Report puts INEL contamination among worst

By The Times-News and The Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS — The Idaho National Engineering Laboratory is "one of the most contaminated sites in the weapons industry," The New York Times reported Wednesday in a summary of a Department of Energy report on nuclear site pollution across the nation.

Pollution from nuclear weapons plants in Colorado and Texas is serious enough to pose a significant threat to public health, according to a Department of Energy report.

Contamination of the Snake River Plain Aquifer by operations at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory was ranked in the second tier of environmental problems in the report, but was not listed as an immediate health threat, INEL officials said.

But the Times story said "operations to process nuclear fuel and to build and operate nuclear reactors discharged radioactive and toxic chemical wastes into waste lagoons and into wells that have contaminated the vast Snake River Aquifer, the principal source of water for drinking and irrigation in eastern Idaho."

The INEL, near Idaho Falls, was described as having some of the most significant environmental problems of any weapons plant, including the Savannah River Plant in South Carolina and the Hanford Reservation in eastern Washington state, the Times reported.

According to the Times, the DOE report acknowledges that INEL operations have contaminated the Snake River aquifer through injection of radioactive elements. At least one compound, tritium, is believed to have moved beyond the site's boundaries. The DOE report is the first to rank 155 environmental problems at 16 facilities involved with nuclear weapons research and production.

"This is an important step in categorizing environmental problems in our defense complex," Secretary of Energy John Herrington said in releasing the report Tuesday in Washington.

"It will provide the department with the information necessary to allocate funds for environmental clean-up in a systematic and responsible manner."

Ranked most serious in the assessment was contamination of groundwater by volatile organic compounds from the Rocky Flats Plant near Denver. Also, soil around the plant has been found to be contaminated with plutonium, the report said.

The report, one of two released Tuesday dealing with weapons plants, said toxic chemicals leaking into the groundwater at Rocky Flats include trichloroethylene, tetrachloroethylene, 1,1-dichloroethylene, 1,1,1-trichloroethane, 1,2-dichloroethane, carbon tetrachloride and chloroform.

Gorbachev unveils plan for arms cut

Dramatic unilateral move highlights address at UN

Knight-Ridder Service

NEW YORK — In a historic speech to the United Nations, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev announced plans Wednesday for a 600,000-man unilateral cut in Soviet armed forces and expressed hope for a worldwide end to an era of wars and confrontation.

"It is obvious... that the use or threat of force no longer can or must be an instrument of foreign policy," Gorbachev declared in a speech that also promised a partial pullout of Soviet troops from Eastern Europe and the Chinese border and the dismantling of two or three defense plants.

President Reagan welcomed the Gorbachev proposal, telling an audience in Washington on Wednesday night, "I can only say that if it is carried out speedily and in full, history will regard it as important... significant."

Earlier in the day, just before an extraordinary three-way summit meeting with Gorbachev and President-elect Bush on a windswept island in New York Harbor, Reagan told reporters, "Naturally, I heartily approve."

With the Statue of Liberty as a dramatic backdrop, Reagan and Gorbachev bade each other a warm and friendly farewell after their fifth meeting over the last three years. The Soviet leader said he looked forward to continuing the dialogue with Bush "in a spirit of realism, openness and goodwill."

"This has been a good and successful day," a happy-looking president said later as he left Governors Island to return to Washington. "Read our smiles."

In other major proposals in the sweeping hour-long speech, Gorbachev:

- Promised to liberalize the treatment of "refuseniks" — persons who are denied permission to leave the Soviet Union on the grounds that they know state secrets. He said the Soviets will use "strictly warranted time limitations on the secrecy rule," will warn persons seeking jobs in sensitive agencies in advance, and will handle this problem "in a humane spirit."

- Ironically, as he spoke about 1,000 demonstrators protested the treatment of Jews in the Soviet Union. Fifty-six of them were arrested outside the U.N. building.

- Called for a Jan. 1, 1989, cease-fire in Afghanistan. Opposing Afghan factions would retain territories then under their control during negotiations, and outside arms supplies to the combatants should stop on that date.

- Proposed a lengthy moratorium, of up to 100 years, on debts owed by Third World countries to the Soviet Union. He said some of these debts could be written off entirely.

- Offered to "dismantle" parts of the controversial Soviet radar station at Krasnoyarsk and turn it over to a United Nations-sponsored "world space organization" dedicated to peaceful work in space. The United States considers the Krasnoyarsk station a violation of the Soviet-American anti-ballistic missile treaty.

- But the principal thrust of Gorbachev's speech was an unconditional promise to cut Soviet troop levels by almost 10 percent and make even larger percentage cuts in Warsaw Pact tanks, artillery and combat aircraft.

- At least 50,000 men and their armaments, and 5,000 tanks, will be withdrawn from East Germany, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, he said.

Arms talks may gain new boost

By BRYAN BRUMLEY The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mikhail S. Gorbachev gave new momentum to arms control talks Wednesday with his theatrical announcement at the United Nations that the Red Army would reduce its forces by 10 percent and pull 50,000 of its troops, along with tanks and cannon, from Eastern Europe.

U.S. analysts have been predicting such a move for months, believing it could further boost Gor-Gorbachev's popularity in the West and allow him divert needed funds from the military to the domestic sector.

Gorbachev praised U.S. willingness to discuss arms reductions and said that the Soviet leadership has decided to demonstrate once again its readiness to reinforce this healthy process not only in words but in deeds.

"Within the next two years, their numerical strength will be reduced by 500,000 men," he said near the end of a lengthy address to the U.N. General Assembly. The Soviet Armed Forces total about 5.6 million men and women.

"The numbers of conventional armaments will also be substantially reduced," he said. "This will be done unilaterally."

Gorbachev said the Soviets would pull 50,000 troops out of East Germany, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, reducing by about 10 percent the

Thousands attend Pearl Harbor rites

The Associated Press

HONOLULU — A survivor who has been to nearly 20 Pearl Harbor memorial services since the Japanese attacked Hawaii on Dec. 7, 1941, said Wednesday his sorrow for lost friends deepens with each anniversary.

"I've been coming to these tributes forever, and they're almost the same every time, but I got more emotional every year," said Louis Grabinski, 68, of Long Beach, Calif. "When I hear tapes, I still get checked up, because I know who they're playing for."

Grabinski, then a 21-year-old shipfitter, was aboard the USS West Virginia when Japanese submarines and aircraft attacked Pearl Harbor that Sunday morning.

Grabinski and about 100 others, including survivors, military officials and Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, attended a private Navy ceremony marking the 47th anniversary of the attack that plunged the United States into World War II.

More than 2,400 people were killed and 1,200 wounded in the surprise assault. The USS Arizona suffered the heaviest losses, with 1,177 fatalities.

"History was to prove these men did not die in vain... We have become a symbol of freedom, of democracy and of world leadership," Adm. David F. Jeremiah, command in chief of the Pacific Fleet, said at the service held aboard the USS Arizona Memorial.

A minute of silence was observed at 7:55 a.m., the moment the first bombs fell.

Gorbachev cuts short his visit

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev will cut short his visit to the United States to return to Moscow because of a devastating earthquake that killed thousands of people in three southern republics, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze said Wednesday.

Shevardnadze called a surprise news conference late Wednesday night and announced that Gorbachev was to depart prematurely sometime early Thursday.

"Despite the fact that all emergency measures are being taken... Mr. Gorbachev believes when the people are suffering he has to be there, he has to lead the efforts," Shevardnadze said through an official interpreter.

The foreign minister said the earthquake Wednesday hit Armenia, Azerbaijan and his native Georgia in the Caucasus region south of Moscow. Shevardnadze said the epicenter was near the Armenian town of Leninakan and the quake registered 6.4, although it was not clear whether he was referring to the Richter scale or ground motion or a different Soviet system of calibration.

The U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo., said the quake registered 6.9 on the Richter scale.

Buhl bids for block grant to help bag Pet's baked bean plant

By KEN ARMSTRONG Times-News writer

BUHL — Pet Inc. announced Wednesday that it plans to expand its Buhl operations to include production of B&M Baked Beans, a $1.5 million project that could mean 40 new jobs.

The expansion hinges on approval of a community development block grant to help pay for infrastructure improvements requested by Pet. Plant Manager Craig Ollinger said he and two city officials will make their pitch for the $350,000 state grant Dec. 14, and they hope for tentative approval the next day.

"We feel that we have a strong, strong application," Buhl Mayor Thomas Tappen said. "But, then again, you don't spend it until you have it."

Plant officials estimate that the expansion's economic impact, or ripple effect, would exceed $6 million annually. Construction is slated to begin next spring, and company officials hope to have the expansion completed sometime in the first half of 1990. Ollinger said the addition would be attached to the south end of the plant.

For Buhl, the expansion could mean that Pet's plant won't go the way of Jerome's Tupperware plant, which closed this year after an extended period of cutbacks. Also, the infrastructure improvements could be a selling point for other, future development.

Ollinger said the plant has produced evaporated milk since 1927, but that market has been declining for many years since the introduction of infant feeding formulas.

"The market for premium-quality baked beans like B&M, however, is continuing to grow," he said. This expansion will help insure that our plant continues to be a viable part of the Buhl economic community well into the future."

Ollinger said most of the new jobs would be low-to-moderate-income and would be filled locally.

Company officials believe other local employers would also benefit from the expansion. The plant plans to use beans from Idaho growers, and some of the packaging would be supplied by local manufacturers.

Pork, sugar, salt and other ingredients could also come from this area, Ollinger said.

In addition, the infrastructure improvements requested by Pet include several that officials say would benefit the community as a whole. The company wants the block grant age of waste solvents from an unlined waste pit used for liquid waste disposal from 1954 to 1960 at the Pantex plant in Amarillo, Texas.

Solvents that may have been dumped into the waste pit include benzene, acetone, tetrahydrofuran, methanol, dimethylformamide, methyl ethyl ketone and ethanol, the report said.

Solvent-contaminants have the potential to seep into both a potentially isolated aquifer, which may serve some local residents close to the northern border of Pantex, and the main aquifer, which serves the site and nearby communities, it said.

Leading a list of 26 secondary-level environmental problems was groundwater pollution at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in Livermore, Calif., where contamination was found in the southeastern corner of the laboratory site.

Ranked seventh in the report were polychlorinated biphenyls at the Test Reactors Area at INEL, where the Advanced Test Reactor operator and the Idaho Chemical Processing Plant. The ponds have leaked heavy metals, harmful organic solvents and radioactive contaminants into the Snake River Aquifer.

The report also listed the organic solvents and plutonium that have leaked below the Radioactive Waste Management Complex at the INEL as a serious problem. Lesser problems listed were inactive injection wells that have pumped billions of gallons of radionuclide-contaminated water into the aquifer and contaminated water wells at TAN.

But INEL officials said the problems listed don't change their view of the INEL's ranking among other DOE facilities.

"We think the INEL is one of the cleanest DOE sites," said Tom Gessell, acting DOE-Idaho assistant manager for environmental safety and health programs. "We've said it in the past and we still say it."

The remaining secondary-level problems were found at the following DOE facilities:

Portsmouth Uranium Enrichment Complex, Piketon, Ohio. Cancer-causing and toxic hexavalent chromium is being released to the atmosphere.

Hanford Reservation near Richland, Wash. Liquid radioactive and toxic wastes were dumped in trenches from 1944 until the early 1980s, contaminating underground reservoirs used for drinking water and irrigation.

Y-12 Plant, Oak Ridge, Tenn. Contamination of streams with mercury, arsenic, boron and sulfate; also potentially hazardous air emissions.

Sandia National Laboratory, Albuquerque, N.M., and branch at Livermore, Calif. Liquid discharges of hazardous chemicals and problems with handling toxics from inactive sites.

Pantex plant. Two additional problem areas dealing with discharge of toxic liquid wastes.

Savannah River Plant, near Aiken, S.C. A primary aquifer in the area has been contaminated with solvents.

Pinellas Plant, Largo, Fla. Underground storage tanks containing chemical compounds are believed to be leaking.

Kansas City Plant, Kansas City, Mo. Contamination of soil and sewer line with cancer-causing PCBs; also the plant has discharged tons of toxic chemicals into the atmosphere.

Feed Materials Production Center, Fernald, Ohio. Radon gas emissions from two sites filled with radioactive wastes, as well as the release of more than 300,000 pounds of uranium oxide.

Offer draws scorn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Representatives of organizations that support Dalkon Shield victims warned Wednesday that women who accept a $725 offer for their injuries "may be giving up claims possibly worth $30,000 or $50,000 or $100,000."

"We've waited for years and we urge women to take the time now to make a careful decision about this first offer," Nancy Worth Davis of the Dalkon Shield Oversight Consortium told a news conference.

Capitol Hill wary of promises

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's promise of a unilateral reduction in Red Army troops won cautious support Wednesday on Capitol Hill with legislators saying they were pleased but that they wanted action, not words.

Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, a member of the Armed Services Committee and one of the Senate's most conservative members, warned against having high hopes from Gorbachev's visit to New York.

"We must not allow the Soviet public relations machine to use the warm feelings of the holidays to lure us into a false sense of security," Symms said.

"Now he's done more than anyone thought he could do politically," said Rep. Caspary, D-Wash., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee. "His cuts are dramatic and significant — especially that he will make them unilaterally."

But, Aspin added, "don't be distracted by all the dramatic numbers you're hearing. We don't fight wars by the numbers."

Aspin noted that Gorbachev promised to reorganize the Soviet military and added, "a reorganization that removes the Soviet offensive capability declares the Russian bid and is far more important than numbers on a chart."

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said Gorbachev's proposal "certainly is the most positive signal from Moscow in 70 years, much more positive because words at last are being accompanied by deeds."

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said, "Mr. Gorbachev has promised a lot, but can he deliver? Only his actions — not just words — will tell the world whether his U.N.

speech becomes a one-of-a-kind Christmas gift or just another stocking stuffer."

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, called Gorbachev's statements "profoundly welcome."

Pell said the administration should "take advantage of the openings created by Gorbachev's speech to accelerate the momentum of arms control negotiations on conventional, as well as nuclear, weapons."

Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, the new Senate majority leader, said "while (Gorbachev's) proposals are commendable, they must be considered in view of overall levels of forces in Europe and the offensive structure of Soviet forces."

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., top Republican on the Armed Services Committee, said, "I would urge a note of caution."

number of forward-deployed Red Army forces arrayed against the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

President Reagan, after he and President-elect Bush met over lunch with the Soviet leader, said "I heartily approve" of the Kremlin troop decision.

Conventional arms negotiations will continue, said Reagan, and "we should certainly adjust (U.S. force levels in Europe) if it would turn out that this left us with a superiority."

Gorbachev and his aides had long been hinting at such a withdrawal, but had been opposed by top Soviet generals, notably Marshal Sergei Akhromeyev, chief of staff of the Soviet Armed Forces. Akhromeyev has resigned his post but will continue as an advisor to Gorbachev on arms control.

Besides the troop reductions, Gorbachev said the Red Army would be shedding 10,000 tanks, 8,500 artillery systems and 800 combat aircraft from forward deployment in Eastern Europe.

Exact details of the withdrawals were not made public, but they appeared to fall short of redressing the 2.54 side the Warsaw Pact holds over NATO in conventional arms.

"That is still a very significant asymmetry so there is still a lot of negotiating to do," Secretary of State George P. Shultz told reporters at a news conference following the luncheon.

Nevertheless, Gorbachev's proposals appeared to go a long way toward addressing U.S. concerns over the heavy concentration of Soviet forces near the borders of Western Europe.

A reduction in Soviet forces could increase pressure in Congress and possibly among pacifists in Western Europe to withdraw some of the more than 300,000 U.S. forces stationed in West Germany.

The action also should impart new momentum to long-stalled talks to cut NATO and Warsaw Pact forces in Europe, negotiations that have made virtually no progress in more than 14 years.

The two blocs, and non-aligned countries in Europe, are now negotiating the ground rules for a new series of talks to reduce conventional forces from the Atlantic Ocean to the Ural Mountains, at the edge of European Russia.

Gorbachev and his aides have been hinting at the Red Army reductions in defining what they describe as a new military doctrine of "reasonable sufficiency," based on an ability to defend against attack rather than to mount a major offensive.

But senior military officials have opposed any decrease in Soviet forces without a reduction by the West.

Today's weather

Fog, low clouds to hang around the area

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding: Areas of fog today and Friday along with low clouds, otherwise fair. Northeast winds from 5 to 15 mph today. Highs in the 30s. Lows Wednesday night were from 15 to 25. Camas Prairie and Wood River Valley:

Fair today and Friday except for local valley fog during the night and morning hours. North winds from 5 to 15 mph today. Highs from upper 20s to the mid 30s. Lows tonight from 5 below to 5 above zero.

Northern Utah and Nevada: Utah — Partly cloudy through Friday. Patchy fog and haze increasing today through Friday. Tuesday mainly cloudy, winds from 10 to 15 mph. Lows from 20 to 25. Highs in the mid 30s.

Nevada — Sunny today and Friday. Highs both days from lower 30s to lower 40s in the east and mid 40s to lower 50s in the west. Overnight lows from around 5 to the lower 20s.

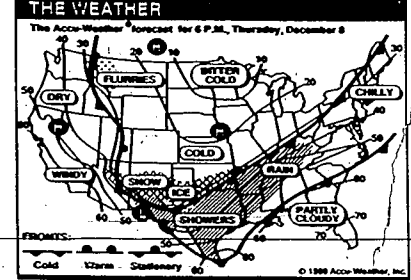

Summary: The National Weather Service in Boise says a strong ridge of high pressure will prevail over Idaho for the next several days.

A weak disturbance will move across the top of the ridge tonight and Friday and give northern Idaho some widely scattered rain or snow showers, but the remainder of the state will remain dry.

The high pressure will strengthen the valley inversions that already exist over the state. This means more fog, low clouds and smoke are in store for the Magic Valley into at least the coming weekend.

Low clouds and fog covered many of the valley locations during the day Wednesday. Light freezing drizzle fell in the Magic Valley all morning and into the afternoon at Twin Falls. Light drizzle, ice crystals and light snow flurries fell out of the fog and low clouds across much of the state.

Amounts were light however with some stations receiving only a trace. A few hundredths of an inch of precipitation fell in the central mountains and a few stations in the coldest. The warmest temperature in the state Wednesday was 47 degrees at Payette. Fairfield reported the coldest at 1 degree above zero.

The extended outlook for Southern Idaho shows Saturday through Monday, persistent areas of night and morning fog. Otherwise, partly cloudy in the west. Variable clouds in the east with a slight chance of snow, mainly over the mountains. Highs in upper 20s and 30s. Lows from 20s to the mid teens west and from zero to 20 above in the east.

Elsewhere in the nation Wednesday, the highest temperature was 85 degrees at Beville, Texas. The lowest was 4 below zero at Jackson, Wyo.

Swan Falls-type dispute begins to emerge

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Another Swan Falls-type dispute could erupt soon, this time over groundwater in eastern Idaho.

We essentially have the same problem that caused the Swan Falls controversy, moved to the Milner Dam," said Norman Young, an administrator for the Idaho Water Resources Department. "But instead of a hydro right it's an irrigation right. It's a knottier problem."

Young was in Idaho Falls Tuesday to discuss with water users Tuesday to limit groundwater pumping. The department will call hearings into the matter next year.

The Northside and Twin Falls canal companies in the Twin Falls area and the American Falls Reservoir District have demanded a moratorium on new groundwater pumping permits in the basin above Milner Dam.

The petitions made to the Idaho Department of Water Resources also ask that existing wells in the basin be regulated by Water District 1.

The Swan Falls agreement provided Idaho Power with a minimum stream flow at its Swan Falls Dam on the Snake River in exchange for allowing limited development of the Snake River basin. The limits primarily affected the Snake River Plain Aquifer west of the Snake River, which empties into the river below Milner Dam.

The area in question this time includes most of the land east of the Snake River above Milner, and a small portion on the west side of the river above American Falls Reservoir. "I see a moratorium of this kind stopping development of the Upper Valley completely," Verl Andrew of Idaho Falls said.

The canal and reservoir companies argue that groundwater pumping is directly tied to flows in the Snake River. Downstream water users assert they hold water rights to about 7,000 cubic feet per second for diversion at Milner Dam to farms near Twin Falls.

They also say they have water storage rights in American Falls and Milner reservoirs.

Future extraction of groundwater within the area proposed for inclusion will affect the flow of water in the Snake River and will reduce the quantity of water available under existing water rights, acre foot for acre foot, the petition states.

But Upper Valley water users dispute the claim.

There is no evidence to show that groundwater pumping in the non-trust area is adversely affecting downstream water users," wrote Robert Lee, a former Water Resources director from Rexburg, in a letter to Keith Higginson, the current director.

Only when groundwater is severely drawn down would there be any effect on the amount of water in the river, he said.

He also questioned whether there is enough technology to measure the effect of groundwater on the Snake River.

Downey, Inkom OK rural fire districts

DOWNEY (AP) — Rural residents near Downey and Inkom have approved the formation of fire districts in special elections.

The rural areas now will be able to contract with each of the neighboring fire departments for protection. Currently, Downey and Inkom firemen do not go outside their cities because of liability.

Court considers new trial for killer

BOISE (AP) — A witness lied on the witness stand during the first-degree murder trial of his brother and the brother is entitled to a new trial, the Idaho Supreme Court has been urged.

The state's attorney says the brother twice has recanted his testimony and it's a common tactic for a criminal defendant to later claim he lied on the witness stand.

The Idaho Supreme Court on Wednesday took under advisement an appeal from Mark Henry Lankford, 32, Conroe, Texas. Lankford and his brother, Bryan, 28, were convicted in separate trials of killing a Texas couple more than five years ago. Both Lankfords were sentenced to death.

Bryan's death sentence was overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court, which asked the Idaho court to reconsider the case. Bryan Lankford's second hearing before the Idaho

Supreme Court was Nov. 15 and the court has not ruled yet.

Mark Lankford attorney Greg Fitzmaurice, Grangeville, attacked his conviction on several points. The two-hour hearing Wednesday served both as the Supreme Court's direct review of the case and also as an appeal from district court decisions denying Mark Lankford a new trial.

Fourth District Judge Allan Schwartzman heard the case in place of Justice Stephen Bistline, who disqualified himself.

Fitzmaurice contended that when Bryan Lankford testified in his brother's case that Mark killed the Bravances, he lied. He said Bryan later called an area newspaper Tribune and admitted that.

He said the testimony was critical to the case. The key evidence was the testimony of his brother linking him to the crime scene," he said.

Because of that perjured testimony, Fitzmaurice said, Mark Lankford's trial was tainted and he should be granted a new one.

But Solicitor General Lynn Thomas said District Judge George Reinhardt considered that claim when he denied Mark Lankford's bid for a new trial, and decided not to believe him.

Bryan's testimony in Mark's case was the same as the testimony in his own trial, and it was corroborated by the evidence and other witnesses," Thomas said.

The Lankfords were convicted in separate trials of the slayings of Marine Capt. Robert Bravance and his wife, Cheryl, El Paso, Texas. Police allege the Lankfords, fleeing from criminal charges in Texas, abandoned their car in Idaho County and came upon the Bravances in a campground.

Group OKs tax for Idaho Falls tourism

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The Idaho Falls-area Mountain River Country Travel Committee has endorsed a proposal that would increase money available for tourism promotion.

But grocers and other businesses are vehemently opposed to the new tax they would be forced to pay.

Dave Hand Jr., Littletree Inn manager, said the proposal, being pushed by the Idaho Tourism Tax, would increase promotion revenues from $1.88 million to $3.9 million.

The measure would reduce the motel, hotel and campground 2 percent sales tax to 5 percent, but the latter rate would be assessed on a wider number of retail transactions, such as car rentals, ski lift tickets and outfitters.

Killer Rhoades loses attempt for a new trial

BLACKFOOT (AP) — Condemned triple murderer Paul Ezra Rhoades has lost his bid for a new trial in the February, 1987, slaying of Blackfoot convenience store clerk Stacey Baldwin.

Seventh District Judge James Herndon denied Rhoades' request, ruling that none of the statutory grounds for a retrial had been met. He also rejected Rhoades' request to declare the Idaho death penalty unconstitutional.

In addition, Rhoades, 31, was denied a state-paid investigator to question the jurors who found him guilty of the slaying of the 24-year-old woman.

Catron to be chief of staff for Stallings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gary Catron, administrative assistant in Washington, D.C., to Rep. Richard Stallings for the last four years, will return to Boise next year to become Stallings' chief of staff.

Stallings' press secretary, Malodie Rydahl, will be administrative assistant in Washington, and will continue as press secretary.

Stallings said Salice Gasser, who has been field representative in his Pocatello district office and managed his last three campaigns, will become district director.

U.S. can relax; New Englanders control government

WASHINGTON — Take comfort. The Democrats in the Senate have chosen George Mitchell to be their leader. This means that the country is again in the hands of New Englanders. Those are good hands in which to be.

To begin with, there is the president-to-be, born in Massachusetts, raised in Connecticut and educated in both states. Officially, he lives in Houston, and for political reasons he now and then foists himself off as a Texan, the better to appear to be he-mannish, though in truth Texans are no he-mannish than anyone else, except perhaps Californians.

John Margolis

But George Bush's official residence in Houston is a mere hotel suite that you can live in for a night yourself if you afford it. When he wants to loaf and invite his best buddies to his real home: his family's house in Kennebunkport, in Maine, the state where America first greets the day each morn.

Then there is the impending White House chief of staff, John Sununu, who is not simply from New Hampshire, but is its governor. To be quite candid, New Hampshire is the least appealing of New England's six states. That greatest of all New Englanders, Ralph Waldo Emerson, may have been overrating matters a touch when he said that "the God who made New Hampshire taunted the lofty mountains with little men, but only a touch."

After all, the greatest of all New Hampshireites, Daniel Webster, had to leave the place and go to Massachusetts, and the only president from New Hampshire, Franklin Pierce, is usually forgotten, being forgettable. To the extent that he is remembered at all, it is only thanks to a society formed "to rescue him from the obscurity he so richly deserves."

Still, New Hampshire is not without its strengths. There are those tall mountains, the rivers flowing through them and the dark, mysterious Connecticut Lakes. Then, too, no place abuted by Maine on one side and Vermont on the other can be all

And now there is Mitchell, who officially takes over as chief Democratic senator from Robert Byrd of West Virginia and unofficially takes over as chief Democratic spokesman from both Byrd and House Speaker Jim Wright, who may not give up the role willingly but who is losing it nonetheless. This means that one

New Englander will do the job now done by a West Virginian and a Texan, and it is an insult to neither state to call this a move in the right direction.

Such sentiments should be voiced now because New England has had a bad press of late. For months, Republicans kept going around talking about "the governor of Massachusetts" as though Massachusetts were a social disease. Actually, Massachusetts is quite a nice place — a prosperous land with one of our finer oceans on one side, lovely mountains on the other and lots of good schools in between.

New England's image has also suffered from a few misconceptions. One is that New York is part of New England, an error perhaps attributable to the New York American League Baseball Club calling itself the Yankees. New York is a fine state, but it is not part of New England. Nor are New Yorkers real Yankees. Only New Englanders are real Yankees, and to New Englanders, only Vermonters are real Yankees. To Vermonters, the only real Yankees are those who cut apple pie for breakfast.

The other misconception, resulting no doubt from its early settlement by folks known as Puritans, is that New Englanders are cold, stodgy and... well, puritanical. Actually, there is some question as to whether the Puritans themselves were all that puritanical. But anyone who doubts that their geographical descendants are a lively, bawling and lusty lot need only spend an hour or two in a Boston saloon, or listen to the rural New England folk song which suggests that "we knock the milkmaids over, and roll them in the clover, the corn's half cut and so are we."

It is not necessary to be either a native or a resident to acknowledge New England's superiority. Nor need one prefer it to other parts of the country. Such preferences are subjective, and it is both inevitable and good that some people prefer the prairies, some the Northern forests, some the deserts, some the Rocky Mountains, some the Deep South, and even that a few prefer California.

But New England is better than the rest, because it is beautiful, because it is sensible, because it is both lively enough to face the future and careful enough to preserve the past, and just because it is. A government dominated by New Englanders gives some cause for optimism.

John Margolis writes for The Chicago Tribune.

Canceling of Christmas in Bethlehem is sad, appropriate

To reach the spot where, tradition has it, Jesus was born, you go to an ancient Russian Orthodox church off Manger Square in Bethlehem. The church door is low, to prevent horsemen from riding in, so you have to bend over to enter.

The Church of the Nativity is in a permanent state of archeological restoration. In the rear of the sanctuary, past the project, there is a circular staircase which leads down to a marble-lined room in the floor of which is set a silver star.

To believers in the Christmas tradition, and in the Incarnation, this is the spot at which the Word, made flesh, came to dwell among us. "Full of grace and truth," as John's Gospel expresses it.

The tradition may not be true. Fundamentalists, who hold to the literal truth of the Bible believe it. People unfamiliar with theological controversy believe it.

But skeptics and many serious, devout

David B. Wilson

Christian scholars, are inclined to believe that the story of Joseph and Mary trekking in the cold by donkey from Nazareth, a country town far to the north, to Bethlehem, near Jerusalem, is implausible. There are problems with the dates. The skeptics think the legend was propaganda made up by early Christians who wished to convert Jews to the belief that Jesus was the Messiah, of the house and lineage of David, whose city was Bethlehem.

Nevertheless, the story is one of great beauty and meaning, and, however drunken and bedonistic the observance may have become (historically it is related to the Roman Saturnalia), the carols, the story of the star, the three kings with their exemplary gifts, the angels, the shepherds and the Christ

Child in the manger remain moving and evocative of tenderness and hope.

Perhaps it is true, just as it is related in Luke. Perhaps it is not. But in this time in the United States, it is a wellspring and fountainhead of concern for homeless people, for whom there is often "no room ... at the inn."

People who contend that Christianity is a failure cannot be sure whether the world might have been a lot worse off without it.

Moderate-day Bethlehem has decided to cancel its official celebration of Christmas this year because of the intifadah, the Palestinian uprising and its harsh suppression by Israel. Bethlehem of Judea is in what these days is termed the occupied West Bank, a half-hour's drive from Jerusalem.

Cancellation of the observance is a serious and painful decision. Bethlehem's Christian and Moslem Arabs ordinarily get a good part of their livings from the sale of olive-wood carvings and inland mother-of-pearl souvenirs having to do with the Christmas story. Among their best customers are American Christians from Texas and even more exotic places who believe that the state of Israel is a sign, foreshadowing the Second Coming and the Last Things.

As of Tuesday, according to Reuters, 329 Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza and 11 Israelis have been killed, many of them women and children, in the uprising, whose anniversary will be Friday. Thousands more have been wounded and arrested.

The violence in which Israeli soldiers with military weapons have largely been confronting stone-throwing teen-agers shows no signs of abating.

The Palestinians, at great cost in blood and treasure, have achieved the declaration of a Palestinian state, international support for their cause and the public diplomatic isolation of Israel and its American ally.

Next week, the United Nations General Assembly will welcome Minister Arafat to Geneva, meeting outside the United States for the first time in its 43-year history. Only the United States and Israel voted in the assembly against this clumsy, costly demonstration of world support for the Palestinians.

Under the circumstances, it is probably just as well that there will be no formal observance of Christmas in Bethlehem. Nothing could be more inappropriate, given the slaughter of the innocent in the vicinity. In Rome, in Calvinist Geneva and in Texas, the holiday will be celebrated in the hearts of those who care, whatever the details and intensities of their beliefs. That is clearly not enough; but it is something.

Letters/ Hospital, Hailey airport draw comment

Citizens should watch hospital

Magic Valley Hospital is in the news again! Two years ago, John Bingham convinced the board that unless the hospital was transferred it would go bankrupt.

Now, two years later, they have a $17 million surplus.

I was on the committee to investigate the transfer and I could not understand the reasoning.

I have previous experience in forming a hospital district and have some knowledge of financial statements after 40 years banking, so I requested that I be on the committee.

The information furnished the committee was all "pro-transfer and I kept asking if there was any negative information on the transfer.

I was ignored. Fortunately the good people rejected the transfer at the ballot.

John Bingham is a good administrator, but never forget that he still works for HCA and not the county commissioners.

I tried to talk to Marvin Hempleman about HCA, the transfer and the financial statement, but he would not discuss it with me.

Don't confuse him with facts; his mind was made up.

Why are all architectural, planning and building contracts going to or through HCA without bid? Is there no one in Idaho qualified? Why would a board contract to buy property without a legal opinion with a good attorney sitting on the board?

Has the county given the hospital to HCA? Until the commissioners take control and change the board of directors, the citizens of Twin Falls County had better watch their hospital.

FAA must look at safety factors

With respect to the Friedman Airport control tower issues, I had the clear and distinct understanding that the airport was surveyed by Mr. Don Bennett of Northwest Region FAA on the basis of safety consideration, not traffic count. Traffic counts have already been conducted and further counts at this point are merely needless duplication of effort. Also, a traffic count was accomplished by the State Bureau of Aeronautics in recent years and it is on file there.

The FAA estimate, which places the Friedman Airport as 35th in the list of airports in the northwest region without towers and who may need them, cannot possibly be valid if safety considerations are used as a criteria.

When compared to the other 34 airports, Friedman is unique and should rank within the top several airports for control tower consideration because:

1. There is limited airspace in the area surrounding the airport due to mountainous terrain and with poor prospects of missed approach procedures to the north.
2. The high incidence of traffic conflict.
3. There is a mixture of corporate jets and piston twins, commuter airlines, charter flights, private single and multi-engine operations, air freight operations, and gliders along with other sport aviation. This is typical of some other airports, but most of those do not have the airspace limitations which exist at Hailey.
4. Regulations are frequently violated by some pilots. Mr. Bennett's study made note of this (Mr. Bennett is a truly outstanding Aviation Safety Representative — I have the utmost respect for him).

The FAA maneuvering on this issue reminds me of the many delays which Idaho encountered in getting a Distance Measuring Equipment Navigation aid installed in Lewiston some years ago.

I would be highly interested in knowing why the FAA is not using the previously stated intention of evaluating Friedman on safety considerations instead of traffic count. My concern is for some semblance of order on the traffic flow in and out of some very confined airspace.

I congratulate Mr. Paschal Drake, Airport Manager on his fine efforts to keep things safe. He needs and deserves the support of all pilots and politicians.

Teachers' union is for survival

"Common sense has solved the world's most pressing problems since the beginning of civilization" — so saith M. F. Smith of Buhl in rebutting the observations of Albion's Jim Kempton.

Smith must have established residence on a different planet from most of the rest of us — "common sense" has been largely ineffectual in resolving such dilemmas as nuclear proliferation, over population and degradation of the environment. Indeed, the most crucial decisions requiring some sort of action by the human race are still being made from a theological or ideological perspective, and "common sense" never enters the equation.

Witness the recent unveiling of the B-2 Stealth bomber, a sophisticated war toy which the government candidly admits pricing at, pound for pound, more than gold.

Common sense has also thoroughly ameliorated the waste disposal problem at INEL — just ask Liz Paul.

Smith's principal focus and primary villain is the teacher's union. He no sooner identifies this entity as the "problem" than he goes on to state, "No employee can do his best perpetually surrounded by an ongoing environment of controversy."

He neglects to address the question of why the controversy exists. If he had even the most rudimentary knowledge of the history of the labor movement he would be aware that all unions, including those associated with education, are born of necessity, as an outgrowth of the age-old conflict between property rights and human rights, and ultimately, of the debate as to what constitutes "wealth."

The central question can be forever laid to rest by several means, none likely to enjoy popular support. We can revert to some sort of "divine right of kings" mentality, thereby transferring title to all resources, including labor, to select elite.

Smith's assertion that unions are the problem, as opposed to the answer in education, is one side of the coin, not a universal truth.

Teachers join unions for the same reasons as auto workers, truck drivers and coal miners — it's a matter of survival in a system dominated by the "common sense" solutions of the Bill Bennett's of the world.

CSI should cater to customers

This is an open letter to the president and board of CSI.

What occurred yesterday brought home the fact that CSI is not student (customer) oriented and prompted this letter. When I refer to CSI as not student (customer) oriented I do not want to leave the impression that the teachers are not student (customer) oriented. CSI is blessed with many excellent and caring teachers (i.e., Dave Makings, Dr. Gentry, Paula Edmonds Hollifield, Mrs. Powers, Mr. Speyer, and Mr. Studebaker, to name only a few). However, when a student (customer) is attempting to arrange classes, it becomes obvious that it is almost impossible to do.

I don't want this to appear as an isolated case. I am acquainted with many people in the Magic Valley through work and in my capacity as Educational Foundation Coordinator. I have heard of this happening to many, many people of all ages and lifestyles.

A large amount of the classes for next semester are scheduled in the morning and few in the afternoons or evenings. Some classes only have one class scheduled. I called CSI and inquired about this. I was told (and I quote) "Some of the teachers don't like to teach in the afternoons. So the classes are all scheduled for the mornings."

To say I was upset by this response is an understatement! A community college is supported by the community and should be able to meet the community's needs, whether it is by offering courses with more flexible hours, or by simply responding to the community's questions. If we were sick and went to the doctor, paid the doctor, and never received a diagnosis or treatment, we wouldn't go back or pay another bill. That doctor would soon be out of business. So... who is CSI there for? The students and community (CSI's customers) or the teachers and administration?

I work 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and am on call 24 hours a day. Shall I tell my supervisor I want the same wages but I'll only work 8 a.m. to noon and my EP students can only call between 6 and 8 p.m. and my "customers" be damned? I don't think so! I know there are businesses who close to go fishing or hunting or whatever.

Fine, that's their choice, but CSI is supported by my tax dollars and yours and the fees charged the students (customers) all. They (CSI) owe us service, respect and cooperation. Just because many students are young and not experienced in demanding the service they paid for does not give CSI the right to exploit them.

How do we correct this problem? If anyone has an answer or suggestion please let me know. There are many, many people attempting to use the College of Southern Idaho to further their education. Most of us are finding frustration instead. Something must be done to correct this situation.

Airline performance improves

WASHINGTON (AP) — The airlines reported a better than 80 percent on-time record for the seventh straight month in October, despite increased delays in the Chicago area because of air traffic control problems, the Transportation Department said Wednesday.

The 13 largest domestic air carriers reported 83.4 percent of their flights arrived on time during October, although the arrival rate at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport was only 73.4 percent because of flight restrictions.

Eastern Airlines, which early this year was consistently among the worst on-time performers, compiled the best record among the 13 airlines in October, with Eastern planes arriving within 15 minutes of schedule 90.3 percent of the time during the month.

Eastern was followed by America West, 89.1 percent, and Delta Air Lines, 87.8 percent. Alaska Airlines had the worst record at 77.9 percent. USAir and United Airlines, which has a concentration of flights at Chicago, were not far behind with a 79.1 percent on-time mark.

Salt Lake City had the best arrival record in October with 89.6 percent of the flights landing on time. The Tampa, Fla., airport had an on-time arrival record of 88.4 percent. San Francisco had the world record with 62.1 percent of the planes arriving on time, followed by Chicago's O'Hare

North drops bid to disclose some papers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House aide Oliver L. North on Wednesday dropped efforts to disclose a quarter of the 40,000 pages of classified documents he wants to use to defend criminal charges arising from the Iran-Contra affair.

Defense lawyers filed a brief statement that they were withdrawing 10,000 pages of CIA intelligence cables on Nicaragua that were listed in North's Nov. 14 notice of government secrets he wants to reveal in a public trial.

The monthly intelligence cables covered a three-year period from January 1984 through December 1986, a month after the Iran-Contra affair became known and North was dismissed from his job at the National Security Council.

In a motion last month, Walsh sought to bar the defense from using any secret documents as evidence. Walsh accused the defense of listing a large number of irrelevant documents to overwhelm the court and the government's abilities to conduct proceedings under the Classified Information Procedures Act.

He specifically criticized North's listing of "large swatches of CIA cables concerning Nicaragua that bear only the most tangential relation to the subject matter of the case."

Wright probe will continue into next year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ethics investigation of House Speaker Jim Wright is likely to extend into next year, members of the ethics committee said following a meeting on the case Wednesday.

"I think you can make book on that," said Rep. John T. Myers, R-Ind., the senior minority member of the House panel, when asked whether the investigation will extend into 1989.

"It will be next year," said another Republican member, Rep. Thomas Petri of Wisconsin. "We've still got some loose ends to tie up."

Myers said the six GOP members of the 12-member committee all were reappointed Wednesday to new terms to provide continuity at least until the Wright probe is completed.

Wright, D-Texas, has been under investigation since last June on contentions that he improperly used his office for financial gain and that he improperly used his position to lobby federal officials on behalf of Texas interests.

The outside counsel appointed to handle the investigation, Richard J. Phelan, has completed all but the last few of dozens of depositions taken in connection with the case, ethics committee Chairman Julian Dixon, D-Calif., said after the panel met Wednesday.

Envelope ban a dead letter

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Postal Service has decided not to ban the red-and-blue bordered airmail envelopes from its domestic mail service.

Ever since it began moving most first-class mail by air, some postal purists have wanted to restrict the use of such envelopes to international mail.

According to the Federal Register, a majority of mailers believed that "... red-and-blue markings attract the attention of mail recipients because these markings are generally associated in the public mind with the importance of domestic airmail."

As a result, the Postal Service has withdrawn the proposed ban, acknowledging in its withdrawal statement that this rule would have brought only marginal mail-processing benefits.

U.S. can relax; New Englanders control government

WASHINGTON — Take comfort. The Democrats in the Senate have chosen George Mitchell to be their leader. This means that the country is again in the hands of New Englanders. These are good hands in which to be.

To begin with, there is the president-to-be, born in Massachusetts, raised in Connecticut and educated in both states. Officially, he lives in Houston, and for political reasons he now and then foists himself off as a Texan, but he better to appear to be a Texan, though in truth Texans are no he-mannerish than anyone else, except perhaps Californians.

John Margolis

But George Bush's official residence in Houston is a mere hotel suite that you can live in for a night, yourself if you can afford it. When he wants to loaf and invite his soul he goes to his real home: his family's house in Kennebunkport, in Maine, the state where America first greets the day each morn.

Then there is the impending White House chief of staff, John Sununu, who is not simply from New Hampshire, but is its governor. To be quite candid, New Hampshire is the least appealing of New England's six states. That greatest of all New Englanders, Ralph Waldo Emerson, may have been overrating matters a touch when he said that "the God who made New Hampshire taunted the lofty mountains with little men," but only a touch.

After all, the greatest of all New Englanders, Daniel Webster, had to leave the place and go to Massachusetts, and the only president from New Hampshire, Franklin Pierce, is usually forgotten, being forgettable. To the extent that he is re-

The Problem:

A NEW ENGLAND LIBERAL.

Still, New Hampshire is not without its strengths. There are those tall mountains, the rivers flowing through them and the dark, mysterious Connecticut Lakes. Then, too, no place abuted by Maine on one side and Vermont on the other can be all bad.

And now there is Mitchell, who officially takes over as chief Democratic senator from Robert Byrd of West Virginia and unofficially takes over as chief Democratic spokesman from both Byrd and House Speaker Jim Wright, who may not give up the role willingly but who is losing it nonetheless. This means that one

The Solution:

A different NEW ENGLAND LIBERAL.

New Englander will do the job now done by a West Virginian and a Texan, and it is an insult to neither state to call this a move in the right direction.

Such sentiments should be voiced now because New England has had a bad press of late. For months, Republicans kept going around talking about "the governor of Massachusetts" as though Massachusetts were a social disaster. Actually, Massachusetts is quite a nice place — a prosperous land with one of our finer oceans on one side, lovely mountains on the other and lots of good schools in between.

New England's image has also suffered from a few misconceptions. One is that New York is part of New England, an error perhaps attributable to the New York American League Baseball Club calling itself the Yankees. New York is a fine state, but it is not part of New England. Nor are New Yorkers real Yankees. Only New Englanders are real Yankees, and to New Englanders, only Vermonters — are real Yankees. To Vermonters, the only real Yankees are those who eat apple pie for breakfast.

The other misconception, resulting no doubt from its early settlement by folks known as Puritans, is that New Englanders are cold, stodgy and ... well, puritanical. Actually, there is some question as to whether the Puritans themselves were all that puritanical. But anyone who doubts that their geographical descendants are a lively, bawling and lusty lot need only spend an hour or two in a Boston saloon, or listen to the rural New England folk song which suggests that "we knock the milkmaids over, and roll them in the clover, the corn's half cut and so are we."

It is not necessary to be either a native or a resident to acknowledge New England's superiority. Nor need one prefer it to other parts of the country. Such preferences are subjective, and it is both inevitable and good that some people prefer the prairies, some the Northern forests, some the deserts, some the Rocky Mountains, some the Deep South, and even that a few prefer California.

But New England is better than the rest because it is beautiful, because it is sensible, because it is both lively enough to face the future and careful enough to preserve the past, and just because it is. A government dominated by New Englanders gives some cause for optimism.

John Margolis writes for The Chicago Tribune.

Canceling of Christmas in Bethlehem is sad, appropriate

To reach the spot where, tradition has it, Jesus was born, you go to an ancient Russian Orthodox Church off Manger Square in Bethlehem. The church door is low, to prevent horsemen from riding in, so you have to bend over to enter.

The Church of the Nativity is in a permanent state of archeological restoration. In the rear of the sanctuary, past the project, there is a circular staircase which leads down to a marble-lined room in the floor of which is set a silver star.

"To believers in the Christmas tradition, and in the Incarnation, this is the spot at which the Word, made flesh, came to dwell among us," full of grace and truth," as John's Gospel expresses it.

The tradition may not be true. Fundamentally, it was held to the literal truth of the Bible believe it. People unfamiliar with theological controversy believe it.

But skeptics and many serious, devout

David B. Wilson

Christian scholars are inclined to believe that the story of Joseph and Mary trekking in the cold by donkey from Nazareth, a country town far to the north, to Bethlehem, near Jerusalem, is implausible. There are problems with the dates. The skeptics think the legend was propaganda made up by early Christians who wished to convert Jews to the belief that Jesus was the Messiah of the house and lineage of David, whose city was Bethlehem.

Nevertheless, the story is one of great beauty and meaning, and, however drunken and hedonistic the observance may have become (historically it is related to the Roman Saturnalia), the carols, the story of the star, the three kings with their exemplary gifts, the angels, the shepherds and the Christ

Child in the manger remain moving and evocative of tenderness and hope.

Perhaps it is true, just as it is related in Luke. Perhaps it is not. But in this time in the United States, it is a wellspring and fountainhead of concern for homeless people, for whom there is often "no room ... at the inn."

People who contend that Christianity is a failure cannot be sure whether the world might have been a lot worse off without it.

Modern-day Bethlehem has decided to cancel its official celebration of Christmas this year because of the intifada, the Palestinian uprising and its harsh suppression by Israel. Bethlehem of Judea is in what these days is termed the occupied West Bank, a half hour's drive from Jerusalem.

Cancellation of the observance is a serious and painful decision. Bethlehem's Christian and Muslim Arabs ordinarily get a good part of their livings from the sale of olive-wood carvings and inland matter-of-pearl souvenirs faring to do with the Christmas story. Among their best customers are American Christians from Texas and even more exotic places who believe that the state of Israel is a sign, foreboding the Second Coming and the Last Things.

As of Tuesday, according to Reuters, 329 Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza and 11 Israelis had been killed, many of them women and children, in the uprising, whose anniversary will be Friday. Thousands more have been wounded and arrested.

The violence in which Israeli soldiers with military weapons have largely been confronting stone-throwing teen-agers shows no signs of abating.

The Palestinians, at great cost in blood and treasure, have achieved the declaration of a Palestinian state, international support for their cause and the public diplomatic isolation of Israel and its American ally.

Next week, the United Nations General Assembly will welcome Yasser Arafat to Geneva, meeting outside the United States for the first time in its 45-year history. Only the United States and Israel voted in the assembly against this decision, costly demonstration of world support for the Palestinians.

Under the circumstances, it is probably just as well that there will be no formal observance of Christmas in Bethlehem. Nothing could be more inappropriate, given the slaughter of the innocent in the vicinity. In Rome, in Calvinist Geneva and in Texas, the holiday will be celebrated in the hearts of those who care, whatever the details and intensities of their beliefs. That is clearly not enough; but it is something.

Letters/Hospital, Hailey airport draw comment

Citizens should watch hospital

Magic Valley Hospital is in the news again! Two years ago, John Bingham convinced the board that unless the hospital was transferred, it would go bankrupt.

Now, two years later, they have a $17 million surplus.

I was on the committee to investigate the transfer and I could not understand the reasoning.

I have previous experience in forming a hospital district and have some knowledge of financial statements after 40 years banking, so I requested that I be on the committee.

The information furnished the committee was "top" transfer and I kept asking if there was any negative information on the transfer.

I was ignored. Fortunately the good people rejected the transfer at the ballot.

John Bingham is a good administrator, but never forget that he still works for HCA and not the county commissioners.

I tried to talk to Marvin Hempelman about HCA, the transfer and the financial statement, but he would not discuss it with me. Do you know him with facts?

His mind was made up.

Why are all architectural, planning and building contracts going to or through HCA without bid? Is there no one in Idaho qualified? Why would a board contract to buy property without a legal opinion with a good attorney sitting on the board?

Has the county given the hospital to HCA? Until the commissioners take control and change the board of directors, the citizens of Twin Falls County had better watch their hospital.

point are merely needless duplication of effort. Also, a traffic count was accomplished by the State Bureau of Aeronautics in recent years and it is on file there.

The FAA estimate, which places the Friedman Airport as 35th in the list of airports in the northwest region without towers and who may need them, cannot possibly be valid if safety considerations are used as a criteria.

When compared to the other 34 airports, Friedman is unique and should rank within the top several airports for control tower consideration because:

1. There is limited airspace in the area surrounding the airport due to mountainous terrain and with poor prospects of missed approach procedures to the north.
2. The high incidence of traffic conflict.
3. There is a mixture of corporate jets and piston twins, commuter airlines, charter flights, private single and multi-engine operations, air freight operations, and gliders along with other sport aviation. This is typical of some other airports, but most of those do not have the airspace limitations which exist at Hailey.
4. Regulations are frequently violated by some pilots. Mr. Bennett's study made note of this. Mr. Bennett is a truly outstanding Aviation Safety Representative — I have the utmost respect for him.

The FAA maneuvering on this issue reminds me of the many delays which Idaho encountered in getting a Distance-Measuring Equipment Navigation aid installed in Lewiston some years ago.

I would be highly interested in knowing why the FAA is not using the previously stated intention of evaluating Friedman on safety considerations instead of traffic count. My concern is for some semblance of order on the traffic flow in and out of some very confined airspace.

I congratulate Mr. Paschel Drake, Airport Manager on his fine efforts to keep things safe. He needs and deserves the support of all pilots (and politicians).

Teachers' union is for survival

"Common sense has solved the world's most pressing problems since the beginning of civilization" — so said M. F. Smith of Buhl in rebutting the observations of Albin's Jim Kempton.

Smith must have established residence on a different planet from most of the rest of us — "common sense" has been largely ineffectual in resolving such dilemmas as nuclear proliferation, over population and degradation of the environment. Indeed, the most crucial decisions requiring some sort of action by the human race are still being made from a theological or ideological perspective, and "common sense" never enters the equation.

Witness the recent unveiling of the B-2 Stealth bomber, a sophisticated war toy which the government candidly admits pricing at, pound for pound, more than gold.

Common sense has also thoroughly ameliorated the waste disposal problem at INEL — just ask Liz Paul.

Smith's principal focus and primary villain is the teacher's union. He no sooner identifies this entity as the "problem" than he goes on to state, "No employee can do his best perpetually surrounded by an ongoing environment of controversy."

He neglects to address the question of why the controversy exists. If he had even the most rudimentary knowledge of the history of the labor movement he would be aware that all unions, including those associated with education, are born of necessity, as an outgrowth of the age-old conflict between property rights and human rights, and ultimately, of the debate as to what constitutes "wealth."

The central question can be forever laid to rest by several means, none likely to enjoy popular support. We can revert to some sort of "divine right of kings" mentality, thereby transferring title to all resources, including labor, to a select elite.

Smith's assertion that unions are the problem, as opposed to the answer in education, is one side of the coin, not a universal truth.

Teacher-join unions for the same reasons as auto workers, truck drivers and coal miners — it's a matter of survival in a system dominated by the "common sense" solutions of the Bill Bennets of the world.

CSI should cater to customers

This is an open letter to the president and board of CSI.

What occurred yesterday brought home the fact that CSI is not student (customer) oriented and prompted this letter. When I refer to this as a student (customer) oriented I do not want to leave the impression that the teachers are not student (customer) oriented. CSI is blessed with many excellent and caring teachers (i.e.: Dave Makings, Dr. Gentry, Paula Edmonds-Hollifield, Mrs. Powers, Mr. Speyer, and Mr. Studebaker, to name only a few). However, when a student (customer) is attempting to arrange classes, it becomes obvious that it is almost impossible to do.

I don't want this to appear as an isolated case. I am acquainted with many people in the Magic Valley through work and in my capacity as Educational Foundation Coordinator. I have heard of this happening to many, many people of all ages and lifestyles.

A large amount of the classes for next semester are scheduled in the morning and few in the afternoons or evenings. Some classes only have one class scheduled. I called CSI and inquired about this. I was told I had to "wait" for some of the teachers don't like to teach in the afternoons. So the classes are all scheduled for the mornings?

To say I was upset by this response is an understatement! A community college is supported by the community and should be able to meet the community's needs, whether it is by offering courses with more flexible hours or by simply responding to the community's questions. If we were sick and went to the doctor, paid the doctor, and never received a diagnosis or treatment, we wouldn't go back or pay another bill. That doctor would soon be out of business. So... who is CSI there for? The students and community (CSI's customers) or the teachers and administration?

I work 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and am on call 24 hours a day. Shall I tell my supervisor I want the same wages but I'll only work 8 a.m. to noon and my EF students can only call between 6 and 8 p.m. and I'm "customers" be damned? I don't think so! I know there are businesses who close to go fishing or hunting or whatever.

Fine, that's their choice, but CSI is supported by my tax dollars and years and the fees charged the students (customers) all. They (CSI) owe us service, respect and cooperation. Just because many students are young and not experienced in demanding the service they paid for does not give CSI the right to exploit them.

How do we correct this problem? If anyone has an answer or suggestion please let me know. There are many, many people attempting to use the College of Southern Idaho to further their education. Most of us are finding frustration instead. Something must be done to meet their needs.

PAULA G. MEUNIER

FAA must look at safety factors

With respect to the Friedman Airport control tower issues, I had the clear and distinct understanding that the airport was surveyed by Mr. Don Bennett of Northwest Region FAA on the basis of safety consideration, not traffic count. Traffic counts have already been conducted and further counts at this

Airline performance improves

WASHINGTON (AP) — The airlines reported a better than 80 percent on-time record for the seventh straight month in October, despite increased delays in the Chicago area because of air traffic control problems, the Transportation Department said Wednesday.

The 13 largest domestic air carriers reported 83.4 percent of their flights arrived on time during October, although the arrival rate at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport was only 73.4 percent because of flight restrictions. Eastern Airlines, which early this year was constantly among the worst on-time performers, compiled the best record among the 13 airlines in October, with Eastern planes arriving within 15 minutes of schedule 90.3 percent of the time during the month.

Eastern was followed by America West, 89.1 percent, and Delta Air Lines, 87.8 percent. Alaska Airlines had the worst record at 71.9 percent. USAir and United Airlines, which has a concentration of flights at Chicago, were not far behind with a 79.1 percent on-time mark.

Salt Lake City had the best arrival record in October with 89.6 percent of the flights landing on time. The Tampa, Fla., airport had an on-time arrival record of 88.4 percent. San Francisco had the world record with 92.1 percent of the planes arriving on time, followed by Chicago's O'Hare.

North drops bid to disclose some papers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House aide Oliver L. North on Wednesday dropped efforts to disclose a quarter of the 40,000 pages of classified documents he wants to use to defend criminal charges arising from the Iran-Contra affair.

Defense lawyers filed a brief statement that they were withdrawing 10,000 pages of CIA intelligence cables on Nicaragua that were listed in North's Nov. 14 notice of government secrets he wants to reveal in a public trial.

The monthly intelligence cables covered a three-year period from January 1984 through December 1985, a month after the Iran-Contra affair became known and North was dismissed from his job at the National Security Council.

In a motion last month, Walsh sought to bar the defense from using any secret documents as evidence. Walsh accused the defense of listing a large number of irrelevant documents "to overwhelm the court's and the government's abilities to conduct proceedings" under the Classified Information Procedures Act.

He specifically criticized North's listing of "large swatches of CIA cables concerning Nicaragua that bear only the most tangential relation to the subject matter of the case."

Wright probe will continue into next year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ethics investigation of House Speaker Jim Wright is likely to extend into next year, members of the ethics committee said following a meeting on the case Wednesday.

"I think you can make book on that," said Rep. John T. Myers, R-Ind., the senior minority member of the House panel, when asked whether the investigation will extend into 1989.

"It will be next year," said another Republican member, Rep. Thomas Petri of Wisconsin. "We've still got some loose ends to tie up."

Myers said the six GOP members of the 12-member committee all were reappointed Wednesday to new terms to provide continuity at least until the Wright probe is completed.

Wright, D-Texas, has been under investigation since last June on contentions that he improperly used his office for financial gain and that he improperly used his position to lobby federal officials on behalf of Texas interests.

The outside counsel appointed to handle the investigation, Richard J. Phelan, has completed all but the last few of dozens of depositions taken in connection with the case, ethics committee Chairman Julian Dixon, D-Calif., said after the panel met Wednesday.

Envelope ban a dead letter

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Postal Service has decided not to ban the red-and-blue bordered airmail envelopes from its domestic mail service.

Ever since it began moving most first-class mail by air, some postal purists have wanted to restrict the use of such envelopes to international mail.

According to the Federal Register, a majority of mailers believed that "red-and-blue markings attract the attention of mail recipients because those markings are generally associated in the public mind with the importance of domestic airmail."

As a result, the Postal Service has withdrawn the proposed ban, acknowledging in its withdrawal statement that this rule would have brought only marginal mail-processing benefits.

Governors praise ruling allowing state veto on Guard training

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Two governors praised a U.S. appeals court ruling upholding their right to veto national Guard training missions.

But the author of the law that had denied them that authority said the ruling was disturbing.

The court's decision restores the effective balance between the state and federal governments with regard to authority over the National Guard.

Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich, who had challenged the law, said in a statement released by his office Tuesday.

Responding to Perpich's challenge, the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled 2-1 Tuesday that the law is unconstitutional.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, whose state lost a similar challenge in the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in October, called the ruling a "victory for common sense, the Constitution and the governors of the United States."

But Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, D-Miss., who wrote the so-called Montgomery Amendment taking away governors' control over Guard units, said the ruling could hamper the Guard's effectiveness.

"If 50 governors are allowed to veto Guard missions because they don't like the way our foreign policy is administered, it would have an adverse impact on training and would raise questions about the availability of the Guard to meet its considerable defense responsibilities," he said.

Because the decision conflicted with the 1st Circuit's previous ruling, the matter may have to be decided by the Supreme Court.

In the meantime, federal officials said, the ruling will not immediately affect Guard training.

Perpich and Dukakis said Tuesday's ruling reaffirms constitutionally guaranteed state rights. Ohio, Colorado, Vermont and Maine also supported the Minnesota lawsuit.

The Montgomery Amendment went too far in tipping the balance of power toward the federal government," said Perpich, who was vacationing in Hawaii.

Dukakis, the unsuccessful Democratic presidential nominee, also criticized what he said was the Reagan administration's policy of using Guard troops in Central America to destabilize Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista regime.

"That policy has been a failure," he said in Boston.

Massachusetts Guard units in Central America were criticized by Vice President George Bush during the presidential campaign.

Massachusetts Attorney General James Shannon said his state now is more likely to appeal the ruling in its case.

Tabernacle Choir to sing for Bush

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Mormon Tabernacle Choir has accepted an invitation to sing at the inaugural of President George Bush in January, church officials say.

The event will mark the fifth time the choir has performed at a presidential inauguration. Church spokesman Don LeFevre said the group also sang for Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon and both of President Reagan's inaugurations.

The choir, organized in 1847, first performed for a president in 1911 when they sang for President William Howard Taft.

Woman shoots 5, kills 1 at shelter

DENVER (AP) — A resident of a battered-women's shelter shot and killed a woman and wounded four other people Wednesday, then barricaded herself briefly in her room with two children before giving up, police said.

The assailant had threatened to kill the children and an officer if he entered the room, said police spokeswoman Ann Montoya.

The motive for the shootings at the Brandon Center was not immediately known, nor was the relationship between the woman and the children.

Mondale advises Quayle on VP job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dan Quayle, investigating how as vice president he will involve himself in fighting drugs, exploring space and picking his staff, got some advice from Walter Mondale — stay away from trivia.

Mondale, who was vice president under President Carter and the Democratic presidential nominee in 1984, said after meeting with Quayle on Wednesday that the Indiana senator is "obviously serious about this job."

Although Quayle was denounced by Democrats throughout the campaign as unfit for the post, Mondale told reporters: "I believe he can do it and I believe he wants to do it. He's been elected by the people of the United States and we all better hope that he does a good job."

Report: Cuts won't cause recession

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Economic Commission, trying to break the seven-year deadlock over huge budget deficits, was told Wednesday that it matters little to overall economic performance whether the deficit reduction comes from spending cuts or tax increases.

The high-level advisory panel received a study prepared by the Congressional Budget Office that showed that a full-scale assault on the budget deficit will not cause a recession as long as the Federal Reserve helps out by lowering interest rates to offset the reduced federal spending.

The CBO report rejected arguments often raised by critics that the current economic recovery could be thrown into a recession if the budget deficit is brought down too rapidly or if politicians rely too heavily on tax increases to close the gap between revenues and spending.

U.S. oil reserve vulnerable to attack

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Strategic Petroleum Reserve, this country's first line of defense against a foreign oil embargo, is vulnerable to a terrorist attack, congressional investigators and Energy Department officials said Wednesday.

"Improvements are needed in the (reserve) security program," Keith Fultz of the congressional General Accounting Office told the House Government Operations subcommittee on environment, energy and natural resources.

Fultz said a mock terrorist attack on the 550-million-barrel reserve in Louisiana and Texas last year symbolically damaged or destroyed facilities vital to recovering the oil from underground caverns during an embargo.

FAA fines airlines $1.6 million for lax security

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration fined 29 airlines more than $1.6 million Wednesday for security lapses at passenger checkpoints, although officials said the violations have declined significantly in the past year.

The civil penalties ranged from $1,000 against a handful of commuter carriers — the minimum for a single violation — to more than $200,000 apiece against American Airlines, Northwest Airlines and United Airlines for each having more than two dozen violations.

The penalties stemmed from failures by security guards at airport checkpoints to detect 236 mock weapons carried or hidden in carry-on baggage by undercover FAA officials. Most of the violations occurred between April and September of this year.

Four airlines were cited for at least two dozen violations: United, 33 violations for $219,000 in fines; Northwest, 29 violations for $208,000 in fines; American, 28 violations for $208,000 in fines; and USAir, 26 violations for $179,000 in fines.

Other airlines and their violations and fines were: Pan American World Airways, 19 and $154,000; Delta Air Lines, 17 and $116,000; Continental Airlines, 14 and $85,000; Eastern Airlines, 11 and $65,000; Alaska Airlines, 10 and $64,000; Trans World Airlines, 9 and $72,000; America West, 7 and $61,000;

Piedmont Airlines, 5 and $32,000; Hawaiian Airlines, 5 and $23,000; Midway, 4 and $31,000; Skywest, 2 and $20,000; Air Midwest, Braniff and Great Lakes Airline, all 2 with $11,000 apiece; Aloha Airlines, Atlantic SE Airline, Aviation Assoc. (Eastern Metro), Resort Air-Trans World-Ky-press, and Wings West, all 1 violation and $10,000 apiece; MarkAir, Pacific Southwest (since merged with USAir), Reeve Aulton, Simmons (American Eagle), Tennessee Airways and Tower Air, each 1 violation and $1,000.

Rock 'n' Roll great Roy Orbison, 52, dies

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Rock 'n' roll pioneer Roy Orbison, whose sultry falsetto mourned the misery of fading romance, suffered a heart attack and died. He was 52, and was enjoying a comeback with a new generation of fans.

The Grammy Award-winning Orbison, famed for hits like "Oh, Pretty Woman," "Only the Lonely" and "Cryin'," died shortly before midnight Tuesday at Hendersonville Hospital, where he had been taken by ambulance, said Melanie Lamb, a spokeswoman for the suburban Nashville hospital.

"He was and always will be one of the greats of rock 'n' roll," said former Beatle Paul McCartney. "We toured with Roy in the early days and he was a really good guy."

A singer, guitarist and songwriter who was instantly recognizable by his ever-present sunglasses and dark attire set off by an ebony pompadour, Orbison had 27 straight records on the charts during his heyday in the early 1960s.

But his biggest success came with "Oh, Pretty Woman," about a flirtatious episode, which sold more than 7 million copies in 1964. A cover version later was a hit for Van Halen. In 1977, Elvis Presley, one year Orbison's senior, introduced him as "the greatest singer in the world." Bruce Springsteen saluted him in his song "Thunder Road." Last year, he recorded his 1963 hit "In Dreams" after the song had been revived in the movie "Blue Velvet."

But it was Orbison's recent recordings as one of The Traveling Wilburys — along with ex-Beatle George Harrison, Tom Petty, Bob Dylan and Jeff Lynne — that brought him a new generation of fans. The group's "Handle With Care" is No. 46 on the charts and their swift-selling album "The Traveling Wilburys" is No. 8.

The upturn in his career surprised him, Orbison said last week as he was leaving London for home. "I've been rediscovered by young kids who had never heard of me before the Wilburys," he said. "They are getting into my original songs and apparently the old stuff is selling at the rate of 20,000 copies a day."

"It's very nice to be wanted again, but I still can't quite believe it." Harrison, in England, was too shocked at news of Orbison's death to comment, said Warner Bros. spokesman Bob Merlis.

Orbison was upbeat a few weeks ago when he met with record producer Fred Foster, who had worked with the singer since the early days. "He seemed in good health. He was exercising and all that," Foster said Wednesday. "He was the most talented man I ever worked with."

Orbison got his early recording experience in the 1950s with Sun Records of Memphis, the label that launched the careers of Elvis Presley, Johnny Cash and Jerry Lee Lewis. He was one of the first "rockabilly" singers — a hybrid of rock 'n' roll and hillbilly music, as country music was known then.

His career peaked in the first half of the 60s but tailed off in the aftermath of two family tragedies: His wife died in a motorcycle accident in 1966 and in 1968, two of his three sons, ages 10 and 6, died in a fire. "A little hurt went a long way," he said in a 1986 Associated Press interview. His song "Too Soon to Know" was inspired by the death of his wife. Some of his big hits were "Blue Bayou," "It's Over," "Mean Woman Blues" and "Dream Baby." He won a Grammy Award for his 1980 collaboration with Emmylou Harris on "That Loving You Feeling Again."

In addition to "The Traveling Wilburys," two of his most recent albums were "Clones of 55" and "The Great Roy Orbison."

On Sept. 30, 1987, Orbison gave a concert at Los Angeles' Coconut Grove nightclub, "Roy Orbison and Friends: A Black-and-White Night." The friends were Springsteen, Elvis Costello, Jackson Browne, Tom Waits, T-Bone Burnett and J.D. Souther, with Bonnie Raitt, Jennifer Warnes and K.D. Lang singing backup.

Rock 'n' Roll great Roy Orbison, 52, dies

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Rock 'n' roll pioneer Roy Orbison, whose surprising falsetto mourned the misery of fading romance, suffered a heart attack and died. He was 52, and was enjoying a comeback with a new generation of fans.

The Grammy Award-winning Orbison, famed for hits like "Oh, Pretty Woman," "Only the Lonely" and "Cryin'," died shortly before midnight Tuesday at Hendersonville Hospital, where he had been taken by ambulance, said Melanie Lamb, a spokeswoman for the suburban Nashville hospital.

"He was and always will be one of the greats of rock 'n' roll," said former Beatle Paul McCartney. "We toured with Roy in the early days and he was a really good guy."

A singer, guitarist and songwriter who was instantly recognizable by his ever-present sunglasses and dark attire set off by an ebony pompadour, Orbison had 27 straight records on the charts during his heyday in the early 1960s.

But his biggest success came with "Oh, Pretty Woman," about a flirtatious episode, which sold more than 7 million copies in 1964. A cover version later was a hit for Van Halen.

In 1977, Elvis Presley, one year Orbison's senior, introduced him as "the greatest singer in the world." Bruce Springsteen saluted him in his song "Thunder Road." Last year, he recorded his 1963 hit "In Dreams" after the song had been revived in the movie "Blue Velvet."

But it was Orbison's recent recordings as one of The Traveling Wilburys — along with ex-Beatle George Harrison, Bob Petty, Bob Dylan and Jeff Lynne — that brought him a new generation of fans. The group's "Handle With Care" is No. 45 on the charts and their swift-selling album "The Traveling Wilburys" is No. 8.

The upturn in his career surprised him, Orbison said last week as he was leaving London for home.

"I've been rediscovered by young kids who had never heard of me before the Wilburys," he said. "They are getting into my original songs and apparently the old stuff is selling at the rate of 20,000 copies a day."

"It's very nice to be wanted again, but I still can't quite believe it."

Harrison, in England, was too shocked at news of Orbison's death to comment, said Warner Bros. spokesman Bob Merila.

Orbison was upset a few weeks ago when he met with record producer Fred Foster, who had worked with the singer since the early days.

"He seemed in good health. He was exercising and all that," Foster said Wednesday. "He was the most talented man I ever worked with."

Orbison got his early recording experience in the 1950s with Sun Records of Memphis, the label that launched the careers of Elvis Presley, Johnny Cash and Jerry Lee Lewis. He was one of the first "rockabilly" singers — a hybrid of rock 'n' roll and hillbilly music, as country music was known then.

His career peaked in the first half of the '60s but tailed off in the aftermath of two family tragedies: His wife died in a motorcycle accident in 1966 and in 1968, two of his three sons, ages 10 and 6, died in a fire.

"A little hurt went a long way," he said in a 1986 Associated Press interview. His song "The Soon to Know" was inspired by the death of his wife.

Some of his big hits were "Blue Bayou," "It's Over," "Mean Woman Blues," and "Dream Baby."

In addition to "The Traveling Wilburys," two of his most recent albums were "Class of '55" and "The Great Roy Orbison."

On Sept. 30, 1987, Orbison gave a concert at Los Angeles Coconut Grove nightclub, "Roy Orbison and Friends: A Black-and-White Night." The friends were Springsteen, Elvis Costello, Jackson Browne, Tom Waits, T-Bone Burnett and J.D. Souther, with Bonnie Raitt, Jennifer Warnes and K.D. Lang singing back-up.

State still plans to take over Hawkins Co. Ltd.

By CRAIG LINCOLN
 Times-News correspondent

FILER — The state still intends to seize Hawkins Co. Ltd. and the director of the Idaho Department of Agriculture will speak to growers tonight to explain the department's plans.

Greg Nelson, the department's acting director, will speak at 7:30 p.m. tonight at the Filer High School Auditorium. All growers and other interested parties are urged to attend.

Nelson will explain the state's plans, said Growers Association steering committee member Bob Cornie of Buhl.

The Hawkins Bean Growers Association moved last night to quell fears that the state will force the company into receivership and possible bankruptcy, a move that could jeopardize growers' claims to beans stored in Hawkins. A series of late-night phone calls Tuesday resulted in a meeting Wednesday at Bliss.

"Misunderstandings have arisen over the status of the Department of Agriculture's actions in the Hawkins warehouse matter," said a press release from association. The press release was the result of a meeting Wednesday between Nelson, members of the growers association steering committee and area legislators.

The steering committee hopes the meeting will "head off everybody hiring lawyers," said John Draney of Filer, also on the steering committee.

Nelson said the state intends to file a seizure action this morning.

"The seizure is where we ask the court to allow the state to take over the management of the warehouse," Nelson said. It will protect all the assets because nothing can be removed, Nelson said.

"It's really designed to protect the grower from any loss of whatever's in there," Nelson said.

Receivership, on the other hand, is when the court appoints a receiver to start liquidation.

"What we're doing in the seizure is working with all parties to try to put together the best package we can," Nelson said.

The growers association said seizure will protect growers' interests because assets, such as the beans Hawkins is holding for farmers, will be preserved.

Just reconciling disputes between farmers and Hawkins could take three weeks, Nelson estimated.

Then, by the time we meet with growers, the bankers, the management people, and try to determine what assets there are, it will probably be past Christmas, Nelson said. "It's not in anyone's best interest that we take too long to do this."

The state released a physical inventory Monday revealing a shortage of 89,776 sacks. About 29,000 of those sacks are in dispute, meaning growers' and Hawkins' records don't match.

The announcement was the first step in an audit conducted by the state. Hawkins' directors called the state Nov. 22 when they discovered inventory discrepancies. The state suspended the warehouse's license that day.

First Security Bank is currently providing guard service at the warehouse, according to the press release.

The seizure will give everybody involved a chance to negotiate and agree on an appropriate settlement while avoiding bankruptcy, the association's press release said.

Avoiding lawsuits is also on the mind of the Buhl Church of God in Christ Mennonite members.

"We're interested in a peaceful, orderly settlement," said Wayne Amoth of the Mennonite Church. "If necessary, to discount it, if there's a deficiency, be willing to discount it."

"I just hope, I really hope, that this comes to a peaceful, orderly settlement as soon as possible," Amoth said.

Draney said he called Hawkins after it closed Tuesday to find no seizure papers had been served on the warehouse. He called state Representative Doug Jones, R-Filer.

Draney, a member of the Filer School Board, talked to several other legislators attending a meeting with valley school board members. Those legislators called Nelson at home and arranged the meeting Wednesday at Bliss.

By N.S. NOKKENTVED
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Three lawyers passed around the blame Wednesday in their opening statements in a trial over the 1984 Salmon Falls Creek flood.

The attorney for the plaintiffs blamed the incident on the Salmon River Canal Co., whose attorney in turn put the blame on the Buhl and Twin Falls highway districts. The Buhl Highway District attorney passed the blame back to the canal company.

The comments came Wednesday afternoon during first stages of a civil suit filed by residents downstream from the Salmon Falls Dam. The plaintiffs are suing the canal company over damages from a May 1984 flood they claim resulted from the canal company's negligent handling of above-normal spring runoff.

Snow reports during the winter of 1983-84 indicated an above-normal snowpack and consequent above-normal spring runoff.

"If you know how much water is in your reservoir, and you know how much water is going to come into your reservoir, you can tell if it's going to fill up or not," said John Lezamiz, attorney for the plaintiffs.

The evidence will show that by Jan. 1 it was known that not only would the reservoir fill but that they would have to spill over 50,000-acre feet of water, Lezamiz said. "And the Salmon River Canal Co. did nothing about it."

The canal company was advised of the abnormally high snow level and moisture content of that snow and that the reservoir would not be able to hold all that water, Lezamiz said. He also said people downstream asked the canal company to start spilling small amounts of water from the reservoir to prevent possible damage to downstream property.

Lezamiz said evidence would show that small releases over a portion of time would have prevented downstream damage.

By April 1 there was now 60,000 acre feet more than the dam could hold, Lezamiz said. The canal company refused to provide flood control for the people who lived downstream and had become accustomed to 77 years of low flows, he said.

Lloyd Webb, attorney for the canal company, explained that since the dam was built in 1911 the reservoir had never filled and no water had ever had to be spilled. The closest it had come to filling was in 1975, when it reached a level five feet below the high-level limit of 80 feet.

During previous years of above-normal snowfall when the canal company had been warned that the reservoir would fill and require spilling some water, the reservoir had in fact not filled, Webb said.

During the 1984 spring, the canal company had no reason to think it would be any different, Webb said. The company wanted to fill the reservoir.

"If you're an irrigator, you want that reservoir full," Webb said. The company wanted some water to carry over to the next year.

"In Idaho, you never know what the next year will bring," Webb said.

With a snowpack 200 percent of normal in January, 1984 looked like a good water year. It was not that much different from earlier high-water years of 1970, 1971, and 1975, Webb said. What happened in late

Remote Idaho forests draw marijuana growers in droves

By AMY GAMERMAN
 States News Service

WASHINGTON — Forced out of states with tough drug-enforcement programs, marijuana growers are migrating to Idaho's rugged and remote forest areas, and Forest Service officials say they are hard-pressed to do much about it.

The scarcity of law-enforcement officers in many of Idaho's forest areas has enabled drug growers to harvest their crops undetected, Forest Service officials said this week. Growers are using increasingly sophisticated techniques to escape surveillance by aircraft, one of the service's chief means of spotting marijuana fields.

Although an over-stressed Forest Service staff made fewer marijuana busts this year, statistics to be released later this month indicate that drug production has increased from previous years, and that out-of-state growers are continuing to set up camp in Idaho's national forests, officials say.

"Growers, when faced with heat in a particular area, move out," said Ed Few, the Forest Service's assistant branch chief for law enforcement. "Idaho is a safer area."

"At least once every year we run into somebody who's basically transplanted themselves into Idaho, especially out of the California area where there's a very heavy emphasis on drug enforcement," said Dan Charboneau, deputy chief with Idaho's Bureau of Narcotics and the supervisor of the state's Marijuana Eradication Program.

In this year's biggest drug bust, two Florida residents were arrested on the Nez Perce National Forest, and their crop of 400 marijuana plants was eradicated. That suggests a growing pattern to Mike Merkley, the Forest Service's special agent in charge of the Nez Perce and Clearwater forests.

"We have a reputation nationwide as the place to grow quality dope," Merkley said.

In forests in Southern Idaho, including the Boise, Caribou, Payette, Salmon, Sawtooth and Targhee National Forests, a total of 679 marijuana plants were destroyed in 21 sites. Forest Service investigators found 44 sites that had already been harvested by drug growers, for a total of 1,445 plants.

In the Sawtooth forest, 195 plants were eradicated on three sites. Growers are known to have harvested 800 plants on 10 sites.

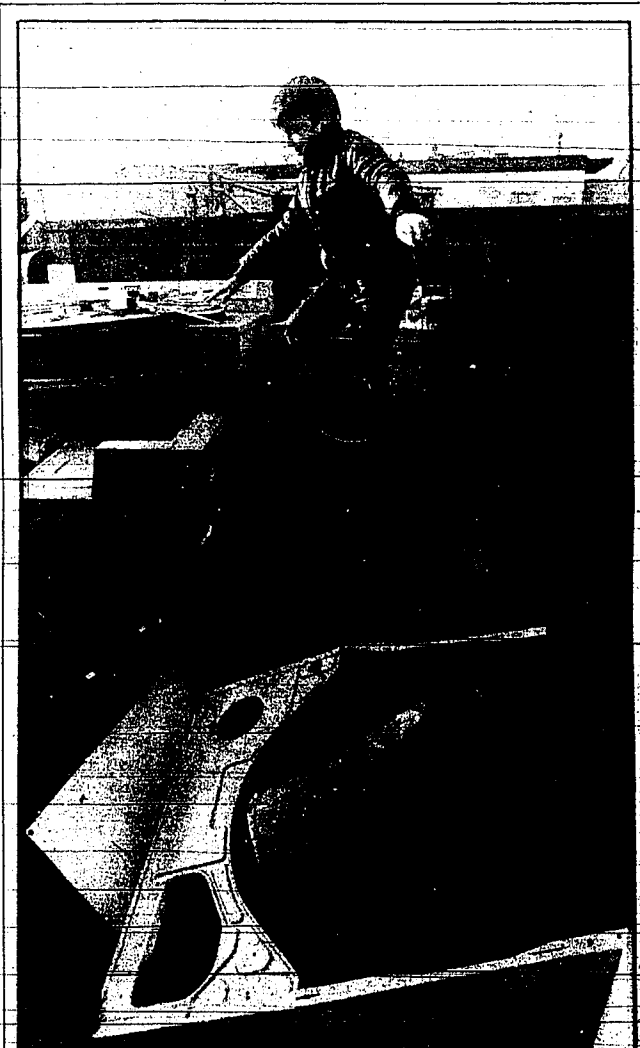

The climate and terrain of Idaho's forests are well-suited to marijuana cultivation. Mountainous forest regions shelter large valleys where marijuana can be planted undiscovered.

"There are places that hardly ever get frost," Merkley said. The growing season is extended all the way to December.

Drug growers on forests in Northern Idaho, including the Panhandle, Nez Perce and Clearwater forests, have adopted more sophisticated techniques to avoid detection, said Tom King, the Forest Service regional law enforcement officer for Northern Idaho.

"(Growers) used to place marijuana plants in openings where they could be stumbled on or seen by air," King said. "Now they're taking pains to plant it in areas surrounded by vege-

British sugar producer may buy Amalgamated

The Times News and Associated Press

OGDEN, Utah — A British sugar producer is the tentative buyer of Amalgamated Sugar, whose Twin Falls and Rupert factories employ about 800 Magic Valley workers.

Bristar — the food division of S&W Bestfoods, which also owns British Sugar — has made an unsolicited offer to buy the Ogden-based Amalgamated for an undisclosed amount, company officials said Wednesday.

Amalgamated's parent company, Valhi Inc. of Dallas, has tentatively accepted the offer, which it says will result in an after-tax gain of $185 million to the conglomerate.

The sale still must be approved by the directors of Bristar and Valhi.

Bristar has said that it intends to retain Amalgamated's current management. The sale will not result in any noticeable changes in the company's best sugar operations, said Amalgamated President Allan M. Lipman Jr.

"I think we'll operate on our own," he said.

City applies for federal funds for library

By KIRK MITCHELL
 Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — City leaders have applied for $325,000 in federal grant money to expand the library, but that doesn't necessarily mean improvements will be made, city officials say.

Even though an advisory committee has barely begun considering what to do with the library, the City Council voted Wednesday to apply for the money made available through the Library Services and Construction Act.

Library Director Arlan Call said the application keeps the city in contention for money that is awarded by the Idaho State Library. The state receives $160,000 in federal money each year to disperse among libraries with qualified building projects. No awards were made last year, and the state's fund has grown to $325,000.

"It's keeping us in position for funds... if the city's people say that is what they want to do," said Library Trustee Dennis Voorhes.

Call said Twin Falls is fifth on a list of Idaho cities seeking the funds. Twin Falls is applying for the whole $325,000 available, even though that much won't be available if other libraries receive awards — in fact, if the four applicants ahead of Twin Falls qualify for the money, there won't be any left over.

However, one of the applicants, which is fourth on the list and seeking $225,000, is tentative about its plans. If No. 4 drops out, Twin Falls will take its place.

The city would have to at least match the federal funds with money of its own.

If Twin Falls does not get federal money this year, it will be first in line next year. If the city qualifies but is unable to use the money immediately, it can reserve its claim on the funds for two years, Call said.

The grant proposal includes tentative plans for expansion that would double the library's size, increase book circulation from 100,000 to 465,000 and seating from about 65 to about 192.

The project would cost $1.5 million. The cost is calculated at a moderate rate of $75 per square foot.

However, the plans were for the benefit of the grant application, and the city would not be obligated to follow them. Still alive are three other options — renovate a donated downtown building, build a new library on a separate site or do nothing, Call said.

The application was not meant to anticipate what the 30-member Library Expansion Advisory Panel will do, he said.

The panel was formed in October to consider the library's future growth needs. Its recommendation to the city is not expected until early March.

If the city chooses to expand the library, a bond issue referendum would likely be required to raise funds for the city's portion of the project. Ideally, construction could begin by the summer of 1990, the grant application says.

Yellowstone fires spark revamping of Idaho suppression policy

MOSCOW (AP) — Fire bosses are using the massive Yellowstone National Park fires this year as a model case scenario to revamp suppression policy, a fire investigator says.

Richard Hodge, Palouse District Ranger for Idaho's Clearwater National Forest, has just returned home after taking part in a three-week investigation by the Forest Service and the National Park Service into the tactics used against the blazes that burned half of Yellowstone Park last summer.

"If we have conditions like this again, we can't afford to have prescribed fires; we've got to put them out," those fighting-sparked fires were not extinguished under the park service's controversial "let-burn" policy, which allows a naturally caused wildfire or work fire to run as long as it does not endanger life or property.

"I think what happened was nobody realized how severe the conditions were getting," said Hodge, who served as an incident commander on the Clover-Mist fire in Yellowstone for six weeks this summer.

"We brought in the best fire behavior specialists in the nation and they spent days putting together predictions of what these fires would do," he said, "but even with the best minds in the country, we did not come up with what really was going to happen."

The Clover-Mist fire charred 380,000 acres, jumping across the park boundary and into the Shoshone National Forest in Wyoming and the Custer National Forest in Montana.

It torched numerous buildings and trailers in its path.

Hodge and four others spent a week in Cody, Wyo., studying fire records.

"We've recommended (to policy-makers) that in the future, we want to look at the fire-behavior parameters and gear the attack toward what it was like this year," Hodge said.

spring, of 1984 was something the company couldn't have foreseen, he said.

Heavy low-level snow accumulations and a heavy late-April snowfall, followed by a "dramatic" rise in temperature resulted in a sudden increase in stream flows, Webb said. No significant increase in stream flow was seen until May, he said.

The reservoir could have handled flows predicted on April 1, Webb said. May 1, the canal company board of directors realized that it might have to spill water, but planned to fill the reservoir to the 75-foot level, five feet below the maximum, and then spill as necessary to protect the integrity of the dam.

When new flow predictions came in mid-May, the company decided to begin spilling 1,100 cubic feet per second on May 14.

The culvert under the "balanced

Rock Crossing 35 miles downstream has a capacity of 850 cfs, with the water level at the top of the culvert. As the water level rises over the top of the culvert the capacity increases with the pressure up to 2,100 cfs just before it begins to overflow.

With increasing spill at the dam, the highway districts began to make a cut in the earth-fill crossing to prevent the increased flow from washing out the crossing. At some point the culvert was blocked by a large rock. When the water level reached the level of the cut, the rushing water tore through the loose, uncompacted dirt, and 7,500 cfs ralled down the stream, tearing out irrigation pumps and damaging downstream property.

Webb argued if anyone was to blame for the flood damage it was the plaintiffs themselves who, along with the highway districts, should have been able to foresee the events just as well as the plaintiffs claim the canal company should have.

The highway districts also should take blame, Webb said, because problems at the crossing were not new and should have been anticipated with the high forecast runoff.

The spillway has a 3,300 cfs capacity. Downstream developments must keep that kind of flow in mind," Webb said, describing the flood as "the hundred-year event."

The fact that the culvert was blocked was not the fault of the canal company, Webb said.

Louis F. Racine, representing the Buhl Highway District, said however that the blame belongs squarely on the canal company, because if it were not for the high volume of spill from the dam, the highway districts would not have made the cut in the crossing, which may or may not have caused the blocked culvert.

"The evidence will show there was no problem at the crossing until the spill from the dam arrived," Racine said.

He also said the canal company was warned that with the heavy snowpack, a rapid warming with rain could result in peak stream flows. Nor did the canal company make any effort to determine the downstream effect of a spill, Racine said.

The Twin Falls Highway District's lawyer chose to make his opening statement later in the trial.

The plaintiffs did not bring action against the highway districts, but they were brought in after the canal company blamed them for the damage downstream. The districts also are seeking liability against the canal company, Racine said.

Jurors were instructed that the purpose of the trial was to establish liability only. It was not to establish the amounts of damages, if any.

Drugs

The Forest Service doesn't have the resources to conduct extensive surveillance activities, officers said. Drugs are one priority of a law enforcement team that must handle all criminal activity on national forest land, including timber theft and arson.

State and local police forces will investigate reports of drug-related activity on national forests, but those resources are invariably overstretched, Forest Service agents said.

Efforts were further hampered recently by last summer's spate of forest fires. Drug-related investigations were suspended during the height of the 1988 marijuana-growing season so that personnel could be freed up to fight the fires, he said.

"Fire activity was so extreme that fighting the drug, drug growing, everything else took a back seat and we went after the fires," King said.

These conditions have created an atmosphere in which drug growers can operate freely, officials said. As a result, Idaho-grown varieties of marijuana are gaining a larger market share and national reputation for potency.

"Salmon River Quiver" — the street name for marijuana-grown on the Nez Perce — is sold in the Southwest, Alaska and California, Merklely said.

Marijuana harvested on Idaho's "forests" is also being exported to Canada, according to Mac Thomson, the Forest Service law enforcement officer for Idaho's southern region.

Marijuana growers harvested more than eight times as many plants as the Forest Service destroyed, an estimate based on field agents' surveys of plantations that were harvested before they could be reached. Some 2,301 plants on 32 marijuana "gardens" or sites were destroyed by the Forest Service this year.

The potent sinsemilla plant, a high-quality, sweeter variety, with four or five times the street value of ordinary marijuana, was grown on at least 12 of those 32 sites.

The marijuana growers known harvest — 19,445 plants on 140 discovered sites — may represent only a small percentage of the actual harvest, Forest Service investigators said.

But while an understaffed drug enforcement team continues to wage an uphill battle in Idaho's forests, they did get some help this year from Mother Nature.

"We're currently in the middle of a three-year drought, which has adversely affected (marijuana) plants growing on national forests," Thomson said.

British Sugar is one of Europe's leading beet sugar companies. Amalgamated is among the U.S. leaders in beet sugar, accounting for 9 percent of domestic sugar production. Amalgamated, though headquartered in Ogden, mostly operates in Idaho and Oregon.

Amalgamated was founded in 1897 by David Eccles as The Ogden Sugar Co.

It employs 75 workers at its Ogden operations and another 11,025 full-time and 1,600 seasonal workers, mostly in Southern Idaho.

The company is finishing an anticipated record year in sales and earnings, recording $19.1 million in profits on sales of $295.6 million through the first three quarters of 1988.

The Twin Falls plant is expected to produce 300 million pounds of sugar this year under the company's White Satin label.

Amalgamated has had an informal relationship with British Sugar dating back 40 years, and Lipman has known managers of the company for some time, he said.

British Sugar representatives approached Lipman about a possible buyout in October, he said.

Recount confirms Democrat's victory
ROISE (AP) — A recount in the closely contested District 16 state Senate seat in Boise has confirmed a Democratic victory.

Deputy Secretary of State Ben Ysursa, who finished the recount on Wednesday, said the final tally showed Democrat Brian Donesley up by 55 votes.

The certified vote after the Nov. 8 election showed Donesley winning by 51 votes. Ysursa said the recount added three votes to Donesley's total and subtracted one from Kingert's.

The recounted tally showed Donesley with 5,956 votes to Kingert's 5,901. Kingert posted $1,600 in fines for the recount and will pay the actual expenses incurred by the state in conducting it.

2 valley schools may have to close

By DENISE TURNER
Times-News correspondent

DIETRICH—Two Magic Valley junior/senior high schools and possibly a third would have to close if the Legislature approves a state Department of Education committee's recommendation.

The department's Finance Advisory Committee has recommended that all high schools with less than 60 students and all combined junior and senior high schools with less than 80 students be denied state funding. The recommendation was released last week at an Idaho Board of Education meeting in Coeur d'Alene.

The loss of state funds would essentially kill a school because those funds make up about 60 percent of a district's total income.

In the Magic Valley, Dietrich and Bliss junior- and senior high schools would fall under the minimum. Camas might fall below the minimum within a few years but officials believe the school would qualify for a variance because of its remote location.

The Department of Education has adopted the recommendation and will present it to the Legislature, Robert Dutton, associate state superintendent of public instruction, said.

In Dietrich, where high school enrollment is 42 this year, Superintendent Wayne C. Perron said he is disappointed in the recommendation and blames state Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans.

"I think Jerry Evans is overstepping his bounds, and I've told him so," Perron said. "I feel he is trying to make a decision as if he knows what is better for people in a little community than the people there know, and I think he is out of line."

Bliss Superintendent Wendell Anderson, whose high school has 55 students, served on the state's subcommittee for small schools. "I voted against the finance committee's final proposal but it passed anyway," Anderson said.

Some small school officials say they suspect the recommendation is designed to force consolidation, long an emotional issue in Idaho.

Dutton disagreed, saying the com-

Dietrich High School students Michelle Hennessy, center, Kelly Jennings and Stacy Bowman prepare a meal in a foods and nutrition class. Dietrich's high school enrollment is below a recommended cut-off level for state funding mittee was formed about four years ago to study various financial issues. "This recommendation has to do with efficiency of the size of schools," Dutton said.

Evans noted that minimum attendance standards already exist for Idaho's elementary schools, but there has been no similar law for high schools.

Committee members, appointed by Evans, are school superintendents and university professors. They serve unless they change jobs or move. Members represent various school districts and geographic areas as well as large and small schools, Dutton said. Twin Falls Superintendent of Schools Carl Snow represents the Magic Valley on the committee, he said.

Dutton said the Education Department will put the recommendation into a proposal for Evans to present to Senate and House education committees of the 1989 Legislature.

The proposal is not a mandate for all small schools. Schools can apply for remote and necessary status, based mostly on location, and be exempt from the proposal, if it becomes law. If the variance is denied, schools have three years in which to decide what to do.

The Camas County school has a good chance of being classified as remote and necessary, school officials say.

"We will ask to be considered 'remote and necessary' if the Legislature passes," Camas Superintendent Harold Stroud said. Enrollment is expected to decline from the current 68 students, Stroud said. "I don't think the legislation makes much sense for our school because it is just not very feasible for where we are located."

Enrollments in other Magic Valley schools, such as Murtaugh and Castelford, are hovering just above the minimums but are not expected to drop below.

Anderson said Bliss will fight the proposal. "At our school, we will probably argue and fight. But, if this is mandated, it is going to happen," Anderson said. "At this time I can't say what we would do because we haven't had time to consider the options."

Perron has no definite plans at Dietrich either. "I'm sure we would

Oakley school still cold

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

OAKLEY — There's a chill in the air in Oakley.

Parents of students here say their children wear coats and wrap themselves in blankets at school because there is no heat and that the problem could have been solved this past summer.

Norman Hurst, superintendent of the Cassia County School District, says the administration has worked hard to correct the problems — heat pumps that keep breaking down and a defective furnace that feeds coal into the school's furnace.

In fact, Hurst said, the problem was solved late Monday and early Tuesday when the heat pumps were repaired and a new warmer was installed. The temperature in the junior/senior high building, was 70 degrees Wednesday morning, High School Principal J. B. Smith said, but parents aren't convinced.

"I'd say baloney," Lee Kitchen, mother of five students, said. "You just cannot believe anything you're told." One of her sons and some other students continued to wear coats in class Wednesday, she said.

The school's heating problems have continued for too long, Kitchen said. Teachers, she said, have been trying to heat their classrooms with hot air popcorn poppers and Bunsen burners.

"It's just completely ridiculous, especially when they (administrators) knew it was broken at the end of last year," Kitchen said, referring to the anger. "We get absolutely nowhere with Norman Hurst. He has got a song and dance for everything." She also charged that Hurst has not been honest with parents or dealing with the problem.

Another parent, Shelly Rasmussen, agreed, adding that the entire building has been cold for the last six weeks. Hurst "said it was fixed when it wasn't," she charged.

Jerome considers bond as a way to repair community pool

By DENISE TURNER
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Admitting that he understands how people react to the words "bond election," Jerome Public Works Director Larry Sloan approached the city council on Tuesday with a way to generate funds to repair the community's swimming pool.

Sloan said he has talked with officials of the First Security Bank and come up with some estimates to be used to formulate a bond issue proposal to repair the pool. "A $50,000 bond could add an average of $2 a year per residence in personal property tax over a 10-year period," he said.

This is based on interest figured at 7.47 percent. Original estimates of repairs for the pool ranged from $25,000 to $30,000, and Sloan explained that $20,000 worth of work would probably keep the pool operational. The pool, which city officials have described as in dangerous condition and in need of new filters and plumbing, backwashing devices and boiler systems, served 14,000 swimmers last year.

Councilman Rocky Jackson said he plans to have a licensed engineer look at the pool, and he also plans to determine what kind of community support exists.

He noted that it might be possible to generate some private funding and to enlist volunteer labor.

Sloan told the council that another option would be a $200,000 bond proposal, which would provide funding not only for the pool repairs but also for the new fire engine that the city needs.

"We would have $50,000 for the pool, $100,000 for the fire truck and $50,000 for a house for the truck," he said.

Three volunteer firemen were on hand at the meeting to voice their support for this idea. Sloan noted that a bond of this amount would add $8 a year to property taxes.

Councilman Gerald Ostler said he discussed the city's need for a fire engine with state insurance personnel. "In all probability, with a new truck, the city's insurance rating might be changed, which could mean we would have some additional money that would lessen the $8 tax increase figure," he said.

At any rate, a bond issue, if successful, would generate no funds until at least 1990.

In other matters: "The council heard the first reading of a water violation ordinance which would make it a misdemeanor for individuals to turn water to residences or businesses on or off, punishable by a fine of not more than $300 or a jail term not to exceed six months. Also, reconnect fees for water service that had been terminated would be $100.

Sloan said a city ordinance allows only city workers to turn water on or off. Current ordinance allows for termination of water service as the only punishment for unauthorized turning on or off of water.

Jackson said he would like to see parts of the new proposal rewritten because he believes there would be certain instances when individuals other than city employees should be allowed to turn water on or off. Peters said this suggestion would be taken under consideration.

Bids were accepted for a new truck and pickup for the water department. A bid for a 1989 Chevrolet pickup was accepted from Con Paulos in the amount of $9,575.21. A bid for a 1989 Ford truck was accepted from Roy Raymond in the amount of $19,780.81.

The council approved the purchase of a

$1,116 chlorine regulator and a $3,870 ultrasonic flow meter for the wastewater treatment plant. Also approved for purchase were two beds for the fire department, priced at a combined total of $623.60, and a thermopy device used to detect heat of unknown presence, priced at $775.

Dean Carnell was approved as a volunteer fireman.

The council will look into a complaint from Correll Holley, who operates several residential care homes in Jerome, that he is having trouble getting licensing approval for an East Avenue D facility, which houses nine people, because of a ruling by the state fire marshal that the building will not be considered a private single family dwelling.

The council approved a building permit to Dean Wright for a manufactured home on the 500 block of Avenue C. If certain specifications are met.

Hansen School Board OKs sex ed classes

By LYNDIA BOODY
Times-News correspondent

HANSEN — Hansen school children will have several new sessions in health and safety issues next school year, including introductory courses in human sexuality.

The Hansen School Board unanimously voted Monday to contract with the District V Department of Health for next school year to provide courses on such matters as acquired immune deficiency syndrome, fire safety, good hygiene, nutrition and drunk driving.

School Board members and Superintendent Richard Smith said the program is a "step-in-the-right-direction."

"I think it's an excellent program,"

Trustee Jeanne Gibson said. "It's something that we need."

The program will cost the school, based on $1.75 for current enrollment, about $65,000.

School Nurse Betsy Jordan told the School Board about the programs the Health Department offers.

Many of the classes, video tapes, movies and brochures are designed as preventative measures to aid teachers with teaching health issues.

Jordan will teach courses dealing with sexuality, sexual abuse and decision making regarding sexual activity.

Several of these will be for elementary school children.

Health Department courses in sexual abuse, human sexuality and the changes in the human body as it enters adolescence are designed for an elementary school-age.

"Health and wellness based on prevention is what we're all about," Jordan said.

Smith said that these topics probably haven't been discussed in Hansen's elementary classes to the extent of the Health Department's programs.

He said that the Home Economics Department has offered discussions of home and family planning. All high school students take one class in home economics, he said.

The department is also available for community discussions regarding AIDS and to aid the school with outbreaks of such problems as head lice.

Nurses will also screen for vision problems in four elementary grades.

curvature of the spine. Services are also available to school staff like the high blood pressure and cholesterol testing.

Board members also heard reports from Smith and Principal Barry Espl regarding up coming holiday and school events.

On Monday the elementary school will present Christmas Around the World beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the High School gym. The children will sing Christmas carols from around the world.

Christmas celebrations in other countries will be narrated by the students.

The high school band and choir will present a Christmas musical at 7:30 p.m., Dec. 16, in the high school gym.

"They really like the semester format that has been developed here," Shackelford said.

Krueger's new program allows for greater flexibility and has been adopted by the state as a standard course guide.

The San Jacinto Valley is an agricultural area east of Riverside. The high school serves 750 students, about one-third again as big as Buhl's enrollment. About 65 students are taking a complete vo-ag program.

Shackelford said vo-ag programs in California have the "image" problem that Krueger attacked here by offering a greater variety of courses.

She said she likes the flexibility of Krueger's program and admires the appeal it has for students. Buhl students told her they like to new program too, she said.

Burley will have paving inspected

By DONNA SCHORZMAN
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The Burley City Council decided Monday to have an engineering firm from Idaho Falls inspect the recent paving of a portion of 16th Street.

Water and sewer lines were laid under the street last summer as part of a grant to improve the Celar Pickle Co. and the city has received complaints that the street was not paved correctly and is rough.

In other matters, the council will consider a detailed recommendation from Parks Director Ron Ploger to stop maintaining some pieces of property around the city that are used as parks.

Ploger also has suggested that some city property, such as well sites, could be paved instead of planted in lawn to decrease maintenance costs.

The Burley Parks Department does not have enough employees to maintain the number of sites the city has designated as parks. Ploger told the council last month.

Some of these sites are owned by individuals or the school district and Ploger recommended the city stop maintaining them to cut back on expenses.

Included in sites Ploger recommends the city stop maintaining is a privately-owned lot on Conant Street that Councilman Leonard King has said should not be abandoned because it is a popular neighborhood park.

The council will study Ploger's report.

Later last month City Attorney Bill Parsons recommended to the council that an independent engineering firm inspect work on 16th Street in the event the city decides to contest the work which was overseen by the general contractor, Jerry Walton Underground Systems of Rupert.

If the city decided to contest the work, it can file a claim to retain all or part of the bond put up by the Rupert firm.

If the claim is contested the meter can go to arbitration and the results of an inspection by the engineering firm would be used to support the city's case.

In a related matter, the council decided to apply for an additional $100,000 grant to continue work on water and sewer lines and update the old building which houses the pickle factory.

The original grant was cut back by $10,000 when it was awarded.

The state Department of Commerce has $10,000 available from a residual grant awarded several years ago but not used.

California teachers observe Buhl ag, tech program

By DON PUDEK
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Three educators from San Jacinto, Calif., were in Buhl on Sunday and Monday to observe Dave Krueger's agri-science and technology program at Buhl High School.

The three — Superintendent Sharon Shackelford, High School Principal Paul Peterson and former School Board member Henry Hafflinger — sat in on Krueger's class Monday and spoke with several students.

They were in the area to gather information to consider whether the program can be used in their school district.

Shackelford said they were impressed with the changes that have been made in the Buhl curriculum and with the resulting increase in student en-

Ketchum council discusses concerns over proposed subdivision

By KRISTAN WATKINS
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Growing concerns over the proposed Lane Ranch Subdivision at the southern entrance to Ketchum dominated Monday night's City Council meeting.

The council is preparing a report for the Sun Valley Planning and Zoning Commission, which will begin reviewing the 120-acre subdivision at its meeting Tuesday.

Although Lane Ranch would be outside Ketchum's city limits, it would be within 300 feet of the city's sewer and water lines and has drawn some concern from city residents and officials, so the Sun Valley Planning Commission has asked for the report.

If approved, the subdivision would also annexed into Sun Valley city limits.

The council expressed concern that Lane Ranch would not be complementary to the valley's image.

"It's just not going to fit," Councilman William Vanderbilt said. "The density is way too much." The 120 units will not be spread evenly over the 120 acres because of roads, ponds and a recreation center also planned for the site.

Council member Thomas Held had similar concerns.

"It's a shame they are not on one-acre sites," Held said.

Vanderbilt also expressed concern over the aesthetic impact of the development to those entering Ketchum. "There is a general inconsistency of the feel of the neighborhood," Vanderbilt said.

The major difference between proposed Lane Ranch and an existing adjacent subdivision, Weyakin, is price. Weyakin has homes in the $200,000 and up range, while Lane Ranch will prove more affordable for valley residents, with prices ranging from $50,000 and up.

Another major stumbling block for Lane Ranch is the proposed removal of Lane Pond on the site.

Removing the pond, which is mandated, could disrupt the fragile wildlife zone of the area, some area residents say.

Shotted for a spring start-up, pending approval, Lane Ranch is owned by Lane Ranch Partnership and River Run Development Co. Doug Clemens and Associates of Ketchum is acting as the local project manager.

"We are operating strictly on the annexation agreement and the ordinance," Clemens said. "It's not even in the Ketchum zone of impact. People are upset about the pond, but we are planning on building more ponds. Lane Pond is not a natural pond."

The planning commission meeting is set for 9 a.m. Tuesday in Sun Valley.

petition (for the variance) but we might be turned down," he said.

Still, we might have a chance because I honestly don't think everyone on the state Board of Education is as biased as the state superintendent is;

and I hope the people in the Legislature realize it is their job to make laws, not this."

Ferron said he does not believe the few schools that would be affected by the new law would have enough effect financially to merit passing the legislation. "And there is a lot of good education going on in small schools," he said.

All superintendents will receive copies of the legislative proposal and minutes from the finance committee, Dutton said. "But I'm sure they already know about it," he said.

Anderson said 13 schools in Idaho would probably be affected by the new legislation, but that six of those schools, including Camas High School, would probably fall into the "remote and necessary" category.

Oakley

"He's told three different stories to three different people that he's talked to today," Rasmussen said Monday.

But Hurst said this is partly because of the inconsistent nature of Oakley's heating equipment, especially the heat pumps. "They've been giving us a fit all the time," Hurst said. "It's been an intermittent thing. One day, it's okay. The next day, there's one or two rooms that are cold. We've had a hard time tracing the real problem down."

The Oakley school gets less attention than other schools in the district, Rasmussen charged. When new carpet was installed in Burley, the old carpet was relaid in Oakley, she said, while used computers and pumps not wanted by other schools also have gone to Oakley.

Oakley does not get the short end of the stick, Hurst said. Several years ago, for example, leaking plastic water pipes of the building's heating system were all replaced with copper pipes at "tremendous expense," Hurst said.

At 60 degrees.

The students, she said, "wear coats, blankets and thick sweaters into classes." Children have been getting sick from shivering at school all day, she said, and since school has not been dismissed, some are going over their absence limits.

Adams said she feels no serious effort has been made to solve the heating problems.

"Nothing's been done," she said. "They're sweeping it under the carpet."

A group of mothers, "a most dangerous group of women," Adams said, is organizing to "put some pressure on somebody" at the district School Board meeting on Monday.

"I'd like to get some action here," she said.

Hurst said he had not heard that students wear coats and wrap blankets around their legs in class. "I'm not aware of that at all," he said. Also, the superintendent said, there is "no evidence" that student absences have increased.

That it's being fixed and there's no problem," Rasmussen said. "He hasn't been up to this school so long that he doesn't know what the problem is."

Hurst said he makes regular rounds of all the schools in the Caswin district and was at the Oakley school Monday afternoon and evening.

School Trustee Ann Woodhouse said she is concerned about the heating problem.

"That is not conclusive to good learning," she said. "I can't blame parents for being disturbed."

This situation has been going on for several months, she said, and, although there has apparently been trouble in getting replacement parts and making repairs, the problem must be remedied.

"I really don't understand why they are not able to isolate the problem and get it repaired," Woodhouse said. "Perhaps they're going to have to send the kids home and really tear into the problem and solve it."

Kitchen said she has been talking with area legislators to get them involved with the heating problems. A group of parents also plans to attend Monday's School Board meeting.

Hurst said Tuesday that the broken auger has been difficult to replace because it is a precision instrument and also is outdated. Efforts to fabricate, repair or purchase the part, which pushes coal into the furnace, were unsuccessful until only recently, he said.

The school's auger was installed Tuesday and feeding coal into the furnace, Smith said.

Rasmussen said she has talked to school trustees about the heating problem but "it doesn't seem to do much good."

All the needs of the district's schools are met "as they come along," he said. He said he thought the heating problem was resolved last Friday, but three or four rooms were cold Monday. So, he said, more work was done on Monday and "evidently things are all right this morning," he said Tuesday.

Because of the inconsistent heat pumps, Hurst said, certain small sections of the school are not heated, but "the whole building hasn't been cold," he said. "It's been one or two rooms that are cold." To solve this problem, classes have been shifted to warm rooms, Hurst said.

Parent Kris Adams, however, said she went to the Oakley school on Monday and the hallway thermostat was at 60 degrees.

The students, she said, "wear coats, blankets and thick sweaters into classes." Children have been getting sick from shivering at school all day, she said, and since school has not been dismissed, some are going over their absence limits.

Adams said she feels no serious effort has been made to solve the heating problems.

"Nothing's been done," she said. "They're sweeping it under the carpet."

A group of mothers, "a most dangerous group of women," Adams said, is organizing to "put some pressure on somebody" at the district School Board meeting on Monday.

Hurst said he had not heard that students wear coats and wrap blankets around their legs in class. "I'm not aware of that at all," he said. Also, the superintendent said, there is "no evidence" that student absences have increased.

Russell Rasmussen, former furnace maintenance man in Oakley, agreed the furnace is old and has parts that are hard to replace. But, he said, the problem could have been handled years ago.

"Mr. Hurst will probably tell you

Police arrest man on drug charges
TWIN FALLS — Authorities arrested a Twin Falls man on drug charges Tuesday and seized approximately 50 pounds of marijuana, worth about $112,000. Arturo Tejeda, 30, was charged in Twin Falls Magistrate Court on Wednesday with possession of marijuana with the intent to deliver, according to court records. He was being held in the county jail on a $1,600 bond.
 The drugs were seized as part of a joint effort of the Twin Falls Department of Public Safety, the Idaho Bureau of Narcotics and the Idaho State Police, according to records. Authorities arrested Tejeda Tuesday evening.
 After receiving a tip, authorities stopped a 1979 Lincoln and received permission from the driver, Tejeda's wife, to search the car. In the trunk, they found a garbage bag containing about 19 pounds of marijuana, according to police records.
 Police then went to Tejeda's house at 423 Van Buren St. and asked his permission to search the house. He consented, according to court records, and inside the house authorities found another 30 pounds of marijuana, police said.
 Tejeda was represented in court Wednesday by Twin Falls attorney Golden Bennett, according to court records.

Weather causes 3 injury accidents
TWIN FALLS — Fog, freezing temperatures and "black ice" combined to cause fits for motorists Wednesday as a raft of traffic accidents kept area police scrambling.
 The accidents, reported primarily in Twin Falls and Jerome counties, were mostly fender-benders and slide-offs in which no one was injured, police said. However, Idaho State Police reported two injury accidents on U.S. Interstate 84 and a third one on U.S. Highway 30.
 A Deco cycle was injured around 7:25 a.m. when their Ford LTD went off I-84 about three miles east of Twin Falls, police said. The husband and wife were both transported by ambulance to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.
 Louis Jones, 74, was listed in good condition, and his 70-year-old wife Leone was listed in serious but stable condition, hospital officials said.

 Belinda Capps, 33, of Twin Falls, was injured around 6:48 a.m. when her Nissan pickup went off I-84 about three miles east of Wendell, police said. She was taken to St. Benedict's Family Medical Center in Jerome where she was listed in satisfactory condition.
 A third injury accident was reported on U.S. Highway 30 just west of Twin Falls, but details were not available Wednesday night.
 Police said freezing fog blanketed many of the roads, applying a layer of clear ice not visible to most motorists. Sand was being dumped Wednesday night on U.S. Highway 93, which was again becoming slick.

2 Burley girls injured by pickup truck
BURLEY — Two girls were injured Tuesday when struck by a pickup while running across a Burley street, sheriff's officials said.
 Sara Caldwell, 7, and her 6-year-old sister Heather, both of Burley, were transported by ambulance to Cassia Memorial Hospital. Officials there said Sara was treated for injuries and released, and Heather was admitted and then released from the hospital Wednesday morning.
 The accident occurred around 5:55 p.m. near the intersection of Overland Avenue and 15th Street, sheriff's officials said.
 Ruth McClure, 56, of Rupert, was driving a 1988 Nissan pickup north on Overland Avenue when the two girls ran into traffic, sheriff's officials said. A southbound vehicle was able to stop, but McClure could not and her pickup struck both girls.

Burglars use beer can for break-in
RUPERT — Burglars used three beer cans to break a window and then stole a dozen or more cartons of cigarettes at a Rupert grocery store Wednesday, police said.
 Police believe the burglary occurred in Wednesday's pre-dawn hours, before 5 a.m. Between 12 and 15 cartons of Marlboro cigarettes were stolen from the store, the Swensen's Magic Market at the intersection of F and Eighth streets.
 Police said the burglars apparently used three Budweiser cans to smash out one of the store's windows.

9 arrested at anti-abortion protests

BOISE (AP) — Nine more anti-abortionists have been arrested in the second protest in five weeks at a Boise clinic.
 Police took the nine members of a group called Idaho Rescue into custody Wednesday after they blocked the entrances to the Women's Health Care Clinic on the city's west side.
 The nine were among more than two dozen members of the group that spokeswoman Jan Stoker of Boise said was "committed to follow a high moral code."

Following the arrests, the remaining protesters continued to peacefully march in front of the clinic, singing hymns.
 The clinic was the scene of a similar protest on Oct. 31 that saw 14 people arrested for disrupting the facility's operations and harassing its patients. Their cases were still pending in Ada County Magistrate Court.

"It's too bad that they feel that they need to inject their ideology on other people," clinic coordinator Barbara Plain said. The protests, she maintained, would not affect operations at the clinic, which has been the target of anti-abortion groups for a decade.
 "We have to continue to offer services that take care of women," she said.

INEL employees no longer need bottled water

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Officials at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory say employees at one location no longer have to drink bottled water, because a new treatment system is operating.
 Employees at the Technical Support Facility used bottled water after earlier tests showed unhealthy levels of trichloroethylene in the water. Officials said the concentration was slightly above the 5 parts per billion considered safe.
 Sampling since the treatment system was installed indicate levels of the organic compound have been reduced to well within national standards proposed by the Environmental Protection Agency.
 INEL officials said with the treatment system in operation, bottled water will be used as a backup drinking water supply if any problems affect the regular system.

FBI agent testifies at clan hearing

COALVILLE, Utah (AP) — An FBI agent testified Wednesday that polygamist clan leader Addam Swapp was unslinging his rifle — not pointing it at officers — when he was shot by a law officer during a fire-fight that ended a 13-day standoff on the family's rural compound.
 Also, an agent said when he reached the wounded Swapp minutes after gunfire erupted near the polygamist family's rural homestead, Swapp muttered, "Oh, Tim, why did you have to do it," when he learned that an officer had been shot.
 Earlier in the day, Special Agent

David S. Edward's testimony appeared to conflict with previous testimony from the FBI sharpshooter, one of two who shot at Swapp. On Tuesday, Agent Richard Intellini testified that he pulled the trigger as Swapp aimed his rifle in the direction of agents.
 Ballistics tests have not determined which of the sharpshooters actually wounded Swapp.
 Edward took the stand on fourth day of trial for Swapp, his brother Jonathan Swapp and John Timothy Singer. The trio is charged with second-degree murder the death of Corrections Officer Fred House.

Prosecutors believe Singer fired the fatal shot from a farmhouse window as House and other law-enforcement officers tried to apprehend the Swapp brothers. Law enforcement officers had surrounded the Swapp-Singer compound after clan members bombed a nearby Mormon chapel.
 Edward said he was standing next to Intellini watching the Swapp brothers through binoculars when he heard incoming fire from the clan's farmhouse.
 Almost simultaneously they (the Swapps) turned and shots were being fired, Edward said.

Husband's infatuation with wife's friend needs to be ended

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to "Bob" for eight years. We have had our ups and downs like most married couples, but generally speaking we have a strong marriage with very good communication.

Last summer I got reacquainted with a longtime girlfriend of mine — I'll call her Shirley. She had recently divorced and was depressed. We started inviting her to our place for weekends. She snapped out of her depression and we enjoyed her company. Now the problem: Bob recently confessed to me that he has fallen deeply in love with Shirley. Shirley told me she feels terrible about it and she does not return his feelings. Bob wants to continue inviting

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

Shirley to our place. At first I thought I could do it, but the truth is it hurts too much.

Bob says he still loves me, but if I deny him the opportunity to see Shirley, he will be miserable. So what do I do? Invite her and tolerate the pain?

Or stop inviting her and have to deal with a miserable husband? Or should I tell him to leave me and the

— UPSET AND CONFUSED

DEAR UPSET: Don't invite Shirley anymore. But do invite your husband to join you in a visit to a marriage counselor.

He is behaving like a lovesick high school boy. You are not his mother, you are his wife, and if you want your marriage to survive, you will insist that he go for counseling.

If you tell him to "leave until he is over Shirley," your marriage may be over first.

DEAR ABBY: My wife, age 70 and 65 pounds overweight, has just been diagnosed as a borderline diabetic, and she is delighted!

It seems that she either read somewhere or overheard that diabetics have to eat whatever they feel like eating or they risk going into a diabetic coma. What a bonanza for the cake and doughnut market!

I asked her doctor about this, and he wagged his finger in my face and said sternly: "You had better not interfere with your wife's diet. She knows what she has to do!"

It's always puzzled me that certain individuals are able to rationalize carrying a dangerous load of weight, but this diabetic thing is a real "doozie."

— HEAVY PROBLEM
IN SANTA ANA

DEAR HEAVY: Either your wife's physician didn't hear you or he didn't understand you when you told him that your wife was of the opinion that she could eat whatever she felt like eating to prevent going into a diabetic coma.

According to the American Diabetic Association, if a diabetic allows his blood sugar to fall below a certain level, he should eat something (preferably something high in carbohydrates) to prevent having a low blood sugar reaction — but that is a far cry from eating "whatever they want" and it does not give diabetics permission to stuff themselves with sweets.

Should a low blood sugar reaction occur, a diabetic will need a small amount of concentrated sugar — a 4-ounce glass of orange juice will do.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: Of all the empty phrases uttered, my vote for the emptiest is, "If there is anything I can do for you, please let me know."

Abby's favorite recipes are going like hotcakes! Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $3.50 ($4 in Canada) to: Abby's Cookbooklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Keep Christmas trees green

Keep the green in your Christmas tree this year by using this simple formula in addition to water.

1/4 cup micronized iron, available at florists, garden supply and hardware stores.

- 1 gallon hot water
- 2 cups corn syrup
- 4 teaspoons chlorinated household bleach

Mix micronized iron into hot water. Stir in corn syrup and bleach. The iron does not completely dissolve; it makes a bluish green mixture with particles which settle to the bottom. Saw about an inch from the bottom of tree trunk. Pound or mash the base of the trunk with hammer or axe to crush the fibers. Stand the tree in a holder and pour in solution. Add warm tap water daily, as needed.

Valley happenings

Pancake breakfast planned in Eden

EDEN — A pancake breakfast will be served from 9 a.m. until noon Saturday at the Silver and Gold Senior Center at Edges.

Skateland sets Sunday can benefit

TWIN FALLS — Santa's Helpers in conjunction with Skateland are holding a "Skate-on-a-Can Day" from 1 until 4 p.m. Sunday at Skateland. Admission is $1 and a can of food. Proceeds will go to assist Santa's Helpers with Christmas baskets.

Sun Club benefit planned in Sun Valley

SUN VALLEY — A special evening to benefit the new non-alcoholic Sun Club in Ketchum/Sun Valley for all 12-step followers, families and friends is scheduled Saturday at the Limglight room of the Sun Valley Inn. There will be two speakers at 6 p.m. followed by dancing to the Tonic from 9 p.m. to midnight. Tickets are $12 per person, available at the door, or phone 622-7123 for reservations. There also will be a spiritual breakfast at 8:30 a.m. Sunday at the Tyrolean lodge in Ketchum with a meeting at 9:30 a.m.

Drug workshop to meet Sunday

EDEN — The Aid Association of Lutherans, Branch 1643 in Eden, is sponsoring a parental drug education workshop at 6:30 p.m. Sunday at Trinity Lutheran Church. Called "Get Involved Before Your Kids Do," the program is targeted to parents of children ages 8 to 14. Parents of older or younger children also are welcome.

The Times-News welcomes news of community events. Send information to Times-News Valley Happenings, Box 548, Twin Falls, Idaho 83303. Please include a phone number where you can be reached.

First ladies dine in luxury

NEW YORK (AP) — Barbara Bush injected a bit of levity Wednesday into an exclusive U.N. luncheon for sometime-rivals Raisa Gorbachev and Nancy Reagan, putting the first ladies at ease in their final official meeting.

Marcel Perez de Cuellar, the wife of the United Nations secretary-general, hosted the lunch at her home for the first ladies, Mrs. Bush and 20 New York socialites, including cosmetics manufacturer Estee Lauder.

"I'm happy to be here in this city you call 'The Big Apple,'" Mrs. Gorbachev told reporters, saying the words the big apple in English.

As photographers urged the first ladies, Mrs. Bush and Mrs. Perez de Cuellar to smile for pictures before lunch, Mrs. Gorbachev said, "We can't see you. That's why we don't smile." "How do you say 'cheese' in Russian?" Mrs. Bush quipped as the four women posed.

Mrs. Bush, using her wit and good humor, seemed intent on defusing any problems at the gathering between the two first ladies, who have had their run-ins on previous occasions.

As the translator interpreted the word 'cheese' for Mrs. Gorbachev and Mrs. Bush, the group broke out in smiles and laughter.

The first ladies and the 20 women dined in an elegant room with a marble fireplace, crystal chandelier and tall windows overlooking the East River. Each place was set with crystal bearing the U.N. insignia and at every place setting lay a small present wrapped in a peach bow.

Wedding Engagement

Tillotson-Jensen

Cynthia and Patrick Jensen

TWIN FALLS — Cynthia M. Tillotson and Patrick E. Jensen were married Nov. 4 at the First Presbyterian Church in Pocatello.

Officiating was the Rev. "Coke" McClure. Keith Forrest was the organist and acoustic guitars were played by Dave Gianotto, John Jensen and Jim Bennion.

The bride is the daughter of Arlene and Clayton Tillotson of Pocatello and parents of the bridegroom are Cal and Norma Jensen of Twin Falls.

Kathy Tillotson, sister of the bride, served as the bride's matron of honor.

Mike Jensen, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Van Tillotson and Jeff Gasser. Special guests included grandfather of the bridegroom, Sam Stoffe of Fort Worth, Texas.

A reception was held following the ceremony.

The bride attends Idaho State University and is studying political science and history. She is employed in the ISU physics department.

The bridegroom, a graduate of Twin Falls High school, also attends Idaho State University working towards his master's degree in counseling. He works for the ISU department of counseling and special education.

The newlyweds reside in Pocatello.

Bradshaw-Arkoosh

John Arkoosh and Carrie Bradshaw

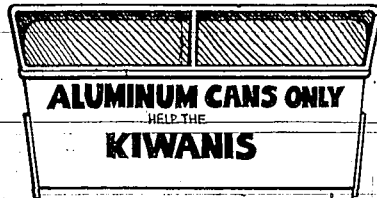

GOODING — Mr. and Mrs. Gary Bradshaw of Gooding announce the engagement of their daughter, Carrie Ruth, to John Arkoosh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Arkoosh of Gooding.

The wedding is planned for Dec. 30 at St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church.

World Palestinian leaders call for strikes

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinian leaders called for two days of strikes starting Thursday in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip to mark the first anniversary of uprising against Israeli rule.

The conservative Hebrew daily Maariv said the army was increasing forces in the territories in anticipation of trouble.

Army officials declined Wednesday to comment on the report for security reasons.

So far, it's business as usual, said an official who cannot be identified by name, under military rules. We will respond in accordance with the situation.

The "intifada" — Arabic for uprising — began Dec. 8, 1987 with riots in the Jabalya refugee camp in the occupied Gaza Strip after an army truck collided with a van, killing four Palestinians. Rumors had spread it was no accident, and the rioting led to the stabbing death of an Israeli businessman three days earlier.

A day after the riot, soldiers opened fire on protesting students in the camp after a firebomb was hurled at an army patrol. Two Palestinians were killed, the first of 319 to die in the year-long uprising. Eleven Israelis also have died in the violence.

Soviet Union suffers from large quake

MOSCOW (AP) — The strongest earthquake to hit the Soviet Union's Caucasus Mountains region in 80 years killed and injured an undetermined number of people on Wednesday, flattened buildings and left thousands homeless.

The quake, centered near the Soviet-Turkish border, also killed at least four people and caused extensive damage in eastern Turkey, authorities said.

The U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo., said the quake, centered south of the Georgian capital of Tbilisi, occurred at 11:47 a.m. (12:21 a.m. MST) and registered 6.9 on the Richter scale. A quake of that magnitude is capable of causing widespread, heavy damage.

The tremor, followed by a moderate aftershock, struck a region in the Soviet Union already wracked by months of ethnic violence between Armenians and Azerbaijanis.

President Mikhail Gorbachev, who was visiting the United States at the time of the earthquake, "a grave tragedy."

State-run television, in an unusually prompt and detailed report from the scene, showed film of crumbled buildings in Kirovakan, Armenia's third largest city, and in Spitak, a regional center of Armenia.

U.S. to conduct military exercise in South Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The 2nd U.S. Infantry Division stationed in South Korea will conduct a major field training exercise north of Seoul, U.S. military officials said Wednesday.

The four-day "Autumn Haze II" will run from Saturday to Tuesday and is part of a program to evaluate the troops' ability to move from garrisons to a field location, the officials said.

They said they have told citizens not to be alarmed by the increased activity of the U.S. troops.

The exercise will differ from previous ones in that all 12,000 soldiers and 3,000 vehicles of the division will participate, rather than selected units.

Nicaraguan pilot steals helicopter

defects to Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — A Nicaraguan pilot defected Wednesday and flew a Soviet-made attack helicopter to a Honduran air base, diplomatic sources and Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government said.

The diplomatic sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the military pilot landed the Mi-25 helicopter gunship at the Roosevelt Air Base in Tegucigalpa, the Honduran capital, they said, but they could provide no further details.

The Honduran government had no immediate announcement on the report.

In the Nicaraguan capital of Managua, the Defense Ministry confirmed that a defector hijacked a Soviet-made helicopter Wednesday to Honduras.

Arafat endorses statement on Israel's right to exist

STOCKHOLM (AP) — PLO leader Yasser Arafat ended two days of talks with a U.S. Jewish delegation Wednesday by endorsing a statement accepting Israel's right to exist.

At a news conference, however, Arafat seemed less straightforward than the document he endorsed and he declined to confirm or repeat the statement's key clauses.

The document, which also denounced terrorism, was hailed by the Jewish group as the most unequivocal acceptance of Israel ever given by the Palestine Liberation Organization. The Jewish group urged the U.S. government to end its ban on talks with the PLO.

Foreign Minister Sten Andersson, who arranged the meeting, called the document "historic," but said it was one step in a long process.

The PLO's parliament-in-exile endorsed U.N. resolutions 242 and 338, which recognize the right of all states in the region to exist within secure borders. But the council did not mention Israel by name.

In New York, the president of the American-Arab Relations Committee, M.T. Mehdi, broke ranks with Arafat on Wednesday, telling a group of Arabs that "Arafat is no longer my friend; his recognition of Israel will not lead to peace in Palestine."

In Jerusalem, Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said it was "very strange" that Arafat refused to make the declaration himself, but he made no comment on the substance.

Corsica-Beretta: A godsend for GM

By JAMES RISEN
Los Angeles Times

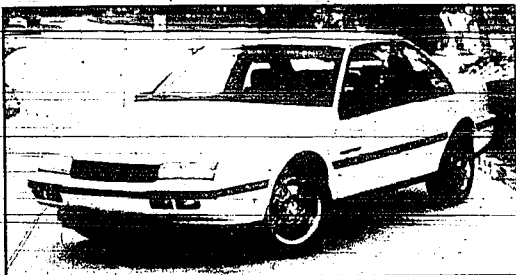

DETROIT—Things have been going so badly for General Motors that it seems as if the world's largest auto maker is not just under a dark cloud, but blanketed by an overcast sky.

Yet there is a silver lining these days—a car line called Corsica-Beretta. Chevrolet's twin compact models, initially greeted with a cold shoulder by car buyers when they were introduced in the spring of 1987, are now Detroit's hottest products.

Improved quality, a sleek design that represents a dramatic break with GM's "cookie-cutter" image, and a $1,000 to $2,000 price advantage over comparable imports are all helping Corsica-Beretta take on the Japanese.

As a result, Corsica-Beretta sales, helped along by some timely incentives last spring, have soared nearly 85 percent this year, making it the top-selling car line in America so far in 1988.

It was a long time in coming, Corsica-Beretta had a slow start," observes Jack Kiman, automotive analyst with the Kidder

Chevrolet's 1989 Beretta GT features upgraded content

Peabody investment firm. "But right now, the Corsica-Beretta stacks up with the best of the imports on quality, and it has a huge price advantage over them."

"We're absolutely pleased, and we expect it to be No. 1 in the industry for the entire year," says Mike Erdman, general marketing manager for Chevrolet.

Indeed, the car line's success has become a critical element in GM's struggle to reverse the long slide in its share of the U.S. car market. Corsica and Beretta now account for more than 10 percent of all GM passenger car sales.

Chevrolet has had to pay a price for the car line's success, however. With Chevrolet's overall sales relatively flat this year, analysts believe that at least some of Corsica-Beretta's sales are coming from customers who would have otherwise bought a different Chevy model.

For instance, the Beretta, the sporty, two-door coupe version of the line that Chevy says is targeted at young singles and couples with no children, seems to be stealing sales from the aging Camaro sports car, which has suffered a 23 percent sales decline this year. Meanwhile, Corsica, the four-door family sedan version of the line, seems to be eating into the sales of Chevy's Celebrity sedan, which has suffered a 20 percent drop.

"It (Corsica-Beretta) finally became a hit, but it has pirated sales from other Chevy car lines," notes Chris Cedergren, a sales analyst with J.D. Power & Associates, an automotive market research firm.

Still, there is little question that Corsica-Beretta is now performing the way Chevrolet executives intended, Erdman predicts that

Federal surplus: Too good to be true?

If an offer seems too good to be true, it probably isn't true. Example: the growing number of companies that promise to help you get almost unbelievable bargains at government sales of surplus, seized or recovered property.

Sylvia Porter

Advertisements for these companies frequently appear in the backs of magazines, but they are being heard more and more on radio and television. They generally say you can get boats, airplanes and shiny red sports cars for pennies on the dollar.

You can't. "What they're doing is not illegal, because they do provide a service, though a questionable one," says Robert Fisher of the General Services Administration (GSA) in Washington. "The claim about costs are suspect, and they don't provide any information that you can't get on your own. Free."

In return for a payment ranging from a few dollars to hundreds of dollars for subscriptions, the companies provide lists of government-sponsored auctions and sealed-bid sales.

These companies don't tell you about the warnings involved in buying from federal, state or local governments. In every case, the agency involved is interested in getting a fair market price for the merchandise offered. If there is property that is worth a great deal, the sale will be highly publicized.

In many cases, the items for sale have been used extensively. They come with no guarantees. You must pay cash and once you've paid, you're stuck with your purchase.

In the cases of automobiles, airplanes and boats, the necessary documents are seldom available. What you receive for your money is a receipt and the item. You're on your own to come up with a title, registration, and so on.

Q. What sorts of sales are involved?

A. Basically, three kinds. The first is the sale of surplus government property conducted by GSA. This includes everything from used office equipment to real estate next to a federal prison. The second is military surplus. The Department of Defense no longer sells any weapons or airplanes to the public. In fact, the military no longer sells even its used jeeps, except as scrap after they've been crushed or cut into unrecognizable pieces. The military surplus that does reach the public gets there only after it has been offered to other branches of the government and to states and localities. The third kind of sale is of seized, recovered or unclaimed property. These sales are usually conducted by the federal marshal's office or by state and local police forces.

Exterior wall insulation is more effective

Q: I want to add some insulation to the exterior of my house. Is exterior wall insulation as effective as standard insulation inside a wall and what is the easiest way to add exterior insulation? — R.H.

James Dullely

A: Insulation on the exterior surface of a wall is the best location and it is actually more effective than standard inside-the-wall insulation. On existing houses with full-brick or block walls, it is about the only feasible method to add a significant amount of wall insulation. The heat loss through your walls can be cut by half or more.

Exterior insulation is more effective because the entire wall structure under the insulation stays warmer in winter and cooler in summer. It becomes thermal mass that moderates indoor temperature changes. Also, the insulation seals many gaps in the exterior surface to reduce air leakage.

The easiest and most common way of adding exterior insulation is by attaching several inches of foam insulation board on the outside of your walls. The insulation values of the foam boards range from about R-5 to R-7 per inch-thickness. A two- or three-inch thickness of insulation is often added.

There are several companies that manufacture and market special exterior insulation systems. Some are only applied by licensed contractors and others can be done by the do-it-yourselfer. The companies can sell you all of the materials needed or you can purchase some locally.

First you must attach the foam board insulation to your existing walls. You can attach the foam board with special adhesives, mechanical fasteners into the existing wall, or a combination of the two methods. The foam board is easy to cut so you can fit it neatly around the openings for doors and windows.

Next you apply a reinforcing mesh over the joints between the pieces of insulation board. This adds strength to the joints and minimizes the possibility of any cracks forming.

Combined effort gets mother of 5 back on track with car

Minneapolis millionaire Percy Ross is internationally known for his philanthropic works and likes to encourage others to help solve problems for those in need. He has earned a fortune and a wealth of knowledge during his lifetime and wants to share both before his death. His motto is: "He who gives while he lives... also knows where it goes."

Percy Ross

Dear Mr. Ross: Frankly, I'm all worn out from working three part-time jobs and trying to raise five children without a car. It's a long story, but my car broke down last winter and wasn't worth repairing. Sometimes I feel it's only with the Lord's help that I get to where I'm going, whether it be by walking, running or riding the bus.

Normally I'm the kind of person who helps others. Not so much with money, but with my time and kind words. At present I'm working for a stroke victim as her aid in the afternoons, six days a week. I also care for an 86-year-old woman with lupus. They're both wonderful ladies and have come to depend on my services.

Then, in the evening, I work as a janitor for minimum wage and am required to get from job site to job site on my own. I get home about 9:30 p.m., hit the bed and rise at 5:30 a.m. to start the day again.

I'm without a husband and without child support. Mr. Ross, a car is not something I want, but rather something I need. The time I'd save in trying to get around could actually be spent with my five kids, which would be a Godsend. I realize you're under no obligation to anyone, so I thank you for listening and any help you may offer.

—Mrs. K.L. Davenport, Iowa

Dear Mrs. L.: And listen I did, because it sounds to me like you're juggling a schedule which would put a lesser person in the grave. So, whether you walk, run or take the bus, get right over to Lujack Auto Plaza where I've made arrangements for you to pick up an '83 Ford Escort.

And to get you started on the right road, Lujack Auto Plaza has agreed to pay your car insurance... for which I say THANKS A MILLION. Let us remember that it's the combined efforts of us all that get the job done. Good luck to you and your children.

Dear Mr. Ross: This is a letter requesting a minimum of help for a special 10-year-old neighborhood boy. During the school season last year he became very stressful and withdrawn. He started missing a lot of school and had multiple bruises.

A week after speaking with his teacher and principal, he was taken from his home and into the custody of his grandmother. Much to our delight, this summer he returned.

He and my son are good friends and decided they wanted skateboards in the worst way. Both boys took paper routes, put the boards on lay-a-way and made payments toward their goal. Last week they picked up their skateboards and could be seen skating proudly through the neighborhood delivering the Arlington Heights Daily Herald.

Two days later, over some minor misbehavior, this boy's father SAWED HIS SKATEBOARD IN HALF! My husband and I think this is the worst form of abuse to a young ambitious boy with a world of potential.

I think it would be the best act of humanity if you replaced that skateboard. The school, the teachers and principal, our local police department and the juvenile authorities could really use your example to remind them of children's needs during these days of inflation and stress. Surely some of us could pool our resources and replace it. But I think the impact you could create by replacing it would be the best example for all.

—Mrs. D.A. Arlington Heights, Ill.

Dear Mrs. A.: Frankly, I don't see that my replacing this boy's skateboard is going to create a monumental impact on anyone, except the young boy.

I think you're passing the buck by asking me. However, I feel for the boy and the unjust punishment his father handed him. Please act on my behalf and see that he gets a new skateboard with the check I'm sending. And might I suggest he leave it at your house, let his father takes to tyranny again and destroys this one, too.

Dear Mr. Ross: As an American, I feel I'm entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. To me, happiness is defined as a new Mercedes. I don't have the means of securing one, but you do. So as my fellow American, I feel you should fork over and buy me one. I welcome your thoughts.

—Mr. H. P. San Mateo, Calif.

Dear Mr. P.: I doubt you'll roll out the red carpet for my answer, even though I also believe in life and liberty. I don't feel you have to have a new Mercedes in which to pursue happiness.

You may write to Percy Ross c/o The Times-News, P.O. Box 35000, Minneapolis, Minn. 55435. Include a telephone number if you wish. All letters sent to Mr. Ross are read. Only a few are answered in this column, although others may be acknowledged privately.

 The line will meet Chevy's minimal sales objective of 500,000 units this year.
 But what pleases Chevy most is that the car line has filled an important void in the middle of the car market for GM's bread-and-butter division. Corsica-Beretta is the first compact line Chevrolet has offered since the Citation was killed by negative publicity surrounding its safety record in 1984, and it puts Chevrolet back in the race for middle-income singles and families who have been moving to the imports.
 The average Beretta buyer, for instance, is 32 and has a household income of between $38,000 and $41,000. About 28 percent of Corsica-Beretta buyers are trading in imports, Erdman says, the highest import trade-in rate for any U.S.-built Chevy car.
 Young buyers, apparently turned off by the rapid price increases imposed by the Japanese over the last three years, are giving domestic cars such as Corsica-Beretta a closer look.

Q. How does GSA conduct its sales?
 A. Through auctions or sealed bids, depending on the item being sold. Information on upcoming sales is available from GSA offices in major cities.
Q. There are supposed to be bargains in all kinds of Army surplus. Is this no longer the case?
 A. Generally, no. This misconception came about in the years after World War II, when the vast demobilization of troops flooded the Pentagon with equipment. Much of it was sold to the public. But now equipment and even clothing has gone through most of its useful life before it's offered, though there are occasional exceptions. The surplus-property division of the Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office does sell items from time to time, through other sealed bids, auctions, or occasionally through retail warehouse sales at military bases. To get more information, call the DRMO at the nearest military base.
Q. What about the fancy cars, boats, and airplanes seized by the Drug Enforcement Agency and other law enforcement groups?
 A. There can be bargains here, but no miracles. Items seized by the federal government are sold at U.S. Marshal's sales. To find out about them, contact the marshal's office at the nearest federal courthouse. Be on guard: Professionals are aware of these sales, too. Expensive items are likely to draw their attention—and the marshal's office publicizes these sales well in advance, especially when high-ticket items are involved. Local police conduct occasional sales of military vehicles and other property that has gone unclaimed. For information about such sales, call your local police department.
Q. What service is offered, then, by the companies that claim to give you the inside track on government sales?

A. They do exactly what you do yourself. They make the phone calls, then send you lists the government agencies have sent them. They also lead you to believe that you'll be in for incredible bargains—so they also sell you unrealistic dreams.

PERCHANCE TO DREAM
 A Now I have a property I've asked members of the Cherry Hill Women's Club to describe their ideal home eighteen years ago, it gave them valuable insight into a mother's real estate needs. At that time, the "dream" home had a great deal of floor space, a small kitchen, a large living room, a family room, 2 1/2 baths, a pantry, and a sewing room. When the same developers again met with fifteen professional women from Cherry Hill almost twenty years later, much had changed. No longer desirable were the sewing room and the large living room. In their stead were a smaller formal living room, a home office, larger bedrooms with laundry, and a business-oriented "great" room. The updated "dream" home speaks volumes about women's changing roles and the change in family lifestyles. The Cherry Hill women also showed 75 percent preference for outdoor decks. 02172192st twenty years ago.

 The most commonly used type of finish coating is a special flexible stucco-like coating. It looks and feels just like stucco, but it is made of an acrylic polymer that remains flexible. It is easy to apply and durable due to its flexibility. You select among many colors and it can improve the appearance of most houses.
 You can apply the coating with a trowel or a roller depending upon the surface finish you desire. One-sixteenth of an inch is the recommended thickness. You should trowel it on around the corners and window trim right up to the existing brick or exterior surface for a finished look.
 You can write to me for Utility Bills Update No. 049 showing a list of manufacturers of exterior insulation systems, information on the do-it-yourself system and materials, and small sample pieces of cured stucco finish coating. Please include $1 and a self-addressed envelope.
Q: I have heard that the new energy-efficient low-E glass uses a metal coating that contains mercury. Can that be dangerous to my family's health if we install new windows? — M.F.

A: Energy-efficient low-E glass uses a microscopically-thin invisible coating of metallic compounds on the glass surface. It is very effective for blocking heat loss in the winter and heat gain in the summer. The metal compounds don't have mercury in them and the metallic surface is sealed on the inside surfaces of the thermal double-pano glass.

Weatherizing home saves in long run

Q: Would I really save money going to the expense of weatherizing my home? I have had phone calls, asking if certain firms could talk to me about it.

A: It will cost you money to insulate, weatherstrip and seal your home against the coming winter weather, but you'll save plenty in the long run.

Windows, doors, walls and ceilings are the obvious energy wasters in most homes; however, you should not overlook insulating (wrapping) both hot and cold water pipes and heating and cooling ducts.

Insulation products include blanket or batt insulation for walls, ceiling

Better Business Bureau

ings and floors, weatherstripping for doors and windows; caulking compound and sealants for structural cracks; storm windows and doors, heating and cooling modification devices such as setback thermostats, replacing filters and using heating appliances.

The BBB of Treasure Valley has available "FACTS-ON-HOME-INSULATION". If interested in receiving, please send 25 cents and a self-addressed envelope (business size) to 409 W. Jefferson, Boise, Idaho 83702.

Q: Is it necessary to have my car checked again for winter, I just had it serviced a couple of months ago?

A: Winter is the most difficult time of the year to keep a car operating smoothly. Lubricants become thick and sluggish in the colder temperatures and must be warmed to work properly; water coolants must be adequate amounts of antifreeze additives in order to prevent freezing. A good place to start preventive maintenance is with an engine tune-up. Check hoses for cracks, bulges, leaks or loose clamps. Have the battery load tested to verify its ability to crank the engine. Clean and tighten battery cable connections. And, check all fluid levels.

 The line will meet Chevy's annual annual objective of 500,000 units this year.
 But what pleases Chevy most is that the car line has filled the car market for GM's broad and buttered division. Corsica-Beretta is the first since the Citation was killed by negative publicity surrounding its safety record in 1984, and it puts Chevrolet back in the race for middle-income singles and families who have been moving to the imports.
 The average Beretta buyer, for instance, is 32 and has a household income of between $38,000 and $41,000. About 28 percent of Corsica-Beretta buyers are trading in imports, Erdman says, the highest import trade-in rate for any U.S.-built Chevy car.
 Young buyers, apparently turned off by the rapid price increases imposed by the Japanese over the last three years, are giving domestic cars such as Corsica-Beretta a closer look.

Q. How does GSA conduct its sales?
 A. Through auctions or sealed bids, depending on the item being sold. Information on upcoming sales is available from GSA offices in major cities.
Q. There are supposed to be bargains in all kinds of Army surplus. Is this no longer the case?
 A. Generally, no. This misconception came about in the years after World War II, when the vast demobilization of troops flooded the Pentagon with equipment. Much of it was sold to the public. But no more equipment and even clothing has gone through most of its useful life before it's offered, though there are occasional exceptions. The surplus-property division of the Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office does sell items from time to time, through either sealed bids, auctions, or occasionally through retail warehouse sales at military bases. To get more information, call the DROM at the nearest military base.
Q. What about the fancy cars, boats, and airplanes seized by the Drug Enforcement Agency and other law enforcement groups?
 A. There can be bargains here, but no miracles. Items seized by the federal government resulted in U.S. Marshal's sales. To find out about them, contact the marshal's office at the nearest federal courthouse. Be on guard: Professionals are aware of these sales, too. Expensive items are likely to draw their attention, and the marshal's office publicizes these sales well in advance, especially when high-ticket items are involved. Local police conduct occasional sales of cars, bicycles and other property that has gone unclaimed. For information about such sales, call your local police department.
Q. What service is offered, then, by the companies that claim to give you the inside track on government sales?

PERCHANCE TO DREAM
 When a New Jersey developer asked members of the Cherry Hill Women's Club to describe their ideal home eighteen years ago, it gave them valuable insight into a mother-in-law's needs. At that time, the "dream" home had a great deal of floor space, a small kitchen, a large living room, a family room, 2 1/2 baths, a garage, and a sewing room. When the same developers again met with fifteen professional women from Cherry Hill almost twenty years later, much had changed. No longer did they want the sewing room and the large living room. In their stead were a smaller formal living room, a home office, larger bathroom, and a laundry, and a kitchen-oriented "great" room. The updated "dream" home speaks volumes about women's changing roles and the change in family lifestyles. The Cherry Hill women also showed a preference for outdoor living areas that do not frost too early in the fall.

 The most commonly used type of finish-coating is a special flexible stucco-like coating. It looks and feels just like stucco, but it is made of an acrylic polymer that remains flexible. It is easy to apply and durable due to its flexibility. You select among many colors and it can improve the appearance of most houses.
 You can apply the coating with a trowel or a roller depending upon the surface finish you desire. One-sixteenth of an inch is the recommended thickness. You should trowel it around the corners and window trim right up to the existing brick or exterior surface for a finished look.
 You can write to me for Utility Bill Update No. 049 showing a list of manufacturers of exterior insulation systems, information on the do-it-yourself system and materials, and small sample pieces of cured stucco finish coating. Please include $1 and a self-addressed envelope.
Q: I have heard that the new energy-efficient low-E glass uses a metal coating that contains mercury. Can that be dangerous to my family's health if we install new windows? — M.F.

A: Energy-efficient low-E glass uses a microscopically thin invisible coating of metallic compounds on the glass surface. It is very effective for blocking heat loss in the winter and heat gain in the summer. The metal compounds don't have mercury in them and the metallic surface is sealed on the inside surfaces of the thermal double-pane glass.

Weatherizing home saves in long run

Q: Would I really save money going to the expense of weatherizing my home? I have had phone calls, asking if certain firms could talk to me about it.

Better Business Bureau

As it will cost you money to insulate, weatherstrip and seal your home against the coming winter weather, but you'll save plenty in the long run.

Windows, doors, walls and ceilings are the obvious energy wasters in most homes; however, you should not overlook insulating (wrapping) both hot and cold water pipes and heating and cooling ducts.

Insulation products include blanket or batt insulation for walls, ceiling

ings and floors; weatherstripping for doors and windows; caulking compound and sealants for structural cracks; storm windows and doors, heating and cooling modification devices such as setback thermostats, replacing filters and using heating appliances.

The BBB of Treasure Valley has available "FACTS ON HOME INSULATION." If interested in receiving one, please send 25 cents and a self-addressed envelope (business size) to 409 W. Jefferson, Boise, Idaho 83702.

Q: Is it necessary to have my car checked again for winter, I just had it serviced a couple of months ago?

A: Winter is the most difficult time of the year to keep a car operating smoothly. Lubricants become thick and sluggish in the colder temperatures and must be warmed to work properly; water coolants must adequate amounts of antifreeze additives in order to prevent freezing.

A good place to start preventive maintenance is with an engine tune-up. Check hoses for cracks, bulges, leaks or loose clamps. Have the battery load tested to verify its ability to crank the engine. Clean and tighten battery cable connections. And, check all fluid levels.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS FROM THE BBB STAFF!

"CONSUMER WATCH" is a reader's service column. Queries should be addressed to "Consumer Watch," 409 W. Jefferson, Boise, Idaho 83702. Questions of general interest will be answered here, while others will be answered by mail.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

There are a lot of people who must have the table laid in the usual fashion or they will not enjoy the dinner.

In a recent duplicate, most East players knew what suit to shift to at the critical point in today's game.

Those who stuck with habit did not find success. South wins his club ace, draws trumps and passes his diamond eight for a losing finesse.

Those who succeeded played for West to hold the king and nine. They started the suit by leading the jack, and South was trapped. If he ducked, it was a quick three-losers.

ANSWER: Three clubs. If opener has a good hand, there may be a game. If not, the three-level may be too high for the opponents to compete.

North-South and East-West bridge scores. North: 12-8A, 10-6-3, A 10 7, A K 10 7, A K. East: 4-3-2, 4-3-2, 4-3-2, 4-3-2. South: 12-8A, 10-6-3, A 10 7, A K. West: 4-3-2, 4-3-2, 4-3-2, 4-3-2.

BID WITH THE ACES. South holds: 12-8A. A J 8, 4 3 2, 10 7, A K 10 7, A K.

ANSWER: Three clubs. If opener has a good hand, there may be a game. If not, the three-level may be too high for the opponents to compete.

'Deceptive' John Jake spurs Idaho's success

By COLIN MULDOON
Times-News correspondent

12 games thus far, he's caught 53 passes for 753 yards and five touchdowns.

MOSCOW — The University of Idaho has boasted the most potent offense in the nation among NCAA Division I-AA football programs over the past five years. No-1 AA school in the country has the numbers to match Idaho's 452 yards-per-game average. In the same time span, the Vandals have been tops through the air with a 311.7-yard average. A good percentage of that real estate belongs to those little guys who zig-zag up and down, to and fro, over and across the field, frustrating defensive backs (and their coaches) from Missoula to Flagstaff. And the leader of the pack? His name is John Jake, another in a distinguished line of recruits that includes former Vandal standout Eric Yarber from Los Angeles Valley Community College — part of the "LA Valley connection that has become an apparent staple in Idaho's recruit-

Good as the numbers are, Jake's real value to the Vandals is his ability to make the catch in the clutch. It certainly wouldn't be his sheer speed. Vandal Offensive Coordinator Bill Diedrick puts it best when he describes Jake as deceptive. "He's a very deceptive player in the fact that if you timed him in the 40 (yard dash), he's probably a 4.7 at best," Diedrick said. "That's probably giving him a break. But on game day if he's going after the ball, I don't know if you could put a watch on him. He's one of those players." Jake agreed that speed probably isn't his strong suit. "I think I'm basically more quick than fast," he said. "You know, get off the ball and get into my route pretty fast, so I think it's quickness. That's one of the main things." But Jake recognizes his lack of speed as a weakness. "I think I need to get a little faster

Furman unheralded at season's beginning

By RICK SCOPPE
The Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Last spring, Furman did what many football teams do. The Paladins had a team meeting where they dedicated themselves to winning the national championship. "We talked about the things that we wanted to accomplish. We put our goals on the board," tailback Dwight Sterling said. "Everybody was in agreement on them; we wanted to win the conference and the national championship." Few others would have given the Paladins much of a chance to achieve their goals. After all, the Greenville school was not even picked to finish No. 1 in the Southern Conference. The preseason predictions put Furman in the middle of the pack, mainly because of the loss of 31 letterman and 16 starters. But more than three months after the season began, Furman is continuing to prove doubters wrong. The Paladins, 11-2, play host to Idaho, 11-1, in the semifinals of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs Saturday. The survivor will take on the winner of the Georgia Southern-Eastern Kentucky for the I-AA title Dec. 17 in Poastello, Idaho. The 6-foot-1, 210-pound Sterling, who has rushed for a team-high 741 yards this year, said the seeds of Furman's success were planted at the team meeting last year. "It was a really serious ceremony," Sterling said. "We have a helmet at the front. Each player walks up front and puts their hand on the helmet and dedicates themselves to the goals." Jake came to Idaho after an impressive sophomore year at the Van Nuys, Calif., junior college, snagging 28 passes for 720 yards (25.7 yards per catch) and five touchdowns. Last year, Jake caught 45 tosses for a team-high 734 yards and eight touchdowns, ranking him 70th and 11th respectively in those categories among Big Sky Conference receivers. This year, Jake has essentially duplicated his production from 1987. In myself," he said. Sheer speed however, doesn't necessarily make a receiver great or even good, as Jake pointed out. "I think a lot of people in this league have more speed than I have, but I figure if you know how to read the defense, run the right routes and everything..." he said. "You can be fast, but can also be covered by someone that's not fast. You need to know how to read the defense to know how to get open." Getting open, according to Diedrick, especially in the clutch situations, is Jake's strong suit. "The number of big catches he's had over the year in key situations," Diedrick said. Third-and-10, you know, making miraculous circus catches..." Moscow is a long way from sunny Southern California and coming out of high school, Jake didn't know the University of Idaho from the dark side of the moon. ## Top-ranked Grizzlies beat Minico 73-49

By RON BENNETT
Special to The Times-News

IDAHO FALLS — If you give the No. 1-ranked Skyline Grizzlies a break early, it can be a long night. When Minico turned ice-cold in the first quarter from the free throw line in Wednesday's Gem State Conference boys' basketball clash with the Grizzlies, Skyline ignited to climb from a five-point deficit in the first quarter to a 20-point lead in the second and then coasted to a 73-49 victory. Skyline proved to 3-0 after the two teams' conference opener, while Minico dropped to 1-1. Minico was enjoying a 7-2 lead when suddenly somebody put the lid on basket when the Spartans were at the free throw line. They managed just three of 14 foul shots during one streak.

Skyline, ranked No. 1 among Class A-1 schools by the Associated Press, began lighting up the board from the three-point line. "Just when we started struggling from the line, they started cranking up the three-pointers," said Minico coach Craig Dexter. "When we moved out on them, they dumped it inside to their 6-7 players. It was a combination of problems that hurt." Skyline connected on eight three-point shots, six of them in the first half. Even though the Grizzlies cooled off a little in the second half, they finished the game shooting 52 percent from the field. Skyline also dominated the rebounding, 50-26. "They're not rated No. 1 for nothing," Dexter said. "They just played two games in Boise and they were anxious to get home. We just happened to be the team that drew them." Skyline coach Jim Lewis agreed that his ball-club was glad to be home. "We felt we didn't run our defense well against either Borah or Capital and we worked hard on that problem in practice," he said. "I'd like to compliment our kids on getting the rhythm and playing together as a team." Lewis said Minico is a better team than the final score indicated. "They beat Twin Falls in their opener and they have some excellent players like (Dann) Poulton," he said. "We know his tendencies from last year in the state tournament and we worked hard on defending him tonight." Poulton finished the game with eight points before fouling out with 3 minutes and 48 seconds remaining in the fourth quarter. Six-foot, 4-inch junior forward Trent Rose of

Shoshone gets No. 1 ranking

By The Associated Press

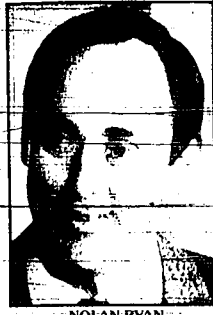

Shoshone has moved atop the ratings in Class A-4 in the latest Associated Press boys' high school basketball poll. The Indians, 2-0, joined Wilder as the No. 1 small-school team in Idaho in the weekly ratings by the state's sportswriters and broadcasters. Skyline of Idaho Falls, Jerome and Lapwai maintained their top rankings. Wilder and Shoshone each received 60 of a possible 60 points from the state's sportswriters and broadcasters, with the 2-0 Wildcats getting eight of the 12 first-place votes cast and the Indians three. Shoshone was ranked second in the last poll, the AP's preseason survey released two weeks ago. In A-1, 2-0 Skyline got 11 of 12 first-place votes and 59 of a possible 60 points, followed by Borah of Boise (1-1), which moved up from third to second after beating second-ranked Idaho Falls last weekend. The defending state champion Tigers, 1-1, dropped to third, followed by Boise, 3-1, Rigby, 2-0, and Nevada to the No. 5 position, replacing Coeur d'Alene, which lost its first two games of the season. In A-2, undefeated Jerome received 11 of 12 first-place votes and 57 of a possible 60 points, followed by Shelley, 2-1, which moved up from fourth to second. Wallace, 2-0, ranked fifth in the last survey, advanced into a third-place tie with defending state champion Marsh Valley of Arimo, 0-1, which was rated second last time. Kuna, which is scheduled to open its season on Thursday, moved into the No. 5 spot. Lakeland of Rathbun, rated third in the last poll, fell out of the rankings after losing its season opener. In A-3, defending state champion Lapwai stayed on top with a 1-0 record, nine of 12 first-place votes and 62 of a possible 60 points. The Wildcats were again followed by Fruitland, 3-0; • See POLL on Page D2

Nolan Ryan signs with Texas Rangers

By BEN WALKER
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Free agent Nolan Ryan, saying he was "a die-hard Texan," today agreed to a one-year contract plus an option with the Texas Rangers. Ryan, 41, had been courted by Texas, California and San Francisco before family considerations led him to the Rangers. If he pitches both years, he would be paid about $3 million. "The Rangers' offer was not the highest, but Ryan said it did not come down to a monetary decision." Texas general manager Tom Grube said Ryan's agreement made this "probably one of the greatest days in the history of the franchise." The Rangers continued to be the busiest team at the winter meetings. They have made three trades and have acquired 300 hitters Julio Franco and Rafael Palmeiro. Ryan, baseball's all-time strikeout leader, went 12-11 with a 3.52 earned run average for Houston. The Astros made an initial offer to retain him, but dropped out when the bidding went to high stakes. "I'm not surprised by the Astros' position. I can understand the way they do business." Ryan signed with the Astros as a

Pistons overcome Bulls 102-89

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Adrian Dantley scored 14 of his 31 points in the fourth quarter and Detroit held NBA scoring leader Michael Jordan to 18 points as the Pistons beat the Chicago Bulls 102-89 Wednesday night.

Isiah Thomas, whose 3-point basket 20 seconds before halftime gave Detroit the lead for good, 49-46, scored four points in a 14-1 spurt to start the second half as the Pistons built a 63-52 lead with 8:03 left in the third quarter.

Philadelphia 134 Denver 109

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Charles Barkley had 29 points and 14 rebounds and scored six points during a 12-0 spurt in the second half, leading the Philadelphia 76ers to a 134-109 victory over the Denver Nuggets. Philadelphia set a club record with 45 assists, with David Wingate collecting career-high 15.

The 76ers—held a 65-53 lead at halftime, despite 20 points by the Nuggets' Michael Adams. After Adams opened the second half with a 3-pointer, the Sixers followed with their 12-0 spurt for a 77-56 lead.

Denver got no closer than 14 after that.

Adams had 23 points and made three 3-point shots, extending his NBA record to 61 consecutive games in which he has hit at least one.

The Heat's Jon Sundvold hit a two-point shot from the corner that he released just after the buzzer, negating an overtime. Miami blow an 80-69 lead with less than 10 minutes remaining.

Atlanta 106 Boston 103

BOSTON (AP) — Moses Malone capped a season-high, 27-point performance by making three free throws in the final 10 seconds, ending the Atlanta Hawks to hold off the Boston Celtics 106-103 and extend their winning streak to six games.

It was Atlanta's first regular-season victory in Boston Garden since March 1, 1985 and broke an eight-game losing streak there. The Celtics suffered their third consecutive loss.

The Hawks, who snapped a four-game road losing streak, erupted from an 83-89 tie with a 20-9 run. That gave Atlanta a 103-92 lead with 2:43 left and seemingly assured victory.

L.A. Lakers 125 Phoenix 111

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Magic Johnson recorded his fourth "triple-double" of the season and Byron Scott scored 27 points as the Los Angeles Lakers defeated the Phoenix Suns 125-111 for their sixth consecutive victory.

Johnson had 18 points, 12 rebounds and 18 assists without playing any of the fourth quarter.

With the victory, the Lakers are unbeaten in seven games at the Forum and kept the best record in the NBA, 14-3.

After rookie Dan Majerle's layup pulled Phoenix within one point with 6:35 left in the first half, Johnson scored seven points during a 16-4 spurt that put the Lakers 62-49.

Indiana 129 Portland 120

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Chuck Person scored 12 of his 27 points in the decisive third period and Indiana overtook Portland 37-14 from the free-throw line and beat the Trail Blazers 129-120.

Wayman Tisdale added 24 points, including 10 of 10 free throws, and added 14 rebounds. Seven Blazers scored in double figures to break Indiana's nine-game losing streak against the Trail Blazers.

Dallas 102 Seattle 98

DALLAS (AP) — Derek Harper scored 31 points, including a go-ahead 3-pointer with 1:49 remaining, lifting the Dallas Mavericks to a 102-98 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics Wednesday night.

Harper's 3-point shot boosted the Mavericks into a 98-96 advantage, sparking a 9-0 Dallas run.

Utah 111 Washington 94

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Karl Malone scored 34 points, including nine during a 12-2 spurt early in the second half, as the Utah Jazz defeated the Washington Bullets 111-94 Wednesday night.

Malone, held to 13 points in the first half, took control in the final two quarters. He gave Utah its biggest lead, 105-82, with 3:47 left, when he scored and followed with a free throw after John Williams was charged with a foul.

Mets trade Backman to Minnesota

ATLANTA (AP) — The New York Mets traded second baseman Wally Backman to the Minnesota Twins Wednesday for three minor-league pitchers.

Backman, 29, hit .303 in 99 games last season with 17 runs batted in. The Mets also sent minor-league pitcher Mike Santiago to the Twins.

In exchange, the Mets got right-handers Jeff Bumgarner, Steve Gasser and Toby Nivens.

Bumgarner, Gasser and Nivens were transferred from the Twins' Triple-A Portland, Ore., farm club to the Mets' Double-A Jackson, Miss., affiliate.

Bumgarner was the Twins' No. 1 pick in the 1985 June draft. With Orlando of the Class AA Southern League, he was 3-11 with a 3.94 earned-run average in 20 starts.

Twins get McClure from Houston

ATLANTA (AP) — The Minnesota Twins acquired right-handed pitcher Todd McClure from Houston, completing a trade that sent pitcher Mark Portugal to the Astros three days earlier.

McClure, 22, went 1-2 with 16 saves and a 2.03 earned run average for Class A Ocala last season. His contract was assigned from Ocala's Class AAA Tucson club to the Twins' Triple-A affiliate in Portland.

Kentucky considers appeal of ruling

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The University of Kentucky was deciding Wednesday whether to appeal a ruling that it must make available copies of the complete text of 17 NCAA allegations against the school's basketball program.

The ruling, issued by Fayette circuit judge George E. Barker on Tuesday, stemmed from an Oct. 25 "friendly" suit filed jointly by Kentucky and The Louisville Courier-Journal.

The suit sought a ruling on whether the allegations, received by the school on Oct. 14, must be released in their entirety. The Lexington Herald-Leader later intervened with The Courier-Journal in the lawsuit.

Bernie Vanderhaide, the university's public relations director, said in a telephone interview Wednesday that no decision had been made on whether to release the entire text or to appeal Barker's decision.

Brewers trade Schroeder to Angels

ATLANTA (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers traded catcher Bill Schroeder to the California Angels for infielder Gus Polidor Wednesday at baseball's annual winter meetings.

Schroeder, 30, split time with Denver of the American Association and the Brewers in 1988. He hit .235 with Denver in six games. With the Brewers, he hit .166 in 41 games with five home runs and 10 RBI.

Schroeder, a five-year veteran, had his best year in 1987, hitting .332 with 14 homers and 42 RBI.

Polidor, 27, hit .148 in 54 games for the Angola last season. He hit .263 in 63 games in 1987.

Shula says he did all he could

MIAMI (AP) — Miami Dolphins coach Don Shula said Wednesday he did all he could in 1986 to end Mark Duper's associations with convicted drug dealers.

Sports Illustrated magazine reported in its Dec. 12 issue that Shula and team owner Joe Robbie were told more than two years ago about photographs of Duper with Miami cocaine dealer Nelson Aguilar and other dealers.

"The league and team officials apparently did little to stop Duper's association with the dealers," the magazine said.

The NFL last week suspended Duper for 30 days for violating the league's substance abuse policy.

"I was very disturbed," Shula said, "by the implication that I was aware of alleged drug use or consorting with drug dealers and didn't do anything about it."

Duper was warned to stay away from Aguilar after a photo surfaced showing the two men and former Dolphin Nat Moore, team security consultant, Stuart Weinstein said.

Contrary to the SI article, Weinstein said, he did not tell Robbie about the pictures.

Sports Illustrated said Duper has been a cocaine user since at least 1986. The NFL said it has been watching his activities for some time.

Loyalty beats money for Schmidt

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mike Schmidt will get less money than last year under an agreement the Philadelphia Phillies announced Wednesday, but if his health holds on, the slugging third basemen still could net $2.05 million.

Money wasn't the clincher, though, the 39-year-old Schmidt said.

Loyalty surfaced on both sides and that was the real reason I ended up where I wanted to be, in Philadelphia," Schmidt told a news conference hours before a midnight deadline that would have prevented the Phillies from negotiating with him as a free agent until May 1.

Phillips general manager Lee Thomas made it plain earlier that the Phillies would not come close to guaranteeing the game's seventh all-time home-run leader the $2.25 million he earned last year.

Tracy Rocker of Auburn receives Outland Trophy

TRACY ROCKER 'Shocked'

NEW YORK (AP) — Auburn's Tracy Rocker, the No. 1 player on the nation's No. 1 defensive unit, fought off two offensive linemen Wednesday and won the 43rd annual Outland Trophy as the nation's top interior lineman.

The 6-foot-3, 278-pound senior tackle said he was "shocked" when he was announced as the winner over Michigan State tackle Tony Mandarich and Pitt guard Mark Stepanoski "because I've been double-teamed all year by offensive linemen and right now I have two offensive linemen next to me."

"It means a whole lot to me because I can sit here and think about the times where I made some sacrifices and gave up some things because I wanted to have something special. I think right now it paid off."

Auburn led the nation this season in scoring defense, total defense, and rushing defense, allowing only 7.2 points and 218.1 and 63.2 yards a game. Rocker made 191 tackles, including 13 behind the line plus five quarterback sacks. His 354 career tackles are the most by any lineman in Auburn history.

"I would think he's probably the best that's ever played at Auburn — period — because I would think that we've probably had better defensive linemen in the last eight years than they've ever had," Coach Pat Dye said.

Rocker usually leads by his play on the field — "My name usually Rocker is Auburn's second Outland winner. Guard Zeke Smith won it in 1958.

"When you get to this level, it's the inner strength that makes the difference between being good or great, and then being the best," Dye said. "Tracy had those qualities that set him apart from other people."

"He got hurt as a freshman and went through a very traumatic experience dealing with the injury and not playing and homesick."

"Any time you've got an individual as strong spiritually and mentally tough as Tracy is, sometimes it's tougher for those guys to allow themselves to be coached and trained to be team players. A lot of them want to freelance, and know that they've got that talent."

"But Tracy's allowed himself to be trained and to become a team player and has played the game within our schemes. We could have done some things with him that would have him a lot higher up on total stats — sacks and so forth. But he's played within the team concept and made us a much better football team."

"I don't know that he is a devastating pass-rusher, but he is a complete defensive lineman. I don't think anybody could block him and keep him out of a play. You're going to have to figure out a way to fool him or double-team him. You're not going to run the ball at him, and it's very difficult to run away from him."

When Auburn led Florida 16-0 at halftime, Rocker reminded everyone during the intermission that the Tigers had blown a 17-0 lead two years and lost 18-17.

"I mentioned it when I got in the locker room," Rocker said. "I just told them, 'Look, this time we're not going to lose this one. We've got Florida where we want them, and we're not going to lose this one.'"

Hinmon scores week's high game

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Howie Hinmon had the high game and Dean Dorland the best series in city league bowling action last week.

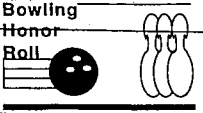

Hinmon rolled 268 game in the Industrial League at the Bowldrome, edging Byron Hager, who had a 265 at the Bowldrome.

Dorland registered a 698 series in the Consolidated League, at the Bowldrome, beating Cliff Hinkle, who rolled a 692 in the Consolidated League.

High women's game belonged to Cheri Freeman, who turned in 235 game in the Pintippers League at the Bowldrome, while Shonia Stewart and Babe Hansen tied for second with 230. Stewart's game came at the Bowldrome, Hansen's in the Pioneer League at the Magic Bowl.

High women's series belonged to Karen Poe, with a 606 in the Pioneer League at the Magic Bowl. LaFawn Anderson registered a 587 in the Sunset League at the Bowldrome.

Jim Krunich holds a gray partridge

Partridges make fine hunting

By JIM KRUNICH
Times-News correspondent

Although Hungarian partridge are considered "incidental" since hunters generally harvest huns while in pursuit of pheasants or chukars, partridge can be harvested in numbers that are anything but incidental.

Commonly called huns or Hungarian partridge, the correct name for perdix perdix is gray partridge. Gray partridge first appeared in Idaho by filtering in from the adjacent states of Oregon and Washington around the early 1900s. Releases, beginning in 1921, established the species in nearly every county of the state.

Gray partridges have usually been associated with agricultural areas that grow cereal grains, but in southern Idaho gray partridge are also found in sagebrush and grass dominated areas and may appear more than 20 miles from the nearest cultivated land.

Gray partridge populations have declined dramatically in agricultural areas due to many of the problems that has reduced pheasant numbers. Huns prefer grassy areas of hayfields for nesting. Habitat losses from ditch burning, farming techniques and conversion from ditch to sprinkler irrigation systems have reduced partridge populations. Herbicides and pesticides also have their own negative effects upon most upland game species, and partridge are no exception.

Hunting appears to have little effect on partridge populations. Declines in numbers can be linked directly to adverse weather conditions. Severe weather conditions during the winters of 1981-1982 and again in 1983-1984 greatly reduced the population levels. Dramatic variations in populations can also be attributed to adverse weather during the June hatching period when broods of up to 12 chicks are hatched. Due to two mild winters and fair weather during the June hatch, partridge numbers have improved.

The gray partridge season runs concurrently with the chukar season because the birds are difficult to tell apart when they flush and sometimes share the same habitat. In many areas, gray partridge are harvested only lightly and could withstand heavier hunting pressure. This is particularly true in the southern portion of the state.

In addition to inhabiting the agricultural farmlands in the southern region of the state, gray partridge are present in excellent numbers in the foothill areas of the Albion Mountains, the Owyhee foothills and the Cassin ranges. (The Cassin Mountains are usually referred to as the South Hills by Twin Falls-area residents.) Most of these areas are easily accessible to the public. Some of the land is private, but most of it is managed by the Bureau of Land Management or the U.S. Forest Service.

Dogs are not necessary, but are certainly helpful in locating partridge. A dog helps to eliminate much walking when trying to cover a ridge. I usually try to hunt with a companion, separated by about 70 to 80 yards, and watch for either the dog to get "birdy" or for fresh droppings. If one of us spots fresh sign, we immediately get the attention of the other and work toward where we suspect a flock. When the dog gets "birdy," I whistle the dog to sit and we approach carefully.

What type of dog you use doesn't really matter. The dog should be trained to work close and stop on command since huns can become extremely spooky. Huns are somewhat unpredictable in regard to flushing characteristics. One batch of birds might hold until the hunters and dogs are practically on top of them, and another group will take flight before they are anywhere close to being within shotgun range.

He estimates majority of Idaho outfitters not legal Agent hunts illegal outfitters

BOISE (AP) — Jack Black hunts and fishes like the mountain men did in the 1800s; without regard to seasons or limits.

He hunts cougar and bear year-round and at night. He catches more salmon in a year than old-timers did with pitchforks.

Black — not his real name — is an undercover agent for the state Outfitters and Guides Licensing Board. Drawing on advertisements in Idaho newspapers, he seeks out illegal hunting, fishing and river trips and busts the phony outfitters when it is all over.

"Illegals," as he calls them, is one of the issues to be discussed at the Idaho Outfitters and Guides Association's annual meeting Monday through Wednesday in Garden City.

Black estimates that for every legal outfitter in Idaho, there are two bogus ones. With legitimate outfitters and guides generating $18 million in receipts in 1987, "illegals" may pocket twice that amount, paying zero taxes. He estimates the state loses $1 million in taxes in the bargain.

Not only is the state losing in tax revenues to illegal outfitters, the Fish and Game is losing a huge amount of fish and wildlife, he said.

"It really angers you when you realize they are stealing from everybody," said Jim Thrash, a New Meadows big-game outfitter and member of the guides board. "They're not paying any sales tax, no use fee and they usually leave garbage everywhere."

"We've observed that if a person is predisposed to illegal outfitting, he doesn't mind breaking other laws as well," said Frank Nesmith, chief of enforcement for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

Some experts believe that for every animal taken legally in Idaho, another is poached. In 1982, about 84,000 were killed legally in the state.

Black's worst experience with a violation involved a three-day hunt with a Payette school teacher. Black paid $350 for the 1984 hunt, conducted out of season.

"In three days, he killed nine deer (of both sexes). All nine were illegal ... We had to quit our hunt because he was killing everything that moved. He was a very good shot," Black said.

Cold can kill the unprepared

The death by exposure of an Eastern Idaho man a couple of weeks ago came as a shock to Idahoans, but such incidents don't puzzle many old-timers.

The tragedy occurred when two young men left a bogged-down vehicle in the Sand Creek vicinity near St. Anthony to seek help. One perished from cold before he reached safety.

According to stories in the Idaho Falls Post-Register, Terry Thompson gave his coat and boots to a companion after they left a stuck vehicle about 2 a.m. The companion walked past several darkened farm houses before finally reaching help at 7:30 a.m.

You might shake your head at those events, but hypothermia — rapid cooling of the body core — robs you of your powers to reason and frequently leads its victims to make bad decisions.

Idahoans of earlier generations never traveled without carrying emergency supplies in wagons and early cars. That's because they lived close enough to nature to realize that she can kill without caring unless you were prepared to fight for your life.

Mike Harrop

In those days, the reasoning was that lots of things could happen to keep you out overnight, where cold could be a serious problem.

Without enough insulation, most people will die of cold in a few hours.

But today, we've lost many of the survival skills of our grandfathers. Few people bother to dress warmly for an automobile ride or a trip to the supermarket. That's because we correctly reason that few things can place you in such life-threatening situations. Unfortunately, we get in the habit of leaving Mother Nature in windbreakers and jeans around town, and sometimes get caught unprepared in the back country.

However, as anyone who has broken down along a freeway will tell you, the most crowded places can sometimes be the most lonely ones.

Black down on an isolated road where a car comes along every half hour or less often, and the first car will probably stop to help you.

But if the fuel pump in your car dies on the side of the freeway three miles from Boise, you'd probably wait much longer before someone stops.

Simply keeping a sleeping bag in the vehicle can be a life-saver. It is even better to have one for every person who will be riding with you.

Warm boots are a necessity if you hope to leave a vehicle and seek help, and a pile of old newspapers can provide a terrific amount of good insulation if you cover yourself with several layers of them.

A candle or two can raise the temperature inside a car several degrees, and your body heat will help too. You can't count on the car's heater to keep you warm. The vehicle may not run.

It is essential that you remember proper outdoor clothing on trips. Without it, you could die before help arrives.

If you're caught without proper clothing for the elements, stay with the car. And in any event, stay with the car until at least daylight. People

Off-road group criticizes Idaho Wildlife Congress

POCATELLO (AP) — A leader of an off-road recreational vehicle group contends the state Department of Fish and Game's recent Idaho Wildlife Congress was tilted heavily toward environmental interests.

Clark Collins, executive director of the Blue Ribbon Coalition, said in a letter to Fish and Game Director Jerry Conley that his group opposed the Wildlife Congress, which drew 800 sportsmen and conservationists to Boise Nov. 19 and 20.

"We strongly disagree with the stated purpose of the congress of forming an umbrella organization to represent the interests of everyone in Idaho concerned with wildlife management," Collins wrote.

He said it appeared many non-hunting groups were involved with planning the event, and he questioned whether the department had authority to spend state money on such a meeting.

But Tracey Trent, co-chairman of the congress, said Collins' assumptions were wrong.

"His allegation is incorrect that environmental groups were involved in planning," Trent said. "Fish and hunting groups — sportsmen — were involved in the planning."

The two-day event was designed to get feedback from sportsmen and to establish state and regional councils that will supply the department with regular input on fish and game issues.

Collins also condemned the department for promoting a $25-a-plate "fund-raising" dinner, called "A Wild Affair," preceding the congress.

F&G conducts hunter survey

BOISE — A landmark study assessing sportsmen's opinions on a broad range of hunting-related issues is under way and will help guide development of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's five-year species management plans.

Questionnaires have been mailed to 8,400 hunting license buyers around the state. The study is funded by the department but designed and conducted by the University of Idaho. "We wanted to separate ourselves from the project in order to achieve the utmost in objectivity," said Lou Nelson, F&G game biologist. "By having someone independent do the study we have avoided prejudicing the questions and people's responses to them."

Nelson said the study identifies how Idahoans feel about the present status of Idaho's hunting and what they'd like to see in the future.

"At the recent Idaho Wildlife Congress in Boise, the public made it clear they want greater cooperation with the department and this study brings them directly into the planning process," said Nelson.

The three-part study covers elk, deer and upland/waterfowl hunting. The questions are comprehensive, ranging from aesthetics ("What do you care about the hunting experience?") to preferences in weapons, season lengths, trophy vs. meat-hunting, road closures to arcane management issues such as solutions to farmland depredation by game and whether or not sale of teeth, claws and bladders from legal harvested black bears should be banned.

"The university left few stones unturned and we're very pleased," said Nelson. "The last study of this quality and magnitude was done in 1971. Back then a little over half of the hunters returned their questionnaires. We hope even more do this time. It's their chance to help shape their hunting future."

Fish and Game prepares for winter feeding, transplanting

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

JEROME — "We are right on the edge of feeding operations. One more batch of snow would change a lot of things."

Craig Kvale, Region 4 wildlife manager for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, says the department is now prepared for any type of winter season that might come along — from feeding to trapping and transplanting. Which direction the winter-season activities will take depends on the weather.

To this point, the region is feeding elk only at the Bullwhacker site near Ketchum — and that basically to keep the 40-50 head from wandering farther down the valley toward town.

At the same time, two depredation hunts continue in Units 53 and 45 and already the department has answered a couple of landowner complaints by issuing hunting permits to discourage deer foraging.

Kvale said two possibilities exist for transplanting elk this winter.

Larry Hovey

One is the chronic problem on Warm Springs on the outskirts of Ketchum.

"In previous years we've pretty much stayed away from it because a landowner in the area took it upon himself to feed the animals and since he had the best feeding site, his land accommodated just about all of the animals," Kvale said. "The land has undergone a change of ownership and the new owner doesn't want the elk on his property. He has given us permission to set up a trap on his property so if the elk move in there in any numbers, we will move a number of elk into the Atlanta county to cut down on depredation complaint."

Kvale said the other possible trap site would be on the east end of Games prairie.

"We have a few animals out of the mountains and roaming the prairie now," he said. "We are set up for a major feeding operation on the west end of the prairie if it is needed."

Kvale said bait stations have been opened at several places in the Pischo Hills as the department is trying to hold deer on the hills rather than have them possibly drift onto the desert and then into lower Lincoln and Jerome counties as they did in 1984 and 1985.

"Those bait sites have sustained a lot of use and there are a lot of deer on the Pischos," Kvale said. "In the past few days the southern slopes have bared off fairly well and that should help keep the deer there, too."

The sites along the south fork of the Boise River are poised for feeding but snow depths, as discovered last week, are around 18 inches and the elk are showing no pressure to leave the higher country.

In another elk development, Kvale said hunter sightings of elk during the recent deer seasons in the South Hills turned up confirmed resorts in all units east of U.S. Highway 93 but Black Pine.

Those elk apparently are hanging on from a number of Yellowstone animals that were taken by rail to Hansen and released in the South Hills in 1971. However, sightings apparently were more numerous in the Sublett unit, bolstered by the translocation of elk by Region 5 during harsh winter conditions two years ago.

The all-deer feeding operation near Snowville, Utah, is ready and currently some pellets have been placed at the site to keep the deer from drifting into Utah. The hazing fence that is designed to move the migrating deer toward the feed site also has been repaired.

Large groups of antelope have materialized in the big desert area in eastern Lincoln, Jerome and Blaine counties, Kvale said.

One band of about 300 head is working the desert in the Dietrich-Shoshone area, another 100 has been seen in the north Paul-Kimama area, and another two to three antelope are wandering south of Carey.

So far the department has received 11 degradation complaints from practically every geographical area in Magic Valley. There have been two in the South Hills — Black Pine and Almo areas — along with the traditional problems in the north Bliss, King Hill, Glenns Ferry and Game biologist.

The late problems persist despite the continuing muzzleloader depredation hunt in Unit 45.

The muzzleloaders seem to be taking a fair number of deer and seem to be applying pretty good pressure," Kvale said. "But that deer population has grown so much in the past few years that it will take a while to see any major changes."

He said department personnel patrolling the area last Sunday counted 171 head in the hunting area.

"Despite the pressure we're still getting complaints from landowners," Kvale said. "One thing we're seeing is a very selective group of hunters who are concentrating on taking big bucks and letting the smaller bucks and does alone. That might change

Regional Wildlife Council deserves support of outdoorsmen

— Being a native of Idaho often takes for granted the opportunities for hunting and fishing which surround me. Within thirty minutes of my home I can hunt elk and deer, chase an antelope, sneak a canal for ducks, corner a pheasant in a willow patch, catch a coyote, or fire away at a distant ruckuck.

Equally abundant possibilities exist for the fisherman, the hiker, the photographer, and the camper. Perhaps the holiday season is an appropriate time for all of us to remind ourselves of these resources and to pledge support to their preservation. Just such an opportunity to support and preserve the Idaho wildlife will soon be provided with the organization of a Regional Wildlife Council. Your support and assistance will soon be solicited, for it will take a unified effort by all sportsmen for such an undertaking to be successful.

about this time I begin compiling my Santa list. I have found that I am very specific, to the point of including model numbers, sizes, brand names, catalog page numbers, etc. The results can be very productive. The "wish list" to follow, however, is more entertaining than practical.

Many of you, like myself, have learned by painful experience that the activities which sportsman undertake often include unplanned obstacles and inconveniences. The following list represents some unlikely but wishful solutions to a few of these aggravating and exasperating situations.

1. I am not a short person but without fail the corn field with the largest pheasant population is also the field with the tallest corn. I can hear and sometimes see my quarry escaping my quest but the husky eight foot stalks prevent a shot. I would like a productive hybrid corn which grows to a maximum of five feet.

2. Upon the completion of cleaning my deer, I have for too often discovered I've washed my hands in the creek that not all the blood belonged to the deer. A knife which could tell the difference between the animal and my fingers would be nice.

3. I do not mind buying the required stamps and tags. The problem is I can never remember to buy them until the last moment or later. I spent one night traveling all over the valley looking for a vendor who was open and not out of deer tags. I would like a plastic card type license with all the stamps and major tags imprinted on the back. One purchase and I would be set for the year.

4. I still miss the weight of my lead duck loads in my hunting vest. Put a new, non-toxic, cheap, heavy density metal on my list.

5. For my dog who spends half the doze season spitting, coughing, and sneezing feathers, a new strain of morning dew with feathers securely attached.

6. Since it seems man will forever have a need to shoot at glass containers and leave the debris, a biodegradable glass container would be a welcomed gift.

7. A new decoy anchor card which would not catch every stray weed, piece of moss, or passing dog would be a welcomed addition to any stocking.

That should do for one Christmas.

Briefly

2nd half of duck season to open
JEROME — The second half of Magic Valley's duck season will open Saturday morning following a month's layoff.

After a backluster first three weeks, the concluding portion should be better as a respectable number of northern migrants have moved into the area.

They started showing up about a week after the first part of the season ended," said Region 4 Wildlife Manager Craig Kvale of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. "We don't have a number on how many have come in yet because hunting pressure hasn't concentrated them on the Hagerman refuge. Right now they appear to be pretty well dispersed up and down the river. We believe hunting should be pretty good this weekend."

The duck season will continue through Jan. 7 while the goose season in most of Magic Valley concludes Jan. 1.

Winter range closed to snowmobiles
FAIRFIELD — Elk winter range on the Fairfield Ranger District of the Sawtooth National Forest will be closed to snowmobiles and other motorized traffic as of Friday.

Recent heavy snow in the mountains has moved elk to winter ranges at lower elevations. Deep snow will keep them there throughout the winter. Their key winter range is adjacent to the south fork of the Boise River and its main tributaries, said a forest news release.

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game conducts feeding operations at five sites along the South Fork. The release said motorized travel "at this time would be detrimental to elk survival. It forces the animals to move through deep snow to escape noise, using up energy they desperately need to survive the winter."

Snowmobile owners should register

BOISE — Snowmobile owners are reminded they should register their machines before hitting the many trails that currently are being opened throughout the snow areas.

Most registration is still in the bulk of the proceeds being returned to the counties for use in plowing parking areas, cleaning restrooms and grooming trails.

TWIN FALLS — Ken Moeller of Twin Falls has been appointed district director of the Twin Falls-Jackpot Division of Wildlife America Today.

Al Wilson, senior wildlife executive of the group, said Moeller succeeds Gene Boda of Jackpot, who died of a heart attack last month.

As director, Moeller will oversee all projects within the district including the pheasant raising program in northern Nevada.

Fish and Game begins annual survey

BOISE — Idaho hunters will be asked to participate in the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's annual telephone survey this winter.

About 40,000 residents will be called for "basically ask folks where they hunted, how many days and how much and what they harvested," said Lou Nelson, staff biologist. "The information tells us how hunters are using the resource and can reveal problems of distribution, lack of resource use or harvesting of too many bucks or does and so forth."

The telephone surveys, first conducted in 1979, provide general information not gathered at checking stations.

BOISE — Boise's own peregrine falcons, hatched about the Idaho Fish and Game Building, were all supposed to migrate last month to their wintering grounds in Mexico.

But at least one has opted for a winter pigeon-hunting vacation in Boise.

"We had several sightings of a peregrine eating and chasing pigeons at five sites this past week," said Wayne Melquist, state nongame wildlife manager with the Idaho Department of Fish and Game.

"A bird was sighted at the Franklin and Cole overpass, one at Capitol Center, the Orchard overpass, the Red Lion Downtown and City Hall. In at least one sighting, the bird had a white band on its leg so this probably is one of our Boise birds, although some outside birds could have stopped off on their way south."

are afraid to stop for any reason at night, and may drive just on yin-yar. In the daylight, making becomes brave enough to help its own.

Generally speaking, it isn't a bad idea to carry a few spare parts for an automobile or truck you'll be using in the hack country or on isolated roads.

A spare fan belt and fuel pump will generally get you home from those sudden sickening stops when an engine you thought was dependable suddenly dies miles from nowhere.

For winter hunters, fishermen and skiers, the need is obvious, but few carry even tire chains to help when the going gets rough.

Very often, we depend on four-wheel-drive to get us out. But the problem is that four-wheel-driven vehicles will often become hopelessly stuck miles from help, while a conventional vehicle would get stuck the minute you encounter difficulty, leaving you much closer to help.

tial tools to get themselves out in the event they become stuck.

That includes chains and snow tires for all driven wheels, a high-lift jack, an axe and a shovel as basics. The little cable hoists that can lift a ton or pull a vehicle out of a mudhole or snow drift are worthwhile extras. So are four boards 2X12 inches by eight feet.

When you see that you're likely to get stuck, stop and put on the chains. Except in emergencies, don't go farther from the pavement. Instead, use the chains to help you turn around and get started retracing your tracks.

Should you become stuck, don't keep trying to make the vehicle go ahead by ricing the engine and spinning the tires. That may make the situation worse.

Instead, use the shovel to dig an easy path out of the bad spot for all tires, including non-driven ones. Jack up the vehicle and shovel dry dirt or gravel under the wheels. If that's not available, use the axe to cut brush and tree limbs. Put them under the wheels.

Don't try to move the vehicle until you have enough dry dirt, branches or gravel under the tires that they will roll easily. If you have high-centered the rig; dig underneath it until it is clear of the dirt or snow that was holding it up. Then drive away carefully, using no more power than needed.

The planks can be put under the wheels if you're stuck in snow or sand. They'll provide a quick and easy route out of a bad situation.

And if you can find a tree, a rock or can bury a log and attach the cable hoist, you can use it to inch a vehicle out of a higher center or out of a mudhole when it is impossible to move any other way. One or two tow ropes can help extend your range to a solid object.

The season draws to a close."

The other deprecation hunt under-way is the shotgun-only season within Snake River canyon proper from Perrine Bridge to Clear Lakes Bridge.

"We are having some problems

Partridge

Generally, I have had excellent success by picking out a bird or two after the initial flush and hunting the singles. For some reason, the huns tend to hold better as singles and will sit tight for the second flush.

"Shotgun selection isn't critical except that the gun you choose should have a quality trigger. Here an excellent trigger and require some lead out in front of them. I prefer a gun with 26-inch barrels with improved cylinder or modified chokes, but I suspect that modified and full choke in an over-and-under would work equally well. I have shot gray partridge with .20s and 12s and find that either gauge does the job since partridge are small birds and don't require a lot to kill. Shot sizes of 6 and 7 are adequate."

So how does one find the location of partridge? The best bet is to find a foothill area that has plenty of cheat grass since partridge feed primarily on this weed when they aren't located around agricultural land. Earlier in the season, it's best to concentrate on benches or ridges that have a spring or other water source in the immediate area. As the season progresses and water becomes more abundant, huns will move farther way from primary water sources but never far from cheat grass if you are hunting in foothill country. When snow begins to pile up, the huns will feed in open, windswept areas where food is easier to reach. These provide real advantages to the hunter because small green grasses begin to sprout and stick out like a sore thumb. If a warming trend has developed, find the green patches and you will surely find partridge concentrated in those areas gorging themselves on the new sprouts.

A few last thoughts about gray partridge. They provide excellent table fare and extend the length of the upland birds season (partridge season in south-central Idaho closes Sunday; pheasant season ended Dec. 4). Gray partridge fly extremely well, so I'd suggest a little practice at the trap or skeet range, especially if you've had difficulty in downing pheasants. And don't forget to concentrate on your swing and follow through even if you've practiced at the range. Partridge almost always fly in flocks that range in size from six to 15 birds and the temptation to flick shoot on the rise requires your utmost restraint.

with trespass but generally the hunt is proceeding rather well and we are seeing some harvest," he said.

The canyon hunt is in response from orchardists and other landowners who have seen a growing deer population causing more and more damage each year.

Market levels with gain of 4.27

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market struggled to a small gain Wednesday in a muted response to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's speech at the United Nations.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which had risen 57.08 points in the two previous sessions, added another 3.27 to 2,153.63.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 5 to 4 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 817 up, 632 down and 536 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 148.36 million shares, down from 158.34 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 180.72 million shares.

The dollar rose, interest rates fell and stock prices climbed Tuesday on anticipation of the conciliatory actions that Gorbachev announced in his speech Wednesday, including reductions in military forces.

That defusing the war in the Gulf by the United States sooner or later, to cut its defense spending as well, reducing inflationary pressures and narrowing the government's budget deficit.

But as often happens in the stock market, analysts said, investors turned more cautious when their expectations were fulfilled.

Some traders apparently cashed in on the market's recent gains, following the old Wall Street precept "buy on the rumor, sell on the news."

Brokers also said concerns persisted about the interest-rate outlook, including the possibility that the Federal Reserve might soon raise its discount rate again in an effort to keep economic growth at a sustainable pace.

Nevertheless, with its recent upswing the Dow Jones industrial average has moved with halting distance of the 1988 closing of 2,183.01 it reached on Oct. 21.

Teneco made a big contribution to the Dow's gain Wednesday, climbing 2 1/2 to 51 1/2 in active trading. Spotlight intensified on the Street that Carl Icahn, who holds a stake in the company, might be planning a new effort to gain control of it.

Among other actively traded blue-chips, American Telephone & Telegraph rose 3/4 to 29 1/4; Sears Roebuck gained 3/4 to 40 3/4; International Business Machines dropped 1 1/2 to 121; General Electric rose 3/4 to 45 1/4, and Exxon was unchanged at 44 1/4.

Jefferson Group rose 1 1/4 to 11 1/4 over-the-counter market. The company said it and some of its employees bought a large block of Jefferson shares from Primerica Inc.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $6.21 billion, or 0.23 percent, in value.

Circle K has 2nd-quarter drop; chairman says measures helping

The Associated Press

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Circle K Corp.'s second-quarter net earnings dropped slightly, but its chairman says recent cost control measures already are helping.

The convenience store company said Wednesday its net earnings for the quarter ended Oct. 31 totaled $13.3 million or 25 cents per share on sales of $87.8 million, compared with net earnings of $14.3 million or 24 cents per share of sales of $87.5 million a year earlier.

For the first half, the company said net earnings totaled $25.7 million or 48 cents per share on sales of $1.65 billion, compared with previous first-half net earnings of $32 million or 53 cents per share on sales of $1.65 billion.

Board Chairman Karl Eller said sales were flat and acquisition-related interest was up but that cost controls instituted in August had begun to help by late in the second quarter. He also said the current acquisition program had been completed.

The current report included results from 473 stores acquired in April and 538 acquired in October, he said.

The second quarter's earnings included a one-time gain of $10.5 million from sale of Sparkle Inc, a subsidiary.

A year ago, the second quarter included a $8.2 million gain from sale of half of Circle K's United Kingdom subsidiary.

American Stores officials said that while the company has moved its corporate headquarters from Salt Lake City to Irvine, Calif., Skaggs still maintains a home and office in Salt Lake City.

The company announced that succeeding Skaggs as chief executive officer will be Jonathan L. Scott, vice chairman and a close associate of Skaggs since 1962.

Victor L. Lund will continue to serve as vice chairman and chief financial officer and was elected by American Stores' directors to serve as chief financial and administrative officer.

Alan D. Stewart was elected president and chief operating officer and also was named a director of the company.

Skaggs said the appointments ensure that American Stores has changed its corporate structure from "founding family management" to a well-rounded and seasoned professional management team.

He said the company's long-term strategy has been to operate through a holding company structure.

A key to our success has been knowledgeable management which understands the building company's relationships with our operating companies and has the necessary expertise in the retail food and drug industry," he said.

"I am confident of this new corporate team," Skaggs said.

 rate management team's ability to build American Stores Co. to the benefit of our shareholders, our companies and the customers they serve," Skaggs added.
 James H. Henson, 56, currently chairman and chief executive officer of Jewel Food Stores, a wholly owned subsidiary, was recently elected to the corporation's board of directors and was named chairman and chief executive officer of subsidiary American Super-stores to succeed Scott.
 Scott, 58, began his career in food retailing in 1955, serving as vice chairman and chief executive officer of Albertson's Inc., and chairman and chief executive of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.
 While with Albertson's, Scott worked with Skaggs in pioneering the development of what American Stores terms "the nation's first successful combination drug and food stores."
 More recently, Scott served as vice chairman of the board, executive vice president of American Stores and chairman and chief executive officer of the company's subsidiary American Super-stores Inc., with $7 billion in sales. American Super-stores, consists of Acme Markets, Jewel Food Stores and Star Markets Co.
 Lund, 41, joined American Stores in 1977 after having been associated with the company for five years as an audit executive with Ernst & Whinney, public accounting firm. He is also vice chairman of Alpha Beta Stores Inc., the company's western food and drug retail firm with $2.5 billion in sales.
