have all won acclaim in the prestigious Young Concert Artists International Auditions over the past four years.

The trio's program will include the music of Bach, Debussy, Stravinsky, Mozart and Brahms. McKelway, 22, has been described by music critic Paul Hume as "an absolutely stunning virtuoso of the clarinet." McKelway's musical engagements for the 1988-89 season include three national Music From Marlboro tours with the Mozart Clarinet Quintet, the Beethoven Clarinet Trio and the Weber Clarinet Quartet. She has also performed at the University of Cincinnati at Shreve, Miami University in Ohio, Dartmouth College, the Tampa Bay Performing Arts Center, the University of California at Davis, and the Chatsanooga Riverbank Festival.

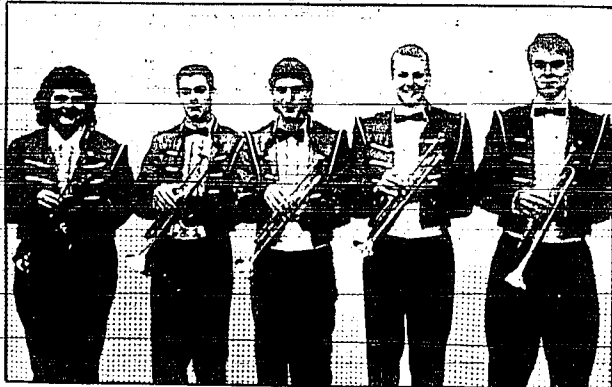

At 24, Costanza won the 1986 Young Concert Artists International Auditions and made his Kennedy Center debut the following year. Costanza has appeared in numerous recitals, concerto and chamber music appearances, and has performed as soloist with several orchestras in the Northeast.

Dokshinsky is a 22-year-old Israeli pianist who was presented in her New York recital debut as winner of the 1987 Young Concert Artists International Auditions. She was also awarded the Bruce Hungerford Memorial Prize, the Joseph Kalichstein Piano Prize and the Mortimer Levitt Career Development Award for Women Artists of Young Concert Artists.

At the age of 18, Dokshinsky performed as soloist with the Israel Philharmonic under Zubin Mehta, after which Mehta invited her to appear with him at a UNICEF benefit concert in Florence, Italy. She has numerous recitals, chamber music appearances scheduled for the coming year. Sponsored by the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities in conjunction with the Sun Valley Company, the evening begins with the concert followed by a gourmet dinner with dancing music play by the Joe Macarillo Trio. Doors to the dining room will open at 6 p.m., with the concert beginning promptly at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 8 p.m. Table reservations for four or more people may be made by calling 733-9191.

Tickets are available at the Sun Valley Center, Magic Mountain Music and Chapter One Bookstore in Ketchum, Ex Libris Bookstore in Sun Valley, and the Sound Socket in Halsey. Tickets are $33, or $30 for Center members, and includes the concert, four-course dinner, tax and gratuity.

The Times-News

BUHL — Buhl's fourth annual Concierto Fiesta, set for 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Popplewell School auditorium, will feature vocal and instrumental barbershop music.

Common Taters, the well-known community barbershop vocal quartet, will be special guests when the high school's "Band of Indians" take their audience on a variety sound trip, says director Wayne Skeem.

The program will range from Irving Berlin's "Alexander's Ragtime Band" to Whitney Houston's "Didn't We Almost Have It All," and John Williams' classic marches, including the recent Olympic Theme.

Five trumpeters, Pat Evans, Charles Wright, Tim

Gordes, Brian Murphy and Carl Kohntopp, will demonstrate barbershop trumpet and play a contrasting segment with jazz voicing. Four of the five are seniors at Buhl High School.

More than 200 luminaries will be used to light the way into the auditorium.

In the Southwest the luminaries, called the "Candles of Christmas," date back centuries to the early Spanish settlers from Mexico, Skeem says.

Entire cities and villages were wreathed in light, just as centuries ago in Spain, small bonfires lit the way for the Christ child.

Charles Binkelman and her "Pumpkin Hollow" ladies will add their unique maneuvers to help carry out the theme.

Admission is $2.50 per person or $5 per family.

Dilettantes to hold auditions

TWIN FALLS — The Dilettantes will hold auditions for their spring production "The Ring and I" on Sunday and Monday from 6 to 9 p.m. The tryouts will take place at the Inmanuel Lutheran School on Filter Avenue East.

Dancers are asked to come on Sunday from 6 to 7 p.m.

Play based on Newman's songs works

The Times-News

NEW YORK (AP) — Randy Newman's songs, many of them satirical or from an off-the-wall point of view, probably need a format far different from a revue where it's just "and then he wrote ..."

"The Middle of Nowhere," which opened recently at the off-Broadway Actor Place Theater, has a novel format — the washed-up-actor-in-a-desert-island idea combined with the old-time minstrel show. It sounds chancy but it works quite well. It's simpler than it sounds, too.

Brief program notes explain about the sections in 19th-century white-glove minstrel shows. This allows Newman songs to be grouped — love songs, songs about misfits, songs about money — for a reason.

If the same old reading gets you down, try these

By ALEX RAISSIN

The Los Angeles Times

"Passions Within Reason: The Strategic Role of the Emotions" — Robert H. Frank (Norton, $19.95)

Far more relevant to our lives than its mysterious title might suggest, this book is actually an attempt to calm our nagging fear that "to do the right thing, as opposed to the selfish thing, is to be a chump." Even the most cynical social and natural scientists are unable to find selfish motives in every act, Cornell economist Robert Frank assures us, for "the plain fact is that many people do not fit the me-first caricature."

"They donate bone marrow to strangers — with leukemia. They endure great trouble and expense to see justice done, even when it will not undo the original injury. At great risk to themselves, they pull people from burning buildings, and jump into icy rivers to rescue people who are about to drown."

Frank's intention is not only to debunk the notion that "people always act efficiently in the pursuit of self-interest," but to undermine the argument that opportunistic behavior begets the richest material rewards. "In many situations," Frank argues, "the conscious pursuit of self-interest is incompatible with its attainment."

While a simple theory of self-interest might suggest that we leave a skimpy tip in a restaurant that we are unlikely to visit again, Frank explains, it is actually in our best interest to tip fairly, for failing to do so will make it difficult to sustain the emotions that motivate (us) to behave honestly on other occasions.

"People will sense this change in our emotional makeup, Frank contends, pointing to studies which show how telling our facial expressions can be, and will be reluctant to record us in the trust and empathy we need to succeed in life."

"For all of his probability densities, 'threshold signal values,' and other analytic techniques, however, Frank's theories do not 'scientifically' prove, as he suggests, that altruists reap more material rewards than opportunists. While Frank's contention that people need to 'sus-tain' emotions such as honesty and altruism is certainly valid, opportunists can easily find ways around this, avoiding social interactions when it is not in their interest to be giving, for instance.

Despite some questionable premises, however, "Passions Within Reason" addresses issues that are undeniably central to our lives and offers us with remarkable insight, if not with scientific objectivity. Frank might not be hot on the trail toward a more benevolent society, but he is warm.

"Back in the U.S.S.R.: The True Story of Rock in Russia" by Artemy Troitsky (Faber and Faber, $9.95)

Many American students who have traveled to the Soviet Union in glasnost-era exchange programs have remarked that rock music is the great social mixer. While student dorms might seem alien in their hugeness and impersonality, different students play Elton John, the Beatles, and Russian rock for their visitors. This insider's view is further proof that rock taps into a youthful spirit common to our two cultures — and rouses the same suspicions among older generations in the process.

Art Troitsky is Russia's foremost expert on rock, a dissident who became officially accepted because of glasnost and because of his work organizing a benefit rock concert for the victims of Chernobyl, which convinced older Soviets that rock was not altogether decadent and earned Troitsky a reputation as the Russian Bob Geldof. His writing is as witty as that of any Western rock critic, though more heartfelt and a trifle more naive.

Under glasnost, Troitsky reports, more rock records were officially published in 1987 than in the entire preceding decade. Ironically, however, Troitsky believes this new legitimacy has only stripped Russian rock of its former boldness. While lyrics once challenged authority, "No one believes that, there's no 'wind on Earth,'" wrote one band, "even if we've banned the wind," recent official concerts have been a parade or "becoming involved with someone" seems to end only the public life of some political and religious leaders. Many marriages survive it, some even encourage it, and between 25 percent and 50 percent of American women have practiced it, according to surveys in these pages.

In studying how our traditions have come to change, Annette Lawson, a sociologist working at the University of California, Berkeley, and Stanford, writes honestly and unpretentiously, drawing out so much on sociology (for she finds many of its explanations, such as "deviance theory," to be inadequate), but on practical examples from feminist texts, "popular films and myths, and on her own observations of friends in happy marriages" who were nevertheless tempted to have affairs.

From her friends' experiences Lawson suspected that adultery was more than a channel for lust and balm for marital discontent; after a study of 600 middle-class Brits, she found her suspicions confirmed. "Adultery," for one, "is a form of fantasy play, she writes, in which each partner can make the lover represent anyone or anything."

More than mere fantasy, though, adultery allows men and women to re-create relationships of dependency that also paradoxically permit autonomy: Men want "the freedom to be vulnerable and dependent," Lawson explains, while women want simultaneously to be magnetically transported and to determine their own fate.

Many of Lawson's theories are inconclusive (she cannot say whether adultery is on the rise, for instance), but on the whole, this is an absorbing, intricate study, not only of love and infidelity, but of changing conceptions of power.

Legends, Lies & Cherished Myths of American History" by Richard Shenkan (Morrow, $15.95)

Richard Shenkan, a Salt Lake City TV news reporter, has compiled a treasure-trove for America's irreverent majority, debunking myths and legends at the heart of our national consciousness. Most historians have mixed feelings about books like this, for while they make history palatable to a TV generation, they present it in pieces too tiny to capture historical cause-and-effect. Collectively, though, Shenkan's vignettes tell incisive stories, revealing, for instance, how American culture has modified facts over time to convince us that our society, in its present form, is the one the Founding Fathers had intended to create.

We are inclined to believe that the Fathers favored democracy as we practice it today, for example, but Shenkan points out that the Fathers not only were opposed to the general public electing presidents directly, they didn't want the electoral college to make the decision either — and didn't think it would. Shenkan also shows the many ways myths have rose-tinted the past, debunking, for instance, John F. Kennedy's contention that his PT-109 had been rammed during combat. Members of Kennedy's crew insist that it was struck during a lull, Shenkan writes, when Kennedy and everyone else on board were caught napping.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning hours will drag. Spend time working on familiar tasks. The afternoon will be completely different, full of schedule changes and new ideas and plans. You will have a strong urge to be on the move.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Look beyond appearances into the true nature of a romantic tie. Trying to change another is an impossible task. The evening sparkles.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You feel like you are in a rut, but you have a plan. Experiment with new lifestyles. You appreciate home, children and possessions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): It may be difficult to maintain a cheerful attitude. Forgive and forget is the best policy. The end result turns into a treasured relationship.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Your partner worries about finances. Budgets need closer follow up. Affection levels are high. Nocturnal hours can be exciting.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Things can stand between you and success unless you make the right choices. Reflect on a creativity, talent and where the best opportunities are.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Silence may be golden today. Adjustments must be made. Leave important decisions for another, less confused.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): The company you are keeping can have a direct bearing on your career, for good or bad. Make advantageous choices. Hidden talents glow.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You find good in a questionable situation. Health matters when you're slow down. A clandestine relationship is more than you can handle.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Look beyond appearances into the true nature of a romantic tie. Trying to change another is an impossible task. The evening sparkles.

Phone solicitors should be considerate

DEAR ABBY: I have been working for a marketing research firm for almost two months, telephoning homes around the country to get opinions from consumers regarding which products and services they use. The only bad part of my job is the abuse I have to take from some of the rude people I encounter.

I've politely introduce myself, then state that I want only a few minutes of their time to get some information about the products they use daily. I explain (if they let me get that far) that I am not selling anything, I am just gathering information. Abby, you would not believe some of the language I have heard before they hang up on me!

Please ask your readers to be a little more courteous and to cooperate with callers from market research firms. And if they are too busy to answer a few questions, all they have to do is say so.

Abigail Van Buren Dear Abby

—MINNESOTAN
DEAR MINNESOTAN: There is, no excuse for rudeness, but I believe that the telephone is in the home for the convenience of the person who pays for it. Market researchers should find another way to gather information. Some people sleep at odd hours; others may be ill and don't want to be disturbed; and there are many who resent the intrusion. Read on for a consumer's view:

DEAR ABBY: Of all the nuisances to plague us over the years, telemarketing is at the top of the list. It differs from direct mail. When you get unsolicited mail, you can toss it out or put it aside to read when you feel like it; you can even get your name removed from the mailing list. But what do you do about phone calls? Forget unlisted numbers — now the marketers use computers that supply dial numbers, one after the other.

Telemarketing is a blatant invasion of privacy. Your town can legislate against solicitors coming to your door — but not your phone. Think of how many baths, naps, nights (or days) sleep, family dinners, love-making sessions and funeral receptions have been interrupted. And how many sick, disabled and elderly people have been inconvenienced by a ringing telephone. (We won't even go into how many gullible people have been bamboozled on the phone.)

The public should also be made aware that once people buy or give on the basis of a phone solicitation, their names are sold to other telephone solicitors as hot prospects.

I urge anyone who is fed up with this home invasion to take action. When one of these calls comes in, ask for the name and address of the organization (commercial or non-profit) involved, then tell them that you will buy nothing sold on the phone, and will support no charity that solicits in this manner. Then follow it up with a letter, so they will know you mean business.

When enough people stop buying or giving, these intrusive phone calls will stop paying off, and come to a halt.

MRS. M.H. CHALFANT, PA. DEAR MRS. M.H.: Bravo! Dear Abby's Cookbooklet is a collection of favorite recipes — all tested, tried and terrific! To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($1 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Oregon scientist looks at stars without leaving his living room

By The Los Angeles Times
 Barry Sander, an Oregon research scientist and amateur astronomer, figured out how to look at the stars without leaving his house by inventing Night Sky Star Stencil, which can transform your ceiling into a replica of the night sky. It comes in winter or summer sky versions.

The kit, which costs about $25 for an 8-foot stencil, $30 for the 12-foot version, includes a series of precision-cut stencils that you unroll and affix to a ceiling of your home with adhesive, which is included. You then dab Night Sky's special luminous paint in the holes, remove the stencil and turn off the lights. You should see 400 stars in their proper places, transforming your room into a home planetarium. The kit also includes a map for identifying the constellations.

The paint shows in the dark for about an hour, according to Sander, and is undetectable in normal light. The stencil works on smooth and textured ceilings. The 8-foot size Sander says, takes about an hour to put up; the 12-foot, two hours.

Japanese medicated plaster may relieve pain

By The Los Angeles Times
 It is recently imported from Japan, but it is not a car or a camera. It is a Band-Aid-size medicated plaster called Salompas that you apply to the skin to relieve muscle pain or aching joints — a product that representatives of Hisamitsu Pharmaceutical Co. say is "a household word in Japan."

The medicated plasters, which smell something like horse liniment, are easy to use — you simply peel one off of the cellophane backing and apply it to your skin. About 3 inches long and an inch wide, the small plasters come in boxes of 30 or 40 sheets. (There are two patches on one piece of cellophane.)

For maximum effectiveness, Hisamitsu spokesmen recommend Salompas be applied to the skin after a bath or shower and before sleeping. You also can hold one over a lamp for a few seconds and the heat seems to speed up Salompas' penetration into the skin.

The company lists among the active ingredients methyl salicylate, menthol and camphor. The 30-patch box sells for about $1.50, the 40-patch size for around $2.75. The company also manufactures an 8x10 patch (which sells for about 95 cents per plaster), an elastic one to place on knees or elbows and an analgesic spray.

For maximum effectiveness, Hisamitsu spokesmen recommend Salompas be applied to the skin after a bath or shower and before sleeping. You also can hold one over a lamp for a few seconds and the heat seems to speed up Salompas' penetration into the skin.

MVRS, Falls Brand launch annual fundraising drive

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Rehabilitation Services has launched its annual Christmas fund-raising project.

For the seventh consecutive year, MVRS and Falls Brand-Independent Meat, have joined forces to offer meat products as Christmas gifts.

For each item purchased, Independent Meat makes a contribution to MVRS, says the agency's executive director, Jeff Crumrine.

This year we anticipate the MVRS share of sales will be $8,000, Crumrine says. The money goes to the agency's general fund and used for operating expenses.

Much of the sales effort of various meat products and gift packages containing meat and cheese combinations, is coordinated through a sales outlet located at Ernst Home Center and Nursery.

The booth opens today and will operate through Dec. 24. It will be run primarily by volunteers. Assisting will be members of the Twin Falls Monarch Lions Club, Twin Falls Kiwanis Club and Twin Falls Rotary Club.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

He that is every where is nowhere.
Thomas Fuller

"If you can't do better at finding missing queens, you should look for better ways to play the hand," crabbled a resentful North. Look over the play to see if you can find a way to land 10 winners.

West's club 10 was covered in dummy, and East's king went to South's ace. The ace and king of trumps failed to drop the queen and South then tried hearts. The cashed the ace and finessed to the nine, and East got his second queen. In no hurry to release the high trump, East wisely led a second club to knock out dummy's honor. South fired his last shot by playing hearts, intending to discard his losing club. No luck there either. East ruffed the heart king, and the defenders ended up with four winners.

South's misguess in trumps was one that anyone might make, but he should never have subjected himself to a second misguess in hearts. After cashing his two high trumps, South should lead a diamond to dummy's queen and a diamond back to his king and West's ace. West knocks out dummy's remaining club honor and South counterpunches by exiting with a trump. Now, regardless of how the defense continues, South gets either a free finesse in hearts or a ruff and discard, thus eliminating the need for finding the heart queen.

ANSWER: Four hearts. Should be enough to provide a decent play for game.

Richard Kiley, Bea Arthur discover a 2nd chance at love in TV movie

By EVAN LEVINE

Richard Kiley originated the title role in "Man of La Mancha" (for which he won a Tony Award), introduced the song "Stranger in Paradise" in "Kismet," and has appeared in a dozen or so films, including "The Blackboard Jungle." But he may be best remembered for winning an Emmy Award for the canceled NBC series "A Year in the Life" and venting his feelings of anger and bitterness at the ceremony this past August.

Despite his frustration, he's back on the small screen this week, appearing in "My First Love" (ABC, Dec. 4), a romantic comedy in which he co-stars with Beatrice Arthur. The TV movie focuses on a pair of former high-school sweethearts who are given a second chance at love.

"I'm not bitter as much as very, very disappointed about the series," he says. "It should have been kept on until it found an audience. It was praised and had a loyal following. They just didn't wait."

Kiley's disappointment stems in part from what he sees as a lack of strong roles on television. "I don't want to play criminal masterminds," he says. "I kept getting offered things where people get their heads blown off. It's easier to write about machine guns blasting, but I won't do that."

Why then, is he doing "My First Love"? "It's lightweight but enjoyable," he says. "I loved the comedy. It's a lot of running around in hotel rooms, sort of like French farce. I think as an actor my instincts are good."

Those instincts have guided Kiley through a long career that has included stints away from the limelight, doing one-man shows and PBS poetry readings. "I wrote poetry as a kid — me and Steve Allen," he says. "I still write poetry. I did a PBS special, and the producers asked me to include one of my own poems. I said, 'Oh, no, I couldn't, not with all those great poets I'm reading,' but they persisted, so I did. I used a pseudonym — I said the poet was R.P. Kaye. The funny thing was that afterwards, people wrote in and said they had looked everywhere for his poetry and couldn't find it."

Writing poetry may not be the goal of every actor, but Kiley feels that one reason his career has lapsed is due to his broad understanding of literature. "It's not unusual for actors of my age to be educated in this way, but it is for young actors who have been brought up in the TV age," he explains. "Actors are no longer fascinated by words. But loving literature gives you options."

At the same time, he is just not interested in other options, like producing or directing. "It is maddening, waiting for a good role," he admits. "But I have no desire to be a director, and have all that responsibility. Nowadays, you hear every naive young actor say, 'Oh, I really want to direct.' Maybe I'm just lazy."

As for the role that initially made him famous: "I wouldn't be quick to go back to 'La Mancha,'" he says. "I'm not crazy about sweating my way through that one again, even though I love it. But I'm always vocalizing. I practice in the car. If a good musical came up, you bet I'd take it. I'd do anything good. Hope springs eternal."

Bea Arthur and Richard Kiley play former high school sweethearts who get a second chance at love many years later in "My First Love." The ABC movie airs Sunday, Dec. 4.

There is life after Fonz for Winkler

Q: We hear that Henry Winkler hasn't worked since he played the Fonz on TV's "Happy Days." Is he really in that much professional trouble? — L.R.

A: It's true that a 10-year run as one of TV's most popular characters is a tough act to follow. But contrary to what you've heard, Winkler is following it quite nicely. Henry has become one of Hollywood's hardest working film and TV directors, doing his magic now behind the camera. Since he hung up the leather jacket in 1984, he's worked on several big films. The current "Memories of Me," with Billy Crystal and Alan King, is the latest. Henry is also kept busy by his wife, Stacey, and their three children.

Q: We keep hearing that Tony Curtis has reformed at last. Just what is his problem? — S.B.

A: At age 62, Curtis looks remarkably good considering his history of alcohol and drug abuse. Curtis is often seen escorting young women, who he sometimes introduces as fiancées. His latest dating partner is actress Michele Corneau. His rocky personal past is widely known in Hollywood, and Curtis is often asked about it. "I just tell them that I am a recovered alcoholic and drug user," he said. There's no doubt that Tony has put his personal act in order. He is even acting these days — offscreen, as a spokesman for the Los Angeles tourist bureau.

Q: It's certainly understandable why Rita Hayworth's daughter, Princess Yasmin, works so hard raising money for the fight against Alzheimer's disease, since her mother died of it. But what about Angie Dickinson, who also seems to have joined the fight? Is she being charitable or does she also have a personal reason? — J. McD.

A: It's personal. Angie has a sister who is suffering from the so far incurable disease.

Q: What's this about Shirley MacLaine freely admitting to having had affairs with several men while she was married? — B.T.

A: For many years Shirley was married to businessman Steve Parker, who lived in Japan while she traveled the world. But the couple did find time to have a daughter, who's now an aspiring TV newscaster. In a recent chat with me, Shirley, now 54, described her marriage as an open one. "I lived with a few men when I was married to Steve. And he was in Tokyo living with someone else." In all, she said, the situation proved to be a "positive" experience.

Q: Actor Steve Guttenberg appears to be a really nice guy. Is he really all that nice? Is he married? — A.P.

A: The first thing Steve told me when we last met was, "Look, I'm very easy to get along with." I can tell you that he was completely sincere. He is the prototypically nice guy. He's also married — at last. After years of playing the field with a vengeance, Steve recently settled down with model Denise Bixler. Now 30, Guttenberg is rich, successful, and married to a beautiful woman.

Q: I couldn't wait to get back from a London visit and ask you what you know about Fergie and her former lover. My English cousin claims their affair is still on and that Fergie is just like her mother, who dumped her husband and ran off with a South American polo player. — W.P.

A: It's true that the Duchess had a four-year romance with Paddy McNally and that they're still very close. But palace watchers insist it's now a friendship, not a romance. McNally, who is 50, plays the role of adviser and confidant. The two phone each other regularly, and she discusses with him any problems she has.

Q: Is Marlon Brando as lazy as his movie career would indicate? — M.B.

A: The blunt answer to that question would have to be "yes." Brando makes no secret of his disdain for movie acting, and when he does work it's largely for the money or occasionally if he's interested in an inspiring role. The one picture he recently completed, "A Dry White Season," was an orgy of work for the 64-year-old actor. Another pair of movie projects await. One studio executive, when asked if Marlon enjoyed working again, summed up things nicely: "Marlon is never happy about working."

the photo it's apparent that she's forgotten her panties. Is this snapshot for real or just a rumor? — L.T.

A: The photo's for real. I recently chatted with the charming Cesar Romero, who, still vigorous at 81, has just finished his latest movie, "Street Law." "That snapshot is genuine," he told me. It was lifted from footage shot during a production number in "Weekend in Havana." The footage was confiscated," Romero said, "but prints were surreptitiously run off. Several years later when I ran into Carmen, I asked if she'd seen the photo. She was full of fun and replied, 'Yes, Cesar. And if the studio offered me $25,000, I might agree to pose again!'"

Q: I haven't heard anything about Don Rickles being mean to anyone lately. Is he finally being Mr. Nice Guy? — B.B.

A: Rickles, who when not doing his act and ribbing everyone mercilessly is one of the all-time pussycats, hasn't lost his zing at all. For instance, when Don visited Dustin Hoffman on the set of "Rainman," Rickles, true to form, told him, "I hope you'll finally have a hit with this one." Then he added, "You must be very bored and lonely if the most exciting thing you can think of was inviting me and my family to the set!" "Rainman," United Artists' big Christmas movie, co-stars Hoffman and Tom Cruise as brothers.

Actress gets double-duty starring on soap-within-a-soap

When Jessica Tuck was signed for her first network soap opera, she was actually signing on for two soaps at the same time. Jessica plays Megan Gordon, the tempestuous star of "One Life to Live's" soap-within-a-soap "Fraternity Row." Jessica loves her role or roles.

While attending Yale (as a psychology major) and dabbling in drama, she never dreamed she would get her first big TV break in a soap. The last thing on her mind when she finished her studies at the prestigious New Haven university was to go to work. Jessica and a friend, who needed a lot of convincing, set out on a 2,500-mile biking expedition from San Francisco to some destination in Michigan. They geared up and started pedaling for all they were worth. Eventually, Jessica made it to Michigan and headed on to New York.

The biking trip satisfied her sense of adventure for a while and she settled down to doing whatever it is one does to become an actress. She signed up for voice and acting classes with some very good teachers and took a job as a waitress with a catering company whose clientele numbered some of New York's beautiful people.

"I got to check out some very swanky penthouses and spill drinks on a lot of famous people," Jessica says with a wink in her voice.

Between waitress gigs, Jessica began accumulating some solid acting credits. They led to her auditioning for the part of Megan in "One Life To Live."

By her own count, Jessica competed with a vast number of 5-foot-7 blue-eyed blondes, and when she learned that she had won the part, she says she screamed loud enough to be heard in the farthest reaches of Africa.

What was the first thing Jessica did when she started working in the ABC soap? She invited a few friends over and held a "burning of the waitress uniform" ceremony. Maybe before too much longer, Jessica will be moving into one of those penthouses and calling up the old catering service to prepare a small soiree for a few hundred of her admiring

CHANNEL CHATTER

It's that time of year again, the time you start looking around for 1989 calendars. Well, fans of the ABC soaps have a special treat in store. It's an oversized color calendar poster featuring some of the hottest and most popular stars from the ABC lineup of hit soaps. Included in the special calendar are your favorite characters: Erica of "All My Children," Scorpio of "General Hospital," Tina from "One Life to Live," Trisha of "Loving," and Ben of "Ryan's Hope," plus many others. You can order the calendar by sending $2 (to cover postage and handling) to Poster, P.O. Box 92715, Rochester, N.Y. 14692.

PLOT PORTENTS

Jeremy just got married and discovers he's the father of a teen-aged son, from a previous marriage, of course, in "All My Children." Erica decides she wants Travis back but is it too late? When she goes to tell him, Travis is disoriented and suffering from that "soap opera malady," amnesia. Nico and Julie announce a Valentine's Day wedding but then decide to elope.

Steve is dead and Max prays for his brother's forgiveness, in "One Life to Live." Ursula is still on the loose, hiding out at Stoncrest. Larry finds out Brenda is pregnant. While honeymooning in Spain, Cord tries bullfighting which makes Tina very nervous that he may be gored. Roger becomes very interested in Viki's Eterna pin.

Trucker finds Gwyn's earring after the scene of Charles' car crash in "Loving." Clay and Ava name their baby after Cabot, which pleases him very much. Rick plants a vial of cocaine in Jack's jacket pocket. Trucker finds out that Trisha is the boss's daughter.

Nancy Don accuses Rob of trying to assault her in "Ryan's Hope." He's arrested but is soon out on bail. Rob has to take Doc to a remote inn but his plans are foiled and later Rob is beaten up.

An angry Duke attacks Scott after his court appearance in "General Hospital." Chet tells Terry he could be a victim of Huntington's Disease. Cheryl is unable to decide on Robert or Julian. Artlett and her emerald draw the attention of a mystery man.

Following an island explosion, Kaitan mourns Diana in "Days of Our Lives." Justin fails again to hurt Emilio. Despite his suspension, Mike backs April.

Father Michael must see Julia again after their romantic interlude in "Santa Barbara." After Cruz saves C.C. from the Major, she owes him a big favor.

Saved for the moment by Steven's shooting, Leanna is intent on making her marriage to Victor work in "The Young and the Restless." Nimm has a big surprise for Phillip, Jill and Kay.

Burke needs more evidence to nail Stephanie in "The Bold and the Beautiful." Stephanie watches Caroline elope and Clarke is unable to handle Madge and Kristin under one roof.

Mormon Church plans to air Christmas devotional Dec. 4

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - The annual Mormon Church Christmas Devotional will be broadcast from the Tabernacle here on Dec. 4, church officials say.

Featured on the program will be Christmas messages from President Ezra Taft Benson, leader of the 6.5-million member Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and President Thomas S. Monson, second counselor to Benson in the First Presidency.

The program also will feature several Christmas musical numbers by the Mormon Tabernacle Choir and President Gordon B. Hinckley, first counselor in the First Presidency, will conduct the services.

"The devotional has been scheduled early in the Christmas season to provide the option of viewing the live broadcast or the rebroadcast, or of videotaping it for use at a time that better suits local needs," the First Presidency said, in a prepared statement.

The devotional will be broadcast live over the satellite network beginning at 6 p.m. MST and will be rebroadcast that same evening at 8 p.m.

Q: I was a great fan of the late Lee Marvin. Are there any actors coming up who can fill his macho boots? — D.M.

A: One candidate is definitely Lee Ermey, the former Marine who, while attending college, played a chopper pilot in "Apocalypse Now." He then played a drill instructor in "The Boys in Company C," followed that with a role in "Purple Hearts" and, more recently, was incredibly realistic as the brutal drill sergeant in "Full Metal Jacket." Now Lee turns in still another tough performance in Chuck Fries' upcoming Vietnam War film, "Firebase Forward Gloria." Ermey certainly seems to be inheriting Lee Marvin's war-paint.

Q: As longtime fans of U2, the world's most popular rock band, we rushed to see their movie, "U2 Rattle and Hum." We were surprised to see the movie being promoted as a record of their famous "Joshua Tree" concert tour of the U.S. in 1987. I don't remember that tour playing in Memphis, Tenn., where two sequences take place. What's the story? — R.M.

A: The company filmed at two Memphis locations: Elvis Presley's home, Graceland; and at the famous Sun Studios, which played host to such '50s recording stars as Presley, Jerry Lee Lewis and Carl Perkins. Those places, not actually on the tour, were probably added for artistic and sentimental effect.

JAPANESE YEN A Tokyo jeweler has made up a gold medallion to commemorate Michael Jackson's last concert in Japan next month. The gold medals, which were originally priced at around $40, are selling like hotcakes even though the street price is reported to be around $2,500. The medallion has a picture of Jackson with his engraved signature and the words "Let's Be Friends." The jeweler says he made the expensive medallion because Michael has vowed that his 15-month world tour will be his last.

Q: Have you any idea which female show business star made the most money this year? I say Cher; my husband is betting on Jane Fonda. — H.H.

A: Your husband is closer, but no cigar. The big bucks, nearly $100 million, went to Mary Tyler Moore, most of it from her share of the profits from the MTM Production Corporation. Jane Fonda comes in third with about $20 million, and in second place is Madonna, with earnings of a little less than $24 million.

Q: Wasn't Cary Grant one of the most notorious cheapskates in Hollywood? — C.W.

A: Hollywood recently tossed a big charity benefit pegged to the celebration of the late actor's 72-film Hollywood career. The tributes were many, generous, and sincere. One movie insider who attended noted Grant's single fault: he was "excessively thrifty." Actress Eva Marie Saint told the crowd that Cary charged 25 cents for autographs. (The money supposedly went to the Actors Fund charity.) In any case, the general picture is clear — Cary Grant was no Mr. Big Spender.

Q: With the relaxation of certain restrictions in Soviet culture — glasnost, etc. — can we expect a wider range of Soviet films on U.S. screens? — T.D.

A: The answer is a definite "da." One of the first is "A Forgotten Tune for the Flute," one of the most popular recent movies in the Soviet Union, which is expected to open in the U.S. this month. It's a startlingly frank film that dares to lampoon Russian bureaucrats — a theme which only two years ago would have spelled trouble for its writer, director, producer and stars. Peekers report that "Flute" is a delightful, funny send-up of the convoluted red-tape system that ties up Soviet performers sent to entertain government forces.

NBC wins important November sweeps

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC has won the November sweeps, despite ABC's big event "War and Remembrance," according to the most recent television ratings from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

"War and Remembrance," an 18-hour mega-miniseries, ended up with an average rating of 18.6 and a share of 29, lower than the mid-30 shares the other networks had expected and lower than the 20.2 rating ABC reportedly guaranteed advertisers. ABC will have to give advertisers free time to make up the difference, exacerbating the $20 million loss the network had predicted even if the "Winds of War" sequel lived up to expectations.

The program's poor performance casts doubt on whether the remaining 12 to 14 hours will run next May as tentatively planned. Meanwhile, ABC is offering the first 18 hours on videocassette next week.

November is one of four months a year when network affiliates' local ratings are measured for purposes of negotiating advertising rates. The networks usually load up their schedules with special programming to help affiliates. This November, however, the first sweeps period of the new season was dampened by delays caused by the writers' strike last summer.

With only a couple of days to go in the sweeps, NBC led by two ratings points. ABC was second, a point ahead of CBS.

NBC won the week ending Nov. 27 with an average, prime-time rating of 15.0. ABC had 13.0 and CBS 12.0.

With Thanksgiving on Thursday, NBC's biggest night for ratings, "The Cosby Show" barely made the top 10. But two NBC movies, "In the Line of Duty: The FBI Murders" and "Take My Daughters, Please," made the top 10.

The atypical week also gave NBC its first win in the news race in more than a year.

Audiences stay close to TVs for pranks, true docudramas

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The older television grows, the more juvenile it becomes.

Delirious in a fact-based fever, TV sets are boiling over with playground pranks and True Detective docudramas. From Geraldo Rivera's scuffle with wanna-be Nazis to the slow-mo misdeeds on "America's Most Wanted," television has rarely been so revolting and so riveting at the same time.

The new splurge of reality programming has critics shaking their heads and viewers crowding living room sofas. And as long as the ratings soar, a whole lot more truth-is-stranger-than-fiction series will be hurtling your way.

Which is why reality champion Fox Broadcasting Co. is riding high.

"I do think we're on to something," said Barry Diller, Fox's chairman and chief executive officer. "The Reporters" is not a carbon copy of anything else. ... And I think 'America's Most Wanted' is an honestly moving show."

In fact, these shows owe a lot to previous programs: "The Reporters" can be seen as merely "60 Minutes" on a caffeine jag, the crime shows as simply borrowing from the headlines more directly than did "Hill Street Blues" or "St. Elsewhere."

Imitators are lining up. NBC has added "Unsolved Mysteries" to its schedule, CBS started "High Risk" and ABC has resurrected "That's Incredible" and added the trilogy of "Scandals," "Crimes of the Century" and "Trackdown."

Meanwhile, television syndicators are pounding the pavement for "On Trial," "Group One Medical," "Tabloid," "Exclusive," "Crimestwatch Tonight," "Crime Diaries," "Rewards" and "Inside Edition."

The popularity springs from a cast of characters more varied and bizarre than any sitcom.

In one corner are the hyperactive talk-show hosts — Rivera with his broken nose and the cluster-bomb of Phil Donahue, Oprah Winfrey and Sally Jessy Raphael with all of their needling queries. These four ask the questions we only dream about posing.

The other corner is filled with the marginally less egotistical "journalists" who would recreate the John Kennedy assassination if there were a rating point in it.

Led by Maury Povich on Fox's syndicated "A Current Affair" and its rape and murder replay show, "America's Most Wanted," the key here is to sit the audience down next to the corpse, smack in the middle of the crime scene.

Wherever reality programs fail in subtlety and substance, they click in thrills and ratings. Costing a fraction of traditional comedies and dramas, these unpredictable programs have in some instances doubled Fox's audience share — 15 percent of the nation's sets tune in "America's Most Wanted."

Overall, the audience is clearly substantial: Rivera, nose broken but self-importance intact, is soaring from publicity generated from his talk-show brawl and his NBC hit "Devil Worship: Exposing Satan's Underground."

Rivera, the carnival barker of television journalism, even went so far as to slap a promotional teaser on the slugfest edition of "Geraldo." "Parents, be advised that the language and violence contained makes this show inappropriate for small children." In other words, kids, watch this!

Why are audiences lapping it up? "American television viewers are tired of watching the most inoffensive programming," said Kevin Wendle, executive vice president of Fox's entertainment division. "They have said, 'We don't want another network. Give us something different.' And we're pulling out all the stops."

And how. Mixing sometimes sensational celebrity gossip and lurid crime stories with first-person journalism, "The Reporters" doesn't just penetrate the "fourth wall," it runs through it into your home.

Future Fox shows may be even more personal. Among ideas in the hopper for Fox's third night of programming (planned for Mondays sometime next year) is "Cops," a graphic documentary series about a group of Florida police officers making arrests and handling dead bodies.

Another Fox program in development will try to build on detective magazines, with private eyes talking up their most interesting cases with the help of video recreations.

"They (Fox) have shown that there's an insatiable thirst for real life among the television viewing audience," said Rivera. "They are filling a void that the networks are leaving. ... I think that 'America's Most Wanted' has really hit a nerve. It's populist TV at its most pragmatic."

So much flotsam clogs the reality genre that some players are now trying to rise above it all.

Nick Clooney, host of the courtroom highlight show "On Trial," recently sent reporters a letter saying, "By some unimaginable stretch of probabilities, a few writers equate such programs as 'Geraldo' and 'Morton Downey Jr.' with 'On Trial.' Nothing could be further from the truth!" The letter was mailed one day after an "On Trial" publicist asked that the show be included in any upcoming stories on tabloid television.

As with most anything else, too much of a good thing can be risky. If the reality-based programming crumples overnight, so, too, might Fox.

"While it's great now, we'll be careful," Diller said. "If we're not very careful about the diet, we'll make terrible mistakes."

'Miami Vice' will not return next season

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Miami Vice," NBC-TV's stylish police series, will not return for another season, the show's executive producer said.

"It's the last year by our own election, so we're planning for it," Michael Mann said recently.

Sonny Crockett, played byRiccardo Don Johnson, and Ricardo Tubbs, played by the suave Philip Michael Thomas, will end their war against drug lords come spring in a two-hour episode that will tie up some of the show's loose ends.

NBC would neither confirm nor deny that the show was going off the air. "We don't know if this is the last season," NBC spokeswoman Pat Schultz said. "We're still looking at options."

"Miami Vice" made its debut in September 1984 as an MTV-influenced update of "The Mod Squad" and "Police Story." It updated the police genre and spawned several imitators, including ABC's failed "Hollywood Beat."

The high-energy show emphasizes rock music, pastel shades, fast boats and a glitzy visual style. Its stories are set amid the drug-traffic industry in Florida's sun-dappled Gold Coast.

Widely criticized for its glamorous depiction of high-powered firearms and the drug business, "Miami Vice" has slipped in the ratings recently. Once a Friday night powerhouse, the one-hour show now struggles to compete with ABC's "20-20" and CBS's "Falcon Crest."

Jackson plans release of new video

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Moonwalker," a 94-minute video celebration of the weird and wonderful world of Michael Jackson, is being released early next year.

The video will be an amalgam of Jackson's musical performances, his reflections on media pressures and a narrative film in which he transforms himself into a robot and then a spaceship to battle a drug pusher named Mr. Big, said CBS Music Video Enterprises.

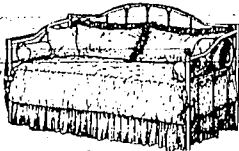

The release of the video on Jan. 10 comes at the end of Jackson's 15-month world tour, which was seen by 4 million fans in 15 countries.

Songs on the video include Jackson's "Man in the Mirror," his redo of the Beatles' hit "Come Together," and "The Moon is Walking," a song written and performed by the South African vocal group Ladysmith Black Mambazo.

The suggested price of the video is $24.98.

'Divorce Court' actress is starting 5th season

Los Angeles Times

Q: Who portrays attorney Jessica Norton on "Divorce Court"? She looks familiar.

A: She should look familiar. Lynn Tufeld has been quite active on "Divorce Court" over its five seasons. This year, she will appear as Jessica Norton on 37 episodes of the syndicated program in addition to appearing elsewhere on the tube. She has been seen in several TV movies, including "The Taking of Flight 847," "The Day After" and "Nitti" (she portrayed the gangster's second wife), along with guest appearances on such prime-time hours as "Hill Street Blues" and "The Sleeping Beauty" episode of "Fairy Tale Theatre."

Q: I used to watch "Match Game" and "Match Game-Hollywood Squares Hour." Whatever happened to Gene Rayburn?

A: The veteran game show host will turn 72 Dec. 22. Aside from the occasional guest appearance ("The Late Show" a few months ago, for instance), he has not been a television regular since "Break the Bank," a game show he hosted for 13 weeks before being replaced about three years ago. And despite having been at the helm of several game shows (including "Tic Tac Dough," "Dough Re Mi" and "Play Your Hunch"), Rayburn is primarily remembered for hosting "The Match Game" from 1962 to 1982 and as a regular on "The Steve Allen Show" in the late 1950s.
