Accord may exempt some water right holders

By The Times-News and The Associated Press

BOISE — Federal and state officials have reached an agreement that could mean 90,000 water right holders in the Snake River basin, adjudication will not have to file claims to protect their rights.

The agreement, announced Tuesday afternoon, caps months of negotiation among the Idaho Department of Water Resources, U.S. Justice Department and the attorney general's office. It says owners of domestic or stock-water wells do not have to file.

The agreement still must be approved by 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt, who is presiding over the proceedings, said R. Keith Higginson, director of the Water Resources Department. An "expedited hearing" on the agreement has been scheduled in January.

The department will recommend approval of the agreement to the court, Higginson said.

Claims of less than 13,000 gallons a day, which do not require a permit under Idaho law, will remain a part of the effort to get court rulings on the basin's water rights, and will retain the right to seek full adjudication later.

Officials expected up to 140,000 water right claims to be filed in a court proceeding that could take more than 10 years and cost more than $20 million. About 14,000 of an expected 90,000 domestic and stock-water claims, already have been filed.

"This agreement will significantly reduce the time and great expense of adjudicating what are essentially non-consumptive water rights, yet it still provides that all water users are party to the adjudication," Higginson said.

When the process was started last year, the department asked that small water right holders be exempt because of the massive filings that would be required. Those who file have to pay $25.

Hurlbutt ruled that the federal McCarran Amendment required stockwater and domestic users to be included. The McCarran Amendment allows the federal government to be sued by states in water rights cases.

"This procedure satisfied requirements of the McCarran Amendment" because "all claimants initially are joined in the adjudication and provisions are made to allow determination of small domestic and stock-water users at a later date as the need to do so arises," Higginson said.

Babcock, Brizee capture seats in CSI trustee election

TWIN FALLS — Incumbent William Babcock hung onto his College of Southern Idaho board seat handily Tuesday, while newcomer Donna Brizee ran away from seven opponents to win the open position in the college's trustee election.

"This is not a victory for me," Babcock said. "It's a victory for the people of Magic Valley and for the board of trustees that has served during the last six years."

Despite the unprecedented field of 13 candidates split between the two races, both candidates won majorities.

Babcock said he was concerned about a possible backlash from the $7 million building levy that failed this fall. But he said his margin of victory shows that people are in agreement with what the board has been doing.

"And we've been doing a hell of a job," he added.

According to preliminary figures, Babcock earned 1,220 votes, or 50.5 percent of the vote, in his five-candidate race. Lloyd Walker earned the runner-up title with about 17 percent of the total, or 443 votes.

Babcock won in every polling place except Castleford, where he and Walker tied with 12

$150 million available to start improving nuclear plant safety

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House said Tuesday that $150 million of unspent Energy Department funds "can be used immediately to begin whatever work is necessary to improve the safety conditions" at plants producing nuclear weapons.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater was asked about a Dec. 9 letter by Energy Secretary John S. Herrington saying that some plants might have to close because of a $360 million shortfall in funds needed for safety improvements.

White House chief of staff Kenneth N. Duberstein disagreed with Herrington's assessment in an interview on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" program Sunday, saying the necessary money had been found in unobligated funds of the department.

Fitzwater said the issue had been resolved in the budget for the 1990 fiscal year, beginning next Oct. 1.

that President Reagan will submit to Congress on Jan. 9.

The budget will include $300 million in new money for safety, environmental cleanup and building of new facilities as it relates to nuclear processing plants, Fitzwater said.

He said the Energy Department asked for a supplemental appropriation of $360 million for the current fiscal year, "and it was our judgment

Inflation, U.S. economic growth slow

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Inflation slowed to an annual rate of 3 percent last month and economic growth did the same in the third quarter, the government said Tuesday.

It disclosed those facts in reports that eased fears an overheating economy is about to trigger a wage-price spiral.

Seasonally adjusted consumer prices rose just 0.25 percent in November compared with a 0.4 percent increase in October, the Labor Department said. Before the seasonal adjustments, prices rose only 0.1 percent.

Clothing prices that had jumped 4 percent in September and October with the introduction of fall and winter fashions dipped 0.3 percent last month. And food prices showed no increase in November for the first time since February.

Analysts who had been seeing harbingers of inflation everywhere in recent economic data described as "amazing" and "remarkable" the continued lack of it in the government's monthly report on the Consumer Price Index.

The new figures slowed the annual inflation rate from 4.6 percent for the first 10 months of the year to 4.4 percent for the first 11 months, the same as it was for all of 1987.

With only December left, another month similar to November could enable the Reagan administration to finish its last year in office meeting its inflation target of 4.3 percent for 1988.

Meanwhile Tuesday, the Commerce Department reported that the non-farm economy grew at an annual

Boy's letter to Santa brings mom wheelchair

The Associated Press

BANNING, Calif. — A 10-year-old boy whose Christmas letter so pleased Santa Claus that he was able to decorate his apartment wrote Santa Claus a letter 100 elves couldn't ignore.

"The letter said: 'The only gift I would like is an electric wheelchair for my mom. She can't walk and her hands are too weak for the one we have. I would love to see her outside without help and watch me play. Can you help me with my wish? Love, John F. Wongoun.'

Victoria Coslett, 39, was unaware that her son wrote the letter. She learned about it Monday when a postal worker dressed as Santa Claus arrived at her apartment laden with presents — including a gift certificate for a motorized wheelchair. Both mom and son were partially disabled in a 1984 traffic accident.

"The 100 elves who interceded for Santa and handled John's request work at the U.S. Postal Service in Palm Springs.

"We receive about 1,000 letters a year to Santa Claus," said Postmaster Linda Avalos. "The staff answers each and every one. But this is the first time we've been able to do more than just write back."

The wheelchair was donated by an Eastern manufacturer contacted by All Active Mobility, a Riverside organization that works with the handicapped. The postal workers contributed $375 for its upkeep. A grocery store chipped in for Christmas dinner. And there were presents for John too.

But John said: "The wheelchair is the best of all."

After the 1981 accident, Ms. Coslett was left with herniated discs in her lower back. John, who attends a public school for disabled children, was partially brain damaged and still suffers seizures and memory lapses. He also suffers from juvenile arthritis.

"He's been through a lot," Ms. Coslett said. "My husband left me in 1984 and we stayed at the Salvation Army for three weeks in Texas. They gave us a bus ticket out here. But by the time we got

Sullivan views on abortion delay selection

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — George Bush's aides scrambled Tuesday to contain a sudden outburst over the abortion views of Louis W. Sullivan, an Atlanta educator who is the leading contender for health and human services secretary.

The president-elect did announce two other appointments — former Nevada Sen. Paul Laxalt and former Ohio Rep. Thomas L. Ashley to the National Economic Commission — but did so in writing and didn't face reporters' questions about Sullivan.

He canceled a session to name additional Cabinet choices.

Pro-choice abortion remarks attributed to Sullivan, president of the Morehouse School of Medicine, brought protests from anti-abortion groups and threw up an obstacle to his selection as HHS chief, Bush transition and congressional sources said.

Transition officials, stressing privately that Bush had not formally offered Sullivan the post, denied publicly that his remarks over the weekend in an interview with the Atlanta Journal and Constitution had caused any delay in the appointment.

al rate of only 3 percent in the third quarter compared with what was generally acknowledged as an overheated rate of 3.9 percent last spring.

The effects of the drought, however, limited overall GNP growth to 2.5 percent, in line with the Federal Reserve Board's non-inflationary growth target of 2 percent to 2.5 percent.

Preliminary reports had put the annual non-farm growth rate at 3.2 percent and total GNP growth at 2.6 percent in the third quarter. Economists said the downward revisions were due primarily to larger declines in government spending and the drought having less overall impact than previously believed.

Corporate profits before taxes rose 2.6 percent in the July-September quarter of $313.9 billion, following 6.9 percent jump in the second quarter. After taxes, corporations reported their profits rising 3.9 percent in the third quarter compared with 8.9 percent last spring.

The November increases raised the Consumer Price Index to 120.3, meaning that a market basket of goods costing $100 in a 1982-84 base period would have cost $120.30 last month, a time more than in October and $1.40 more than in November 1987.

Housing and shelter costs, including residential rents, rose 0.3 percent in November, the same pace they have maintained over the past nine months.

Natural gas and electric rates were up 1.8 percent and 0.1 percent, respectively, from October, more than offsetting a 2 percent drop in prices for home heating oil, the government said. The November decrease was the sixth in a row for heating oil, now priced 10.8 percent below where it was last spring.

Seasonally adjusted gasoline prices were unchanged from October, remaining 0.2 percent less than they were at the end of last year and 2.1 percent below their peak level of March 1981.

Consumer prices for items other than food, shelter and energy rose an average 0.2 percent in November after jumping 0.7 percent in October.

New-car prices, which has risen more than one percentage point in September and October, declined by 0.2 percent last month in reflect the introduction of rebates on some of the new 1989 models.

Brizee, who will be the board's first female member, collected 1,384 votes, or 51.8 percent of the total. George W. "Bill" Clark was second with 420 votes, or 15.7 percent.

Brizee won at every polling center except Hollister, where Hollister resident Bill Loughmiller took 4 of 76 votes, and in Jerome, where Clark carried his hometown with 146 of 224 votes. She sprinted through the three Twin Falls polling centers, gathering close to 700 votes at each location while none of her opponents surpassed the 70 mark.

Brizee's victory capped the most visibly vigorous campaign of any of the 13 candidates.

"I worked hard, partly because I'm a woman and wanted to show people I was serious about running," she said.

She was aided in the effort by Mark Stubbs, chairman of the Twin Falls County Republicans, who described himself as a "sounding board" for Brizee's campaign.

"What we wanted to do was emphasize her experience and show she has the authority to be a good trustee," Stubbs said. The campaign included the mailing of a brochure, about 1,000 telephone calls and newspaper and radio advertising.

Brizee said she didn't decide to enter the race until incumbent Robert Blastock announced he would retire after more than 20 years on the board. She said she has done many community service activities but wanted to do something that would have a long-term effect on the area.

Blastock said he thinks Brizee will be a strong asset on the board.

"Bob Blastock was a good board member and to replace him will be tough, but Donna will do a good job," he said.

"I feel gratified that the people

renfirmed their support for Bill Babcock and I think Donna has worked hard and has showed she has a vital interest in CSI," Chairman LeRoy Craig said.

(SI President Gerald Meyerhoefer said he was pleased with the voter turnout — 2,577 votes in one race, 2,551 in the other — the second highest for a trustee election in the college's history. He echoed Craig's sentiments about Babcock and said he is looking forward to working with Brizee.

Brizee said her first order of business as a board member will be to learn her duties and "get up to speed."

Babcock said the biggest issue Brizee and the other board members will face in 1990 will be trying to expand the college's taxing district to include all eight counties in the Magic Valley. It currently includes only Twin Falls and Jerome counties.

that that would be basically too little too late in the sense that we don't have any plans for a supplemental at this point.

Even if we did, it would be September or October, and therefore, what we suggested, was that money be transferred out of $900 million in unobligated balances that exist from fiscal '89," he said.

"And so that will be $150 million that can be used immediately to begin whatever work is necessary to improve the safety conditions at these plants."

Fitzwater also said, "I repeat the president's statement that no plant will be operated until it's safe, and that's why we thought it was crucial to get this money on the project early, and the supplemental is not a good way to go."

here we had only $2 to our name. All we had to eat was cereal for the first month.

Because Ms. Coslett could afford no presents on her disability pension check this year, John wrapped several empty boxes and put them under the family's Christmas tree.

Ms. Coslett said her son has always been selfless.

"We went to the mall the other day with a friend. I gave John $10 to buy something for himself. He went into a store and came out with a pair of earrings for me," Ms. Coslett said.

"When I asked him why he didn't buy a toy for himself, he said, 'You told me I could do anything I want with the money.'"

"It's been hard for him to believe in Santa Claus," Ms. Coslett said. "But I keep telling him he has to believe."

John said he did not expect an answer to his letter. "I thought I was the last person who would get something from Santa," he said.

Reagan, Gorbachev to trade greetings

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev are expected to exchange televised greetings on New Year's Day for the third time, the White House announced Tuesday.

Spokesman Martin Fitzwater said Reagan taped his message last week and Gorbachev is expected to submit a taped message to U.S. networks for their consideration soon.

Higginson said all water users still will be parties to the legal action.

"A small domestic and stock-water right claimant who elects not to participate in the adjudication at this time will retain the right to seek an adjudication of this right in the future through a special adjudication procedure," Higginson said.

Nevertheless, Higginson advised all domestic and stock-water users to file claims.

So far, the state has notified property owners in 17 counties about the adjudication, with another 21 counties scheduled to follow.

Under the new agreement, those who already have filed may withdraw their claims and get refunds of the $25 filing fee, he said, or they can continue with their claims so they will be listed when the decree is issued.

TMI waste heads for Idaho after a 6-month delay

BOISE (AP) — The 17th shipment of debris from the ill-fated Three Mile Island reactor is headed toward Idaho after a six-month delay.

Shipments were first delayed after engineers found a defective canister plug. When that problem was solved, engineers concluded that an on-ring seal in the cask could fail during extremely cold weather.

When the shipment is completed, 34 casks of debris will have been sent to Idaho since 1986. Each cask has seven canisters of material.

Shipments have been delayed since May because of technical problems with the canisters that hold the debris and the casks that protect the canisters during shipping.

al rate of only 3 percent in the third quarter compared with what was generally acknowledged as an overhauled rate of 3.9 percent last spring.

The effects of the drought, however, limited overall GNP growth to 2.6 percent in line with the Federal Reserve Board's non-inflationary growth target of 2 percent to 2.5 percent.

Preliminary reports had put the annual non-farm growth rate at 3.2 percent and total GNP growth at 2.6 percent in the third quarter. Economists said the downward revisions were due primarily to larger declines in government spending and the drought having less overall impact than previously believed.

Corporate profits before taxes rose 2.6 percent in the July-September quarter to $313.9 billion, following 6.9 percent jump in the second quarter. After taxes, corporations reported their profits rising 3.9 percent in the third quarter compared with 8.9 percent last spring.

The November increases raised the Consumer Price Index to 120.3, meaning that a market-basket of goods costing $100 in a 1982-84 base period would have cost $120.30 last month, a time more than in October and $4.30 more than in November 1987.

Housing and shelter costs, including residential rents, rose 0.3 percent in November, the same pace they have maintained over the past nine months.

Natural gas and electric rates were up 1.8 percent and 0.1 percent, respectively, from October, more than offsetting a 2.9 percent drop in prices for home heating oil, the government said. The November decrease was the sixth in a row for heating oil, now priced 10.8 percent below where it was last spring.

Seasonally adjusted gasoline prices were unchanged from October, remaining 0.2 percent less than they were at the end of last year and 28.1 percent below their peak level of March 1981.

Consumer prices for items other than food, shelter and energy rose an average 0.2 percent in November after jumping 0.7 percent in October.

New-car prices, which has risen more than one percentage point in September and October, declined by 0.2 percent last month in reflect the introduction of rebates on some of the new 1989 models.

Brizee, who will be the board's first female member, collected 1,391 votes, or 51.8 percent of the total. George W. "Bill" Clark was second with 1,203 votes, or 45.7 percent.

Brizee won at every polling center except Hollister, where Hollister resident Bill Laughmiller took 41 of 76 votes, and in Jerome, where Clark carried his hometown with 146 of 281 votes. She split through the three Twin Falls polling centers, gathering close to 300 votes at each location while none of her opponents surpassed the 70 mark.

Brizee's victory capped the most visibly vigorous campaign of any of the 13 candidates.

"I worked hard, partly because I'm a woman and wanted to show people I was serious about running," she said. "I was aided in the effort by Mark Stubbs, chairman of the Twin Falls County Republicans, who described himself as a "sounding board" for Brizee's campaign.

"What we wanted to do was emphasize her experience and show she has the authority to be a good trustee," Stubbs said. The campaign included the mailing of a brochure, about 1,000 telephone calls and newspaper and radio advertising.

Brizee said she didn't decide to enter the race until incumbent Robert Blastock announced he would retire after more than 20 years on the board. She said she has done many community service activities but wanted to do something that would have a long-term effect on the area.

Blastock said he thinks Brizee will be a strong asset on the board.

"Bob Blastock was a good board member and to replace him will be tough, but Donna will do a good job," he said.

"I feel gratified that the people reaffirmed their support for Bill Blastock and I think Donna has worked hard and has showed she has a vital interest in CSI," Chairman LeRoy Craig said.

CSI President Gerald Meyerhofer said he was pleased with the voter turnout — 2,672 votes in one race, 2,551 in the other — the second highest for a trustee election in the college's history. He echoed Craig's comments about Blastock and said he is looking forward to working with Brizee.

Brizee said her first order of business as a board member will be to learn her duties and "get up to speed."

Blastock said the biggest issue Brizee and the other board members will face in 1989 will be trying to expand the college's taxing district to include all eight counties in the Magic Valley. It currently includes only Twin Falls and Jerome counties.

"Even if we did, it would be September or October, and therefore, what we suggested was that money be transferred out of $300 million in unobligated balances that exist from fiscal '89," he said.

"And so that will be $150 million that can be used immediately to begin whatever work is necessary to improve the safety conditions at these plants."

Fitzwater also said, "I repeat the president's statement that no plant will be operated until it's safe, and that's why we thought it was crucial to get this money on the project early, and the supplemental is not a good way to go."

John said he did not expect an answer to his letter. "I thought I was the last person who would get something from Santa," he said.

Reagan, Gorbachev to trade greetings

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev are expected to exchange televised greetings on New Year's Day for the third time, the White House announced Tuesday.

Spokesman Martin Fitzwater said Reagan taped his message last week and Gorbachev is expected to submit a taped message to U.S. networks for their consideration soon.

Higginson said all water users still will be parties to the legal action.

"A small domestic and stock-water right claimant who elects not to participate in the adjudication at this time will retain the right to seek an adjudication of this right in the future through a special adjudication procedure," Higginson said.

Nevertheless, Higginson advised all domestic and stock-water users

So far, the state has notified property owners in 17 counties about the adjudication, with another 21 counties scheduled to follow.

Under the new agreement, those who already have filed may withdraw their claims and get refunds of the $25 filing fees, he said, or they can continue with the claims so they will be listed when the decree is issued.

N. Idaho neo-Nazi expert loses job

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A key figure in the battle against neo-Nazi criminal activities in the Northwest is losing his job next month and said he might be forced to leave law enforcement.

Larry Broadbent, 51, Kootenai County undersheriff who is recognized as one of the area's experts on the white supremacy movement, said Monday he has been notified he would be out of a job Jan. 9 when Pierce Clegg takes over as sheriff.

Clegg, a Democrat, defeated Broadbent's boss, Republican Floyd "Mert" Stadler, in the November election and has notified Broadbent that he will put his own person into the No. 2 spot in the sheriff's office at Coeur d'Alene.

Broadbent has spent the last eight years studying the white supremacist movement and sharing his knowledge with others in law enforcement and the public. He has appeared many times before the Idaho Legislature on anti-terrorism and civil rights legislation.

Gag order lifted in manslaughter case

MOSCOW (AP) — Second District Judge John Bengtson has lifted a gag order on information surrounding dismissed involuntary manslaughter charges against a Las Vegas, Nev.-based mail-order pharmacy.

Mark Vovos, a Spokane, Wash., attorney representing the National RX Services subsidiary of Medco Containment Services said Monday that pharmacy officials will outline their side of the story within the next few weeks.

Medco asked Bengtson to impose the gag order after Latah County Prosecutor Craig Mosman dropped charges against the company in October. But Vovos said Medco found itself unable to respond to allegations that the pharmacy tried to influence witnesses and intimidate Mosman.

Ex-BPA chief still Cabinet candidate

BOISE (AP) — Former Bonneville Power Administration chief Peter Johnson remains a candidate for the job of Energy secretary in the Bush administration, despite published reports that he is not on the short list of contenders, says an aide to Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho.

A report in Friday's New York Times did not list the McClair resident and former Boise businessman among the candidates president-elect George Bush reportedly is considering.

But McClure's press secretary, H.D. Palmer, said Monday that as far as he knows, "Peter is still under consideration for the post and we've still got our fingers crossed."

3 appointed to Lewiston City Council

LEWISTON (AP) — J.R. Van Tassel, LaFawn Hamm Oliver and Roger K. White have been appointed to fill the three remaining vacancies on the Lewiston City Council created by last month's recall election.

In separate 3-1 votes, the four-member council on Monday appointed Oliver, 43, a social worker at St. Joseph Regional Medical Center; and Van Tassel, 41, owner of Campbell's Corner tavern, to the council.

Councilman Mark Arneson dissented on Oliver's appointment, while councilman Robert Wing dissented on Van Tassel's appointment.

The council voted unanimously to appoint White, 54, a psychiatrist. The appointments filled the last of the vacancies created when five council members were recalled in the Nov. 8 election. Arneson and Councilwoman Lovelita Eisele were not targeted for recall.

Wing and Deltha Kilgore were appointed by Gov. Cecil Andrus to fill two of the vacancies so the council would have a quorum of four. The three members appointed Monday were selected over five other finalists from among 24 people who applied for the vacancies.

Survey: Students use alcohol most

LEWISTON (AP) — The most extensive survey ever conducted on the drug-use patterns of students in north-central Idaho and southeastern Washington indicates alcohol is by far the most widely used controlled substance.

About 70 percent of the 5,465 junior high and high school students questioned said they had tried alcohol at least once in the past six months.

The 75-school survey conducted by Lewis-Clark State College also showed some use of drugs such as cocaine, heroin and LSD. But after alcohol, the most commonly used controlled substances were tobacco and marijuana.

New Plymouth man dies of exposure

NEW PLYMOUTH (AP) — A northern Idaho man died of exposure over the weekend after walking away from the New Plymouth home of relatives he had been visiting, officials said.

Edward Manser, 49, was visiting his sister for the holidays when he went out Friday without leaving a destination. He was found Sunday about five miles away, just over the Gem County line.

Gem County Coroner Walter Potter said family members were looking for Manser throughout the weekend, but thought he was with friends nearby.

Nez Perce sheriff to ban jail smoking

LEWISTON (AP) — Nez Perce County Sheriff Ron Keeper plans to ban smoking in the county's Lewiston jail starting Jan. 17.

Keeper told the Nez Perce County Commission on Monday that he hopes the policy will keep matches out of the hands of inmates and reduce the fire hazard in the jail.

While smoking by inmates will be entirely prohibited, officers and other jail employees will be able to smoke in designated areas outside the jail and out of the presence of inmates.

The sheriff said prisoners will be able to chew tobacco "unless it becomes a cleanliness or health problem."

Victims to be told of rulings

No more surprises when suspects are on streets, Jones says

BOISE (AP) — Attorney General Jim Jones says his office plans to notify crime victims of decisions of the Idaho Supreme Court or Court of Appeals involving them.

"They no longer will be surprised if the appellate court overturns a conviction and turns their assailant loose on the streets," Jones said. "They will be advised as to the outcome of appeals filed by the criminal or crime victims themselves."

It was one of a package of proposals Jones plans to present to the 1989 Legislature. The emphasis, he told a news conference on Tuesday, will be protecting the rights of crime victims and particularly victims of child sexual abuse.

"Victims rights will be on the front burner in the Legislature in 1989. Although the justice system in Idaho has become more passionate in recent years, we must provide more protections of victims of crime, especially youngsters," he said.

Jones said most of the proposals have been sent to the governor's office for review, to reduce duplicated effort between his office and that of Gov. Cecil Andrus.

The proposals were developed by a task force on crime victims.

"Plea bargaining is a source of particular concern to victims and crime advocates," the attorney general said. "While there is a place for plea negotiation in our system, it is a device that is subject to overuse," he said.

He's recommending a new law to give victims the right to be consulted by a prosecutor on a proposed plea bargain.

"While a victim would not have a veto over the plea agreement, he or she would have the opportunity for input into the negotiations," Jones said.

Another proposal recommends allowing child abuse victims to recover monetary damages from those who molest them, including compensatory damages, emotional distress, punitive damages, attorney fees and court costs.

Jones said it would be in addition to criminal charges and "should give potential molesters a good deal more to worry about — less of their property and assets in a civil lawsuit."

TMI waste heads for Idaho after a 6-month delay

BOISE (AP) — The 17th shipment of debris from the ill-fated Three Mile Island reactor is headed toward Idaho after a six-month delay.

A train carrying three casks of high-level radioactive waste is en route to the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory from Middletown, Pa. The material was taken from a TMI reactor that partially melted in March, 1979. The Department of Energy does not announce the date of reactor or arrival times for nuclear waste shipments.

Shipments have been delayed since May because of technical problems with the canisters that hold the debris and the casks that protect the canisters during shipping. The last shipment arrived in Idaho May 26.

Shipments were first delayed after engineers found a defective canister plug. When that problem was solved, engineers concluded that an O-ring seal in the cask could fail during extremely cold weather.

"We replaced all the seals on the casks before we shipped," said Terry Smith, with an INEL contractor, EC&G Idaho.

When the shipment is completed, 34 casks of debris will have been sent to Idaho since 1986. Each cask has seven canisters of material.

"We are shipping about 8,000 pounds," Smith said Monday. This is a lot lighter than most loads because these are filter canisters and they're a lot lighter."

Despite the six-month delay, debris has not stacked up at TMI. Defueling the reactor has become more difficult for its owner, GPU Nuclear, as engineers have gotten to the bottom of the melted core.

"Defueling's been going slow," said Smith. "There are 14 canisters at the reactor. We don't have a full load because we need 21."

Smith said Department of Energy officials hope to keep an schedule next year.

"I expect our next shipment to take place in February or March," he said.

The shipments pass through 10 states and have been controversial from the outset.

Several minor accidents, including a collision at St. Louis involving the waste-carrying train, and mislabeling of a rail car near St. Louis, have "sparked" several investigations.

Jesus takes on variety of manifestations to fit a situation

Jesus the revolutionary. Gentle Jesus meek and mild. Jesus the great teacher. Jesus the faith healer. Jesus the friend. Jesus of the political right. Jesus of the political left. So many caricatures. How could anyone possibly determine who Jesus is with all of these diverse pictures floating around?

Some people use the words of Christ in support of nuclear armament. Others use them in support of disarmament. There are Christians who speak vehemently in favor of pro-life, and others speak just as emotionally in favor of pro-choice. Many Christians speak out against capital punishment. Just as many support a death penalty. And the words of Jesus are interpreted to fit the view.

Christianity, however, simply sees Jesus and God as one.

A traditional Christian accepts, through faith, the mystery of how God became flesh — a human being — and dwelt among us. God walked the same dusty trails that all people walk. That was unexpected enough. But God also entered the world to walk our journeys, as a crying, kicking baby. Then He became a precocious teen-ager, astounding His elders.

Finally, His early death, in young adulthood, has yielded mountains of volumes of discussion about Him. Certainly, Jesus' effect on the present generation is just as controversial as it was 2000 years ago.

Who is Jesus today? Dare we define Him? For some, it matters little. "Since Jesus lived long ago, what particular meaning could He have?" some people ask. "Everyone beyond present history has little relevance." The life of Jesus is not even a part of basic culture for those people. So they have little room for His vital teachings on compassion, integrity, humility, and joyful living. The tragedy is not that these are rejected. It is that they are ignored.

Other people may be acquainted with the historical possibility that Jesus is the Son of God, but they dismiss it. Perhaps these persons are burned out as a result of some fatal kind of inauthentic religion. Granted, an enormous amount of evil is done in the name of Christianity, especially by misguided leaders. And yet, how short sighted it is to dismiss Jesus on the basis of the lifestyles of others.

As long as Jesus can be put out of mind; he does not have to be dealt with. Self assured, the people who manage to think this way can feel that they are living the comfortable life-style of the present, fulfilling their physical needs, without regard to past realities or future possibilities. But what happens when tragedy, illness, broken relationships, grievous disappointments, or death occurs? What underpinnings of strength are left? Is rugged individualism enough?

Committed Christians see Jesus not only as a historical reality, but also as divine. The Son of God, present in the lives of people who respond to His claim. There are so many dimensions to Jesus that He cannot be boxed into one single portrait. In fact, Jesus is full of surprises. He comes to us in so many unexpected ways.

Twenty years ago, when I began my own pastoral duties, new and often surprising dimensions of Jesus began to unfold before me. When I visited the hospital, I began to think of Jesus as a healer. When I sat with a troubled person, I remembered how He reached out and brought calm. When there was bereavement, I recalled His times of comforting. Gradually, I discovered how Jesus becomes more real in the face of actual human situations.

C.S. Lewis (Mere Christianity) has eloquently summarized my discovery: "I am trying here to prevent anyone saying the really foolish thing that people often say about Him: 'I'm ready to accept Jesus as a great moral teacher, but I don't accept His claim to be God.' That is the one thing that must not be said. A man who is merely a man and said the sort of things Jesus said would not be the sort of moral teacher. He would be either a lunatic — on the level with a man who says he is punched egg — or else he would be the Devil of Hell. You must make your choice: Either this man was, and is, the Son of God or else a madman or something worse."

This week, The Times-News is publishing a series of articles by local writers on "Who is Jesus?"

Today's author, The Rev. Revis Turner, is Associate Pastor of the First Baptist Church of Twin Falls.

Letters/Creationism, isolationism, Koutnik, politics draw comments from readers

Evolution isn't last word on learning of Creator

Reading the final version of Twin Falls' policy of not teaching that there is a Creator set me to thinking. Could the over-crowded prisons, jails and mental hospitals be indicators of a root problem?

We are constantly barraged with articles and TV spots reminding us how important it is to build a positive self-image into our child. And it has been established that the criminal and emotionally disturbed suffer from low self-esteem. Some educators have turned to approval of all effort, regardless of quality, in order to promote successful feelings. This has produced a low level of self-expectancy.

However, there is ample evidence that, excluding extremists, the most emotionally stable, ethical, well-adjusted individuals are those who have a solid spiritual life. Could this be mere coincidence? I think not.

Man is born with a built-in desire to seek his Creator. When he is taught that he is merely the result of random cell development and that he can only look to animals for his origin, he is only as worthwhile as he makes himself to be. What an overwhelming task — particularly for an emotionally deprived person!

On the other hand, those who subject themselves to their Creator turn out to be the sturdiest of folks: while the highest suicide rates (indicating low self-image) occur among those who rely on their own worthiness for success.

At this special time of year, it is significant to point out the absolute magic of God. While logic and intellect would dictate that self-sufficiency be regarded as strong, it is simple submission which actually proves out the winner.

No, I don't promote prayer and Bible reading in schools. That's making a mockery of both, which should be individual activities. But teaching a child that a Creator made him special seems to me a positive thing.

Isolationism won't work with nuclear weaponry
"Give me liberty or give me death" — Patrick Henry, Virginia, 1775.

"Better to drink pure tritium with breakfast than to surrender our liberties" — David Vreeland, Gooding, 1988.

Henry's patriotic rhetoric has survived for more than two centuries; his famous utterance is as axiomatic today as it was in colonial times. Historically, if every group which ever found itself oppressed, exploited or enslaved had narrowed its options to extinction or freedom, current world population would be a fraction of the five billion who inhabit the planet.

"Better dead than Red" has a certain ring to it — trouble is, it makes no sense. The individual who determines to survive one way or another may or may not find an avenue toward relief, but a good man ain't going anywhere.

Vreeland ridicules the idea of unilateral disarmament — one wonders if he would advise Mikhail Gorbachev to keep his 500,000 troops in uniform in order to avoid "perceived weakness."

If the charismatic Russian was suddenly afflicted with a sanity attack and decided to dismantle the entire Soviet military capability, would he be subject to criticism for endangering "national self-preservation"?

Unhappily, nuclear weapons cannot be un-invented, but the simple fact that we learned to fabricate a monster doesn't mean we need one in every garage. A choice between nuclear destruction and economic devastation is no real improvement on "Live free or die," particularly if we contaminate the globe with toxic wastes enroute to our goal of "suitable deterrence."

Paranoid preoccupation with "foreign dangers" (incidentally, how is "foreign" defined in 1988 terms?) overshadows the reality that a problem outside our borders is nothing more than a leak in the other end of the boat.

Vreeland's declaration that "posterity will judge the decisions we make" assumes that there will be future generations available to make judgments — an optimistic prognosis considering the potential for destruction of nuclear arsenals.

It was inevitable that after 70 years of failed policy, the Soviets would produce a leader intelligent enough to see that perpetual super-power saber rattling invites only suicide — that confrontational posturing coupled with Rambo mentality is a no-win situation.

Sophomoric declarations of nationalistic tunnel vision would be better confined to high school pep rallies.

zons must keep open their hearts and their minds, they must pursue truth and fully debate the issues that confront them. They must also maintain a sense of humor and be willing to laugh at themselves.

James Koutnik did his part for freedom. He was not afraid to lay it on the line; to put the issues before the people and let 'em have at it. He was not intimidated by personalities and irreverently made us laugh at ourselves.

On those occasions where I shared the arena with L. James — I found him always to be fair, but you could bet your bottom dollar he'd give you a full course of his cynical wit. To enter the ring with L. James and survive you best stay on your toes and be ready for battle. I never left those engagements feeling beat or humiliated, but more often than not my stomach muscles would be sore from laughing. He was one funny man.

For my part, I will truly miss L. James. We came from different generations, our lifestyles were worlds apart, we didn't always agree, but I could always count on him for an open, timely, lively and humorous discussion of important issues. We were truly fortunate to have had him among us.

A REAGANVILLE CHRISTMAS.

Letters/SIS, pets prompt readers to comment

Let's follow up Andrus' ban

Ahhhh, how that a Governor. It's great to see Cecil Andrus use his power to deal with the "harmful" toxic waste and the SIS waste. Governor Andrus and Congressman Stallings seemed concerned about the DOE's 2001 report that plans a nuclear weapons boom for Idaho and plans very little clean-up. Stallings and McClure said "It's good news!"

Governor Andrus should stick with his ban in January. It's the best thing that's ever happened to the DOE.

If Rocky Flats "took" to "open" there are plenty of other sites who have not served duty yet. Idaho has been serving front line duty for 40 years. They could always stack those barrels of radioactive waste around the Congress until they got the message.

Six months ago, all nine Idahoan, federal, state and most local politicians from both parties, were standing together like a wall in favor of the SIS plutonium plant. No one talked much about toxic waste and the politicians bullied each other about who was bringing the SIS into Idaho the fastest.

With nowhere to start their toxic waste and no plans for the buried waste, they wanted to double up on overkill.

The emperors have no clothes. Now the emperors are telling us that they look so good, we should pay for another two new outfits.

It could be generous to say they were "cutting the cord before the horse" because horse is almost dead.

After 17 years of broken promises, it seemed appropriate to try to make the politics change their priorities, from build-up to clean-up. It had to be done before SIS is built in March of 1991. If we could do it by Christmas, it would be a good gift for the people to try to give to the Creator. There wasn't any toxic waste in the aquifer when it was given to us.

This has nothing to do with trusting Russians and nothing to do with unilateral disarmament. We are way beyond overkill and I'm mainly concerned about Idaho's unilateral disarmament, without Idaho's informed consent.

I thought, in a democracy, the best way to try and break a wall of politicians, was to start hammering the politicians with the truth.

Some folks though, we were too rude and mean. From the perspective of the people of Fernald, Ohio, with uranium in their bodies, we were way too polite! For the children of Fernald, with bone cancer and leukemia, I cry for you. Can you forgive your fathers, for we know not what we do.

To some folks, we must seem like the roosters who think we made the sun rise and just like to hear ourselves make noise. But to the 1,000 points of light* who have been lit across Idaho and across America for so long; together I think we shined so bright even some of the politicians have seen the light.

It's nice to see Governor Andrus and Attorney General Jim Jones bucking over who's doing more for the clean-up.

never hear in 1988. From Congressman Stallings, before the election, "If we have nowhere to safely store the waste, then as a nation we must rethink the whole nuclear program."

From Governor Andrus: "The DOE must have a working plan for the waste" from SIS. "If the federal government thinks it can do it, the ban all I can say is try me!" We have to take another look at the safety of these nuclear weapons plants."

From Jim Jones, "We must consider if we want INEL in our future, and if so, under what conditions?"

From State Representative Gary Robbins, "If we don't get some information soon, don't underestimate this won't be an all out war!"

So, do I trust the politicians now? Yeah, right, about as far as I can trust the DOE! We will stay tuned, to try and separate "action" from "distraction."

If Governor Andrus does not follow through and cut right ban the SIS, then our state legislators can still call for an advisory ballot to give the governor the mandate. With this much at stake, we deserve to vote on the issue, instead of the usual personality vote.

I promised my wife I wouldn't talk about the SIS until next year, so I'm putting away my flame thrower for the holidays. Merry Christmas everybody. Next year looks like a good one.

puppy or a kitten for Christmas. I know that they anticipate the smiling faces of their children as they behold the little "ball of fur."

The purr of the kitten and the wag of the pup's tail will take on a whole new meaning when the family realizes they have chosen a new responsibility.

If you find yourself faced with the decision to give a pet as a gift, consider the long term consequences of your action. The story I am about to tell is about Christmas one year ago and a six month old Dalmatian cross puppy named "Poker."

The weather was cold and the wind carried a chilling bite. A trace of snow still covered the frozen ground. A small white dog with black ears and an enormous number of tiny black spots had been left beside a busy country road. She eyes left there by a person who probably decided she would be able to find herself another home. Perhaps her puppy claim had already worn off. She was now another month to feed and needed to be vaccinated and spayed. The lesson she was to provide the children in responsibility was written off as a mistake. After all, pets don't take responsibility, people do.

I first caught a glimpse of this little spotted dog as she ate the crusty snow that had accumulated alongside the busy road. Trucks, cars, and buses all passed by unaware of this little dog. I watched to see where she would go as the traffic rumbled by. The spotted dog ran under an empty trailer.

Days passed by and the little dog spent more and more time in the road. I watched gotten lost. The rude realization that she had been abandoned haunted me everyday that I passed her by.

The little dog was growing weaker and more delirious from the hunger. The frozen snow was barely enough to keep her going. I knew something had to be done. One snow end up being hit by a car like most other dogs who are abandoned. I was sure she was once a cute little puppy in someone's home. She had now become a sad reminder of our throwaway attitude towards pets. After all, I had four other such "throwaways" living at my home already. I had seen this before.

My husband and I drove by the empty trailer late New Years Eve and my heart sank when I saw the little dog still eating snow. The bitterly cold weather was about to take its toll and I knew that I was her only hope.

We arrived with food as bait. The empty trailer she called home was sprinkled with rat poison. Her eyes and nose were crusty and her belly was bloated from starvation. She was frightened by our presence. An hour and a half later she was in our arms.

Poker has a good home now. Every morning she kisses me to show her gratitude. One year later at Christmas, I am reminded of where she spent her last Christmas. My Christmas wish is that pet owners will accept their responsibility for their little "balls of fur" that they give this Christmas and cherish.

U.S. immigration chief wants asylum review unit wiped out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Immigration Commissioner Alan Nelson has asked Attorney General Dick Thornburgh to wipe out a Justice Department unit that has supported Central Americans and others seeking asylum in the United States, an internal memo shows.

At issue is the Asylum Policy and Review Unit, which has prodded the department to override a number of Immigration and Naturalization Service denials of asylum.

One point "we would like to raise with you is the validity of the Asylum Policy and Review Unit," said Nelson's Dec. 13 memo to Thornburgh, which was obtained by The Associated Press. "APRU has cost INS appropriations $750,000 since inception. ... The entire purpose of APRU and its continued existence should now be reviewed by your staff."

APRU reviews of asylum rejections by INS are "just plain financially wasteful," said the memo. APRU has persuaded INS to reconsider denials in 35 cases and has referred another 35 cases to Justice Department officials who then directed reversals, said department sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

APRU was established in 1987 to monitor INS asylum operations following a 1985 incident in which a Soviet seaman who jumped ship on the Mississippi River was returned to his Soviet vessel on orders of the U.S. Border Patrol. The border patrol is part of INS.

"The establishment of the Justice Department unit was a positive development in that it recognized that INS was incapable of handling the asylum function," Arthur Helton, an attorney for the Lawyers Committee for Human Rights, said Tuesday. His group has been removing INS from the asylum process altogether.

"This office serves a vital purpose" and its staff is dedicated to ensuring that the purposes of United States asylum policy are carried out," said Henry Curry, the unit's director, who declined to respond directly to Nelson's memo.

Nelson is urging the change in connection with proposed regulations, first discussed three years ago, which would implement the Refugee Act of 1980. That law established the standard of granting U.S. haven to refugees with a well-founded fear of persecution in their homelands.

The proposed regulations are finally being shaped at a time when Nicaraguans and other Central Americans are pouring across the border illegally and then seeking asylum, saying they have been persecuted in their home country.

Nelson's memo asks Thornburgh to review the regulatory proposals and to issue a final regulation by the end of the year. Thornburgh is in Europe and has not yet conducted discussions on the proposed regulations.

Navy overpays for Phoenix missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy appears to have overpaid its prime contractor for the Phoenix air-to-air missile by a total of up to $27.2 million in the years 1985-86 and now is preparing to award a contract to a second manufacturer without prior testing of its version, a Pentagon audit concludes.

The audit says also that the Navy could save about $35.4 million over the next three years if it would directly purchase 10 of the sub-contracted components used in the missile, instead of allowing the prime contractors to buy them and add on a profit.

The audit, performed by the Defense Department's independent inspector general, is dated Aug. 22 and focuses on $684 million worth of contracts for Phoenix missiles awarded from March 1985 to July 1987.

The Phoenix is the Navy's primary aerial combat missile. The latest model of the long-range, supersonic missile is known as the AIM-54C and is carried by the Navy's F-14 Tomcat jet fighters.

O'Hare area braces for jet noise

CHICAGO (AP) — If the millions of holiday travelers who will go through O'Hare International Airport fly before noon, the neighbors of the nation's busiest airport may be able — for once — to hear Christmas Eve carols.

The roar of arriving and departing airliners has grated on the residents' nerves for years, but a federal court decision last week permitting them to sue the city of Chicago, which operates O'Hare, for damages may help.

The noise problem is especially intense at Christmas time, the busiest travel period of the year at O'Hare.

From Friday through Jan. 2, 2.6 million people are expected to fly through O'Hare, said Cynthia-Val Jones, a spokeswoman for the Chicago Department of Aviation.

Inaugural contribution limits drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — The inauguration of President-elect Bush, billed as the most open inaugural celebration ever, is now open to contributors who want to give less than $100,000.

The Presidential Inaugural Committee said Monday it has dropped a $100,000 minimum requirement covering private donations for inaugural activities ranging from galas to children's festivals.

The committee simply never anticipated the number of people or corporations that would want to participate ... at various levels. We've been overwhelmed," said committee spokesman Ed Cassidy.

Organizers of the Bush inaugural have said it will have more free events and include more of the public than any previous inauguration, reflecting the wishes and style of the Bush family.

Fed may push interest rates higher

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy expanded at a moderate 2.5 percent pace during the July-September quarter, the government reported Tuesday, but analysts said growth was rebounding and the Federal Reserve Board probably will nudge interest rates higher as a result.

The Commerce Department said growth of the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, slowed during the third quarter from 3.0 percent in the 2nd quarter and 3.4 percent in the first three months of the year.

The GNP, after adjusting for inflation, rose $24.2 billion to an annual rate of $4.0 trillion in the third quarter.

The GNP figure for the third quarter, the slowest expansion pace since the final quarter of 1986, was a slight downward revision from a preliminary estimate of 2.6 percent issued a month ago. Most economists had been looking for a slight upward adjustment.

The trend should be good news for Federal Reserve policy makers who want to curb economic growth to a range of 2 percent to 2.5 percent, which they believe is sustainable without increasing inflation.

Cigarette test results disclosed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Varieties of Carlton and Nova cigarettes scored lowest in tar, nicotine and carbon monoxide tests run by the U.S. tobacco industry on 272 varieties of cigarettes, the Federal Trade Commission said Tuesday.

At the other end of the spectrum, Old Gold Straights produced the highest amounts of tar and nicotine and varieties of Century 25s, More 120s and Tall 120s produced the most carbon monoxide in the tests, the agency said.

The list released by the FTC marked the first time in almost four years that American smokers were given a brand-by-brand breakdown of the tar, nicotine and carbon monoxide contents of their favorite cigarettes.

The last such compilation by the FTC was released in January 1985, after which the agency halted the testing program it began in 1966 in the wake of the U.S. surgeon general's finding that cigarettes are dangerous to human health.

Santa gives a Secret Service guard a letter for Reagan

'Santa' asks Reagan to give Ollie pardon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of a pro-military student group, dressed as Santa and Mrs. Claus and two elves, appeared at a White House gate Tuesday to hand out candy canes along with letters asking President Reagan to pardon former national security aide Oliver North.

The foursome also visited the offices of several news organizations and North's attorneys and delivered a stocking full of candy to independent counsel Lawrence Walsh, who is prosecuting North for his role in the Iran-contra affair.

Their petition from "Santa," said that "Only you, Mr. President, can give Ollie North the gift that I, and tens of millions of Americans, would like to see him have for Christmas this year — a full and unconditional pardon."

Reagan, however, has said he does not believe it would be fair to North to pardon him before he has a chance to vindicate himself in court. North's trial is likely to begin in late January, after Reagan has left office.

The costumed students were members of the Student Defense Alliance, a campus wing of the Center For Peace and Freedom.

2.6 million more acres contracted under CRP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers have contracted with the government to take an additional 2.6 million acres of highly erodible cropland from production under the 10-year Conservation Reserve Program, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

Vern Neppel, an official of the department's Commodity Credit Corp., said the last contracts were accepted from more than 3.4 million acres offered during the program's seventh signup period held July 18 through Aug. 31. The total now under CRP, as the program is called, is more than 28.2 million acres.

Neppel said the eighth signup for the program has been scheduled for Feb. 6-21.

Under the program, farmers agree to take land from production for 10 years. In return, based on bids they submit, farmers who are accepted get annual rental payments from the government and one-time assistance to pay for half the cost of planting trees, shrubs and grass to guard against erosion.

Here are the acreages by state, with that program acreage in the first column and the acreage from the seventh signup in the second column.

Crew ruled at fault in Alaska airplane crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — The flight crew's inadequate supervision of cargo loading caused last year's crash of a Ryan Air Service commuter plane in Alaska in which 18 people died, the National Transportation Safety Board ruled Tuesday.

The 2,100 pounds of cargo was loaded too far to the aircraft's rear, causing the pilot to lose control when he attempted to land the twin-engine turboprop Boeing 1900-C at the Homer Airport on Nov. 23, 1987, the board concluded.

The real responsibility rested with the crew, which is responsible for supervising the loading of the aircraft," said acting NTSB Chairman James L. Kolstad. "For reasons I guess we'll never know, they failed in that function."

The board's report concluded that the crew members, who were killed, "employed improper procedures to determine the airplane's weight and balance."

Pirate ship needs FCC license

BOSTON (AP) — A pirate rock 'n' roll ship operating off the coast of New York can't continue broadcasting without a license from the Federal Communications Commission, a judge has ruled.

U.S. District Judge John J. McNaught issued a summary judgment Dec. 13 against Al Weiner, former owner of the Sarah and one of four defendants, who contended the radio ship had a constitutional right to broadcast without an FCC license as "open and unused frequencies."

Weiner's attorney, Jeremiah Gutman, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer, had argued that the Sarah was a foreign-registered ship in international waters and didn't come under the scope of the FCC. He also maintained that since the station, Radio New York International, was broadcasting on an unsigned AM frequency, the FCC was violating First Amendment rights to free speech.

McNaught rejected those arguments, noting that the government said numerous stations could be subject to interference if the Sarah broadcast.

Weiner has said he launched the pirate station to protest what he called conformity in New York-area radio programming.

Costa Rican leader to testify on debt

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the House Banking Committee said Tuesday he has invited Costa Rican President Oscar Arias Sanchez to testify on the problem of Third World debt next month.

Rep. Henry-B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, the new chairman of the committee, scheduled hearings Jan. 4 and 5 on the debt question and other international economic issues.

Others invited to testify include Luiz Carlos Prestes Pereira, former finance minister of Brazil, and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury David Mulford.

Bogus valve parts found in Michigan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bogus steam valve parts have been found at a nuclear power plant in Michigan, marking the third type of counterfeit equipment uncovered in the industry in the last two years, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission was told Tuesday.

The commission staff issued a special notice to nuclear utilities last week asking them to be on the lookout for counterfeit valve parts of all kinds, said Brian Grimes of the commission's Office of Nuclear Reactor Regulation.

Failure of the valves could not cause a nuclear accident, he said.

Instances of counterfeit bolts and fasteners were found two years ago. Earlier this year, counterfeit circuit breakers were found at plants in Southern California.

Industry-wide inspections, ordered by the NRC last month, turned up a second type of bogus breaker, this one at the Commonwealth Edison Co.'s Quad Cities plant in Illinois, Grimes said.

He reported also that in late October, Consumers Power Co. unwittingly bought a number of counterfeit valve parts for its Palisades Plant at South Haven, Mich.

Grimes said a failure of such parts could lead to an automatic shutdown of the reactor.

Consumers Power discovered the faulty parts when a repaired valve leaked, Grimes said. "Some of the parts they had procured turned out to be misrepresented and counterfeit," and an investigation by the manufacturer, Masonian-Dresser Co., concluded there appeared to be a counterfeit market," he said.

He said the NRC staff does not yet know how extensive the counterfeit market is. It is worried because "valves are quite frequently refurbished" and new stems, gates and other parts are being bought all the time, Grimes said.

The counterfeiting, according to the staff notice to utilities, "may extend to other manufacturers."

A large nuclear plant may have as many as 40,000 valves of all kinds, 10 times as many as a coal plant of the same power rating.

A counterfeit valve found earlier at the Diablo Canyon plant of Pacific Gas & Electric Co. in California "appears to be an isolated case," said William Brach, chief of the vendor inspection branch.

The Quad Cities circuit breaker was of a large-capacity, metal-cased design that can be refurbished. The California breakers were totally enclosed in plastic and designed to be replaced, not repaired or refurbished, Grimes said.

The Illinois component had been put through a "substandard refurbishment" in which parts were used that were "non-genuine and non-conforming dimensionally," he said.

A number of activities are under way to identify the source of the refurbishment, he said.

Victor Stello, executive director for operations, told the commission the staff soon would propose a tightening of regulations on inspection of parts on arrival from vendors.

First black TV news anchorman dies of AIDS complications

WASHINGTON (AP) — Max Robinson, the nation's first black network television news anchor, died Tuesday at 49.

Robinson died at Howard University Hospital in the nation's capital from complications resulting from AIDS, according to hospital spokeswoman Tonya Swanson.

It had been three years since Robinson worked regularly in television.

He earned his spot in broadcasting history in 1974 when he began co-anchoring the ABC Evening News from Chicago with Peter Jennings in London and Frank Reynolds in Washington.

In 1989, he had become the first black to anchor newscasts on a major Washington station. He appeared on the 6 and 11 p.m. news on WTOP, now WUSA, with co-anchor Gordon Peterson.

"He had great presence on the air," said James Snyder, vice president for news for Post-Newsweek Stations, who worked with Robinson at WTOP. "He was a very meticulous dresser. He was very, very meticulous about his on-air performance. He rarely made a mistake. He was very conscious that he was a role model."

Court rules out park use ban

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — A law barring people who don't live in Dearborn from going to its city parks is unconstitutional, the state Court of Appeals ruled Tuesday.

The 3-0 decision said the ordinance violates constitutional bans on racial discrimination and unreasonable police searches.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the American Civil Liberties Union had challenged the ordinance adopted by Dearborn voters in November 1985.

"I am absolutely grateful for this kind of Christmas present from the courts that will hopefully put an end to one of the most racially divisive issues in southeastern Michigan," said ACLU Executive Director Howard Simon.

"The ball is in the city's court because it could appeal, but it would be my hope they would put this behind them and realize the interdependence of southeastern Michigan," he said.

Arthur Johnson, president of the Detroit branch of the NAACP, said he believed the ruling "will help in getting the government of Dearborn on a better track in how it relates to citizens of other communities."

What's what

skop?

You've read that fish in polar waters have antifreeze in their blood. It's known ice cream companies want to add that thing to their confections to get rid of the crystals. They've been conducting scientific research on those fish. Cutting them up. Insofar as I know, there has been no movement to stop them.

Q. What was the point of the hoop

A. Indeed, in several 17th-century American colonies.

PHONE BOOTHS

Q. How many phone calls a day are made from the average public phone booth?

A. Can only tell about New York City's average. It's 30 there. Please note, though, New York City has 47,735 phone booths, and they're not all in Times Square.

Bedouin nomads rotate their tent panels. So they get even wear, Much as we rotate tires.

SMOKE-FILLED ROOM

An Associated Press reporter named Kirk Simpson covered the 1920 Republican Convention where Warren Harding was nominated. The behind-the-scenes decision was made in what Simpson called a "smoke-filled room." Hardly spectacular phrasing. Shows no special literary skill. But it stuck. It's now in dictionaries.

TV Guide: Acting ability doesn't win roles

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — Looking the part, not being a gifted performer, is what pays off in Hollywood, according to an article in TV Guide. And it doesn't hurt if you're as good-looking as Elizabeth McGovern or Kelly McGillis.

Hollywood actors learn "isn't very interested in the actor's craft," concludes staff writer Susan Littvin. Casting director Michael Greer tells her, for example, "We look for naturalness, for someone who is the part."

Joseph Brutsman, 28, was named best comic actor in his class when he graduated from the renowned Juilliard School in 1983. He has appeared in two made-for-TV movies, "Do-You-Remember Love" and "The Atlanta Child Murders," and has had recurring roles in "Scarcrow" and Mrs. King" and "The Slip Maxwell Story."

But two of his classmates, McGovern and McGillis, get better roles and bigger paychecks.

"We didn't realize that they were incredible-looking women," he said in the article. "We were so close, we didn't think they were working because of their looks."

Weaver plays a shark — an investment banker

NEW YORK (AP) — After working alongside apes in "Gorillas in the Mist," actress Sigourney Weaver is playing a shark in her newest film, "Working Girl."

Not a real shark, mind you — a Wall Street shark.

Investment banker Katherine Parker is a woman "who sees the world as her oyster, who's been brought up in the most privileged circumstances to believe that everything would come her way," Ms. Weaver told Savvy Woman magazine.

In other words, a woman not unlike herself. Ms. Weaver, whose mother was a distinguished actress and whose father was president of NBC, said she was brought up to believe that "with me, all things were possible."

In researching her role, Ms. Weaver said she did find that Wall Street was more competitive than Hollywood, and her character reflects that atmosphere.

"If feminists are going to object to me playing a ruthless woman sympathetically, all I can say is I don't care," she said. "I'm interested in human nature, not whitewashed human nature, and there are women like Katherine out there."

Also starring are Melanie Griffith and Harrison Ford.

Carly Simon dispels rumors of inheritance

NEW YORK (AP) — Carly Simon says rumors that she was heiress to the Simon & Schuster megabuck publishing firm were started early on in her singing career by a misinformed manager.

In an interview appearing in the January issue of FAME magazine, Simon says she was briefly signed to manager Albert Grossman when she was first starting out.

"He said, 'If you were hungry, you'd be better. And you're not hungry.' Of course, he thought I was the Simon & Schuster heiress," Simon tells the magazine. "And I wasn't."

Simon's father, Richard, was the co-founder of Simon & Schuster but he sold the small, albeit successful, company to another group that turned it into the giant publishing house known today.

The singer and her siblings got less than $50,000 each when their father died in 1960, when Simon was 15.

Simon has gained a fat bank account from her own success, including "You're So Vain" — "That's the Way I Always Heard It Should Be," "Anticipation," "Vengeance" and her new platinum album, "Coming Around Again."

Thatcher calls clothes 'NATO,' 'Washington'

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher identifies her clothes by nicknaming them after the place where she first wore them, her daughter says.

So there's NATO, Washington, Warsaw among the selection of coats and suits hanging in her wardrobe.

Carol Thatcher wrote in this week's Hello magazine.

Ms. Thatcher also said her mother favors fake jewelry and is rarely seen without pearls or brooches.

Fashion-watchers the world over agree she looks better now than she ever has, Ms. Thatcher wrote.

Since her Moscow trip in 1987, her look has changed dramatically. Out went the flowery prints and puffed-bust blouses — in their place were brighter jewel colors and simple tailored lines, which add up to an altogether more chic appearance.

Mrs. Thatcher was listed this year by the annual International Best Dressed Pall as one of the 12 best-dressed women.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Rocker Steve Winwood and his wife had an early Christmas gift this year, an 8-pound, 7-ounce daughter.

Elizabeth Dawn Winwood was born Dec. 1 at Baptist Hospital to Winwood, 40, and his wife, Eugenia, 29.

The couple, who married Jan. 17, 1987, also have an 18-month-old daughter, Mary Clare.

Winwood is a 25-year music veteran.

'FUN'S Word-Cross Puzzle' was a hit in 1913

Crossword turns 75 Wednesday

NEW YORK (AP) — C R — — — — D.

Depending on your outlook, it's a nine-letter word for either frustration or fun. The crossword puzzle, which turns 75 Wednesday, thrives because of those elements, experts say.

It can be frustrating, for instance, to ponder what four-letter word matches the clue "wedding-cake artisan," but fun to find that "icor" fits perfectly.

"Most of the problems we have in everyday life don't have clear-cut solutions," said Will Shortz, editor of Games magazine.

"Crossword puzzles have definitive answers, and when you get that answer, it's a very satisfying feeling."

Surveys show that 27 million people across — and down — the country do crosswords regularly, and more than twice that many do them occasionally.

Crosswords are descended from the ancient word square game; elementary forms appeared in children's books in England during the 19th century. But the modern crossword was invented, out of necessity, by Arthur Wynne, editor of the "Fun" supplement of the New York World.

It was the Sunday before Christmas, and he had a page to fill, Shortz said. The diamond-shaped, 31-clue "Word-Cross" puzzle ran on Dec. 21, 1913, and was an immediate hit.

A typesetter transposed the words four weeks later, and the name crossword stuck. A crossword cult formed among readers of the World, other papers began running puzzles, and by 1924, it was a full-fledged craze.

Monk, students bring Christmas to Kentucky

PRESTONSBURG, Ky. (AP) — A jolly Benedictine monk and 21 affluent teenagers from the Northeast are playing Santa Claus to hundreds of poor families in Appalachia.

The group arrived during the weekend after a 14-hour drive from Morristown, N.J., where the boys attend Delbarton School.

Led by former Delbarton headmaster Giles Hayes, or "Father Giles," as he is known, they will spend five days helping distribute clothing and toys to more than 700 families in southeastern Kentucky.

When the first caravan came here from New Jersey in 1981, it consisted of a van with donations stuffed in the back seat. This year, there were two semis and two rental trucks filled with such items as 350 pairs of tennis shoes from a store owner in Morristown.

"Poverty in America is off the beaten track," Hayes said before rushing off to Wheelwright to deliver baskets. "You drive the roads in Kentucky, which are some of the best in the country, and you say, 'Poverty in America?' But you drive off the roads and over a hill and up a hollow and you get a different picture."

Though Hayes admits the school's contributions are only a bandage to the plight of the families, he said that "immersing" the Delbarton students in poverty will make them more sensitive when they are in a position to do something about it.

"The only way for people to understand poverty is to have a total immersing experience in it."

RATINGS

The five category system of the voluntary film industry rating program is now as follows:

G. General Audiences, all ages admitted.

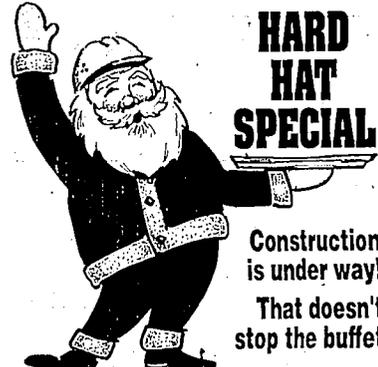

PG. Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

PG-13. Parents are strongly cautioned to give special guidance for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for children.

R. Restricted, under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian.

X. No one under 17 admitted.

Racism frightens family away from Hagerman

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The young to know the degrading significance of the word that was scrawled on her mailbox, a 5-year-old girl nevertheless can sense the racial slur's frightening implication — hatred.

"You'd think this was Alabama," said the girl's adoptive father, who asked not to be named for fear of retaliation.

An angry phone call and the word "nigger" misspelled on the mailbox frightened the child's parents into transferring their three adoptive children from a public school in Hagerman to a private one in Twin

'You'd think this was Alabama,' father says after vandalism

Falls.

Although such racial incidents in Southern Idaho are isolated, members of the Magic Valley Human Rights Task Force want to eradicate them by educating people and exposing perpetrators, said the Rev. Tom Tucker, task force coordinator.

Tucker, minister of First United Methodist Church in Twin Falls, said there have been only minor incidents in the area compared with recent violent acts in the Northwest, but whenever an incident occurs it is traumatic for the people involved, especially children.

"It was the black child that was the intended victim, not the parents," he said.

The girl's father said he and his wife knew when they adopted the half-Caucasian, half-black girl at birth that they would have to help their child deal with racial prejudice. That didn't make it easier when it occurred, he said.

Before the girl entered school in Hagerman, she was enthusiastic and hopeful, the father said. "She's as smart as a whip."

After a few weeks her mood changed. A boy who had been a good friend told her one day that his parents did not want him to play with her, Tucker said.

"She was getting real sad about school," the father said. "She didn't understand what was happening and why she was being shunned."

In November, an anonymous caller screamed over the phone to the girl's mother, "Your kind is not welcome here — we don't want you." The mother hung up before the caller could finish and the family changed the phone number the next day.

A short time later, the misspelled slur was found on the mailbox. It was easily washed off but not so easily forgotten, the father said.

"It really hurts me," he said.

Tucker said he encourages victims of racial prejudice to report incidents to the police and to the human rights task force (733-5872). He said they should also be careful to preserve evidence. Racial harassment is a felony in Idaho, he added.

The task force, formed by private citizens last spring, tries to track down harassers and also keeps in touch with a five-state human rights network, he said.

Tucker said communities where racially motivated incidents occur are also victimized by the attackers.

"I think it reflects on the type of community that we have," Tucker said.

Hagerman Mayor Merle Owsley said although a few blacks have lived in town in the past, he has never noticed any problems with racism.

"Naturally there are people who talk," he said. "But nobody has thrown any stones at them."

The father of the 5-year-old said he has been trying to explain racial prejudice to the girl.

"It's not going away," he said. "We're trying to give her the strength she needs to deal with it all her life."

Blastock will keep looking out for CSI

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Working with the College of Southern Idaho has been like raising a child, says retiring trustee Robert Blastock after a couple of years of trying hard you finally conceive one, he said, speaking of CSI's birth in 1965.

"Then you put in a lot of late nights and hard work and when the child gets to be 23 or 24 years old, well, it's time for someone else to be responsible for it," Blastock said during a dinner held in his honor Monday evening.

And, like any parent, Blastock promises he won't stop looking out for the school.

Blastock, the college's first board chairman and one of the school's founders, choked back emotion as he gave his short going-away speech.

He is the last of the original board members to retire. He decided not to seek re-election.

Other speeches commending Blastock's service to the college, his love for the school and his reputation for eagle-eyed scrutiny of the monthly bills demonstrated how much respect the retiring trustee has earned from the college administration and fellow board members.

"The single most important thing thing he has brought to the board is his love for this college. It's never gone stale," said LeRoy Craig, current chairman of the board.

"You're always here and you're always interested."

"There is not a student who has gone through this institution that doesn't owe you their gratitude," President Gerald Meyerhoeffer told Blastock. Vice Chairman Charles Lehman told Blastock he looked to him as a mentor when he became a board member.

"You always wanted to look below the surface," Lehman said, "never taking anything at face value."

Blastock was known for closely examining the monthly financial report distributed to each of the trustees.

Retiring CSI Trustee Robert Blastock says goodbye to friends and associates at a dinner held on campus in his honor

"I'm conservative and I try to spend the taxpayers' money as if it were mine. I don't mind spending money, but I don't like to waste it," he explained in an interview.

He described a board position as a position of trust.

"There are a lot of things the regular person doesn't know about. We have to know those things because we have to do things about them before they happen."

He used the recent adoption of an AIDS policy as an example.

And he said the relationship between the board and the administration should be like any business relationship.

"It shouldn't be adversarial, but it shouldn't be buddy-buddy either," he said.

The evening's serious moments were lightened with quips from the audience and Blastock himself, as he modestly shrugged off the hurrah and the fanfare.

"The first few years, we (the board) met many times. Seems to me Bob probably met more with board members than with his wife," said John Coleman, an original trustee.

"A likely story," interjected Blastock's wife.

Coleman said the board used to kid Blastock about his being the only trustee who was a student at the same time. And he credited Blastock with getting the college district's boundaries extended to include Jerome County.

Blastock has earned more than 40 credit hours at CSI.

Appointed as the first chairman by Gov. Robert E. Smylie, Blastock said the college has progressed much further than he imagined it would in 1964.

"But not beyond my dreams," he was quick to add.

Blastock said he thinks the school will continue progressing. His prediction is that students someday will be able to earn four-year degrees, and maybe even master's degrees.

Seed case awarded to family

RUPERT — The judge in a landmark seed-certification case has upheld a jury's verdict and awarded more than $30,000 in attorney's fees to a Rupert farm family.

Fifth District Judge J. William Hart ruled against the Idaho Crop Improvement Association, which asked to overturn a September jury verdict awarding the Rupert farmers $125,000 in damages.

"I think it's just what we expected, from what happened in court," said Greg Lowry, executive secretary for the association.

Lowry said the association hasn't decided whether it will appeal the decision and declined to comment further.

"There's too many things that are in kind of an undecided mode right now," he said.

"I'm sure those folks are probably a little green around the gills," said John Hahnhorst, who represents the Rupert farmers.

Doug Grant and his sons Chip and Duane filed the suit in 1986.

After a two-week trial ending Sept. 10, a Rupert jury agreed with the Grants, who said the association sold seed infected with ring rot. The jury also agreed with charges that the association listed the seed in its 1984 Potato Seed Directory as meeting the standards of the Virus Tested Certification Program when it knew one-third of the seed lots tested had virus levels too high to qualify.

The jury ruled that the association was grossly negligent in misrepresenting the quality of the seed the Grants purchased.

Parties to the lawsuit filed a flurry of post-trial motions after the jury awarded the $125,000 against the association and $21,151 in damages.

Son's medical condition dominates 5th day of Idaho Power trial

By KRISTAN WATKINS
Times-News correspondent

HAILLEY — Patrick Clement's medical condition dominated the fifth day of a civil suit brought by Joseph and Cheri Clement charging Idaho Power Co. with negligence in their son, Patrick's, electrocution last year at a substation.

Dr. Stephen Luber, Patrick's pediatrician, testified Tuesday that Patrick Clement suffered from attention deficit disorder (ADD) and hyperactivity and was being treated with medication prior to and at the time of his death in September 1987.

Clement was killed when he gained entrance to a substation and climbed on top of the equipment. The Clements are arguing that an outer fence had room at its bottom to crawl under and an inner fence gate was not locked.

They are suing Idaho Power for an unspecified amount.

Also on Tuesday, after the plaintiffs had presented their case, Idaho Power attorney James Risch opened the defense by talking about Patrick Clement.

"He had ADD and associated hyperactivity," Risch said. "He had some indications of conduct disorder. He did not appreciate, unfortunately, that he had any consequences of what he did."

Risch said the defense is "going to say some things that aren't very nice about Patrick Clement. We're sorry about that and it does not demean this terrible tragedy."

Clement, Risch said, had "serious problems."

With Luber on the stand and under cross-examination, Risch read from Luber's medical notes about Clement's treatment the months prior to his death, during which Luber changed medication and dosage several times.

"It seems to me, doctor, with the use of these adjectives — deteriorating, disintegrating, declining — that Patrick was not getting any better," Risch said.

"He was having problems with his illness that we were trying to work through," Luber replied.

Risch later asked Luber if Patrick Clement's condition had deteriorated.

"To interpret it from a legal point of view makes no sense," Luber replied. "We were working through the problems of an ADD child. Those notes were written for me, not for you or, quite frankly, for the jury."

The Clements' attorney, R. Keith Roark, asked Luber if he thought the accident was caused by Patrick's ADD.

"No, I do not," Luber said.

Roark also asked Luber if thought climbing under a fence was abnormal curiosity for a seven-year-boy.

No, Luber answered.

Clement was treated in January, March, July, August and September of 1987 for his condition, according to Luber's medical notes. His original medication was changed and an additional drug was prescribed in August of 1987 when Cheri Clement brought behavior problems to Luber's attention.

ADD is a disorder characterized by the "inability to concentrate on the task at hand," Luber said. He said about 6 percent of the population suffers from ADD and that he treats about 100 patients in his Sun Valley practice.

Luber also said that Patrick's brothers, Joey and Andrew, also suffered from ADD, and unlike his brothers, Patrick also suffered from hyperactivity.

Luber first diagnosed Patrick Clement with ADD May 9, 1986. He was treated for the condition until the time of his death in September 1987.

Risch read from a report which described Patrick Clement's behavior at the Learning Tree, a Hailley pre-school, as "bussy, hyperactive, difficult to control."

In other opening remarks, Risch told the jury that the defense would talk about the fence the boys allegedly crawled under and the photograph the plaintiff attorneys have entered in evidence in the trial.

"Is this a true and accurate photograph?" asked Risch.

The trial should conclude sometime next week.

Attorney Ed Benoit named to Lottery Commission

By The Times-News
and The Associated Press

BOISE — Twin Falls attorney Ed Benoit was named to the new Idaho Lottery Commission Tuesday, along with a newspaper publisher, a broadcast executive and a retired utility chief.

Another person with local connections, Boise businessman and Twin Falls native Wallace Hedrick, was appointed lottery director, a post that will pay about $46,000 per year.

Perhaps to ease concerns that Idaho might have the same problems other areas have had with lotteries, Gov. Cecil Andrus picked commissioners he knew personally. He used "honest," "personal integrity" and "people of stature" to describe his four new commission selections.

An additional commission member was appointed last year.

Benoit, 67, and the other four commissioners will make policy decisions for the Idaho lottery.

"There is a law so there are going to have to be some rules and regulations," Benoit said.

"The people of Idaho have spoken not once, but twice, on the question of a state lottery," Andrus told a Boise news conference. "I am determined to carry out their wishes in a highly professional, fiscally responsible and timely manner."

"I have selected five Idahoans for service on the commission who each bring the job knowledge, integrity and a history of public service," the governor said.

Named Tuesday were:

Amalgamated Sugar sale talks break off

The Associated Press

BOISE — Talks between a Dallas-based corporation and a British company on the sale of Amalgamated Sugar Co. have broken off, officials said.

A spokesman for Valhi Inc. of Dallas, which owns Amalgamated, said the company had been unable to resolve a number of issues with Bristar, a major British sugar producer and there was no reasonable prospect for concluding an acceptable agreement.

The companies had set a Dec. 30 deadline for wrapping up the deal on Amalgamated, the Ogdon-based company that operates sugarbeet processing plants in Nyssa, Ore., and Nampa, Twin Falls and Paul.

The Twin Falls and Paul factories together employ about 800 people and provide large sugar beet contracts to area farmers.

A subsidiary of Valhi, Amalgamated employees about 2,700 workers and posted net earnings of over $19 million during the first nine months of this year.

No purchase price was ever disclosed, but Valhi President Michael Snetzer had said at one point the deal would net his company about $185 million after taxes.

Bristar is the food division of S&W Berisford PLC.

McRoberts feels 'better' about INEL after a tour

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Since state Sen. Joyce McRoberts, R-Twin Falls, heard so much about the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory during her campaign, she thought it would be a good idea to see it firsthand.

Although she said after a tour of the site Monday that her opinions about the direction of INEL have not changed, she says she feels better about how nuclear waste is stored and handled.

"I was impressed with the cleanliness and the monitoring for safety," McRoberts said. "I didn't know how they were storing it, and I feel better than I did beforehand."

McRoberts, who was elected to the Senate seat formerly held by her husband, Darrel, said she still believes steps should be taken to remove nuclear waste stored at INEL before new projects are brought on board.

"There's still some more work to be done, but they admit that, too," she said.

McRoberts was one of a handful of legislators from outside eastern Idaho, the only one from Twin Falls, to participate in the tour. It was sponsored by Citizens for INEL and the Idaho Falls Chamber of Commerce.

Also joining the tour were three legislators from the Boise area and one from Cataldo.

A number of eastern Idaho mayors and county officials were among the approximately 50 people on the tour.

"The response was better than I expected in terms of numbers," said Sen. John Hansen, R-Idaho Falls. "I think people were reassured about the commitment to protect the environment and to develop multiple projects. I wish more were here, but considering that people only had two weeks' notice, I think the turnout was tremendous."

Activities included visits to the Radioactive Waste Management Complex and the Idaho Chemical Processing Plant. INEL Manager Don O'Brien gave an overview and DOE officials briefed the group about waste management, the defense-related Special Isotope Separation Project and the Boron-Neutron Capture Therapy program.

JOYCE McROBERTS Takes a look at INEL

Rep. Boyd Hill, R-Meridian, said he also was making his first tour of INEL. He said his positive feelings about the INEL were confirmed. "I'm satisfied they are handling the waste safely and efficiently," Hill said. "If people really understood the mensurors they were taking to protect the environment, their fears would be unfounded."

Hill said he has supported the controversial SIS-and-NPR-projects "from day one." With the SIS, Hill said he was more interested in laser technology than plutonium refinement.

Mayor Larry Young of Ketchum remained skeptical about the wisdom of bringing defense-related projects to the INEL. He said he joined part of the tour to learn more about INEL.

"I want to find out whether people from eastern Idaho are evaluating various proposals on the merits of the projects — rather than desiring to maintain a certain level of employment," Young said.

"It's difficult for people from eastern Idaho to view these things objectively, just as it would be for me to be objective about closing Bald Mountain," Bald Mountain is a ski hill at Ketchum operated by Sun Valley Co. It is a major source of revenue and employment in the Wood River Valley.

Young said he was trying to avoid making the "shoot-from-the-hip comment" he previously has made about INEL, to search for a broader view.

Young said he hoped the trend was not for more production and less research. He said he hoped Sens. Jim McClure and Steve Symms were not setting up the state as "the last outpost for things other states don't want done."

One Cecil Andrus asked DOE officials last week to speed up the process of removing buried waste at INEL.

Sen. Ann Rydahl, R-Idaho Falls, said INEL opponents such as Young add unnecessary costs and delays to new projects that benefit the state. She criticized state government for being overzealous in its oversight responsibilities.

"We need to sit by and let the state add millions of dollars to the costs by requiring additional permits," she said.

But she said the state's problem is not over aggressive regulation. It is instead understaffing caused by relatively low pay for technical people.

"I don't think we have a problem with the state except that they're understaffed."

Boise man is charged after hit-run spree

TWIN FALLS — A Boise man driving a 25-year-old camouflaged van frequented through Twin Falls Monday night, striking up to 10 vehicles in a hit-and-run spree, police allege.

Steve Robert Johnson, 21, was charged Tuesday with driving under the influence, driving without insurance and four counts of leaving the scene of an accident, court records show. Johnson, formerly of Hagerman, was being held in lieu of $15,000 bail.

Johnson was also hit with an arrest warrant accusing him of failing to appear for sentencing on a DUI conviction in January 1987, court records show.

The first reported hit-and-run accident occurred around 9:26 p.m. in the parking lot of the Pay Less Drug Store, police records show. Witnesses told police that a camouflaged-green van struck two parked cars and then drove away.

Four minutes later, a van matching that description hit another parked vehicle in the parking lot of Mr. Gas, police records show. Again, the van left without stopping.

About 15 minutes later, police stopped Johnson as he was driving a 1963 Ford van in the 600 block of Blue Lakes Boulevard North, police records show. He was arrested and booked on five charges, and a passenger, 18-year-old Troy Kesling, was cited for illegal consumption of alcohol and then released.

In police and court records, authorities allege that Johnson also struck a pickup in the 100 block of Sixth Avenue North.

No Scrooges in Twin Falls for bell ringers

By The Times-News and Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — Though Salvation Army bell ringers in Boise are accusing Price Development Corp. of playing Scrooge, bell ringers in Twin Falls are well on their way to collecting enough money to pay for Christmas charities.

Bell ringers will be barred from the new Boise Towne Square mall, owned by Price, and Boise donations to the organization have dropped 18 percent this Christmas season, officials say.

In Twin Falls, however, the Salvation Army has been ringing bells outside the major stores in the Price-owned Magic Valley Mall through arrangements with individual store managers. That arrangement has worked well because many shoppers enter the mall through the Shopko, J.C. Penney and Bon Marche entrances, said Lt. Rob Nolan of Twin Falls.

Magic Valley Mall Manager Don Chandler said the Salvation Army has not contacted him, but mall officials have been happy to let bell ringers stay.

"Collections are going well," Nolan said. "We're at least on the same pace as last year if not ahead. I'm quite pleased... If I could get it a skyriveter to say, 'Thank you Magic Valley, I would.'"

Last year shoppers dropped $180,000 in merchandise and dollar bills into the army's kettles around Twin Falls.

The money both cheers the needy and lonely during the holiday season and finances Salvation Army operations year-round. This Christmas the army will be passing out food baskets, giving away toys for children and visiting nursing and retirement homes with Christmas gifts.

But in Boise, army officials fear they will not have enough money to buy toys for needy children, and the group is scrambling to collect more toys from other agencies.

In Boise by this time last year, the Salvation Army's bell ringers had collected $144,631. They have gathered about $36,000 this year, spokeswoman Joy Buehler said.

"We panicked when we started looking at the figures," she said. Seeing the potential for Christmas fund-raising at the new mall, Buehler asked Boise Towne Square officials in September to allow the Salvation Army to solicit during the Christmas season.

Anticipating mall managers would not want bells resonating in the enclosed area of the mall, she suggested the Salvation Army could play music or solicit in some other way. But mall Manager Bob Mitchell said that because so many groups ask for access to malls around Christmas, Price does not feel it can fairly choose whom to allow and whom to exclude.

"We have a hard time with the phrase, 'If we let you in, we have to let everyone else in,'" said Capt. Don Starrett, the Salvation Army's Boise commander. "We're not just 'everyone.' We have 120 years of tradition."

Price would be risking a lawsuit if it allowed the Salvation Army in and excluded some other groups that had requested space during the holidays, Mitchell said.

But the Salvation Army has wanted to resolve that legal question and it solicits in more than 90 percent of the malls nationwide.

Buhl man hurt after collision with pole

TWIN FALLS — A Buhl man was injured Tuesday when his pickup went off a highway southwest of here and snapped a power pole in two, sheriff's officials said.

Alejandro Ortiz, 40, was transported to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center where he was treated and released, hospital officials said. Authorities cited Ortiz for driving under the influence.

The accident occurred around 7:14 a.m. on State Highway 74, about a mile and a half southwest of Twin Falls, said Jim Bell, deputy with the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office.

Ortiz, driving a 1978 Ford pickup, was headed north when the truck went into a ditch, snapped a power pole and then rolled once.

Idaho Power Co. employees were called to the scene to reconnect power to the surrounding area, sheriff's reports show.

Seed

against Max Herbold Inc., the company that sold the Grants the seed. The jury also awarded Herbold $10,000 with the post-trial motions and Hart's rulings were:

The association asked Hart to reduce the $125,000 award by two-thirds, since four of the six trucks of seed potatoes the Grants received weren't graded, tagged or sealed, the final step of certification. Hart denied the motion.

The association asked Hart either to grant a new trial or to overturn the jury's verdict. The association argued in part that the tort of negligent misrepresentation doesn't exist in Idaho. Hart denied the motion, in part because the association relied on the concept as part of its tactical approach in the trial.

The Grants asked for attorney's fees from the association. Hart granted the motion, and Hohnhorst estimated those fees at $31,445 plus costs of $6,215. The money will be thrown in a pot to be divided between Hohnhorst and his clients. Hohnhorst said he took the case on a contingency basis, with an agreement that he will keep between 35 percent and 40 percent of a jury's award.

Herbold asked for attorney's fees from the Grants and the association.

Hart granted Herbold's request, but only for the attorney's fee expended against the association.

The Grants also asked Hart for a judgment of fraud against the association despite the jury's decision that no fraud existed. Hart denied the motion.

The Grants asked for prejudgment interest on the award against Herbold. Hart granted the motion and calculated the interest since May 1985 at $10,909 on a principal amount of $21,151.

The parties have 42 days to appeal.

meetings. Also honored Monday were 25 CSI employees who have worked at the college for 20 years or more: Marv Strope, Fran Tanner, Ben Pratt, George Clawson, Marilyn Blackburn, Elaine Schmidt, Hal Ross, Mike R. Glenn, LaVar Steel, Tom Duncan, Gerald Meyerhoefer, Dave Perkins, Gerald Bradley, Bill Matlock, Mary Ann Fisher, Mary Glascock, Jim Rambo, Mike Green, Bob Wright, Jim Gentry, Neil Cross, Virginia Bright, Glenn-Baum, Bob McManaman and Marilyn Mecham.

man, Wash. Shelley, a former Associated Press newsmen, holds a number of board positions including the AP national audit committee and the Pulitzer Prize Committee.

Approved last year was Teresa DeShon, Sandpoint, a longtime member of the Sandpoint City Council.

Former Secret Service agent Michael R. Best, Eagle, was named director of security. His salary will be set by the board but officials said he will be paid about the same as for a comparable position with the Department of Law Enforcement.

Voters approved a lottery initiative in 1986, but it was blocked by lawsuits and eventually invalidated by the Idaho Supreme Court. Last month, a constitutional amendment designed to clear the way for a lottery was approved by voters. But officials have estimated it will take about six months to get the lottery machinery in operation.

Andrus said Idaho has approached Oregon about perhaps getting a franchise for that state's lottery, which would reduce the lottery startup costs. But he said whether Idaho would join other states, or would have its own operation, is to be decided by the Lottery Commission.

Water protection will cost $911,000

POCATELLO (AP) — The governor's budget director says it will cost $911,000, including $905,000 in state funds, to carry out a new plan to protect state water quality from nonpoint source pollution.

Budget Director Chuck Moss said Tuesday the departments of Health and Welfare, Lands, Water Resources and Fish and Game all are seeking money to carry out the anti-degradation agreement reached by conservationists and industry officials earlier this year.

Moss said the request is for $270,000 from the general fund and $635,000 in designated funds and $6,000 in federal funds.

The request will be considered by Gov. Cecil Andrus before he makes his fiscal 1990 budget recommendation Jan. 11.

Bureau Chief, state Water Quality, Al Murray, said public hearings will be needed in the state's six river basins. The state also needs to set up an extensive monitoring program.

Monitoring will determine if best management practices (BMPs) are adequate to protect streams from non-point pollution sources such as logging, mining and agriculture.

Implementation of the agreement is the key, and in order to implement the agreement some substantial funding is needed," Murray said.

The indications are the Legislature will give high consideration to providing adequate funds. We are pretty optimistic funding will be forthcoming," he added.

Will Whelan, Idaho Conservation League policy analyst, said his biggest fear is the appropriation will not be sufficient to implement the agreement. "We are probably in the ballpark, but this (request) is probably at the low end of the scale," he said.

Minidoka schools approve snow routes

By BARBARA WARD
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — The Minidoka County School Board on Monday approved alternate bus routes in case of heavy snowfall this winter.

The board also voted to allow the use of school facilities for Idaho's centennial celebration but delayed any decision on a bus garage in need of repair.

The winter weather plan calls for buses to allow roads which are usually the first ones plowed. The district requests that parents be responsible for getting their children to one of the following roads or pick-up points:

- In Paul, three buses wait at Merrill's Mini Mart and three at the Reifer Store on 600 West. Buses going south of town are to take their regular routes if possible.
- In Heyburn all buses go out on its regular routes except Route 52.
- These students meet the bus at the underpass at Kuspa Road.
- North of Rupert one bus collects students at Minidoka, two buses go up 400 East if it is open, three buses go to Norland via Meridian if it is open, one bus goes up 200 West if it is open and two buses at East Baseline Bridge, downward. All buses south of Heyburn go on their regular routes. If the district decides to close school for a day, reports should be on the radio by early morning. Safety of students will take priority over the concerns of a particular individual when deciding whether to close school, Superintendent Gene Snapp said.

Snapp noted that radios on the buses have improved communication between buses during snow storms, and commented that "the highway people are great. They leave the plows out on the roads until the buses get in."

In other matters, the board decided to delay until later this week any decision on the bus garage, which the city building inspector has said might not be able to support a heavy roof due to deteriorating trusses.

The board decided to visit the garage again after Scott McClure, a structural engineer hired for the tentative remodeling of the garage, presented four options to meet building code.

- Replace the entire building for about $461,100.
- Demolish the problem area, salvage the remainder of the building and replace the lost square footage for about $214,088.
- Install a metal roof over the problem area for about $54,050.
- Reinforce the existing roof for about $37,400.

The board voted to allow the Minidoka County Centennial Committee to use the high school multi-purpose room and gym for Idaho centennial celebrations but may set some restrictions later.

Committee member Murva Myers asked to use the multi-purpose room for a Centennial Ball March 11, 1989, to kick off the celebration. She also asked for the multi-purpose room and gym for a second ball, planned for Jan. 13, 1990.

Myers encouraged the district to promote a Minidoka County "design-the-flag" contest for the centennial. She said that entries for designing a Minidoka County flag need to be turned in to the Chamber of Commerce by Feb. 28, 1989. A $100 cash prize is offered. The winning design will be announced at the Centennial Kick-off on March 11.

The board approved a new history on current trends in American history to begin in January. Thirty-two seniors have said they are interested in the course.

It appears students walking to Big Valley School along 18th Street will finally have a sidewalk. Final plans for the construction should be agreed upon by the January board meeting.

The board has been meeting with Newport City Council members to work out a joint arrangement to get the sidewalk built.

In other matters, the board:

- Discussed and approved student teacher assignments for Idaho State University students Terril Cattmull, Ida Chugg, Daniel Rogers, Kay Ann White, Laurie Honsinger, Ken West and Karen Bortz.
- Approved teacher contracts for Terry Balthazor, Elise Breillatt, Shane Matson, Phyllis Peterson and Terry Garner.
- Discussed possible dates in January for the annual school visitation by the board.

Stolen diesel generators are recovered

OKALEY — Authorities have recovered two diesel generators that were stolen after a Union Pacific train derailed Nov. 18 just east of Minidoka.

The generators, owned by Union

Pacific and worth about $2,500 each, were found this weekend near Okaley, said Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal. The generators, built by General Motors Corp., weigh 1,500 pounds apiece, prompting speculation that the thieves used machinery to remove them from the wreck site.

A large amount of perishable goods, such as onions, sugar and frozen french fries and vegetables, was also stolen from the wreckage.

Burley woman hurt in Twin Falls accident

TWIN FALLS — A Burley woman was injured Monday in a three-car accident in downtown Twin Falls, police records show.

Jackie White, 25, was taken to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center where she was treated and released, officials there said.

White was driving a 1985 Plymouth south in the 200 block of Shoshone Street when she rear-ended a 1984 Saab driven by Linda Birrell, 38, of Twin Falls, police records show. Birrell's car in turn struck a 1985 Mercury driven by Larry Schneider, 50, of Twin Falls.

No one else was injured in the accident, which occurred around 2:43 p.m., police records show. White was cited for following another vehicle too closely.

2 are hurt in 3-car accident Tuesday in Buhl

BUHL — At least two people were injured Tuesday in a three-car accident at the intersection of Sawtooth Boulevard and Clear Lakes Road in Buhl.

Gwenlyn Veach, 45, and Robb Parks, both of Buhl, were taken by ambulance to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center where they were treated and released, hospital officials said.

A third person, Melissa Schmidt, 29, of Buhl, told police that she was going to go to the hospital by private vehicle.

The accident occurred around 7:42 a.m., said Les Cochran, chief of the Buhl Police Department. Veach, Parks and Schmidt were the three drivers involved, but further information was not available Tuesday.

Burley woman hurt after truck collision

BUURLEY — A Burley woman was listed in stable condition Tuesday after an accident in which her car hit a tractor-trailer north of here.

Lori Hall, 31, was in the intensive care unit at Pocatello Regional Medical Center, hospital officials said. She was transferred to Pocatello from Cassia Memorial Hospital Monday night.

Hall was injured around 8:40 p.m. Monday and had to be extricated from her vehicle, a 1978 Datsun hatchback, Cassia County sheriff's officials said. Traffic was blocked for about an hour while authorities removed Hall and cleaned up the wreckage.

Hall was driving north on State Highway 27 when she swerved into the oncoming lane of traffic to avoid a box in her lane, sheriff's officials said. Her car went sideways and was struck by a tractor-trailer driven by Emerd James, 60, of Burley.

James was not injured in the accident, sheriff's officials said.

Suicide suspected in shooting death

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls woman committed suicide Tuesday by shooting herself in a Twin Falls cemetery, authorities said.

Sandy Presgraves, 22, was found dead at Sunset Memorial, 2296 Kimberly Road, said Twin Falls County Assistant Coroner Jim Mildon.

Around 8 a.m., passersby spotted her body near lying on a grave.

The time of death was estimated at 7 a.m., Mildon said. The death was ruled a suicide.

Jury in polygamist trial still has no verdict

COALVILLE, Utah (AP) — A 3rd District Court jury ended its second day of deliberations Tuesday without a verdict in the second-degree murder trial of three polygamist clan members accused in the slaying of a law officer during a siege-ending January shootout.

Judge Michael Murphy had said he would allow the jury to set its own schedule, and the panel chose to go home at 6 p.m. Tuesday night after 8 hours of deliberations and to return at 8 a.m. Wednesday. The jury had deliberated three hours Monday before adjourning.

The four men and four women are deciding the fates of clan leader Addam Swapp, 27; his brother Jonathan Swapp, 21; and brother-in-law John Timothy Singer, 22.

ISU admits it oversold 'A Taste of Idaho' to public

POCATELLO (AP) — "We apparently oversold 'A Taste of Idaho', but we kept our promise to have enough food for everyone," says John Colaianni, executive director of the Idaho State University Bengal Foundation.

The school staged a special dinner Friday night as part of hosting the NCAA Division I-AA national championship football game. Pocatello is trying to land the game next year, for the third straight year.

Colaianni said there has been some criticism because the party drew double the 1987 crowd and some people had to stand in line up to two hours to get food. Others gave up, and left.

"We overestimated our ability to serve," he explained, "but food was available up to midnight."

Colaianni has called a meeting of sponsors for Wednesday. "We'll sit down and try to figure out how to solve the problems we encountered," Colaianni said.

One of the biggest problems for a function like the "Chili Cookoff," is the limited wiring in the building, he said. But a big plus was the success of the "Chili Cookoff," Colaianni said.

Three years ago, that project was just about dead, he said. This year participation was fantastic with applicants turned away because of lack of facilities.

In retrospect, Colaianni found much to be pleased about. The food was good, the entertainment was good and the support was good.

Protesters burn models of the ferry Dona Paz and oil tanker Vector

AP Laserphoto

Demonstrators remember Dona Paz

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — About 300 people marched to the presidential palace Tuesday, the anniversary of the world's worst seacetime ship disaster, and declared a curse on the government and the shipping line.

Protesters burned two papier-mache models of ships to commemorate the Dec. 20, 1987, collision of the inter-island ferry Dona Paz and the oil tanker Vector off Mindoro Island. More than 3,000 people were killed.

Two men slit the throats of two chickens and spattered the models with blood.

The marchers stopped and held them at a bridge leading to President Corason Aquino's office.

"In the name of all our loved ones, wherever they are, we swear that all those responsible shall be made to pay for the deaths and injustices they caused," members of the crowd chanted in unison. "We will not lose hope until all those responsible are punished."

A presidential commission said at least 3,563 people were aboard the two ships, but only 26 survived. Survivors and relatives say the government and the Dona Paz's owners, Sulpicio Shipping Lines, should provide more compensation to victims' families and take more steps to prevent future maritime disasters.

Tuesday's protesters lit candles to set fire to the papier mache models. As the flames set off firecrackers inside the models, hundreds wailed and began reciting a curse traditional among people of the central Visayas islands, which was home to most of the victims.

"We vow to be more active in the attainment of justice for our loved ones and all other victims of oppression," the crowd recited.

South Korea gives amnesty to 2,015

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The government announced an amnesty for 2,015 of its political enemies Tuesday, but warned that tough measures would be enforced to restore law and order.

"I want to emphasize that the act of clemency is coupled with the administration's unflinching determination to speedily restore the weakened public confidence in the law-enforcement authority of the state," said Prime Minister Kang Young-hoon.

Government officials said 281 people will be released from prison Wednesday; civil rights will be restored to 1,581 people who are free on parole; the sentences of 92 others will be reduced; and 61 people will be removed from the police "wanted" list.

Among those to be freed are Kim Hyun-jung and Moon Bo-shik, each of whom is serving a 20-year sentence on charges of leading a raid on the U.S. Cultural Center in the southeastern city of Pusan in 1982.

Takeshita to visit Bush

The Baltimore Sun

TOKYO — Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita will go to Washington for a five-day pre-inaugural visit next month to seek "a personal relationship" with President-elect George Bush, Japanese newspapers reported Tuesday.

The prime minister is to arrive in the United States Jan. 5 and leave Jan. 9, the Kyodo News Service said.

The leak of dates, during a period when Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze is in Japan discussing a possible visit by President Mikhail Gorbachev, gave a degree of the diplomatic balance that Japanese officials often seek.

Kyodo quoted government sources as saying that Takeshita's visit will be aimed not only at getting a head start on relations with the new Bush administration but also at substantive talks on selected disputes between the leaders of the world's two largest economies.

Japanese news reports specified Japan's virtual ban on rice imports, which is hotly challenged by the U.S. Rice Millers Association, and Japan's continuing lopsided surpluses in the two countries' trade, as issues that Takeshita hopes to address.

The trade imbalance has subsided some in the past year in response to the Reagan administration's decision two years ago to let the dollar fall.

Ruling divides Quebec

TORONTO (AP) — Regional and linguistic antagonisms that have threatened unity throughout Canada's history are reviving because Quebec will not comply with a ruling that it allow the posting of signs in English.

The Supreme Court said last week the predominantly French-speaking province is justified in making sure French predominates on signs but cannot prevent the use of other languages.

Robert Bourassa, the provincial premier, angered both English speakers and militants from the majority with his compromise last Sunday: French must remain the only language on outdoor signs but other languages can be used indoors so long as French predominates.

Environment Minister Clifford Lincoln, one of four English speakers in Bourassa's Cabinet, resigned Tuesday and said: "In my beliefs, rights are rights are rights. There are no partial rights. There are no indoor-outdoor rights."

Sri Lanka elects new president

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Prime Minister Ranasinghe Premadasa was declared winner Tuesday of Sri Lanka's presidential election, and he appealed for an end to the killing that has crippled this tropical island nation.

"The ballots of the people have triumphed over the bullets of brutality," Premadasa said.

"The politics of terror has no place in the temple of democracy," he said. "I will eradicate fear and suppression. I will restore law and order."

Premadasa's victory with slightly more than half of the votes ended a campaign marked by hundreds of slayings, which the government blames on the People's Liberation Front, a Sinhalese extremist group that opposed the balloting.

Police said members of the group hucked and shot to death nine supporters of Premadasa's party Tuesday in Bandarawela, 76 miles east of Colombo.

A 9 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew was imposed on the nation of 16 million to prevent violence after the results were announced. "I have an appeal to make to those who have still to join the democratic process," Premadasa said in a televised address.

Red Cross workers leave Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The International Committee of the Red Cross withdrew its 17-member staff in Lebanon on Tuesday after the workers received death threats.

The Swiss delegates left Moslem west Beirut for the Christian eastern sector, then boarded a ferry for Larnaca, Cyprus, said police in the Christian part of Jounieh, north of Beirut. They will fly to Switzerland on Wednesday.

In Geneva, the all-Swiss organization said it had suspended its humanitarian operations in Lebanon after hearing Monday "that serious threats had been made against its delegates on mission in Lebanon, placing their lives in acute danger."

"The ICRC therefore feels compelled to suspend its entire humanitarian operation there and to repatriate all its expatriate staff immediately," a Red Cross statement said.

Tuesday's action by the Red Cross marked the first time in the more than 100-year history of the organization that delegates were withdrawn because of threats on their lives.

A committee spokesman, Carlos Bauer, declined to say how the death threats were received.

Record numbers of Japanese go abroad

TOKYO (AP) — A record 6.83 million Japanese traveled abroad in 1987, taking advantage of the yen's continued strengthening against the U.S. dollar, the government said Tuesday.

The number was up 23.8 percent from the previous record of 5.52 million in 1986, according to an annual report.

"We believe we'll be able to see 10 million people (a year) going abroad within five years," said Yasushi Babasaki of the Transport Ministry's Research and Planning Division.

In 1987, the Japanese government launched a program to double the number of Japanese travelers abroad in a five-year period to help give this nation of 120 million a more international outlook.

There's plenty of room in Bethlehem's inns this Christmas

Los Angeles Times

BETHLEHEM, Occupied West Bank — Were a man and his expectant wife to arrive in Bethlehem one starry night this year via the mountain road from Judea, they would find an "occupied" town with few tidings of comfort and joy.

They'd probably be stopped on the way into town by armed men demanding to see their identity papers. And a glance around town for signs of Christmas celebrations would reveal only a few meagre decorations and a multitude of door faces.

There would be plenty of room at almost any inn in town, and inability to pay would be no hindrance because local residents have banded together in their time of need to help each other out.

Fabled Bethlehem, birthplace of the Christian savior, is a sad place of constant tension this year. An outside power rules here, just like 2,000 years ago. But instead of it being Roman rule over the Israelis, it is Israeli rule over 50,000 Christian and Moslem townspeople.

"This is going to be the most pathetic Christmas in memory," said Bethlehem Mayor Elias Frej, a man normally noted for his meriment in this time of year. But he will not be presiding over any Christmas reception this year. Nor will there be an official Christmas tree at Nativity Square.

And instead of the traditional score of choirs from around the world, only five will be on hand for a brief round of caroling at the square on Christmas Eve.

"How are we supposed to celebrate when we're suffering under Israeli occupation policies more than ever?" asks a Christian Arab. There's hardly a family that has not somebody or suffered injury or doesn't have relatives in an Israeli prison.

Bethlehem, which lives on tourism, has been hard hit by the infatada, the Palestinian uprising in the occupied territories. Tourists fearful of being caught in the midst of the uprising have shunned the West Bank, leaving hotels, restaurants and souvenir shops here with gaping losses.

Thousands of craftsmen who carve the wooden nativity figures and crosses for the tourist trade are out of work this year.

"Only a few tour buses come through here now for a half-hour stop in town. Tourists buy one of the bus and run into the Church of the Nativity and then scramble back aboard the bus," complains Abu Aitah, a merchant.

Many of the town's 48 restaurants closed their doors months ago. Nearly all shops comply with a 12 noon closing time in protest against the Israelis. With shutters drawn, Bethlehem takes on the ghostly air of every other West Bank town these days.

Children of holocaust survivors trade tales

JERUSALEM (AP) — When Sam Lieberman was a boy in Minneapolis, he spent many nightmarish nights crying at the bedside of his mother as she recounted the horrors of the Auschwitz death camp.

"I really had no choice but to listen, because my father wouldn't," said Lieberman, one of more than 300 people from 15 countries attending the six-day First International Jerusalem Conference of Children of Holocaust Survivors.

The gathering, which ends Friday, offered lectures on issues such as the pursuit of Nazi war criminals and creative responses to the Holocaust, as well as tours of the Yad Vashem Holocaust Memorial and the Western Wall, Judaism's holiest site.

Lieberman, 40, said he attended the gathering to "hear what others are doing with the baggage their parents left them."

His own childhood, Lieberman said, "was overshadowed by the suffering of his late mother, Frida, who spent nearly four years in Auschwitz, a death camp in Nazi-occupied Poland."

"When I heard my mother crying at night, I would wake up and cry along with her. She unloaded everything on me. I was 8 when I first heard about Auschwitz," Lieberman said, holding back tears several times during an interview Tuesday.

Whenever a siren sounded in the neighborhood, his Polish-born mother would jump up and drag her children into the basement, thinking it was an air raid, said Lieberman, who works for a brokerage firm.

He and other children of Holocaust survivors felt isolated from the rest of the Jewish community because "our parents were just so peculiar and crazy," he said.

The feeling is shared by many of the about 500,000 children of the world's 1.5 million Holocaust survivors, said Rabbi Abraham Cooper, an associate dean of the Simon Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles, one of the co-sponsors of the conference.

In the past decade, support groups have sprung up in the United States, helping about 2,500 people, Cooper said.

Cooper noted that Lieberman's case was not typical because the vast majority of Holocaust survivors would not talk to their children about their experiences.

"Most children of survivors don't know a lot about their parents," said Dulce Moche, 39, of San Francisco. "We never asked questions because it generated too much pain."

Ms. Moche's parents were raised in the Greek city of Salonika where 95 percent of the 60,000 Jewish residents were killed by the Nazis. Most of her parents' relatives were killed.

Her mother, Lona, was sent to a prisoner of war camp instead of a death camp because she held an American passport.

"My mother was a romantic person and, for her, the relatives never died. She needed to maintain that illusion," said Ms. Moche, an employee at a Jewish community center.

The parents' suffering had a profound effect on her, Ms. Moche said. "They made me feel that the world is a precarious and unstable place. Their fear shaped every aspect of their lives. For example, my parents were terrified of authority," she said.

The refusal to confront the past is not only common among survivors, but also among Jewish communities overseas and in Israel, said Yehuda Bauer, a professor of Holocaust studies at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

"Those who came to Israel after the Holocaust were suppressed by those who already lived there," Bauer told the conference. "The Israeli public couldn't comprehend what happened."

He argued that even though the Holocaust is frequently at the center of state commemorations and public speeches, it is usually misinterpreted to avoid painful questions.

"Our society is suffering from a collective trauma," he said. "The only way to get out of this is to confront these problems."

U.N. panel adopts drug convention

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A U.N. conference today adopted an international convention against illicit drug trafficking and drug abuse that it hopes will deal an efficient blow to those who sell and use drugs.

It is significant because it represents a commitment by over a hundred other nations to cooperate in fighting the problems of drug trafficking and drug abuse. U.S. Attorney General Richard Thornburgh said all their assents.

"It's apparent that no one nation alone or within its own borders can deal with the multinational operations of the drug cartels," Thornburgh said.

The convention for the first time gives all signatory countries the right of extradition of suspected drug traffickers and the right to confiscate all their assets.

The document, first conceived four years ago, was signed by 43 countries, including the United States, at the close of the monthlong U.N. conference.

Israeli parties will ban PLO talks

JERUSALEM (AP) — The right-wing Likud bloc and left-leaning Labor Party agreed Tuesday to ban talks with the PLO in the new government, setting Israel on a collision course with the United States.

The two major parties appeared headed for a national unity government similar to that of the last four years, but hardliners in Shamir's party fought a last-ditch effort to overturn the agreement.

In a speech, Likud's former defense minister, led the opposition. He told about 2,000 party delegates who met in Tel Aviv to vote on the agreement that Labor was an unfit partner because it favored withdrawal from the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip and some of its members approved of talking to the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Israel views the PLO as a terrorist group. "In labor, they say they must speak to the PLO. Dear friends, this is not our position," Sharon told the meeting.

Cosmonauts prepare to return soon

MOSCOW (AP) — Two record-setting cosmonauts marked one year in space Tuesday and prepared to return to Earth along with a French colleague.

Cosmonauts Vladimir Titov and Musa Manarov, who have spent more time in space than anyone else, reported to ground control in a conversation broadcast by Soviet TV that they had accumulated many souvenirs in their year in space, and had everything packed for their return.

"Did you leave anything on the ceiling?" an unidentified ground controller asked, referring to the weightless condition in the space station.

The official Tass news agency said a Soyuz TM-6 space capsule carrying Titov, Manarov, and French astronaut Jean-Loup Chretien will undock from the Mir space station Wednesday and is scheduled to land at 9:50 a.m. Moscow time (1:50 a.m. EST).

Tass gave no details of the landing, but like others in the Soviet manned space program it likely was to be in Soviet Central Asia.

Polish leader ready for compromise

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Polish leader Wojciech Jaruzelski today called on the Communist Party to reinvent itself and be open to unconventional compromises with the opposition.

In a speech opening two days of Central Committee debate on the party's role, Jaruzelski urged top-level personnel changes and said the party is determined to remove "all remnants of Stalinism" and embrace "everything that is consistent with the spirit and realities of the time."

"We have to remove this damned wall that separates the party from the young generation," he said, speaking unusually bluntly for a party leader.

Rebuilding starts in Armenia

MOSCOW (AP) — Kremlin officials ended their direct supervision of earthquake relief efforts Tuesday, and attention turned to rebuilding. Armenia's wretched cities to withstand future quakes.

The return to Moscow of the Politburo commission led by Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov, which went to Armenia the day after the Dec. 7 earthquake, indicated rescue operations were coming to an end and a long period of reconstruction was beginning.

For the first time since the first days after the quake, news from Armenia was bumped from the lead item on the evening TV news program "Vremya." It was replaced by a report on a Kremlin conference of educators.

Ryzhkov, in a news conference broadcast on nationwide television Tuesday, criticized what he said was the "very low quality of construction" of multi-story apartment buildings destroyed by the earthquake.

The official media said plans were being set to reconstruct cities such as Spitak and Linnakan to prevent a repeat of the disaster.

A decision was made to use a method of construction where low buildings are erected, butting one another. This will help create a kind of stone belt which will become a protective hoop in case of an earthquake, the official Tass news agency said.

The cities will be rebuilt with low stone houses as well as more standard concrete and reinforced concrete buildings, Tass said.

The earthquake that devastated northwestern Armenia killed an estimated 55,000 people, Ryzhkov said in the news conference that 54,000 people were left homeless.

Tass said a group of architects, seismologists, geologists and other experts were working in Yerevan to develop plans for rebuilding the cities. It promised that all plans would be offered to the public for debate.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda reported that sketches had been prepared for construction of about 3,000 single-family houses with yards. It said that in the near future, a special store would be opened where individuals building their own homes can buy the materials they need.

A government commission has been formed to study why five-and nine-story prefabricated concrete apartment houses built in the last 20 years crumbled due to the force of the earthquake, while many older buildings remained standing despite damage.

Ryzhkov said preliminary findings indicated that the new buildings could not withstand sharp lengthwise shifts in the ground.

The earthquake, centered about 25 miles north of Leninakan, registered 6.9 on the Richter scale.

In an interview with Soviet television, Ryzhkov said the first stage of the relief operation — that of rescuing survivors — would end in "several days," echoing reports in the official media. The last rescue of an earthquake survivor was reported to have occurred Saturday.

In a meeting with reporters on Dec. 12, Ryzhkov said her Defense Minister Dmitri T. Yazov and fellow Politburo member Nikolai N. Syuzkov would remain in Armenia to oversee the relief efforts until they were certain work was going well and "the necessary rhythm of work is guaranteed."

He said in an interview with Soviet TV that the commission would return in January.

Asked about the danger of epidemics in the earthquake areas, where thousands of bodies still have not been recovered, Ryzhkov told his interviewer there was no such danger in the large cities. He said a danger had existed in villages because of the presence of thousands of dead animals, but that special teams had the problem under control.

There was no further word on whether she and Soviet officials had reached a firm agreement for Mother Teresa's Missionaries of Charity to work in the Soviet Union.

Armenia receives $60 million in cash for earthquake relief

Los Angeles Times

GENEVA — More than $60 million in cash donations from around the world have been funneled into relief projects for victims of the earthquake in Armenia, according to figures released here Tuesday by the Office of the U.N. Disaster Relief Coordinator.

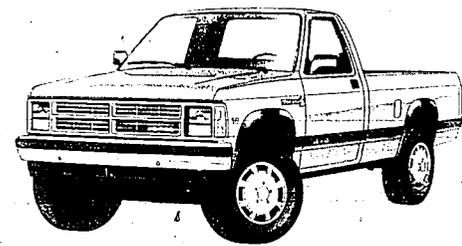

Donations of goods and services, such as man-and-dog search teams flown in from Western Europe and the United States. They have been worth additional millions, said the organization set up 16 years ago to coordinate emergency relief to disaster-stricken areas.

Focus of continuing relief work in the region is now on longterm housing of victims, according to a statement by the U.N. relief office.

The organization underscored appeals by the International Red Cross and Red Crescent for well-intentioned donors to stop sending relief goods to Armenia and instead give money for recovery projects.

Late selling lowers prices as Dow drops 6.61

The Associated Press
NEW YORK—Some late afternoon selling led stock prices broadly lower Tuesday, frustrating the market's bid to extend its rally.
Prices opened higher, appearing to take some encouragement from new government reports that indicated continuing low inflation and moderate economic growth. But profit-taking eroded the gains as the day progressed.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, which had risen nearly 40 points, over the past two sessions, ended on falling 6.61 to close at 2,182.70. The widely-watched indicator of blue-chip stocks had been up nearly 10 points at midday but gave ground steadily in the afternoon.
Declining issues outnumbered gainers by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading.

Trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 622 up, 85 down and 515 unchanged.
Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 161.03 million shares, down from 162.25 million Monday.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in these stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 196.92 million shares.

Holiday entertaining can be elegant

Planning simple-to-prepare recipes will help make holiday entertaining more enjoyable

Holiday entertaining can be easy and elegant. One way to make sure you and your family have a memorable meal is to plan ahead with simple-to-prepare recipes. On Christmas Day, a festive centerpiece and your finest tableware will be all you need to make your meal extra special.

Even people who find time to entertain during the holidays. To make your job easier, select recipes with few ingredients and short preparation times. The recipes below can be ready in an hour:

MARINATED TOMATOES WITH ROSEMARY

2 whole tomatoes, chopped
1/4 cup olive oil
1 teaspoon rosemary
1 teaspoon basil
1 teaspoon salt
1 clove garlic, minced
1 thin French bread or baguette
1 cup shredded smoked mozzarella cheese

In medium bowl, combine tomatoes, olive oil, rosemary, basil, salt and garlic. Toss well and marinate one hour or overnight. Cut French bread into 24 thin slices. Place on baking sheet 5-to 6-inches under heated broiler. Broil one side until golden brown. Place 2 teaspoons tomato mixture mixture on untoasted side. Sprinkle with cheese and place under broiler until cheese melts. Serve warm. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

CHAMPAGNE HAM

1 (3-to 4-pound) boneless ham
1/3 cup champagne
1/4 cup honey
1/4 cup maple syrup
1/4 teaspoon mace
Whole cloves

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Place ham on baking rack in baking pan. On top of ham, make diagonal cuts 1/4-inch deep to form diamonds. In center of each diamond, place a clove. In small bowl, prepare marinade by combining remaining ingredients. Remove 1/4 cup marinade; set aside. Bake ham for one hour, basting ham frequently. Remove ham from oven; baste with reserved marinade. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

WILD PECAN RICE

1 cup whole pecans

Christmas brings traditional menus

You've heard about the "Big Chill" — well we're about to have our annual "Big Squeeze." Yes, they're all coming home.

Every year I wonder at this. So far nobody has in-laws waiting in other places, so they return to our frosty village. It's good that they will dribble in, one at a time, so we can shoe-horn them back into our revamped lifestyle.

It's a pure nostalgia trip. Heaven help us if we change one, even one little tradition.

Well, we wouldn't think of it — except maybe the tree. Instead of having a tall, flocked tree, what about one with roots? We tried last year and it's thriving outdoors.

They were not impressed, because it was too little. "The itty-bitsy thing had to sit on a table, and the kids couldn't hang their lifetime accumulations of ornaments."

Well, this year we've got a surprise...two living trees and still no room for danglers.

I hope Grandma never thinks of another Christmas Eve menu beside Turkey Tetrazzini. These "big kids" just couldn't take it.

Before I give you the recipe for our authentic Christmas Eve fare, I'd like you to join me in a Christmas culinary adventure.

You know the traditional "Yule Log" dessert, the one also listed as "Buche de Noel"? Well here's a slightly easier version.

YULE LOG

3 eggs
1/2 cup sugar
1/3 cup water
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup (2-ounces) glace whole red cherries, finely chopped
powdered sugar
1/4 cup (2-ounces) glace whole green cherries, finely chopped
chocolate buttercream (recipe follows)

Glaze whole red and green cherries. Mix together the flour, baking powder and salt, set aside. Preheat oven to 375 degrees and line a greased jelly roll pan (10-by 15-inches with waxed paper, then lightly grease the paper.

Beat eggs in medium mixing bowl at high speed until thick and lemon-colored, about 3 minutes. Gradually beat in the 1 cup sugar and beat at high speed for 5 minutes. Now mix in the water and vanilla and beat one minute then add the flour mixture and combine thoroughly.

Spread the batter in the prepared pan and bake until cake is golden and springs back at the touch, about 10 to 15 minutes.

Immediately invert pan onto a kitchen towel that has been sprinkled with powdered sugar. Remove pan and very carefully remove the waxed paper.

Roll up cake and towel, beginning at long end.

BUTTERCREAM FROSTING

6 egg yolks
4 cups powdered sugar
1/3 cup cocoa
1 teaspoon vanilla
3/4 pound butter (1 1/2 cubes), softened

1/2 cup (4-ounces) glace whole red cherries, finely chopped
1/2 cup (4-ounces) glace whole green cherries, finely chopped

Beat egg yolks in mixing bowl at high speed until thick and lemon-colored, about 5 minutes. Mix in sugar, cocoa and vanilla.

Beat in butter, 2 tablespoons at a time then finally add the chopped glace cherries for texture. Carefully unroll the cake and spread with 2 cups of the frosting. Roll cake up again. Cut off generous 1-inch slices from each end of cake.

Place the cake on a serving platter and frost to form a log. You can place the slices you cut off the ends on the sides and frost over them to look like cut-off branches. Score the frosting with tines of a fork to look like tree

'Best-kept secret in Gooding'

Bakery owner shares recipes

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — In a letter to the Times-News, Mary Adams of Gooding writes, "I believe you might be interested in one of the best-kept secrets in Gooding — a small, warm and very friendly bakery known as the 'Bread Box.'"

"Owned and operated by June Jerney and her staff of three, they believe that you're only a stranger once," Adams writes.

In a converted feed store on a quiet back street, Jerney's bakery and restaurant does prove to be warm, small and friendly. It also smells great.

On rows of shelves just inside the front door are bags of light potato and sour cream dinner rolls and loaves of french, sourdough, white, wheat, squaw, misin, oat-wheat and rye breads. In the counter case are muffins, sticky breakfast rolls and 19 kinds of cookies baked daily.

A winter-season "baked potato bar" has potato toppings plus pasta dishes, fruit salads and steaming chili. A salad bar is offered in the summer-season.

Jerney cooks up two pots of homemade soups every day, plus a third choice, clam chowder, on Fridays. Vegetable beef, cheddar cauliflower and cream of broccoli are a few of her soup specialties.

Deli-style sandwiches are made from the customer's choice of all the fresh breads, cheeses and half a dozen kinds of meat.

At about 3 a.m. each morning, Jerney begins her day of baking. "Everything here is made the old-fashioned way," she says. "It's homemade, made from scratch."

Jerney buys organic flours from Camas Grain near Fairfield. "They're grown without chemicals or preservatives," she says. "They're not processed, like bleached flours, so they're not only taste good, they're good for you."

Bleaching, Jerney says, makes flour whiter and lighter, but it removes all the bran, and that's what's good for you." To sweeten breads, she uses honey instead of white sugar.

Jerney also caters dinners and parties, makes custom wedding cakes, bakes rolls for the Lincoln Inn restaurant and sends colorful hors d'oeuvre trays to a local bank when the staff is working late. For fun decoration, she shapes loaves of french bread into alligators, whales and other figures.

A winning combination of two holiday classics — a baked ham and stuffing. This version is sure to add elegance to your holiday dinner table.

STUFFED HOLIDAY HAM

- 1 extra lean ham
 - 3 tablespoons margarine or butter
 - 2 cups frozen whole kernel corn
 - 1 1/4 cups chopped red or green sweet pepper
 - 1 1/4 cups chopped celery
 - 1/2 cup brown sugar
 - 1/2 cup vinegar
 - 8 whole wheat coarse-textured bread crumbs or cubes
 - 2 teaspoons dried rosemary
 - 2 1/2 cup fresh snipped parsley
 - 4 beaten eggs
 - Fresh rosemary for garnish
 - Grapes for garnish
- Thaw corn in cool running water; drain. In saucepan, melt butter. Add corn, pepper and celery; heat until tender. Add sugar and vinegar. In bowl, combine bread crumbs and rosemary. Stir in vegetable mixture and parsley. Add eggs; toss to moisten.

With sharp knife, make two deep slits about 1 1/2 inches apart down entire length of ham, cutting to, but not through, bottom of ham. Press stuffing into slits, mounding stuffing on top of ham; reserve remaining stuffing. Place ham in shallow baking pan. Cover stuffing and ends with foil. Insert meat thermometer.

Bake uncovered, in 325 degree oven 15 to 20 minutes per pound or until meat thermometer registers 130 degrees to 140 degrees. Place remaining stuffing in casserole; bake, covered, alongside ham. On serving platter, garnish ham with fresh rosemary and grapes. Makes 4 to 6 servings per pound.

Preparation Time: 30 minutes
Cooking Time: 15 to 20 minutes per pound of ham.

- Continued from Page C1
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 4/5 cups chicken broth
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup brown rice, uncooked
- 1 cup white rice, uncooked
- In medium skillet, saute pecans in 2 tablespoons butter. Stir in brown sugar and cinnamon. Cook until mixture bubbles; set aside.
- In 2-quart saucepan, bring chicken broth, remaining butter and salt to boil. Stir in rice. Cover tightly and let simmer 20 minutes. Remove from heat; stir in pecan mixture and let stand until all water is absorbed. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

STRAWBERRY CREAM ROLL
5 eggs
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 cup flour
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1/2 teaspoon salt
Powdered sugar
1 cup whipping cream, whipped
2 tablespoons strawberry preserves
1 pint strawberries
Mint springs
Heat oven to 400 degrees. Grease 15-by-10-by-1-inch jelly roll pan, then line bottom with waxed paper which has been greased. In mixer bowl, beat eggs and sugar until light and fluffy. Slowly add flour, baking powder, vanilla and salt.

Pour into greased jelly roll pan. Bake 15 minutes or until cake springs back when lightly touched. Cool cake on wire rack 10 minutes. Turn cake onto towel sprinkled with powdered sugar. Peel off waxed paper. Roll up along long side. Cool on wire rack. Unroll cake. Whip cream until soft peaks form. Fold in strawberry preserves. Spread in center of cake, 1-inch from edge. Roll up cake and chill one hour. Just before serving, sprinkle cake with additional powdered sugar. Slice and garnish with whole strawberries and mint springs. Make 6 to 8 servings.

Date nut pie can be used in place of pumpkin or mincemeat pie at any celebration

Date nut pie—perfect alternative

This holiday season, date nut pie could be the perfect alternative to pumpkin or mincemeat. Here's the recipe:

DATE NUT PIE

- 1½ cups chopped and pitted dates
- ¾ cup apple juice
- ¾ cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup brown sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon cinnamon
- 2 eggs
- 2 cups coarsely chopped walnuts or pecans
- 9-inch unbaked pastry shell
- ½ cup or more of walnut or pecan halves

Combine chopped and pitted dates and apple juice in a saucepan. Bring to a boil, reduce heat and simmer, stirring occasionally for 5-10 minutes or until mixture is well combined and thickened.

Cream butter and brown sugar. Add salt, vanilla and cinnamon to creamed mixture and combine well. Add eggs one at a time to creamed mixture and beat until smooth. Add two cups of coarsely chopped nuts to the butter and egg mixture and stir until well combined. Pour filling into pie shell. Arrange the nut halves on top of the filling in an attractive pattern.

Bake in a 350 degree oven for 40-45 minutes or until the center is set. Cool. Serve with a dollop of whipped cream, if desired.

dash of paprika
6 cups spaghetti (12-ounce package) cooked
Make a white sauce according to your favorite recipe. I would use 4 tablespoons of each butter and flour to each cup of liquid.
Mom-in-law uses half broth that was used to cook the meat and half milk for the liquid. Blend the processed cheese into the white sauce to complete.
Mix together the spaghetti, turkey or chicken, mushrooms and sauce. Four into a greased shallow baking pan. Sprinkle the top with Parmesan cheese and paprika.

Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes or until bubbly in center.
From our home to yours, from my heart to yours, I wish you all an enjoyable and contented holiday.
Enjoy!

PAID ADVERTISEMENT Radon is dangerous, yet easy to deal with

The good news about radon is that it is easy to detect and usually inexpensive to correct.

It's important for the public to put the risks of radon gas in perspective. While people should be concerned about the health risks of radon, there's no reason to panic because most problems can be solved through simple and economical methods, said William D. North, executive vice president of the National association for Radon, in a press release.

A recent report by the federal government warned that household contamination by cancer-causing radon gas is dramatically more pervasive than previously believed. It urged property owners nationwide to test their homes and apartments for the radioactive gas. The colorless, odorless gas is produced by the decay of uranium found in the soil. The EPA has estimated that radon inhalation could account for 20,000 of the nation's 130,000 annual lung cancer deaths.

It is also estimated that an additional 100 to 1,800 lung cancer deaths per year (approximately) are caused by inhaling radon emitted by household water.

About 10,000 calls were logged at the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, and radon-testing companies reported a boom in inquiries a week after the report that one in four of the state's 2.2 million homes may have dangerous levels of radon gas.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Centers for Disease Control are concerned about the increased risk of developing lung cancer faced by persons exposed to above-average levels of radon in their homes.

The only way to know if you have a radon problem is to test your home," said Stephen Page, chief of public policy and information of the U.S. environmental Protection Agency's Radon Division. Even in areas with low radon risks, some houses may be found with a high radon level.

Bakery

(Note, the recipes Jerney shares, were reduced from bakery-sized portions.)

GINGER COOKIES

- Cream together:
• 1 cube butter
• 1 cup shortening
• 2 eggs
• 2 cups sugar
• ½ cup molasses
- Add:
• 1 teaspoon salt
• 2 teaspoons cinnamon
• 1 teaspoon ginger
• 2 teaspoons soda
• 4 cups flour
- Roll into 1½-inch diameter balls. Roll in sugar. Press down slightly. Bake at 325 degrees for 10 to 12 minutes.

Another holiday recipe Jerney shares is for an easy jelly roll cake. The secret to making a successful roll cake, she says, is using a greased paper bag so the cake doesn't stick to the pan.

The variety of fillings and frostings for this cake "can go forever," Jerney says. A chocolate pudding filling goes well with chocolate icing of whipped cream with chocolate sprinkles. Fruit fillings match well with powdered sugar or whipped cream covers.

For a Christmas holiday touch, garnish with holly leaves.

"This cake can be really festive," Jerney says. "It's very quick and it looks like you've slaved over it for hours when it's done... I used to get blue ribbons on it at the fair."

JELLY ROLL CAKE

Cut a brown paper bag to fit the bottom and sides of a cookie sheet. Grease the paper bag and place onto the cookie sheet.

- Beat well:
• 3 eggs
• Add gradually:
• 1 cup sugar
- Mix:
• 3 tablespoons evaporated milk
• 2 tablespoons water
• 1 teaspoon vanilla
- Beat all at once into egg mixture. Sift together:
• 1 cup flour
• 1 teaspoon baking powder
• ¼ teaspoon salt
- Beat all at once into egg and milk mixture.

Pour onto greased paper bag on cookie sheet. Bake at 325 degrees for 12 to 15 minutes or until golden brown.

Lay-out a dish towel and cover it with powdered sugar. Turn out the cake, bag side up, onto the towel.

Roll the cake in the towel to cool. Unroll carefully (cake will stay curled a little bit) and fill with your favorite filling, such as pudding, fruit, ice cream, whipped cream, etc. Roll up cake again (without the dish towel). Trim the ends. Cover cake with icing, whipped cream or powdered sugar.

Turkey hotline set

Swift-Ekrich is sponsoring a Butterball Turkey Talk-Line, 1-800-323-4848, during the month of December. The cooking-counseling service is open weekdays from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Friday.

Specialized home economists and nutritionists are available to answer any and all turkey preparation questions. The operators provide tips on how much turkey to purchase, how to thaw, stuff, cook, carve and serve turkey as well as what to do with leftovers, storage and food safety questions and upon your request they will send you a free copy of the "Butterball Creates Family Traditions: A Collection of American Cookery" recipe booklet.

Try turkey for a healthy Christmas meal

By TONI THPTON
The Los Angeles Times

If an elegant menu entree that is quick to prepare but offers nutritional balance is what you shopping for this holiday season, then look to turkey parts as a solution.

With less than half the calories of beef, turkey is a heart-wise choice. It is low in saturated fat, a major contributor to cardiovascular disease, making it a good substitute in almost any recipe that calls for meat.

Turkey slices can stand in for veal in scaloppine and ground turkey can be used in place of ground beef in patties, meat loaf, chili and spaghetti. But because of the low-fat content, turkey products tend to stick to cooking surfaces and should be cooked in non-stick pans or marinated in mixtures of lemon juice, vinegar or wine for added moisture.

The recipes that follow, feature turkey breast tenderloins and turkey thighs, and offer the stunning presentation required at this time of year. In Turkey en Crouete, lightly browned tenderloins are wrapped in frozen puff pastry and served with a delicate dill-cream sauce. Turkey Roast With Fruit is another memorable feast. Garlic, oregano, prunes and dried apricots flavor the marinade. Tenderloins with Plum Sauce, Honey Smoked Turkey, Tenderloin With Vegetables, Chutney Yogurt Turkey Tenderloins and Stuffed Turkey Thighs round out the selections.

TURKEY EN CROUETE

1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 (17½-ounce) package frozen puff pastry, thawed

1¼ cups half-and-half
1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ teaspoon dill weed
¼ teaspoon dried basil leaves
¼ teaspoon black pepper
¼ teaspoon onion powder

Saute turkey in butter in skillet over medium-high heat 5 minutes, turning to brown both sides. Remove turkey and allow to cool slightly. Cut each pastry sheet in half and wrap each half around tenderloin, gently stretching pastry to cover turkey. Pinch edges of pastry together to seal. Decorate with additional pastry. Place seam-side down on ungreased baking sheet. Bake at 375 degrees 25 to 30 minutes until golden brown.

Meanwhile, combine half and half, cornstarch, dill, basil, pepper and onion powder in same skillet. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Serve with turkey. Makes 2 to 4 servings.

TENDERLOINS WITH PLUM SAUCE

1 pound turkey breast tenderloins
1 (16-ounce) can plums
¼ cup apple juice
4 teaspoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon ground allspice

Place turkey on broiler pan. Place 5 inches from heat and broil 10 minutes. Turn and broil 10 minutes on other side.

Meanwhile, drain plums and reserve syrup. Combine syrup, apple juice and cornstarch in saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Remove seeds and coarsely chop plums. Add plums and allspice to sauce. Cook 1 minute longer. Serve over turkey. Makes 2 to 4 servings.

HERB TURKEY ROAST WITH FRUIT

¼ cup apple juice
¼ cup red wine vinegar
¼ cup minced garlic
2 tablespoons oregano leaves
1 tablespoon salt
¼ teaspoon black pepper
1 (11-ounce) package pitted prunes
1 cup dried apricots

Place 3 to 3 pounds turkey breast roast 1/3 cup brown sugar, packed
1 pound spinach fettuccine

Combine oil, juice, vinegar, garlic, oregano, salt, pepper, prunes and apricots in medium bowl. Place turkey breast in 3 to 4-quart Dutch oven and pour marinade over. Cover and refrigerate at least 2 hours or overnight.

Drain marinade from turkey and reserve. Sprinkle turkey with brown sugar and bake at 350 degrees until thermometer reaches 165 degrees, about 35 minutes per pound. Meanwhile, cook fettuccine according to package directions; then mix with marinade. Serve turkey roast on bed of fettuccine. Arrange apricots and prunes around turkey roast. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

HONEY SMOKED TURKEY TENDERLOIN WITH VEGETABLES

¼ cup apple juice
¼ cup olive oil
¼ cup soy sauce
3 tablespoons honey
1 tablespoon grated ginger root
1 tablespoon crushed sage leaves
1 teaspoon minced garlic
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon black pepper
½ teaspoon liquid smoke
1¼ pounds turkey breast tenderloins

8 red potatoes, quartered
4 carrots, cut into 2-inch pieces
3 stalks celery, cut into 2-inch pieces
2 small onions, cut into 8 pieces
Combine juice, oil, soy sauce, honey, ginger, sage, garlic, salt, pepper and liquid smoke in medium bowl. Place tenderloins in 13-by 9-inch baking pan and pour marinade over. Cover and refrigerate at least 2 hours or overnight.

Place potatoes, carrots, celery and onions in marinade around turkey and bake at 350 degrees 50 to 60 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Cover scalloped potatoes with water to keep color

The Los Angeles Times

Q: Please tell me why my scalloped potatoes turn dark. They taste good, but look unappetizing. Is it the kind of potatoes. Am I doing something wrong, or do I need to do something to them?

A: Perhaps you are not covering the potatoes with water as you peel and slice them. In the time it takes to prepare several potatoes, the slices will darken if left exposed to the air.

Some recipes have you parboil the potatoes, but the quickest method is to simply drain the potatoes and pat dry with paper towels. Place a layer of slices in a greased casserole, sprinkle with a little flour, salt and pepper and dot with butter. Repeat the layers until all the potatoes have been used, then pour over enough heated milk to almost cover the potatoes. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 to 1½ hours, until the potatoes are tender and the top has browned.

A little chopped onion or sprinkling of paprika will give additional flavor and color to the casserole. Other versions of this recipe add sliced mushrooms (canned or sauteed), shredded cheese, chives or pimiento.

Q: I often make salads using flavored gelatin as a base. The only one that gives me trouble is lime gelatin. No matter how much I stir it or how hot the liquid used, it invariably forms a hard layer on the bottom of the dish. What can I do to prevent this?

A: In "Understanding Food" (John Wiley & Sons; 1983), authors Lendal H. Katschevar and Margaret McWilliams write: "A rubbery layer on the bottom of a molded gelatin salad is caused by a failure to melt the gelatin completely before adding the cold liquid."

Helpful suggestions to make replanting indoor plants easy

There are several reasons for re-potting indoor plants. The most obvious is when they have grown too large for their present pot.

You may also want to replant to a more decorative pot. Plants which are struggling and gradually dying in too large of a pot may need to be shifted to a smaller one.

You can tell if a plant has outgrown its pot by examining the roots. Turn the plant upside down and tap the edge of the pot on a counter while holding your hand over the top of the soil.

Allen Wilson

Spread your fingers around the base of the plant stem. In most cases the soil ball will slip out of the pot. If it does not come out easily, water the plant first. If you find several layers of roots around the outside of the soil ball, it is probably time to replant.

Some plants will actually develop such a mass of roots that they gradually push the soil ball up until there is no more room for water above the top of the soil.

Unless a plant has badly outgrown its pot, it is best to replant into a pot which is only 1 to 2 inches larger in diameter than the present one. Loosen, or cut some of the roots on the outside of the soil ball. This will encourage them to grow outward into the new soil rather than continuing to twine around the old soil ball.

I usually pull the roots loose on the bottom and trim some of them off with a knife or scissors. Roots on the sides can be loosened with your fingers or be cut vertically at intervals with a knife.

When changing plants to more decorative pots, be careful not to shift a plant into too large a pot. Sometimes the best plan is to simply set the old pot inside the decorative one.

large a pot, the soil often remains wet and cold, without adequate oxygen for the roots.

After a while, some of the roots will die. This is followed by dieback of part of the top of the plant. If this happens, it is best to shift the plant into a smaller pot. After tapping the plant out of its pot, carefully remove some of the soil with a little damage to the roots as possible. Running water will loosen soil without damaging roots. If soil is packed and has poor drainage, it is sometimes best to wash all the soil off the roots.

The best indoor potting soils are those which are loose and open so that water drains quickly and there are plenty of large pores for air. I'll have more information about indoor potting soils in a later column.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College. His column appears every Wednesday in Food/home.

Letters of thanks

Chorale members thank media for publicity

On Dec. 11, the Magic Valley Chorale performed the Messiah to a packed house at CSI's Fine Arts Auditorium. The large crowd is a credit to the popularity of the Messiah, but also to the fine publicity which was provided by the media throughout the Magic Valley prior to the performance.

The members of the Chorale wish to take this opportunity to thank the Times-News and the other newspapers in the Magic Valley, the television and radio stations, the businesses who displayed our posters and advertised the concert on their sign boards and reader boards and all who attended the concert for helping us to celebrate the true meaning of Christmas. We appreciate the opportunity you gave us to perform before an appreciative audience.

Thank you all for the part you played in the success of our concert. We look forward to performing for you again in the spring.

Nevada resident thanks staff at area hospital

In July, after fracturing my hip in Idaho, I was taken to the Twin Falls Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

Although I had grown up in Twin Falls, I was so very pleased to see what a great hospital your area has. The nurses were kind and efficient. Dr. Rod Swartling and Dr. Ace Emery brought me, (a senior citizen) through this unfortunate time very expertly.

The cost also was less than the cost in the area in which I live.

Congratulations for having a great medically efficient area for your public!

Messiah production inspires thanks

We should thank Times-News for the fine story in the Dec. 9, issue about Handel and the Messiah, which helped to prepare us for the stirring experience of listening to the Messiah.

Much work on the part of the participating musicians and their incomparable director produced an unforgettable fine performance of the noble classic.

Woman gives thanks to school program helpers

Bickel Elementary School recently hosted "Santa's Secret Shop." Children were able to buy gifts for family and friends.

I would like to thank Maggie Arrington for her assistance in calling mothers to help sell and setting up Santa's Secret Shop and Mrs. Hayes, our librarian, for the use of the library. A special thanks to the following mothers who worked at the shop: Debbie Wildman, Dinnae Derrickott, Kay Magill, Ellen Taylor, Donna Cox, Nancy Phillips, Suzette Miller, Pam Olsen, Sue Miller, Danna Fuller, Lori Wayment, Chris Walton, Deb Blackwood, Maggie Arrington, Laurie Simonds, Jamie McElliot and Debbie Pettit.

Thanks again

Class thanks businesses for recent tours given

I would like to thank the Times-News and Twin Falls Bank and Trust for taking time out of their very busy schedules to show our fifth grade class how they work. We really liked it. I would especially like to thank our guides, Willie Carraway and Carol Huether. We actually learn more about businesses by seeing them than we do hearing about them.

Fifth-grader thanks Times-News for tour

I want to thank the staff of the Times-News for taking the Perrine classroom 22 around to see how the newspaper is published. I think it is very interesting. I am a fifth grade student in room 22 at Perrine. I especially liked how the press worked. I liked to see how it worked because I might want to be a reporter when I grow up. Thank you again for taking your time out to show us the newspaper.

MOLLY McALLISTER

The following students from Perrine Elementary classroom 22, Mrs. Eva Spooner, teacher, sent thank-you letters also.

Post office thanks students in contest

The Twin Falls Post Office would like to thank the fifth grade students in the Twin Falls school area who participated in the Christmas Stamp Design contest. Thank you to the senior citizen center for providing the judges and the Blue Lakes Mall in providing the display area. We invite everyone to stop by the display area and enjoy this Christmas spirit that the fifth graders created. The display is in the Blue Lakes Mall next to the mobile Post Office.

City Clerk gives thanks for work on project

Have you been downtown Shoshone after dark lately? If not, the Adopt-A-Building Project would like to invite you to take a ride and enjoy the hard work the citizens and merchants of Shoshone.

A hard working crew of citizens, SHS Booster Club members, Troop 57 BSA, Episcopal-Methodist Lutheran Sunday School Class, Borzuto's Maintenance Crew, Junction City Art Council, Lion's Club, City Councilmen, Sr. Citizens, BLM Employees, etc., etc., spent most of the last two Saturdays putting Christmas lights in most of the downtown buildings. It is a sight to behold.

Linda Paine, Jenny Zech and Richard and Cindy Brown have been painting scenes in the windows and we would like to extend our thanks.

Grandmother says no thanks to gratitude that is forced

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to protect the kind of giver who always has her hand out for thank-you notes. My mother used to be so rough on us kids to write thank-you notes immediately, we almost hated to get another present for fear of hearing, "Have you written your letter to thank Grandma yet?"

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

I am 63 years old, and as a direct result of being nagged to write thank-you notes, my own friends suffer because I hate to write letters. How simple it would have been for my mother to have added a few lines to her own letters, saying, "Susie loves her doll, and wants me to say 'thank you' for her."

I'm a grandmother now, and I've never expected thank-you notes from any of my grandchildren, and I never got any. They love me, and I love them, and I don't need any thank-yous. I give for the joy of giving.

— DON'T NEED THANKS IN KNOXVILLE

DEAR DON'T NEED THANKS: Children can be taught to write thank-you notes without being browbeaten. The mother who adds a few lines to her letter saying, "Susie wants me to say thank you for her" is sending this message to Susie: "Don't bother to say 'thank you' — Mother will do it for you." At the risk of sounding like a broken record: Children cannot be expected to know what they have not been taught, and one of the best gifts a parent can give a child is to teach that child to write a thank-you note personally — and promptly.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 35-year-old professional woman. Over the last several years I have been invited to numerous social occasions — weddings, bar mitzvahs, etc. I am never given by my colleagues. I am never asked if I want to bring a guest even though my married colleagues bring their spouses. I am dating someone special and everyone who knows me is aware of this. Whatever happened to the social custom of extending invitations to "Mary Smith and Guest"? Would it be proper for me to ask if I may bring an escort when I receive an invitation?

— HATES TO GO ALONE

DEAR HATES: It is proper. Considerate people still extend invitations to "Mary Smith and Guest." Unless it would be a financial hardship for the host or hostess, singles (male or female) should be invited to bring a guest.

DEAR ABBY: I appreciate all you have done to prevent animal abuse. If you want to save millions of animals from pain and agony, you will print the following:

Three years ago, a bill was passed to protect laboratory animals from needless suffering. It was passed by a huge majority and signed into law by the president! However, because the opposition to this bill had such a powerful lobby, this law has never been enforced.

Those who want to help laboratory animals should get the names of their congressmen and senators they are on file in the public library; then write a short letter telling them that you want the Dale Amendment to the Animal Welfare Act implemented!
— MELITA MOSTYN, MOUNTAIN VIEW, CALIF.

CONFIDENTIAL TO 'GETTING ON IN YEARS': Do your givin' while you're livin', then you'll be knowin' where it's goin'.

Don't put off writing thank-you notes; letters of sympathy, etc., because you don't know what to say. Get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61064. (Postage is included.)

Draw on history for charming Christmas gifts

By THOMAS B. DIBACCO
Baltimore Evening Sun

If you're out of sorts trying to find Christmas gifts, it is a shame you can't draw on some from history. Fifty years ago, you could have bought some wonderfully unique stacking-stuffers or even some expensive — but creative — presents.

For example, in 1938 you could have bought a personalized gear shift knob, with three initials engraved — and all for $3. Also available was a hand-pumped flashlight that required no batteries:

"It generates its own current as wanted — merely press the handle's lever in and out. Easily fits pocket or pocketbook. $4.50."

There were driveway markers that looked like daisies that reflected headlights (six for $3.75), a double-jointed tie rack that held up to 36 ties (chrome, $3.95), and a one-legged table that rested over the arms of a chair (mahogany, $5.85).

There were bedroom lamps that illustrated state-of-the-art technology, such as a "Moonbeam" light that toyed a "soft beam for reading without lighting (the) rest of the room." ($3.50).

For kids there was the exotic, such as a "peek-a-boo mirror." It was the most beguiling mirror that ever an 8-year-old made faces in. The reason was that the handle was in the form of a locket, the stem in the mold of a neck, and the mirror was adorned with blond curls. The idea, of course, is that when small fry starts posing, her face is framed with corkscrew curls topped with a hair ribbon. ($6.75).

There were also games galore. Monopoly was available in sets ranging from $2 to $25, but "The Lone Ranger Game" sold for only a dollar, and the "Hi-Yo Silver Card Game" was just 50 cents. "Lowell Thomas' World Cruise Game" could be purchased for $3.50.

And for party-goers, well, you simply couldn't do without an Electro Dog House at $19.50. "Guests are fascinated by the sizzle and aroma, as four Wieners are 'electrocuted' — deliciously flavor-cooked from inside by electric current — in one minute — no muss, no fuss. Perfect for home, bars or buffets. Hammered copper finish. Stands 18 in. high, with base 12 in. by 7 in. Indicator light illuminates name and shows when current is on."

The New England Cedar Bedding Company offered a perfect gift for dog lovers, a mattress stuffed with cedar excelsior that was guaranteed to drive away "vermin and 'doggy odors.'" Sizes ranged from 16 by 17 inches ($2) to 24 by 36 inches ($4). Another pet product was "Tom-Scat," designed to repel male dogs away from females. For a dollar, it was harmless, simple, successful — no red tape.

The one gift you would not want to have purchased in 1938 was "Asbestos Gloves: The Unique Christmas Gift" ($3.50 a pair), and you might have been just a bit suspicious over an "electric flowerpot" (guaranteed 2,000 hours, $2.95), which was a glazed pottery vase with a flower that glows with a cool incandescent light, 5 ins. high, A.C. or D.C. And you may not have been impressed with "iron foot scrapers" in the form of, various dogs that sported the numbers of your street address while serving as a place to clean your shoes in the event of stepping in dog-you-know-what ($3 or two for $5).

Of course, if you were really a high roller in 1938, you might have selected a cigarette case made of Florentine leather that boasted three compartments as well as an eight-day clock ($32.50), or you might have bought some fancy glassware: "Henry VIII and his wives for holiday toasts. Henry is hand-painted on the cocktail shaker and martini mixer combined, $9.50 complete. His wives on the cocktail and old-fashioned glasses, $24 a doz., brandies, $48 a doz."

And for that special person who had everything, including a zest for gardening, there was a sporty wicker wheelbarrow that was "super streamlined, clutchless, rubber-tired (and) lightweight." It could hold plenty of grass, weeds, leaves, even fertilizer. "As a gift? It's perfect. And unusual. And appreciated." And only six bucks.

Thomas V. DiBacco is a historian at American University.

Despite Mark Serr's pin of Highland Ram Kendall Snow in the 140-pound category, the Minico team lost 12-41. Serr remains undefeated

Powerful Highland outwrestles Minico

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The Minico Spartans, just about the only one of 13 wrestling schools in the Magic Valley able to compete well consistently against eastern Idaho grappling powers, were not up to that boast Tuesday.

Highland's powerful Rams started the evening with an upset, captured the first four matches and rolled to a 41-12 wrestling dual over the Spartans that counts both in Region III and Gem State Conference standings.

When Spartan 103-pounder Roy Villaseñor slipped from a 5-2 lead after two periods to a last-second loss in the opener Minico coach Brad Cooper knew his charges were in trouble.

"It kind of set the tempo and got us off to a bad start," said Cooper. "But we wrestled as flat as can be most of the night. We're a lot better team than we showed tonight."

The Rams added a decision at 112 before Shane Bell, second in the state A-1 wrestling tournament a year ago at 119, pinned substitute Scott Swensen and Highland's Chris Wehrli ran the score to 15-0 with a 5-2 decision over Minico's Alan Johnson.

Freddie Garcia finally broke the ice for the Spartans with a decision at 130 and, after one more three-point victory for the visitors, Cooper's defending regional champs reeled off the next nine to move into contention at 12-18.

Mark Serr, a 140-pound senior, registered

Minico's only pin of the dual meet, downing Kendall Snow in the second round and Jared Bacon followed with a 10-4 decision at 145. But at that point Highland took charge, picking up falls in three of the four remaining matches.

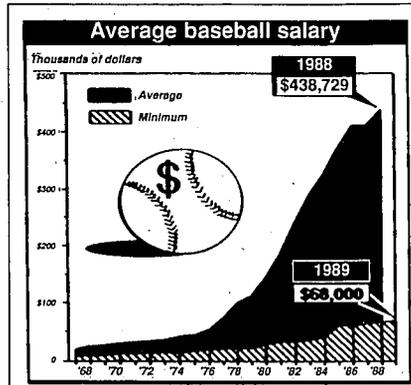

"I knew we matched up well with them at those weights," said Highland assistant Warren Whitaker, who directed the Rams on Tuesday. "I'll tell you what though, it was Trevor Bell at 103, that really got us going and got the others up as well."

The win allowed the Rams to remain atop the Gem State with a 5-0 record. Highland stands 3-0 in Region III with only Burley in the way of the regular season title. Minico slipped to 2-1 in the region, 4-2 in duals.

"We should have won at 103, 112, 125, 135 and 160," Cooper concluded. "That's the difference in the match. I guess we left all our fire at Jerome, but we'll rebound back."

The Minico junior varsity kept their season record perfect at 7-0 with a 49-23 triumph over the Ram JV's.

Minimum salary climbs to $68,000

NEW YORK (AP) — The minimum salary in the major leagues next season will be $68,000, based on an automatic cost-of-living increase of $5,500.

In the 1985 collective bargaining agreement, the minimum salary was set at $60,000 with cost-of-living increases after the 1986 and 1988 seasons. The minimum, which is pegged to the Consumer Price Index, increased to $62,500 after 1986.

CPI figures released Tuesday showed an 8.9 percent increase from December 1986 to November 1988.

The average baseball salary was $438,729 last season, according to figures compiled by the Major League Baseball Players Association.

Eighty-four players on rosters or the disabled list on Aug. 31 made the minimum.

The minimum salary has increased 467 percent in the last 20 years, 224 percent in the last 10 and 70 percent in the last five. The minimum salary was $6,000 in 1967 and $19,000 in 1976, when free agency began.

It rose from $21,000 to $30,000 when a new collective bargaining agreement was signed in 1980, and from $40,000 to $60,000 when a new agreement was reached in 1985.

The new minimum salary for minor-league players with major league contracts will be $22,700, up from $20,800.

Burley moves ahead of Jerome early to win battle of unbeaten

By JEFF HOSKISSON
Times-News writer

BURLEY — It was billed as a battle. But the war ended early as the Burley Bobcats ambushed the Jerome Tigers 61-24 Tuesday night in a battle of the two remaining undefeated girls' basketball teams in the South-Central Idaho Conference.

The Bobcats had three players score in double figures, led by 22 points of senior guard Jennifer Beck, as they improved their record to 10-2 on the season and 3-0 in the conference.

"The girls played well tonight, especially on the defense," commented Bobcat coach Gordon Kerbs.

The Burley defense kept the Tigers off balance all night. Playing a strong zone defense the Bobcats held Jerome to only nine field goals on 57 attempts.

"They put a lot of pressure on our offense," said Tiger coach Ken Wright, whose team despite the poor showing dropped only its second game of the season and first in the conference.

Burley opened the onslaught early scoring eight points, on two baskets by both Beck and Julie Petersen, in the first two minutes of the first quarter. Jerome got on the board for the first time at 5 minutes and 51 seconds of the quarter when Kerry Thompson scored on a shot jumper from the inside.

Beck, who had eight points in the quarter, then connected on jumpers of 18 and 10 feet to open a 12-4 lead for the Bobcats.

"She's a good shooter and handles their offense well," said Wright of Beck.

The Tigers were able to close the gap a little in the last minute and a half on a basket from Liz Gilbert and free throws by Gilbert and Ginny Keys.

The obviously tired Tigers, having played five games in nine days, trailed 16-9 at the end of one period.

The second quarter saw the Bobcats catch fire, scoring 12 unanswered points to start the quarter. Again, Beck was a big part of the Burley run scoring six points.

Although the Bobcat offense was doing well it was the defense that put away the Tigers. Burley allowed Jerome only nine shots at the basket in the quarter and the Tigers were able to connect on only one of them. Burley went into the half up by 20, 32-12.

Nothing changed much in the second half as the Bobcat defense kept up the pressure and frustrated the Tiger offense, allowing the Tigers to score only 12 more points in the game while Burley was able to put in 29.

"We were picked as No. 3 in the conference at the beginning of the year and I think we had that in the back of our minds," said Kerbs about his team's play. "We have a real big one next week against Pocatello to look toward now."

The loss dropped Jerome to 9-2 for the season, 3-1 in conference.

Camas drops Dietrich, 58-41

By The Times-News

FAIRFIELD — Senior transfer student Tim Yore exploded for 27 points Tuesday to lead the Camas County Musters past Dietrich 58-41 in an early-season showdown of Northside Conference boys' basketball powers.

Camas County, 6-3 in all games, pushed out to a 14-4 lead after one quarter and maintained about that margin through the first half, then outscored the visitors 35-27 the rest of the way in winning their second league game in as many tries.

Vin Southwich, with 16 points, and Kelly Jennings, 12, paced the Blue Devils who were playing their conference opener.

The victory boosted Camas' season record to 7-2 and its conference mark to 2-0. Dietrich dropped to 5-2 for the season and 0-1 in league games.

The hometowners captured the JV opener 57-30.

Blowing the call: NFL officiating, rules draw criticism

By BARRY WILNER
The Associated Press

Every sport has dumb rules. Professional football just seems to have more of them.

And more controversial calls. And far more meetings among officials during games. And many more irate coaches and players who either can't understand all the rules or believe there is inconsistency in the way they are interpreted by the guys who blow the whistles.

"We've had more missed calls this year," Redskins coach Joe Gibbs says. "The ones I have a tendency to get more mad at are the ones that aren't there. The ones when they call, say, a hand to the face when it really didn't happen. That's unacceptable."

Cincinnati's Boomer Esison, who has had his best season, thinks the rule enforcers have

'The officiating has been horrendous... It's a travesty, that's what it is.'
— Cincinnati quarterback Boomer Esison had their worst.

"The officiating has been horrendous," Esison said. "It's really been horrendous all around the league. On a couple of calls (in a game against Buffalo), I don't know what they were looking at. It's a travesty, that's what it is."

Fans always are complaining about officiating. Now, especially with the use of instant replay to review calls — which can delay games by as many as six or seven minutes, something that doesn't thrill the guy sitting in Section 21 at Soldier Field in 10-degree weather — and with the in-the-grasp rule, the coaches and players have become more vocal in their criticism.

The referees and linemen have their supporters, too: Even among the coaches.

"I think they've been great," says Wayne Fontes, who replaced the fired Darryl Rogers as Lions coach with five weeks left in the season. "They usually come right by me and tell me anything they think I need explained. They've told me why they made the call... explained things they think I might not understand."

"Being a head coach only a few weeks, they seem to have gone out of their way to be good to me, personally. I have no gripes at all."

tion Committee. "We feel we have the top caliber people in any sport as far as our officials are concerned. They are well-educated from every standpoint."

They are graded extensively on performances in the season, those who don't measure up are released, and new officials are hired. We conduct an extensive training program in the offseason in which all officials get together at various times, attend clinics, and do on-field work with players."

The three main areas of objection toward officiating are instant replay, in-the-grasp calls, and the excessive number of conferences held when a call is made.

Minnesota Vikings coach Jerry Burns thinks the instant replay system doesn't offer anything positive.

There's a million problems with the sys-

Gilbertson in running for UTEP position

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Texaco-El Paso athletic director Brad Hovious said Tuesday he plans to name a new football coach by Wednesday night.

"The announcement will probably come out of Shreveport, (La.)" Hovious told the El Paso Herald-Post on route to the Independence Bowl where UTEP will take on Southern Mississippi Friday.

Idaho coach Keith Gilbertson is believed to be the leading candidate. UTEP also interviewed Denver Broncos quarterback coach Chan Gailey and UTEP offensive coordinator Dirk Koetter.

"We had three excellent candidates, and all of them were tremendous in the interviewing process," Hovious said. "And I think we'll be lucky to get any one of them. But I think all of them impressed me as having the ability to do the job."

Hovious said he had not yet offered the job to any candidate, and that school officials would make the choice in Shreveport.

"We have to get together and hammer out what we thought, how we would rank them with different strengths and weaknesses, what kind of package we would put together," he said. "There are still some loose ends."

Gilbertson compiled a 28-9 record in three seasons at Idaho. Gailey has been to a Super Bowl as a pro coach and to four bowl games as a college coach at Troy State.

The prime negative for Koetter, Hovious said, is that he

Nampa hands No. 1 Tigers first loss of year

By The Times-News

JEROME — Nampa turned to a zone defense Tuesday night to snuff out Jerome's offense and the Bulldogs knocked the top-ranked Tigers from the undefeated ranks 66-52 in a non-conference high school boys' basketball game.

Nampa, holding a good height advantage, moved ahead 13-8 in the first quarter before Jerome, under the scoring of Randy Lance, flashed some brilliance. The Tigers scored 22 points in the third quarter and Lance provided 14 of those — three from beyond the three-point line.

But Nampa's zone turned things around from the start of the third quarter, the Bulldogs picking up 19 points on 9-for-15 shooting in the period while Jerome managed just nine points. Nampa saved its best offensive surge for last, adding another 22 points while limiting the Tigers to 13.

"Their zone took Lance and senior center Clint Bailey away from us pretty well," said Jerome coach Ben Allen.

Jerome, ranked No. 1 in the state among Class A-2 schools by the Asso-

Boys' basketball

Boys' basketball
Thursday Press, travels to Middleton Tuesday in a rematch of an overtime Tiger victory earlier this season.

The loss left Jerome at 5-1 for the season, while Nampa improved to 3-4. Jerome won both the sophomore and junior preliminaries.

Glenns Ferry 67 Buhl 62

GLENN'S FERRY — Dana Crandall scored his teams last five points, breaking a 62-62 deadlock and lifting Glenns Ferry to a 67-62 non-league boys' basketball victory over the Buhl Indians Tuesday night.

Buhl opened up a five-point lead in the first quarter but trailed by five six over the middle two periods. The Indians then closed to within 53-52 three seconds into the fourth quarter and a see-saw battle ensued until that 62-62 deadlock.

Crandall hit a pair of free throws and Glenns Ferry recovered possession and went into a spread. Crandall broke loose for a field goal, was fouled and drained the attending free throw.

The victory lifted Glenns Ferry's record to 2-5, while Buhl dropped to 4-4.

Shoshone 83 Gooding 39

SHOSHONE — Jim and Joe Messick hit two early three-pointers each to open up a lead and Richard Shimer bolstered it with a 10-point third quarter to send the Shoshone Indians to an 83-39 boys' victory over non-conference foe Gooding Tuesday night.

Hitting five of seven three-point attempts in the first half, the Indians bounced into a 37-17 intermission edge. But Gooding threw a little start into the home team by hitting the first eight points of the third quarter. It was at that point that Shimer began his third-quarter scoring binge.

Shoshone, ranked second among A-4 teams in the state by the Associated Press, won the opener 37-36 when Gooding's 60-foot desperation shot banged off the glass and rattled inside the rim a couple of times before popping out.

Wendell 61 Hagerman 58

HAGERMAN — The Wendell Trojans watched a 10-point lead melt to a one-point deficit late Tuesday, but rallied at the free throw line to overhaul Hagerman 61-58 in a non-conference boys' basketball game.

It was the third consecutive victory for Wendell, which opened the season with four losses. Hagerman stands 4-2 on the year.

Torry Jasper led four Trojans in double figures as Wendell pulled out to an 18-9 first-quarter lead and kept that margin until the final minutes. The Pirates led briefly at 52-50 before Trent Sparks connected on three crucial free throws to tie the win.

Duane Packer, Shane Fitzpatrick and James Lessly each backed Jasper with 10 points while Mike Yarborough led Hagerman with 14. Jason Warr added 11 for the Pirates.

Murtaugh 86 Carey 46

MURTAUGH — Evan Nebeker led four players in double figures as Murtaugh demolished Carey 86-46 in a non-conference boys' basketball game Tuesday night.

Nebeker hit for 32 points to lead all scorers in the contest. His teammates, Eric and Forrest Anderson added 12 and 11 points, respectively.

The rout started in the first quarter when the Red Devils took an 18-point advantage and built it up to 49 by 40 points.

The victory left Murtaugh at 3-3 for the season, while the Panthers are winless in five outings.

Kimberly 76 Valley 66

HAZELTON — Kimberly stretched its winning streak to three games here Tuesday night with a 76-66 Canyon Conference boys' basketball victory over Valley.

The Bulldogs converted 14 of their 18 second half free throw opportunities to turn a one-point halftime deficit into a lead of as many as 13 points in the second half.

Kelly Holcomb and Luke Kelsey each scored 10 points for the Bulldogs, who led 13 for the season and 12-11 conference games. Kimberly has beaten Buhl, Shoshone and Valley in succession since starting its season 1-1.

The two teams engaged in a shoot-out in the first half, with Kimberly shooting 68 percent and Valley 64. Valley's David Black, who finished the game with 30 points, had 20 before intermission.

The Bulldogs clamped a full-court press on Kimberly in the second half, outscoring the Vikings 35-24.

The loss dropped Valley to 4-2 for the season, 1-1 in conference.

Kimberly won the junior varsity preliminary.

Camas hands Devils first loss

By The Times-News

FAIRFIELD — The Camas County girls knocked Dietrich from their undefeated perch in the Northside Conference with a 36-31 victory Tuesday evening.

Sophomore Micki Miller scored 11 of her game-high 19 in the second quarter as the Musers broke away from several early ties. Behind Wendy Staten, the Blue Devils rallied to get within three midway through the second half before the winners steaded.

Dietrich fell to 4-1 in the conference, 6-2 overall while the Musers improved to 4-1 in the Northside and are 5-3 on the year.

Oakley 57 Raft River 44

OAKLEY — The Oakley girls maintained their lead in the Magic Valley Conference chase by downsing the Raft River Trojans 57-44 Tuesday night.

Oakley muscled into a 20-6 first-quarter lead but Raft River steaded over the second quarter to chip back within 10 at intermission.

Oakley, collecting its 11th overall win in 13 outings, led throughout the second half.

Declo 76 Gooding 23

GOODING — Declo's undefeated girls blazed for 34 points — and a 32-point lead — in the first quarter Tuesday night and rolled to a 76-23 Canyon Conference win over the Gooding Senators.

Buechele, Rangers agree on contract

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Third baseman Steve Buechele agreed to a two-year contract worth $960,000 on Tuesday with the Texas Rangers.

Relief pitcher Craig McMurtry also agreed to a one-year contract for $275,000.

Buechele's contract will pay him $410,000 in 1989 and $550,000 in 1990.

Buechele, 27, batted .250 with 16 home runs and 58 runs batted in last season. His career batting average is .247.

Last season, Buechele made $185,000 and McMurtry made $150,000.

McMurtry, 29, was 2-5 with a 4.35 earned run average in nine starts at the team's AAA club at Oklahoma City last season and 3-3 with a 2.25 ERA and three saves in 32 games with the Rangers.

Russell won't consider Georgia job

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Georgia Southern football coach Erk Russell withdrew Tuesday from the list of prospective recruiters to Vince Dooley and University of Georgia officials expressed disappointment, while denying Russell's claim he was offered the job.

At a morning news conference in Montgomery where he is coaching in the Blue-Gray All Star Classic, Russell said he turned down the job because he does not want to make a four-year commitment to any college.

The Associated Press learned Tuesday night that the school's search committee met with Dick Sheridan, the North Carolina State coach, earlier in the day at Atlanta.

Sheridan, 47, has a 19-13-2 record in three years at N.C. State. He is a native of North Augusta, S.C., about 90 minutes from Athens.

Jim Gantner gets new contract

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Second baseman Jim Gantner agreed Tuesday to a two-year contract with the Milwaukee Brewers worth $1.5 million.

Gantner, a 12-year veteran who batted .276 in 155 games in 1988, became a free agent at the end of the season. He and the Brewers had agreed on the salary weeks ago but the deal was held up by a disagreement on guarantee language covering a possible owners' lockout in 1990.

Milwaukee and Gantner eventually settled on the so-called "neutral" language, in which an arbitrator will determine if he is paid during a lockout.

Gantner will be paid $800,000 in 1989 and $700,000 in 1990. He made $937,500 in 1988.

The 34-year-old Gantner committed just three errors in his last 67 games last season and had a .986 fielding percentage for the year.

Ron Guidry becomes a free agent

NEW YORK (AP) — Pitcher Ron Guidry, the last remaining Yankee from the 1977-78 World Series championship teams, became a free agent Tuesday when New York failed to offer him a contract for the 1989 season.

Guidry, the team captain, may be asked to come to spring training as a non-roster player, but the Yankees said the decision will be left up to Manager Dallas Green.

"I spoke with Ron about it this morning," Yankees general manager Bob Quinn said. "He was very professional about it. He understood what we were trying to do, getting younger with our pitching staff. He was very philosophical about it."

Guidry could not be reached for comment. His agent, Reggie Ringst, said that Guidry had wanted to remain with the Yankees.

Yankees sign 4th free agent, Quirk

NEW YORK (AP) — Jamie Quirk became the fourth free agent to sign with the New York Yankees this offseason, agreeing on Monday to a one-year contract for $250,000.

Quirk, who is 34, batted .240 last season in 190 at-bats for Kansas City with eight homers and 25 runs batted in. He made $335,000.

He is a 240 career batter in 10 major-league seasons. Quirk was with the Royals for three different stretches.

Left-handed hitting catchers are like lion's teeth and he's a guy with a Yankees Stadium stroke," Yankees general manager Bob Quinn said.

Quirk can earn incentives for games played that would raise his salary to $300,000.

ISU's Moller to work for New Mexico

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico football coach Mike Sheppard, seeking to improve one of the nation's worst defenses the past two seasons, today named Idaho State's Denny Moller as the Lobos' defensive coordinator.

"When I was at Idaho State, I was very impressed with Denny's ability to beat people defensively and to get the most out of young athletes," Sheppard said. "Our defensive philosophies blend very well. He's a quality person."

Moller joins New Mexico after one season at Idaho State, where he was defensive coordinator and defensive backfield coach. Moller also coached the Bengals in the same capacities, 1980-83, serving with Sheppard under Coach Dave Krughorpe in 1980-81.

THE BURLEY LIVESTOCK COMMISSION YARD ANNOUNCES

A new sale schedule due to new Federal regulations in the hog industry, which are very time consuming in the handling of the animals. Therefore in order to handle this in a manner that will benefit both the buyer and seller, starting as of January 2, 1989, hogs, sheep, and goats will be sold on the first and the third Mondays of the month. Cattle and Horses will be sold on Thursdays, the regular sale day. There will be no hogs, sheep, or goats sold on Thursdays.

Get your animals in early on Monday as hogs have to be stap tagged, identified, and sorted.

Sale will start promptly at 12:00 noon on the Monday sale and 11:00 a.m. on the cattle sale on Thursday.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA STATE OF IDAHO COUNTY OF TWIN FALLS

LOCAL IMPROVEMENT DISTRICT NO. 91 FOR THE CITY OF TWIN FALLS, IDAHO

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS That the City of Twin Falls, Twin Falls County, Idaho (the "City"), on behalf of Local Improvement District No. 91 of the City for value received, hereby grants and conveys to or registered assigns on the day of _____ from the funds hereinafter described, the sum of _____

in lawful money of the United States of America with interest at the rate of _____ PERCENT (____%) per annum from the date hereunto until payment in principal, said interest payable December 31, 1989.

Both principal and interest on the Bond are payable in lawful money of the United States of America to the registered owner hereof whose name and address appear on the registration books of the City of Twin Falls, Idaho.

The principal shall be paid on the date of the maturity of the Bond, and the interest shall be paid by making a check or draft on the date due to the registered owner at the address shown on the Bond Register.

Other than the address so shown, no other address to be furnished in writing by such registered owner to the City. Principal shall be paid to the registered owner upon presentation and endorsement of this Bond on or after the date of maturity of the Bond at the offices of the Treasurer, City of Twin Falls, Idaho.

The Local Improvement Bond is issued by the City for the purpose of paying part of the cost of constructing certain improvements within Local Improvement District No. 91 for the City, the nature of which being various street and sidewalk improvements. This Bond is payable as to principal and interest from the collection of special assessments on real property in said Local Improvement District, which special assessments were levied by ordinance No. 2241, passed and approved by the Council on September 6, 1988.

It is the intent of the City that the principal and interest on this Bond be paid to be derived from the collection of special assessments on real property in said Local Improvement District, which special assessments were levied by ordinance No. 2241, passed and approved by the Council on September 6, 1988.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"It is not the criminal things which are hardest to confess, but the ridiculous and shameful!" — Rousseau

Both North and South were quick to confess fault after today's game went east — South because of bad play, North for other reasons.

Using Journalist leads, West led a high heart spade to show length but little strength in that suit. North tumbled his hearts first and South called for a low heart before seeing the rest of dummy. East won his king and switched accurately to spades, South ducking until the third round. With an eighth trick in spades, South was forced to rely on the club finesse, and when West won his king, his established spade took the setting trick.

"It was my fault," confessed South. "I make the game easily by winning the heart ace and leading the club finesse. That clinches the game and it's then a question of overtricks."

"It's more my fault than yours," countered North. And shocked by this unusual exchange of confession by bridge players, the kibitzer leaned forward to hear where North could take the blame.

"I should have tabled all three of the other suits before tabling my hearts," said a somber North. "Perhaps you would have taken the time to study the whole hand."

Was it really an act of contrition or was it sarcasm?
