Panel proposes 51% pay raise for Congress

Knight-Ridder Service

WASHINGTON — A presidential commission proposed a 51 percent pay increase for members of Congress and hefty raises for other federal officials and judges Tuesday in a move that drew cries of outrage from consumer and grassroots taxpayers groups.

The commission, which convenes at the president's order every four years, also recommended that Congress not get a pay increase — from $89,500 a year now to $135,000 — unless it stops taking money from lobbyists for speeches or personal appearances. Last year, lawmakers received a record $9.8 million in such honoraria from private groups.

Former Sen. Thomas Eagleton, a member of the commission, said the elimination of honoraria should be a "quid pro quo" for getting the congressional pay hikes.

"We view that (the commission's recommendation) as an ample full-time salary and in return we expect Congress to outlaw all forms of honoraria," he said.

As the commission prepared to send its proposal to President Reagan, who is expected to approve salary increases in the recommended ranges, consumer advocate Ralph Nader and other groups expressed opposition to any salary increases at a time when federal budget deficits are ballooning.

Noting that Congress already has increased its pay on several occasions over the last 24 years, Nader said: "While members of Congress have been overly generous to themselves, they have failed to act to increase wages for the 6.7 million workers who are at or below the minimum wage" of $3.35 an hour.

In addition to congressional salaries, the commission proposed

Creationism guidelines take effect

By JENNIFER KAUTH Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A year-long creationism controversy quietly closed Tuesday evening with the School Board's official approval of a set of policy guidelines and the same "mention-but-don't-teach" interpretation from administration.

No public comment was given. Board members made no comments either, except to add the word "extrapolate" to one section telling instructors to teach the difference between hypothesis, theory, assumption and observed reproducible data.

Assistant Superintendent Keith Tolzin repeated that the guidelines had been developed by a board-appointed committee of teachers and administrators. He stressed that some of the committee's teachers were those who would implement the policy and that the committee and administration recommended adopting the guidelines.

5-minute AIDS test receives OK in this country.

WASHINGTON — A test for accurate immune deficiency syndrome that takes only five minutes and can be performed without sophisticated equipment was approved Tuesday by the Food and Drug Administration.

The new test, called Recombigen HIV-1 Latex Agglutination Test, uses an engineered protein and microscopic beads to detect antibodies to the human immunodeficiency virus which causes AIDS. It is designed for use only under supervision of medical professionals.

"This technical advance should help make testing available to all who want to be tested," FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young said. "It will also be particularly useful in remote areas of the world that lack the facilities for earlier approved tests."

"The test also may be useful, he said, as a preliminary screening measure in emergency situations

Young said the test is not designed to replace the more accurate enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay, or ELISA, now used to screen donated blood. And both the Recombigen and ELISA require a confirming test called the Western Blot because of possible false positive results.

Recombigen consists of microscopic latex beads coated with an engineered protein taken from a portion of the outer surface of the AIDS virus. The protein is produced by inserting a portion of the AIDS virus genetic material into the genes of a bacterium. The bacterium then produces the AIDS protein. The protein is refined and then applied to the surface of the beads.

To conduct the test, a sample of blood is mixed with the coated beads. Within five minutes, any AIDS antibodies in the blood sample will form clumps, a process called agglutination.

Soviets put quake toll at 55,000

Knight-Ridder Service

MOSCOW — Soviet officials Tuesday raised the estimated death toll in last week's Armenian earthquake to 55,000, and the rescue effort continued to be dogged by reports of disorganization and ineptitude.

"We were not prepared to cope with such a large-scale disaster," Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennadi I. Gerasimov acknowledged.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda reported that even as survivors huddled around campfires listening for the cries of those still buried in the rubble, looting had broken out and a troop-enforced curfew had been imposed in Leninakan, one of the hardest-hit cities.

At a briefing, Gerasimov said the estimated official casualty toll now stood at 55,000 dead — an increase of 10,000 from the previous official estimates — and 13,000 injured. He said that 18,500 persons had been removed from the debris, but only 5,400 of them were alive; that half a million people in the area were homeless, and that 24,000 had been evacuated from the affected area.

Acknowledging that chaos had hampered rescue efforts, Gerasimov said some cranes used for shifting heavy debris were diverted from their intended destinations to places where relatives of officials may have been buried.

Advisory panel rejects Carolina reactor restart plan

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Energy Department's safety advisory panel has rejected the department's plan to restart one of its three nuclear weapons reactors at the Savannah River Plant in South Carolina, citing inadequate inspections and lingering questions about what power level the reactor can safely sustain.

The action, by an independent panel appointed by Energy Secretary John S. Herrington, casts further doubt on the department's plans to restart Savannah River's K reactor, tentatively scheduled for this summer.

Panel chairman John Ahearne, vice president of Resources for the Future and a former head of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, said the committee did not intend to imply that the start-up target was impossible, "but obviously some of us have a lot of doubt whether that schedule can be met."

Panel member Harold Lewis, a physics professor at the University of California at Santa Barbara, added: "This will be read, and read correctly, as our declining to endorse the restart strategy."

Among the panelists' concerns are newly discovered cracks in the main cooling system of Savannah River's L reactor, which is virtually identical in design to the K reactor. Energy Department officials, who disclosed the problem Monday, do not know whether the K reactor has similar cracks.

The committee's recommendations are contained in a letter being drafted for delivery to Herrington Thursday. Ahearne declined to release the letter Tuesday, but the panel discussed its broad outlines in a public meeting.

A department spokesman said the panel's comments "are an important part of restarting the reactor," but he declined to say how the department will address the new concerns. "When we get their comments we will assess them," said spokesman C. Anson Franklin.

The Energy Department is trying to expedite restarting Savannah River's reactors, the nation's only source of perishable tritium for nuclear weapons.

Rising ticket sales may land Twin Falls bigger craft

By KIRK MITCHELL Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Airport officials are optimistic that increased ticket sales at local airline counters will persuade Horizon Air and Skywest Airlines to add more big-aircraft flights to the area.

"The growth has been constant and steady since the beginning of the year," said Airport Manager Ron Madsen.

Twin Falls-Sun Valley Regional Airport board members on Tuesday urged Skywest representatives to schedule more flights of 30-passenger Brasilia EM120s to and from Salt Lake. The board also wants Horizon Air to start flying 37-seat DASH 8s between Twin Falls and Boise.

Both turboprop aircraft provide flight attendants, snack and beverage services and rest rooms, Madsen said.

Skywest flies one Brasilia and four smaller "metro liners" to and from Salt Lake City a day. The airline is considering stepping up its service to two Brasilia daily by spring and four daily a year later, said Station Manager Kathryn Benefiel.

"We're pushing to get them in," she said, but added all the details have not been worked out yet.

She said several passengers' have stated their preference for the bigger aircraft. Since January, Skywest's monthly ticket sales have risen from 1,200 to 1,600.

Horizon flies 18-seat turboprop Metros to and from Boise four times daily on weekdays and two daily on Saturday and Sunday.

Madsen was not specific on how many new flights he wants but said anything more would be an improvement.

"I think the community would just be happier to have the larger aircraft," he said.

Lance Horejs, Horizon manager in Twin Falls, said Horizon executives will decide whether to bring in the DASH 8s, but added that it would be justified if ticket sales and the local economy continue to improve.

"Basically we need the support of the community," Horejs said.

He said ticket sales have increased since the company initiated its Boise-to-Twin Falls flights in September 1987, from approximately 500 per month to about 750 per month. His monthly freight loads have increased from 4,500 to more than 8,000 pounds.

Madsen said if the airlines increase their flights to Twin Falls, the airport would be willing to offer a regular bus service to Sun Valley. He said the present shuttle service is sporadic and mostly caters to charter planes.

Skiers are only 1 1/2 hours away from the slopes when they arrive at the airport, Madsen said. That compares favorably with most resorts, he said.

Madsen said the airport's Fly Smart publicity campaign has contributed to a steadily increasing number of people using the airport.

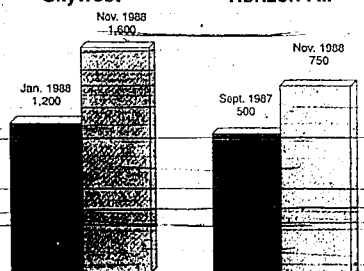

"We're trying to get people to fly to Salt Lake and Boise and not drive," he said.

Figures reflect total tickets sold for flights departing or arriving at Twin Falls.

Regulators consider phone subsidy

BOISE (AP) — State utility regulators have proposed using food stamp or medical assistance identification cards to determine eligibility for a new program offering subsidized telephone connection to low-income Idahoans.

The program called Link Up America would provide a 50 percent reduction on the one-time phone hook-up charge to those who qualify. The maximum subsidy would be $30.

Idaho telephone companies had asked that the Public Utilities Commission use participation in a federal low-income home energy assistance program to determine eligibility for the telephone subsidy. The commission is accepting public comments on the plan through Dec. 30, and a decision could be made early next year.

Fagiano named to advisory committee

BOISE (AP) — Anthony Fagiano, director of the Idaho Department of Insurance, has been appointed to the Advisory Committee on Workers' Compensation.

Fagiano will be a non-voting member, the governor's office said. William Murphy of Coeur d'Alene, former state legislator, was named an ex officio member of the new Idaho Job Training Council.

Coeur d'Alene woman wins award

BOISE (AP) — Cheryl Duchow of Coeur d'Alene has been picked as Idaho's "Victory Award" winner, given to people who have overcome adversity.

As a result of a disability, Duchow had both legs amputated at age 3 and she had to learn to walk on stilts with hinges. In spite of her physical handicap, she excelled professionally and in sports. She has a bachelor's degree from University of Minnesota and works as a laboratory technician. Duchow is a former two-time U.S. National Swim Team member and has held 19 national and nine world records in swimming.

State court sides with doctors in suit

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Supreme has sided with a group of Boise doctors in a lawsuit against another doctor, saying a property agreement required a certain number of parking spaces on-site.

The court on Tuesday unanimously reversed a decision by 4th District Judge Robert Newhouse in favor of Dr. Philip Krueger and his wife and against four other doctors and spouses.

Krueger sued over a restrictive covenant on property near St. Alphonsus Hospital, requiring a certain number of parking spaces per 1,000 square feet of office space. Krueger signed an agreement with the nearby Rodeway Inn for extra parking to meet the requirements.

Doctors Duane St. Clair and his wife, Darrell Ludders, Jon Kattenhorn and his wife and Beverly Ludders sued, contending the agreement required on-site parking.

The Supreme Court agreed with that interpretation and awarded the doctors attorney fees and costs against the Kruegers.

ISU settles with, rehires professor

POCATELLO (AP) — The $375,000 settlement between Idaho State University and a rehired professor will come from a state insurance fund and not the school's budget, university President Richard Bowen said.

University officials announced Monday they settled a seven-year legal battle with Thomas Hale, a former American Federation of Teachers president who claimed he was dismissed because of his outspokenness.

As part of that agreement, Idaho State will pay the former history chairman $375,000.

Hale, who was dismissed in 1981, was granted a sabbatical to prepare for his return to the faculty. When he returns, he will head up an oral history project interviewing prominent Idahoans and build a library of reminiscences.

Idaho schools, Costa Rica work together

MOSCOW (AP) — The universities of Idaho and Costa Rica will work together to save Central American rain forests and alpine timber stands.

The agreements signed by Idaho President Richard Gibb and College of Forestry Dean John Hendee on Monday will lead to student and faculty exchanges, as well as research programs, between the two schools.

"It's a universal problem, a world-wide problem," Gibb said of the deterioration of the tropical environment.

INEL would process all plutonium

DOE official disputes consolidation reports

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The Energy Department's defense programs chief is disputing published reports that the agency plans to consolidate weapons manufacturing facilities at three specific sites, including the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Troy Wade, acting assistant secretary for defense programs and former INEL manager, said Tuesday the classified report known as the "2010 Report" does not identify INEL as the site of all future plutonium production facilities.

Wade, in an interview with the Idaho Falls Post-Register, said the department's weapons-complex modernization plan lists no sites or alternatives for construction of new weapons manufacturing facilities that have not already been publicly announced.

Several published reports said the proposed blueprint organized weapons activities around the principal nuclear material involved, eventually concentrating all plutonium processing at the Idaho facility, uranium activities at Oak Ridge, Tenn., and tritium activities at the Savannah River Plant near Aiken, S.C.

But Wade said the "theme parks" plan, which was a part of earlier drafts of the report, was discarded in the final document sent to the White House this month for review. It is not expected to be released to the public for more several weeks.

Wade told Congress earlier this year that DOE planned to close the Rocky Flats plant near Denver, which makes plutonium triggers for nuclear weapons. But that is not expected until after the turn of the century.

The modernization report does not list alternatives to replace Rocky Flats, Wade said.

"It would be a violation of law for DOE to pick a site," he said. "There is a process that must be undertaken. The National Environmental Policy Act requires that alternatives be chosen and a site studied carefully."

The earlier version of the 2010 report did list the INEL as one of the alternatives for siting of a Rocky Flats replacement. The Pantex Plant in Texas and the Hanford Nuclear Reservation in Washington were also listed, according to congressional sources.

AIDS tests on prisoners difficult to implement, state sheriff official says

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The state's 44 counties, which apparently have no mandatory AIDS tests for prisoners, are on the "horns of a dilemma," said the president of the Idaho Sheriff's Association.

There are two reasons counties are reluctant to conduct the tests, mandated by state law, Clearwater County Sheriff Nick Albers of Orofino said.

It appears there is no way to force the blood test on an inmate who refuses it, and the right of privacy keeps jailers from learning test results.

"It's kind of one of those laws that may sound good on the books, but is difficult to implement and is very costly," Albers said. There is no criminal penalty for non-compliance right now, Deputy Attorney General Peter Erbland also said last week.

But Erbland added not conducting the tests could open up the counties to civil liability in the event another prisoner contracts the disease from the infected inmate.

Albers said the counties have decided to test inmates on a case-by-case basis, despite the new law requiring testing of all inmates charged with sex offenses, drug-related crimes, prostitution or on the recommendation of public health officials.

English said jail inmates may be tested if jail and public health officials believe the person has been exposed to venereal diseases, including acquired immune deficiency syndrome, AIDS-related complex or other forms of HIV.

At the Bonneville County Jail, Sheriff's Lt. Bill English said, "There's some difference of opinion if it's really required or not."

English said the Bonneville Jail had only one person the jailers believed had AIDS. "We managed him as an AIDS person," isolating him from other inmates, even though no medical facility would confirm or deny the presence of the AIDS virus, he said.

Beyond the problems in transporting inmates to a medical facility to draw the blood, the test may be unconstitutional, English said. "The bottom line is, it's just not done." Albers said the problem will be addressed in January when the association's jail standards committee meets. In the meantime, "We're on the horns of a dilemma."

Veterans want nursing home

BLACKFOOT (AP) — State legislators should be lobbied to appropriate funds for a nursing home for veterans in southeastern Idaho, a Veterans Services administrator says.

In a meeting of about 50 American Legion, Disabled Veterans and Veterans of Foreign Wars members at Blackfoot Monday, Gary Bermeosolo of Boise said caring for an aging population of veterans in the state is the No. 1 priority of the Idaho Veterans Affairs Commission.

Bermeosolo said the only veterans nursing home in the state is in Boise, and it primarily serves southwest Idaho. Its 80 beds are filled, and 49 people are on a waiting list, he said.

There are 117,000 veterans in the state, and by the year 2000, two out of every three males over 65 will be veterans.

Survey aids planning for farming's future

Twin Falls isn't exactly a huge metropolitan area where young people grow up on concrete sidewalks, their only direct contact with nature coming in trips to the park. It can be reasonably assumed that a young person here, presented with a carton of milk, will know it has come a cow. But despite the pivotal role agriculture plays in the Magic Valley, a lot of our young people seem to have already decided that, when it comes to a career, they don't want much to do with agriculture.

That is the conclusion of a recent survey of high school students in Twin Falls, Kimberly and Filer. In Twin Falls, the rejection of agriculture was by an 84 percent margin. It is tempting to read more into the results than perhaps one should. Several points ought to be kept in mind: First, it isn't new for young people in rural areas to reject careers in agriculture. There has been a gradual population movement from farm to city for a couple of hundred years in America and the trend is still continuing.

We didn't get to a farm population as small as it is today by everyone wanting to stay on the farm.

Second, young people are notoriously creatures of consumption; they get a daily barrage of advertising messages about the so-called good life which money brings. That image doesn't exactly square with the hard-scrabble existence which some of agricultural employment means.

Third, young people tend to think of careers in somewhat narrow terms. As in other fields, perhaps 50 percent of the jobs in agriculture which will be available in the 21st Century aren't even invented today.

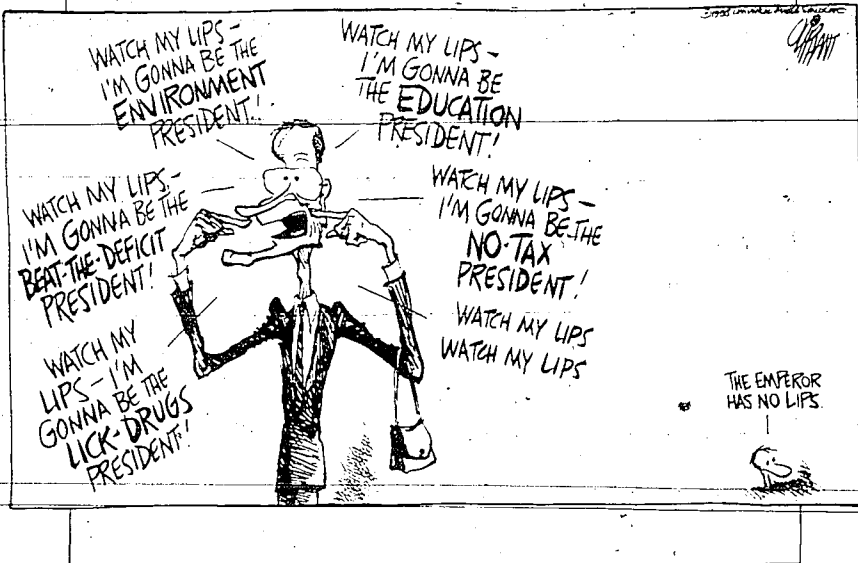

They don't think about some of agriculture's emerging fields, such as biogenetics of livestock, nutritional needs and how to meet them with new crops, microbe uses in pest and weed control, commodity marketing to the Pacific Rim, international financing of trade agreements, and foreign policy decisions which will affect those agreements.

All of these fields, of course, depend on education, vision and drive. They are not open to people, young or old, who simply wait for good luck to strike. They are open, however, to people who are willing to see ahead and to make the career plans with the future, not the past, in mind.

Unfortunately, many young people hear "agriculture" and think "farmer" or, if they have first-hand knowledge, they may think of the drudgery and hard physical labor. Who can blame them for wanting to do something else?

This is where good vocational training and career counseling comes in. Schools have an obligation to teach the potentials of agriculture as well as its known and anticipated techniques.

A survey like this shows is a good start starting point to show what we're doing right and where improvements need to be made.

Supports Clark for CSI board

George W. "Bill" Clark is one of eight persons running for the vacated trustee's position for the College of Southern Idaho. We believe Bill is highly qualified for this position.

He has four children; two of whom have or will be attending CSI. He is concerned about the quality of education at CSI and has always been one of the college's best and most vocal supporters for both academic and vocational programs.

Bill has been a successful rancher, served on the Three Creek School District Board of Trustees, and has held the office of Twin Falls County Assessor.

We have been acquainted with Bill for years and consider him a solid and dedicated member of our community. We intend to support Bill in his bid for this board and urge you to vote for him also.

Clark is knowledgeable candidate

Next Tuesday, citizens from Jerome and Twin Falls counties will be electing a person to fill the vacated seat on the College of Southern Idaho's Board of Trustees. The person must be a highly experienced and knowledgeable individual. There are eight very conscientious and civic-minded individuals on the slate.

In analyzing the qualifications of the eight people, I have decided to vote for George W. "Bill" Clark. Bill was Twin Falls County Assessor for five years. During his tenure, he became quite expert in the field of school finance, and also took a firm pro-education stand on all issues.

In addition to his expertise in finance, Bill was Chairman of the Legislative Committee for the Association of County Assessors. In this position, Bill acquired a wealth of experience working with state legislators, state committees regarding taxes, and the Governor.

I consider finance and legislative knowledge to be extremely critical for the leadership in the future for CSI. I recommend that everybody vote for Bill Clark for trustee for the College of Southern Idaho on the basis of his qualifications and knowledge.

Brizee would be asset to board

I would like to take a moment to endorse a veteran community worker for the CSI Board of Trustees. Her tireless efforts in all areas of community service have kept her in touch with diverse public opinion. It is this knowledge and a continued commitment that would make my mother, Donna Brizee, an asset to the CSI Board of Trustees.

Clark has good experience

I am writing in regard to George "Bill" Clark's running as a candidate to fill the vacancy of Bob Blastock's position on the Board of Directors for CSI.

I feel that Bill would be an excellent choice. I recently served with him on another board and found him to be fair, openminded, conscientious, intelligent, thorough in both researching and in following through with any proposed project. He is genuinely interested in harmony and in getting a job done. I know he has no axe to grind — he just wants to help in the continued success and growth of CSI.

I think Bill's experience as Twin Falls County Assessor will be an asset as he understands property value assessments, tax structures, etc.

Since Jerome County gives almost one-third of the property tax financial support, I think we need another person from our area to represent us. Together with LeRoy Craig, we would have a strong representation from Jerome County.

Therefore, I urge you to join with me and my husband, LaVere, in casting your ballot and support for Bill Clark.

Congratulations and thanks to Bob Blastock for "Job Well Done!"

Foster children deserve better

I'm writing to you as a concerned foster parent. There have been several articles in the newspapers lately about the need for foster homes for our young children.

I am not saying all Health and Welfare Departments are run like the one I have worked out of the last 12 or 15 years. I'm speaking mostly of the last two years. There has to be a change. The small children are not getting a fair deal.

I feel when there is a problem with a child, the foster parent should have a very hard hearing and work together to solve the problem.

Not in this department. Move the child out even before your side of it. They only say "sure it's for the child's own good." But it's not. Think about when you get them, how they leave.

We as foster parents are not in the program for the money. $4,400 to $4,900 per month is a day. We are all, and $400 a year for their clothing card.

Prescriptions paid for a child over 18 years old $145 to $195 a month and you pay for board and room. Over the counter medicine, entertainment, baby shoes, diapers, bottles, baby food, bottles, baby sitters and a big part of the time, that check is late and you don't get it for months.

So you can see, we can't do it any more. I truly feel in my heart that the best I can do for the children in our country. It takes no time to begin to see the end of the tunnel. Sure, sometimes we make mistakes, but we learn every day with the child. In the short time the caseworkers have these children before they bring them to us, they can learn too much, but with them 24 hours a day a lot of things come up.

In the last two years, I've found out if you want to keep these little ones, you had better keep your mouth shut or the children will be moved. It's professional. For the child's best interests. A professional help I've tried to get and sight medical.

There should be some changes made. I hope this helps.

Nuclear issue requires debate

Last week in a letter to the editor I called for a full, honest and open debate on all the issues surrounding the nuclear industry: military and civilian. Later in the week in an article about the nuclear waste problem, Steve Symms claimed that the waste problem was a political problem — not a technical problem — and that it was time to lay all the cards on the table.

I fear by all the cards the Senator means only deuterium, tritium and one-way tickets. That's all they usually play it and that's not enough. If we're talking all the cards, let's make it all the cards. Let's have that full, honest and open debate. We owe it to ourselves and the rest of the world.

So, Senator Symms, I call your bluff. I challenge you to come to the table and lay all the cards on the table. Let's talk about deuterium, tritium, plutonium, national security, the environment and social issues. To do anything, we must first confirm what many of us already believe — "You aren't playing with a full deck."

Build SIS at the Pentagon

Good news, bad news. The bad news is that the DOE's final statement and the politicians, again, have declared the SIS plutonium weapons plants "safe." The good news is that since the politicians readily believe in such an "expert" that he is in the federal government, and since SIS is "safe" then they have no excuse not to build it at the Pentagon.

The grounds of the Pentagon already have been cleared against terrorism that we will not accept an INF site would be even "safer" at the Pentagon.

This would be the world's first "safe" nuclear weapons plant so maybe it would attract tourists. Maybe things like the flattening of Chernobyl and new technologies like the "O" ring on the exploding Challenger spaceship, were just blown out of proportion by the "liberal media." Maybe. Maybe. Maybe.

Now, by the DOE's 20th document we find out that the politicians want four to 12 new nuclear experiments in Idaho and plan to avoid clean-up.

No wonder defense contractors like Senator McClure and Senator Symms, who are pushing these nuclear experiments into Idaho Falls like they get some kind of cash on delivery bonus.

In the politics of illusion, Senator McClure is clever enough to get Mr. Johnson a job as head of the DOE. Relax, you're safe. Now it's your partner's duty to salute McClure's flag.

Showing the nuclear experiments into Idaho to amount our will fits the definition of rape.

Putting an Idaho businessman at the top of the DOE keeps the crime in the family, but that only seems worse, like incest.

It is a lesson that we are facing on all levels of life today. It is hard, but today we have to teach our children to say no and fight back. It is a lesson to publicly confront a member of the Idaho family, like our politicians, that must be done.

The politicians have never said the opposite words are wrong, because they are not wrong. The Federation of American Scientists have many Nobel Laureates and they oppose the SIS. In 1986, head of the DOE, Horstmann said "we are wash in plutonium."

In 1986, DOE Undersecretary Salgado said "a two year moratorium on plutonium production would not affect our national production." In reality, a thousand year moratorium on new plutonium production would not affect our own remaining nuclear deterrent.

"Frick comes before a fall." The politicians must listen and change. Bill the politicians "pride" come before Idaho's fall? No, no, no, Idaho? No SIS? Clean up first!

Deficit endangers prosperity

Now that the deficit is finally starting to overshadow the "prosperity" we've been listening to for so long, it's time to talk serious economic reform. Yes, this country needs to change, but it didn't have to for any change, so it won't get any change. So, all we will get is talk. The same trend will continue. Congress will blame the deficit on the president. The president will blame it on Congress. We will pay our taxes to Washington, D. C. and we will continue to get less and less back. So, we have to raise the local taxes to pay for roads, bridges, and education.

The rich will continue to get richer and the poor will continue to get poorer. Even though the deficit increases over the last eight years are equated directly to what the rich have become richer, the feds will not start taxing those that have the money. The reason for this is too many of the rich that would get taxed just got re-elected.

Don't take it personally, this trend is actually world-wide. The middle class will continue to be sucked down by regressive taxes. As a farmer, I wonder how this will affect agriculture.

The most devastating thing to ever happen to the farmer, including the grain embargo, was the fed's decision to stop inflation with deficit spending.

This practice artificially raised interest rates and the exchange value of the dollar. These two things alone have destroyed the commodity export market. These two things have made investors wealthy, many of them foreigners, while destroying many a producer and manufacturer in this country.

This country has an agricultural base that will support at least a billion people. We export food, or import people. I know which alternative I prefer.

The trend has just about run its course. The upper crust has become richer while the countries they run have gone further in debt. But, the dollar has started to fall and hopefully will continue. They talk now of free trade and no farm-subsidies. This is a joke when they started the interest rates and the dollar value.

Yes, the policies of greed in Washington, D. C. have starved many people world wide and broke many an American farmer needlessly. I hope it turns around fast because I don't like the feds giving the public the impression farming is some kind of welfare program.

Don't save mediocre buildings

I really see no problem with public input concerning matters done for the public interest.

It doesn't indicate a lack of trust in elected and appointed officials, but a sound philosophy of many heads being better than a few.

Now, concerning the possible demolition of old hospital structures, the public should have its say. Personally, I don't think, considering the lack of historic relevance of these buildings, that they should be kept.

My theory is, if kept, they must be maintained, and historic preservation monies or tax dollars spent on them. It is not better to spend such funds on more worthy structures. Take, for instance, the Twin Falls County Courthouse.

And compare this unique structure with the old hospital. In design, the courthouse is unique, the old hospital is quite average. The courthouse was built in 1911, the old hospital in 1919-20, and those years are significant in that the hospital was not the first hospital.

But please consider that the courthouse was initially so well built that in its eighth decade it is still a highly serviceable structure. It's good for another eighty years. What good is the old hospital, even if renovated?

I would suspect, if modern architects presented a plan for a new structure that duplicated the courthouse, the general response would be, oh, I wish we could afford it, but we can't. In short, we have an on-line structure that is so good we can't afford to build it. But we don't have to, all we have to do is properly maintain it. That is, spend a few bucks and save millions, and this on a building that has paid for itself many times over. Or spend available monies on such structures as the old hospital and let the courthouse go to pot. Doesn't make a bit of sense.

But it is not just my theory! However, I have read the original specs on both buildings, and know a little something of the history of this area, and the contributions of both buildings. This research leads me to the above conclusions.

As the Times-News has a sound policy of public input on its editorial page, there is no reason not to have public input on such matters. This, I believe, is preferable to after-the-fact criticism.

Retail sales set sizzling November pace

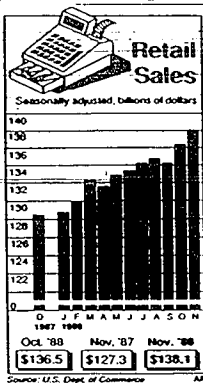

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail sales in November got the crucial holiday shopping season off to a first start by posting the second consecutive strong monthly gain, the government said Tuesday.

The Commerce Department said sales jumped 1.1 percent in November to a seasonally adjusted $138.1 billion. That followed a 1.6 percent increase in October, revised up from an earlier estimate of 0.9 percent.

"It looks like the Christmas season will be better than people feared and make an important contribution to growth," Commerce Undersecretary Robert Ortner said.

"Everybody keeps writing off the consumer sector of the economy, but consumers don't know they are supposed to stop spending," Ortner said. "Their incomes are growing and they are optimistic."

Christmas sales provide general merchandisers with about half of their annual profits. Many economists had expected sluggish sales, in part because the Federal Reserve has been nudging interest rates higher since March.

The Fed fears that excessive consumer demand could lead to higher inflation, and make it difficult to stem the flood of foreign imports and shrink the nation's trade deficit. The Federal Open Market Committee, which sets monetary policy, was meeting behind closed doors Tuesday.

"The Fed is not going to be pleased with this development in retail sales," said John Hagens, an economist with The Wafa Group, a Bala Cynwyd, Pa., forecasting firm. "This is probably another reason for them to continue to tighten — and maybe a little more quickly than they had previously planned."

Auto sales last month rose 2.0 percent to $30.9 billion after a 4.6 percent increase a month earlier. But even excluding autos, aggregate sales rose a strong 0.9 percent in November and 0.8 percent in October.

Sales at department and other general merchandise stores shot up 1.1 percent last month to a seasonally adjusted $15.8 billion, following a 2.6 percent rise in October.

In a separate report earlier this month, major department store chains reported mostly sluggish sales through much of November and then a surge over the Thanksgiving weekend as holiday shoppers flooded the stores.

Sales of durable goods, "big ticket" items intended to last three or more years, rose 1.8 percent in November after a 2.5 percent October rise. Non-durable goods climbed 0.7 percent following a 1.1 percent jump.

Hardware, garden and building supply stores sales surged 2.8 percent, while furniture sales increased 1.2 percent.

Food and grocery stores reported a 0.7 percent increase, specialty clothing stores a 1.7 percent rise, drug stores a 1.3 percent gain, and restaurants and bars a 1.0 percent increase.

The only category reporting a decline was gasoline service stations, where sales fell 1.4 percent.

Good, bad news about savings firms

Knight-Ridder Service

WASHINGTON — The nation's founding savings-and-loan industry was the butt of another good news-bad news joke on Tuesday — one that's not too funny.

The good news is that the 3,028 federally insured S&Ls collectively suffered net losses totaling only — only — $1.6 billion from July through September, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reported.

That's relatively good news, because it is far less than the $1.9 billion that the industry lost in each of the two previous quarters, FHLBB chief economist James Barth told a news conference.

The bad news is that, even though S&Ls slowed their rate of losses, Barth said that won't necessarily reduce the bill — widely estimated at between $50 billion and $100 billion — that taxpayers probably will have to pay to honor the federal insurance program that backstop deposits in bankrupt S&Ls.

Indeed, the FHLBB has not reduced its own official estimate of how much money ultimately will be needed to cover obligations owed by the insolvent Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which the FHLBB oversees.

Since October, the FHLBB has estimated that total would run between $45 billion and $50 billion. One month before the FHLBB had reckoned the total would be only $30 billion. In July, the FHLBB had guessed it would be only $22 billion.

Barth declined to offer assurance this trend of growth in FHLBB estimates is over.

Deficit in widest measure of trade declines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The deficit in the broadest measure of U.S. trade shrank to $30.89 billion from July through September, the smallest imbalance in three years, the government reported Tuesday.

While the Reagan administration said the decline was proof that its efforts to solve the country's trade problems were bearing fruit, private economists expressed fears that the trade improvement was in danger of stalling next year.

The Commerce Department report said America's deficit in its current account narrowed by 8.4 percent after an 8.6 percent drop in the second quarter, when the current account deficit was $33.7 billion.

The current account, also known as the country's balance of payments, is the most important trade statistic because it measures not only trade in merchandise but also trade in investments and other services.

For the third quarter, the deficit in merchandise trade declined to $28.53 billion, its third consecutive quarterly improvement. Added to this figure was an increase to $1.12 billion in U.S. foreign aid and pension payments overseas.

The small $157 million surplus in investments and other services is subtracted from those deficit figures to arrive at the current account deficit of $30.89 billion.

Half of the improvement in the third quarter came from a decline in the merchandise trade deficit, which dropped to $28.5 billion, reflecting a record level of U.S. export sales.

The other half of the improvement came from a swing in the services category back into surplus. Services, which primarily reflect investment flows between countries, posted a deficit of $337 million in the second quarter, the first investment deficit in 30 years.

In the third quarter, services climbed back into the black with a $157 million surplus, reflecting increased earnings by U.S. companies on their overseas operations. But economists warned that the investment category soon will sink back into deficit as America is forced to service a growing foreign debt burden.

The third quarter deficit was the smallest imbalance since a $27.6 billion deficit in the third quarter of 1985.

For the first nine months of this year, the current account deficit has been running at an annual rate 12 percent below the record $153.96 billion imbalance run up in 1987.

The Reagan administration has credited this improvement with providing the country with a half of its overall economic growth this year, as U.S. manufacturers have hired more workers and stepped up production to meet a 27 percent jump in export sales.

But Jerry Jasinowski, chief economist of the National Association of Manufacturers, said the big export gains could be ending unless the new administration aggressively pursues efforts to open foreign markets to U.S. goods.

The government today is scheduled to release its estimate of the monthly merchandise trade deficit for October. In advance of the report, David Wynn, an economist with Data Resources Inc., predicted the October merchandise deficit would total $10.5 billion, the same as the September level. He said the deficit was likely to be stuck at this level until the dollar declines further.

Financial markets were braced for any unexpected widening of the deficit, which at times in the past has sparked a selloff of U.S. investments by foreign investors and sent the dollar into a tailspin.

The current account reflects the amount of money that the United States is transferring into the hands of foreigners to pay for its trade deficit. In this decade,

Services to tame deficit Reagan 'disappointment'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, looking back on his eight years in the White House, said Tuesday that one of his "great disappointments" is leaving office without taming the federal budget deficit.

Reagan had come into office eight years ago after promising to balance the nation's red ink spending by 1984.

The president, who leaves office in less than six weeks, contended that a "Washington colony" composed of an "iron triangle" of members of Congress, the news media and special interest groups had helped perpetuate the deficit.

"When I came to office, I found the presidency a weakened institution," Reagan told his audience of several hundred government officials and employees at Constitution Hall.

"I found a Congress that was trying to transform our government into a quasi-parliamentary system. And I found a Washington colony that — through the iron triangle — was attempting to rule the nation according to its interests and desires more than the nation's."

Reagan said some had used the term "iron triangle" to describe the trium of the Congress, news media and special interest groups, and that he would borrow the phrase.

"Administrations come and go, but the iron triangle remains," he said.

Reagan said he believed that he has been able "to use the president's ability to frame the broadest outlines of debate to compensate for some of the weakening of the office."

"He accused the 'iron triangle' of fighting his game of tax and spend, and fighting his efforts to balance the budget through spending cuts and proposals for a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution and authority to veto individual items in major spending bills.

"The House of Representatives, he said, "has become a virtually permanent chamber no longer truly responsive to the people."

"With a 98 percent rate of re-election, there is less turnover in the House than in the Supreme Court," he said.

"The president said the 'iron triangle' also derives from the power of special interest groups.

PTL brings in $65 million

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A judge on Tuesday ordered the assets of the troubled PTL television ministry sold to a Toronto real estate developer for $65 million.

Stephen Mernick bid $36.25 million on Monday in a session at Heritage USA headquarters near Fort Mill, but after meeting Tuesday with attorneys for the ministry and for the creditors, he agreed to increase his bid to $65 million.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Rufus Reynolds approved the sale at a hearing in Columbia, just more than a week after PTL founder Jim Bakker and three former associates were indicted by a federal grand jury in North Carolina.

What's what

Share to eat

Q. It's taboo in one New Guinea tribe for a man to eat any food he has grown or game he has killed. What's the point?

A. If you don't share, you don't eat. Theoretically. Among perfect people, it's a dandy.

Why call them Arabic numbers when they were used first in India?

Horses love Jell-O. Saying goes: "You can lead a horse to water, but you can't make him drink." It's not quite right. You can make him drink sometimes. By pouring Jell-O powder in the water.

CARMORALITY

In the early days of the automobile, a minister called for legislation to stop the use of the motor car for immoral purposes." A much-discussed notion then. Up jumped the cry you've heard: "You can't legislate morality." Henry Ford liked morality, but not such proposed legislation. He just made his car seats small, straight and discouraging.

Q. Can a cobra kill an elephant?

A. Only if it bites it on the trunk tip or the base of the toenail.

Q. How big is Pitcairn Island of bounty fame?

A. Couple of square miles. Can you visualize New York City's Central Park? That's about the size of it.

HEAVY TEAMS

Q. Washington Redskins beat the Denver Broncos in the last Super Bowl. Which team was the heaviest?

A. Redskins, 11,606 pounds. Broncos, 11,084. Think of that — 11 1/3 tons of football players.

Scientists experimenting in the Antarctic say they lost about 40 days of work in a short season last year. Because 3,500 sightseers, coming in on cruise ships and chartered planes, kept interrupting them.

Downey's wife claims he humiliated her

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — The wife of confrontational talk-show host Morton Downey Jr. has filed a countersuit for divorce, claiming he humiliated her.

Ann Downey filed a lawsuit Monday in Superior Court in Hackensack, saying her marriage of 10 years was an emotional ordeal during which she was forced "to remain submissive."

In an earlier divorce claim, Downey, an Englewood resident, was awarded custody of their 10-year-old son. WWOR-TV in Secaucus, charged his wife was moody and often burst into jealous rages.

The lawsuit filed by Mrs. Downey says that Downey has been having an affair with a woman since spring. Downey on Monday denied having affairs while living with his wife but acknowledged he has seen other women since the two split up five months ago.

"Were going to go get down to the Tyson-Givens game, are we?" Downey said, referring to the prominent disputes between heavyweight champion Mike Tyson and his wife, Robin Givens. "Well, I'm good at it."

The couple had no children. Downey has three daughters from previous marriages.

Bogart succeeds Hall as artistic director

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Anne Bogart, a leader in avant-garde theater in New York and Europe, was named Tuesday to succeed Adrian Hall as artistic director of the Trinity Repertory Company.

Hall, Trinity's founder and artistic director for the last 25 years, was leaving to concentrate on film work and run the Dallas Theater Center.

Bogart teaches at the American Repertory Theater in Cambridge, Mass. She is directing a production there next spring, and will take over for Hall on Sept. 1, spokeswoman Jeannie MacGregor said.

Florence Griffith Joyner will appear with Hope

MIAMI (AP) — Olympic medalist Florence Griffith Joyner is getting her start in show business with one of the industry's best-known names — Bob Hope.

Ms. Griffith Joyner, world record-holder in the 100- and 200-meter dashes, said she plans to retire from athletic competition and start a career as an entertainer.

In a weekend rehearsal for Hope's annual Christmas show, he and country singer Dolly Parton are joined in the song "It's Not Where You Start... It's Where You Finish" by Ms. Griffith-Joyner and Cy Young Award-winner Orel Hershiser.

Hope's theme for this year's NBC yuletide extravaganza, to be broadcast Dec. 17, is world-class athletes. The one-hour special also includes The Associated Press All-America football team and actor Don Johnson of NBC's "Miami Vice."

Ms. Griffith Joyner and Hershiser also perform in vignettes with Hope. Shooting locations included the new luxury cruise ship Royal Viking Sun and Williams Island, a residential resort compound.

Pavarotti makes debut as director of opera

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Italian tenor Luciano Pavarotti says his debut as opera director at Venice's La Fenice theater on Dec. 23 also will be his "last experience of this kind."

"I am almost certain I will be whistled. I am afraid, but this is the kind of risk you face when you play director," the 53-year-old international star said in an interview with Turin's daily La Stampa published Tuesday.

Pavarotti will direct Gaetano Donizetti's "La Favorita," starring American mezzo soprano Shirley Verrett.

He said he decided to try directing "out of curiosity, to understand the problems faced on the other side of the barricade.... Certainly singing is a tougher task."

Chess couple hope daughter will get visa

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — John Donaldson, captain of the U.S. men's chess team, and his bride, Soviet player Elena Akhmlivskaya, say they want to have a second wedding ceremony and hope her daughter will be able to attend.

Donaldson, of Seattle, said he hoped the Soviets would not deny the 7-year-old girl a visa in retaliation for the women's chess team finishing second to arch-rival Hungary in the biennial Olympiad in Salonika, Greece.

The Soviets were leading when Donaldson and Akhmlivskaya left two weeks ago, shortly before the end of the matches, after word leaked about their secret marriage.

"I don't think it's going to be a big problem," Donaldson said Monday. "I hope not. She could be here in two or three weeks."

Akhmlivskaya was less optimistic, saying it could be two or three months before her daughter, Dana, could join them for a wedding in New York.

The couple's attorney, Henry Holzer, made a formal request for a visa to the Soviet consul on Monday, and said Tuesday he had "extremely guarded optimism" that the Soviets would move quickly on the application.

Donaldson and Akhmlivskaya spoke with the Morning News Tribune of Tacoma while visiting with another internationally known chess couple, Soviet emigres Boris Gulko and his wife, Anna Akhsharumova, in Boston.

Donaldson said a second wedding would resolve any questions about whether the Greek ceremony met immigration requirements. In addition, he said, "Elena wants a ceremony."

Holzer said the time and place wouldn't be worked out until more is

Crash injures princess — sister of Swedish king

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Princess Christina Magnusson, sister of King Carl XVI Gustaf, was slightly injured Tuesday when the car she was in collided with a construction vehicle, the national news agency TT reported. The 45-year-old princess was released from a hospital after treatment for a minor wound near her eyes, TT said.

Car thieves form club

BELLE GLADE, Fla. (AP) — Four high school students linked by police to at least three car thefts formed a club called CTO, or Car Thieves Only, authorities said.

Officers expect the arrests of the four youths to lead to other arrests and to enable them to clear more cases, said Sgt. Darren Kirch.

Officers searched the stolen cars stripped of all usable parts, Kirch said. He said the group had sold the parts at flea markets around Florida.

USA Today clears the air

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Tests have found no dangerous substances in the air at the headquarters of USA Today, where 14 workers are said to have suffered miscarriages in the last 16 months, the paper's editor says.

Editor Peter S. Prichard said Monday that the preliminary results were provided by an outside testing firm that tested newsrooms at USA Today's Arlington headquarters over the last two weeks.

He said that additional testing will be done.

"USA Today employees said last week that an informal survey found that 14 women who work on the 14th and 15th floors of the building had suffered miscarriages since September 1987. The employees were concerned that major remodeling which began in April contributed to several of the miscarriages."

"We're continuing to look at it," Prichard told The Washington Post.

800 attend service for DUI victims

RADCLIFF, Ky. (AP) — Nearly 800 people turned out for a ceremony in memory of people killed in drunken driving accidents, including one that took 27 lives from this community.

As the names of victims were read out Monday, relatives and friends stepped to a table, lighted a candle and took a red carnation.

Similar services also were held the same day in Louisville and in Frankfort, where Gov. Wallace Wilkinson promised to ask the Legislature for tougher penalties for drunken and drugged drivers.

The vigil in Radcliff, sponsored by Mothers Against Drunk Drivers, held special meaning this year because of the May 14 church bus crash that killed 27 people. Authorities have charged the driver of a pickup truck that crashed into the bus with being drunk. He also was charged with 27 counts of murder, and is free on bond awaiting trial.

"It means a lot to me that people care enough to share respect for others who lost their lives," said Larry Flowers, 16, of Radcliff, a survivor of that crash — on Interstate 71 in northern Kentucky. "I just wished people realized what damage they do by drinking and driving."

Among those who spoke at the vigil was Christy Pearman, a survivor of the crash. Her father, John, was driving the bus owned by the Radcliff First Assembly of God church and was killed.

Christy Pearman read a poem about her feelings of loss, that said in part, "We miss your footsteps on the stairs, we miss the way that you combed your hair."

Defense Department seeks 2% budget increase for fiscal 1990

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department's proposed budget for next year calls for a 2 percent increase in spending above inflation, no further reductions in forces and a major embrace of long-term procurement contracts, officials said Tuesday.

The spending plan for fiscal 1990, which begins Oct. 1, also calls for a 4.1 percent pay raise for the 2.1 million military personnel and sufficient money to maintain the same level of training approved for this year, said Dan Howard, the Pentagon's chief spokesman.

The armed forces trimmed their ranks by 36,000 troops in the 1988 fiscal year to cope with budget pressures.

The 1990 budget proposal, to be formally unveiled on Jan. 9, will disclose that there has been a one-year slip in production of the new B-2 stealth bomber "as a result of both fiscal and technical considerations," Howard said.

The radar-evading stealth bomber is a special case, however, and with that one exception, the Reagan administration will leave office without recommending that any major weapon programs be stopped or slowed through production "stretch-outs," Howard said.

Carlucci orders staff cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci, resolving a dispute between his civilian staff and military leaders, has ordered 3,000 jobs eliminated over the next three years at U.S. military headquarters around the world.

The Pentagon, in a brief statement Tuesday, said Carlucci had sided with civilian manpower officials in ordering the cuts and that his decision "is final."

The civilian officials had asserted at least 3,000 to 3,500 jobs could be eliminated from allegedly bloated command staffs, with the people assigned to more important combat units.

The John Chiefs of Staff, however, had countered the reductions should be limited to no more than 500 positions, or billets.

The secretary of defense has adopted all of the recommendations that he felt could be accomplished without hurting military readiness," the Pentagon said in response to a query.

discuss the matter, however, appeared to reflect a desire on the part of Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci to pressure Congress — and for that matter, President-elect Bush — to reverse a four-year slide in defense spending after inflation.

Bush will be free after his inauguration on Jan. 20 to amend the budget submissions, and he has indicated he might bow to congressional calls that military spending be held at today's level after accounting for inflation.

Bush said Tuesday he would not make any decisions until he assumes the presidency.

Pentagon auditors expand contractor review

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon auditors will expand a review of top military contractors that already has found U.S. taxpayers are being billed for millions of dollars in questionable consulting fees, officials said Tuesday.

The first investigation covered a dozen contractors, but the new review will look at 18 more over the next 10 weeks, said William Reed, director of the Defense Contract Audit Agency. The review was ordered by Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci in the wake of the Justice Department's ongoing investigation of possible fraud and bribery involving defense contractors.

That investigation, code-named "Ill Wind," has not yet produced any indictments. It centers on the use of consultants employed by defense firms to win Pentagon contracts worth billions of dollars.

Reed said the review of the dozen firms found that contractors were spending considerable sums supplementing virtually every in-house activity with professional and consultant services.

The Pentagon was billed by the dozen firms for $237 million worth of consulting fees over the past year, Reed said.

Scientists start ozone hole probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Earth's protective ozone is thinning more than expected in Northern regions of the globe, say scientists who on Tuesday detailed an intense research effort to try to find out the reasons why.

While the so-called ozone hole over the South Pole has attracted the most media attention, a lesser but still significant thinning also has been found in the North.

And that has prompted a $10 million, six-week research effort starting Jan. 1. Based in Stavanger, Norway, the research will involve scientists from the United States, United Kingdom, Norway, West Germany and Denmark.

Satellite data show an ozone decline of between 2.5 percent and 6.5 percent in the northernmost areas. Scientific theory had expected a drop of only about 1.5 percent, explained Dr. Dan Albritton of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

"That certainly arches the eyebrows," he commented.

While this isn't in the same ballpark with the 30 percent to 50 percent ozone depletion reported in the Antarctic, the big difference is that people live in the North, Albritton said.

And for every 1 percent drop in ozone, levels of skin cancer can rise as much as 2 percent, explained Dr. Robert Watson of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Watson and Albritton provided details of their planned research project at a news conference.

"Understanding what occurs in the Arctic will be much more difficult than in the Antarctic," Watson said. "We are looking for subtle changes in a much more variable atmosphere."

Chlorine and bromine compounds released into the atmosphere by human activities have been blamed for the Antarctic ozone loss.

Trapped by winds circling the South Pole, those chemicals take advantage of ice clouds in the stratosphere as a location for chemical reactions with the ozone. When the South Pole weather warms in the springtime, the hole disappears, along with the ice clouds.

The Arctic is not as bitterly cold as the South Pole, and the high ice clouds form less readily, Albritton said, but these clouds still form and can help promote the reactions that damage ozone.

State funds for wildlife group irk Neibaur

The Associated Press

PAUL — The vice chairman of the House Appropriations Committee has asked for an attorney general's opinion on the legality of financing last month's Idaho Wildlife Congress with Fish and Game Department money.

In a letter to Attorney General Jim Jones, state Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, said he was concerned that public funds were used to organize a private lobbying group. The congress resulted in an agreement among various interest groups to create the Idaho Wildlife Council to promote fish and game issues.

The facts surrounding this congress appear to be clear, Neibaur said. A state agency used public funds and its publicly funded staff and offices to organize and promote the event, the stated purpose of which was to organize a private council to lobby the Legislature.

Neibaur, asking for a response from Jones before the Fish and Game Department budget hearing in mid-January, said that if there is nothing illegal about the scheme, he wants to know how he can make it illegal.

The congress has come under some fire since it was held in Boise nearly a month ago, and the Idaho Cattle Association led the way in demanding an investigation into the financial aspects of it and the new lobbying group. The ICA has said it will ask for an audit to determine how much was spent on the congress.

Deputy Fish and Game Director Ken Norrie has defended the congress and the council, pointing out that the agency routinely finances public hearings on fish and game issues throughout Idaho. He also said the department is seeking donations to help pay for the event.

Norrie said the congress was intended to get a broad spectrum of interest groups involved in the department's long-range planning for Idaho's fish and wildlife resources. The department has been at odds with state lawmakers over the years because of the willingness of its top officials and the governing five-member commission to use the relatively independent status to get things done.

Jaggers report delays hearing

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A foul-up over a psychiatrist's report has postponed until Jan. 26 and 27 the sentencing hearing for 18-year-old admitted murderer Jesse Ray Jaggers.

Jaggers' sentencing hearing was scheduled for Thursday and Friday. He faces a minimum of 10 years in prison and a maximum of life without parole after pleading guilty to first-degree murder and robbery in the May death and attempted rape of Virginia Westergren. Jaggers' attorney, James Meservy, asked the court Tuesday to postpone the hearing or to disqualify as a witness the prosecution psychiatrist who failed to send a written report. Dr. Michael Estess, a Boise psychiatrist, apparently failed to send a report to prosecutors who were supposed to provide a copy to Meservy.

Fifth District Judge Daniel Meehl agreed to postpone the hearing after an in-chambers hearing Tuesday.

Meservy argued in court documents that he would be at a disadvantage because prosecutors have reviewed reports from defense psychologists. Estess is the third psychologist or psychiatrist to examine Jaggers.

The state has a substantial advantage in that they are aware of what the defendant's witnesses are going to say whereas the defendant's counsel is not, Meservy wrote.

"I understand the report is done," Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter said late Tuesday. She was told the report was in the mail Monday.

She said the two sides agreed to the late January sentencing date after the in-chambers hearing. Jaggers pleaded guilty to the first-degree murder and robbery charges after prosecutors agreed to modify the murder charge, not seek the death penalty and to drop several other felony counts.

Jaggers admitted killing Westergren, 79, by cutting her throat after making her disrobe. Westergren died in her Twin Falls home May 13 and Jaggers was arrested May 23 in Las Vegas.

Studies show prenatal care lowers a baby's chance of spending time in a newborn intensive care unit, like this one at MVRMC

Health department believes early care can reduce cost of treating unhealthy babies

Prenatal program will expand

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Beginning Jan. 3, the health department will be able to quadruple the number of low-income women receiving free prenatal care.

Officials hope the change will decrease the high number of pregnant women whose first contact with a physician is when they turn up at the emergency room in labor. They also hope it will decrease the money taxpayers must shell out for babies born sick.

"But there may still be some women turned away," warned Maggi Machala, the South Central District Health Department's Improved Pregnancy Program coordinator.

She said the department won't know whether the modified program will take care of all the women until after it's been established for a few months. The program is already taking applications for women due for delivery in July 1989, Machala said.

She described the program as a cooperative venture of area physicians, hospitals and the health department to address the severe shortage of prenatal care for low-income women.

Studies show that women who do not receive prenatal care — medical and other services provided during pregnancy — are three times more likely to give birth to low-weight babies.

A low-weight baby — one weighing five pounds or less — is 40 times as likely as a normal-weight newborn to die in the first month and twice as likely to suffer a disability.

Jane Smith, maternal and infant care nursing consultant with the state, said low birth weight is commonly due to premature delivery, which can be caused by a variety of things, such as smoking, stress or a congenital problem.

She said many of these causes are cheap to prevent. And that's why the department is changing its focus from helping mothers and their children after the birth to prenatal care. "We'd love to provide all those services, but we can cover more people by practicing preventative medicine," she said.

The program will be able to accept 16 women each month, up from the old limit of four, for prenatal care, which will include medical care, case management, nutrition education, dental assessments and social services such as counseling for drug-abuse. Follow-up checkups will also be provided.

Smith cited a recent Oregon study showing that the cost of treating five high-risk, low-birth-weight babies could provide prenatal care for 149 women.

Other studies show that for every dollar spent on prenatal care, the taxpayer saves up to $11 in newborn intensive care costs. Most low-weight babies are born prematurely, requiring a stint in an intensive care unit that averages $21,000 per baby and can range up to $100,000, according to the state Department of Health and Welfare.

Prenatal care, on the other hand, runs about $1,200 per mother. A baby born disabled also has long-term medical costs that often are borne by public agencies.

According to a 1983 report from the Association of Counties, Idaho counties paid about $1.7 million from their indigent funds to care for low-weight babies. Medicare paid about another $1.5 million.

Figures on file with Twin Falls County commissioners show that about $137,500 has been paid for newborn care over the past three years, with some outstanding bills.

"And that has nothing to do with the mother's care," Commissioner Judy Felton said.

Dr. Paul Miles, a Twin Falls pediatrician, said Magic Valley Medical Regional Medical Center has had 117 walk-ins so far this year out of the 1,050 births performed. In 1987, the total was about 92, he said.

"Prenatal care is absolutely essential," Miles said. "I think the program will help, but I don't think it'll solve the problem."

He quoted this month's Journal of Pediatrics that listed the United States as having the 20th-highest infant mortality rates.

P&Z opposes rules change

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — City zoning members unanimously rejected a request to change an ordinance that would have made it easier for dairies to operate in an area of the city zoned for urban growth.

The Planning and Zoning Commission on Tuesday voted against recommending that the city approve a request for a zoning amendment that would have changed jurisdiction over any property more than 15 acres from the city to the county, which is more lenient.

Currently, property of more than 20 acres falls within county jurisdiction.

The request now goes to the City Council, said LaMar Orton, community development director.

Jones owns 17 acres just north of the Low Line Canal on Blue Lakes Boulevard and has been leasing the property to Mike Viestra, who has operated a 180-cow dairy on the property since May.

City ordinances allow no more than 85 cows on a 17-acre farm.

The land was used as a dairy with grandfather rights before Jones bought it.

Buhl will hold hearing about grant application

By MIKEL BENTON
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — The public has a chance tonight to hear about Buhl's application for a $350,000 federal grant, which would play a crucial role in the $4.5 million planned expansion of Pet Inc.

A public hearing is set for 7 tonight at City Hall to discuss an application for the Department of Health and Human Services block grant.

A delegation from the city is scheduled to present the application today before the Grand Advisory Committee in Boise. A preliminary decision may be made Thursday, officials said.

The delegation is not expected back from Boise for the evening meeting, so Marie Maier, council president, will preside.

The City Council discussed at its Monday meeting the three municipal projects the grant would fund.

Abortion concerns lead Jerome board to delay approving home ec

By DENISE TURNER
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — The Jerome School Board's approval of home economics courses for grades 9 through 12 is on hold for another month, due to concern over whether abortion should be part of the curriculum.

Last month, the board tabled a decision on the matter until Linda Blackburn, who teaches the adult living class, could present some detailed information to the board. The board decided Monday to look further at the curriculum before making any decision.

"We have some deep concerns about this subject and want to look at it very objectively," Trustee Chairman Alvin Chojnacky said. "I wouldn't be so much of a problem if all parents had good communication with their sons and daughters."

Other trustees said they had concerns also. Trustee Mary Rose said she agreed with a program that includes discussion of abortion.

"I would like to speak in support of your program because I think some teen-agers are desperate for information, and I think withholding information is not a part of education," Rose said. "This is a sensitive issue, and you are doing an excellent job."

A review of the program came about as the result of Jerome schools' attempt to write down the school system's entire curriculum, begun about two years ago. The board began discussing the home economics curriculum, including the adult living class, earlier this fall.

The board has the authority to change the curriculum but has so far not indicated such a desire.

The adult living class is an elective and requires parental consent.

Blackburn said she refers to abortion in her class but doesn't advise in favor of it or in opposition to it. "I would not tell you tonight my opinion of abortion, and I would never tell my opinion of it to my students," Blackburn told the board Monday.

She said she tries to give her students knowledge of the consequences of abortion and an understanding that they are responsible for what happens to themselves, their bodies and any children they might create.

"I talk about abortion and the law and about fetal development," she said. She said physicians sometimes visit class to talk about the physical and psychological effects of abortion.

"I stress abstinence adamantly," Blackburn said, adding that her course covers other forms of birth control and the options of keeping a baby or adoption. "Many teenagers are using abortion as a means of contraception because they are not informed and do not know where to go for information, and I'm not teaching them to have abortions, I'm teaching them to be informed."

Blackburn went on to tell the board that she can only give students textbook information. "I refer them to a counselor or medical doctor when necessary," she said. "Many teen-agers are sexually active but don't know what's happening with either their bodies or their minds."

Blackburn said she once talked with a girl who had three abortions before graduating from high school. "The girl's parents didn't even know their daughter had skipped a beat," she said.

Board members expressed concern that even though Blackburn may be doing a good

Adjudication workshop tonight

TWIN FALLS — In response to popular demand, the state Water Resources Department will offer another workshop tonight to help those filing claims in the Snake River Adjudication.

The department will have two sessions, one at 7 p.m. and one at 8:30 p.m. in Room 108 of the Aspen Building, at the College of Southern Idaho. The workshops will help Twin Falls County residents file domestic well and stock water claims before the Dec. 22 deadline.

"If people will bring with them the priority data of their well, or the date the water was first used, as well as an accurate legal description, we can assist them in filling out the claim forms in a very short time," said Allen Merritt, supervisor of the adjudication for the department's southern region.

The department offers the workshop in hopes of avoiding a deluge of last-minute filings. The workshops will result in a Notice of Claim form accurately prepared and ready for filing with the department, officials say.

After claims to water rights are filed they are checked for accuracy. The claims are then reported to the Fifth Judicial District Court, where they will be listed in the final Snake River Decree.

The adjudication, the largest water rights adjudication in U.S. history, began in Twin Falls County Sept. 25. Twin Falls is the 13th county to receive notice of the adjudication. Before it is finished, the adjudication will involve 39 of Idaho's 44 counties.

FmHA, Farm Credit rules explained

MOUNTAIN HOME — New requirements for Farmers Home Administration and Farm Credit System borrowers will be explained at a seminar at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at El Rancho Restaurant in Mountain Home.

Pam Baldwin, president of the Idaho Rural Council from Meridian, and Paul Slade, a council member from Clifton, will present information about how delinquent borrowers should file for restructuring, what documents are needed and where to get help. They'll also answer specific questions. The two have been trained by the Farmers Legal Action Group, a Minnesota-based farmers' defense organization.

The new regulations affecting FmHA and Farm Credit borrowers resulted from changes in the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987.

For more information call John Spanbauer at 324-2091.

Heat problem closes Hansen school

HANSEN — Students in Hansen got the day off Tuesday because of a heating problem at the junior-senior high school building.

Elementary school also was dismissed because those students could not get hot lunch at the high school.

School custodian Bud Stauder said a valve that mixes gas with air broke down. It's impossible to run (the furnace) without it and there's no way to bypass it," Stauder said.

Superintendent Richard Smith went to Boise Tuesday to pick up another valve and the problem was expected to be fixed so school would be open today. Evelyn Jones, the school's secretary, said.

Police arrest 2 men for burglary

TWIN FALLS — Police have arrested two Twin Falls men on charges that they burglarized Twin Falls High School and a camera store earlier this year.

Joseph Wayne Carr, 19, and Danny Joe Ricketts, 29, were charged in Twin Falls Magistrate Court Tuesday with two counts each of first-degree burglary. Bail for each was set at $3,000.

Police also recovered the items stolen in the two burglaries, including about $9,000 worth of computer equipment taken from the high school, according to court records. The school was broken into during the night of Oct. 19, and two Apple computers, printers and related accessories were stolen.

Kit's Cameras, in the Blue Lakes Mall, was broken into on the night of Aug. 20 by burglars who apparently crawled through the store's roof.

About $2,000 worth of the camera equipment was found when police used a warrant to search Carr's Twin Falls residence, according to court records. Ricketts also produced and surrendered a cam-corder and tripod, court records show.

Collision injures KMVT-TV reporter

TWIN FALLS — A KMVT-TV reporter was injured Monday when the car she was driving collided with a pickup, according to police reports.

Stephanie DeGraw, 28, of Twin Falls, was treated for injuries and released from the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, officials there said. DeGraw began working at KMVT within the past month.

The accident occurred around 9:50 a.m. at the intersection of Third Avenue East and Third Street East, according to police records. DeGraw, driving a 1988 Dodge Colt east on Third Avenue East, ran a stop sign and struck a 1982 Ford pickup driven by Darrell Heider, 66, of Twin Falls, police records show.

Heider told police he sped up in an attempt to avoid the car, but his pickup's right rear tire was hit by the Colt.

Damage to the Colt was estimated at $4,000, police records show. The pickup sustained about $400 of damage.

Police cited DeGraw for running a stop sign.

Oasis reports Monday cash theft

TWIN FALLS — About $1,700 in cash was reported stolen Monday from the Oasis, a Twin Falls bar at 1007 Blue Lakes Blvd. N., according to police reports.

The burglary occurred between 1 a.m. Sunday and 7:30 a.m. Monday, police reports show. Checks and coins were left behind by the burglars.

Thieves steal city Christmas lights

TWIN FALLS — Strings of Christmas lights were reported stolen Monday night from trees in the Twin Falls City Park, according to police reports.

The theft occurred around 10:16 p.m. and was reported by a Hansen man who saw lights being taken from the park's southwest corner, police reports show. The thief, who had wrapped the lights around one of his arms, fled in a vehicle driven by another man.

About $50 worth of lights were taken, according to police reports.

Health department holds meeting

TWIN FALLS — The public is invited to attend the South Central District Health Department's annual informational meeting this evening at 5 p.m. All Magic Valley legislators and county commissioners were invited to attend and County Councilman Gerald Hurst says he expects a good turnout.

Hurst described the meeting as an "update" and said its purpose is to inform the public about new programs, such as the new prenatal care program, and to introduce issues of concern, such as the nurses' salaries within the department.

Buhl

A new well needed due to a water shortage aggravated by the failure of an existing well.

Improvements to Highway 30, especially where it would have to bear the additional trucks running into the Pet plant.

Upgrading the city's already strained wastewater treatment plant, which is needed for the effluent in the expanded Pet plant would produce.

Pet announced last week it plans by 1990 to begin producing BKM Baked Beans, which could mean 40 new jobs and an economic ripple effect in the area of more than $6 million annually. Construction is slated next spring.

But the expansion project is tied closely with Buhl receiving the grant and being able to increase the capacity of its wastewater treatment facilities.

City Engineer Scott Bybee, of JUB

Engineers, is optimistic about Buhl's chances. "I think our chances Wednesday are very good," Bybee told the council Monday. "I feel good about the efforts the city, Pet, Inc. and the Economic Development Council have put into this."

According to the grant criteria, it must benefit low and moderate income persons; those who earn less than 80 percent of the county average. Fifty-one percent of the new jobs must be offered to people of low and moderate income living in Buhl.

According to Tappen, nine cities have applied for grants, administered by the state Department of Commerce. "Possibly only two will be successful," he said.

Tappen, Bybee, Pet Plant Manager Craig Ollinger and Bill Specht, of the Buhl Economic Development Council, are scheduled to be in Boise today.

In other matters, Bybee told the council a recent state inspection of Buhl buildings found City Hall's foundation in poor shape.

"A substantial earthquake would bring it down tomorrow," Bybee said.

A structural evaluation and electrical and plumbing inspection, are needed before work on the building could begin. The major consideration is the cost-effectiveness of any renovations, Bybee said.

The City Council hopes to schedule the necessary evaluations within the current fiscal year, to determine whether repairs should be budgeted for the following year. In the meantime, minor corrections, such as those to the fire-exits and railings, will be made.

Inspections were made by the Department of Labor and Industrial Services.

City Hall occupied much of the state inspector's nine-page report, according to Bybee.

but the rights were lost because the land was not used as a dairy for more than a year, Orton said.

"It's not just not fair," Jones' wife, Juanita, told the commission tearfully during discussion of the request. "This is just literally about destroying my life. It is everything that me and my husband have done."

Jones has previously said he and Vierastra have invested around $500,000 on the farm.

He pointed out to the commission that before 1979 all pieces of property more than five acres within the city's impact area were controlled by the county, which places no restrictions on the number of animals on feed lots or dairies.

Changing the acreage cutoff point to 10 acres would have been a reasonable request, he said.

Jack Sherrill, who owns a home near the dairy, said the only reason for the zoning change request is that one person has "imprudently" bought a nonconforming property.

"He then decided to improve it illegally and without benefit of prior plan approval," Sherrill said. "He now finds the only way to rescue his operations is for all of us to forfeit the good planning and solid zoning conformance of these laws — for his exclusive benefit."

David White, Jones' neighbor, said after the impact area was created and expensive homes built there, property values have risen to about $10,000 an acre. People have bought property in the area because they believed the ordinance would protect their investment.

"We hope we won't have to keep going over this time and over and over again," White said.

The impact area is an area outside city limits but controlled by city zoning ordinances.

The city has filed suit against the dairy alleging zoning and building code violations. It is asking the court to order Jones to stop operating a dairy. The suit also asks the court to prevent Jones and Vierastra from adding improvements to the farm or bringing in more cows while the decision is pending.

City Attorney Fritz Wenderlich said the final decision of whether to change the ordinance can not be made without input from the county since county laws would also have to be changed.

The county has already forwarded its disapproval of the amendment in a letter to the city which states that it would be economically unfeasible to reduce the acreage limit.

Jones' attempt to have the zoning ordinance changed to allow dairies and feed lots by special-use permit was turned down by the Planning and Zoning Commission in September. The City Council in October and the Board of Appeals of the city's impact area in November. All of the decisions followed heated public hearings.

"And that's inexcusable," he said. Machala said that the prenatal program services are not going to change but will just be available to more women.

More women will be eligible to apply for the program because of a hike in Medicare eligibility qualifications. Women living on incomes up to 67 percent of the poverty level will qualify for the care, compared with the former 43 percent figure.

And a Maternal Block Grant will pay for women who are 68 to 150 percent of the poverty level.

Machala said women will be taken on a first-come, first-served basis. The program has three clinic sites:

Twin Falls (serving Twin Falls County) — The clinic will be held at the Health Department with medical prenatal care provided by Dr. Mary Grudic-Lewis of Family Health Services Clinic. Deliveries will be performed at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center by the on-call physician.

Northside Clinic (serving Jerome, Lincoln, Blaine, Gooding and Camas counties) — The clinic will be held at Dr. Keith Davis' office in Shoshone with medical prenatal care provided by Davis and Judy Sandy, N.P. Deliveries will be performed by on-call physicians at St. Benedict's Family Medical Center, Blaine County Medical Center and Moritz Community Medical Center.

Mini-Cassia Clinic (serving Minidoka and Cassia counties) — The clinic will be held at the Cassia County Courthouse with medical prenatal care provided by private physicians' offices. Deliveries will be performed at Cassia Memorial Hospital.

Groups seek impact statement for reactors

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Three environmental groups filed suit Tuesday to force the U.S. Department of Energy to prepare an environmental impact statement before restarting the three reactors at the Savannah River Plant.

Restarting the reactors constitutes a "major federal action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment," according to the suit filed in U.S. District Court in Washington.

Under terms of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, the Energy Department must prepare an environmental impact statement if such a condition exists, according to the suit.

SRP is the only U.S. plant that produces tritium, a radioactive isotope of hydrogen used to increase the explosive power of nuclear warheads.

None of the three reactors at the 300-square-mile facility near Aiken has produced the critical weapons material since last April because of scheduled maintenance and safety concerns.

Last month, Energy Secretary John S. Herrington said continuing safety questions would delay the restart of SRP until at least next spring or summer.

Tritium decays at the rate of 5.5 percent per year and Energy and Defense Department officials have said that further idling of SRP could endanger the nation's stockpile.

Frances Close Hart, chairwoman of the Columbia-based Energy Research Foundation, said Tuesday she did not believe an environmental impact statement would push back restart efforts.

"Whether or not if they started with an EIS now it would delay their schedule, I doubt very much," she said at a news conference announcing the suit.

The Energy Research Foundation was joined in the suit by Greenpeace U.S.A. and Washington-based Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc.

UP&L merger gains approval

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Public Service Commission on Tuesday cleared the way for Utah Power & Light Co.'s proposed merger with Oregon-based PacifiCorp, vouching an earlier suspension of its approval.

The PSC had suspended its support for the merger Oct. 26 after the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, in its approval of the proposal, insisted the merged company open its transmission system to other utilities.

The merger of privately held

UP&L and PacifiCorp, a diversified company headquartered in Portland, Ore., would create the nation's 13th largest utility, serving more than 1.2 million customers in seven western states — California, Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming and Utah.

PacifiCorp spokesman Glenn Gillespie said the PSC's decision was welcome, but first the boards of both utilities will have to extend the formal merger agreement which expires Thursday. UP&L's board meets Wednesday. The PacifiCorp board has scheduled a meeting for Friday.

"We're very pleased to get the final OK from Utah and now we'll just proceed with all of the many details that are still left to be wrapped up before we can close the merger," he said.

The PSC's decision drew cautious praise from UP&L spokesman Dave Ekelsten.

"Naturally, we're very pleased," he said. "But until the people who know about these things the most are able to review this order, we really cannot comment on the specifics."

Idaho routes acquire scenic status

POCATELLO (AP) — Two stretches of southeastern Idaho roads have been given special status for their scenic and historical value by the Idaho Transportation Board.

The board gave the state's ninth-Scenic Highway designation to the 120-mile stretch from the Utah border near Fish Haven to the Wyoming border near Freedom. The route includes portions of U.S. 89, U.S. 30 and Idaho 34.

A route about the same length received Pioneer Trail status. The route runs from the Utah border near Franklin to the Wyoming border near Freedom, following U.S. 91 and Idaho 34. Highway Department spokesman said the routes will be marked with signs sometime this summer.

The Scenic Route will include pull-offs with wooden maps listing areas of beauty or historical significance such as Bear Lake, Grays Lake and the Blackfoot River.

Other scenic routes run along the Bton Mountains from Idaho Falls through "Swan Valley" and through the Sawtooth Mountains near Hailey.

The Pioneer Trail designation is given to roads near historical areas. For example, the southern end of the new Pioneer Trail begins in Franklin, Idaho's oldest town.

Cycle crash kills teens

NAMPA (AP) — Two Nampa teenagers were killed when their motorcycle hit a station wagon turning off Idaho Highway 45 near Nampa High School, police said.

Noel W. Frink, 17, the motorcycle's driver, and Anthony D. Aman, 18, were pronounced dead on arrival at Mercy Medical Center after the accident, which occurred shortly after 2:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Frink would have turned 18 on Wednesday.

Nampa Police Sgt. Randy Kath said witnesses reported the motorcycle was traveling south on Idaho 45 at "a very high rate of speed" when it hit the right rear panel of a northbound station wagon as it was making a left turn.

The driver of the car, Darryn W. Coburn, 17, also of Nampa, was treated at Mercy Medical Center and released, Kath said.

The accident remained under investigation.

job of teaching the adult living class, there is no guarantee that teachers who come after her would do the same. "I would like to be able to put something in this to insure us that the next person who teaches this won't go out into left field," Trustee Steve Marshall said of the curriculum review.

Trustee Robert Bingham noted that several parents have expressed concerns about the subject of abortion being part of a curriculum.

In other business,

Superintendent Richard Kugler announced that the high school lost 27 students last month, mostly as a result of dropouts.

Sharon Peterson discussed the district's talented and gifted (TAG) program. She cited various components of the program, such as ventures, library research units, foreign language studies and the talent pool.

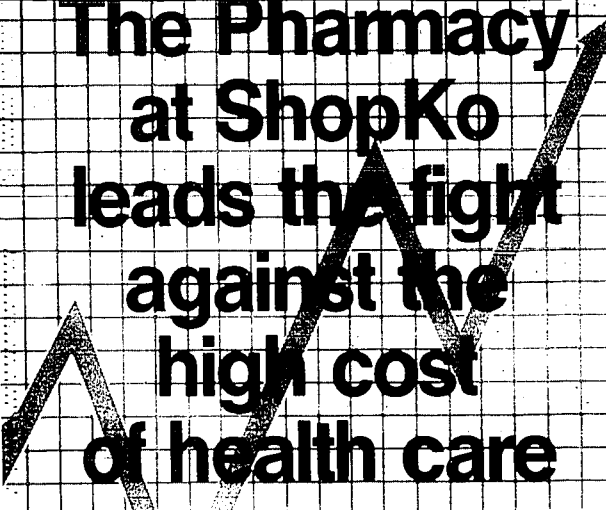

She said 29 academic students and 15 art students, covering grades three to six, are in the TAG program.

Kugler reported that the district's asbestos management plan has been submitted to the state. He said a letter notice will notify the public that the plan is available for view.

The board voted to ask Kugler to review a rental situation with the city attorney and the state board of education and to formulate a purchase proposal. The building in question serves as a temporary classroom at Jefferson Elementary School and is now costing the district $9,800 a year in rental fees.

Arafat unveils 3-point plan for peace in U.N. speech

GENEVA (AP) — PLO chief Yasser Arafat made a direct appeal to Israeli leaders Tuesday to join peace talks under U.N. guidance and offered a peace plan based on the right of all nations in the Middle East to exist in peace and security.

In a long-awaited speech to a special session of the U.N. General Assembly, Arafat introduced a three-point plan calling for an international peace conference, U.N. supervision of Israeli-occupied territory and a "comprehensive settlement" involving all states in the region.

The speech was an effort to clarify the PLO's declaration of independence issued in Algiers last month and appeared aimed at gaining U.S. support.

During the speech, Arafat mentioned Israel by name several times and his appeal appeared to be his most direct call yet to the leadership of the Jewish state.

"I ask the leaders of Israel to come here, under the sponsorship of the United Nations, so that together we can forge that peace," said Arafat, dressed in his trademark khaki military uniform and checkered Arab headdress.

Addressing the Israeli people, he added: "Come, let us make peace. Cast away fear and intimidations. Leave behind the specter of the wars that have raged continuously in the furnace of all this conflict for the past 40 years."

Israel immediately rejected Arafat's appeal, saying it was ambiguous and represented no change in PLO policy.

The U.S. State Department called the speech "interesting and positive" but said it did not satisfy U.S. conditions for opening a dialogue with the PLO, including explicit recognition of Israel's right to exist and renunciation of terrorism.

The PLO chief received an ovation of nearly a minute when he finished speaking to the session, which was moved to Geneva after Washington denied Arafat a visa, barring him from addressing the world body in New York.

Outlining his peace plan, Arafat called first for "a serious effort" to set up an international peace conference under U.N. auspices.

He then proposed that "occupied Palestinian land" be placed under U.N. supervision, with an international force deployed to protect the Palestinians and oversee withdrawal of Israeli troops. He did not specify whether he was referring only to the West Bank and Gaza Strip, occupied by Israel in 1967.

Thirdly, Arafat said, the PLO seeks "a comprehensive settlement among the parties concerned in the Arab-Israeli conflict, including the State of Palestine, Israel and other neighbors within the framework of the international conference."

He said the conference should be held on the basis of U.N. Resolutions 242 and 338 — which guarantee the rights of all nations in the Middle East to exist within secure borders — "so as to guarantee equality and the balance of interests... and respect the right to exist in peace and security for all.

On the issue of terrorism, Arafat said: "I, as chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, hereby once more declare that I condemn terrorism in all its forms."

2 Israelis shot, killed in West Bank

BERAKHA, Occupied West Bank (AP) — A Palestinian snatched a gun from a Jewish settler Tuesday, shot the settler and another Israeli dead and was slain in turn by an army patrol, military sources said.

Israel radio said the settler was on patrol outside the settlement when several Palestinians confronted him and one attacked him with a stone, grabbed his gun and killed him.

It said the Palestinians set up an ambush and fired on the soldiers as they approached. The army put the village under curfew immediately and began searching the area, the radio said.

The killings occurred about the time PLO chairman Yasser Arafat was addressing the U.N. General Assembly in Geneva, calling for peace with Israel.

An army spokesman confirmed a Jewish settler was killed by a Palestinian who grabbed his gun at Burin village near the Jewish settlement of Berakha, about two miles south of Nablus, but said he could not confirm the death of a second Israeli.

Benny Katzover, a leader of the settlements movement, identified the dead man as Yaakov Porat. The army spokesman, whose name cannot be used because of regulations, said the settler was on his way home to Berakha when he was attacked and an army patrol called to the scene killed the Palestinian.

Thirteen Israelis have been killed since a rebellion began Dec. 8, 1987, among the 4.5 million Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. At least 323 Palestinians died and more than 7,000 wounded.

About 70,000 Jews live in 131 settlements in the West Bank and Gaza, which Israel captured from Jordan and Egypt in 1967.

Arab sources said the Palestinian was a 25-year-old shepherd named Hamdan-Najjar. They said he had been grazing his flock near Berakha, a settlement of about 20 religiously observant Jewish families founded in 1981.

Villagers said Jewish settlers entered schools in Burin earlier in the day, ordering teachers and students to leave. A high school principal was beaten, the residents said.

Four Palestinians were wounded in confrontations elsewhere in the West Bank, including a 13-year-old boy shot in the chest and right arm at the Fara refugee camp near Nablus, hospital officials said.

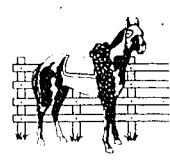

Soldiers imposed a curfew on the entire Gaza Strip, shouting through megaphones they would fire on those who violated the order confining all 650,000 Palestinians to their homes, residents reported.

The round-the-clock curfew was imposed in an effort to prevent anti-Israeli violence after Arafat's address in Geneva.

An Associated Press reporter taken on a tour of Gaza by the army saw swarming tires and watched patrols moving in and out of narrow alleys hunting curfew violators. Two outlawed Palestinian flags attached to helium balloons floated over Gaza City.

S. Africa, Cuba, Angola sign peace accord

BRAZZAVILLE, Congo (AP) — South Africa, Cuba and Angola signed a U.S.-mediated peace plan Tuesday stipulating that South-West Africa will become independent and 60,000 Cuban soldiers will leave Angola.

"This will bring an end to international conflict in southwestern Africa," said Chester Crocker, the American diplomat who was the agreement's chief architect. "It is the end of a sad chapter in African history."

"He called the accord 'a new symbol of peace in the world' and said it was another example of superpower cooperation ending regional conflicts. Crocker, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, cited 'close, practical and effective cooperation with our Soviet counterparts.'"

Crocker's negotiations on South-West Africa, also known as Namibia, were a central element in the Reagan administration's "constructive engagement" policy toward South Africa, which the Congress rejected in favor of sanctions.

Applause by black African diplomats and officials interrupted Foreign Minister R.F. Botha of South Africa when he declared Tuesday: "A new era has begun. My government is removing racial discrimination. We want to be accepted by our African brothers. We need each other."

South Africa clearly sees the agreement as a chance to improve an international image marred by apartheid and end a war that has cost hundreds of millions of dollars and killed hundreds of white soldiers.

Botha signed for South Africa in a ceremony attended by the Congo president, Denis Sassou-Nguesso, whose government has been host to several negotiating sessions.

Also signing the agreement Tuesday were Angola's military chief of staff, Antonio dos Santos Franca, and Ricardo Alarcon Quesada, Cuban deputy foreign minister. Alarcon said it begins "a new era of peace."

Soviet carrier joins fleet in North Sea

OSLO, Norway (AP) — The 37,000-ton Baku, the Soviet Union's most modern aircraft carrier, has moved from the Mediterranean Sea to join the Soviet fleet in the North Sea, the Norwegian Supreme Command said Tuesday.

The Soviet carrier was escorted by two destroyers, two frigates and one tanker as it sailed past Norway on Tuesday, the Supreme Command said.

It said the Kiev-class carrier served for nearly six months in the Mediterranean.

Despite earthquake, ethnic struggle continues for Armenians

SPITAK, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Exhausted and grief-stricken, Armenians who have come to help their brothers in this devastated city are stirred to passion when talk of their suffering touches on the conflict with Azerbaijan.

Despite the earthquake that has killed more than 50,000 Armenians, the simmering ethnic conflict between the neighboring republics appears unabated.

Spitak, virtually destroyed by the Dec. 7 quake, was one of the cities of refuge for Armenians who fled homes in Azerbaijan after the long-suppressed dispute between Christian Armenians and Moslem Azerbaijanis burst into violent confrontation in February. Destruction of the refugees' homes by the earthquake has fueled the hatred of some Armenians in this mountainous, backward heartland, as well as the yearlong campaign for annexation of the Azerbaijan-governed region of Nagorno-Karabakh. Spitak has no means of communicating with the outside world, yet rumors of Azerbaijani callousness in the wake of the disaster have spread among the dispirited salvage workers and volunteers.

The Azerbaijanis living in Armenia have been feasting and celebrating for two days, said Edik Boyanyan, driving his shovel deeper into the powdery rubble of former housing with an impassioned kick. "They are rejoicing in our suffering," the Armenian-Azerbaijani conflict boiled to the surface of conversation among a dozen Armenian villagers who spoke with a reporter as they picked away at the piles of concrete and twisted metal that is all that is left of Spitak. Other Armenians working within earshot put down their tools and raced to add their own denunciations.

"We have received aid from every corner of the world, but not from Azerbaijan," said Vardukh Azaryan. "The Georgians have been wonderful, they've done everything possible to help us, but not the Azerbaijanis. They are jubilant!"

Armenians in the capital of Yerevan contended Azerbaijanis had sent leaflets "congratulating Armenia on the occasion of its worst-ever natural disaster. The Armenian claims about the Azerbaijanis could not be confirmed, but they were spreading and infuriating the populace.

Yerevan activists over the weekend pressed for reunification with Nagorno-Karabakh, which resulted in five arrests.

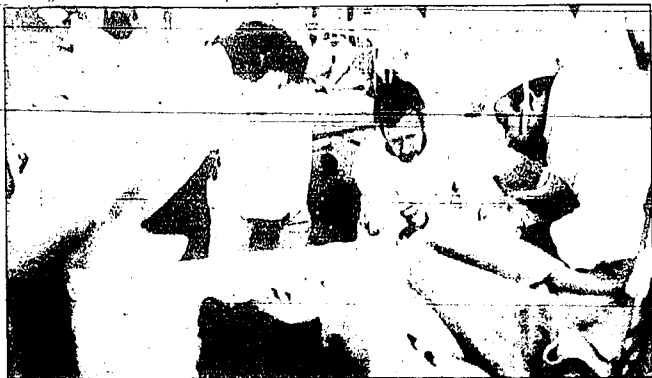

"This is a present from (Soviet President Mikhail) Gorbachev on our day of mourning," activist Rafael Popoyan said of the denunciations, reflecting a growing anti-Kremlin sentiment among Armenians over Nagorno-Karabakh.

Mayor Arzumanyan fled to Spitak from the Azerbaijani part of Sumgait in March after extremists rampaged Feb. 28, killing 26 Armenians in the industrial city.

"I brought my family here after the riots because we couldn't live there anymore," Arzumanyan said, standing amid the ruined apartment he moved into only a month ago.

"The Armenians are the friendliest and most peace-loving people in the world, and better relations with the Azerbaijanis is not up to us, it's up to them," he said. "I don't expect much to change because of this tragedy."

Dutch woman shot in Lhasa battle

BEIJING (AP) — Authorities questioned foreigners Tuesday about a bloody weekend demonstration in Lhasa and tourists reported sketchy details about more arrests and police action.

A Dutch woman, who was shot in the arm during the clash Saturday between anti-Chinese independence activists and security forces, said authorities still refused to let her leave the country.

China's official media has said one Tibetan Buddhist monk was killed and 13 people injured when police fired on protesters carrying a banned Tibetan flag near the Jokhang Monastery in the city's central square.

But a West German tourist said Tuesday he had seen the body of a child carried into a hospital near the square. He said a friend saw two children — a boy and a girl — lying dead in the market after the protest.

The West German, who spoke on condition of anonymity, also said Tibetans told him seven people were killed, but this could not be independently confirmed.

Tibetan activists seek the return of Tibet's exiled leader, the Dalai Lama, and an end to 38 years of Chinese communist rule. The bloodshed marked the third time in 14 months Chinese security forces and protesters have clashed.

At least 38 people were killed in violent clashes with police on Oct. 1, 1987 and March 5.

"Tourists" contacted by telephone from Beijing on Tuesday, said more arrests were being made.

Ron Schwartz, a professor of sociology from the University of Newfoundland in St. John's, Canada, quoted Tibetans as saying that nine truckloads of security forces went to the Sera and Drepung monasteries in Lhasa and arrested monks on Monday.

Tourists have said monks told them police were not allowing Tibetans to gather in the central square and dispersed any small groups that formed.

On Monday, Robert Dean, 24, of Auckland, New Zealand, said he witnessed Chinese police driving up to Tibetan homes and taking people away.

There was no way to confirm reports of arrests.

A British man said foreigners told him police were not allowing Tibetans to gather in the central square and dispersed any small groups that formed.

Officials at the Public Security Bureau in Beijing and at the offices of the Tibetan provincial government refused to answer questions Tuesday.

Christa Meindersma, the Dutch woman who was shot in the arm Saturday, said she had been examined by a Swiss doctor.

Britain, Ireland clash over priest's extradition

LONDON (AP) — Britain and Ireland clashed bitterly over the Irish attorney general's refusal Tuesday to extradite an Irish Catholic priest wanted on terrorism charges.

Raising an 18-day-old confrontation over the Rev. Patrick Ryan to a new pitch, the Irish said the priest would not get a fair trial in Britain and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher called that "a great insult to all of the people of this country."

Mrs. Thatcher, in an angry response in the House of Commons, said "we repudiate utterly" the Irish attorney general's assertion that Ryan would not be fairly tried before a British jury.

Attorney General John Murray said British politicians and newspapers had prejudiced his trial by attacking him "in intemperate language and frequently in the form of extravagantly worded headlines."

"They raised the case to a unique status and can only have intensified the impact and lasting effect on members of the public of what was being published," he said.

He added that statements in the British Parliament "must, because of their origin, carry particular weight with potential jurors."

Ryan, in a statement read to reporters by family and supporters in Dundrum, County Tipperary, called Murray's decision "a victory for all."

Mrs. Thatcher said Murray's decision meant that "someone accused of very serious crimes will be at liberty in the Irish Republic."

"We repudiate utterly the assertion that Patrick Ryan would not receive a fair trial in this country. Of course he would," she said, adding: "To arrest anyone on charges of that nature is inevitably going to be receiving front-page treatment and it will be a matter for the courts if there were any prejudice to the trial."

The Ryan affair has plunged Britain into confrontation with two countries: Belgium for not extraditing him when he was arrested there and Ireland for letting him go free after the Belgians flew him home.

Ryan says he is innocent. Britain suspects him of serving the Irish Republican Army in its war to rid Northern Ireland of British rule, and wants him on four warrants alleging conspiracy to murder and cause explosions and possessing explosives.

Murray said Ryan might face trial in Ireland on terrorism charges, and added he had asked the British for the file of evidence on him. But Mrs. Thatcher said an Irish court would hear only two of the charges, and there will be problems about security of witnesses.

Ryan's statement said that if Ireland tried him, "they will be acting on behalf of the British government. I will resist... in the same way I resisted my extradition."

Mrs. Thatcher said the 1987 Anglo-Irish extradition treaty was "not working satisfactorily" because Dublin had "unilaterally" changed it to make extraditions contingent not upon the courts but upon the attorney general's approval.

Aunt learns lesson when niece moves in Wedding

DEAR ABBY: My brother died several years ago. He had a daughter I'll call Michele. Michele's mother remarried and moved to another state.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

My husband and I have raised three children who are now married and living on their own, so we have two extra bedrooms.

Michele graduated from high school last year, and her mother called and asked if Michele could move in with my husband and me while she attends a college near us. We felt this would be OK, as Michele is 18 and considered an adult. Michele's parents agreed to pay us $25 a month rent, and said that all her other expenses would be taken care of by them.

So far, we have been paid only one month's rent, and Michele has been here for seven months. We paid a $300 repair bill for her car; our phone bills are outrageous from the calls she makes home and to her friends. She is always borrowing extra money, which she says her mother will repay, but we haven't seen one dime of it.

Michele's room is always a tri-ble mess, and our phone rings at all hours of the night for her. Abby, my husband and I fight constantly, and he wants her out. So do I, but I am afraid it will cause a family feud if I ask her to leave.

I've tried talking to her, but it doesn't do any good, and I can't handle any more of this. What would you do, Abby?

— AUNT BETSY

DEAR AUNT BETSY: I would call Michele's mother immediately and tell her that since she failed to uphold her end of the agreement, your household, Michele must go. Tell her firmly that Michele has one week to vacate the premises. Advise Michele of your decision — help her pack her clothes and stick to your guns. If this causes a family feud, so be it. It's your husband's house, too.

DEAR ABBY: My parents, who live in another state, have a small dog named Jenny. Jenny is a lovable pet, but she frequently has "accidents" on my new carpets. Also, my two cats are declawed and cannot defend themselves against Jenny, who deliberately antagonizes them.

Although we have discussed these problems on more than one occasion, my parents have consistently ignored my wishes and they continue to bring Jenny along when they visit me.

We have tried putting Jenny outside on a leash and leaving her in the garage, but she barks and whines until we bring her in. I've begged my parents to leave Jenny in a kennel or in the care of a friend, but they refuse.

The issue is becoming a sore spot between my parents and me. Any suggestions?

— THERESA

DEAR THERESA: Put a doggy diaper on Jenny, or find a nearby motel that accepts pets, and send Mom and Dad and Jenny there. And keep your cats in a room with the door closed to protect them from Jenny.

DEAR ABBY: I have read many articles about how much it would cost to hire professionals to do all the jobs a wife does — a cook, housekeeper, chauffeur, tutor, etc., but I've never read anything about how much it would cost to replace a good husband.

We've never had to hire a carpenter, mechanic, plumber, painter, electrician or gardener. At today's prices, do you realize how many thousands of dollars this saves us every year?

My husband also works full time. Besides doing all those things, he's a wonderful lover and my best friend.

— LUCKY IN OREGON

DEAR LUCKY: You are indeed lucky. But when you mention the last two virtues — you hit the jackpot in my book.

Is your social life in a slump? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 417, Mount Morris, Ill. 61051.

Look to the kitchen for gift ideas

When it comes to creative but simple gift-giving ideas, search no farther than your own kitchen.

The unique specialties from the kitchen offer the gift giver, as well as the recipient, the spark of originality.

An ideal thank you for the host or hostess, the Pear Liqueur should be made about six weeks in advance to allow for proper standing time. Or, since the holidays are rapidly approaching, you might wrap the liqueur along with a tag that says: "To enjoy after the new year...."

Whether under the tree or on the table, home-baked goods are always part of the holiday tradition. Made with a spice cake mix, the Ginger Pear Cakes with Pistachios are baked in mini-loaf pans and topped with Ginger Pear Icing. A great timesaving treat, Pear Mincemeat Rolls are easy to prepare with the use of refrigerated crescent dinner rolls.

Another make-ahead gift is the Pistachio-Flavored Oil. Pistachios add a mild, subtle flavor and a delicate green hue to the vegetable oil. The seasoned oil should be stored in an airtight container for one to two weeks before use.

Kiwifruit adds tangy-sweet flavor and brilliant green color to holiday foods. Try the Kiwifruit Bar Cookies, enhanced with a touch of cinnamon and the texture of coconut. Perfect for a mealtime finale or a holiday dessert bar, the Kiwifruit Dessert Sauce means less time in the kitchen since it's prepared in the microwave. Be sure to have plenty to ladle over ice cream or pound cake.

PEAR LIQUEUR
1 can (16-ounces) bartlett pear halves or slices in heavy syrup
1/4 cup sugar
2 cups vodka

Combine pears, including liquid, and sugar in saucepan; bring to boil. Simmer 5 minutes or until sugar is completely dissolved. Cool; add vodka. Store mixture in covered glass container in cool place about six weeks. Line colander or sieve with cup-shaped coffee filter; place over bowl. Pour liquid through; reserve fruit for dessert topping. Pour liqueur into glass container; if desired, add one small canned pear half from reserved strained fruit. Store tightly covered. Makes about 2 cups. Recipe can be doubled.

Preparation Time: 15 minutes
Standing Time: About six weeks
Straining Time: About 30 minutes

PISTACHIO-FLAVORED OIL
1 cup coarsely chopped shelled pistachios

2 cups vegetable oil
Combine pistachios and 1/2 cup oil in saucepan. Cook and stir over medium heat about 1 minute or to 160 degrees; cool about 5 minutes. Stir in remaining oil. Pour into airtight container and cover; store one to two weeks. Strain, if desired. Line colander or sieve with cup-shaped coffee filter. Place over bowl; pour oil through. Pour strained oil into bottle or jar; add a few whole pistachios for garnish. Store, tightly covered, in refrigerator up to 3 months. Makes about 2 cups. Recipe can be doubled.

Preparation Time: Less than 30 minutes

Straining Time: (optional) 4 to 8 hours

Standing Time: 1 to 2 weeks

Tip: Substitute Pistachio-Flavored Oil for the oil in your favorite vinaigrette dressing.

KIWIFRUIT BAR COOKIES

1/4 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
4 (about 3-ounces each) kiwifruit, pared and pureed
1/3 cup honey
1 egg, beaten
1 1/2 cups flaked coconut, divided

Combine flour, sugar and cinnamon, cut in butter until texture of cornmeal. Press into bottom of 9-inch square baking pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes or until crust is lightly browned. Combine kiwifruit puree, honey, egg and 1 cup coconut; spread over baked crust. Sprinkle with remaining coconut. Bake 20 to 25 minutes longer until filling is set. Cool; cut in 18 bar cookies.

Preparation Time: About 30 minutes
Bake Time: About 40 to 45 minutes

GINGER PEAR CAKES WITH PISTACHIOS

1 can (16-ounces) bartlett pears
2/4 cup shelled pistachios, divided
1 package (18 3/4-ounces) spice cake mix
4 eggs
1/2 cup vegetable oil
1 package (3 1/2-ounces) instant vanilla pudding mix
1 teaspoon ground ginger
Ginger Pear Icing

Drain pears, reserving liquid; chop pears. Finely chop or grind 1/2 cup pistachios; coarsely chop remaining pistachios. Combine 1/2 cup reserved pear liquid with cake mix, eggs, oil, pudding mix,

Planning for an open house

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — The invitations have been mailed, most of the food prepared and the decorations are in place for the Christmas open house that has become a tradition for Barbara Allen and Jan McBride.

They began holding holiday open houses six years ago — McBride was so busy with volunteer work and Allen with teaching, they didn't have the chance to see a lot of their friends. By holding an open house, they could at least see everybody during the holidays.

Each made a list of friends to invite — some of whom the other knew and some she didn't. Now, as they meet people during the year, new names are added to the list which has swelled to include more than 100 names.

Some of their guests stop by long enough to have a warm drink and a cookie, and then return to their Christmas shopping. Others stay and visit for a couple of hours.

The open house is divided into morning and afternoon shifts. Rolls, pastries and cookies and so forth are set out for the first one, and vegetables, dips, chesscakes and more, for the second.

Allen advises anyone interested in doing a holiday open house to allow time for the cooking, so as not to have it all to do at the last minute. She and McBride start at Thanksgiving time or a little earlier. "You do need freezer space," she says. "And you need to pick up recipes that keep you a little better organized, which we have learned over doing it several years."

Along with all the yummy treats, they serve coffee and soft drinks, but just about everybody opts for the...

Give a health-conscious gift to others this holiday season

While December's cyclone of calories and cholesterol is attempting to wreak havoc on waistlines and arteries around the world, why not help rescue a victim with a health-conscious gift?

This doesn't have to be a bunch of celery and a talking scale. I found a surprising array of possible gifts while strolling through downtown and the malls.

In the Food Department, The old reliable fruit basket is always a good idea. Make your own and include some offbeat choices like kiwis, papaya and star fruit. A simple basket of crisp red apples is always welcome. You could include a lowfat yogurt based dip recipe.

I have a friend who gives wonderful loaves of homemade whole-wheat-molasses bread every year. Why not try some rye or dill recipes for variety. I find the bread such a relief from calorie-laden fruit cake

Jane Slickers
Food and Health

Jam is a nice tie-in with bread. If you don't have any homemade on hand, I found some elderberry, wild blackberry and huckleberry-apple, all made in Idaho.

Herbed vinegars such as purple basil and Italian potpourri with recipes for using them in salad dressing etc. are available locally.

Give popcorn with an air popper or unusual bowl for your favorite couch potato to munch through the rest of the football season.

Have some genuine Idaho potatoes sent to your heart attack prone relatives in a big city back East. You might include the recipe for Idaho Burritos, which are served at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's cafeteria. Simply top a baked potato as if it were a taco shell. I use ground turkey in my meat recipe and blenderized cottage cheese and yogurt instead of sour cream. I top the meat and mock-sour cream with salsa and shredded cheddar (a small amount).

A non-salt spice assortment in a basket may urge a hypertensive to cut down on salt. The health food store as well as the grocery stores carry many different brands.

Bean soup and chili mixes are available ready made. Several years ago I received as a gift a bean soup mixture that I liked so well I've been making and giving it ever since:

Make a holiday treat for friends

The tree is up. Reindeer are grazing on the lawn and I'm about to start my annual hunt for the 20 or so rolls of adhesive tape I bought on special in August.

The packages just have to be wrapped tight because college kids are just as curious as second graders — and they know lots more about "lifting edges."

Why on earth does someone want to know a surprise early? I don't. I learned that lesson once. My mom bought me a "month" doll for my birthday, and I found it weeks early. It totally ruined the day when it came. Never, never again. I relish good surprises too much.

Yes, there are a lot (never too many) of recipes for rich "goodies" this time of year. But now is the only time we can purchase the dipping chocolate and other supplies necessary to make them. So it's not only traditional, but for some recipes the only time we can try them.

Here are some goodies for you to surprise your family and friends:

COCONUT AND CHOCOLATE TRUFFLES

1 cup whipping cream
3/4 cup granulated sugar
12 tablespoons (1 1/2 cups) butter
3 1/2 pounds milk chocolate (or light dipping chocolate), chopped into smallish pieces
1/4 cup rum, Triple Sec, Kahlua or

Grand Marnier (or use about 1/2 teaspoon of extract)
1 1/2 cups coconut
2 pounds dark chocolate, also chopped into smallish pieces

Spread the coconut on a baking sheet and toast it in a 350 degree oven. Watch carefully as it only takes minutes. Remove and set aside.

Mix the cream, sugar and butter in a heavy bottom saucepan and bring to a boil. Remove from the heat and mix in the chopped milk chocolate, liquor and coconut.

Cover and let cool to room temperature. Now put this in your mixer bowl and beat for at least 3 minutes. Refrigerate overnight if possible.

Low-fat desserts to help get through the cheating season

The Washington Post

Now that the holidays — notorious for eating cheating — are upon us, the Washington Hospital Center's HeartCare center has devised, and compiled a dozen low-fat desserts (examples follow) in celebration of a heart-healthy season.

Recipes will be distributed to interested participating restaurants, according to the center's Clare Fiore, and can be obtained by sending $3.50 to Office of Public Affairs, Washington Hospital Center, 110 Irving St. NW, Washington D.C. 20010.

LACE COOKIES

- Makes seven dozen cookies
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/3 cup softened margarine
- 1/4 cup frozen egg substitute, thawed
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
- 1/4 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 cup oatmeal
- 3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
- Line cookie sheets with aluminum foil. Mix all ingredients well. Drop by 1/2 teaspoons, two inches apart on the foil-lined sheets. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 6 to 10 minutes or until light brown. Allow to cool on the foil before peeling cookies off.

SPICED BREAD PUDDING

- 10 to 12 servings
- FOR THE PUDDING:
- 16-inch loaf of fresh Italian bread
- 1/2 cup English walnuts, chopped
- 1/2 cup raisins
- 1 1/4 cups frozen egg substitute, thawed
- 1 quart skim milk
- 2 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 1/2 teaspoons cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

HONEY-BRANDIED SAUCE

- (optional)
- 1/4 cup nonfat plain yogurt
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/4 teaspoon cardamom
- 1 tablespoon honey
- 1 tablespoon brandy
- 1/4 cup frozen egg substitute, thawed
- Lightly oil a 2-quart shallow rectangular baking dish with non-stick spray.

Remove the ends of the bread so it measures 14 inches. Cut into half-inch thick slices. Arrange half the bread slices over the bottom of the baking dish. Sprinkle with walnuts and raisins.

In a separate, medium bowl, beat the egg substitute, milk, sugar, cinnamon, nutmeg and vanilla until well blended. Pour half of this mixture over the bread in the baking dish. Cover with the remaining bread and pour the other half of the milk mixture over all. Use a clean dish of equal size on top of the pudding as a weight, to allow the bread to absorb the liquid. Let stand for 10 minutes.

Put the baking dish into a larger pan and place in the oven. Fill the outer pan with water to within 1/4 inch of the top of the baking dish. Bake in a 350-degree oven, uncovered, until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean. Serve warm, with sauce if desired.

To make honey-branded sauce: In a small saucepan, mix the first five ingredients. Cook, stirring constantly, over medium heat, until just before it boils. In a small bowl, mix some of the hot liquid with egg substitute. Return to pan, stir over very low heat. Do not boil.

waxed paper and form this chocolate mixture into balls. Make them pretty uniform, like 1-or 2-inch size (this depends on how many you want) and place on the sheets and again refrigerate for at least one hour this time.

Melt the dark chocolate in the top of a double-boiler over hot (not boiling) water, cool a bit and put a couple of tablespoons in your left palm (get someone else to answer the telephone) and take one of the prepared balls in the other and swish between your palms until coated. Place back on the waxed paper and keep candies refrigerated before and after coating.

The candies should be given directly and not mailed, as they need to be refrigerated until served. This makes 12-13 dozen.

Now for a good, fast recipe from the Cassia County Home Economist's bulletin a couple of years back.

MICROWAVE CHOCOLATE CHIP FUDGE

1 and 1/3 cups (14-ounce can) sweetened condensed milk (usually the one in your market is Borden's Eagle Brand, don't use evaporated milk)

Put one pound of the assortment in a plastic bag with the following recipe:

Wash and soak 2 cups bean mixture — drain.
Add ham bone or hock or ham pieces. As little salt as possible to taste, 3 quarts water, 1 stalk celery, 3 bay leaves, 1/2 teaspoon thyme, 1 tablespoon of parsley.

Simmer covered 4 1/2 to 5 hours adding water as needed.

Add: 1 can tomatoes, 2 medium onions (chopped), 2 cloves garlic (minced), 1/2 teaspoon red pepper and 1/2 teaspoon of black pepper. Cook uncovered 1 hour until creamy.

(At this point I usually clean out my vegetable bin in the refrigerator. Carrots, green peppers, more celery, etc. make nice additions to the soup.)

Add: Slices of chicken or lean ham. Cook until meat is done. Top with parsley and shredded Parme-

2 cups (12-ounce package semi-sweet chocolate chips
1/2 cup chopped nuts (optional)
1 teaspoon vanilla
Combine the sweetened condensed milk and chocolate chips in medium micro-proof bowl. Microwave on high about 1 to 1 1/2 minutes, or until mixture is melted and smooth when stirred.

Add chopped nuts and vanilla. Spread in 8-inch buttered pan. Chill until firm and cut into squares.
Another truffle recipe, this time a bit easier is:

EASY CREAM-CHEESE TRUFFLES

1 (8-ounce) package cream cheese, softened
5 (1-ounce) squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
1 teaspoon vanilla
chopped, toasted nuts
cocoa
Gradually add 4 cups of powdered sugar to cream cheese, mixing well after each addition. Add chocolate and vanilla and mix well. Chill several hours. Shape into 1-inch balls and roll them in almonds, cocoa or more powdered sugar. Chill. Makes about 4 dozen.

Now to break from chocolate, here's a good recipe for peanut brittle.

MICROWAVE PEANUT BRITTLE

1 cup raw peanuts
1/2 cup white corn syrup
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
In a 1-quart glass bowl, mix the peanuts, sugar, corn syrup and salt. Microwave for 7 to 8 minutes, stirring well after 4 minutes.
Add butter and stir well. Microwave again for 2-3 minutes, or until peanuts are golden brown.

Watch carefully, do not overcook. Quickly stir in baking soda and vanilla and mix well. Pour onto greased cookie sheet. As soon as it begins to set stretch out with forks and fingers until very thin. Stretch until it appears to be peanuts held together in spun sugar!
Cool and break into pieces.
Enjoy!

san cheese.
You could put a bag of this in a stockpot or include a set of soup mixes.

This makes enough for 16 bags of beans.

I always liked lego kits and chemistry sets for gifts. Now I like to give food kits. A Chinese kit could include a set of utensils and some low salt soy sauce, a set of chopsticks or a wok (if you're a big spender).

My pizza kit includes a perforated pan which insures a crisp crust and a pizza cutter.

My salad kit includes a salad spinner to insure crisp greens, a specialty vinegar and maybe a mushroom brush.

I'm sure your imagination will spur other ideas.

In the Appliance Department: There seems to be no end to the gadgets for food preparation. You could start with a garlic press and a bottle of mouthwash for a stocking stuffer. From there you can go to rice steamers, yogurt makers, juicers, food processors, heavy duty mixers and probably the ultimate appliance for this year — the Panasonic Bread Maker for $299.95. It does all the work, except measuring the ingredients. You could set the timer and wake up to the smell of baking bread on Christmas morning, if your children's shrieks and squeals don't wake you first.

I like to let people know I still have a sense of humor about food by tucking a chocolate truffle or bag of M&M's in food baskets. How about giving some walking shoes stuffed with a Sniekers bar or sneak a chocolate Santa into the pocket of a pair of running shorts.

Don't forget to leave a treat for everyone's favorite overeater. We will be leaving Santa a bottle of Perrier.

Using the right size egg for the recipe

RASPBERRY CREAM CHEESE COFFEE CAKE
Serves about 16
2/4 cups flour
3/4 cup sugar
1/4 cup butter
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup dairy sour cream
1 egg
1 teaspoon almond extract
One (8-ounce) package cream cheese, softened
1/4 cup sugar
1 egg
1/2 cup raspberry preserves
1/2 cup sliced almonds
Heat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour the bottom and sides of a 9- or 10-inch springform pan. Lightly spoon flour into a measuring cup and level off. In a large bowl, combine flour and 3/4 cup sugar.
Using a pastry blender or fork, cut in margarine until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. (She uses a food processor for this.) Reserve 1 cup of the crumb mixture. To the remaining crumb mixture add the baking powder, baking soda, salt, sour cream, 1 egg and almond extract. Blend well. (She does this with her food processor, too.) Spread batter over the bottom and 2-inches up the sides of the prepared pan. The batter should be about 1/4-inch thick on the sides. In a small bowl, combine the cream cheese, 1/4 cup sugar and 1 egg. Blend well. Pour over batter in pan. Carefully spoon preserves evenly over the cheese filling. In a small bowl, combine 1 cup of the reserved crumb mixture and sliced almonds. Sprinkle over the top of the cream cheese mixture. Bake at 350 degrees for 45-50 minutes, or until cream cheese filling is set and crust is a deep golden brown. Cool for 15 minutes, and then remove the sides of the pan. This may be served warm or cool. Cut into wedges. Refrigerate leftovers.
"The instructions are long, but it's real easy to make," she says.
The next recipe is one that Allen's mom used to make. It's like a German spritz, except it's a lot more involved than a lot of the simple ones now," she says.

on ungreased cookie sheet. Decorate as desired. Bake at 375 degrees for 8-12 minutes.
"That's probably my family's favorite cookie," Allen says. "So I have to make them early and hurry up and freeze them, and put signs on that say 'Do not touch,' or they're gone."
And the following is the favorite of McBride's children. She, too, tries to get these baked and put in the freezer when the kids are not home. "Otherwise they'd eat it all," she says. "And I'd never have anything for the coffee!"

By JOAN DRAKE
Los Angeles Times

Q: When a recipe calls for an egg, does it mean medium, large or extra large? There are times when I have very small eggs in the refrigerator and I wonder if I should use two. Just how much difference is there between the sizes of eggs?
A: Most recipes are developed using large eggs.

The U.S. Dept. of Agriculture Home and Garden Bulletin No. 103, "Eggs in Family Meals — A Guide for Consumers" says, "Substitution of another size often makes little difference in results. In some recipes, however, (sponge and angel food cakes, for example) the proportion of egg to other ingredients is of special importance. For these recipes, it may be necessary to increase the number of eggs if you are using a smaller size." Common market sizes and minimum weight per dozen are:

Jumbo — 30 ounces
Extra large — 27 ounces
Large — 24 ounces
Medium — 21 ounces
Small — 18 ounces
Peewee — 15 ounces
One large egg equals approximately three tablespoons volume. Substitute the same number of extra large, medium or small eggs.

Two large eggs equals approximately one-quarter cup plus two tablespoons volume. Substitute the same number of extra large or medium eggs for three small eggs.
Three large eggs equals approximately one-half cup plus two tablespoons volume. Substitute three extra large eggs, four medium eggs or four small eggs.

SANDWICH COOKIES
Makes about 5 dozen
1 cup soft butter
1/2 cup whipping cream
2 cups all purpose flour
Grated sugar
Mix thoroughly the butter, the cream and the flour. Cover and chill in refrigerator. Heat oven to 375 degrees, and after the dough has been chilled, roll out about 1/8 of it at a time. Keep the rest refrigerated until it is to be rolled out.
Roll out to 1/8-inch thickness on a floured board or pastry cloth. Then cut dough into 1 1/2-inch circles. Transfer these rounds, using a spatula, onto a piece of waxed paper that is covered with granulated sugar. Turn the cookies over so they are sugared on both sides. Place on an ungreased cookie sheet and prick with a fork, all the way through each cookie, as with a pie crust — about four times. Bake 7-9 minutes, or until set, but not real brown. Cool. Frost one side with creamy filling, about 1/16-1/8-inch-thick, and then put top on to make a sandwich.

CREAMY FILLING
Cream:
about 1/4 cup soft butter
3/4 cup confectioners sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
Using mixer, beat until smooth and fluffy. She divides the dough and colors half with red and half with green food coloring, for Christmas.
Because this is quite time-consuming, she often makes the cookies early, and puts them in the freezer, then when it's close to the day of the open house, she frosts and refrigerates them.
"The cookies themselves are like a real flaky pie dough, and they really have a flavor of their own," she says. "They're very rich."
The next recipe, for gingerbread, is one that serves a dual purpose. It may be eaten, or used as tree decor.

GINGERBREAD
Cream:
1 cup shortening (not margarine)
1 cup granulated sugar
Then add in:
1 egg
1 cup molasses
1 tablespoon vinegar
Beat, and then add:
5 cups flour, one at a time
1/2 teaspoon soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves
Chill for at least 3 hours. Roll to about 1/8- to 1/4-inch, no thicker. Cut into gingerbread men or other desired shapes, and place on Teflon-coated or greased cookie sheet, and bake at 375 degrees for 6 minutes.
In addition to these recipes, they serve homemade cheese cake, brownies, fudge, spiced nuts, lemon bars, cheese, fruit and other good things. "We buy chocolate pretzels," Alley says. "A few things we splurge and buy. Most of it we like to make."

Improper watering can cause poor indoor plant growth

Improper watering is perhaps the most common cause of poor indoor plant growth. Although plants can be damaged most quickly by not enough water, too frequent watering is a much more common cause of deterioration and eventual death. This is particularly true at this time of year when plants are growing slowly because of low light conditions. Plant roots need oxygen supplied by the soil air as much as they need moisture for good growth. When a pot is watered, all the pore spaces in the soil are temporarily filled with water. It may require several hours for the water to drain from the larger pores and be replaced by air. Pots without adequate drainage for no drainage at all) are very easily over-watered. Potting soils are coarse, lighter and have larger pores than outdoor soils in order to improve drainage. Healthy plants will also quickly take up some of the moisture in the soil, leaving more room for air. Most people prefer to water plants by the calendar. When they buy or receive a new plant, the most common question is, "How often should it be watered?" The frequency of watering depends upon many factors such as the size of the pot in relation to the size of the plant. A large plant in a small pot will need more frequent watering than a small plant in a large pot. Fast growing plants will require more water than those which grow slowly. Temperature and humidity are also important factors. They influence the amount of water needed for transpiration. Plants evaporate air from their leaf pores in order to cool themselves. This process is called transpiration. Because of all these factors as well as differences in location, it is not wise to water all plants at the same calendar intervals. Each plant should be checked individually for its water needs. The best way to determine when a plant needs water is to feel the top of the soil with your finger. The best time to water most plants is when the soil begins to dry on top. If you wait until the entire soil dries out, the leaves will wilt or droop. Most plants will recover from slight, temporary wilting. However, long repeated wilting is not good for them. With experience, you can tell when soil is drying out by the change in color. Dry soils are lighter in color than wet ones. However, each soil has its own relative color. Because of different ingredients, some potting soils are much darker than others. A dark colored soil can look darker when dry than some light colored soils when they are wet. When watering plants always apply enough water so that a little drains from the bottom of the pot.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

Designers give hints for decorating Christmas trees

The New York Daily News

NEW YORK — Decorating the tree is a highlight of the holidays. While a collection of traditional ornaments brings with it the charm of recognition, a slightly different look can be fun for a change. At this week's 100 Trees benefit, for instance, Malcolm Forbes hung a tree with $1 and $5 bills. Tiffany wired its pretty blue-glass boxes to a fir and Baccarat scattered tiny crystal figurines all over its Yule branches. Seeking equally inventive but less costly decorations, we asked three designers to create trees that would easily adapt to any-holiday decor.

Lynn Hollyn celebrates a country Christmas in New York. Strands of cranberries (stringing them is a great activity for children, she notes) and cornucopias add homespun charm. To make the cornucopias, simply draw a circle on heavy white or colored paper, cut a radius into the center and overlap, making a cone shape, and glue it together. The cornucopias can be decorated with lace doilies, feathers, pictures cut from magazines and miniature "pearls." Add a ribbon handle to attach it to the tree. If you wish, fill the cornucopias with berries and fruit that have been sprayed so they'll last a few weeks, and silk or dried flowers.

Use ribbons to hang candy canes, little knitted stockings, crocheted or paper snowflakes, heart-shaped cookie cutters and Shaker boxes on the tree. For a warm feeling, mix strands of electric candles with traditional bulb lights. Under the tree, instead of piling the traditional assortment of wrapped packages, Hollyn places a collection of handcrafted toys.

With space at a premium, Samuel Botero creates a glittering pear and partridge tree, sized to fit the typical New York apartment. He starts with a 24 to 30-inch-high Styrofoam cone to which he fastens pears using long bamboo skewers. He then sprays bright gold paint over all and sets the glided "tree" on a wooden fruit crate.

Next, small partridges, available where tree ornaments are sold, are sprayed silver and wired to the skewers. Pine cones and acorns, sprayed copper, fill in the gaps. More golden pears placed on the edges of the crate make it look as if this sparkling tree is growing out of the wooden box.

A romantic at heart, Barbara Southerland chooses fresh flowers and silk ribbons for an ethereal-looking tree. Pale pink roses, each in a separate flower vial (available at florists and in the Flower District) so they'll last, are wired to the tree, while baby's-breath is tucked into the branches (it doesn't have to be wired to stay, says Southerland).

The bows are made from wired-edged ribbons so they retain their shape. Southerland chooses white with gold edges and uses florist's wire to affix the bows to the tree.

The soft colors provide a welcome change from traditional bright Christmas colors, she says. To continue the mood, she covers the base of the tree in a pale striped silk.

Old armoires get new life as home entertainment centers

The Baltimore Sun

BALTIMORE — High-tech electronic wizardry meets age-old wood craftsmanship. That is the news in home entertainment center design. Until the advent of the videocassette recorder, says Bert Anderson, the owner of Antique Imports in Frederick, Md., the market for state-of-the-art armoires, wardrobes and cupboards was worse than flat. The final resting place of many a hulking mahogany or walnut unit, he said, was a cabinetmaker's scrap pile or worse — the dump or a firepile.

Now sales are booming. But rarely do buyers intend, as their ancestors did, to use the restored linen presses, chests and closets to stow embroidered linens, company-coming silver or overcoats and hats. Most often, they want it converted to hold the television, VCR, computer, compact disc player and all of the accoutrements.

Thanks to electronic technology, Anderson said, fine cabinets of eras past "have a new lease on life." "What happened was people found out that once they bought a VCR, a monitor and cassettes and all the pieces, there is no attractive way to store all of it," he said. "The demand for armoires really developed after VCRs came on the market. I'd say, about seven or eight years ago." "I didn't care to see the components all around the room," said Stephanie Hoyle of Baltimore. "It was for the aesthetics," she explained, that the Hoyle family bought an antique pine wardrobe renovated to hold their record player, receiver, CD player and television.

Converted by Gaines McHale Antiques Ltd. here, the cabinet has doors that open on hinges and slide away into recesses built along the sides of the piece. "When you close the doors, the components are completely camouflaged," she said.

Jean McHale of the Gaines McHale stores attributes the growing popularity of converted armoires and closets as much to the flexible modern lifestyle as to improving electronics.

"There are a lot of houses that still don't have enough storage space," she said. "Some people want an attractive piece that serves several functions."

In a three-part, close-style armoire, for example, one compartment may become a bed, another a television stand, the third a coat closet. In one of Gaines McHale's recent conversions, no space in the unit was left wasted; a fold-down door spanning the length of the cabinet along its base uncovers a hidden wine rack.

What is old is new again in these renovated pieces, some massive enough to serve as coat closets for private clubs or restaurants. What of their value as antiques once doors are removed and holes are drilled to accommodate light fixtures, stereo cords and even plumbing for wet-bar sinks?

"I don't like to mess up an antique," Ms. McHale said. "But sometimes that is what the customer wants."

Permanent conversions change the value of a piece along with its function, the dealers said.

But that is not necessarily a negative. Of course, it would be unwise to tamper with a rare or special armoire purchased for its investment value. However, a piece that is not historically unique or noted for its design and workmanship may be improved in value by giving it a household function, Anderson said.

He described an Empire-style chest of drawers, of good quality but neither a standout nor a rarity for its age or condition. It might sell, as is, for about $650. Gutted, it was rebuilt to open from the top. Pulling the lid up uncovers a hidden, swiveling platform for holding a television set or computer. Push the top closed, and the piece looks again like a chest of drawers. The piece had no more value as an antique chest, but as a stand for electronic equipment, its value surpassed $1,000.

At the other end of the spectrum are designs that preserve as much as possible of the original cabinet. These often increase the piece's practical worth, and thereby, give it greater market value, Anderson said.

In a $5,900 converted mahogany day bar on display in the store, Anderson pointed out the preservation-oriented construction details. The mirrors, brass, glassware racks, lighting fixtures and glass shelves were not installed in the cabinet's walls. All were attached to wooden "shells" or liners inserted discreetly into each compartment.

"The consensus is," he said, "if the design is sensitive to the cabinet, if the changes are not irreversible, then it wouldn't hurt the value."

An advantage of that method is its flexibility. Recently, a piece converted a few years ago into a bar was returned to the Antique Imports workshop for transformation into an entertainment center. The liners come out, and a re-conversion is under way.

If the original armoire is built in such a way that its back can be removed, Anderson said, sometimes his cabinetmakers can replace it with a false back. That way, at a future date, the owner may rebuild the piece to its original form. And the good wood is spared disfiguring drilling, nailing and cutting.

Letters of thanks

Mail carrier thanks customers on route
 As the Christmas season approaches and the end of another year, I would like to thank all of the postal customers on the route that I serve for the U.S. Postal Service for their support and use of postal services. We try hard to provide the American public with the best mailing service for the very best price. We deliver an unmatched amount of mail each year with speed and efficiency that we can be proud of.
 I would also like to note for our would-be competitors that they cannot hope to come even remotely close to matching our records of mail delivered and all of the other services we provide every day. We're the Postal Service. We Deliver!

Man gives thanks for staff's work
 My sincere appreciation for Terrill Williams and Andy Arenz. They put a lot of time and effort into the article.
 My first reaction to Terrill's request was to say "no." But I realized that I had a job to do.
 It was a bit embarrassing, but I'll survive.
 If it encourages others to participate in some "barn raising," it will all be worth while.
 My sincere thanks and appreciation to your paper and staff.

Chorale member gives thanks for coverage
 I have just finished reading the feature article in the paper about the Magic Valley Chorale's presentation of Handel's Messiah. I am very sure that your fine coverage will increase our attendance this Sunday over what we would have had without it.
 It was a fine article, and I am certain that everyone in the Chorale and Orchestra was very pleased to see it. Our hard work will not go unrewarded, and you won't either, as folks from all over the valley gather to celebrate the true meaning of Christmas by performing in and listening to this beautiful classic.

 We especially appreciate the header on the front page that called attention to the article, as well as your sending a photographer to our rehearsal. Our public relations coordinator, Cheryl Turoczy, has done an outstanding job, as well.

Participant thanks CSI, teacher for class
 I am writing this letter in appreciation for the great place CSI furnishes us to walk in at their gym and our neat teacher, Jan Mittleider.
 She makes it so interesting we don't mind the hard work we get with the aerobics. I am 76. Some are in their 80's. Some are younger.
 The day of the black ice, Dec. 7, most of all of us checked in. We were surprised to see each other because it was so bad, our teacher was surprised, too. There are over a hundred of us, men and women, that enjoy this great place. We have one man, Mr. Crane, who will be 89 in March, started training when he was 70, he is the oldest living competitor in senior national track and field events. We are real proud of each other.

Music lover compliments club for presentation
 Twin Falls Music Club presented, "Amahl and the Night Visitors," Dec. 8-10, at O'Leary Auditorium. I would like to compliment all the operatic contributions, musical accompaniment, dancing skill, and production organization.
 "Amahl" was under the superb direction of Balthasar Buhidar. His professional manners and depth of knowledge was appreciated by cast members, production staff, and audience.
 Hopefully, the Twin Falls Music Club will have the energy, time, and support to continue spreading Christmas spirit through the universal language of music.

BYU star apologizes for comments

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Michael Smith, Brigham Young's leading scorer, apologized Tuesday for comments critical of his coaches during and after the Cougars' 70-69 loss to St. Mary's.

Smith was benched for eight minutes during the Cougar Classic final Saturday night after shouting "Shut up" at the BYU coaching staff.

Following the game, Smith also leveled criticism at the coaches, saying that after he had been beaten on a rebound, one of the coaches had shouted something "derogatory" to him and he had responded by shouting back at the bench.

"I want to publicly apologize to the coaches, my teammates and Brigham Young University for my actions in the game against St. Mary's, and for the words I gave to the reporters after the ball game. The coach is going to be part of the team and I'm going to do the best for our team," Smith said in a signed statement released by the school's sports information office.

BYU Coach LaDell Andersen met with Smith Tuesday morning for the first time since the game. He considered a spokesman Tuesday night with Smith's statement and he said the matter closed.

On Monday, Andersen said that, to his recollection, assistant coach Carl Ingersoll had merely yelled, "Box out, Mike, box out." The instruction drew Smith's heated response and led to his benching.

Denver's Elway to undergo surgery

DENVER (AP) — Denver Broncos quarterback John Elway will undergo surgery on his right elbow next week — his third post-season operation in six years.

Elway said Monday that doctors plan to remove the bursa sac in his elbow after completion of the 1988 season.

"They're probably going to take it out next Monday or Tuesday," he said.

Elway has been bothered by chronic inflammation of the bursa sac, which helps lubricate the elbow of his throwing arm. The injury has disrupted his practice schedule, but Elway insisted it hasn't affected his throwing motion.

Pittsburgh settles Parker-drug suit

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates said Tuesday they have settled a federal court lawsuit against Oakland A's outfielder Dave Parker involving Parker's admitted use of cocaine during his years with the Pirates.

The Pirates filed a lawsuit against Parker in 1986 in which the Pirates sought to void the contract signed in 1979 under which the club was obligated to make deferred payments to Parker of approximately $5.3 million.

The lawsuit was scheduled to go to trial in U.S. District Court in Pittsburgh on Feb. 6, 1989.

Pirates spokesman Rick Cerrone said the terms of the out-of-court settlement would be kept confidential by mutual agreement.

Parker, an all-star outfielder, played with the Pirates from 1973 to 1987, when he went to the Cincinnati Reds as a free agent.

#17 Seton Hall slays Scarlet Knights, 96-70

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — John Morton scored seven straight points in a 17-2 first-half run Tuesday night as No. 17 Seton Hall re-imposed Rutgers of its woes a year ago with a 96-70 victory over the Scarlet Knights.

Seton Hall, 8-0, needed about four minutes to get untracked against the Scarlet Knights, 3-2, and even trailed 9-8 after Lee Peyer banked in a short jumper with 16:25 to go.

But suddenly everything started working for the Pirates of the Big East and stopped for the Scarlet Knights of the Atlantic 10, who had looked surprisingly good early in the season.

Darryl Walker hit his fourth layup of the game to start things and Morton followed with two free throws, a 15-foot jumper and a 3-pointer from the right side for a 17-9 lead.

After Craig Carter hit an off-balance shot in the lane for Rutgers, Walker drove the lane for a layup that started a streak of eight straight points. He ended it by putting in an offensive rebound for a 25-11 lead.

Seton Hall built its lead to as many as 21 points late in the first half on a Morton breakaway dunk, and stretched it to 29 points late in the second half.

Rutgers, coming off a 7-22 season that led to a coaching change and the hiring of Bob Weinstock, had managed to get within 11 points late in the first half.

However, Ramon Ramos scored eight points in a 12-5 run at the start of the second half and the Scarlet Knights never got close again.

Morton finished with 22 points, three below his career best. He also added a career-high 10 rebounds and seven assists.

Ramos had 18, all in the second half, and Walker, 11.

Carter led Rutgers with 11 and Tom Sava, who had been averaging 24.8 per game, had nine.
