State bids to become Hawkins' receiver

By MARTA CLEVELAND
Times-News writer

BOISE — Agriculture Department Director Dick Rush will petition the 5th District Court in Twin Falls today to appoint the department as the receiver of Hawkins Co. Ltd.

The move would make the department the legal administrator of the 500,000-bushel bean warehouse, which has been under state control since Nov. 22 when the owners' license was suspended after inventory shortages were discovered.

"The judge will allow a public comment period before making a decision. Anyone can make a case for Rush's receivership proposal or suggest an alternative. A hearing also will be scheduled within a few weeks."

If the Agriculture Department is appointed the receiver, Rush's first step will be to select a company to mill and market the beans in the warehouse.

"As soon as the judge makes his decision, I'll be ready to make my decision," Rush said. "We will hire a firm to begin marketing those beans."

The department has received marketing proposals from eight companies. Rush said he has not selected a plan yet.

Some growers and attorneys had expressed concern that selling the beans and turning them into money might alter the growers' legal claim to the proceeds. Rush said his legal counsel assures him "the right to the proceeds stays with the owner of the beans."

He is also anxious to mill and sell the beans in time.

U.S. claims Libya producing chemical weapons

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Libya has secretly started producing limited quantities of chemical weapons at a plant near Tripoli and has conducted trial runs of its production equipment, U.S. officials said Tuesday.

Libya claims the facility manufactures pharmaceuticals, not chemical weapons. Until now, U.S. officials said Libya was on the verge of producing lethal gases but had not actually begun doing so.

They have conducted test runs and have some limited production," said one official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

A similar indication was given by State Department spokesman Charles Redman, who said that if foreign companies withheld further technical help from the Libyan chemical weapons facility, "Libya would find it difficult to begin full production; and would not be able to sustain limited CW production." He declined to elaborate.

The escalation of the U.S. campaign against Libya appears designed to bolster the American position at an upcoming international conference on chemical weapons scheduled to begin Jan. 7 in Paris. The U.S. delegation, led by Secretary of State George P. Shultz, plans to press participants to withhold help from Libya for the facility.

Attention has been focused on the facility near Rabha, about 50 miles southwest of Tripoli, after President Reagan told an interviewer last month that a military attack on the plant had been discussed and added: "That's a decision that has not been made yet."

A statement by the official JANA news agency on Tuesday accused the United States of lying about the plant as an excuse to attack Libya and kill its leader, Col. Muammar Gadhafi.

The movement of a U.S. carrier group toward the Mediterranean on Tuesday in what the Pentagon said was a normal rotation of forces prompted speculation in

North's subpoenas renew old debate

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former White House aide Oliver North's attempt to have President Reagan and President-elect Bush testify at his Iran-contra trial has rekindled a debate, almost as old as the nation itself, over executive privilege.

Can a president, or a former one, be forced to testify in a legal case? Courts have provided scant guidance, but constitutional experts said Tuesday that North's legal effort may succeed.

No sitting president ever has testified in court in a criminal trial, but several have provided testimony or what might be considered the equivalent.

The personal stakes are high for North. He is charged with theft, conspiracy to defraud the government and several other felonies in the case involving the support of Nicaraguan rebels with money from the sale of U.S. weapons to Iran.

His trial is scheduled to begin Jan. 31 — just 11 days after Bush is to succeed Reagan. Besides Reagan and Bush, subpoenas also have been issued for Secretary of State George P. Shultz and four other State Department officials, a

Rites open Demo-controlled 101st Congress

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Democratic-controlled 101st Congress staged opening ceremonies on Tuesday filled with pomp and pageantry and spiced by controversy over a recommendation for a large pay raise for lawmakers.

On a day given over largely to swearing-in ceremonies and receptions, Democrats pledged cooperation with the incoming Bush administration.

Leaders of both parties laughed off a question about higher taxes.

President-elect Bush administered the oath of office to new and newly re-elected senators in groups of four. A few hundred feet across the Capitol, Speaker Jim Wright swore in House members.

Wright, D-Texas, in a speech marking his election to a second term as speaker, vowed to use the next two years to attack "the budget deficit, the trade deficit and the social deficit caused by the widening gap between rich and poor."

He offered "unflinching cooperation" toward a bipartisan foreign policy, but his rhetoric on other matters was more restrained. Without mentioning taxes, he prodded Bush to submit budget plans within six weeks if possible, and said Democrats were eager to help the new president improve education, child care, housing and envi-

LOS ANGELES — President Reagan will undergo surgery at Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington on Saturday for correction of a long-standing contraction of the ring finger of his left hand, his doctor said Tuesday.

Col. John Hutton, the Army doctor

Stallings prepares for visit to WIPP

By AMY GAMERMAN
States News Service

WASHINGTON — Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, is gearing up for a visit to nuclear waste storage facilities in New Mexico, Idaho, and Colorado with three other congressional representatives next week.

Stallings proposed the visit last month at a brainstorming session on the nuclear waste storage problem, how affecting Idaho and Colorado, and the delayed opening of the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant (WIPP) in Colorado, New Mexico.

The fact-finding tour, tentatively scheduled for January 10-13, is intended to provide congressional representatives from affected states with a broader perspective on the nuclear waste storage issue.

Reps. Bill Richardson, D-N.M.; Joe Skeen, R-N.M.; and David Skaggs, D-Colo., are expected to join the three-day trip, but scheduling conflicts may prevent some of the congressmen from visiting all three sites.

Although an Energy Department spokesman said that the final details of the trip have yet to be finalized, it will include visits to the WIPP site, the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, and the Rocky Flats weapons plant.

The congressman will be joined by Troy Weller, DOE assistant secretary for Defense programs or a designated DOE official, according to DOE spokeswoman Janis Shaheen.

There is no plan at this point for the congressmen to meet with the governors of the three states, Shaheen said.

Stallings has visited Idaho National Engineering Laboratory on several occasions, but has never seen either the WIPP site or Rocky Flats.

ACT to offer a better evaluation of science, reading, math skills

College entrance exam revisions coming

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The ACT, the predominant college entrance test in 28 Midwestern and Western states, will be revised in October to offer a more detailed evaluation of students' reading, science and math skills.

Since the exam taken by nearly 1 million college-bound students each year was devised in 1959, colleges that were once seen as institutions for the academically elite now deal with a greater variety of students, including an increasing number with remedial needs.

"There is a much more heterogeneous group going to college," said Richard L. Ferguson, president of the American College Testing Program in Iowa City. "As colleges are challenged by students with a broad range of skills, they need better information for placement."

The new exam, which will be lengthened by 15 minutes to two hours and 55 minutes, will supply colleges with 12 scores and subscores to give a more detailed assessment of students.

The current ACT consists of five scores: in English, math, social science, natural science, and a composite score.

The new test will provide three scores in English: a total score, and subscores in mechanical skills and rhetorical skills.

An expanded math test will provide a total score and separate subscores in pre-algebra and elementary algebra, intermediate algebra and coordinate geometry, and in plane geometry and trigonometry.

A section on reading skills will provide a total score and two subscores, one in social studies and science, and a second in art and literature.

The ACT also will include a new science reasoning test.

"What we are really doing is generating a new reading test that really measures reading skills, and another test in science that really measures science skills," Ferguson said.

Booklets outlining the changes, which were the result of eight years of review, are to be mailed out the first week in February to high schools and colleges, Ferguson said.

Some bodies aboard jet may be lost

The Associated Press

LOCKERBIE, Scotland — Investigators have today said they are finding the missing bodies of 28 people killed in the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103, police sources said Tuesday.

The bodies of the 154 of the 260 passengers and crew on the Boeing 747 were found in the wreckage of the plane, which crashed in the Atlantic Ocean in the wake of the bombing of the jumbo jet.

A government prosecutor in West Germany said the bomb had been in the forward luggage compartment that contained baggage loaded both in Frankfurt and London.

Flight 103 exploded over Scotland and crashed Dec. 21, killing all 259 people aboard and 11 on the ground.

Flaming wreckage was scattered over 150 square miles of countryside.

Police sources, speaking on condition they not be identified, said investigators are confident that the wreckage of the 29 passengers and crew members would be found.

They are believed to have died in the Sherwood Crescent area of Lockerbie, where parts of the plane's fuselage and wings crashed, forming a 30-foot-deep crater. Investigators fear that little or nothing remains of them, the sources said.

The search is still going on for bodies and it will continue... (but it would be quite unrealistic for anyone to have an expectation that we would be able to find all of the victims' bodies," said police Superintendent Angus Kennedy.

Kennedy said between 80 and 90 percent of the plane's structure had been located and charted on maps, including most of the huge tail section, but only 20 percent had been picked up.

Collecting the wreckage is a long process because many pieces must be picked up by helicopter from a huge, partly inaccessible area, he said.

Privilege

The man who first tried to force a president to testify was Aaron Burr, a former vice president who stood trial in 1806 on charges of treason.

Burr sought to force Thomas Jefferson, the president under whom he served, to testify at his trial.

Jefferson refused, but Chief Justice John Marshall, presiding over the trial, ruled against Jefferson.

The president eventually avoided having to appear by releasing some information Burr had sought.

The closest the Supreme Court has come to ruling on the issue presented by North's subpoena came in the Watergate tapes decision of 1974, in a case called Nixon vs. U.S.

The court then ruled 5-4 that President Richard M. Nixon had to comply with a special prosecutor's subpoena seeking the surrender of White House tape recordings.

The general assertion of privilege never yielded to the demonstrated specific need for evidence in a pending criminal trial, the high court ruled 15 years ago.

Jerome Barron, a law professor at George Washington University here, said Tuesday the 1974 decision is a strong precedent for North.

"Whether Mr. Reagan or Mr. Bush can be subpoenaed was resolved in Nixon vs. U.S., and the answer is yes," Barron said.

"If the evidence (sought by North) is material, I think Reagan and Bush can be required to appear," Barron said.

On the other hand, unnamed Justice Department sources were quoted by The Washington Post as saying that Nixon vs. U.S. offers support for finding subpoena of Reagan and Bush unconstitutional. The Supreme Court decision did not deal with a claim of privilege based on national security grounds.

Justice Department and White House officials have said they will try to have the subpoenas thrown out.

Surgery

Saturday and the president is expected to return to the White House on Sunday.

He said his auxiliary block, a form of regional anesthesia numbing the arm, would be used for the operation. He said no general anesthesia is anticipated.

The operation is expected to take two to three hours, he said.

The president's contracture was minimal but present when he took office in 1981, and has been followed over the past eight years, Hutton said. "Within the past year, it has progressed to the degree that surgical therapy is now necessary."

The condition is known as Dupuytren's Contracture, after Baron Dupuytren, a French surgeon who described it in 1833.

The White House described the condition as a progressive, usually painless contracture of the digits which is common in men over 60.

Reagan, 79, last underwent surgery in January, 1987, when he was operated upon for a prostate condition.

Reagan's previous operations as president have been performed at Bethesda Naval Hospital. White House spokesman Roman Popaduk said Walter Reed was chosen because the hand surgeons who will perform the operation are at that hospital.

The physicians will be Dr. George Bogumil of Georgetown University, a consultant at Walter Reed, Col. Alan Smith and Maj. Paul Park of the Hand Service at Walter Reed, and Hutton.

romental programs.

Democratic Sen. George Mitchell of Maine officially took up his duties as majority leader, the most powerful position in the Senate.

Custom required that Mitchell, Wright and other legislative leaders place a telephone call to President Reagan notifying him that Congress was in session. This they did, and when asked by reporters about the possibility of higher taxes, the lawmakers laughed in unison.

Bush has said he will fight any proposal to reduce the deficit through new taxes, but many Democrats and some Republicans believe he will have to change his mind to win agreement on a comprehensive deficit-fighting plan.

The Senate wore a new blue patterned carpet for the occasion as well as new scarlet benches in the corners for staff aides to view the proceedings. The galleries were packed with spectators as Bush swore in 92 elected senators and Dan Coats, R-Ind., appointed to replace Vice President-elect Dan Quayle.

Quayle mingled with his former colleagues on the Senate floor. Incoming White House Chief of Staff John Sununu also attended.

The pomp was nowhere better on display than in the Senate, where outgoing majority leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia was named president pro tempore, the post that goes to the longest-serving senator of the majority party.

First a resolution was passed appointing Byrd. Then, as he took the president-elect's chair, a resolution was approved notifying the House of his appointment. Finally, a resolution was approved congratulating him for attaining his new position.

The atmosphere was less staid in the House, where many lawmakers were accompanied to the opening session by spouses or young children.

If no one wanted to talk about taxes, Rep. Tom Tauke, R-Iowa, was eager to begin a debate over Reagan's expected re-endorsement for a hefty pay raise for members of the House and Senate.

"Congressional pay adjustments have become a perpetual source of debate, controversy and embarrassment," he said, in calling for a two-year delay in any increase and requiring a roll call vote in both houses before salary hikes take effect.

Reagan is expected to call for a substantial pay raise next week for members of Congress to take effect March 1 unless rejected before then by both houses. An advisory commission has recommended a 50 percent boost for lawmakers, federal judges and top executive branch officials, with members of Congress giving up lucrative honorarium-in-exchange.

Current congressional pay is $83,500 a year, and the commission's proposal would raise it to $135,000.

While Mitchell says the Senate will vote on any proposed pay raise, Democratic leaders in the House say they are hoping to have Reagan's proposal take effect without a vote.

Under current law, Congress automatically gets a boost proposed by the president unless it votes it down.

Italy of an impending strike.

In Los Angeles, Bob Hall, an assistant White House press secretary accompanying President Reagan on a California vacation, declined comment on the reports other than to say, "We have nothing new on the subject."

U.S. Howard, the Pentagon's chief spokesman, also declined to discuss the reports but denied that the carrier movement was tied to the situation in Libya.

"It's a standard deployment," Howard said.

The United States said it has shown West Germany, Italy, Japan and other allies convincing proof that the newly built facility is producing chemical weapons.

Italian, Japanese and West German companies were involved in the construction of several plants in the complex housing the alleged chemical weapons facility.

Japan has told the United States its companies were helping build a nearby metallurgical plant but U.S. officials say that plant makes canisters. "Big, big metal canisters," said one official. "What are they for, for pills?" added the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. He indicated the canisters were intended for use in conjunction with the chemical weapons.

But a spokesman for the West German government said authorities there had no indication or evidence to verify the American suspicions that German companies were involved in the construction of chemical weapons plant.

Nonetheless, West German officials announced they were examining the records of one chemical company doing business in the complex, Inhausen-Chemie.

"We are confident that the West German government is taking the information we have provided very seriously, and is investigating fully," Redman said.

Another important decision in the Hawkins dissolution could also come today. A 5th District Court judge in Twin Falls will decide soon whether a lawsuit filed against Hawkins by several growers should be made a class action.

If so, every grower with a claim to beans at Hawkins will be included as a plaintiff unless he specifically declines.

The growers' suit asks the court to give them undisputed legal title to the beans, and to divide the beans among growers in several subclasses: growers with 1988 beans; growers with beans from previous years and growers with certified seed beans.

The growers' attorney, Lloyd Walker, anticipates the court will agree with the class action request.

The discussions centered around the milling and marketing proposals and who would best serve as the company's receiver.

Rush created the advisory committee to help him decide the best dissolution of Hawkins' assets.

BOISE (AP) — Although Idaho's economic explosion already has begun moderating, relatively rosy forecasts for continued growth awaited lawmakers on the eve of hearings on the state's financial future.

But an administration forecast released a month ago said that while the economy will slow from its robust performance in 1988 it will continue to grow for the next three years and at a pace faster than the national economy.

That surplus money would be available to the governor and legislative budget-writers for the new budget and it is the fate of that extra cash that will likely generate the most controversy over the next three months.

It will then use those projections to estimate just how much tax revenue will be generated during the current budget year, that ends June 30 and the 1990 year that follows.

California sets pace for the nation in developing a history curriculum

Diane Ravitch

NEW YORK — Study after study has shown that the American public is woefully ignorant about history, geography and politics. Last year, a national survey found that large numbers of high school juniors enrolled in American history classes knew little of the significance of such key events as the Civil War, the Brown decision, the Scopes trial and Reconstruction.

The commission found that about half of our nation's high school graduates never take a course in world history and that nearly 15 percent study no U.S. history in high school. The commission called for a substantial increase in the time allotted to the study of history, beginning in the early elementary years.

will need vastly improved textbooks and classroom materials. School districts need funds to prepare teachers for new courses, especially in world history and the new social history. Resources are also needed to encourage non-traditional ways of teaching history — using first-rate video materials, computer programming, original source documents, literature, debates, mock trials and other alternatives to the lecture-textbook routine.

When adults are tested, they do no better. In a recent international survey conducted by the Gallup Organization for the National Geographic Society, 45 percent of adult Americans could not find Central America on a world map and 75 percent could not locate the Persian Gulf. Compared with their counterparts in Sweden, West Germany, Japan, France and Canada, American adults fared poorly; they were on a par with the United Kingdom and bested only Italy and Mexico.

But the Bradley commission was not calling merely for more of the same. It rejected the hoary image of history as a study limited to the brain-numbing memorization of dates and battles. Today, good history instruction embraces geography, politics, economics, sociology and literature, and it introduces students to the experiences of minorities and women, of leaders and of common folk.

The traditional way to teach history is cheap, easy and familiar. Teachers talk and students listen. Unfortunately, many students forget what they have heard as soon as they have disgorged what they know for tests. History comes to life when students imagine what it was like to be alive then; when they realize that the outcome of events hung in the balance; when they see events from different perspectives, and when they learn to think about causes and consequences and reflect on sources of change and continuity in the past and in their own lives.

While there are no comparable statistics for what Americans understand of politics, the candidates in the 1988 presidential campaign seemed to operate on the assumption that the electorate neither knew nor cared about the great issues of the day. The deficit and arms control were mentioned only in passing and virtually no attention was paid to American policy in Latin America, perestroika in the Soviet Union, political turmoil in Eastern Europe, economic uncertainty in China or famine in Africa.

Even before the Bradley commission was created, education leaders in California recognized the importance of preparing youth for active, informed citizenship; this task becomes even more urgent in light of the large number of immigrants in California's public schools.

The state board will have to demand a new generation of textbooks in place of the encyclopedic and dull reference works that have given history a bad name with students. The State Department of Education will have to supply teachers with the funds to buy biographies, videos, computer programs and vivid historical narratives, so that youngsters can discover that history has more real-life excitement than the soaps.

Both children and adults learn about the world through a wide variety of sources, including television, the newspapers, movies and their own experiences. But the only institution that is purposely designed to teach Americans about the connections between past and present and about their role as citizens is the public school system. And it is to the schools that we must look for improvement in public intelligence.

California is the only state in the nation that has a history curriculum that meets the demanding specifications set by the Bradley commission. Approved last year by the State Board of Education, the state's new curriculum will require all youngsters to study American history for three years (in grades 5, 8 and 11) and world history for three years (in grades 6, 7 and 10). Children in the elementary grades will get an early start on history by learning about local, family and state history and by studying the achievements of great men and women of different cultures. In addition, all high school seniors will spend a full year studying economics and government.

State Superintendent of Schools Bill Hong intends to launch a statewide history initiative for the California public schools, in order to raise public consciousness and support for the teaching of history. Hong wants the public to understand that history is not simply a school subject.

The inextricable link between the quality of civic life and the teaching of history, geography and civics in the schools was prompted a flurry of reform proposals. A few months ago, the Bradley commission — a group of distinguished historians including Kenneth Jackson, C. Vann Woodward, William H. McNeill, Leon F. Litwack and William E. Leuchtenberg and social-science teachers — issued a report lambasting the sorry state of history in the nation's schools.

The new curriculum emphasizes the rights and responsibilities of democratic citizenship and teaches youngsters the importance of participation in the political process. Throughout the grades, students will learn how different societies are governed, how human rights abuses occur when democratic institutions are absent or destroyed and how individuals have made differences throughout history.

It is the means by which we find out who we are as a people, how we have changed over the years, and what we must know about the other peoples with whom we share the globe.

Washington mayor finds war on drugs can sometimes ensnare the mighty

WASHINGTON — The green wooden grandstands are being moved into place along Pennsylvania Avenue. Hotel ballrooms are decorated for inaugural bashes. There's the usual rush for tickets, gowns, furs, limousines.

Sandy Grady

As lights go up in 1989, you'd think the multi-tup in this town would be the inauguration of George Bush. Not so. Another politician has knocked Bush off the front pages and chased the new president out of the conversational ball park. The guy being talked about — always in tones of bitterness, anger or chagrin — is Marion Barry, the District of Columbia mayor whose recent, tumular wanderings have intensified rumors that he uses drugs.

The rumors are unproven. But nobody can miss the painful irony that in a city with 372 murders last year, most of them drug related, the mayor or himself may be a user. Barry, a brawny man with a show-ma's flair, often appeared at the victims' funerals to vow for TV cameras that he'd personally lead Washington's war against drugs. He has adopted a strange battle plan. Even in a town jaded by scandal from Watergate to Iran-Contra, you can't go 15 minutes without hearing hot arguments about the mayor's behavior. Barry has ignited hidden dynamite — fury over official hypocrisy, anguish among black supporters, fear that drugs have co-opted the mayor in what one TV station calls "A City Under Siege."

MAJORITY MARION BARRY Critics assail possible drug connections

Barry's controversy opens up the weird dynamics of Washington, the most schizophrenic capital in the Western world. There's the Imperial City, dominated by white lawyers, lobbyists, bureaucrats, diplomats, the Washington Post, and Congress. It's a city of power, wealth, Mercedes-Benz franchises and $1 million homes. Then there's the Real City beyond the monuments and glitz. It is 70 percent black. It has more open-air drug markets than all its Safeway and Giant supermarkets combined. A kid can make $2,000 a night selling crack cocaine here. He can also get shot; there were 1,200 drug shootings in 88. "I'm seeing wounds worse than I saw in Vietnam," says a homicide cop.

Barry has outdone Jimmy Swagart in cries for redemption. "I'm sorry for my bad judgment," Barry said in one of many TV mea-culpas. "I apologize to the country for putting the city in this embarrassing situation." In a black church Sunday night, Barry said, "I hope God will lead me to a better life in '89 than I did in '88. I'll be more discreet. I ask forgiveness."

Letters/Readers comment on issues of local interest

Article starts New Year badly

Your New Year's Day inflated lead article about Jesse Ray Jagers displayed very poor taste. Why should some 40,000 readers wake up to such sensationalism that isn't even news? Why not feature the good things that are happening in the Magic Valley — such as the Section C articles about the improving agricultural economy, Twin Falls' first soup kitchen, the new Teen Parent Program or the blossoming Magic Valley Arts Council? Certainly these news items will have a far greater impact on our lives in the coming year. More international news on the front page would be most welcome. In this same Times-News issue, almost hidden on page A-7, are articles describing non-aggression and cultural agreements between India and Pakistan, and a New Year's Day truce in Afghanistan — news to make the world rejoice. Let's start the New Year with news on the front page.

INGRID STROPE

Twin Falls

Luggage snafu dismays visitors

We are currently on a winter vacation holiday in the Sun Valley area. We flew into the Twin Falls airport, utilizing the services of Skywest Airlines on December 22. The main reason we flew was to avoid the hassles associated with driving from California to Idaho and back. We were really surprised when we arrived in Twin Falls and our baggage did not arrive with us, but what was even more surprising was that not one person's baggage on our flight arrived either. There was a whole plane full of luggage but not one person's own baggage arrived on that flight.

Well, after filling out a "delayed luggage report," we were told that our luggage would probably arrive on a later flight. But that didn't happen either. In fact I waited another 24 hours and our luggage still wasn't here. There were several other people on our flight staying at the same condominium complex here in Sun Valley, so I talked to them also. Their story was the same as mine — no luggage.

I again called Skywest in Twin Falls asking about my luggage. I was told it still wasn't in Twin Falls but that they were working on getting it there. I asked to speak to the manager and was told she wasn't in. This scenario continued. I continued calling for three solid days and was told the same thing... that the luggage had not arrived and the manager wasn't there either.

This continued until the morning of the 27th of December. I then took it on my self to drive to the Twin Falls airport to see what I could do. Upon arriving there, there was luggage strewn all over the luggage area and also there were two huge piles of luggage on both ends of the claim area.

After asking this, I approached the Skywest people and asked for my luggage. The young lady told me if I didn't see it in either pile, it would be in later on a charter airplane. I again asked to speak to the manager and again I was told she wasn't in. I asked if she was ever in. Well, anyway... my luggage finally arrived in Sun Valley on the 28th at 1:30 p.m. Next time we're driving.

INEL spill bodes ill for future

Yet another toxic spill at INEL. They're hauling in hazardous nuclear wastes from Three Mile Island, in leaking barrels they say they've fixed the seals on again. Oh Dear. When I was a child about 20-30 years ago, my aunt who lives in Murtaugh took me shopping in Burley. While there I noticed some graffiti which read: Please flush the toilet, Twin Falls needs the water.

Why do I get the feeling that what Burley has for us is a whole lot safer than what Idaho Falls has to offer?

Dog shooter should own up

This is an open letter to the person or persons who shot our son's dog on Tuesday evening, December 27, 1988, in front of the Highways at High School. If you enjoy sending an 11-year-old child to life, perhaps you enjoy calling him and telling him that his dog is dead and why.

Letters Welcome

The Times-News welcomes letters to the editor but will reject those it considers libelous or in bad taste. Each letter must be signed and should include the writer's mailing address. Letters of more than 400 words may be edited for length.

Barry's troubles would be a local story. But Barry's controversy opens up the weird dynamics of Washington, the most schizophrenic capital in the Western world. There's the Imperial City, dominated by white lawyers, lobbyists, bureaucrats, diplomats, the Washington Post, and Congress. Barry has outdone Jimmy Swagart in cries for redemption. "I'm sorry for my bad judgment," Barry said in one of many TV mea-culpas. "I apologize to the country for putting the city in this embarrassing situation." In a black church Sunday night, Barry said, "I hope God will lead me to a better life in '89 than I did in '88. I'll be more discreet. I ask forgiveness."

This time Barry can't talk his way past trouble. Even black ministers call for him to step down. But there's no chance of a recent election. More likely, Marion (Mayor for Life) Barry has seen his last term. In the Real City, pride in the black mayor has turned to disgust. That's why the downfall of Marion Barry may be a more important story than Bush's inaugural. Now the epidemic has wiped out a mayor. What a divided country — limos, balls and pop flourishing a mile away from dope markets where kids die. The bands play while the plague goes on.

Armenian courts convict 6 for looting

EMOSCOV (AP) — Six people have been convicted of looting in the wake of the Armenian earthquake, including a man who received an eight-year sentence for stealing food and three others sentenced for taking an empty safe, a newspaper said Tuesday.

The report in Sovetakan Rossiya was the first on sentencing of looters in the Dec. 7 earthquake that devastated much of northern Armenia. It said the sentences were handed out by the Armenian Supreme Court, but did not say when nor whether they would be served in labor camp or prison.

Training flight foes to step up effort

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Ear-splitting military training flights over this densely populated country became a major issue in West Germany in 1988 because of a series of crashes, and opponents vowed Tuesday to step up their campaign this year.

"This self-imposed threat from the skies must end. Our populated areas must above all be safe," said Erwin Horn, a federal lawmaker with the opposition Social Democrats.

NATO pilots resumed tactical flights over West Germany on Tuesday following a three-week moratorium in memory of the victims of a Dec. 8 crash of a U.S. military jet on the northern city of Rendscheid. Five West Germans and the U.S. pilot were killed.

Arens says Israel wants security

JERUSALEM (AP) — Foreign Minister Moshe Arens complained Tuesday that European nations were making Middle East peace moves without consulting Israel, and he said his nation was willing to suffer isolation in the world for its own security.

Four members of Israel's parliament, meanwhile, planned to defy Israeli law and meet with officials of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

In the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, three Palestinians were reported wounded in clashes with soldiers, and troops demolished or sealed three houses of Arabs suspected of attacks on soldiers or Arabs cooperating with Israeli authorities.

Sudanese leader continues stalling

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Prime Minister Sadek Mahdi is stalling on reforms needed to mollify a populace fed up with a lingering civil war and a foundering economy, while Muslim fundamentalists in his coalition fight proposed changes.

Sudanese and Western experts agree he needs to come up with solutions, and soon. Otherwise, they fear a return of street violence.

Gadhafi launches charm offensive

ROME (AP) — Col. Moammar Gadhafi has stepped up a campaign to improve Libya's overall foreign image and rebut charges that he is building a chemical weapons plant.

In recent weeks, the Libyan leader purportedly helped free two French girls held hostage in Lebanon, offered to return the body of a U.S. pilot killed in a 1986 attack on Libya, and invited television correspondents to interview him.

In addition, he has appealed to international organizations from the United Nations to the Arab League to defend him, and he has used friendly nations to convey to Washington his contention the plant does not produce chemical weapons.

"There is no doubt that the Libyans have launched what has become known as their charm offensive in Europe," said a British Foreign Office official Tuesday, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Attention has been focused on Libyan-U.S. relations in recent weeks after President Reagan told an interviewer that a military attack on the plant near the Libyan capital of Tripoli was under consideration, although Gadhafi says the facility makes pharmaceuticals.

A U.S. carrier group steamed toward the Mediterranean on Tuesday in what the Pentagon said was a normal rotation of forces, but the movement prompted speculation of an impending strike.

Italian newspapers and politicians billed the ships as a direct threat to Libya. The U.S. Navy has said the movement of the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Theodore Roosevelt and 15 other ships in its battle group is part of a "previously scheduled, routine deployment to the U.S. Sixth Fleet." A Reagan spokesman on Tuesday declined comment on the reports.

Gadhafi's reaction to the U.S. charges is more conciliatory than his response to threats of an attack three years ago. But whether he will succeed in winning allies is unknown.

"I think it's pretty clear that he did not believe the U.S. would bomb the country in '86," said Lisa Anderson, a Columbia University professor and a leading U.S. specialist on Libya.

"Now, I think he takes threats on the parts of the U.S. — and even floating ideas in op-ed pieces by people who are not part of the (Reagan) administration — extremely seriously."

Shortly before the April 15, 1986, strike on Tripoli and Benghazi, Gadhafi threatened a campaign of subversion in the United States. Earlier that year, he defied U.S. forces to cross his "line of death" in the Gulf of Sidra off Libya.

But since the U.S. State Department alleged in September that Libya was on the verge of making chemical weapons, Gadhafi has portrayed himself as the victim of U.S. aggression.

After the United States said it was talking with allies about a possible raid on the factory, Gadhafi called Dec. 24 for the release of hostages, particularly two French girls.

Racial tensions spread

BEIJING (AP) — Racial tensions spread to Beijing on Tuesday as Chinese officials in Nanjing denied African allegations that China's about 200 Chinese students demonstrated against an alleged attack on a Chinese woman by an African student.

Protests among higher campus security appeared at two colleges.

"The protest and class boycott at the Beijing Languages Institute was the third incident between Chinese and Africans in the last nine days in China, and the first to occur in the capital.

Chinese officials in Nanjing denied African allegations that China's about 200 Chinese students demonstrated against an alleged attack on a Chinese woman by an African student during a clash Saturday.

They also said four Africans involved in a Dec. 24 brawl with Chinese had been expelled from a Nanjing university. Of the four, one has been arrested and three detained for questioning.

A third racially-related incident continued in Hangzhou, where 66 African students have been boycotting classes for a week.

Dukakis won't seek Massachusetts re-election in '90

BOSTON (AP) — Michael S. Dukakis announced Tuesday he would not seek an unprecedented fourth term as governor of Massachusetts in 1990, but he did not rule out another run for the presidency in 1992.

The unexpected announcement broke a political logjam in Massachusetts politics and touched off immediate speculation about the new landscape in the Democratic Party both in Boston and in Washington.

"This will be my last term as governor of Massachusetts," Dukakis, 55, told a crowded news conference. "I've loved this office and I still do. Dukakis, who was the Democratic standard-bearer for the Democratic Party in the Nov. 8 election, also touched off speculation that he may seek a rematch against President-elect George Bush without the political hindrances that he learned can plague a sitting governor.

"This decision is one that has nothing to do with national office," Dukakis insisted. But he acknowledged he has not ruled out another attempt to win the White House and said he had discovered that "it is very difficult to run for the presidency as an incumbent governor."

"I've learned occasionally — painfully — never to say 'never' in politics," he said when asked whether

Michael Dukakis smiles during a news conference at which he said he won't seek re-election. He intends to run for president in 1992. In 1988, Dukakis tried to become the first sitting governor since Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932 to win the White House. His status as governor generally was seen as a strength during the long primary season, but quickly became a liability in the general election as the Bush team kept him on the defensive about his record on crime and other issues.

a Democratic think tank in Washington, said Dukakis' decision was consistent with another run for the White House.

"But it is regarded with some dismay among Democrats, because the conventional wisdom is that he was a poor candidate who ran a poor campaign," Schneider said. "He's got to change that perception, to let people know that he has changed, that he learned something."

Elaine Kamarck, a Democratic Party activist living in New York City, said Dukakis made a smart move if he intends to run for president again, adding, "Now, I'm not sure that's what this means."

Dukakis also said there is "an undercurrent of anger" within the party. "There is some feeling this could have been a Democratic year and he blew it," she said. "If he runs again, I don't know how he copes with that."

Dukakis said the campaign had little impact on his decision not to seek a fourth term.

If he completes his current term, he would pass Revolutionary War patriot John Hancock as the longest serving governor in state history. Hancock, famous for his bold signature on the Declaration of Independence, held the office 11 years, although not continuously. Dukakis has served 10 years non-continuously.

Shultz recommends rights meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, impressed with the wholesale release of Soviet political prisoners and rising emigration figures, has recommended that President Reagan accept a Soviet proposal to hold a human rights conference in Moscow in 1991, a U.S. official said Tuesday.

If Reagan takes Shultz's advice, the stage also will be set for a new round of East-West negotiations to reduce conventional troops, tanks and artillery in Europe.

The start of talks between the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Warsaw Pact had been waiting completion of a 35-nation review in Vienna of human rights in the Soviet Union and in Eastern Europe.

Apparently, the Reagan administration has found enough progress in the Soviet record to allow the conference in Vienna and move on.

"It's not a perfect scorecard, but they've done a lot," said the U.S. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "They've come amazingly far."

North's lawyers subpoena Shultz

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court Tuesday temporarily halted the judge in the Iran-Contra case from giving prosecutors a summary of Oliver L. North's defense, possibly delaying the former White House aide's trial.

The three-judge panel of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals agreed to consider North's challenge of U.S. District Judge Gerald A. Gesell's decision to let prosecutors see the summary of classified information defense lawyers want to elicit from high government officials during the trial.

Meanwhile, North's lawyers subpoenaed Secretary of State George P. Shultz and four other State Department officials, including Assistant Secretary of State Elliot Abrams, the top department official for Latin American policy. Also subpoenaed were Undersecretary Michael H. Armacost, legal adviser Abraham Sofaer and M. Charles Hill, Shultz's executive assistant. North also has had subpoenas issued for President Reagan and President-elect Bush.

Abrams criticizes C. American policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top State Department official for Latin American affairs on Tuesday criticized the Reagan administration made a mistake in making its aid to Nicaraguan guerrillas a clandestine rather than an open operation.

Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state, also said the aid should have defined more clearly the goal of its Nicaraguan policy and should not have cooperated in a peace plan initiated by House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Tex.

Aides to President-elect Bush have said his administration will adopt a new approach to Nicaragua, seeking a diplomatic solution before asking for more military aid to the Contra guerrillas who battled the leftist Sandinista government in the early years of the Reagan administration.

Ambassador Hotel closes its doors

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Ambassador Hotel, where Charlie Chaplin lived, Robert F. Kennedy died, Marion Davies rode a horse through the lobby and generations of stars entertained at the Cocoanut Grove lounge, closed its doors Tuesday.

The last guests bid farewell to the 68-year-old Wilshire Boulevard landmark, an imposing building on 23 lush acres now in disrepair.

It was one of the city's first luxury hotels, its palm-lined property exemplifying the California lifestyle. Pictures of happier days line the corridors of the 350-room main building, but detracting from its elegant history now are peeling paint, worn rugs and stained wallpaper.

Boy undergoes 3rd liver transplant

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Surgeons tried to operate a third liver Tuesday on a Maryland boy whose second operation was made possible by a mother of another young patient who volunteered the organ intended for her child.

Jason Point, 5, of Deale, Md., went into surgery at 6 a.m., said Lynn McMahon, spokeswoman for Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh. The operation was expected to last 10 to 12 hours.

Jason was in critical condition with an abscess in his liver going into Tuesday's surgery.

In November, Jason received a liver originally intended for Candi Thomas, 6, of Accokeek, Md., after the girl's mother offered the organ to him. Candi's surgery was delayed because doctors said Jason would die within 48 hours without a transplant.

Sailor involved in drowning released

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — The only sailor sent to the brig for the drowning of a recruit during rescue-swimmer training has been released, but neither his case nor the debate over the Navy's practices are over.

A court-martial in September convicted Petty Officer 3rd Class Michael Combe, 28, of negligent homicide and conspiracy to commit battery in the death of Airman Recruit Lee Mirecki, 19.

Combe's 90-day sentence would have been up Dec. 21 and he was released about two weeks early for good behavior, said Cmdr. Dennis Hessler, a spokesman for the Pensacola-based Naval Education and Training Command. He also was reduced in rank one grade.

Finalists for top teacher are named

WASHINGTON (AP) — Public school teachers from California, Louisiana, Maryland and Virginia were named finalists Tuesday in the 1989 National Teacher of the Year contest.

The contest, which started in 1952, is sponsored by Encyclopaedia Britannica Inc., Good Housekeeping magazine and the Council of Chief State School Officers. The winner will be honored at a White House ceremony in April.

This year's finalists were selected by a panel of educators from Teachers of the Year named in the 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and American Samoa. They are:

- Jenlene Gee, 32, a third-grade teacher at Christine Spitzer Elementary School in Modesto, Calif. — Gee, a Chinese-American, developed a drug-abuse program and a young astronaut program in her school.
- Gary L. Stringer, 34, a science teacher at West Monroe High School in West Monroe, La. Stringer has developed a college-level geology course for high school students and a zookeeper program for teen-agers. He quit a job as a geologist for Exxon to enter classroom teaching.
- Elizabeth Bunch, 47, an eighth-grade social studies teacher at Parkland Junior High School in Rockville, Md. Roche coordinates an annual multiethnic festival at her school and organized the first racially integrated student dance at a rural Maryland high school.
- Mary V. Bicouvaris, 49, a government-international relations teacher at Bethel High School in Hampton, Va. Bicouvaris, a Greek immigrant, advises the school's award-winning Model United Nations Club and has written a booklet on her techniques for interdisciplinary study of the U.S. Constitution.

Minidoka computerizes its courts

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Deadbeats beware. Idaho courts are about to find you.

Court administrators and Minidoka County officials unveiled Tuesday a computerized record-keeping system that tracks all kinds of cases from beginning to end — and beyond.

"This is probably one of the most significant developments in the court system in the last decade," said Carl Bianchi, administrative director of the Idaho Court system. "It will do more to push counties into the next century than anything else."

What court officials, judges and clerks are excited about is dubbed ISTARs: the Idaho Statewide Trial Court Automated Records System. The state-of-the-art system will put "Idaho on the forefront" of court record-keeping, 5th District Judge J. William Hart said.

Developed in conjunction with International Business Machines Corp. and National Equipment Corp. of New Mexico, the computer program is a fancy record-keeping system for all kinds of court cases.

It will cost $4.2 million to implement throughout the state. The good news is National Equipment and IBM footed most development costs in hopes of selling the new system to other states at a profit, Bianchi said.

Minidoka County is the test site for the system and all its active court cases are logged onto the system.

The system will reduce the hours clerks spend on paperwork — or computerwork, now — and the computer automatically kicks out notices to people who don't pay restitution or fines on time.

In fact, when clerks in Minidoka County finished entering all their court cases on the computer, they specified one payment due date for each person who was past due on a fine.

"They finished, pushed the button on the computer, and the printer started printing notices to everybody behind on payments — for two hours."

John Peay of the state's court administrative office was there.

Minidoka County Deputy Clerk Sylvia Nelwerg, front right, explains the new computer record-keeping system to Cassia County Clerk Frank Kearns and deputy clerks Jameann Pennington and Randy Taylor, left, Tuesday morning on a new case.

He thought something went wrong until he and the county's deputy clerks looked at the printer out.

"Sure enough, we found out all those guys owed dough," Peay said. "Because accounting systems to collect fines and restitution is fractured and difficult to keep tabs on people can often slip through the court system several times without paying. "Some people like to come back and pay off debts with us several times," Peay said.

The computer system, because it can index names with a push of a button instead of an extensive file search, lets court personnel know when a deadbeat enters their doors on a new case.

The system network works with

IBM personal computer terminals hooked to a mainframe computer to prevent computer crashing. The computer system isn't hooked to a telephone line or to other county computers.

Canyon and Kootenai counties are next in line for the new system. After that, Bianchi and the courts hope the Idaho Legislature will kick in the funding to install the system in all 44 Idaho counties. Bianchi said he plans to ask the Legislature to fund the statewide system this winter, but also will probably ask for an increase in court filing fees to cover part of the cost.

Idaho's court system under Bianchi's direction has been recognized as one of the better-managed systems in the country.

BPA looks at line upgrades

By N.S. NOKKENFVED
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An upgraded power line may provide Idaho Power Co. an alternative to building a new line of its own to sell surplus power to the southwest.

The Bonneville Power Administration has proposed improvements in existing transmission lines that would allow an additional 1,600 megawatts of capacity, part of which would be available to Northwest utilities.

"It's something we'll look at," Idaho Power spokesman Larry Taylor said. The utility will consider participating in the BPA project instead of building its own line.

Idaho Power has about 150 to 200 megawatts of surplus power it wants to market in the southwest, including California, Taylor said.

"If it's cheaper, we'll go for it," he said. "The utility will look at the terms and specifics of what is offered."

The BPA project is not a new line to California but an "upgrade and modification" of existing equipment, said Allen Burns, BPA's project manager. The project Oregon lines would join new lines at the California border.

BPA will sell contracts for up to 725 megawatts of capacity on the new system. Existing lines have a 3,200-megawatt capacity.

The proposed price of participation is $248 per kilowatt of capacity. At that price the 725-megawatt line is worth about $180 million. The cost to Idaho Power to "wheel" 150 to 200 megawatts to California would be $37 million to $50 million.

The BPA project will continue to be considered a possibility for marketing surplus power to the Southwest, as well as a combination of the BPA project and leasing capacity from Utah Power and Light, until actual construction on the Idaho Power project begins, Taylor said.

"We're still looking at the economics of it," he said.

Education dollars center on programs

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The legislative buzz word for education this year is "accountability."

A combination of an expected budget surplus and a change in legislative leadership may set the stage for a 1989 Legislature that moves beyond education-funding squabbles to discuss ways of guaranteeing quality programs.

"This session should focus more on quality or accountability rather than dollars," said Kimberly Sen, legislative leader.

That doesn't necessarily mean, however, that the state Department of Education will win approval of its entire $42 million-plus budget increase.

The department estimates that $18.8 million will need to be added to last year's $468 million budget increase just to keep up with inflation. On top of that would be $20 million for a schools improvement project, $2 million for a handicapped preschool program, $550,000 for a teacher mentor program, and unspecified amounts for teacher salary equity and building maintenance and improvement.

In past years when the department has asked for budget increases, legislators and state residents have complained that they saw no specific improvements the extra money would provide. Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans has said,

"His solution is to require that the $20 million requested for school improvement be spent by individual districts for reducing classroom size or starting computer labs or firing more high school classes anything that's obvious and visible."

"Any patron or legislator would be able to go down the school halls and see exactly how the money is spent," Evans told members of the Associated Trainers of Idaho last year. "See ED on Page B9"

Blaine airport drops controversial curfew

By BARBARA NEIWEIT
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Blaine County Airport Commission voted Tuesday evening to kill a controversial curfew regulation barely two months old.

The regulation would have closed Friedman Memorial Airport to all air traffic, except emergencies, from 11 p.m. to 5 a.m. This was an amendment of the curfew which originally proposed the airport be closed to all traffic except planes landing from the south over Bellevue. More than 80 people — mostly local pilots and business owners — crowded into the commission's meeting room to protest the ordinance. Much of their concern centered on jeopardizing the business climate in the valley by limiting flying hours.

"From the recreational visitor's standpoint, (closing the airport) is close to economic suicide," Bellevue Councilman and businessman Ron Reese said. Pete Van Der Meulen, general manager of Power Engineers Inc., Hailey's largest employer, said last week in a letter to the commission his firm would consider moving out of the area if curfews became too restrictive.

The airport commission will form a subcommittee to study possible curfews at the airport. Suggestions from the local pilots' association included prohibiting take-offs and landings between 11 p.m. to 6 a.m. for aircraft with more than an 89-decibel reading on their approach and an 82-decibel reading on take-off.

King Videocable contributes to tax suit

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — King Videocable Co. has chipped in money for a Lewiston lawsuit, hoping its resolution will sway local officials to lower the company's skyrocketing taxes.

TCI Cablevision of Idaho in Lewiston sued Friday in 2nd District Court, alleging the 1,642-percent increase in its tax assessment this year was "excessive, arbitrary, capricious, erroneous, discriminatory and unconstitutional."

Chris Talkington, manager of King Videocable, said his company and at least four other major Idaho cable companies are contributing to the lawsuit because of all Idaho cable systems facing tax increases this year. TCI's was the most extreme.

TCI's assessed value in Nez Perce County shot up from $1.2 million to $19.5 million in one year. The result is an increase in its property tax bill to $348,616 and a monthly rate increase of $3.45. In the same period, King Videocable's assessments varied widely in the seven counties where it operates. Talkington said. Its assessments rose 161 percent in Twin Falls County, 59 percent in Gooding County, and 6 percent in Power County. In Bingham County, its assessment decreased 13 percent, Talkington said.

Its taxes in Twin Falls County, where the company does 85 percent of its business, rose from $28,703 in 1987 to $73,508 this year.

Although the company hasn't decided whether to pass the cost of the tax increase on to subscribers, the rate hike would need to be about 40 cents a month per subscriber, Talkington said.

The tax increases statewide came after the Idaho Tax Commission instructed counties to assess cable companies by their market value and potential to produce income, in addition to the value of the property.

In the past, county assessors relied upon the value of a company's assets. Twin Falls County Assessor Dorothy Hamby has said that in most cases resale value of buildings and equipment was well below a cable company's actual worth.

Cable is a relatively new industry, and tax collectors did not previously understand the value of a fully operating cable system, Hamby said.

Talkington said assessing a company according to income potential is a double tax.

"We already pay income tax to the state," he said. "It's bordering on extortion."

Public utilities are the only other industries taxed according to income potential, Talkington said.

If the cable companies are taxed by income potential, so should newspapers, radio stations and television stations, he said. "It looks to us that the assessors are trying to use cable to offset the taxes of other industries," Talkington said.

Meantime, the Idaho Tax Commission is meeting in Boise this week with representatives from 22 counties including Twin Falls to determine whether assessments should have been even higher than they already are.

Hamby said cable companies in Twin Falls County could have been assessed much higher than they were. King Videocable's estimated value rose in one year from $1.5 million to nearly $13 million — or about 800 percent.

Talkington said Hamby's assertion of leniency is little solace. It's like saying, "We're hanging you with a new rope but don't gripe because we could have used an old rope," he said.

TCI's lawsuit asks the court to prohibit Nez Perce County from assessing by the income approach.

The lawsuit states that Nez Perce County erroneously tried to tax the cable company's intangible value, which includes such "intangibles" as goodwill, subscriber lists and quality of management.

IEA gives support to budget hike

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Education Association has pulled together an arsenal of statistics to support a $42 million-plus budget increase requested by public schools.

The IEA says: "In 1988 taxpayers approved $34.3 million for maintenance and operation tax overrides — money to be levied above the 6 percent property tax increase allowed annually. That's more than three times the $13.3 million approved in 1980."

"In constant dollars, the amount spent per Idaho student has dropped more than 5 percent between 1982 and 1986. Idaho spent $2,214 per student in the 1987-88 school year. Only

Mississippi, Alabama, Utah and Arkansas spent less. Alaska topped the list with $7,038 spent per pupil.

The difference between what Idaho spent per pupil and the national average grew from $420 in 1977 to $1,402 in 1987. Idaho paid teachers an average salary of $22,788 last year. Seven states paid less. Paying the most was Alaska $40,424.

"The average salary for an Idaho teacher was $15,901 less than the national average in 1987. That's up from a difference of $2,529 a decade earlier."

"After the 1986-87 school year, 325 teachers left Idaho to teach in other states. Another 295 left the profession. Idaho teachers spend on the average $292 of their own money on students annually.

TWIN FALLS — Recruiting medical professionals to rural areas in Idaho may be easier, thanks to a recently established non-profit clearinghouse.

The Idaho Rural Health Education Center in Boise has opened the Health-Professional Clearinghouse, which offers such services as lists of physicians, candidate screenings and help in interviewing and contract negotiations, said Loyd Kieperle, the center's director.

"I think this is something that can help be beneficial to rural communities," Kieperle said. "What we're trying to do is take a fairly complicated, difficult system and help the hospital or community get the health professional they need."

The annual cost is $600 per community and a placement fee that varies depending on the type of professional placed.

The service is needed because rural areas often don't have the resources to compete with larger hospitals, Kieperle said.

Mike Piper, administrator of the Gooding County Hospital, said the service sounds like a good idea. Since a doctor can mean $40,000 a year to a hospital, a $500 annual enrollment fee can be justified, Piper said, especially when compared with the $15,000-$20,000 that commercial recruitment operations charge.

If the clearinghouse hospital, currently looking for one or two doctors, may consider taking on the new service. It already is using six or seven services, but the new one could have a more extensive list of potential candidates, Piper said.

Recruiting doctors and nurses to rural areas is a major concern of the center, established in March 1987. The concerns were reaffirmed this past fall during a series of town hall meetings the center held to look at health-care issues, Kieperle said.

The center's board of directors authorized the clearinghouse to open in October, but getting started took several months.

Specifically, the services offered are: A mailing list of 6,000 or so doctors working in Western cities and towns and in medical schools nationwide. Communities signed up for the program would give the clearinghouse a detailed description of the job and the community. The clearinghouse then would mail the information in the type of doctor being sought. A search for pediatricians, for example, would include only pediatricians.

Monthly contact with directors of residency programs and medical and nursing schools about a job opening in a particular city or town.

Hazelton man held on aggravated battery charges

TWIN FALLS — A Hazelton man was charged Tuesday with aggravated battery in the beating of a Twin Falls woman in front of her apartment, court records show.

Donald Ramos, 25, who was arraigned in Twin Falls County Magistrate Court. Authorities allege that at roughly 1:15 a.m. Saturday, Ramos put his hands around Julie Snider's neck and began choking her, court records show. Snider was then thrown to the ground, splitting her forehead open about three inches, authorities allege.

The alleged battery occurred in front of the Cherrywood Apartments at 2026 Elizabeth Blvd., court records show. Afterward, Snider was taken by friends to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Police arrested Ramos in Hazelton Monday.

Officials assess dike break damage

ST. GEORGE, Utah (AP) — Teams of federal, state and local representatives scoured a flood-ravaged area Tuesday to assess damage from a dike break that damaged more than 150 residences, an official said.

Meanwhile, many disgruntled residents complained they were warned either too early or too late of the flood early Sunday, which forced evacuation of 1,500 people from along the Virgin River before a wall of water rushed from a 200-foot-wide gap in the dike at Quail Creek Reservoir.

Four teams of representatives from the Federal Emergency Management Agency, Washington County and the state were surveying damage to homes, businesses, farms and public facilities such as roads, bridges and sanitation plants, said David Grier of the FEMA regional office in Denver.

The Idaho Legislature should decide as a policy matter the extent to which it wishes to move Idaho teacher salaries closer to the national average, the budget reads.

Magic Valley lawmakers expect the Legislature to look at ways to reward the best teachers. In 1984 the Legislature approved a career ladder program, but ran out of money before it was funded. Under it school districts came up with their own plan for approval by the state Board of Education.

Man charged with hitting officer

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man was charged Tuesday with punching a police officer three times while being arrested on a shoplifting charge, court records show.

Melvin Roberts, 37, was arraigned in Twin Falls County Magistrate Court on misdemeanor charges of petit theft, resisting arrest and battery on a police officer, court records show. Roberts was released on his own recognizance.

Authorities allege that Roberts punched public safety officer Ronald Roberson in the face three times when Roberts and his wife, Joan, 32, were arrested Monday at the IGA store on Main Avenue. North court records show. Joan Roberson, charged with petit theft, banded out of jail Monday night.

McMurrin starts up TV program

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Political activist Donald McMurrin will greet the airwaves this month with a new public forum titled "reaching an agreement with K9AZ."

"We'll be dealing with subjects very dear to Magic Valley," said McMurrin, campaign manager for several Democratic candidates in 1988.

He said he reached agreement with K9AZ over the phone Tuesday to have the program once a month at first. "If it's successful we'll do it once a week," McMurrin said.

The first program airs at 7 p.m. on Jan. 29.

He said it likely will deal with the county hospital.

McMurrin said he plans to produce the program gratis and invite a different guest, moderator and panelist for each show.

Bruins prepare for regional onslaught

By LARRY HOVSEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — "We have proved that we can play in the third district. This week we have to prove we can play in our own region," says Twin Falls Coach John Astorquia as he prepares his charges for four games in the next eight days.

That kicks off at 6:15 p.m. today with the Bruins playing the No. 1 state A-2 ranked Jerome Tigers in the first game of a double-header at the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium. CSI, ranked third nationally, will take on the Weber State Jayvees in the 8:30 p.m. nightcap.

"Of the four games, the one with Jerome is the least important," admits Astorquia to a question, because the next three (Burley, Pocatello and Minico) help decide standings and homecourt in next month's regional tournament. Getting to state is one of our team goals. But winning every game we can along the way is one of our goals, too, and so we don't want to lose to Jerome.

The Bruins come into the affair with a 4-4 record, their best start in three years. But it is remarkable how that record is a mirror of the past 50 years.

From 1939 through 1978, before entering the Gem State Conference, Twin Falls won 60 percent of all of its basketball games with Boise area teams. During that same time, it lost 62 percent of all its games against teams from Minico east and not including Burley.

So far this year, Twin Falls is 4-2 against western competition and 0-2 against eastern.

For that reason Astorquia says the importance has to begin when the Bruins invade Burley (2-8) Friday night and Pocatello (4-8) Saturday.

then take a brief hiatus before winding up the week at Minico (3-3).

"To get to state we have to beat the Burleys and the Pocatellos," he said. "In winning our last three games we have played consistently and competently. In our four wins and against Borah we had to be pleased with our effort. But in the three losses, we weren't very good. Minico destroyed us. The trouble is, two of those losses came in regional games."

Twin Falls' major problem tonight, Astorquia said, will be the inside outside scoring threat of Randy Lance and 6-5 Clint Bailey. Beyond that, Bailey himself "is an inside, outside threat because he can shoot the 15 footer with just about anyone around."

"Bailey and Lance did most of their scoring the night we saw them. The other thing apparent about Jerome is very good team quickness," he added.

Astorquia dismissed giving up the advantage of playing at home for the CSI sites, noting "actually we've played better on the road. I felt our two best games of the season were at Boise and at Meridian. Also, playing at different times of the day and in different gymnasiums is something you have to do if you can get beyond regional-to-state."

Jerome brings a 6-1 record into the battle, losing only to Nampa.

Switching to Burley, Astorquia noted "I have seen the Bobcats play three times and they have struggled with the same consistency we hope we passed now. They are playing a couple of sophomores and they are a pretty young team overall and that probably accounts for some of that."

Astorquia said he was impressed with the Bobcat effort at Highland where they stayed in the game and John L. Smith is the 1st Idahoan to coach one of the state's three university football programs since 1965.

Idaho names grid coach

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

MOSCOW — Forty-year-old John L. Smith became the University of Idaho's 29th head football coach on Tuesday, vowing to "continue doing the things we've done the last seven years and hopefully we're going to improve on them."

Smith, the defensive coordinator for the last two seasons at Washington State University, was selected from among four finalists, including current Idaho offensive coordinator Bill Dieckrick.

He replaces Keith Gilbertson, who resigned 10 days ago to accept an assistant coaching job at the University of Washington. Gilbertson, statistically the most successful football coach in Idaho's history, was 29-9 in three seasons at Moscow.

"We had a number of highly qualified individuals contact me, but only one met every one of our requirements," said Idaho athletic director Gary Hunter.

Like other coaches in the Idaho higher education system, Smith will be on a one-year contract. He will earn a base salary of $46,000.

Smith, who was born in Idaho Falls, attended Bonanza High School and played football at Weber State College, becomes the first Idaho native to coach one of the state's three university football programs since Babe Caccia resigned at Idaho State in 1965.

"It's great to come back to the state of Idaho, and I'm kind of emotional about it," said Smith, whose resume never had a head coaching position.

"I feel like this is home and I'm happy to be here," Smith coached for four seasons at Idaho, from 1982 through 1985, as defensive coordinator and assistant head coach under Dennis Erickson, the current head coach at Washington State. Smith went with Erickson to Wyoming in 1986 as assistant head coach and defensive coordinator, then accompanied Erickson when he moved on to Washington State in 1987.

Prior to coming to Idaho, Smith spent five years as a defensive coordinator and assistant head coach at Idaho State and seven years at Montana, the last two as defensive coordinator.

Montana and UNR are, like Idaho, members of the Big Sky Conference.

"I feel like I've kept in touch with the Big Sky for the past three years, but I'm sure a lot of things have changed," said Smith. "If anything, I'd say offenses are a little more wide open than when I left. Don Read is throwing the ball more at Montana. Garth (Hall) is running Oregon State's offense at Idaho State and even (UNR coach) Chris (Aul) is throwing it more at Reno. The only running team in the conference, really, is Montana State."

Smith said he would probably offer to retain all of the current assistant coaches at Idaho and that all but one of the current assistants would probably stay.

Although Smith didn't identify him, Dieckrick is the coach who declined the offer to remain at Moscow.

"We're going to do everything we can to maintain continuity in the program," said Smith, who added that none of the other Washington State assistants would accompany him to Idaho. The assistant coaches have to be good or Idaho wouldn't be where they are right now. Right now, I expect that I'll only have to fill one of the positions."

Smith, a defensive specialist, said he would hire a defensive coordinator, although he added he would keep his hand in coaching the Vandal defense.

"My philosophy is pick somebody to handle to offense and pick somebody to handle the defense and let them do the work," he quipped.

Smith said would be few changes in the Vandals' pass-oriented offense, which has powered Idaho to two of the last three Big Sky championships.

"I got off the phone this morning with (Idaho's All-American quarterback) John Friesz and I told him to work on the option game a little bit."

Eagles are back in action

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho's Golden Eagles return for the second and most important half of their season beginning tonight.

The Eagles will be hosting the Weber State Jayvees in a second game of a double-header that will pit Twin Falls against Jerome in the curtain-raiser at 6:15 p.m.

Weber State always is an unknown quantity, the Wildcats mixing some of the younger and lower-standing players on the varsity with a couple-three squadman and playing junior colleges around the intermountain area.

"We know absolutely nothing about them," said Coach Fred Trenchle, who will bring in a 13-0 team that is ranked third in the nation.

But Weber State, tough or easy, serves a very important purpose in the season because just two days after that the Eagles get back into their Region 18 battles, hosting Eastern Utah Friday and Colorado Northwestern Saturday. Those will be must games because they are being played at home and very few teams that lose at home historically have won the right to host the regional playoffs.

Trenchle was not overly disappointed that a game scheduled with Big Bend, Wash., last year was washed out for the second straight season.

"We were able to get a lot accomplished with our practices," he said.

"All our players came back on time and in good condition and we went right back to work. You can improve in practice, you usually only maintain in those periods you really are doing nothing but playing games."

Players say collusion prevented contracts

By RONALD BLUM
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — The Major League Baseball Players Association argues in a brief submitted to arbitrator Thomas Roberts that several free agents would have received multi-year deals between the 1985 and 1986 seasons in the absence of collusion.

The brief was submitted last Friday as part of the Collusion I case's damage process.

Should Kirk Gibson have received a five-year guaranteed contract when he became a free agent after the 1985 season? Should infielder Jim Dwyer or pitcher Danny Darwin, for example, have gotten multiyear deals?

Those were some of the issues raised in the brief.

The union wants Roberts to examine the history of multi-year contracts and determine that many players would have received longer deals if not for collusion among club owners.

"We are asking him to make a number of findings," Donald Fehr, executive director of the union, said Tuesday. "We are asking that he find there should have been additional numbers of multiyear contracts, trade restrictions, option buyouts, performance bonuses and that the players be compensated for not having those."

The union asked Roberts to determine a total for damages caused in 1985 by the 1985 collusion. Fehr would not divulge the exact number, but said it was slightly lower than the previous estimate of between $20 million and $30 million. The union has asked that after Roberts decides on an amount, hearings be held for each player making a claim.

The union's request is based on a statistical analysis of free agent signings, plus a model of player salaries developed by Glassman-Oliver Economic Consultants, Inc., a Washington consulting firm.

For example, following the 1980 season 11 players eligible for free agency signed contracts of four years or longer. There were three contracts of that length agreed to after the 1981 season, seven after 1982 and three after 1983.

After the 1984 season, pitchers Bruce Sutter, Rick Sutcliffe, Rich Goossens and Ed Whitten and outfielder Fred Lynn all got contracts of five years or longer and three other players signed four-year deals. No free agent has gotten a contract of longer than three years since.

"I want him to find that historically, let's say for example there were between 10 and 20 contracts each year of a certain length. After 1985 that didn't happen," Fehr said.

The union's brief covers players eligible for salary arbitration in addition to free agents.

Barry Rona, head of the owners' Players Relations Committee, said management lawyers had received the brief Tuesday and that he had not yet read it so he could not comment.

Wide receiver Hart Lee Dykes of Oklahoma State, the Big Eight's all-time leader in receiving yardage, ended his college career Friday night in the Holiday Bowl, where Oklahoma State defeated Wyoming, 62-14. But the final chapter of his life at Oklahoma State won't be written until later this week.

The NCAA is expected to place Oklahoma State on probation with severe penalties because of violations documented in large measure through Dykes' testimony — one of the few times the NCAA has been able to put to gether a case against a school with the aid of an athlete still attending the school.

Published reports citing unnamed sources have said that the NCAA gave Dykes immunity from eligibility sanctions in exchange for his testimony against four schools: Oklahoma State, Oklahoma, Illinois and Texas A&M. Those schools were involved in a highly publicized recruiting struggle for Dykes when he came out of high school in Bay City, Texas, as a Parade All-America pick in 1985. When asked previously about the situation, Dykes has said: "It doesn't ring a bell to me."

However, in an interview with Newsday, Ron Watson, a former NCAA investigator who is now an assistant athletic director at Oklahoma, confirmed that the NCAA gave Dykes immunity in exchange for his testimony against the four schools and criticized the NCAA for making the deal.

"Hart Lee is making kind of a mockery of the NCAA system," said Watson, who spent 18 months as an NCAA enforcement representative and now serves as OOU's assistant athletic director for compliance, "because he played while everyone knows he received extra benefits that no other athlete should be able to receive."

David Bersi, the NCAA's assistant executive director for enforcement, was on vacation, according to his office, and could not be reached for comment.

Oklahoma, Illinois and Texas A&M were placed on probation in 1988, wholly or in part because of information provided by Dykes.

In the Oklahoma case, which resulted in bans on bowl appearances by the Sooners for the next two seasons as well as other penalties, the most serious of 20 violations cited by the NCAA was that an Oklahoma assistant coach offered a recruit $1,000 cash in an envelope. Published reports citing unnamed sources have identified the assistant as Oklahoma receivers coach Mike Jones and the recruit as Dykes.

Bowl hangover

Doesn't the air smell cleaner now that Notre Dame is No. 1?

By The Associated Press

A view through the haze of a bowl hangover. The Miami Hurricanes could be drafted as a team into the NFL. Would they be the first? They are not. The Heat won their first NBA game. The Heat won their first NBA game. The Heat won their first NBA game.

It is possible the Dolphins are only the second best football team in Miami. The Hurricanes beat Nebraska 23-3 in the Orange Bowl, and they're still No. 2 to Notre Dame. Nebraska quarterback Charles Fryar said he "wanted to represent all of us with Miami."

There were seven bowl games Monday, the first starting at about 1:07 p.m. EST, and the last two ending just before midnight. Almost 11 straight hours of football that started with three at once.

ball in one day. Quickie Quiz: Match the sponsor to the bowl. USF&G, Mobil, Sunlight, Tidy Sugar, Colman, Electra, your own Answer: right.

Who's the dog that doesn't bark? The dog that doesn't bark is the dog that doesn't bark. The dog that doesn't bark is the dog that doesn't bark.

fish coach Lou Holtz was wrong about one thing, though. He said it weren't for the Irish, Southern California, Miami and West Virginia would all still be undefeated.

Bo won't forget. That was his second victory in nine Rose Bowls. The next time someone from Miami, especially Coach Jimmy Johnson, mentions the fourth-quarter fumble or missed 2-point conversion that cost the Hurricanes a 31-30 loss to Notre Dame, let's all stick our fingers down our throats and run for the nearest bowl.

How many times do the Miami mention, by the way, that they allowed Notre Dame to score 31 points? An ever-gracious-in-defeat Johnson sometimes talks about giving Notre Dame "the national championship."

Oh, come on, now, Jimmy. We know your heartfelt congratulations go out to Holtz and his players. So, who's No. 1 now, Jimmy? Michigan?

Who was in the Hall of Fame Bowl anyway? Was the Citrus Bowl on Monday, or was that Sunday? Whatever happened to the Bluebonnet Bowl? Is that tomorrow, or next year? Some questions just don't need an answer.

Doesn't it seem strange that the Orange Bowl is the Big Eight's bowl, then, Nebraska gets the automatic bid as conference champ, but Miami has played in the bowl, on its home field, three of the last six years?

Tough Big East readies for battle

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Now that winter, Syracuse has climbed to No. 2 in the rankings comes the hard part, Big East conference play. Syracuse has won its 13 games by an average of 25 points, but Coach Jim Boheim expects the competition to get tougher now that the Orange men move into the league phase of their schedule, starting Wednesday night with Pittsburgh at the Carrier Dome.

There are no easy games in this league anymore, Boheim said. "It's pretty apparent the league is going to be a bear this year." Syracuse is 100-52 in Big East games, including the conference's postseason tournament.

Four Big East teams will start conference play with undefeated records. Syracuse, 13-0; Georgetown, 9-0; Seton Hall, 12-0; and Providence, 10-0. Connecticut has been beaten once in nine games.

Pittsburgh at 6-4 had the lowest winning percentage against non-league opponents among Big East teams. Villanova was 9-1, St. John's 7-3 and Boston College 7-4. At one point this season, five Big East teams were ranked in the Top 20 poll.

Currently, Georgetown is ranked fifth, while Seton Hall is 10th; Connecticut and Villanova also appeared in the rankings earlier in the season. "I know each year they say the league is improved, but this season everyone is strong. There's no question we will have to play hard every game out. Don't and you can just about guarantee a loss," said Boheim.

Syracuse has been challenged only by No. 11 Missouri in the final of the Big Apple NIT and Louisiana Tech in the Carrier Classic. The Orangemen won both games in overtime. Syracuse's defense has been stifling at times, but there have been periods when it has caused Boheim concern. Against U.S. International, Syracuse's defense was riddled for 93 points and Louisiana Tech scored 98. Tougher conference games may make Syracuse pay more often for a nagging deficiency — foul shooting. Going into the Pittsburgh game, Syracuse is shooting just 55 percent from the free-throw line. Among the starting five, the only player shooting better than 70 percent is guard Matt Roe.

Meanwhile, Syracuse has made 60 percent of its shots from the field. "Everybody has weaknesses. Everybody has ways to be beaten," said Sherman Douglas, the team captain. Rebounding could be a weakness, trying to defend and definitely free-throw shooting.

While Douglas admitted undefeated Syracuse is mortal, he also said Syracuse is ready for the Big East to start. "We've proven ourselves during the NIT and these (non-league) games that we can get motivated for anybody," said Douglas. Although Pittsburgh no longer has all-conference stars Charles Smith and Jerome Lane under the basket, Boheim expects a difficult league opener.

Stanford University names head coach

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Dennis Green, a San Francisco 49ers assistant coach, was named head football coach at Stanford University Tuesday and promptly told about 20 high school prospects about it in telephone calls.

Green, 39, became the fourth Division I football coach who is black. He was named to replace Jack Stryker, fired last month after a 3-9-5 season. Green will remain with the NFC West champion 49ers through the playoffs.

"I think our goal is to win and to establish success right from Jump Street," said Green of his new job. "We know we want to be successful ... we know what we have to do to get to a bowl game."

"I think the potential is here to recruit that kind of talent." Green, a two-year starting tailback at Iowa who played briefly in the Canadian Football League, downplayed race as a factor in his selection. The only other blacks among the 104 Division I football coaches are Francis Peay at Northwestern, where Green previously was head coach, Wayne Nunnelly at Nevada, Las Vegas and Cleve Bryant at Ohio University.

"I don't think it was a factor, I really don't," Green said. Instead, he credited 49ers head coach Bill Walsh, a former Stanford head coach, with helping him. "A recommendation from the right guy is always important in getting the job," said Green.

He worked under Walsh at Stanford in 1977 and 1978, then followed him to the 49ers in 1979 as running back coach. He returned to Stanford in 1980 as offensive coordinator under Paul Wiggan.

He had his first shot as head coach the following season at Northwestern, where he was named Big 10 Coach of the Year in 1982. He rejoined Walsh and the 49ers in 1985. Green's selection came after a month-long search by Athletic Director Andy Geiger, who interviewed more than a dozen candidates.

DENNIS GREEN - Now on 49ers staff including Paul Hackett, pass-offense coordinator of the Dallas Cowboys and Minnesota Vikings defensive coordinator Pete Carroll. Green declined to comment on terms of his contract, other than to describe them as "very equitable."

Stanford quarterback Jason Palumbis said he welcomed Green's appointment. "I hope the receivers coach, I guess we'll pass a lot," he said. "I like that idea."

Elway was dismissed Dec. 5 amid reports of player dissatisfaction, but Green said those problems can be solved by having somebody in charge and communicating with players.

"It can't be proxy, it can't be by vote," he said, describing his goals as first being fair to the players, then being successful on the field. "Things just didn't work out," he said of previous regimes.

The Cardinal had losing seasons in four of Elway's five years, and he was 25-29-2 overall. The winning season was posted in 1984, when Stanford went 8-4 and lost to Clemson in the Gator Bowl.

The Cards finished 3-6-2 last season.

Weber center leads Big Sky

BOISE (AP) — Rick Washington, Weber State's all-everything center, continues to dominate the Big Sky Conference scoring and rebounding races.

The 6-foot 7-inch Washington's 24.3 points per game is almost a full point better than Nevada-Reno guard Darryl Owens, and his 11.8 rebounds per game is three better than Montana's Wayne Tomlinke.

Wolf-pack senior forward Chris Rupp is the Big Sky's best shooter from the field, hitting almost 70 percent, and sophomore guard Kevin Franklin trails only Boise State's Chris Childs with a free-throw percentage of almost 64 percent.

Childs' is among only four Broncos that show up in any individual statistical category, even though Boise State is 8-1 heading into Big Sky competition.

Besides free-throw percentage, the all-conference senior guard is 13th in scoring, sixth in assists, eighth in three-point field goal percentage and tied for third in three-point field goals.

As a team, however, Boise State's dual-threat attack leads the league in offensive field goal percentage, defensive rebounding and three-point field goal percentage. The Broncos have slipped behind Idaho, 10-2, in scoring defense and defensive field goal percentage. The Vandals also are the Big Sky's best with a scoring margin of 17.6 points per game.

Steelers give lifetime contract to Chuck Noll; fire 4 coaches

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Chuck Noll was given a lifetime contract by the Pittsburgh Steelers Tuesday, and will remain head coach for at least one more season, but four assistant coaches were fired and defensive coordinator Tony Dungy resigned.

"Chuck Noll is our head coach and we have all the confidence in the world in him," said President Dan Rooney. "He is right for the Steelers and he is right for Pittsburgh."

"I've always felt that I'd be here. I always thought security is doing the job," said Noll, who conceded that he thought about leaving after the Steelers' last season, their worst finish since his first year as coach in 1969.

Noll will be working next season with a revamped staff after the firing of special-teams coach Dennis Fitzgerald, linebacker coach Jed Hughes, guards and centers coach Bill Hunter and conditioning and training coach Walt Evans.

confirmed recent talks with Broncos coach Dan Reeves about an assistant coaching job in Denver. "I think there are people interested in Tony," Noll said. "Tony's a good coach. I think he'll have plenty of opportunities."

The Steelers said Noll, who will be 57 on Thursday, would return as head coach next season and will remain with the organization for the rest of his career.

"We're hopeful Chuck is going to be the head coach for a long time," Rooney said. But Noll said he might be interested in an executive position with the Steelers in the future. Noll, 183-132-1 as a Steeler coach, is the fifth-winningest coach in NFL history and the winner of four Super Bowls in the 1970s.

Noll did not comment on published reports he disagreed with Rooney over the fate of the assistant coaches. Of his thoughts about quitting, Noll said the matter came up in discussions with Rooney. "We talked about the whole structure and ... if it was a problem with respect to what was happening and where we were going, I would certainly not be above saying, 'Hey, get somebody and do whatever you have to do,'" Noll said. "I talked with Dan about it and he didn't think that was the problem."

Rooney and Noll declined to discuss the fired coaches, but Noll said future assistant coaches would pay more attention to players' physical training and to scouting players on other NFL teams for possible trades, something the Steelers have been reluctant to do under Noll.

"I think we have to have more information on people in the league," Noll said. "You have college scouting reports ... and then our information from that point on has been really rather sketchy."

Noll would not speculate on changes in the Steelers' conservative game strategies. "Basically the philosophy we have is my philosophy and it is a growing and changing thing," Noll said. "It's the changing nature of the game right now that has brought this thing about it. No question it was a bad year, I'm not arguing that point. But I think you have to be able to move with the league and what may happen," Noll said.

Erickson praises Cougars as AP ranks team 16th in final poll

FULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Washington State head football coach Dennis Erickson said Tuesday that his team's 16th-place finish in the final Associated Press 1988 college poll "is just unbelievable."

The Cougars' 9-3 season, including a Christmas Day victory over Houston in the Aloha Bowl, surpassed last year's 10-2 record. Erickson said his team was "proud to finish near the bottom of the Pacific-10 Conference."

"It was just a great year for us," Erickson said. "To finish 16th and have the success we had the last two years is just unbelievable. It's a tribute to our coaches, the football team and especially, the senior class."

Erickson praised his seniors for their leadership in helping the Cougars surpass their pre-season goals. "Our expectations going in were to be competitive and to win several games and four in league," Erickson said. "We fell that could be achieved."

Erickson said, "We've got some players coming back, but we've lost some great players."

The second-year coach said he doesn't know whether fans will expect next year's team to match or exceed this year's success.

"People's expectations go up after a successful season, but I'd rather the team has high expectations," Erickson said. "I will miss defensive coordinator John L. Smith, named Tuesday as head coach at Erickson's old school, Idaho. "He's been instrumental in any program I've been in (at Idaho, Wyoming and Washington State). Any time you lose a coach of that quality, it hurts your team."

Erickson on Tuesday named Gregg Smith, his offensive line coach, to take over John Smith's assistant head coach duties, but is still looking for someone to fill John Smith's defensive coordinator role.

Player who died had suffered injuries

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Reserve forward Michael Brown, who died of cardiac arrest during a practice, was playing his way back onto the Virginia Commonwealth basketball team after recovering from nagging injuries, Brown's coach said Tuesday.

"He had been practicing for three weeks, and we had brought him conditioning along," said Coach Mike Pella. "We wouldn't let him play in the first couple of games because we didn't feel he was in condition to play."

Brown, 26, collapsed during a break in practice shortly before noon Monday. Team trainer Willie Johnson immediately began cardiopulmonary resuscitation and was assisted by paramedics who arrived within 10 minutes, according to school officials. Treatment continued in the emergency room of the Medical College of Virginia Hospitals, but doctors were never able to restore Brown's heart beat.

He was pronounced dead at 12:20 p.m.

Kickoff Classic may include Notre Dame

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — National champion Notre Dame is the top choice to play in the Kickoff Classic next August and Coach Lou Holtz said Tuesday the Irish may be interested.

"There's some interest in us, but there's some things you have to be concerned with," Holtz said during a news conference the day after Notre Dame's 34-21 victory over West Virginia in the Fiesta Bowl.

"No. 1, we have a rather short summer anyway and our football players have to come back early. Then, our first three games are with Michigan, Michigan State and Purdue and two of those three are on the road."

The Kickoff Classic, staged annually at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., would like to match Notre Dame with No. 6 UCLA, but the Bruins have thus far been unable to participate because of the school's academic calendar.

anybody with an extra-curricular game.

Three national champions have played in the Kickoff Classic — Penn State in 1983, Miami in 1984, Brigham Young in 1985. A team can participate only once in five years.

Holtz said any decision would have to be made by the university administration "when an offer is made, and it's made."

"I do know this — there has been some indication that they are interested in Notre Dame and there has been some interest on Notre Dame's part about going."

"We have not been in New York in a long time and it would be a great experience."

"There's a lot of pluses about it, but I'd be less than honest if I told you I was completely exhilarated about going."

One consideration, he said, might be the fact that Notre Dame has only five home games next season.

"Our whole budget comes every year from gate receipts," he said.

Bears lose fight ends for title game

SUWANNEE, Ga. (AP) — Coach Mike Ditka of the Chicago Bears said Tuesday that injuries will force tight end Cap Bosso and Emery Moorehead to miss the NFC title game against the San Francisco 49ers.

That leaves the team with only two healthy tight ends on its 47-player roster, starter Jim Thornton and rookie Brent Novelsky.

The Chicago coach said the situation doesn't worry him because "Bear" wide receivers have been doing a good job, catching passes because this season than in any other year since Dick Toomey over the team in 1982.

"We've had a lot of success throwing the ball to the outside people, and as long as they continue to give us the outside people we'll take them," said Ditka. "If they take that away, we'll have to throw to the tight ends and backs."

Ditka said the rest of his squad should be healthy enough to play Sunday at Soldier Field.

NEW YORK (AP) — Magic Johnson, who averaged 27.3 points, 13.3 assists and 8.3 rebounds in three games for the Los Angeles Lakers, was named NBA Player of the Week on Tuesday.

Johnson had 26 points, 18 assists and 10 rebounds in a victory over Philadelphia. It was his seventh triple-double of the season.

"Earvin has been scoring running again," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "We're back to offense 120 points and that had been missing the past few weeks."

major conferences must be invited every seven years.

A spokesman for the New Jersey Sports & Exposition Authority, which sponsors the Kickoff Classic, said Notre Dame has indicated in the past that it would be interested in playing when it had a deserving team.

"You can't get a more deserving team than the national champions," the spokesman said, adding that conversations with Notre Dame, which had been on hold while Irish prep for the Fiesta Bowl, were expected to resume this week.

"Any time a national champion is available, you're obviously interested in seeing what disposition toward a bid that team would have. There's no doubt Notre Dame is appealing to

VMI names new head football coach

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — Jim Shuck was named Tuesday as Virginia Military Institute's head football coach, saying the job with the long-struggling Keydets will pose challenges similar to those he faced as Army's offensive coordinator.

"I think VMI has a tremendous amount of likeness to West Point," Shuck said at a news conference. "Believe me, I know it's not going to be easy. It's going to be a lot of hard work."

Shuck, 34, plans to use the wishbone offense, which has worked well for Army. He will manage the job with a five-year, $65,000-a-year contract. "The great thing about the wishbone is it's a team offense," he said. "It's a discipline offense."

UMass players face burglary charges

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — Two stars of the University of Massachusetts basketball team and a recruit were arrested on burglary charges Tuesday, just hours before the team faced West Virginia in the Atlantic 10 Conference.

Duane Chase, a 21-year-old center, and David Brown, a 22-year-old forward who is the team's captain and leading scorer, were immediately indicted by Coach John Calipari, who often has spoken of the seniors from Baltimore as key performers.

"Until I talk to the players, I have no response as far as the charges," Calipari said. He said he was keeping them out of games indefinitely although he cannot suspend them formally until the court rules on their case.

The three men were arrested at 3 a.m. Tuesday when a police officer spotted them driving without headlights in the wrong direction down a one-way street, said Sgt. Timothy Sullivan of the Amherst force.

With Chase and Brown was George Andrew Hardin, 21, a basketball player from a junior college in Salt Lake City, Utah, who reportedly was prepared to join the team Tuesday night for its game at the Springfield Civic Center.

Hardin was to have entered UMass in February and would have been eligible to play Tuesday, although a spokeswoman at the university said he had not been given official notification of his acceptance yet.

As a patrolman Jerry Miller pursued their car, he heard the burglary report on his police radio, Sullivan said. A woman had reported her portable stereo missing after being awakened by intruders in her Amherst home, the sergeant said.

Sullivan said the patrolman found a stereo matching the description in the car, along with a microwave oven, a camera and crowbars and screwdrivers. Authorities say they don't know who owns the other items.

Baker will appeal $10,000 NFL fine

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota Vikings defensive end Al Baker says he'll appeal a $10,000 fine by the National Football League for a late hit on Chicago quarterback Mike Ditka in the final game of the regular season.

Baker said Monday he's asked for a hearing before NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle.

"I'm really shocked and I'm pretty disappointed in the way it was handled because it wasn't intentional," said Baker, who has lost $30,000 in fines and salary this season. "If he (Rozelle) reviewed the film, he could see it wasn't flagrant. Maybe he was trying to make an example out of me. And I fought on that."

Earlier, Rozelle suspended Baker for one game without pay for poking Philadelphia's suspension tackle Ron Heller in the eye during a game Sept. 25. That English tackle Baker one week's pay, about $20,000.

In the Chicago incident, the Vikings were penalized 15 yards when Baker was flagged for roughing Tomczak in the first quarter of a game Dec. 19. The league reviewed the play and decided punitive action was appropriate.

Report: Pacers will choose Versace

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Versace, an assistant coach with the Detroit Pistons, will be named head coach of the Indiana Pacers this week, the New York Post reported Tuesday.

A Pacer spokesman in Indianapolis, however, called the report "very premature at this time."

The Post said Versace would get a three-year contract, which still is not signed, and the official announcement would be made Thursday.

According to Peter Vecsey, the newspaper's pro basketball columnist, Versace beat out Bill Blair of the Washington Bullets for the Pacers' job.

George Irvine has been the team's interim coach since the resignation of Jack Ramsay earlier this season.

Versace joined the Pistons in the summer of 1985 after eight seasons as coach of Bradley University.

Microwave toppers add pizzazz to potatoes

Just about everyone has a favorite kind of potato, whether it be fried, mashed, boiled, baked or scalloped. But with the flood of microwave ovens into American homes, the baked potato is quickly becoming America's preferred potato.

Recent studies show that baked potatoes are second only to french fries in popularity, nudging mashed potatoes into third place.

Despite its popularity, even the baked potato can use a little added pizzazz every now and then. Microwaveable potato toppers are just the ticket.

The number of possibilities for potato toppers is practically endless. For instance, if pizza is on your mind, the trio of pepperoni, zesty tomato soup and shredded mozzarella cheese provides the perfect flavors for the tasty Pizza Topper. If something cheesy is more in line, Three Cheese Topper blends Swiss and Parmesan cheeses with a can of cheddar cheese soup for a quick and easy main dish.

For those thinking vegetables, the Confetti Vegetable Topper takes advantage of two time-saving ingredients — frozen-mixed vegetables and cream of celery or cream of mushroom soup. Try this topper with microwave-baked sweet potatoes for extra appeal. A Chili Barbecue Topper, made with tomato and hot pepper sauces, chili-beef soup, cheddar cheese and sour cream, is perfect for those wanting a spicy, southwestern taste.

Two other topper ideas — Mushroom Beef Stroganoff and Hot 'n Cheesy — are further examples of just how easy it is to be creative with potato toppers.

Once you test your imagination with baked potatoes, you may never go plain again!

MUSHROOM BEEF STROGANOFF TOPPER
1 can (10 1/2-ounce) condensed beefy mushroom soup

1 can (about 8 ounces) sliced mushrooms, drained
1/2 teaspoon dried dill weed, crushed

1/4 teaspoon paprika
1/4 cup sour cream
4 hot baked potatoes, split

In 1-quart microwave-safe casserole, combine soup, mushrooms, dill

Microwave potato tips

• Before cooking, scrub potatoes thoroughly with a vegetable scrubber and remove any sprouts or green areas.

• Pierce the potato skin in several places with a fork before microwaving to allow excess steam to escape.

• Arrange potatoes in a circular pattern on a microwave-safe plate to allow energy to penetrate from all sides.

• Microwave, uncovered, on high for the recommended time (see times below) for until tender. Rearrange potatoes once during cooking to allow for even cooking.

• Allow potatoes to stand while preparing toppers.

Idaho companies take advantage of microwave magic

The Associated Press

POCATELLO — The microwave oven, the electrical appliance that has brought life to leftovers, is warming America's hearts in a new way. It isn't just for heating last night's spaghetti anymore.

New microwave specialty products, many focusing on potatoes — are keeping pace with a fast-moving society.

Consumers now are able to buy frozen items marketed specifically for microwaves — hamburgers, sandwiches, casseroles, french fries, mashed potatoes — even milk shakes.

And with an estimated 70 percent of American households owning a microwave, the items are catching on fast.

"Meats are really becoming snacks today

... for the great majority, they just eat whenever it's convenient," said Blaine Jacobson, J.R. Simplot Co. retail marketing manager, Boise. "People used to schedule their days around meals. Now it has flip-flopped. There is a major revolution in the American diet. We're seeing that it opens the door to all sort of changes in eating habits."

Simplot, Ore-Ida in Boise and Idaho Fresh-Pak in Lewisville are nationwide leaders in microwave food products.

"The word is, people want convenience and they want it quick," Bill Miller, Lamb-Weston senior vice president, said.

Golden Valley Microwave, which jointly owns Lamb-Weston with ConAgra Inc., is among businesses trying to master the microwave market. Lamb-Weston gained national recognition by supplying fast-food restaurants with french fries.

Ore-Ida and Simplot did likewise, using Idaho spuds to gain contracts with companies such as McDonald's and Burger-King. But in about 1985, after noticing the popularity of microwave frozen products, they expanded their horizons. To "capitalize" on frozen french fries that could be heated in a microwave and eaten in minutes.

About 3 percent of Ore-Ida's frozen potatoes are now used for microwave products. Simplot has gone one step further, introducing a variety of products — including milk shakes — under the MicroMagic brand name.

Idaho Fresh-Pak's Idahoan brand of instant, mashed potatoes, introduced just this year, is reportedly the only such microwave product on the market in the U.S. Consumers add water and a seasoning packet to potato flakes and then cook the mixture in the microwave. No milk or butter!

Other companies are test-marketing microwave pizzas, potato skins and potatoes stuffed with cheddar cheese and sour cream. "I believe it's a real consumer need that we're answering ... Microwave products are here to stay," said Doug Bender, Ore-Ida assistant retail frozen potato manager.

He and Simplot's Jacobson are confident that microwave products won't curtail fast-food restaurant sales.

Lamb-Weston's Miller, however, said, microwave products are a new competitor for fast-food chains.

"People only eat so much," he said. "Therefore, if they switch where they get (their food), it affects somebody. These different ways of eating are coming in." Indeed they are, according to Gary Blakey, a Boise advertising agent who manages the Idaho Fresh-Pak account.

"The microwave oven has really become a convenience kitchen tool," he said, attributing the microwave's new niche to changing lifestyles. That includes dual-income households and single-parent families who want to come home from work, eat as quickly and conveniently as possible and relax in the evening.

People don't want to wait an hour for a casserole and baked potato to cook in a conventional oven.

"It used to be, if you weren't home for the dinner hour, your wife would clean up and you'd have to rustle something up on your own," Jacobson said.

Cookies hail from many countries

By LINDA LOWE MORRIS
Baltimore Sun

The first batch is just beginning to fill the kitchen with the warmth and the spicy aroma of baking cookies as Nancy Baggett turns her attention to batch No. 2. She picks up a cookie cutter shaped like a leaf and gently presses it into a thin sheet of dough.

"From the time I can remember being allowed to do anything in the kitchen," she says, "my mother let me help her with the cookies. I'd be 3 or 4 or, at the most, 5 years old, and I'd be there trying to roll out cookies and shape them just like she did. And of course mine always came out gray, but she didn't criticize, and I was so proud of myself, I thought it was wonderful."

For many of us, the very mention of cookies brings back the memories of childhood, of smells and tastes so strong they are clear and sharp even in remembrance. At least that is what Mrs. Baggett found.

While doing the research for her latest cookbook, "The International Cookie Book" (Stewart, Tabori & Chang, hardcover, $24.95), Mrs. Baggett found that she only had to mention the word cookie and out would come a flood of memories and stories.

"Almost everyone would recall some particular cookie that their aunt or their grandmother or the lady down the street made," she says. "I think a lot of people have fond family memories. Cookies are just such a part of the holidays. It's the same as putting up the tree, you could have a holiday without it."

Mrs. Baggett, a food writer who lives in Columbia, Md., and has written four other cookbooks, began collecting cookie recipes while she and her family lived in Germany for four years in the late '70s.

"We lived in a little town about 30 miles west of Frankfurt and we also got to travel quite a bit in the British Isles, Scandinavia, through central Europe across to France. I collected books and pamphlets and cookie recipes as I went, never knowing quite what I was going to do with them."

Mrs. Baggett discovered that cookies are made throughout the world, but often they are quite different from the types of cookie found in America.

"Most people in the United States go for what she called the 'chewy, gooey' kinds of cookie — thick, moist and slightly underbaked in the center — like chocolate chip cookies and brownies."

"That is an American sort-of-taste and an American invention; actually, and it's a fairly recent taste. Up until it looks to me like about the 1930s, they weren't. I have some old recipe collections and in the late 1800s there seemed to be more emphasis on molasses cookies, spice cookies, ginger snaps."

"The styles of cookie in the rest of the world are quite different, she says. In Britain, for example, people think of shortbreads, but that's not the only type."

"A lot of the cookies there are crisp or crunchy or almost kind of dry, the kind of biscuit-type, cookie that you would want with a cup of tea, which is the way they eat them."

Bean recipe allows many variations

It really is a new year! Now, thanks to a great new computer, all my written stuff will be easily accessible and spelled right.

Well, sort of. You see the spelling programs on these word processors usually don't have some cooking words and phrases that I need, such as herb, nacho, pesto and even "snickerdoodle."

So I have to add my own language to boot-up-the-system.

As far as being accessible; that's a different problem. All the files have to be named in eight letters or less, so I can only remember my shorthand: Christmas Coffee cake, I'll find things in a snap!

This recipe is one I made for New Year's Eve. You might want to include it in your file for January Sunday suppers or even Super Bowl weekend. But don't ask me how to name it in eight letters or less!

There are many, many variations to this particular recipe. In fact the only given seems to be the beans. Flageolet's are the beans most often used. These are mild-flavored light green, sort of shaped like a mine.

This particular recipe and beans came from John and Lola Weyman of "Good Taste" in Ketchum. This is a basic recipe and they would be the first to urge you to experiment a bit. In fact in the Provence area in

The amount of sweetness people like in their cookies varies from country to country and American cookies are some of the sweetest.

"When we were in Germany I would make cookies for the kids. And my landlord's son, who was just 2 years older than my son, would find some of the cookies that I made that American kids really liked. I would say we like ours sweeter — although the trend toward overly sweet stuff is fading even in the United States. If I made recipes that I got out of books from the 1800s I would inevitably have to cut back the sugar. They were just so sickeningly sweet I couldn't eat them."

"When testing recipes for her book, Mrs. Beggett found that there were some cookies that are very popular in their own countries that just do not translate well for American tastes. Others had to be changed somewhat to fit American tastes and styles of cooking. I basically modified the recipes for an American audience, but, after all, my primary audience is American."

She enlisted a group of testers, some home economists and some home cooks, to check her recipes. She had each tester bring her some of the cookies they made from each recipe so she could check the flavor against her own.

Here are some of the recipes from "The International Cookie Book":

CHOCOLATE CHIP COOKIES

Makes 40 to 45 2½-inch cookies.
 1 cup quick-cooking oats
 2½ cups all-purpose or unbleached white flour
 1½ teaspoons baking powder
 1 teaspoon baking soda
 ¼ teaspoon salt
 12 ounces (2 cups) semisweet chocolate chips
 1 cup plus 5 tablespoons (2 sticks plus 1½ tablespoons) unsalted butter, slightly softened
 1 cup packed light brown sugar
 1½ cups granulated sugar
 2 large eggs
 2½ teaspoons vanilla extract
 Process the oats to a powder in a food processor or blender (if using a blender, stop motor and stir oats several times to pulverize evenly). Combine oats, flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt in processor or a bowl and blend well. Place 1 cup of the chocolate chips in the top of a double boiler and warm over gently dimming water, stirring occasionally, until melted and smooth; set aside.

In a large mixing bowl, beat butter until light and fluffy. Add brown and granulated sugars and beat until fluffy and smooth. Beat in eggs and vanilla. Beat in the melted chocolate and about half of the dry ingredients and remaining dry ingredients and stir until thoroughly incorporated. Cover bowl and refrigerate for 20 to 30 minutes or until the dough is firm enough to be shaped into balls.

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Grease several baking sheets. Shape dough into 1½-inch balls and space them about 2½-inches apart on baking sheets. Gently pat down the tops of the balls just slightly (Don't actually flatten the balls or the cookies will spread too much and lose their moist, chewy texture).

Place in the upper third of the oven and bake for 9 to 11 minutes or until the cookies are just beginning to become firm in the center. For very moist cookies be careful not to over-bake. Remove from the oven and let stand on baking sheets for 3 to 4 minutes. Transfer cookies to wire racks and let stand until cool.

Store in an airtight container for up to a week. Freeze for longer storage.

HONEY-POPPY SEED ROLLED COOKIES

Makes 50 to 65 cookies, depending on size of cutters used.
 4 and 1/3 cups all-purpose unbleached white flour
 1 teaspoon baking soda
 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
 2 1/2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
 1 1/2 cups (3 sticks) unsalted butter, slightly softened
 1 1/4 cups granulated sugar
 1 1/2 cup clover honey, or other mild honey
 2 large eggs
 Finely grated zest (rind) of 2 large lemons
 Decoration:
 1 egg
 2 to 3 tablespoons poppy seeds
 Thoroughly stir together flour, baking soda, baking powder, cinnamon and cloves.

2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
 1/4 cup milk
 1 teaspoon Dijon-style mustard
 1/4 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
 4 hot baked potatoes, split
 Crumbled, cooked bacon
 Chopped green onion
 In 2-quart microwave-safe casserole, stir soup until smooth; stir in cheeses, milk, mustard and hot pepper sauce.
 Microwave, uncovered, on high 6 minutes or until cheese is melted, stirring twice during cooking.
 Spoon over potatoes. Top with bacon and green onion. Makes 1 1/2 cups or 4 servings.

CHILI BARBECUE TOPPER

1 can (11 1/4-ounce) condensed chili beef soup
 1/2 cup tomato sauce
 1/3 cup water
 1 tablespoon vinegar
 Generous dash hot pepper sauce
 4 hot baked potatoes, split
 Shredded Cheddar cheese
 Sour cream
 In 2-quart microwave-safe casserole, stir soup, tomato sauce, water, vinegar and hot pepper sauce. Cover with lid; microwave on high 4 minutes or until hot.

THREE CHEESE TOPPER

1 can (11-ounce) condensed Cheddar cheese soup/sauce
 1/2 cup shredded Swiss cheese

Placo butter in a mixing bowl and beat until light and smooth. Beat in sugar and honey until well blended. Add eggs and lemon zest and beat until blended. Beat in about half the dry ingredients. Stir in remaining dry ingredients using a large wooden spoon.

Divide dough into thirds and place each portion between large sheets of waxed paper. Using a rolling pin, roll each third out to 1/4 inch thick, checking underside and smoothing out any wrinkles in paper as you roll. Stack the rolled dough sheets on a tray or baking sheet and place in the refrigerator for 20 to 25 minutes, or until chilled and slightly firm (to speed up chilling process, place the dough in freezer for 10 to 15 minutes, being careful not to let it get too cold and hard).

Preheat the oven to 375 degrees. Grease several baking sheets and set aside.

Working with one chilled dough sheet at a time and leaving the others in the refrigerator, carefully peel away bottom layer of waxed paper, then replace paper loosely. Turn the dough over and peel off and discard top layer of waxed paper. Using assorted 2- to 3-inch cutters, cut out cookies. Carefully lift cookies from waxed paper with a spatula and space about 2 inches apart on baking sheets. Gather and reroll dough scraps between waxed paper sheets. Chill and then continue cutting out cookies until all dough is used. Repeat process with second and third dough sheets.

In a small bowl, beat egg with 1 tablespoon water. Brush the tops of a few cookies with egg-water mixture using a pastry brush or paper towel, then sprinkle each generously with poppy seeds. Repeat until all the cookies are decorated. Place in the center of the oven and bake for 9 to 11 minutes or until cookies are a rich tan color and just slightly darker around edges. Remove from the oven and let stand for about 2 minutes. Transfer cookies to wire racks and let stand until completely cooled. Store in an airtight container for up to a week. Freeze for longer storage.

This recipe for honey lekuchen is a traditional one from Germany.

HONEY LEBKUCHEN

Makes 30 to 40 2½ to 4-inch hearts or about 24 4-inch St. Nicholas cookies.
 4 and 1/3 cups all-purpose or unbleached white flour

1/2 cup chopped green pepper
 1/3 cup sliced mushrooms
 1 ounce sliced pepperoni (2 table-spoons)
 1 can (11-ounce) condensed zesty tomato soup/sauce
 1/4 cup water
 1 tablespoon vinegar
 1 teaspoon grated Parmesan cheese
 3 hot baked potatoes, split
 Shredded mozzarella cheese
 In 1 1/2-quart microwave-safe casserole, combine oil, green pepper, mushrooms and pepperoni. Cover with lid; microwave on high 3 minutes or until pepper and mushrooms are tender.
 Stir in soup, water, vinegar and Parmesan cheese. Cover; microwave on high 5 minutes or until hot, stirring once during cooking.
 Spoon over potatoes. Top with mozzarella cheese and additional sliced pepperoni if desired. Makes 1 1/2 cups or 3 servings.

PIZZA TOPPER

1/3 cup chopped green pepper
 1/3 cup sliced mushrooms
 1 ounce sliced pepperoni (2 table-spoons)
 1 can (11-ounce) condensed zesty tomato soup/sauce
 1/4 cup water
 1 tablespoon vinegar
 1 teaspoon grated Parmesan cheese
 3 hot baked potatoes, split
 Shredded mozzarella cheese
 In 1 1/2-quart microwave-safe casserole, combine oil, green pepper, mushrooms and pepperoni. Cover with lid; microwave on high 3 minutes or until pepper and mushrooms are tender.
 Stir in soup, water, vinegar and Parmesan cheese. Cover; microwave on high 5 minutes or until hot, stirring once during cooking.
 Spoon over potatoes. Top with mozzarella cheese and additional sliced pepperoni if desired. Makes 1 1/2 cups or 3 servings.

 1 1/2 cups powdered sugar
 1 tablespoon lemon juice, preferably fresh
 Silver dragées, cinnamon red hot candies, and assorted nonpareils (optional)
 1 to 2 drops red food coloring (optional)
 Thoroughly stir together flour, cocoa powder, cinnamon, cloves, mace, ginger, cardamom, baking powder and baking soda, and set aside.

Combine butter, honey and sugar in a mixing bowl and beat until very light and smooth. Beat in egg and lemon zest until well mixed. Gradually beat in dry ingredients, stirring in the last bit by hand if the mixer motor begins to labor. Divide dough into thirds. Place each third between long sheets of waxed paper and roll each out to 1/4-inch thick. Check the underside frequently and smooth out any creases that form. Slide dough onto a large tray or baking sheet and carefully pat off and discard top sheet of waxed paper. Cut out dough using cutters in the shape of hearts, St. Nicholas or other forms. Transfer cookies to baking sheets, spacing about 1/2-inch apart. (If some of the shapes are much larger than others, group like-sized shapes together on separate baking sheets.) Gather dough scraps and reroll dough between waxed paper. Return it to the refrigerator to chill until cold and firm before continuing to cut out cookies.

Pineapple gives chicken Caribbean flavor

Pineapple makes chicken special

Here's a sauteed chicken with fresh pineapple and savory seasonings that's quick and easy to make.

PINEAPPLE CHICKEN CARIBBEAN

1 large fresh pineapple
 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
 2 half chicken breasts
 2 teaspoons minced gingerroot
 1/4 cup pineapple juice
 1 tablespoon lime juice
 1 tablespoon honey
 1/2 teaspoon tarragon, crumbled
 1 teaspoon cornstarch
 1/2 twist crown from pineapple.
 Cut pineapple lengthwise in half.

Remove fruit from shells with a curved knife. Refrigerate half for later use. Cut pineapple lengthwise in six spears. Sauté spears in oil. Remove from skillet. Brown chicken in pan juices on both sides. Add ginger, sauté chicken until ginger is golden. Combine remaining ingredients. Pour into skillet with chicken. Cover, simmer 20-25 minutes until chicken is cooked through. Arrange chicken on plate with pineapple. Spoon sauce over all. Serves 2.

To select the perfect pineapple, look for one that is plump and firm with a bright green crown.

saucers reached $271 million in 1987, more than double the figure of 1980.

About 30 percent of all Mexican food eaten in the United States is consumed in California, he says, followed by Texas, Arizona and Washington state.

Most popular is picante sauce, which accounts for 40 percent of the market, according to the FWSV, a New York market research firm. Picante is a thin sauce with pieces of jalapenos, tomatoes and onions.

For the same who like it hot, there are now more than 300 brands of Mexican hot sauce available in the United States.

If you're from Los Angeles, that sauce probably is salsa. For Texans, it's most likely picante sauce. Easterners often choose taco sauce.

These saucy tidbits come from Rod Sands, vice president of sales and marketing for Pace Foods, who says that sale of Mexican France — where this dish originated — each cook has his own special secret ingredients and variations so you can't go too wrong.

This also needs to be done in stages so you can do some each night and then put it together the day you serve it. It makes eight very hearty servings.

Some variations I did were to use some of our leftover Christmas goose plus its liver. I also used turkey broth and ham from the freezer.

CASSOLET VAL D'ISOL

(Sun Valley Cassoulet)
 2 pounds Cassoulets U.S.A. Flat-shoulder beans
 5 large onions, unpeeled
 6 cloves garlic, minced
 3 quarts chicken broth
 1 1/2 pounds Duck or Polish or Italian sausage
 1/2 cup butter (1 cube)
 1/2 pound slab bacon
 5 tablespoons Herbs de Provence
 1 1/2 pound Canadian Bacon or fat-free ham chunks
 2 pounds chicken drumsticks
 1 cup finely chopped bread crumbs

To prepare beans: Rinse the beans well to clean. Soak in enough water to cover overnight.

Cut slab bacon into pieces 1 1/2 by 1 1/2 inches. Peel and coarsely chop one of onions and cook with bacon in large Dutch oven (or similar pot) until onions are golden about half an hour. Add half of the garlic and all of the herbs and cook while stirring for a minute or so.

Simmer Canadian bacon piece in a pan of water for 20 minutes to remove salt. Drain and cut into 1-inch cubes. Add beans, Canadian bacon, cubed onion, garlic and herb mixture in the Dutch oven. Add enough broth to cover (if there is not enough broth, add water) and bring to boil.

Lower heat and cover. Keep at a simmer for 1 1/2 hours until beans are tender, but not mushy and ham cubes are tender. Stir occasionally.

Put the remaining four unpeeled onions into a baking pan and bake in a 350 degree oven until they feel soft when pressed. This should take about 1 1/2 hours. Let them cool and then peel and cut in quarters lengthwise, St. aside.

Place the drumsticks in another pan and bake in a 350 degree oven until chicken is no longer pink when cut to bone to test. Set aside.

The above steps could be done at the same time.

Saute sausages on medium-high in a skillet until browned on all sides. Cut into 1/2-inch diagonal slices.

Now melt the butter in another skillet over a medium-high heat and add remaining garlic and the bread crumbs. Stir constantly until crumbs are light brown (3 to 5 minutes). Set aside.

Now to assemble: place the beans, ham, etc in a large casserole. Arrange the drumsticks, sausage and onion quarters on top.

Sprinkle crumb mixture over top. Bake in 350 degree oven for 1 hour until hot in center. If it seems to get too dry then add more broth or water.

The traditional recipe calls for heating and stirring the crumbs down in after a crust is formed on top, and doing that more than once, but we liked it this way just fine.

Have a great start to this brand new year. Enjoy!

Introducing Idaho Power's new Twin Falls phone numbers.

The phone company just installed a new, improved phone system at Idaho Power's Twin Falls office. It will provide not only better service for us but for our customers as well. It also means we'll have new phone numbers, which we thought we'd better share with you, because the ones in your present phone book are now wrong.

These new numbers are for our Twin Falls office only. Phone numbers for offices in other towns are still the same.

Kitchen appliances get high-tech look

Los Angeles Times

In this computer age, even old-fashioned kitchen appliances are being given a high-tech design. The Black & Decker Automatic Shut-Off Stand Mixer ($119.98) maintains a traditional styling in its glass bowl and beater but has a sleek, streamlined look in its white, low-profile housing. The machine's most exciting features are computerized operation and its digital display.

Simply touch the electronic control pads and you will get the speed you want for as long as you want it. Press the pause button and the beaters stop beating instantly. The electric mixer even has an overload indicator that lights up and beeps for 16 seconds to alert you that the beater is too thick for the beaters to operate properly at the speed setting selected. Furthermore, the overload indicator is activated when the beaters encounter an obstruction that needs to be removed from the mixing bowl.

The mixer has 12 speed settings, ranging from a very slow "folding" mode to high speed for beating egg whites. A mixing guide is printed on the machine for convenient selection of the correct speed needed. The guide lists tasks such as folding, stirring, combining, creaming, mixing, beating cake mixes, blending, whipping potatoes, whipping cream, whipping dessert toppings and frosting and finally, beating egg whites.

The digital timer can be set from 1 to 19 minutes; when it reaches zero, the mixer automatically stops and emits a beeping sound. Lightweight and low-profile, the white Black & Decker electric mixer occupies little counter space. It is equipped with two dishwasher-safe glass bowls that come in 11 and 4-quart sizes. The bowl fit in a dual-position turntable that can be adjusted for either bowl. In addition to the standard beaters, the unit also comes with a pair of dough hooks for kneading bread dough and two wire whisks for high-volume whipping. The machine has a 200-watt motor that may not compare with other higher-wattage machines but is excellent for everyday mixing tasks. It will beat meringue and cream to desired consistency in about the same time as other, more expensive models. The machine has a full two-year warranty.

There is nothing like good lighting in the kitchen when you are preparing food. Another innovation from Black & Decker is the Super Maker Plus Kitchen Accessory Light ($23.99) which focuses light where it is needed.

Fiddleheads can be salad, garnish, side dish

By JOAN DRAKE
Los Angeles Times

Q: What is a fiddlehead? Where can I find it in the grocery store?

A: "A fiddlehead is not a species of fern but a growth stage of any fern," according to Elizabeth Schneider, author of "Uncommon Fruits & Vegetables - A Commonsense Guide" (Harper & Row; 1986; $25). When the tightly coiled new frond or crozier pokes up through the soil but has not yet begun to uncurl, it is called a fiddlehead.

"Picked small, then cooked soon thereafter, fiddlehead ferns have a flavor that embraces asparagus, artichokes and green beans (plus a hint of mushroom); the chewy texture is all their own."

Schneider also advises: "If you are plucking your own ferns from the forest floor, you should know that there is a great deal of disagreement about which species are edible and which are not. Although many types of fiddleheads have long been gathered for springtime delectation, there is considerable evidence that some (particularly the bracken fern, Pteridium aquilinum, consumed here and in Japan) may be extremely carcinogenic. While all the mammals I consulted found ferns in the small fiddlehead stage to be comfortably edible, Dr. John Mickel, fern curator at the Bronx Botanical Garden in New York, was adamant that the ostrich fern, the fiddlehead commonly marketed, is the only one that is definitely non-carcinogenic."

Fiddleheads are available from April through early July, usually in specialty markets. Schneider recommends selecting jade-green ferns that are bouncy, firm and bright, not flabby or yellowed. Choose spring-coiled, small sprouts, no more than 4 inches in diameter with no more than a few inches of tail (fanny), or the fern will be fibrous and tough.

The ferns spoil rapidly, quickly losing their fresh flavor and elastic tone. Store only a short time or, to freeze, clean and trim the ferns, drop into boiling water, return to a boil and cook 1 minute. Drain, drop in ice water, then drain again. Pack airtight and freeze.

"While in theory you might use fiddlehead ferns in any way that you would green beans or Brussels sprouts, I find their special qualities underscored only in special preparations," Schneider says. "Think of them as you would artichoke hearts or asparagus. Serve the trimmed, boiled coils with melted butter and lemon, or a light cream, cheese, Hollandaise, or Malaise sauce, or douse with a gentle vinaigrette. Use them as a first course, to garnish meats, as a side dish, or as a salad."

To prepare fiddleheads, trim the base of each fern to leave only a tiny tail beyond the circumference of each circular shape. Some fiddleheads will need to have the fuzzy or papery brown covering or scales removed by being rubbed between your palms. All should be rinsed.

Add-a-fruit muffins are packed with nutrition Fruit muffins make great lunchbox filler

A great lunchbox snack these delicious Add-A-Fruit Muffins, made with tangy raisins, whole wheat flour and a fruit of your choice, are easy to make and they're packed with nutrition. Here's the recipe:

- ADD-A-FRUIT MUFFINS
- 1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
  - 1/2 cup whole-wheat flour
  - 1 tablespoon baking soda
  - 1/2 teaspoon salt
  - 2/3 cup milk
  - 2 eggs
  - 1/4 cup honey
  - 3/4 cup oil
  - 1 cup raisins

1 medium banana, mashed, OR 1 medium apple, grated, OR 1 medium pear, grated.

In bowl combine flours, baking soda and salt; mix to blend. In another bowl, combine milk, eggs, honey, and oil; mix to blend. Add dry ingredients to milk mixture; stir just until ingredients are moistened. Add raisins and fruit of your choice; stir just to blend. Spoon batter into 2 1/2-inch greased or paper-lined muffin-tin cups, filling about 3/4 full. Bake in 400-degree oven 18-20 minutes or until golden brown and springy to the touch.

Makes 12 muffins.

Companies to remove tropical oils from food

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — Pepperidge Farm Inc. prompted by what it called "strong consumer concern," has announced plans to remove a coconut oil from its crackers and cookies by next summer.

Officers of the Norwalk-based company said the oil will be removed from such products as the popular "Original Goldfish." Coconut oil is a saturated fat that raises the cholesterol level.

"People who have high levels of cholesterol run a higher risk of a clogging of the arteries that can lead to heart attacks."

"We must find oils that will promote tropical oils in terms of performance in the baking process, flavor, texture, mouth-feel and shelf-life stability," Richard A. Shea, president of Pepperidge Farm, said in a prepared statement issued Wednesday.

Phil Sokolof, founder of National Heart Savers, a Nebraska organization that has campaigned against products which use tropical oils, such as palm and coconut, said he was pleased by Pepperidge Farm's decision to remove coconut oil from more than 50 brands of cookies and crackers.

Ultimately Pepperidge Farms will have saved thousands of lives," Sokolof said. "They've got a tough job of reformulating their cookies and crackers."

Cookies

dough is used. Then repeat with second and third dough sheets until all dough is used.

Place in the center of the oven and bake cookies until firm and just barely browned at edges, 10 to 13 minutes, depending on the size of the cookies. Remove from the oven and immediately transfer cookies to wire racks using a spatula. Let stand until cooled completely.

To prepare icing, combine powdered sugar, lemon juice and 1 1/2 teaspoons water in a small bowl and stir until smooth. Stir in 1/2 to 1 teaspoon more water; a few drops at a time, until icing holds its shape but is soft enough to be piped through a pastry bag fitted with a fine-line or fine star decorator tip.

Pipe an attractive edging around the heart shapes, making dots, rick-rack, wavy lines, braiding, or scallops. If desired, pipe additional dots of icing onto each heart to use as "glue" and top with silver dragées or cinnamon red hots. If desired, outline the boots, heels, neck, etc. of St. Nicholas with icing, and add nonpareils or red hots for buttons, eyes, nose and mouth. (If desired, reserve part of the icing and tint with red food coloring. Pipe an additional edging around cookies for more elaborate decoration.) Let the cookies stand until icing is completely set, about 1 hour.

The cookies are best if packed in airtight containers and allowed to mellow overnight before serving; they can be stored for up to 2 weeks. Freeze for longer storage.

SOFT AND CHEWY RAISIN SPICE COOKIES

- Makes 30 to 35 2 1/2- to 3-inch cookies.
- 1 1/2 cups dark seedless raisins
  - 2 1/4 cups rolled oats
  - 2 cups all-purpose or unbleached white flour
  - 1 teaspoon baking powder

- 1/4 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon ground allspice
- 1 1/4 cups (2 1/2 sticks) unsalted butter, slightly softened
- 3/4 cup packed light brown sugar
- 2/3 cup granulated sugar
- 2 large eggs
- 2 1/2 teaspoons vanilla extract
- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts (optional)

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Grease several baking sheets and set aside.

Place raisins in a colander (or steamer) over a saucetpan of boiling water and steam uncovered, for 6 to 7 minutes or until nicely plumped. (Steaming will take a few minutes longer if the raisins are dry.)

Remove from heat and let raisins stand to drain. Place oats in a food processor or blender and process until finely ground. If using a blender, stop motor and stir oats several times to redistribute.

Thoroughly stir together flour, baking powder, baking soda, salt, cinnamon and allspice and set aside. Place butter in a large mixing bowl and beat until light and creamy. Add brown and granulated sugars and beat until fluffy and smooth. Beat in eggs and vanilla. Beat in flour-spice mixture. Stir in oats and raisins. Add walnuts, if using. Roll pieces of dough between well-greased hands into generous 1 1/2-inch balls (The dough will be soft but is easy to manage). Space balls about 2 1/2 inches apart on baking sheets.

Place cookies in the upper third of the oven and bake for 10 to 12 minutes, or until just tinged with brown. Reverse baking sheets from front to back halfway through baking to ensure even browning. Remove from oven and let stand for 2 to 3 minutes. Using a spatula, transfer cookies to wire racks and let cool.

Store in an airtight container for up to a week. Freeze for longer storage.

Home/garden

It's time to plan for spring garden

As soon as the Christmas holiday period is over and the new year has arrived, most of us begin to look ahead to spring. The spring fashions begin arriving in the stores in January. It's a good idea to get our minds to look ahead.

Now is also a good time to plan for spring in the garden. The seed and nursery catalogs accommodate us by arriving in the mail shortly after Christmas—some (sometimes before). More and more, these catalogs give valuable information for planning our landscapes and gardens.

There are also many good books in the bookstores and libraries for landscape and garden planning. When the wind is blowing and the snow is piled deep, they can make a good substitute for outside garden activities.

Now is a good time to talk with your spouse and children about the kinds of activities they enjoy in the yard. Could you make some changes which would make your landscape and garden more enjoyable?

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

Would a deck or patio make picnicking in your back yard more enjoyable? Would a sunroom or lean-to greenhouse help you bring some of the outdoors inside during the colder months? If you have a large front yard or side yard, could you screen some of it off for private family activities? Would the color combinations of your flower plantings look more harmonious if planned in advance? Maybe you would just like to create a more attractive view out of the window.

There are how-to books for every conceivable kind of garden project. Both Orto and Sunset have series of more than a dozen garden books each. There are books on building decks, patios and fences, books on home greenhouses, books on how to use flowers effectively in the garden. One of the best books for our area is "The Complete Guide to Rocky Mountain Gardening" by Herb Gaudin. It is published by Taylor Publishing Company in Dallas, Texas.

Even if you don't have the time or energy for large landscape projects, books will give you ideas which you can put along to a landscape architect, landscape contractor or nurseryman.

If you would like some help from a professional, winter is the best time to consult with him. If you wait until spring arrives, he will already have work scheduled for those who planned ahead.

Then you may have to wait until mid or late summer to get those creative ideas constructed.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Richs College. His column appears every Wednesday in Food/home.

Gilt! It's everywhere now

By the Baltimore Sun

Suddenly it's everywhere. On the ceilings and columns of Washington's refurbished Union Station. As props for the models in the clothing.

Gilt is back. It's no longer considered a gaudy flashback to the times of overdone, frivolous taste; designers and architects are combining the new with the best of the ostentatious past.

Nancy High, director of communications for the Furniture Information Council, says that America's new gilt complex is part of the overall return to opulence. It's another way of putting on the glitz.

Gilt is pervasive in mail-order catalogs and some of the higher-end home furnishings, she says. There is a return to formality, and you can't get much more formal than a rococo gilt frame.

This resurgence of gilt has shown up not only as an accent on wood furniture and accessories but on coordinated fabrics with metallic streaks or outlines, according to High. In fact, the art form has become popular enough to shake the roots of the once secretive society of craftsmen. In April, the Society of Gilders was formed at the Newark (N.J.) Museum of Art. It now has more than 250 members.

R. Wayne Reynolds, a Baltimore gilder and one of the charter members of the guild, says that the group was formed so a gilder in Maryland could share processes and techniques with a counterpart in California. That kind of network never existed in what Reynolds described as a "protected business" in which secrets were passed from father to son.

The group also wants to increase public awareness of classic gilding.

"Gold leaf does not come out of a bottle or a can or the local art and crafts store," he says. "People think applying gold leaf is dipping a brush into a bottle of gold paint. We are trying to rebuild the information so that people know that gold leaf is a sheet of gold applied with a specially prepared surface and a great deal of skill."

When you see the term "gilt" it may not always be gold leaf. The term has lost its original meaning and has been used to refer to a gilded surface made from Dutch metal.

Letters of thanks

Political activists honored

With Samuel Adams award

Well, here we are at the close of 1988. I don't know about the rest of you, but it seems the year went by fast, too fast. But looking back over the year, I see a lot of accomplishments that have been achieved. Most of the goals were achieved by political activists.

So in recognition of all the achievements that have been accomplished this year, I wish to present my Samuel Adams award to a few special moments who donated prizes in Kimberly's Christmas Lighting Contest. Businesses donating were:

Twin Falls Bank and Trust, one savings bond; Dora Kimberly Cafe, two shrimp dinners; Arnold's, two and a half pizzas; LeRoy's Barber and Styling, gift certificate; New Image, certificate; East County Chronicle, one year subscription; Persons IGA, gift certificate; Magic Mountain Ski Resort, one day ski pass; Debbie's, poinsettia plant; Jessie's Ceramic Shoppe, gift certificate; Judges for the contest were Gary and Bev Stone, Anna Lou Callen and Chet Nenzel.

were able to receive help. The businesses bore several hundred dollars worth of food and gifts from those who care to those who need. These tokens of our community's concern did not eliminate need, but they did serve to make the holidays brighter for many.

We feel that the community's response appropriately expresses our collective gratitude for the ultimate gift, which this season commemorates, and as such reflects the very heart of the Christmas event.

To those who contributed we say: Having witnessed your concern for others in our community, we are again persuaded that a light shines in our world. We are grateful for your generosity this Christmas season and confident that your concern will be more than seasonal.

New product can save wear on your VCR

By the Los Angeles Times

For the VCRs that showed up on Christmas, there is a speedy accessory. The HQ High Speed ReWinder from SIMA Products Corp. in Skokie, Ill., promises to save time as well as wear and tear on your videocassette recorder, company officials say.

The device, designed for VHS format tapes, can rewind a videotape about three times as fast as a VCR and twice as fast as standard rewinders, said Kathleen Devine, vice president of SIMA. Her firm's machine takes only 21 minutes to completely rewind a VHS-120 tape.

Besides saving time, another advantage of using a ReWinder is preserving the life of your VCR. Devine said. Most VCR repairs are to fix damaged rewind systems because the rewind motor requires the VCR motor to work harder while rewinding than during any other function.

Devine notes that another advantage to using the device is that it frees the VCR for viewing other tapes. The ReWinder also features a built-in tape cleaner, activated by simply pressing a button.

The suggested retail price for ReWinder is $79.95.

Friendly suggestion might tone down woman's appearance

DEAR ABBY: Every year for the last several years I have asked my friend Zaida to join my family and a few close friends for Thanksgiving dinner. Zaida is a kind, considerate, generous woman who is treated rather poorly by the woman and is not by her husband. She doesn't understand the problem, but I do. As my husband puts it, "She dresses like a straggler." Her clothes are too tight and her neckties are too low. I have seen her in more modest attire — but not often.

disrespectful? The Bible states: "Make a joyful sound to the Lord, break forth into joyous song and sing praises... Let the floods clap their hands; let the hills sing for joy together before the Lord." (Psalm 150:1-3)

As for me, I applaud people who are willing to commit themselves to someone they love in this day and age of cohabitation. CLAP-HAPPY IN RICHMOND

you. Applause indicates appreciation, and what better place to make a joyful sound than in a house of worship?

DEAR ABBY: The Holy Family School in Redmond, Wash., presented a drug-alcohol educational program for which each student was asked to write an evaluation of the program. I am enclosing one written by a 16-year-old student. His thinking is much better than his spelling. I wish more parents thought the way this boy thinks. I hope you can find space for it in your column, Abby.

DEAR FLORENCE: Find space? DEAR ABBY: My evaluation of the Drug-Alcohol Education program? I don't think that I learned anything new. The way I think the program should work is that you should learn from your parents. After all, there the ones you home to every night. There the ones that put the roof over your head and besides if somebody has a drug problem, it is the family who is in charge of it.

"The whole school isn't your family physically, is it? No! If you have a problem, you would usually go to your parents, right? Yes! "And I am pretty mad that you have to learn it from your teacher rather than from your parents." — NATHAN

Interest rates push prices down

NEW YORK (AP) — Wall Street opened for business Tuesday with a market down on Tuesday as a jump in interest rates and a weaker dollar combined to send stock prices lower. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks fell 1.4 percent, a drop of just over 1 percent.

Broader measures of the market posted smaller declines.

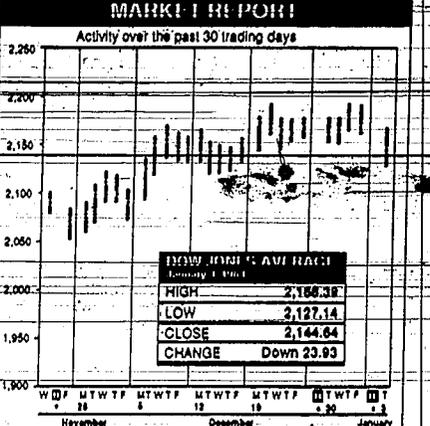

The National Association of Purchasing Management reported that the economy grew in November at its briskest rate in five months. The report raised fears that inflation would heat up, and bond prices fell, triggering a sympathetic reaction in the stock market.

Declining issues outnumbered advancing ones by about 3-to-2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 619 up, 592 down and 124 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board remained modest at 128.50 million shares, up from 127.21 million on Friday. The market was closed on Monday for the New Year's holiday.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks that have had price changes and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 156.42 million shares.

Among blue-chip issues, General

Electric declined 1 1/4 to 32 1/4. Du Pont sank 1 1/2 to 8 3/4. McDonald's lost 1 1/2 to 46 1/4. American Telephone & Telegraph fell 1/4 to 28 1/4, and International Business Machines was unchanged at 121 1/4.

British Petroleum to sell most mining operations

LONDON (AP) — British Petroleum Co. PLC agreed Tuesday to sell off most of its mineral operations in the United States, Mexico, Brazil, Norway, Zimbabwe, South Africa, Australia, Papua New Guinea and Indonesia, for a total of about $4.32 billion.

The biggest BP U.S. asset in the sale is Kennecott and its Bingham Canyon open-pit copper mine, one of the largest such operations in the world. Frank Fisher, BP's director of external affairs in Salt Lake City, confirmed Tuesday.

In addition to the copper operation, the proposed sale includes a gold mining operation in nearby Barneys Canyon.

The sale does not include most of BP's Canadian mineral assets.

Fisher said it was too soon to predict what effect the purchase, which likely will take until mid-1994, will have on the U.S. oil market.

BP shares held by the government of Kuwait.

RTZ Corp. PLC, a mining company with global interests, said it agreed to buy the mineral operation, which includes operations in the United States, Mexico, Brazil, Norway, Zimbabwe, South Africa, Australia, Papua New Guinea and Indonesia, for a total of about $4.32 billion.

The biggest BP U.S. asset in the sale is Kennecott and its Bingham Canyon open-pit copper mine, one of the largest such operations in the world. Frank Fisher, BP's director of external affairs in Salt Lake City, confirmed Tuesday.

In addition to the copper operation, the proposed sale includes a gold mining operation in nearby Barneys Canyon.

The sale does not include most of BP's Canadian mineral assets.

"We do feel that since the new mine is a mining company, they may pay more attention to the mining problems we have," he said. "However, what is bothering us is the continued sale of our natural resources."

Ed Mayne, director of the Utah AFL-CIO, said he was cautiously optimistic about the mining operation's future and would have to wait and see what effect the sale will have at the mine.

Jack Christensen, president of the Utah Mining Association, said, "We feel quite comfortable about the transaction, although we know very little about it." He said, "The Bingham, which operated uranium mines in southeastern Utah, was owned by RTZ, and they were good operators."

BP's stock buy-back proposal follows a British government order to the Kuwaitis last month to reduce their BP holdings from 21.68 percent to under 10 percent within three years.
