Court deals Idahoans power rate hike

The Associated Press

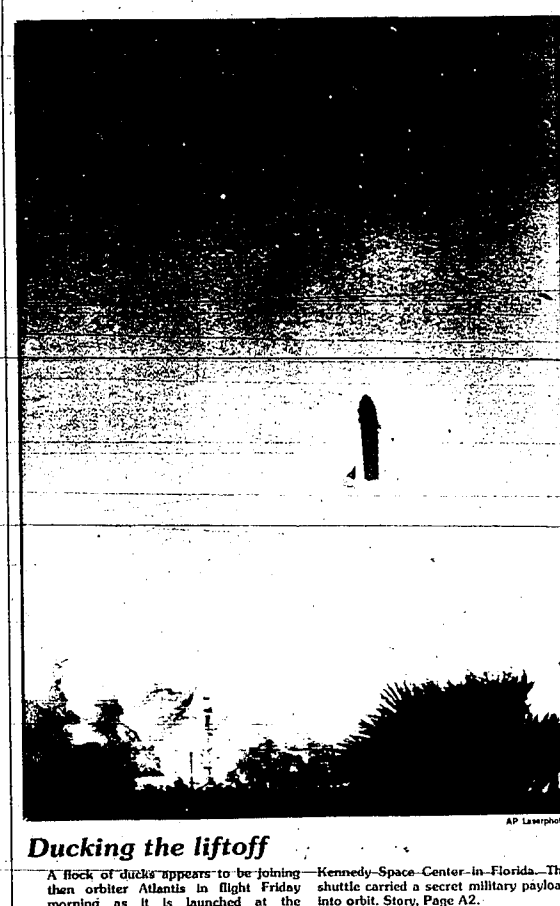

BOISE — The Idaho Supreme Court said Friday the Public Utilities Commission was wrong when it denied Idaho Power Co. most of a huge rate increase two years ago. Impact of the 41 ruling will be quick in coming. Officials said ratepayers can expect higher power rates, likely before the month is over. "You'll get it in time for Christmas," said PUC Commissioner Perry Swisher. He said the rate increase will be at least 5 percent and could go as high as 8 percent.

The outside tap would be 8 percent, but it is not likely to get that high. Five to seven percent is likely," he said. The Supreme Court order allows Idaho Power to put new rates into effect, with the PUC barred from any delays or changing the rates except to review the numbers for correctness. Idaho Power officials said they were reviewing the decision Friday afternoon and had no immediate comment. Idaho Power Co. three years ago asked for a record rate increase, $81 million, a request later scaled down to about $66 million. But the PUC granted less than $1 million. In a key portion of the ruling, the commission refused to allow Idaho Power to include about one-third of its investment in a northern Nevada coal-fired generating plant, Valley II, in its rate base. That investment was about $50 million. The PUC said although Idaho Power originally was authorized to build the plant, the utility did not stop work on Valley II when it became apparent its power would not be needed because of a regional surplus that will last at least until 1992. Because the power is not now needed, ratepayers should not have to pay for the plant, the commission said. The Supreme Court called that "blindsight" and said when Idaho Power committed itself to building the plant, the PUC itself said its electricity was needed. Justice Robert Bakes wrote the majority opinion, supported by Chief Justice Allan Shepard, Justice Robert Huntley and Joseph McFadden, a retired Supreme Court justice who heard the case. The lone dissenter was Justice Stephen Distalche, who upheld the PUC on all points. He said the Supreme Court did not have authority to overrule the PUC on findings of fact. The opinion constitutes a gross and unconstitutional usurpation by this court of the powers of the Legislature and its agency, the IPUC, Bistline wrote. Besides the Valley issue, Idaho Power appealed the December, 1986, decision on nine other points. It won three and lost six but officials involved said the Valley question was the major point. Idaho Power in the late 1970s contracted with Sierra Pacific to build two jointly. See COURT on Page A2

Hospital has $17 million in reserve, records show

By JENNIFER KAUTH Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley Regional Medical Center has more than $17 million in three different reserve funds, according to budget and investment records released Friday. And the legality of at least one fund is under county scrutiny. "If it's OK, it's OK. If it isn't, we'll get it fixed," County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said. According to county commissioners, the county-owned hospital has not been hiding the funds from anyone, although the funds don't show up on budget sheets. "It doesn't show up in the budget, but it does show up in accounting sheets," Hempleman said. "I guess it was known. At least it was available to be known. It is public information," he added. Commissioner Judy Felton said that she was aware of the reserve fund and that it is included in the annual audit report. "We always get copies of the audit from the hospital, but there's no way we can memorize different amounts or the line items," she said. The hospital is run by a board of directors appointed by the commissioners. Before the actual figures were released late Friday afternoon, Felton had said she thought a "sizeable chunk" had been set aside as a security fund required during the hospital's 1985 bond refinancing. A "chunk" of about $7.3 million does represent a reserve fund legally activated during the 1985 refinancing of the hospital's revenue bonds, according to the figures released Friday. But the jury is still out as to whether another $6.7 million fund labeled "temporary investments" is legal. Gary L. Tietzen, president of Idaho Home Health &

Hospice, a Twin Falls company that competes with the hospital, has publicly questioned the fund's legality. According to Ken Fry, the hospital's assistant administrator in charge of finances, the hospital has always had this fund, which is actually distributed among 13 different investments. He described it as a "savings account." The hospital is more like a business than a government agency," Fry said. He said that makes the temporary investments fund necessary because the hospital isn't backed by taxes that can be raised as needed. He cautioned that the $17 million figure was not a net amount, that money flows in and out of the account as needed. Fred Mathews, in charge of the hospital's day-to-day finances, likened the hospital's finances to any individual's finances. He said that when the hospital

Late LDS leader says 'revelations' thrashed out in officials' meetings

Los Angeles Times

Hugh B. Brown, a high-ranking member of the Mormon hierarchy for 22 years up to his death in 1975, says in just-published memoirs that many church decisions called "revelations" were actually decisions first "thrashed out" thoroughly by the top authorities. Those decisions "are no less revelatory, but it is simplistic to think that it comes as a bolt out of the blue," said the memoirs' editor, Edwin B. Firmage, a grandson of Brown and a law professor at the University of Utah. Because the Mormon Church hierarchy presents a unified front after its pronouncements, any prior divisions or debates usually appear only much later in biographies and memoirs. The Brown memoirs, for example, provide an authoritative glimpse into an aborted attempt to lift the ban on blacks in the priesthood nearly a decade before that change was announced as a revelation in 1978. According to the book, Brown came close in the late 1960s to winning approval for such a change among his colleagues in the church's First Presidency and the Council of the Twelve. Brown also had proposed about that time that aging leaders like himself be retired to emeritus status rather than hold lifetime offices. But when that policy was instituted, also in 1978, it was applied only to the church posts below the Council of the Twelve Apostles, a body whose senior members traditionally move up to the post of president and prophet. Brown, who was 92 when he died, was named to the Council of the Twelve in 1953 by President David O. McKay. He later became a part of the First Presidency — a counselor to McKay — from 1961 to January 1970, when McKay died at age 96. The decision-making procedure, Brown explained, generally worked like this: "An idea is submitted to the First Presidency and Twelve, thrashed out, discussed and rediscussed until it seems right. Then, kneeling together in a circle in the temple, they seek divine guidance." See MEMOIRS on Page A2

Stallings starts work on waste site measure

States News Service

WASHINGTON — Reps. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, and Bill Richardson, D-N.M., met on Thursday to discuss the delayed opening of the WIPP nuclear waste storage facility in Carlsbad, New Mexico. "Our goal is to get the WIPP facility open in a timely and safe manner," said Cary Jones, Stallings' legislative director. Representatives from Idaho, Colorado, and New Mexico have been invited to an open meeting next week to plan the preliminary legislation needed to speed the opening of the WIPP site, Jones said. Congress must pass a land bill which would designate the WIPP site as government property. A WIPP land bill was introduced in the last session, but never was voted on by the House and Senate. The WIPP site is designed to receive nuclear waste from defense production facilities across the nation, including stored waste from Idaho National Engineering Laboratory near Idaho Falls and Colorado's Rocky Flats Weapons Plant. There have been no new shipments of radioactive waste from the Rocky Flats plant since Gov. Cecil Andrus' ban last October, but INEL's storage problem is still grave, Jones

Ohio, DOE reach agreement governing nuclear plant cleanup

CINCINNATI (AP) — A historic agreement announced Friday gives Ohio power to regulate the Energy Department's cleanup of a uranium processing plant that has pumped 300,000 pounds of radioactive waste into the environment. Ohio Attorney General Anthony Celebrezze Jr. and Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said the decree, negotiated by federal and state attorneys, gives the state a court-enforceable order to pressure the department to clean up the plant at an estimated cost of $1 billion. The accord covers the Peed Materials Production Center in Eurnald, which state officials blame for contamination of air and water at the 1,600-acre site 18 miles north of Cincinnati. The plant enriches uranium for nuclear power plants and for the government's nuclear research efforts. "Jim Alexander, spokesman for the Energy Department's Oak Ridge, Tenn., operations, which include Eurnald, said the agreement is evidence of intent to clean up the plant. He said it was not intended as an admission of wrongdoing. Joe Lo, Grove, the DOE manager at Oak Ridge, said this week the government will have spent $355 million by the end of fiscal 1989 on cleanup and safety at Eurnald. The plant sits above the Great Miami River aquifer, a water source for 2 million people. The Energy Department has admitted that the plant emitted radioactive uranium dust into the atmosphere over three decades. stored above ground — some 220,000 drums in all. "The drums are in very poor condition," Jones said. "The lids are rusted, the boxes are breached."

A critical issue now facing the lawmakers is whether their bill should permit WIPP to receive low quantities of nuclear waste before the site has met Environmental Protection Agency standards. EPA standards apply to the transportation, storage, and disposal of waste. Since the permanent disposal site is the first of its kind, new disposal regulations must be created. Last year's bill would have allowed the plant to fill 3 percent of its storage space before EPA standards have been met. But while Stallings would like to see permitted storage levels increased, Richardson and Colorado Rep. David Skaggs oppose any waste shipments to the WIPP site until it has passed EPA regulations. "That's a major hurdle that's going to have to be overcome," Jones said. "DOE said you need to have some waste to experiment with to determine what the standards should be. We agreed with that in the last session." The Energy Department must pass its own standards before the WIPP site can open. DOE must complete a safety report and forward a management plan for the experimental site. "The bottom line is that (DOE) is not going to open the facility until it can be opened safely," said DOE Information Officer Dave Jackson in Albuquerque.

UN rebukes U.S., relocates to hear Arafat

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — In a harsh rebuke to its host country, the General Assembly on Friday voted to move a meeting to Geneva so it could hear an address by PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat, who was denied a visa to enter the United States. The assembly voted 154-2 to hold the session in Geneva on Dec. 13-15. The United States and Israel were the only nations voting against the measure. Britain abstained. It has said the United States should allow Arafat to speak but opposed the harsh criticism of the United States in the U.N. resolution. The unprecedented shift to Geneva was ordered because the United States rejected U.N. appeals to reconsider and admit Arafat, who it accuses of being an accessory to terrorism. Arafat sought to address the 159-nation world body here this week during its annual debate on Palestine.

Atlantis carries spy satellite aloft on secret military mission

Los Angeles Times

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The space shuttle Atlantis blasted off Friday on a secret voyage toward the deep black of space.

The 27th flight of the shuttle carried a classified Department of Defense cargo, presumed to be a $300 million satellite built to peer down on military activity in the Soviet Union and its allies.

It was the third "black," or secret, military shuttle mission since the reusable manned orbiter began flying in 1981 and the second successful launch since the Challenger explosion in January 1986.

The liftoff came at 4:30 a.m. MST, when fierce high-altitude winds abated just before the window for launching was to close. It took place against a pale blue sky under scattered puffy clouds. Although few details of the flight's progress were released...

Edward F. Sullivan, NASA manager describing the launch and early minutes of the mission as "great."

The actual launching time was not announced until nine minutes before liftoff. Secrecy was imposed to thwart Soviet efforts to track Atlantis' launch path and guess its mission, the Air Force said.

We have a consistent policy for protecting these missions that are sensitive to national security, said Lt. Col. Joe Purka, an Air Force spokesman. Our objective is to ensure that any potential adversary has some doubt as to what the payload is, and what its purpose is.

The exact launch trajectory and flight path were not announced Friday and will remain secret for the duration of the flight. Running commentary, cockpit chatter and regular briefings about the mission were provided for all civilian space shots — will not be released.

Four hours and three minutes into the flight, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration reported that "all systems of the orbiter are performing satisfactorily" and said the mission was "go for orbit operations."

No further updates were expected until the landing time at California's Edwards Air Force Base is announced 24 hours before touchdown. The landing is expected to come Monday or Tuesday.

It was clear from the direction of the launch, however, that Atlantis was headed toward a "high inclination" orbit that will allow its satellite cargo to fly over about 80 percent of the Soviet Union.

Nine seconds after launch, Atlantis executed a dramatic and uncertain roll to carry it toward an orbit that will run between 37 degrees north and south latitude.

Iran airliner had 40 seconds to act

MONTREAL (AP) — An Iranian airliner only had 40 seconds to react to a warning before a U.S. warship shot it down on July 3, killing all 290 people aboard, a U.S. aviation agency report was quoted as saying on Friday.

The report prepared by the International Civil Aviation Organization also confirms the U.S. claim that several warnings were given to the A-300 Airbus before it was shot down in the Persian Gulf by the USS Vincennes, Canadian Press said.

The report also says, however, that only a warning from another American ship in the area, the USS Sides, was coded specifically for Iran Air Flight 655, CP said.

That warning came 40 seconds before the jet was destroyed by surface-to-air missiles, CP quoted the report as saying.

A warning coded for the civilian aircraft "could have been immediately recognizable to the flight crew but was given only in the final challenge," the report said, according to CP. Other warnings were sent on general military and civilian emergency radio frequencies.

Cmdr. Dave Thomas, a Defense Department spokesman in Washington, said the Pentagon had not received the report and would have no comment.

Contra backers say war in progress

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Six Contra supporters accused of attacking Nicaragua urged a judge Friday to dismiss their case on the grounds the United States has been waging a de facto war against the Sandinistas.

They asked U.S. District Judge Norman C. Roettger to throw out an indictment accusing them of violating the U.S. Neutrality Act by recruiting, mercenaries and launching operations against the Sandinista government in Nicaragua from U.S. soil in 1985. — This is a holier-than-thou thing," said defendant Mario Calero, brother of top Contra leader Adolfo Calero.

There has not been a violation of the Neutrality Act. The executive branch was funding and directing the war. Adolfo Calero testified Friday that the rebels continued to receive U.S. aid.

Wyoming inmates let hostages go

RAWLINS, Wyo. (AP) — Two female hostages were released, unharmed Friday by two inmates who took them hostage and demanded to meet with reporters over conditions at the overcrowded Wyoming State Penitentiary.

Abdula Amin, 37, and Don Calkins, 25, "gave up without so much as a bad word," said Warden Duane Shillinger after the inmates' 5:49 p.m. MST surrender. They apologized for what they did and they are not even certain why they did it.

The prisoners initially sought a news conference to air their grievances, but surrendered without incident almost 11 hours after taking the women captive.

Mr. Amin said at one point, "We don't know why we did it. It got started and we couldn't stop it," Shillinger said. The two inmates were taken to the Carbon County jail pending the filing of charges against them.

The two inmates were wielding knives fashioned from a scissors blade and a razor blade when they took inmate John Barshon, Grace and Betty Lewis hostage shortly after 7 a.m., during sick call in the prison's maximum-security unit.

The inmates, both serving sentences for sexual assault convictions, bound themselves to the women on tape and held them captive in a common room.

My mouth is very dry. We've been through 5 very emotional day," Shillinger said after meeting with the women. "I'm not ashamed to say that when I saw those women walk out the door I cried."

Prison officials spoke with the inmates by telephone but Shillinger said any demands beyond food would not be granted unless the women were released.

and the president says, "I feel to say this is the will of the Lord. That becomes a revelation. It is usually not thought necessary to publish or proclaim it as such, but this is the way it happens."

Most Mormons are unaware of such a complex procedure, said Mormon historian Michael Quinn in an interview. Or, if they are aware of it, they are uncomfortable with the nation in light of the appearance of unanimity and divine inspiration when decisions are announced.

"There can be intense disagreements," said Quinn, who formerly taught at Brigham Young University and is currently on a fellowship at the Huntington Library in San Marino, Calif.

For people who study organizational behavior, this is nothing new, but for Mormons the idea of conditions of power is an uncomfortable one," Quinn said. Quinn wrote a biography of J. Reuben Clark, who along with Brown was a counselor to McKay.

In an afterword to the memoirs, published by Signature Books in Salt Lake City, Firmage detailed an aborted attempt by Brown in the late 1940s to admit black members to the priesthood — a level of church service important for dedicated young male Mormons. Brown never believed this policy had the slightest doctrinal justification, Firmage said.

As described by Firmage, it was a battle of wills between Brown, a part of the three-man First Presidency, and Harold B. Lee, who was the dominant senior voice on the Council of the Twelve and who felt the ban was doctrinally based.

Brown was then the senior adviser to the ailing President McKay. Lee was dominant on the council because of the advanced age of Chairman Joseph Fielding Smith, who at age 93 would succeed McKay as head of the church. Upon Smith's death in 1972, Lee became church president but he died the next year and was succeeded by Spencer W. Kimball.

Brown got a proposal to permit full priesthood for blacks approved by the council, but it was during Lee's absence. When Lee came back, he opposed the proposal and persuaded other council members to back his own statement reaffirming the ban as doctrine.

Brown also said in his memoirs that when a new apostle was named to the Council of the Twelve the typical procedure was for the church president to ask members of the council to submit names for his consideration, but that the decision rested with the president.

Maintaining that the "genius of Mormonism is cooperative action," Brown endorsed the notion for the highest level. "I believe that the First Presidency should not make major decisions without submitting them to and being approved by the majority of the Twelve. I have seen this tested a number of times and am convinced that it is the best policy."

owned generating plants in Nevada, Valmy I and Valmy II, both 500-megawatt generators.

Part of the contract drew the sharpest criticism from both Swisher and Bistine. It states that if Idaho Power does not need electricity from Valmy I, Sierra Pacific can have the electricity for the cost of operating the plant.

Since Idaho Power has little need for the plant until 1992, the people of Idaho are subsidizing the electrical users of Tahoe, Nev., to the extent of several million dollars per year, Bistine wrote. He called the agreement "a most improvident contract, accepted by Idaho Power."

Swisher called the contract ruling "the most serious part of it from a regulator point of view."

It formalizes a contract between

Idaho Power and Sierra Pacific that allows the Nevada utility to run that plant at the expense of Idaho ratepayers, Swisher said.

"I'm shocked at that. The effect of the order is that contract goes ahead and runs. That means that when the Nevada utility runs the plant and wears it out, it doesn't pay one dime to Idaho Power. We've got a problem but we can't do much about it."

Today's weather December's skies blurred by clouds, fog

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding: Today and Sunday variable high cloudiness. Patchy fog and morning fog. Highs 35 to 40. Lows mid to upper teens. East winds 5 to 10 mph.

Camas Prairie and Wood River Valley: Today and Sunday variable high cloudiness. Patchy fog and morning fog. Highs 35 to 40. Lows mid to upper teens. East winds 5 to 10 mph.

Northern Utah and Nevada: Utah — Fair to partly cloudy through Sunday except for areas of haze and dense nighttime and morning fog in the northern valleys. Lows mostly in the teens and 20s. Highs mostly from the upper 20s to lower 40s north and in the 40s and 50s south.

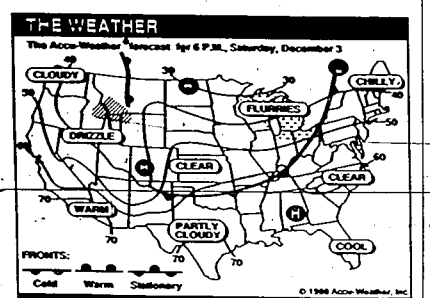

Nevada — High cloudiness spreading east through today. Fair tonight. Mostly sunny Sunday. Highs from the upper 30s and low 40s east to the lower 50s west. Lows, locally near 10 above north and mostly in the teens to lower 20s elsewhere.

Summary: The National Weather Service says middle and high cloudiness was reported in the northern part of the Gem State Friday afternoon.

Fair skies prevailed over most of the remainder of Idaho with some high clouds being reported. Fog lingered in some valleys before clearing. Afternoon temperatures were mostly in the 20s and 30s and winds were light. The lowest temperature reported in the state was 16 degrees below zero at Stanley.

The warmest temperature in the state was Friday at 46 degrees at Hagerman and Lewiston.

The extended outlook for Southern Idaho shows Partly cloudy with areas of valley fog through the period. Chance of snow flurries east portion about Tuesday. Highs in the 30s Monday and 35 to 45 Tuesday and Wednesday. Lows 15 to 25.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 83 degrees at Escalante and Ocean-side, Calif. The lowest was 9 degrees below zero at Gunnison, Colo.

has extra money that isn't being used, that money is transferred into a temporary investment account where it will earn interest.

A third set of accounts, "depreciation funds," holds a little more than $1 million.

Fry said those accounts also were opened during the revenue bond refinancing, to ensure the hospital would not lag behind competitors because money was not available to update and upgrade equipment. Money from the depreciation fund can be spent only with the Hospital Board's approval, Fry said.

County commissioners have asked county Prosecutor K. Elton Baxter to study the hospital's finances and issue an opinion. Hempleman said he could not as speculate about the legality until the commissioners have received Baxter's opinion.

"And it will take a little time to get everything worked out," he said.

Meanwhile, the commissioners have reviewed an earlier Baxter opinion on the hospital's recent $30,000 purchase of an apartment complex east of the hospital. The purchase was legal and in order, they said.

Hospital officials have asked that the commissioners rescind their earlier instructions — issued in a letter this week — not to proceed with negotiations for a second parcel of land. Hospital officials wanted to move up a Dec. 9 closing for the deal, Felton said.

Felton said the commissioners refused. She said the commissioners have not prohibited the deal, but wanted to give people a chance to comment at the Hospital Board's next meeting, scheduled for Monday evening.

Official: Free trade pact may be delayed

BOISE (AP) — Idahoans should not be surprised if the historic U.S.-Canada free trade accord scheduled to go into effect at the beginning of next year is delayed, a Canadian official says.

Richard Scabari, an economic affairs adviser to the Canadian consul general in Seattle, said Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's Progressive Conservative Party has promised to reintroduce the agreement in the House of Commons the week of Dec. 12.

But because it must go through the House and the Canadian Senate, the Jan. 1 date for the pact to take effect could be delayed days or weeks, Scabari said.

Scabari was a guest Thursday at Boise State University's Canadian Studies program.

"I can't predict (the date) will be met at this time," he said. "The government hopes it will be approved by Jan. 1. However, that may not be possible."

The Liberal and New Democratic opposition parties made the free trade agreement a major issue in the campaign Mulroney ultimately won. How fast it clears both chambers of the Canadian equivalent of Congress is yet to be seen.

Canadians sought the agreement because of fears that the U.S. Congress would pass a protectionist trade bill to reduce the United States' massive trade deficit.

The United States and Canada are the world's two largest trading partners, with imports and exports over the border expected to reach $150 billion this year. Idaho's trade of goods and services with Canada totaled $179.4 million in 1986.

Included in Idaho products north-bound that year were $11.8 million in phosphate, $8.3 million in computers and $6.6 million in vegetables and their byproducts. Canada, in turn, exported $16.4 million in softwood lumber to Idaho, along with $16.4 million in fertilizer and $7.4 million in newsprint.

Slaying causes employees to quit

BOISE (AP) — A Boise convenience store clerk has died hours after she was shot in the head at work, prompting fellow employees to quit their jobs.

Cheryl L. Hamrah, 29, died about 1 p.m. Thursday at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center of a gunshot wound to the head, Ada County Coroner Erwan Sonnenburg said. She was shot about 15 hours earlier at the Fairview Avenue and Maple Grove Road store in west Boise.

Mrs. Hamrah, who was married and a member of the Army National Guard, had worked at the store for about two weeks, said Pat Yover, a friend who had visited her at the Circle K minutes before the shooting.

"I didn't notice anything unusual in there," Yover said Thursday. "She seemed fine. Something would have triggered me if something was wrong." Yover said he remembers a couple stood at the counter as he paid for some items. The man was tall and "scrappy," he said, and accompanied by a woman.

Working on a tip, Boise police are looking for two men who were seen with a dark Pontiac or Chevrolet car parked across Maple Grove between 9:30 and 10 p.m. Wednesday. Sgt. Steve Pyle said.

Store employee Pat Brubaker, 23, said a carton of cigarettes was missing, but no cash had been taken. He also reported the slaying had prompted about 6 people to quit their jobs at Circle K. Yover is determined to find out what happened that night. "We want to get to the bottom of this," he said. "I don't think she knew what hit her. It was a cold-blooded thing. She would not provoke something. She was a nice, sweet girl."

Hearing results in 1st-degree murder charges

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — An Illinois man and woman have been bound over on first-degree murder charges in the shotgun slaying of her brother-in-law in the Idaho wilderness.

District Magistrate Michael Griffin has found sufficient evidence in a two-day preliminary hearing Wednesday and Thursday to support the charges against Dennis Orr, 45, and Karen Tucker, 25, both of Plano, Ill.

The pair will appear in court Dec. 8 to enter pleas.

A tape recording of Orr's alleged confession to killing Karen Tucker's brother-in-law, Joseph Tucker, 27, was played Thursday.

Tucker's decomposed body was found by hunters Sept. 16 on Shotgun Creek road near Lolo Pass. He had died from shotgun wounds to the head and chest.

Authorities were led to Orr after finding a receipt in Tucker's pants that read "Billy B. Tucker," Tucker, Mrs. Tucker's husband, is serving time in the Illinois State Penitentiary for murder.

The tape was made by Orr Sept. 30, and stored at his mother's house in Illinois with instructions that it be played by his attorney if he disappeared or was killed.

In the recording, Orr said he and Karen Tucker fell in love, but she was "physically" and "sexually" abused by Joseph Tucker.

Orr described himself as a troubled Vietnam veteran and a former member of the Outlaw motorcycle gang, Joseph Tucker, Orr said, was a major drug dealer in Illinois. Defense attorneys attempted to exclude the press as the recording was played, claiming it would be prejudicial to a jury. But Griffin said he didn't think it would be a problem getting a jury outside the area in which the story would be circulated.

Orr and Joseph and Karen Tucker traveled to Idaho to escape a drug charge Tucker faced, Orr said. He said Tucker forced his sister-in-law to have sex with a gun to her head in a Montana motel.

"When I saw that gun, man, I was scared to death," Orr said. "So I figured it was just a matter of time."

Police aid Lewiston club with background checks

LEWISTON (AP) — For the past six months, the Valley Boys and Girls Club in Lewiston has been unable to check the backgrounds of prospective volunteers for criminal records.

But the club and the Lewiston police have found a solution, said Robert Liming, assistant club director.

Previously, Valley Boys and Girls had done background checks through the Lewiston Police Department, which has access to state and national crime computers. That program ended when the Lewiston city attorney said it could violate the federal Privacy Act.

Although the crime computers cannot be used for that purpose, Lewiston Police Chief Kent Resor can make background checks by personally contacting other law enforcement agencies, Liming said.

"Agency to agency, it's no problem. It's just when we get into this computer system," Resor said.

Under the new system, volunteer candidates would be asked to sign a release form allowing a background check and listing places where they had lived. Resor would send letters to law enforcement officials in those areas asking for information about any criminal records.

UI chooses private food service

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — If all goes as planned, University of Idaho students could receive their first meals from the Marriott Corp. next month.

Members of the Idaho Board of Education Thursday approved a recommendation by Idaho President Richard Gibb to privatize the school's food service operation.

I approved going private with two caveats that we keep the food service employees on the UI payroll and that we appoint a much larger oversight committee of at least 12 students," Gibb said.

The school has cooked food for the students since before the turn of the century.

Marriott has agreed to invest $225,000 on campus improving the service and to pay the university 8 percent of all net sales.

An advisory committee, members of the Resident Hall Association and his executive assistant, Terry Armstrong, recommended the transfer of the $2.5 million operation, Gibb said.

FBI: Aryan Nations active in Nebraska

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The Aryan Nations, a violent neo-Nazi organization based in northwest Idaho, has supporters in western Nebraska, an FBI agent says.

Special Agent Richard Heft said the Aryan Nations is only one of a number of right-wing extremist groups that the FBI is investigating in Nebraska and other Midwestern states.

Heft said no Aryan Nation chapters have been formed in Nebraska but people have given money and other forms of aid to the white-supremacist group.

The Aryan Nations maintains a compound near Hayden Lake, Idaho. Last year a federal grand jury indicted 10 members for conspiring to overthrow the U.S. government.

Heft presented details about the Aryan Nations and other radical groups at the first Nebraska Military Support to Civil Defense Conference.

The goal of the two-day conference, which ended Friday, was to give local government and civil defense officials an idea on what type of military action and support they can expect from the U.S. military in the event of disaster or national emergency.

Heft, who works out of the FBI office in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, spent about eight years in the New York area monitoring domestic and international terrorism. He also was a key investigator on the Rulo cult case in southeast Nebraska.

In 1985 authorities found two bodies, a large cache of weapons and neo-Nazi literature linking the religious cult's leader, Michael Ryan, with the Posse Comitatus, a militant tax protest group. Heft said members of the Posse Comitatus are still active in Nebraska.

Heft showed slides detailing the FBI's investigation into the crimes committed at the Rulo farm.

"I can assure you the community of Rulo, Nebraska, will never be the same because of the incidents down there," he said. Other right-wing extremist groups include the Aryan Youth Movement, an offshoot of the Aryan Nations Church, and the Covenant, Sword and the Arm of the Lord based in the South.

Dies of exposure Youth gave coat, boots to survivor

ST. ANTHONY (AP) — Terry "Butch" Thompson Jr. gave his boots and his coat to his companion and sent him to find help for a group of youths stranded in the desert northeast of St. Anthony.

Alone and inadequately dressed for Wednesday night's sub-zero weather, the 20-year-old St. Anthony man built a fire and waited for help to arrive. Sometime during the night, he fell asleep, and the fire went out.

When morning and rescuers arrived Thursday morning, Thompson was unconscious. He had no pulse and his body temperature was 79 degrees. Four hours later, he was pronounced dead at Madison Memorial Hospital in Rexburg. His four companions survived.

"I knew he was dead when we found him," his father, Fremont County Sheriff Terry Thompson, said Thursday night. Thompson was in the party that found his son at about 8:15 a.m., under a tree in the Sand Creek area northeast of St. Anthony.

An hour later, searchers found the three teen-agers who had spent the night in Thompson's four-wheeled drive-vehicle about two miles west of the main Sand Creek road.

They were found because Cory Hansen, 19, son of Gary Hansen of St. Anthony, walked for nearly five hours before reaching help about 7:30 a.m. and called Sheriff Thompson.

When the two separated, Thompson told Hansen he was cold and would seek shelter under a tree, a sheriff's office news release said.

"If it hadn't been for that boy (Hansen) none of them would have made it," said Sue Sommer, the mother of one of the teen-agers, as she waited at Madison Memorial Hospital for word on Thompson and her daughter Tina.

Miss Sommer, 14, St. Anthony, was treated and released Wednesday afternoon. The others, Michelle Watkins, 15, foster daughter of Gary and Claudia Virgin of St. Anthony, and Rob Howell, 18, son of Robert Howell of Parker, were listed in good condition Friday and were scheduled to be discharged.

Fort Hall Reservation could get bingo, lotto

FORT HALL (AP) — A new gaming ordinance approved by the Fort Hall Business Council means legalized bingo, lotto and instant-winner, pull-tab games could be on their way to the Fort Hall Indian Reservation — but not soon.

The ordinance passed by the council now must be approved by the Bureau of Indian Affairs, published reports said.

Tribal Chairman Marvin Osborne told the newspaper that enactment of the ordinance is the first step toward "orderly, responsible gaming activity" at the reservation.

"The tribes are not planning to start bingo or lotteries at this point," Osborne said. "What we are doing is preparing for the day when we decide it's feasible to get into the gaming business."

Although the tribes were approached in October by representatives of a national lottery company, they have decided to delay decisions until council members have studied gaming operations in other states.

Tribal attorney Jennifer Wolfley is attending a national tribal gaming conference this week to learn more about the new federal act governing tribes.

The Indian Gaming Regulatory Act establishes a three-member national Indian gaming commission to oversee Class II gambling operations on reservations. Class II includes bingo, instant winner cards, lotto and certain card games.

Because of passage of the recent state lottery amendment, Osborne said the tribes are not required to seek approval from the state.

Neumayer to be interim director of Corrections

BOISE (AP) — George Neumayer, deputy director of the state Department of Transportation, has been appointed to what he hopes will be the short-term position of interim director of the Idaho Department of Corrections.

The state Board of Correction voted unanimously Friday to name Neumayer, 62, to temporarily succeed Corrections director Al Murphy, who has held the job for 37 years.

The board accepted Murphy's resignation Nov. 18, two weeks after he told board members he wanted to step down. He will remain on paid administrative leave until Jan. 20.

Murphy, 40, had come under fire from Gov. Cecil Andrus and others for implementing a pre-release program for selected prison inmates at two Boise halfway houses last summer without prior Correction Board approval.

Andrus said he recommended that Murphy be fired or asked to resign from the $57,532-a-year job, and that the Correction Board appoint Neumayer interim director of the 552-employee, $20 million-a-year agency.

"I hope to offer some help and, perhaps, add stability to the department in this interim period," Neumayer said in a press release Friday.

"My priorities will be to listen carefully to a variety of people to try to understand the existing problems."

Besides his current job with the Department of Transportation, the 27-year state employee has been interim director of the Idaho Horse Racing Commission and the department of Administration and Agriculture.

Review supports Yellowstone fire policy

LAKEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — The "let it burn" policy, sharply criticized after fires ravaged Yellowstone National Park, should stand with minor changes to improve communication, federal officials said Friday.

Teams of forest experts who reviewed four of the major fires that covered about half of Yellowstone's 2.2 million acres last summer also concluded that management decisions were sound, for the most part, said Jack Neckels, deputy director of the Rocky Mountain region of the National Park Service.

The findings of the teams, which looked at the fires from the pre-season indicators through containment, were released Friday during a news conference at the National Park Service headquarters.

"The teams found that no wholesale changes in the fire policy are required," said Gary Gargill, regional forester of the U.S. Forest Service.

"They found that the policy and the implemented plans need to be strengthened for some specific acceptable limits on such things as weather ... and the effects of drought," he said.

The "let it burn" policy, which has been adopted by both the Forest Service and BPS, allows natural fires to burn out by themselves unless they threaten property or humans.

It drew wide criticism during the fires at Yellowstone by many who believed the blazes should have been fought more aggressively.

The review team reports will be forwarded to a policy-making team formed by the secretaries of Interior and Agriculture.

That panel is scheduled to give recommendations on the "let it burn" policy to Interior Secretary Donald Hodel as of Dec. 15. At that point, another review process, including public comment, will be conducted.

Among the weaknesses identified by the reviews was a lack of uniform definitions for terms, and a need for improved coordination of fire management directions among the various forests and parks with similar boundaries.

Neckels said the latter problem was identified a year ago as a priority for improving, but was not resolved before the summer.

"Where you have boundaries like that, clearly you can't have that much of a difference," Neckels said. "You have to have better coordination. We knew that, but we didn't get a chance to fix it prior to last season."

Another problem to be addressed is establishing specific limits on factors such as weather, the number of fires to allow within a park, and the effects of droughts, he said.

Bauer will lead inaugural delegation

BOISE (AP) — The Republican national committee for Idaho, Dick Bauer of American Falls, will serve as chairman of the Idaho delegation to the inauguration of George Bush.

Bauer will coordinate activities of the Idaho delegates and ticket arrangements for Idahoans interested in attending the Jan. 20 inaugural, when Bush becomes the 41st president.

Bauer said since Idaho gave nearly 63 percent of its vote to Bush, he expects there will be a lot of Idahoans who want to attend the inauguration.

Idaho is too great to litter.
Recycle, Idaho!

LITTER BECOMES A LEARNING TOOL

Crush that can! Stack those newspapers! Hoard that glass! Recycle is the word all over the state of Idaho. Students are gathering recyclable garbage as part of the statewide "Idaho is too Great to Litter" school recycling program."

The campaign was introduced by Governor Cecil Andrus to promote student awareness of recycling as a solution for Idaho's litter problem as they learn about natural resources. An added benefit to the program is the money participating schools earn from recycling, with the prizes offered to the students and schools collecting the most recyclable materials is the icing on the cake.

Science instructor Mike Ridgeway is chairing the drive at Robert Stuart Junior High School, which is just one of the many schools participating in this year's program. Students will collect newspapers, household glass bottles and jars, aluminum cans and many more items. The school campaign runs until December 10th and the Governor award ceremony will be December 20th in Boise. This year the Governor will be awarding Apple computers (sponsored by Coke Bottlers of Idaho) to the Elementary schools who place first. Eight of those computers will be given away, along with playground equipment sponsored by Shopko. Students will compete for McDonald's drinks, Big Macs, and Idaho is too Great to Litter T-Shirts sponsored by Papsi. Students prizes are awarded on a points system. For each 50 points accumulated, they receive another prize incentive.

Secondary schools will compete for audio visual equipment. This equipment will be awarded to the top 8 schools in the state. These prizes have been sponsored by participating recycling centers, Fibers International and Independent Paper Stock. Secondary students also have an opportunity to win a 1989 Justy Subaru. Every time a student collects 50 points worth of recyclables, they will have an opportunity to Win a NEW CAR!

GET INVOLVED!
If you have material you wish to donate to your local school, please contact your local American Recycling center or local school.

People can also take materials to American Recycling themselves and have the school or individual student credited.

Bush backs tough trade talk stance

WASHINGTON (AP) — The country's top trade official said Friday that he has the blessing of President-elect George Bush for a tough U.S. stance on an "agricultural disarmament" of price supports at an upcoming round of major international bargaining.

U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter said he had met Thursday with Bush and President Reagan at the White House "and they have assured us of their support of our objectives and for our strategy in Montreal."

The Montreal talks, beginning Monday, will draw nearly 100 nations for a mid-term review of the four-year Uruguay Round of trade negotiations.

Yeutter spoke at the National Press Club just hours before leaving for Montreal, where trade ministers will conduct the most wide-ranging negotiations ever held to liberalize and regulate international commerce.

No proposals for luncheon summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's national security adviser said Friday that U.S. officials will advance no new proposals and don't expect any surprises from Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev at the superpower meeting next week on Governors Island, N.Y.

Briefing reporters on the visit that Reagan, Gorbachev and President-elect George Bush will have on Wednesday, Lt. Gen. Colin D. Powell said Reagan looks forward to "one final session with the general secretary to note the stable relationship that exists now, the improving relationship, and allow the vice president to continue to build on that relationship."

He said the U.S. contingent is ready for, but he doesn't expect, any repetition of Gorbachev's pattern of surprise at the hurried summit in Reykjavik, Iceland, two years ago. It was there that the Soviet leader caught the Americans off guard with sweeping proposals that included the virtual elimination of strategic nuclear arsenals.

Eastern unions want sale blocked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unions at Eastern Airlines asked a federal judge Friday to block the sale of the airline's Northeast shuttle system to real estate mogul Donald Trump on grounds the deal violates labor laws.

Lawyers for Eastern said that isn't so, and told the U.S. District Court the sale is no different from other recent actions Eastern has taken to slim down.

Eastern and Trump announced in mid-October a $965 million agreement by which Trump would buy the shuttle, which provides hourly flights between New York and Washington and New York and Boston, and change it to the Trump Shuttle.

The sale still awaits approval from the Transportation Department.

5 Cubans flown back to homeland

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Five men who fled Cuba in the 1980 "Freedom Flotilla," only to be imprisoned for crimes, were returned to their homeland Friday in the first deportations under a pact that set off fiery prison riots last year.

The five handcuffed Cubans, watched by two guards each, took off from Birmingham Municipal Airport in a U.S. Marshal's Service Boeing 727 that held about 50 people for the 90-minute flight to an airport near Havana.

The plane landed without incident, turned over the detainees to Cuban authorities and returned to the United States, said Joe Krovinsky, a Justice Department spokesman in Washington. "Everything went smoothly," he said.

The Cubans, the first of 2,500 the government wants to deport, had been kept at the federal prison at Talladega, 60 miles east of Birmingham, pending a final ruling on deportation.

Los Angeles smog among worst

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Southern Californians just suffered through one of the worst smog seasons of the decade, air quality officials said.

Ozone levels in the South Coast Air Basin surpassed federal standards on 172 of the 184 days of this past smog season, which runs from May 1 to Oct. 31. That number was exceeded only twice in this decade.

Ozone levels were above federal standards on 180 days in 1981 and 173 days in 1984.

The smog season is the time of year when Southern California's temperatures are the hottest and its air the most stagnant, factors that contribute strongly in the creation of air pollution.

Small quake shakes Utah border

GARDEN CITY, Utah (AP) — A small earthquake, an aftershock of a Nov. 19 temblor, rumbled in the mountains near the Utah-Idaho border Friday.

The quake, with a magnitude of 3.2 on the Richter scale, occurred at 11:46 a.m. MST, according to Sue Nava, senior staff seismologist at the University of Utah Seismograph Stations.

It was an aftershock of a magnitude 4.8 quake that caused minor damage to buildings in nearby Ogden and Logan two weeks ago, she said. There were no reports of damage or injuries or of anyone feeling Friday's quake.

The epicenter was beneath the Bear River Range, about three miles west of Bear Lake.

An aftershock of Friday's quake, registering 2.9 on the Richter scale, was recorded at 12:45 p.m. MST.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver L. North's remaining challenges to Iran-Contra charges were rejected by a judge Friday, but the major counts against him could still be scuttled by White House refusal to release classified documents.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell rejected defense motions to dismiss charges that the former National Security Council staff member obstructed congressional investigations of reports he gave covert military assistance to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

The decisions were released as Gesell took the bench for a third straight day of closed hearings on North's objections to censoring 385 government documents that independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh wants to use as evidence against him. The secret hearings were scheduled to resume Tuesday.

Gesell's rulings disposed of the last of North's pre-trial motions. His decisions have upheld 14 of the 16 charges originally brought against North by Walsh.

But the Reagan administration's decision not to allow North to use any of the 40,000 pages of secret documents sought as defense evidence poses a serious obstacle to going forward with the major charges against the former presidential aide.

About 90 percent of the classified material pertains to the broad conspiracy charge that North and his three co-defendants illegally diverted more than $14 million in profits from U.S. arms sales to Iran to the Contras.

The rest of the material involves 12 other counts, particularly charges that North lied to Congress and destroyed NSC documents to obstruct an inquiry of the Iran-Contra affair.

Gesell has said repeatedly that North should be given wide latitude to introduce secret documents relevant to defending the conspiracy charge and a related count of theft of government property.

The judge has threatened to dismiss those charges if secret documents he determines are necessary to North's defense are not made available by the government for use at a public trial.

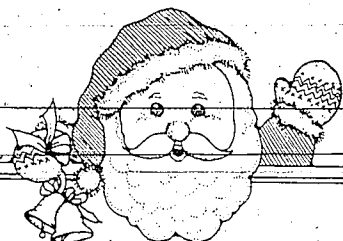

On Thursday, President Reagan ruled out pardoning North, but said "duty requires" him to withhold secret documents from the trial.

Reagan denied the decision was a back-door maneuver to let North off the hook on the major charges. "The things we're blocking are the things that duty requires we block," he said.

Walsh contends that North does not need to disclose any secrets to get a fair trial of the charges. He has asked Gesell to bar any release by lawyers for the retired Marine lieutenant colonel.

Gesell gave North until Dec. 19 to specify any other secrets he considers important for his defense, including information that might be elicited from witnesses on the stand.

Bush, Dukakis have post-election talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush and Michael Dukakis, formerly bitter rivals, met cordially Friday though Dukakis resorted to campaign rhetoric in warning the chickens are coming home to roost, from Republican economic policies.

Bush, who defeated the Democratic governor of Massachusetts for the presidency on Nov. 8, said the post-election visit was "in the finest tradition of American politics."

The presidential elect who inaugurated the meeting said, "I want to express my appreciation to Governor Dukakis for coming our way. We had good discussion of the issues that are facing the country in a spirit of good will."

Dukakis also called it a good discussion. He offered no judgment on Bush's early transition moves, saying, "The real test will come when the new administration is fully formed and begins to move forward with its priorities."

The vice president-elect, Dan Quayle, often the object of Dukakis' scorn during the campaign, greeted him inside the vice president's residence, along with James Baker III, Bush's campaign manager and his choice for secretary of state. Both left before Bush's 35-minute meeting with Dukakis.

After the visit, the two stepped out without topics into the brisk afternoon for a brief word with reporters.

Dukakis, who earlier Friday made a series of calls on the Democratic leaders of Congress, said he and Bush talked about the deficit and some of the issues the Democrats campaigned on — health care, housing, education and the environment.

He said he didn't bring up the negative tenor of the campaign. "We had a good, tough campaign. That's behind us," Dukakis said. "The question now is how do we build a good country."

The governor joked that he was hesitant to offer Bush advice on the deficit given his own problems with his state's budget. But then he said in earnest that the country faces a very formidable challenge. We've had eight years of endless borrowing and spending and the chickens are coming home to roost.

He said, "The vice president is anxious to learn and listen and reach out and that's a good thing. Bush left him with a seasonal wish: 'God bless you and have a great Christmas.'"

Earlier, Bush met at the White House with a former GOP rival, Pat Robertson, and spoke of "the wonderful way" that friendships survive campaign battles.

Robertson, who returned last week from a recent trip to Africa, gave Bush an upbeat report on racial progress in the white-ruled country and said Bush told him he visited Jesse Jackson and other black American leaders would visit South Africa and explore "freedom" — "happening" because there have been some significant changes over the last 10 years."

On another subject, as Bush's presidential transition efforts moved closer to the Jan. 20 inauguration, the vice president expressed chagrin at reporters' questions about why he made no additions to his Cabinet this week.

"There's no holiday. We're way ahead of schedule," he said, complaining about "early, premature, needless speculation."

Dukakis gets warm Washington welcome

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michael Dukakis visited Washington Friday for the first time since losing the presidential election, sadly conceding, "I wish I was here in another capacity."

Still, he received warm welcomes from Democratic Party leaders on Capitol Hill during a morning full of meetings before going to the home of the man who defeated him, President-elect George Bush, for a private visit.

"When it's all over, we don't throw hams at each other; we sit down with each other," Dukakis said before his session with Bush.

Afterward, Dukakis had few kind personal words for his bitter election rival but promised to cooperate with the new administration, provided Bush works to cut the federal deficit without turning his back on health care, day care, education and other issues that the Democrat focused on during his campaign.

"Do I look bitter?" Dukakis asked in response to a question after a 35-minute meeting with Bush. "I feel pretty good actually."

Dukakis said the meeting did not include any talk about the tone of the campaign, which Dukakis criticized at the time. "That's over now and our job is to meet some very formidable problems," he said. But he managed to work in a swipe at Reagan administration deficit spending and warned Bush against such policies.

Asked if he now considered himself a friend of the president-elect, Dukakis at first laughed and then said: "I'm anxious to cooperate and play a constructive role."

Bush, in brief comments to reporters, said he looked forward to working with Dukakis and other governors.

"To you and Kitty and that wonderful family, God bless you and have a great Christmas," Bush told the departing Dukakis.

Reagan accuses Soviets of arms violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan told Congress on Friday that the Soviet Union is still violating arms control agreements with the United States, but he stopped short of charging Moscow with a "material breach" of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty.

Reagan again complained about a radar installation at Krasnoyarsk, Siberia, that he has demanded be dismantled. He contends it violates the 1972 treaty's ban on trying to set up a nationwide anti-missile defense.

"We cannot conclude new strategic arms control agreements while this violation remains uncorrected," the president said in his report.

He also informed Congress he was reserving the right to take "appropriate and proportionate responses."

Other U.S. officials said the United States might retaliate by reversing a decision to retire two or three Trident nuclear submarines.

But Reagan did not call the Krasnoyarsk facility a "material breach" of the treaty. He said only that such a declaration remained a possibility.

Such a declaration might have been a first step toward U.S. abrogation of the treaty, which many experts consider a landmark in superpower arms control efforts.

However, the president cautioned that in order to broaden the basis for cooperation between our two countries, the Soviets must correct their violations and noncompliance activities with respect to the ABM treaty and other arms control agreements. The report accused the Soviets of violations or probable violations of nuclear test ban agreements as well as accords on chemical and biological weapons.

The U.S. has determined that the Soviet Union maintains an active offensive biological warfare program and capability in violation of the 1972 Biological and Toxic Weapons Convention, it said.

On the other hand, Reagan said, the Soviets had resolved "our satisfaction" U.S. questions about their compliance with the treaty.

FBI sting smashes drug ring

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The key to an FBI sting operation that led to drug trafficking charges against more than 200 people was a savvy undercover agent who knew the customs of Sicilian organized crime, authorities said Friday.

He was schooled in the rules of the Sicilian-Italian underworld — who to talk to and how to show respect to the elders. He was able to gain the confidence of the Sicilian Mafia, said J. Ronnie Webb, a supervisory agent in the FBI's Buffalo office.

Authorities announced Thursday that they had smashed a major heroin and cocaine ring by charging more than 200 people in the United States and Italy, including Sicilian Mafia figures and associates of the Gambino crime family in New York. Officials said Friday that 60 people had been arrested in the United States and 24 in Italy, and the others were still being sought.

Code-named BUSCO for Buffalo-Sicilian Connection, the FBI operation got its start in 1983 during the arrest of Andrea Aiello of Buffalo on charges of trying to import some 50 pounds of heroin. At the time, it was called the largest heroin seizure ever in the United States.

In the course of the Aiello investigation, the undercover agent learned of the desire by Sicilian crime figures to ship heroin to the United States through Buffalo.

Despite the attention the Aiello case drew, the Buffalo agent remained undercover and was able to cultivate underworld contacts for several years.

Ohio sees season's first flu outbreak

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal health officials have reported the first confirmed influenza cases of the 1988-89 flu season, in Ohio, Arizona, Hawaii, Michigan and Texas.

The flu season in the United States occurs during the cold-weather months, and the first official outbreak of the 1988-89 season was reported in Ohio, the national Centers for Disease Control said Thursday.

On Nov. 14, an outbreak of flu-like illness was reported to Ohio health officials by two schools in the same district. Type B flu virus — one of three major influenza groups — was found in tests on a teacher and four students.

The CDC also reported six sporadic cases of type B flu in children in Texas, beginning with a child in Houston on Oct. 11.

Authorities fear serial killings

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — At least one of the five women whose skeletons have been found along highways in southeastern Massachusetts since July may have been involved with drugs or prostitution in this port city, authorities said Friday.

Authorities suspect a serial killer may be responsible because the skeletal remains were found in a six to eight-mile radius, in dense woods within 25 feet of Interstate 95 and Route 140, and all are believed to be women.

Another body was discovered Friday in Dennis, about 30 miles east of New Bedford on Cape Cod, but Bristol County officials said they had no idea if it could be connected to the five bodies found in the New Bedford area.

The woman whose skeleton was found Tuesday had been reported missing in the summer and had been dead at least three months, Bristol County District Attorney Randall A. Pina said. He said her name was being withheld until relatives could be notified.

Three of the missing women were reported last seen in the Wild

Square area, known by police as a center for local drug trading and prostitution in this fishing port of about 18,000 people about 30 miles south of Boston.

Some of the missing people that possibly are going to be identified were in the community at some point, in the drug community or prostitution community, Pina said at a news conference.

Investigators suspended a search of the highway area Friday.

5 Soviet 'criminals' hijack plane to Israel

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Five armed Soviet hijackers surrendered, and freed a hostage flight crew Friday, ending a two-day drama that began when they seized a busload of children in southern Russia and demanded a plane out of the country.

The four men and a woman, who said they wanted to flee the Soviet Union, stepped onto the tarmac at Orzhonikidze in southern Russia and demanded a plane to Israel.

They were five simple criminals with a lot of money who wanted to flee the Soviet Union, said Lt. Gen. Dan Shamon, army chief of staff.

The hijackers, armed with three pistols and an automatic rifle, demanded a huge sum of money and an airplane for a flight out of the country in exchange for the hostages. The bus was taken to the local airport, but there was not a big enough plane there, so the hijackers took off from neighboring Miquelovskiy Vody, Tass said.

Israel radio said the hijackers included two Russians, two Armenians and a resident of the Ossetian Soviet republic near Turkey. Army officials said they knew while the plane was still in the air that there were no Soviet Jews aboard.

The hijacking came at a sensitive time in Soviet-Israeli relations, which gradually have been improving since Moscow severed them during the 1967 Middle East war.

The hijackers surrendered at 6:45 p.m. (11:15 a.m. EST), about 35 minutes after the Aeroflot Ilyushin-76 touched down, guided by Israeli air force jets. U.S. officials were on the runway, as was the head of a Soviet delegation temporarily based in Israel, officials said.

The surrender and release of the eight-member hostage crew ended a day of frantic diplomatic contacts involving Israel, the Soviet Union and the United States.

The dramatic bid to flee the Soviet Union began Thursday in the Soviet city of Orzhonikidze in the southern part of the Russian republic.

A group of armed bandits hijacked a bus with 30 school-children and a teacher and demanded a plane to deliver them abroad, Albert Vlasov, head of the Soviet news agency Novosti, told a news conference in Moscow.

The official news agency Tass said the hijackers, armed with three pistols and an automatic rifle, demanded a huge sum of money and an airplane for a flight out of the country in exchange for the hostages. The bus was taken to the local airport, but there was not a big enough plane there, so the hijackers took off from neighboring Miquelovskiy Vody, Tass said.

Israel radio said the hijackers included two Russians, two Armenians and a resident of the Ossetian Soviet republic near Turkey. Army officials said they knew while the plane was still in the air that there were no Soviet Jews aboard.

Vlasov said the hijackers said they wanted to go either to Israel, South Africa or Pakistan. Israeli officials said Iraq and Egypt was also on the list.

Flight engineer Yermolov said that during the flight the hijackers played cards and kept an eye on the crew, but did not threaten them.

Shortly after the plane landed, army officials said, one hijacker came out and was met by two negotiators.

Three crew members then emerged and joined the discussions, which ended with the hijacker giving up a handgun, the officials said. The rest of the eight-member crew then came out and the drama ended.

An unidentified crew member told Israel army radio that seconds before the surrender, "one of the hijackers asked, 'Is this Israel or Syria?'"

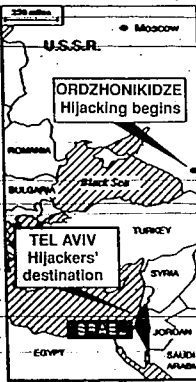

Carlucci warns NATO: Troop cuts possible

BRUSSELS, Belgium — American forces in Europe may have to be reduced if the next U.S. defense budget ships below a proposed 2 percent increase, Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci warned Friday.

Carlucci told a meeting of defense ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization that the budget increase was essential to maintain the stateside structure needed to support overseas deployment of U.S. troops.

"You need this kind of real growth to meet strategic goals," he said.

NATO officials are worried that Congress or the Bush administration might scale back the number of American armed forces based in Europe, currently about 326,000. In NATO's view, any U.S. reduction could send the wrong signal to Moscow and adversely affect both NATO's defense and arms control talks with the Soviet Union.

Tel Aviv's Ben-Gurion Airport carrying bags filled with ransoms worth $3.3 million. The Soviet government paid the money as ransom for releasing the youngsters and a teacher.

Once off the plane, the hijackers dumped the cash on the ground after being asked to show they were not carrying explosives. Soldiers then helped the hijackers scoop up the cash, and the five held tightly to the

Argentine soldiers mutiny

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Troops moved into position to try to quell an insurrection at a military base outside the capital Friday, and news reported gunfire and mortar explosions inside the base.

The official Telem news agency reported at least one soldier wounded in the gunfire at the Campo de Mayo base. Telem and the private Diario and Noticias news agency reported the fighting between the loyal troops and the rebels.

A rebel leader said at least 400 troops backed the mutiny, the fourth reported incident of military unrest in two days. Another rebel officer said the move aimed at ousting the army chief, not President Alfonsín.

GEN. JOSE CARIDI
Army chief

Army commanders nationwide affirmed their loyalty to the civilian government following the mutiny.

"Tanks, armored personnel carriers and heavy trucks rumbled toward this elegant city of 10 million" with the firm intention to repress the rebels," said Gen. Luis Cáceres, of the 1st armored cavalry.

Earlier Friday, the army chief, Lt. Gen. Jose Dante Caridi, met with rebel leader Col. Mohamed Ali Seineldin in an attempt to resolve the impasse without bloodshed.

"This is not a coup against the government, but a fight to restore military honor to the army and review the trials that punish the just and promote the guilty," Seineldin told reporters inside the base.

Soviets battle Baku unrest

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet troops broke up a mob of up to 1,500 people that had gathered in the Azerbaijan capital of Baku to attack Armenians, official media reported Friday.

The Soviet government formed a commission to feed and clothe thousands of refugees from the republics of Armenia and Azerbaijan who had crowded into tents, dormitories and relatives' apartments because of ethnic violence that has killed at least 60 people since February.

Baku radio, in a report monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp. in London, said soldiers had prevented a mob from attacking Armenian residents of Baku on Thursday night.

"In the area of the railway station, a mob of up to 1,500 people attempted to beat up citizens of Armenian nationality. Because of the measures adopted, the troops stopped the attempts at hoodlums activities," the radio said.

Soldiers fired warning shots in five instances overnight, and they confiscated nine guns and two knives.

A curfew remained in effect in Baku, Yerevan and other major cities in the two republics.

At least 80,000 people have crossed the border to their ethnic homelands, Soviet media reported Thursday. The Defense Ministry newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda reported Friday that another 10,000 people had fled across the border the previous day.

In a report from northern Armenia, the newspaper Socialist Industry said a resort designed for 500 children and 150 adults was jammed with 700 people who had fled Azerbaijan.

In tents intended for two people, there are six beds, the newspaper said. "In corridors, halls and entrance, utterly tired people sit silently, immersed in themselves." "Dozens of people who we listened to here said the same thing: there, where they lived, local authorities warned that they could not answer for their safety, and proposed that they urgently leave the republic."

There was no talk about compensation for their homes, cattle, furniture or belongings, the paper said.

The Tass news agency said that Boris Yeltsin, deputy premier, would head a Soviet government commission to extend aid to the refugees. Scherbina also headed a special commission 2½ years ago to deal with the Chernobyl nuclear power accident. Refugees will be provided with food, housing, medical and other social and consumer services, and given jobs," Tass said.

Armenia and Azerbaijan previously had set up such commissions on a local level. Official Armenian media have said that the government is confiscating empty homes to house the refugees and is providing food for them.

The two southern Soviet republics are locked in a bitter dispute over control of the predominantly Armenian region of Nagorno-Karabakh in Azerbaijan. Residents began agitating in February for annexation by Armenia, but the idea has been rejected both by Azerbaijan and the central government in Moscow.

Gas effects still plague Indians

BHOPAL, India (AP) — "People who stumbled gasping and choking out of a deadly cloud of gas that leaked from the Union Carbide pesticide plant four years ago are still dying."

The official death toll from the world's worst industrial disaster has reached 3,229. About 20,000 survivors still suffer from the effects of the Dec. 3, 1984, gas leak, and officials say at least one more dies every day.

"I have spent more time in hospitals than at home in the last four years," said 15-year-old Sunil Kumar, who lost his parents and five brothers and sisters to the gas.

He and his younger brother and sister live on the $1,750 they received from the government in compensation for the deaths of the rest of their family.

Other gas sufferers have been less fortunate. A 60-year-old woman who identifies herself only as Hinkim said she has been unable to get financial assistance because she could not provide an address.

She said she survives by selling empty medicine bottles she finds on a trash dump near Jawaharlal Nehru Hospital. At night she sleeps on the hospital grounds.

"The government tells me that if I had a home, I would have gotten some money as assistance," she said. "But I need money to build a home."

Sunil, Hinkim and other gas victims complain of shortness of breath and eye problems.

"The worst effect has been on the eyes and lungs, although there are numerous cases of total physical impairment," said a Bhopal doctor, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The government has issued strict instructions to doctors and officials to make note of their findings public while India's $3 billion damage suit against Union Carbide is pending.

The suit, filed in 1986, has bogged down in the courts. As is common in Indian legal cases, no quick end is in sight, although the government tried to step up the pressure a year ago by filing murder charges against former Union Carbide President Warren Anderson and other company officials.

Anderson and the others have not responded to summonses.

A year ago, the government of Madhya Pradesh, the state that includes Bhopal, put the gas leak death toll at 2,831. It has recorded an additional 479 deaths in the last 12 months.

"We are registering more than one death per day because of the effects of the gas," said Gas Relief Commissioner S. Sathyan, whose department records complaints and helps gas victims.

Most of the victims lived in the shantytowns that popped up outside Bhopal after Union Carbide and other industries moved to the city.

An estimated 250,000 people inhabit the shantytowns and nearby slums.

China-Soviet thaw begins to have effect

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev told China's foreign minister Friday he sees a basis for beginning the "concluding stage" of settling their dispute over Cambodia, and called for direct Chinese-Vietnamese talks on the issue.

Gorbachev also discussed a likely 1989 Soviet-Chinese summit meeting in the session with Foreign Minister Qian Qichen. It was the first visit of such a high-ranking Chinese official to the Soviet Union in 3½ years.

"From the Soviet viewpoint there was a basis for bringing the solution of the problem into the concluding stage," Gorbachev told Qian, according to the official Soviet news agency Tass.

"As far as we know, a similar constructive spirit marks the stance of the Vietnamese comrades and the leadership of the People's Republic of Kampuchea (Cambodia)," Gorbachev said. "A dialogue between China and Vietnam could play an important role."

Gorbachev has made several overtures to China, including an effort to settle the dispute over Cambodia, the most divisive issue that remains between the countries.

He urged they continue to improve their relations.

South Africa frees editor

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government released a black newspaper editor Friday after two years of detention without charge, but it banned him from journalistic or anti-government activity.

Also on Friday, the government reportedly freed the head of a banned black educational group, and an anti-apartheid newspaper was back in print after a four-week ban.

The newspaper editor, Zwelakhe Sisulu, was the best known of South Africa's thousands of emergency detainees and there had been an international campaign urging his release. He is editor of New Nation, an outspoken anti-apartheid newspaper, and had been a Nieman Fellow at Harvard.

"Amongst other things, I can't go back to the paper," were the only words Sisulu uttered as newsmen swarmed around him outside Johannesburg Prison in the black township of Diepkloof.

Later, he appeared briefly at a packed news conference, but was advised to leave by his attorney because restrictions bar him from talking to the news media.

West Germany reassures NATO

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Planned drastic cuts in West Germany's large military maneuvers won't affect the country's battle readiness, officials at a meeting of NATO defense ministers said Friday.

West Germany will abandon more than half its maneuvers involving more than 2,000 troops, but increase smaller exercises to allay environmental and public complaints, said West German Defense Minister Rupert Scholz. The switch also would be more cost-effective, he said.

NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner said Scholz stressed the impending reliance on smaller exercises "was meant to increase the effectiveness" of West German forces.

What's what

Manners of the fly

Etiquettes differ. Take the house fly. Its taste buds being in its feet, it has to walk all over its food before it eats same. In fly, that's etiquette.

Q. I thought rice was the most widely cultivated grain in the world.

A. Once. Now it's wheat.

When in the club house at your golf course, don't ask for a pencil with an eraser on it. Bad form. That little pencil you get with your scorecard doesn't have an eraser, you'll note.

If typical, you change your sleeping position every seven minutes.

LOST DOG

If you ever lose your dog, you might try this: Rub some throwaways such as old socks against your skin, then drop them in widening circles around your neighborhood. A trainer of cynics says a lost dog circles to pick up a known scent. When the dog gets to a scent sock, it will circle to the next nearest, then the next, until it's on familiar ground.

Originally, a tombay was a boy; not a girl who acted like a boy. A boy who probably wished lived across town. Rude. Naive.

No, sir, the aggie researchers still don't understand why a frightened hen lays unusually thick-shelled eggs.

TO QUIT SMOKING

Consider the cigarette smoker trying to quit. One medic says it helps to drink a glass of water with a teaspoonful of baking soda in it every morning. To slow release of nicotine from bloodstream into body wastes, thus to ease the craving.

What fishermen of ancient Greece liked least were gnats. To avoid same, they slept under canopies of fish nets. That word "canopy," in fact, comes from the Greek "Konops" meaning "gnat."

Another reason to store eggs small end down, says a cook, is that centers the yolk, so makes it easy to separate from the white, when necessary.

In a French town, one pharmacy is open at any time. Those closed post the whereabouts of the open one.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Emotional flare-ups may cloud the morning but will soon fade. Sensuality and a need to express those feelings will push people together today. Focus on communication, short trips and sharing.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You want two of everything. This security system, unique to your sign, is at cross purposes. Focus on one thing at a time for results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): A relationship is shaky. Retreat is not the answer. A positive direct approach will bring a surprise improvement.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You take pleasure in surmounting difficulties. Relax with your mate and friends. Stop the frenzy of activity that is draining your energy.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): The annoyances of daily living keep you asking if there is any justice in life. Don't shy away from the thrilling, fun things in life.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Social adventure can bring a rewarding experience, but spend only what you can afford. Sort out scheduling before you meet with companions.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Focus on practical issues. It is against your nature to ignore the basics. Finish tasks before getting started on free-time activities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You can't give 100 percent when you are running at high speed. Your partner knows what you need before you ask. Stick to your budget.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You reflect on intimate questions. A companion stimulates your creativity. A shifty journey is romantic and exciting.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You find the answer to a nagging problem. Your potential makes dreams come true. Improve your home environment. Establishing order.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Self-imposed bonds and limitations are disappearing. Your positive attitude will return when there is something to look forward to.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Adapt to circumstances. Realize that human affairs are not always stable. Your financial picture broadens through creativity.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): It is easy to meet people. Don't go overboard entertaining. Plans with your family materialize. Cooperation is always appreciated.

Hugh Hefner just isn't up for the party life anymore

NEW YORK (AP) — Playboy magazine founder Hugh Hefner just isn't that type of guy anymore.

While 800 guests revelled at a 35th anniversary party for the magazine, the man Time magazine once called "the prophet of pop hedonism" stayed home.

"I've sworn my oats, and I'm very pleased where I am at," Hefner, 62, said Thursday night in explaining his decision to stay at the Playboy Mansion in Los Angeles rather than attend the party thrown by his daughter, Christie Hefner, who recently took over the company.

While the party at a Manhattan restaurant celebrated the ground-breaking magazine's past, Ms. Hefner, 36, made it clear that she was concentrating on the company's future.

"It's not efficient to be a one-man company anymore," she said, adding that Playboy had just sold into an "upscale magazine" and was considering starting an R-rated cable entertainment service.

EUDORA WELTY Honored in her lifetime

Eudora Welty receives rare honor while alive
JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Writer Eudora Welty has been selected to join a small group of famous Americans who have had their portraits hung in the National Portrait Gallery while still alive, gallery officials say.

HUGH HEFNER Skips company party

"The Mississippi writer was notified this week that her likeness will only in the Washington, D.C., gallery.

"Happy, Eudora Welty is very much alive. In cases like this, when the individual is of towering importance — we acquire a portrait in their lifetime," said Marc Fischer, chief historian for the gallery.

Welty, 79, was selected by unanimous vote of the National Portrait Gallery Commission, a bureau of the Smithsonian Institution.
"I stand in awe," Welty said Thursday. "The whole idea of putting people in the National Portrait Gallery for the reason of their work gives me a feeling I belong, a feeling of continuity. It's a great honor."

Welty's portrait will join those of George Washington, Pocahontas, Mark Twain, Abraham Lincoln, Charles Lindbergh, Albert Einstein, Henry James and Charlie Chaplin.

won't run out of things to fight about. Vitriolic talk show host Morton Downey Jr. says he wants to marry a Boston restaurant owner 22 years younger than he is, but his intended isn't sure she'll say yes.

Downey, 55, who said he broke up with his third wife five months ago, told The Boston Herald he has his heart set on proposing to Lori Lilly, 33, who owns the waterfront seafood restaurant, The S.

"I hope she'll say yes. I just love her. It's more serious with me than it is with her," he said.

Ms. Lilly told the newspaper she met Downey 10 weeks ago and was surprised by the romance.

"He's terrific, beautiful, sensitive and caring," she told the paper. "But I don't know if he's asked me to marry him. I can't answer that. It's been kind of a whirlwind kind of thing."

Gannett chief receives journalism award

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Arizona State University has named Allen H. Newbath, chairman of Gannett Co. Inc., recipient of this year's Walter Cronkite Award for Excellence in Journalism and Telecommunication.

Newbath received the award during ceremonies Thursday. "The media in the United States must be sensitive to the world's different political systems and philosophies, and traditions and mores," Newbath said in accepting the award.

"We must report international news from all perspectives, not just ours," Newbath said. "If we do not, we run the risk of perpetuating worldwide the same image of arrogance some of us suffer from here in the United States."

"The best years in the media business are still ahead — if we make the changes and choices that will best serve the particular audience we are after — our readers, viewers and advertisers," Newbath predicted.

Walter Mondale serves on board of directors

BRANCHBURG, N.J. (AP) — Former Vice President Walter Mondale has been named to the board of directors of Metcalf & Eddy Companies Inc., a New Jersey environmental engineering firm.

Mondale, a partner in a Minneapolis law firm, served as vice president under Jimmy Carter and was the unsuccessful Democratic candidate for

Santa Claus doesn't get any respect

By The Associated Press

Pity poor Santa. He was arrested in Tennessee, sacked in California and 25 red-suited Kris Kringle's scarged the wits out of children with their chorus of ho-ho-hos. And there are still 22 shopping days left till Christmas.

Parents in Seattle weren't too happy with Santa, either, after a TV program urged children to hold a phone near the set for tone-activated dialing of calls to the North Pole — at $2 for the first minute and 30 cents thereafter.

In Nashville, Tenn., a misunderstanding over a bill for $380 led to the arrests of two stretch limousines full of Santas who were taking toys to children at hospitals and agencies for the poor.

"We had Santa suits on, no pockets, no money, no checks, no ID," said Vernon Frank Minow, who organized the Santa task force. Minow said he arranged to rent out him Wednesday and the AAA Music City Limousine Service donated a second but demanded $360 for the cars before all the deliveries were made.

"In my 17 years as a policeman, this is the first time I've arrested Santa Claus," said burglary detector Gary Mallory. Minow threatened Thursday to sue "all those involved trying to stop the good works for the children."

Limousine company spokesman Mark Fisher declined comment.

Newly graduated Santas in Chicago got some final lessons Wednesday — including that more isn't always merrier.

The 25 red-suited, black-hooped Kris Kringles invaded a downtown hotel lobby expecting cheers and laughter. But the sight of so many of them at once brought out tears, and children ran to their mothers.

"I really love kids, but I didn't realize they'd be so scared," said Chris Davis, 19, of San Diego. "I ranched out to shake one's hand and she started crying."

Veteran Santa Leonard Utecht, 68, with 48 years behind the beard, used the incident to teach the new dogs old tricks.

"Don't reach down to the little ones from above or they'll panic," he said. "If you stoop to their level, you can win them over."

Utecht's basic rules for Santas: Know all the reindeer's names. Don't make any specific promises. And gently hold the child's hand — it's soothing and keeps the little dickens from grabbing the beard.

He might have added one: Don't make it too easy to call the North Pole.

Only 10 minutes into a half-hour TV program called "Here Comes Santa," angry parents began calling KTTZ-TV in Seattle on Thursday.

No doors on jail

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A $34 million contract to build a new five-story jail lacks one major item — doors.

Omitted from the contract was $1.5 million for 195 electronic sliding glass cell doors and other furnishings, city officials said Thursday.

"It sounds to me like we're buying a car without the two front wheels. I thought when we voted to go ahead with the jail that it would come complete with doors," said City Councilman Matt Carlucci.

Michael Berg, sheriff's director of jails, said the cell doors would be purchased out of a $2 million fund.

Thief nets half million in jewels

NEW YORK (AP) — A lending jewelry dealer said he lost half a million dollars in jewels when his briefcase was stolen in the lobby of a Manhattan hotel, police said.

Gianmaria Buccellati, 60, of Milan, Italy, was waiting to check into the Peninsula Hotel on Thursday evening when the robbery occurred, said Sgt. Raymond O'Donnell, a police spokesman.

Buccellati, owner of a store bearing his name on New York's fashionable Fifth Avenue, set his briefcase down and someone switched it for a similar case and took his O'Donnell said.

The briefcase contained necklaces, bracelets, rings and other items that apparently belonged to Buccellati's wife, police said. The jeweler told police that they they were worth about $500,000.

The Buccellati family is a top name in the jewelry industry, police said.

In Blue Cube, crack team uses aging computers to control satellites

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (AP) — Step into the mysterious, windowless Blue Cube, where 2,000 engineers and scientists working furiously with old, slow computers will soon have a new task — tracking and controlling the $500 million spy satellite to be deployed by Atlantis.

Giant screens, rows of terminals and bulky machines fill a warehouse-size room in the military's ultra-secret satellite tracking center, receiving millions of bits of coded information each second on the location and operation of hundreds of U.S., NATO and foreign satellites.

The Cube can order one of the more than 50 U.S. military satellites to snap photos of suspected troop movements and drop off the film in a parachute package to an Air Force plane for a midair pickup. It can adjust a satellite's orbit, solar energy panels, cameras or other gear.

Special attention is focused now on the new "bird" to be placed in orbit today by the shuttle, a radar satellite, code-named Lacrosse that is designed to spy on the Soviet Union and guide the stealth bomber.

The Cube, officially called the Consolidated Space Test Center, is run by the Air Force in the heart of Silicon Valley. Next door are the NASA Ames Research Center and Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. Inc.

Neither journalists nor others without top security clearance are allowed past the high fences and armed guards surrounding the pale blue building. However, interviews with Air Force and NASA officials with access to the Cube, all of whom asked not to be identified, reveal a beehive of activity as a crack team of physicists, electrical and mechanical engineers and computer scientists cope with a crush of signals to and from satellites. The adrenalin flows, you work 18 hours a day, but you don't feel tired at all," said one veteran of several satellite launches. "You suffer battle fatigue when it's over, but during the mission people get really hyped. This is their time and they're going to make it work. When you run into obstacles because the system is clumsy, just sheer energy makes it happen."

The Cube has been in operation since 1959, virtually from the start of the space program. Despite the expenditure of several hundred million dollars to upgrade the computer and data distribution systems over the past six years, most of the computers in the Cube are two or three generations old. They are reliable workhorses, built by International Business Machines Corp. and others in the 1970s and early 1980s, but are much slower, less efficient and more expensive to run than newer models at many companies in Silicon Valley.

Instead of state of the art, the Cube's tubes and software programs remain antiquated, one systems expert said, because of government procurement policies.

"NASA and the military are stuck in this Catch-22," the systems expert said. "It's hard to sell missions and get money."

Friday meeting described as 'cordial'

Farmers, Hawkins owners to share information

By MARTA CLEVELAND
Times-News writer

List of liens — B2

TWIN FALLS — An agreement to share information and include bean growers in the inventory process was the result of a meeting between Hawkins Co. Ltd. owners and farmer representatives Friday.

Both sides expressed desire to avoid a legal battle over the company's assets, but promises were not exchanged on that subject.

"I think the meeting went very well," said Robert Bliss, one of the owners of the company, which closed its doors last week when directors discovered undisclosed bookkeeping discrepancies. "We feel very positive about the results."

The steering committee of the Hawkins

Bean Growers Association — which was formed Thursday night — and its attorney, Harry DeHoon, met all morning and into the afternoon with two Hawkins owners, Bliss and William Nungester, and their attorneys, Jim Tucker and Evan Robertson.

Lack of an accurate financial picture seems to be forestalling more concrete arrangements.

Bliss said the state Bureau of Warehouse Control has not yet released, even to the growers, the results of the physical inventory it completed Thursday. That inventory is part of an audit that should reveal whether the amount of beans in the warehouse matches farmers' records of what they delivered.

"We haven't received any of the information yet. That is part of the problem," Bliss said.

"The owners are willing to share whatever information they have with the farmers as soon as they get it, he said.

"The meeting was cordial. We feel like we have good cooperation and that they aren't trying to hide anything," said grower committee chairman Bob Corrie.

The committee conveyed to the Hawkins people that the growers were supportive and were interested in dealing with the problem in a calm and logical manner, he said.

"On the other hand," Corrie continued, "the committee emphasized the importance of maximizing returns to the growers."

The growers' committee and the Hawkins owners agreed:

- To jointly seek the results of the Bureau of Warehouse Control's physical inventory of the beans in storage, and to discuss the bureau's methodology.

- To allow the steering committee to inspect the inventory in the warehouse, and to participate in the Warehouse Bureau's share-out.

- The company will continue its personal interviews with growers to reconcile their records with the company's. Those interviews are about half finished and are expected to conclude in three to four weeks.

- The company will continue to compile accurate financial information and share it with the growers' committee.

Hawkins Co. primary lender, First Security Bank, was not represented at the meeting.

The growers' committee will seek a meeting with state Warehouse Control officials next week to get the inventory results, Corrie said.

The steering committee also elected other officers Friday. Roger Vincent is vice chairman, John Draney is secretary, and Joe Holm is treasurer. Beans-grain agent Tahl was named an adviser to the committee. The group will hold its meetings at the Farmers National Bank in Buhl. A meeting of the entire association membership will not be called until there is concrete information to report, Corrie said.

Bliss said he had no indication there was a problem at the warehouse before the ramp-up.

November rain slowed construction

Unemployment rate up

The Times-News and Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — Record-breaking November rain and snow that may signal the end of Idaho's drought helped push the area's unemployment rate upward, the Department of Employment reported Friday.

The seasonally adjusted jobless rate for the combined area of Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding counties edged up two tenths of a percentage to 5.4 percent in November, said Lon McDonald, the department's labor analyst in Twin Falls.

"November in south-central Idaho is a transitional month," McDonald said. Employment began to decrease during the month, as agricultural employment slowed and wet weather halted some construction, he said.

"This November wet weather was a significant factor," he said.

More than 1,700 jobs — many of them agricultural — were lost between October and November, he said. The area's November jobless rate was half a percentage point above the 4.9 percent rate in November 1987.

Statewide, the November rate took a twentieth of a percent jump from October to a seasonally adjusted 4.7 percent. Nevertheless, the statewide rate remained below the 5-percent rate posted a year ago, to mark the 23rd straight month the rate has run below earlier levels.

The Department of Employment also dramatically reduced its projection for record-setting employment and labor force in October, but the preliminary November figures again pushed both key economic indicators back to record levels.

The continued strength on the employment side, along with the relative stability of the labor force at record or near-record levels since summer all but assured that for the first time

Republicans want vigorous committee

Hale will exit as chairman

By The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — Burley Rep. Ernest Hale, chairman of the House Education Committee, was asked by fellow Republicans Friday to step down to make room for more aggressive leadership of the committee.

Hale, starting his 19th year in the Legislature, agreed to relinquish the post. Usually committee chairmanships are granted on the basis of experience.

"We felt in leadership it was time to take the education committee and establish a Republican agenda — stir the water and make changes as far as education reform," said Bruce Newcomb of Burley, the new House majority caucus chairman.

"We decided to take the initiative, to put a little life into the committee," House Speaker Tom Boyd said.

In the Senate, Republican Larry Anderson, representing the Magic Valley-floral district, was named chairman of the Senate Health and Welfare Committee. Sen. Denton Harrington, R-Declo, had asked to head the Judiciary and Rules Committee instead of Health and Welfare this year, creating the chairmanship vacancy.

Republican Rep. Steve Antone of Rupert remains chairman of the influential Revenue and Taxation Committee, where most of the Legislature's tax battles are fought. He will be joined on the committee by Republican Rep. Celia Gould of Buhl.

Hale will remain on the House Education Committee, but as vice chairman. He has also been appointed to one of the four House seats on the Legislative Council, which Newcomb called a prestigious position. The council meets year-round to handle such duties as making appointments to interim committees.

"We asked Ernie to step down," Newcomb said. "In turn we asked him to serve on the Legislative Council. Being the gentleman he is, he agreed to do it for the good of the state of Idaho."

The former president of the Idaho Board of Education, Republican Rep. Janet Hay of Nampa, is the new chairman of the House Education Committee.

Federal nursing home guide finds fault with area facilities

By States News Service and The Times-News

WASHINGTON — A government consumer guide to nursing homes has given poor marks to the West Magic Care Center, the largest nursing home in Twin Falls.

In a report this week based on one-time inspections of nursing homes nationwide, several Magic Valley nursing homes fell below basic standards.

The West Magic Care Center was cited for its failure to provide care for bedsores, incontinence and daily personal hygiene on a survey conducted in December 1987.

Keith Holloway of the Western Health Care Corp., which leases the Twin Falls facility, said many of the problems found during the 1987 survey have since been corrected.

"We have a long way to go," Holloway said. "But the standard in rehabilitative nursing has been corrected."

The survey drew criticism from health-care specialists across the country because it was based only on conditions found during a single visit and did not gauge whether deficiencies were temporary or chronic.

The Magic Valley retirement home with the most listed deficiencies is the Mountain View Care Center in Kimberly, which failed to meet 10 of the 32 standards.

Drugs were administered without a doctor's prescription, rehabilitative care was not given, care for incontinent residents was not provided, and bedsores went untreated.

But Center Administrator John Johnson said that the problems found in the 1987 survey have since been corrected.

Drugs were issued without a doctor's written prescription at several other retirement homes in the area, including the local-government-owned 78-bed Minidoka Memorial Hospital in Rupert, the private 68-bed Burley Care Center, the 34-bed Cassia Memorial Hospital, and the private 40-bed Magic Valley Manor in Wendell.

At Minidoka Memorial and Magic Valley Manor, sedatives and physical restraints were used without a doctor's prescription, according to the report.

The private, 60-bed Twin Falls Care Center also failed to meet federal standards of treatment for incontinent residents. In addition, residents with urinary catheters did not receive proper care, and residents were not given privacy during treatment.

Other nursing homes which failed to meet standards of care for treatment of incontinence, skin care and personal hygiene include the private 76-bed Green Acres Care Center in Gooding, the private 68-bed Burley Care Center and the 34-bed Cassia Memorial Hospital, also in Burley.

Walker, Atkinson file for board at CSI; McMurrian withdraws

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two more people added their names and one person subtracted his from a voluminous list of candidates for two positions on the College of Southern Idaho board.

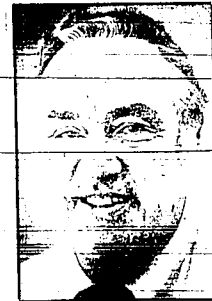

Grant Atkinson of Buhl beat the 4:30 p.m. filing deadline by a few minutes, and Lloyd-Walkers of Twin Falls filed earlier Friday, both for the position currently held by Bill Babcock.

When Donald McMurrian heard that Walker was running against him, he said he decided to withdraw from the race. He said he will formally withdraw his name Monday.

That brings to 12 the number of people seeking Babcock's and Bob Blasted's positions on the board. Blasted has decided not to run for re-election after serving 23 years on the board.

"I'm also dropping out of the Democratic party," said McMurrian, a party organizer who managed four Democratic legislative campaigns for this year's election.

He said he wanted to run for the office to spark interest in the election and promote his ideas of openness in government.

Churches suffer lawsuits

Knight-Ridder Service
PHILADELPHIA — Not long ago, churches and their clergy were protected from lawsuits by the lottiness of their spiritual mission and their status as charitable institutions.
 Increasingly, religious institutions are being sued for clergy misconduct — and they are losing millions.
 A public formerly awed by religious authority has begun to hold the church legally responsible for the actions of its representatives.

As the church is going to put a collar on a man's neck and a casket on his back, they had better know who he is and what he is," said James C. Brincefield, a lawyer from Alexandria, Va., who last month reached a financial settlement in a case against the Archdiocese of Washington on behalf of a youth who said he had been sexually abused by a Catholic priest.

In Louisiana, judgments estimated at more than $15 million have been awarded to victims of a priest convicted in 1985 of molestating at least 35 children. "Literally millions of dollars are being paid out and will be paid out to 35 to 40 people," said Jack Kelly, marketing vice president for Preferred Risk Insurance Co. of Des Moines, Iowa, one of a number of insurers involved in the case. "We paid out several million dollars."

 Though churches in the past routinely brushed the transgressions of wayward clergy under the rug, legal and public pressures are increasing, forcing them to confront the problem of clergy misconduct.
 As a result, churches are dispatching wayward clergy for treatment,

Seventh-Day Adventists launch fundraising drive

"On the Cutting Edge" is how Seventh-day Adventists are describing humanitarian work in their 80th Anniversary Appeal for assistance with world and community services.
 "We want Twin Falls, first of all to know how their gifts were used last year," explains Pastor Roger Martin, who heads the project this year.
 "We think it's important that you know how your gifts helped 13 million people around the world receive help in disease and disaster, with wells and water, in education and motivation," he says.

Properly identified solicitors can show Twin Falls how the $7.7 million received during 1986, the last audited statement, according to Martin, was aggressively fighting legal action and, when they lose, paying large settlements.

 "The claims of misconduct cross church boundaries — Roman and Orthodox Eastern Catholics, Episcopalians, Lutherans and evangelicals have been brought to court. A variety of people claim to be victims of clergy misconduct."

used in 1987. About 45 percent of that amount came from the public cans. Martin added:
 "Of the total, $3.4 million or 45 percent was used in Developing Nations for medical, educational, and community service projects. Church-operated schools, kindergarten through college, around the world received 17 percent.

Local community service projects, such as services provided from the Adventist Center on Grandview Drive got 14 percent. Another 10 percent was used for statewide community service projects.

Last year the Twin Falls Seventh-day Adventist Community Service Center donated over $300 hours; gave away 9,855 pieces of clothing; cash and food baskets amounted to $2,583; furniture and household materials $2,500; bedding $1,350.

"To say thank you for helping us over the last 80 years," Martin stated, "we will once more be giving out a leaf of home made bread."

Book celebrates marriage

NEW YORK (AP) — In an age when half the marriages fall apart, when commitments to that bond come hard and many delay it or shun it entirely, a Virginia theologian offers a paean to marriage's beauty.

The Rev. Edward Stone Gleason sees it as best to heterosexuals.

While he recognizes doesn't eliminate the sorrows and difficulties of life, he finds in marriage the balm that eases those hurts and gives a glow of wonder to all existence.
 "To be married means to be redeemed," he says. "To be married is to be loved only for who we are, not who we might wish to be or who we might seem to be."
 It is, he says, to be a "new creation."

In a book, "Redeeming Marriage," recently issued by Cowley Publications of Cambridge, Mass., Gleason extols marriage in often lyrical terms comparable to the biblical Song of Solomon.

"Night had become the time to feel close, in touch, arms and legs wrapped around the other, the only one," he writes. "The one who knows me and who I am and what I feel and even who I would be."

"Day means assuming a role, playing a part. ... At night, it was all real. ... The time just at dawn had a different kind of magic. ... Without her there would be no dawn, for there would be no reason to rise, to greet the day, even to have a day."

Gleason takes an unusual approach to his subject, interspersing descriptions of marriage and episodes from it with lines of the marriage ritual in the Episcopal Book of Common Prayer and Scripture passages.

A professor at the Episcopal Virginia Theological Seminary, he recognizes the strains of life, depicting various marriage breakdowns, causes behind them and also the restorative help of friends.

Relative of Lincoln offers uncanny insight into past

TWIN FALLS — Lincoln? No, Bruce Hanks, a distant relative of Nancy Hanks, Lincoln's honored mother, has the same rugged facial features and the identical height and weight as Lincoln. He even has the famous wart on the right cheek! He is the same age as Lincoln during the Civil War years.

Hanks has more than 20 years experience as a Baptist minister and his many years of Lincoln research have made him an authority in his field.

Mr. Hanks' program can be seen:
 • Sunday at 7 p.m. at the Bible Baptist Church;
 • Monday at 9:45 a.m. at Immanuel Lutheran School;
 • Tuesday at 9:45 a.m. at the Twin Falls Christian Academy;
 • Wednesday at 9:45 a.m. at Agape School.

Despite fires, Montana tourists multiply, spend

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Tourist spending in Montana during the prime summer months increased $27 million this year despite a series of wildfires that swept through Yellowstone National Park and several areas of the state, Montana's tourism promotion chief said Friday.

The summer increase represented a 13 percent growth in spending to about $390 million for July, August and September, according to John Wilson.

"To be honest, we are pleasantly surprised," he said. "The tourism industry continues to be a bright spot in the Montana economy."

He predicted travelers in Montana this year will have spent just over $1 billion by the end of 1988. That compares to about $905 million last year and $854 million in 1986.

"That's a phenomenal amount of new business," Wilson said. "While we expected an increase due to stepped-up promotion efforts, we anticipated the summer's fires and drought to have a greater negative impact on tourism levels."

This is the first time that state officials have had a definitive measure of the financial impact of tourism in Montana, he noted. A 4 percent accommodations tax passed by the 1987 Legislature went into effect on July 1 of last year, providing more than a full year of revenue by which to estimate travelers' spending.

The state collected $1.2 million in the July-September period this year compared with $1.7 million a year earlier. During its first year, the tax generated $4.5 million that was used for tourism promotion at the state and regional levels.

Wilson said the largest increase in tourism spending this summer was in northwestern Montana, where accommodation tax revenue jumped 22 percent.

The Great Falls area reported a 15 percent gain, and the Billings area 11 percent.

"The northwestern portion of the state had a banner year, but the closer you get to Yellowstone the smaller the increase is," Wilson said. In the region encompassing Bozeman and West Yellowstone, tax revenue increased only 1 percent.

The number of visitors to Yellowstone for the first nine months of this year was down 450,000, or 18 percent, from the year before, Wilson said. At the same time, travelers in Glacier increased 10 percent, and Libby Dam visits increased 31 percent.

That shift may reflect tourists changing their plans from Yellowstone to Glacier National Park because of the fires, he added.

He said he is not optimistic about Montana and Wyoming receiving the $3 million in federal funds that were requested earlier this year to mount an international campaign for restoring the charred image of Yellowstone.

Montana's summer tourism season survived the fires so well because of the extensive use of the "When Montana Sings" promotional campaign last spring and an improved exchange rate between the U.S. and Canadian dollars, Wilson said.

Looking ahead, he expects a good ski season as long as the state gets its share of good snow this winter.

Wilson said Big Sky, south of Bozeman, set a record for November and much of December. Big Mountain, Maverick and Snow Bowi ski areas is open.

He said the advent of higher airline ticket prices may dampen the skier traffic, although Montana remains a popular destination for those in such major markets as Seattle and Minneapolis.

Mine school thrives as mines reopen

MULLAN (AP) — Students at the nation's only hard-rock mining school have found more than just hope for a new profession in northern Idaho's Silver Valley.

Breaking rock recently in their "underground classroom" at the Atlas Mine near Mullan, they also found silver.

"Take a look at this. That's good ore," beamed Lovon Fassett Sr., president of Fassett International, a Wallace mine-building company.

He helped organize the course through North Idaho College.

"Mining companies have spent millions trying to find ore in this mine, and then these kids come along and do it," said Fassett, a handful of galena ore samples glistening in the light of his mine lamp.

The find was small, a few "stringers" of lead and silver ore peeking through an otherwise barren quartz vein just a short distance from the main tunnel. But the lesson for the 30 young men learning to mine was real: Ore can sneak up on you in the strangest places.

It was enough to pique the interest of the students, who told their instructor and shift boss, Al Wattula, that they wanted to skip lunch, stay underground and drill another round that day.

Instructors are miners like Wattula, who supervised construction of the No. 12 shaft at the Sunshine Mine before being laid off in 1982. They have an average of 25 years mining experience.

Bernie Knapp, North Idaho College vocational instructor and director of the new mining school, said more applicants were turned away than were accepted for the 30 openings in the class.

Applicants were given intelligence tests, then screened by a panel of mine supervisors from the Silver Valley.

"We want people that want to work. This isn't a welfare program," Knapp said. "It's three months of hard work, 40 hours a week, with no pay."

The first session of the three-month course began in early November; Knapp said he has obtained enough state vocational grant money to run the school for 18 months.

Wallace High School closed its mining class when the mining recession rolled through northern Idaho in 1981. There seemed little point in training new miners when 1,000 experienced rock breakers were out of work, and the Sunshine, Bunker Hill, Star and Lucky Friday mines closed.

Most of the Silver Valley's big mines now have reopened, thanks to an upturn in lead and zinc prices and in anticipation of a rise in silver prices next year.

"We've come full circle," Knapp said. "I've spent the last 10 years retraining miners to do something else. Now we're training miners again."

Even with reopenings at the Bunker Hill, Lucky Friday and Sunshine mines, companies used equipment and now material to give the students hands-on mining experience. Also, participating is the United Steelworkers of America union, which represents most of the West's hard-rock miners.

"Without help from the mines this class would not be possible," Knapp said.

While some of the students' hours are spent above-ground in a small classroom where they learn the paperwork of mining, most of the course's 480 hours are spent in the shafts.

Miners advance headings in the rock — drilling a pattern of holes in the rock's face, blasting, removing the blasted rock, shoring up the excavation and preparing the area for another round.

"Rock breakers" need a variety of skills ranging from a knowledge of rock mechanics to carpentry to perform their daily chores, as well as a good grasp of safety, Fassett said. "Days pay" workers, on the other hand, operate trains or perform more conventional tasks underground.

"People think of mining as pick-and-shovel work," Knapp said. "It's not. It's a highly mechanized, highly specialized business. It's changed a lot over the years."

Fassett said graduates will be able to hold their own with an experienced partner. "Every kid in here will have drilled and blasted a round before he's through," he said. "This is run right."

Many of the students, all males, mostly in their early 20s for the first session, are learning how to mine for the same reason.

"I like it here. I don't want to leave," said Mike Koenig of Wallace.

Others, like Ed Hocking, said they are carrying on a tradition of mining in the family — learning to mine because it's what their fathers did.

Hocking's father was killed in an accident at the Sunshine Mine just last March.

"He liked the work," Hocking said, "and he was happy when he died."

Oregon announces adoption program

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Gov. Neil Goldschmidt on Wednesday helped launch an adoption program to increase the number of black children adopted by black families, based on a similar program in Chicago.

"All our sons and daughters, regardless of the color of their skin, will have the opportunity to fulfill their potential," Goldschmidt told an exuberant crowd of about 300 people at the Vancouver Avenue First Baptist Church.

The governor said the "One Church, One Child" program will assist some of the 90 black children awaiting adoption in Oregon. It will be run by black clergy and community leaders with assistance from the state.

The adoption program is based on one started nearly a decade ago in Chicago by the Rev. George Clements, who was on hand Wednesday for the introduction of the Oregon version.

Clements told the crowd that he's often asked, "How can we afford adoption? And I say, How can we afford not to do it?"

In 1980, Clements went to black churches in Chicago and enlisted the help of pastors to recruit black families to adopt black children after he learned they awaited adoption longer than white children, and often were adopted by non-black families.

He said the program has spread to 36 states and has supervised 8,000 adoptions.

Clements praised Goldschmidt's support and cooperation, adding that church leaders in many other states had met with opposition from state officials.

Oregon has the highest rate in the nation for the adoption of black children by white families, according to Fred Stock, manager of adoption services for the state Children's Services Division.

The Oregon adoption program will be headed by Virginia Phillips, co-founder of a community service agency called Give Us This Day Inc. She urged the black community to get involved in the adoption project.

"We need to extend ourselves and risk loving," she said. "When you talk about loving, do something about it."

Spokane airport fog disperses

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Harried airline passengers got some relief this morning as Spokane International Airport resumed full operations after being virtually shut down for two days by heavy fog.

"Things are pretty much back to normal," said Ed Bell, airport operations superintendent. But he said the airlines' schedules were probably "a little messed up" by two days of cancellations and diversions.

With an average of 176 commercial landings and takeoffs daily, only three planes — one each from United Airlines, Horizon Airlines and Federal Express — made it through as the fog dissipated a bit Thursday morning, said operations supervisor Dana Watson.

Balloon reaches Saskatchewan

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — A small helium balloon released by elementary school students to mark the state centennial traveled an estimated 1,500 miles to a farm in Saskatchewan, officials said.

The students were shocked that it would go that far, said Ed Litter, principal of the Martin Luther King Elementary School. They thought that it would land in the Eastern United States.

"We estimated it traveled about 1,500 miles," Forrester enclosed a map of Saskatchewan, indicating that her farm is about eight miles north of the U.S.-Canada border along North Dakota.

Another five flights — two United, two Horizon and one from Alaska Airlines — got through Thursday night following the use of a fog seeder.

The fog dissipated this morning, but could return this weekend, officials said.

It's hard when you get two days when you get just a fraction of your flights in. That's extraordinary, Bell said.

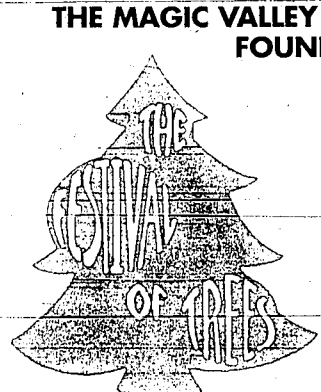

Airport officials were not immediately able to determine the average daily number of arriving and departing passengers, nor the number of people who had their travel plans disrupted.

One of the balloons reached the farm of Donna Forrester, who sent the school a letter that said her daughter found the balloon while riding a horse on Nov. 12.

"She was very pleased, to say the least, and we were all amazed that it had come this far," Forrester wrote.

"We estimated it traveled about 1,500 miles," Forrester enclosed a map of Saskatchewan, indicating that her farm is about eight miles north of the U.S.-Canada border along North Dakota.

THE MAGIC VALLEY REGIONAL MEDICAL CENTER FOUNDATION PROUDLY PRESENTS:

THE FOURTH ANNUAL "FESTIVAL OF TREES"

The Festival of Trees features dozens of especially decorated Christmas trees and wreaths that have been decorated by individuals, organizations, clubs, churches, schools and businesses who then donate the trees to the Foundation. The decorated trees are in turn sold to local patrons. In addition, homemade food items, Christmas gifts, Santa Claus, and continuous entertainment by local performers are all part of the Festival of Trees celebration.

Unemployment

The Reagan administration, in its final economic forecast, last month predicted that inflation will slow to 3.7 percent next year, with a decrease in unemployment to an average 5.2 percent on economic growth of 3.5 percent.

Narozniak said accomplishing all three simultaneously will be "very, very difficult" but she did not rule out the possibility that it can happen.

The labor force is growing by half the rate it was in the 1970s, so it's going to be somewhat easier to maintain lower unemployment levels," she said. "And at the moment, there is not much upward pressure (inflation) from wages."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"We're all here hoping, trusting and greedy, and most of us remain greedy."

-Mignon McLaughlin.

In a close game there is usually a turning point when control passes from one side to the other. Not only must the winning player learn to recognize these critical points, but he must also learn to control his greedy impulses.

South won the first heart with his 10 and cashed the diamond ace. Next he crossed to dummy in clubs and led the diamond jack for a losing finesse.

The critical point of the hand had now arrived. West knew that South could win five clubs and three diamonds to go with the heart he had already won. Clearly it was time to shift to spades.

The actual West couldn't control his greedy impulses. He continued attacking. This was covered by the king and ace, and East's spade return went to South's eight and West's jack. South now had a spade stopper and limped home with nine tricks.

Had East held the A-10 of spades, West's lead of the queen would have struck a gold mine. Nevertheless, West should have set his sights lower — a better chance for a plus score (South was known to have 11 HCP, and therefore could not have the spade ace).

Instead of leading the spade queen, West should have chosen a low spade. Not being able to see through the backs of the cards, South would have made the percentage play of dummy's king and the defenders would have gotten three spade tricks instead of two.

Boise dominates Northwest Nazarene

BOISE (AP) — Four Boise State players led a balanced scoring attack with 10 points each as the Broncos outmanned Northwest Nazarene College 75-48 Friday in the Real Dairy basketball classic.

Starters Wilson Foster, Brian Sperry and Chris Childs and reserve Jarvis Helaire hit 10 points each and eight other Bronco players scored as Boise State evened its record at 1-1. With the loss, the Crusaders fall to 0-3.

Boise State shot 54 percent from the floor, compared to Northwest Nazarene's 35 percent.

NW's Michael Davidson led all scorers with 11 points while teammate Kelly Boken scored 10.

Canyon County NAIA rivals College of Idaho and NNC will meet in the first game Saturday and the Division I Big Sky Conference Broncos and Idaho State play in the second contest.

Eddie Murray off to L.A.

NEW YORK (AP) — Eddie Murray has been traded to the World Series champion Los Angeles Dodgers by the last-place Baltimore Orioles. The Associated Press learned Friday.

EDDIE MURRAY Goes Hollywood

Murray, who will be 33 next season, had 284 with 28 home runs and 84 runs batted in. He is a lifetime .295 hitter with 333 homers and 1,190 RBIs.

Murray was born and raised in Los Angeles and there was speculation in recent years the Dodgers wanted him. Certainly only a few teams could afford him. Murray has three years remaining on a six-year contract. He has $2 million salary for next year, $2.2 million for 1990 and $2.3 million for 1991.

Both teams denied the inter-league deal was done.

Gem State Conference

No team in the Magic Valley has improved so much, so fast as Minico. In his five years in the program, Brad Cooper has taken the Spartans from also-rans to Region III champions.

"The strength of our team would be that we are tough in the lower and middle weights and most of the upper weights with seniors that has been in our program for three or four years," said Cooper. "That brings us back a lot of experience."

The Spartans' biggest deficit will be in the upper weights, where Minico graduated heavyweight Lewis Davis, who finished second at state last year, as well as standouts Roy Barera and Chris Rogers.

"We don't have as much depth as we would like to have," said Cooper. "We're only one of two deep in three or four weights, and if we have any more injuries, they could really hurt us."

But the Spartans are loaded in terms of depth, experience and quality in the lower weights, led by Alan Jones, a 125-pound senior who finished third in the state at 125 a year ago, and Roy Villaseor, a senior who was third at 103 last year. Other returning starters are 130-pound senior Freddie Garcia, 135-pound senior Quincy Holton, 135-pound junior Scott Montgomery, 145-pound senior Mark Serr, 145-pound junior Jaret Barker, 152-pound senior Chris Klueh and 152-pound senior Kennely Kutzer.

Cooper also has three promising newcomers at the lower weights, with junior Jodi Leoni at 119, sophomore Chad Holbrook at 103 and junior Terry Perrotto at 145.

Filling in the upper weights will be Monte Ball, a 160-pound senior; Saul Mota, a 171-pound senior; Kelly James, a 189-pound junior, and Dee Armstrong, a junior heavyweight.

Idaho Falls

The Chris Owens era is over at Idaho Falls High, but the betting among Gem State Conference coaches is that seventh-year Tiger Coach Cliff Laughlin will have enough horses left to win the league title for a third straight year.

Owens, who won three straight state A-1 championships at 125, 130 and 135 pounds, captained an I.F. squad built around the lower and middle weights, but the Tigers are still strong there.

"We have good leadership from seniors with state experience," said Laughlin, who inherited a weak program and made it the dominant one in Region IV. "We will be a better tournament team than a dual meet team. In some weights, we have experienced wrestlers and coming off a state championship football team, that leaves us little time to prepare for the season."

The returnees include Jeff Gardner, a 152-pound senior who won a state championship at 145 last season, compiling a 30-3 record in the process. Also back are Steve Aoki, a 119-pound junior who finished fourth at state at 112 last year and fifth the year before, and Nate Metcalf, a 135-pound senior who was fourth at state at 125 three years ago and sixth at 130 last year.

Highland

The consensus in the Gem State Conference is that Highland has the best chance to end a four-year Idaho Falls' two-year reign as league champion and will dominate Region III.

"It's not hard to see why. Sixth-year Coach Russ Sion returns starters in 10 of the 13 weights from a team that finished 12-4 last season.

"We have some experienced wrestlers back," said Sion. "But most of our wrestlers have grown up and now many are in a weight class that is not from them to be competitive in. We have some precious injuries to some of our starters that are hurting us, and we have had a lot of sickness early, preventing us from getting in shape."

Sion's returnees include Shane Bell, a 125-pound senior who went 27-8 at 119 pounds last season and finished second at state. Darren Adams, at 171-pound senior who was 19-4 last year with a fourth-place finish at 160; Chris Wehrl, a 130-pound junior who was 25-10-1 last season with a sixth-place finish at state at 112; Scott Koller, a 119-pound junior who went 23-11 last year with a fifth-place finish at 103 last season; and Marty Fraiture, a 275-pound senior who finished sixth at state last year with 18-11 record.

"Also back are Dirk Anderson, a 135-pound senior who was 18-1-1; Pucky Likness, a 140-pound junior who was 17-11; Wayne Moon, a 190-pound senior who was 16-14; and Andy Fraiture, a 160-pound senior who went 14-18.

Pocatello

In four years at Poly, Clayton Armstrong's teams have never finished worse than second in Region III, winning the championship two years ago, and have all ways been in the top six. Although the Indians lack the depth and experience of Highland, they'll be formidable again this year.

"We feel very confident with our kids this year," said Armstrong, citing off an uncharacteristic 6-4 senior. "We have depth in all weights and we have excellent experience in tournaments."

The only weakness we see is some young kids in some of the upper weights," he added. "They don't have much mat time."

Monte Pace, a 135-pound junior who finished third at state at 125 last season and compiled a 28-7 record, leads the incumbents. Also back are Greg Wilson, a 130-pound senior who won 30-5 last year at 119 and finished fourth at state, and Henry Brown, a 145-pound senior who finished 25-10 last year and took sixth at state.

The other returning starters are Travis Spahr, a 140-pound junior; Shawn Jepson, a 119-pound junior; Len Page, a 160-pound senior, and Josh Fleming, a senior heavyweight.

Bonneville

Bonneville is expected to be the most improved team in the GSC, with nine starters coming off a 5-6 season. The problem, as always, for the Bees is that they wrestle in the same region as Idaho Falls, Skyline and Blackfoot, which limits the number of wrestlers the Bees qualify for state.

"We have senior leadership, we have six quality dualers back from 1987-88 team," said Coach Bud Gardner, said fourth-year Coach Dale Fardner. "We have some untested weight classes at the varsity level of competition, particularly at 103, 119, 152 and 160."

The six returning grapplers who qualified for state are Berkly Packer, a 112-pound senior; Kent Clark, a 130-pound senior; Eric Lerts, a 140-pound senior; Jeremy Hansen, a 171-pound senior; Tyler Forbush, a 189-pound senior; and Kevin Wheeler, a 189-pound senior.

Blackfoot

Blackfoot has had a half dozen state champions since the school went A-1 in 1981, but has rarely been able to put together enough of them to make a serious run at a regional championship as a team. This year, Coach Kurt Taylor may have the team to it.

"At the heavier weights, we should be better than at the lower weights," said Taylor, in his 21st year as wrestling coach at Blackfoot. "But we're young and inexperienced."

Six starters from last year returned by Jason Taylor, who finished 16-9 at 171 pounds and won sixth at state. The other incumbents are Eric Lamb, 17-14 last year at 103; Dan Leavitt, 15-11 at 140; and Jeremy Phuris at 112. Trent Henderson at 125 and Huton Robinson at 119.

Skyline

Through a five-year stretch of the late 70s and early 80s, Skyline won three state championships. It's definitely been downhill from there.

"We don't have any depth and we don't have enough good kids to win a lot of the duals," said Brian Ricks, in his sixth season at Skyline. "But we have four or five kids that have a lot of experience in tough competition. All of them could very easily place at the state meet."

Back from last year's 3-5 team are Jason Newby, a 125-pound senior who finished fourth at state; Ken Manser, a 130-pound senior who was sixth at state in 1987; 160-pound senior Wade Foster; 109-pound junior Dave Jennings; 119-pound sophomore Billy Waters; 140-pound junior Chris Howell and 190-pound junior Jeremy Clayton.

Rigby

Rigby made some noise in its second season in Class A-1 last year, with heavyweight Kelly Gooding finishing second at state at 189 pounds and Casey Bruns taking third at average 146.7 yards per completion for 143 yards in 131 average.

On paper, Northwestern's defense appears to be its strong suit. The Demons have allowed 287 total yards offensively, on the average, including just 161.3 through the air. Their ability to guard against the pass could present a problem.

"That's particularly true since all-Big Sky receiver John Juke is still smarting from a shoulder injury he suffered against Boise State two heavyweight. But Trojans had no depth, finishing 7-6 and graduated all but one senior.

"We have a tremendous amount of inexperience on the team has most starters only two years of wrestling," said eighth-year Coach Lyle Thompson. "But there is a lot of enthusiasm as we have 40-kids out. They don't lack down to anyone."

There are four state champions of the 13 weight classes and all are juniors, five of whom had winning records last year. They include Jason Bybee, a 135-pounder who went 12-10; Ryan Buxton, a 135-pounder who wound up 15-8; Weston Hymas, a 152-pounder who wound up 20-8; Gary Hawke, a 160-pounder with a 12-10 mark, and Mike Peterson, a 171-pounder who finished at 20-8.

Madison's wrestling program, which was not really at a power in A-2, has suffered since the school's promotion to A-1 four years ago. The Bobcats won just two dual meets last season, and with five returning starters, third-year Coach Jerold Crittenden says his goal is a 500 season.

There are four seniors back, including 119-pounder Ue Chenthanpanya, 130-pounder Trent Tackett, 125-pounder Chuck Lloyd and 145-pounder James Schwartz.

South-Central Idaho Conference

Burley

"Turnout, or the lack of it, is the principal problem for sixth-year Coach Gary Hoxsey this fall.

"We don't have that many kids out this year from any of our classes," said Huxsey, whose Bobcats were 5-7 in dual mat competition a year ago. "Our lower weights will be strong this year. We'll have to rely on these kids come tournament time."

Two seniors, 152-pounder Scott Poole and 145-pounder Tom Meese, return from last season, along with 119-pound junior Lane Martin and 119-pound sophomore Steve Gerratt. The newcomers include three juniors, 160-pounder Rex Jones, 189-pounder Jeff Robinson and 112-pounder Travis Thompson, along with sophomores T.J. Jones and John Butz, both heavyweights, and freshman Dan Ruyms and Nathan Nelson, both lightweights.

Mountain Home

Third-year Coach Doug Root has an abundance of experience, but not a lot of competition for those experienced grapplers.

"Lack of numbers in the lower middle weights and the upper weight classes is our biggest weakness," said Root, whose team was 3-11 in dual meet last year. "But we'll be strong in the light and upper weights and better than average at heavyweight. People to watch for are Trent Wells at 103-pound sophomore who is new to the program; Larry Covey at 135-pound senior who is a returning starter; Mark Hammerlund at 140-pound senior who is also a returning starter; Jeremy White at 145-pound senior and another returning starter; Clint Nelson at 182-pound senior who started last year; and Rich Corral at 112-pound senior who is a transfer from Las Vegas, Nev.)

Jerome

The steady progression of Jerome's program is typified by Allen Enos, a 160-pound senior who won the state championship in his weight class as a junior last year.

Like classmate Richard Ebert, a 145-pound senior who went 25-7 last year at 130 pounds and finished third at state, Enos has come all the way through the Jerome junior high school and high school programs during the eight-year tenure of coaching by Matt Matthews and Leon Midsen, and has also participated in their off-season wrestling programs.

"We have three returning state placers and seven returning state qualifiers," said Matthews, whose team is the defending District 4 champion. "Plus a good bunch of freshman."

Jerome enjoys more depth and its wrestlers face much more in-house competition than most A-2 programs. That's produced top-flight grapplers among all three classes at Jerome High.

Returning starters provide a good example—Enos, Ebert, Lou Rober, a 152-pounder who finished fifth at state last year with a 25-9 record; Maurice Brown, a 189-pounder, and Troy Junior, a heavyweight, are seniors. Jeff Petraw, 14-4 last year at 171 pounds; 119-pounder Doug Stuhlberg and 112-pounder Tall Wendell are juniors. Paul Ebert, a 125-pounder who posted a 17-10 record as a freshman, and 145-pounder David Vining are sophomores.

But, says Matthews, "we have some inexperience in the lower weights and lack of depth in the upper weights."

But, says Matthews, "we have some inexperience in the lower weights and lack of depth in the upper weights."

The strength of Buil coach Gene Clemens' team this year, he says, is a strong nucleus of seniors and juniors. But there's not much depth beyond.

"Sixty percent of our team will consist of sophomores and freshman," said Clemens, coming off a 5-5 season, his seventh at Buil.

The incumbents include senior David Hutchison, a 135-pound senior; Frank Hill, a 189-pound senior; Joe Ramos, a senior heavyweight; Greg Pursion, a 189-pound junior; and Brian Burgess, a 112-pound sophomore.

Wood River posted a 9-3 dual meet record last year, its best in years. But the Wolves are into their annual nemesis rivalry to qualify wrestlers at the district tournament in Jerome.

With six first starters back and freshman Brad Tutelman and sophomore Jack Porter in the wings, fifth-year Coach Tom Gorcecheva hopes this group is ready to give the Tigers a run this year.

"We have very good kids," said Gorcecheva. "No problems with attitude and discipline. I have four good juniors back and the work ethic is very good. But I need more help. We only have 21, and only two of them are seniors."

The five incumbents are John Pascoe, a 112-pound junior; Justin Larsen, a 145-pound junior; Jim Carpenter, a 150-pound junior; Tom Richmond, a 145-pound senior; and Tom Sluder, a 189-pound junior.

Kimberly is the defending district champion and the co-favorite of the District 4 A-2 coaches in pre-season, along with Wendell, to win it again. But anything can, and often does, happen in small-school wrestling in the Magic Valley between the end of the regular season and the district tournament.

Wendell is going to be really tough," said Bulldog coach Pat Valiant, in his 13th season at the head of the Kimberly program. Coach Kelly Kidd has added a lot of excitement to the Deelo program. Don Davis of Gooding turns out really quality kids. Vic Kushuta will soon make the Filer program very tough. Sid Nelson the past few years has threatened sending the district trophy to the school that they're in."

They include sophomore Kelly Holloway, a sophomore who is a returning starter at 171 pounds, and junior David Wells, Doug Hunter and Greg Cranney at 160, 125 and 152, respectively.

The newcomers include sophomores Stuart Redde, Brent Jones and Shawn Archibald at 125, 119 and 130, and freshmen Ben Stringham at 112.

"At 130 pounds and 140 pounds, we have nothing to score team points at," said Nelson. "We're convinced of their scoring opportunities in the first half."

It should meet the winner of today's second round game between fourth-seeded Furman and sixth-seeded Marshall in a semifinal contest. The title will be announced tonight.

If Northwestern wins today and again next week, the Demons will make their third trip in four weeks to Idaho for the finals at Holt Arena in Pocatello.

ing young men in both the junior and senior classes. We were hampered so much last year by injuries that many of the kids have good experience as part-time starters."

There are returning starters in 10 of the 13 divisions and part-time starters in five more. They're led by Kevin Muegel, a 160-pound senior who finished sixth at state last year, and five other seniors: Bryce Humphreys (140), Eric Kilborn (145), Luke Schroeder (152), Jared McKenzie (152) and Doug DeWitt (189). The returning junior is Doug Bolles at 125, while sophomores Jason Stokes, Tracy Armstrong and Jason Makings are back at 119, 125 and 130, respectively.

"We have good numbers, 38 to date, and should field two full teams at district," said Valliant. "The seniors we have this year are providing the leadership qualities that have been lacking somewhat for a couple of years. They are non-nonsense individuals trying to prove themselves as winners. Our only weakness will be the strength of the rest of the conference."

That's the result of outstanding coaches and improved schedules over years past. We expect really tough keeping our kids healthy will be a major goal this season."

Wendell Like Kimberly program, Wendell benefits from years of hard work at the junior high and second level wrestling. This year, so many seniors that 10th-year coach Steve Matthews can almost always put 13 competitive wrestlers on the mat.

"We have some good wrestlers who were injured in football and should be back at the first of the year," said Matthews. "Doug Lyons, a sophomore who placed fourth in district, and Kelly Burrell, a junior who last year only one match, will add greatly to the team when healthy."

Not counting Lyons and Burrell, the Trojans return eight starters, including district champions Jerry Ramirez at 112 pounds, Dennis Diamond at 171 and Bruce Daniels at 189. All three are seniors.

Also back are sophomore Harvey Ramirez at 125; junior Greg Ringling at 130; senior James Holt at 152; senior Trevor Topp at 171 and junior Sam Sites at heavyweight.

The strength of the program is the strong group of seniors and juniors in the program this year," said Matthews. "We also have a strong group of sophomores that are showing well in the room and should prove to be tough competition on the mat. Our outlook is more than anything the lack of young kids in the room, mainly freshmen. It seems like the program has a year like this every third year and it's a coaches nightmare. We also had football take its toll on my wrestlers. We lost two to shoulder injuries and both are strong wrestlers."

Among the newcomers who will see mat time for Matthews this year are senior Nick Tyson at 140; juniors Ben Trevino at 119, Mike Gibson at 125 and Dean Diamond at 171 and sophomores Brian Fern at 119, Aaron Adams at 125, Sonny Anderson at 130, Travis Crawford at 135 and James Hall at 145.

Coach Sid Nelson's Oakley team don't have a district trophy, but they do have a state home with a band load of medals from the state tournament. As Valliant suggested, this may be the Nelson's year at district.

Brandon Bedke, Zach Mitton and Don Van Tassel are returning from state competition," said Nelson, whose team was 7-3 last year, finished third in district and still produced one fourth- and two fifth-place finishes at state. "We also have a lot of young men at the lower weights."

Redke, who will move up from 189 to heavyweight this year; Mitton, who advances from 145 to 160 and Van Tassel, a junior who will wrestle up from 135 to 145, will be among the favorites at district in their division.

But it may be all these youngsters who provide Oakley's best hope for district championship."

They include sophomore Kelly Holloway, a sophomore who is a returning starter at 171 pounds, and junior David Wells, Doug Hunter and Greg Cranney at 160, 125 and 152, respectively.

The newcomers include sophomores Stuart Redde, Brent Jones and Shawn Archibald at 125, 119 and 130, and freshmen Ben Stringham at 112.

If Northwestern wins today and again next week, the Demons will make their third trip in four weeks to Idaho for the finals at Holt Arena in Pocatello.

"We've adjusted to the travel," said Goodwin, who was more than a little unhappy when his eighth-seeded Demons had to travel to play the 12th-seeded Broncos last week. "This week it's not a surprise, whereas last week it was."

Northwestern Sports Information Director Tom Wancho said the Demons are injury free except for running back Kenneth DeWitt, who has a thigh bruise but is expected to play.

young at the lower weights."

"Our main strength is Brett Bingham and Steve Swamer (a senior heavyweight)," said Davis. "Lower weights will have to come along. We should be able to peak about two weeks before district, right where we want to be."

Bingham and Swamer, who was 13-9 last year, are only two of the 10 returning starters from last year.

The others include Troy Nebeker, a senior who was 15-7 at 112; Cory Child, 14-9 at 125; Troy Nebeker, a junior who was 6-2 at 103; John Dewey, a sophomore who was 7-5 at 119, and Kim Child, 9-1 at 103.

"There are a lot of young kids in the upper weight classes," said Davis. "They'll come along as the season progresses."

Jeff Halford, who led to a state championship in the 160-pound division as a senior last year, but it will be mostly freshman and sophomores doing the heavy work for the Hornets this season.

"Youth is our weakness," said Kelly Kidd, in his second season at Declo. "We only have two seniors who have wrestled before and two juniors are first-year wrestlers. There are 15 freshmen, and we have at least 15 freshmen who will be good. As soon as we get some matches under our belt, we should be fairly good."

The returning seniors both went to state last year, Shane Darrington at 130 pounds and Bart Whiting at 135. The three other returning starters are all sophomores, 125-pounder Jared Hill, who qualified for state as a freshman; 145-pounder Rod Gludfelter and heavyweight Matt Billings.

They'll be joined by freshman Scott Robinson at 112, J.D. Osterhout at 140 and Jason Cooper at 145 and junior Hank Clark at 119 and Steve Stephens at 171.

Although the kids we have returning are young, they're a good group of kids," said Kidd. "We have at least two kids in each weight except 169 and some weights have three per weight. We have a desire to win and good work ethic in order to accomplish their goal."

Glenns Ferry Jon Hartway and Jason Smith both won 22 matches for Coach Mitch Britzman's 377 Pinks a year ago, but their success was due to the weather the third-year Glenns Ferry coach.

"We lack depth this year," said Britzman. "But we have a strong core of returners and a good group of young wrestlers."

Hartway, a 171-pound senior, was 22-6 last year, and Smith, a 160-pound senior, with 22-7. They'll be joined by returning starters Dean Burt, a 149-pound senior; John Hamilton, a 152-pound senior; Shane Wooten, a 160-pound junior; and Jesse Sillins, a 125-pound junior.

The newcomers include sophomores Kyle Farris at 135 and Chris Willard at 145 and seven freshmen.

Filer's 1987-88 season was typified by the dilemma of 140-pound junior Richard James, who didn't lose a match but didn't win the state tournament because of an injury.

But first-year Coach Arleigh Dodson says the Wildcats' luck is changing.

"The ones who want to wrestle at Filer are out and they will be our program builders," said Dodson, who inherited the program from Ron Butkofer. "But our lack of experience and numbers are low. That will change through the year."

One Filer grappler who will make an immediate impact is heavyweight Sterling Dietrick, a senior who has joined all of his opponents so far this season. The other returning starter is John Duxey, a 130-pound senior.

Newcomers who will see a lot of mat time for Filer this year include first-year senior Travis Nice at 140 and freshmen Justin Trest at 145 and sophomore Robert Schick at 103 and Scott Ethridge at 135 and freshmen Jody Tyree at 112, Mike Holly at 125 and Byron Nice at 145.

Vandals

then they have tremendous, tremendous skill and speed."

Northwestern uses a two-quarterback set up with junior Scott Staker picking up most of the passing duties and senior Gilbert Galloway used in running situations. While the option is often geared toward the run, the Demons have a proven passing attack. Six times this season, Northwestern has completed pass plays for 63 or more yards. The Demons are weeks ago. Jake is listed as probable for today's game, but had not practiced as of Wednesday.

The knee injury to freshman running back Dawn Pearce in the Montana game will also hurt Idaho's offense. Pearce had been the Vandals' most prolific rusher in the latter part of the season. The loud will be heavier now for sophomores Damon Daniels and Bruce Harris.

But it's Frieser, and not the Vandal running game, that concerns North western coach Sam Gooding.

"They're better than Boise State," said Goodwin, whose team will play on the road for the fifth straight week. "Their quarterback and their receivers are the big difference. I've seen Idaho on film and they've got a much better passing game. On film, Idaho's defense looks stronger than Boise's."

They run a very simple scheme, 4-3 with three full-back coverage. The

It should meet the winner of today's second round game between fourth-
