Bush opens 'Age of offered hand'

President George Bush takes oath of office from Chief Justice William Rehnquist as wife Barbara watches

Somber departure - A8

WASHINGTON — George Bush opened his presidency Friday with a tribute to the man he served for eight years and a declaration of an American mission: to make kinder the face of the nation and gentler the face of the world.

He delivered an inaugural address of dedication and inspiration, lacking any specific political agenda but calling on his countrymen to rise above materialism and to engage in a new activism, hands-on and involved, that gets the job done.

To the Democratic leaders of Congress, the new Republican president said, "I am putting out my hand to you."

To the world, he said, "We offer new engagement and a renewed vow: We will stay strong to protect the peace."

The speech drew glowing reviews from Democrats.

"Bush is extending the hand of friendship, and we intend to extend ours in return," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine. The Democratic leader said he would respond to the Bush address with a speech on the Senate floor on Wednesday.

"He repeated the themes he's been stating since the election: cooperation and conciliation," said House Majority Leader Thomas Foley, D-Wash. "It is all very well received, and Congress will respond with an equal effort and attitude."

Jesse Jackson joined the chorus of praise, saying the speech was "characterized by hope and by reaching out to the loyal opposition."

Bush took the oath of office as the nation's 41st president at three minutes after noon, his hand resting on two bibles — one a Bush family bible and the other used 200 years earlier when George Washington took the same oath.

The simple ceremony on the inaugural stand on the west front of the U.S. Capitol took place before an audience that included former rivals within his own party as well as the Democratic members of Congress with whom he must work.

Around the country and the world, millions watched the change of power on television.

Bush opened his inaugural address with a tribute to Ronald Reagan, "a man who had earned a lasting place in our hearts — and in our history."

"President Reagan, on behalf of our nation I thank you for the wonderful things you have done for America."

The assembled crowd burst into applause. Bush turned away from the microphone to face his predecessor and joined in the applause.

As he moved on to set the tone for the start of his administration, Bush described a nation "in a peaceful and prosperous time." He added, "But we can make it better."

"A new breeze is blowing," he said, "and a

Walking parade route delights crowds

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush and his wife, Barbara, took a page from President Carter's book Friday.

To the delight of thousands of spectators, they jumped out of their armor-plated limousine and walked part of the inaugural parade route.

A squeal went up from the crowd lining Constitution Avenue at the start of the parade as the First Couple emerged from their car only half a block after leaving the Capitol, prompting some parade-watchers to run after the motorcade.

The Bushes, walking behind the limousine in the middle of the street, waved robustly and the crowds returned the salute with gusto, shouting enthusiastically. Secret Service agents walked alongside the Bushes, but did not block the crowd's view.

The Bushes returned to the car after about two blocks along Constitution, but then they got out again as the parade moved up Pennsylvania Avenue.

They walked with long, fast strides, waving and smiling gleefully before they returned to the car at 13th Street and Pennsylvania, where thousands were gathered at a plaza known as Freedom Square. Police estimated the total parade crowd at 300,000.

The Bushes stepped out of the vehicle one last time when it arrived at the White House, and Mrs. Bush, followed by her husband, dashed into the crowd. They remained for only a few moments before returning to the street to walk the final half-block to the reviewing stand filled with many of the new president's friends and contributors.

In 1977, Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, walked nearly the entire 1 1/2-mile parade route.

Jody Powell, Carter's press secretary, said in a recent interview that Carter told him about his plans the week before the inauguration, but the news was "very tightly held, for security purposes."

"What he told me at the time was the deal — the Secret Service wasn't going to fight it as long as it was kept secret, but if word got out ahead of time, they'd be very opposed to it," Powell said.

Secret Service spokesman Rich Adams said earlier this week that the agents would be prepared to protect Bush if he decided to stroll rather than ride, but he admitted that the agents would not be too happy about it.

"If we had our way, he would not leave the White House," Adams said.

The agent had refused to disclose whether Bush might be planning such a jaunt.

Contacted Friday while the parade was in progress, Adams said, "Guess he's doing it."

He said he was not told whether the Bushes walk had been discussed with the Secret Service in advance and that he did not know if the detail protecting the Bushes had been told.

"We're prepared for that, anticipating him getting out of the vehicle, and as you can see, it became reality," he said.

New president visits balls, dances reluctantly

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Thousands of jubilant Republicans celebrated George Bush's brand-new presidency at 11 inaugural balls Friday night, and during a fast-paced tour of the merrymaking Bush took a few reluctant whirls around the dance floor.

He called himself "a lousy dancer" and told one crowd rocking to the music of Lionel Hampton: "I hope you don't judge my being a president by the way I dance."

A chill wind whipped evening gowns and fur stoles as 80,000 party faithful thronged from Union Station to the National Air and Space Museum to the Kennedy Center on the banks of the moonlit Potomac for a night of dancing and carousing.

Hours after he was sworn in as President Reagan's successor on the steps of the Capitol, Bush began his tour of the "invitation-only" balls with a visit to an American Legion affair for 4th Medal of Honor winners — including freshman Sen. Bob Kerry, D-Nebr. — and other military heroes.

"I'll do my level best to be a president who respects the military... and keeps the United States of America strong," said Bush, who was accompanied by former Rep. Edward Derwinski, R-Ill., his choice to be secretary of the new Department of Veterans Affairs.

Bush also let slip that he's not particularly keen on dancing. "This is the first formal event... and perhaps the most humane," he said, "a ball at which you do not have to dance."

But by the time he reached Union Station, the president finally took his wife, Barbara, onto the dance floor as the band struck up "I Could Have Danced All Night."

"You can say that you saw it first here," Bush said, "a lousy dancer trying to dance his first dance with the first lady of the United States of America."

A while later, at the cavernous Pension Building, the president quipped, "The Bush family is going to dance."

Adequate funds needed if Idaho sets up school services for handicapped children

The Associated Press

BOISE — If Idaho gets into a new program to provide educational services for handicapped 3-to-5-year-olds, it should be adequately funded so school districts don't have to bear the costs, speakers told a legislative hearing.

"I do feel it is imperative that we adequately fund it and not impose the costs on the backs of the school districts," said Sen. John Hansen, R-Idaho Falls.

He and Rep. Doug Jones, R-Filer, headed an interim study on a new federal directive that states furnish "free and appropriate" educational services to handicapped children ages 3-5. They reviewed the study before a meeting of the education committees of the Idaho House and Senate on Friday.

Other federal laws already require such services for school-aged handicapped people.

Next week, state Schools Superintendent Jerry Evans will ask the Legislature's budget committee for $2.5 million to start the program.

The governor's budget request called for $2 million, but education officials said that was an early estimate which now has been revised upward.

Federal estimates are that there are 2,000 children in Idaho who might use the services, but those involved said it's uncertain how many will take part the first year.

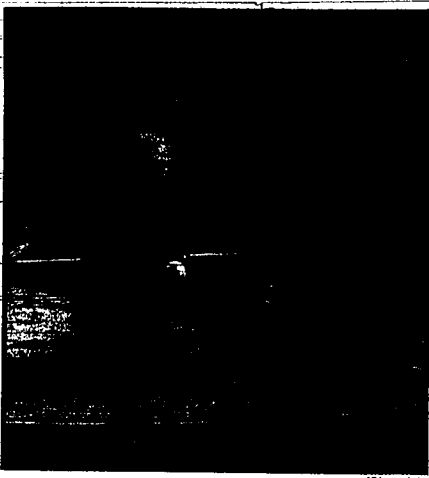

The interim study committee recommended a $3 million reserve fund, in case participation is higher than expected, but that was not included in the budget proposal from Gov. Cecil Andrus.

Deputy State Superintendent August Hoin said next year's Legislature could make a supplemental appropriation if necessary.

Jones said the federal law going into effect for fiscal year 1990 is optional, but since most states participate in the program, it probably will become mandatory soon. "There are some incentives for starting it," he said, such as the fact Idaho brands to

Probe of exchanges shows fraud potential

By DAVID DISHINAU
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — The FBI's undercover probe of the world's two largest futures exchanges exposes the fraud potential that many believe is inherent in the industry's rancorous, century-old trading method.

The investigation of the Chicago Board of Trade and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange reportedly targets individual traders who rig trades and skimmed profits.

Unlike Wall Street's insider-trading scandal, which apparently involved a relatively small number of professionals active in a limited segment of the stock market, the commodities allegations strike at the heart of the futures industry — the crowded trading "pits" where the business actually takes place.

Experts say the frenetic trading system used in the pits provides opportunity for fraud and raises problems in tracking whether traders are obeying the rules.

Future traders in the pits stand shoulder-to-shoulder, frequently for hours at a time, shouting and using hand signals to strike deals.

This system is known as "open outcry" trading and has remained essentially unchanged since the early days of grain trading on the 141-year-old Chicago Board of Trade, the world's oldest and largest futures exchange.

Trading is permitted only in the pits during specified trading hours and traders are forbidden by exchange rules from playing favorites. A trader seeking to sell a contract must accept the first offer that meets his asking price.

At least part of the FBI probe is believed to be focused on pairs of traders who arranged ahead of time complicated trading schemes that would allow both of them to share in profits skimed from customer accounts.

Such schemes often involve executing customer orders and trading for one's own account simultaneously, a controversial — but arguably legal — practice.

Analysis

CHICAGO — The FBI's undercover probe of the world's two largest futures exchanges exposes the fraud potential that may believe is inherent in the industry's ravenous, century-old trading method.

The investigation of the Chicago Board of Trade and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange reportedly targets individual traders who rigged trades and skimmed profits.

Unlike Wall Street's insider-trading scandal, which apparently involved a relatively small number of professionals active in a limited segment of the stock market, the commodities allegations strike at the heart of the futures industry — the crowded trading "pits" where the business actually takes place.

Experts say the frenzied trading system used in the pits provides opportunity for fraud and raises problems in tracking whether traders are obeying the rules.

 ing to give dancing a bad name." He took a few turns with Mrs. Bush and stopped abruptly. "Thee it," he said. "That's the only step I know."
 Vice President Dan Quayle apparently did the same way. He told reporters at another hotel ballroom that "I guess protocol allows you to witness my inability to dance." Quayle then took a few stiff turns on the dance floor with his wife, Marilyn.

 world reborn by freedom seems returned. ... A nation refreshed by freedom stands ready to push on; there is new ground to be broken, and new action to be taken."
 The 64-year-old president questioned whether the nation had grown too materialistic.
 "We are not the sum of our possessions," he said. "They are not the measure of our lives. ... What do we want the men and women who work with us to say when we are no longer there? That we were merely driven to succeed because anyone around us that we stopped to ask if a sick child had gotten better, and stayed a moment to trade a word of friendship."
 "America is never wholly herself unless she is engaged in high moral purpose," he said. "We as a people have such a purpose today. It is to make kinder the face of the nation and gentler the face of the world."
 He cited the homelessness, drugs, crime and unwed mothers as national problems.
 "The old solution, the old way, was to think that public money alone could solve these problems," said Bush. "But we have learned that is not so. And, in any case, our funds are low. We have a deficit to bring down. We have more will than wallet, but will is what we need."
 He recalled a term he used in the acceptance speech he delivered in August, in New Orleans when he became the GOP nominee to succeed Reagan — "a thousand points of light."
 "He said these were 'all the community organizations that are spread like stars throughout the nation, doing good.'"
 In his appeal for greater cooperation between the administration and Congress, Bush said, "Our great parties have too often been far apart and untrusting of each other." He blamed the Vietnam war which he said, "cleaves us still."

 "But, friends, that war began in earnest a quarter century ago; and surely the stature of limitations has been reached. This is a fact: The final lesson of Vietnam is that no great nation can long afford to be sundered by a memory."
 In offering his hand to the Democratic leaders of Congress, Bush cited the need to reach a budget compromise and said, "Let us negotiate soon — and hard. But in the end, let us produce."
 He told other nations that "the forest hand is a reluctant fist; but the fist, once made, is strong and can be used with great effect."
 "The new president concluded his inaugural address by saying, 'I do not mistrust the future; I do not fear what is ahead. For our problems are large, but our heart is larger. Our challenges are great, but our will is greater. And if our flaws are serious, God's love is truly boundless.'"
 After bidding goodbye to the Reagans, Bush, in his first act as president, signed a proclamation making Sunday a National Day of Prayer and Thanksgiving and the nominations for his Cabinet and other high-level jobs.
 He distributed a handful of the pens he used to sign the congressional leaders who joined him and saved the remainder for the nominees.
 The ceremony, attended by first lady Barbara Bush, took place in the ornate President's Room where Lincoln signed the Emancipation Proclamation and former President Lyndon Johnson signed the 1964 Civil Rights Act.
 "As he was leaving, Bush was asked about parting from Reagan. 'I was trying to keep the tears from running down my cheeks. After eight years of friendship, it was pretty tough,' Bush said."

Traders

 "The investigation also is believed to have uncovered instances in which traders simply reported to their brokerage firms trades that were different from the trades they actually made."
 These instances also require collusion among traders because exchange rules require both the buyer and the seller to report their trades.
 Pre-arranged trading and commodity fraud are nothing new; traders already admit that the potential is always there for those so inclined, partly because of the difficulty in monitoring traders both inside and outside of the pits.
 It is not unusual for unscrupulous traders to be caught. On Thursday, even as news of the FBI probe was breaking, the Chicago Merc announced the unrelated expulsion of two of its members for pre-arranged trades.
 "The most alarming aspects of the FBI investigation are its breadth — one news service reported that 150 people could be implicated — and its depth. Undercover agents wearing concealed microphones repeatedly recorded conversations with other traders on and off the exchange floors over a period of two years."

 lose about $1 million in federal aid if it does not.
 In any event, Jones said the program is a good one and should be started, both for financial and philosophical reasons.
 "It is cost-effective," he said. Studies indicate that for every $1 spent early helping handicapped children, $4 to $10 can be saved later through lower social service costs.
 "It's an investment now for long-range savings," Jones said.
 "It is the right thing to do. These people are part of our society and we should be providing these services to them," he said.
 Jones and Hanson said the study committee envisions much of the services to be provided through contract. Fami members take it would not be a good idea to take 7-year-olds from homes to school for educational programs.
 "If you can reach children in their formative years, you can do a great deal more," said Hanson.
 One estimate was that no more than 800 handicapped children would be served at school facilities.
 Hanson said social and educational agencies in the state seem to have the same attitude toward the program. "It can be done, it should be done and it will be done," he said.

 SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist guerrillas attacked the downtown Treasury Police headquarters with mortar fire from the backs of two pickup trucks Friday, killing two people and wounding up to 10, authorities said.
 The trucks exploded when the mortars were fired, and the explosions caused more casualties than the shrapnel-laden projectiles, they reported.
 The Treasury Police press office identified one victim as a guerrilla who fired a mortar that blew up before he could get away.
 Col. Heriberto Hernandez, commander of the Treasury Police, said the vehicles exploded within minutes of each other at about 6:25 a.m., about 160 feet from the wall surrounding the base.

Yursa foresees new filing rules

BOISE (AP) — The filing period for an election should be "put up or shut up time" for candidates, says an election official.

Deputy Secretary of State Ben Yursa told the House State Affairs Committee Friday his office may propose new laws on when political candidates can file for election — in part to keep Idaho out of trouble with the federal government.

At present, Idaho has a filing period. When it closes, political parties can nominate candidates to fill any vacancy. The party has several days to notify the candidate, and the candidate has a week to qualify.

That got Idaho in trouble in the last primary election, because the period allowed for filing didn't close soon enough for county clerks to get absentee ballots printed, mailed out and back by the election. Absentee ballots have to be received by election day to be counted.

The federal government sued the state, and Secretary of State Pete Cernan agreed to accept any absentee ballot received by county clerks after the normal deadline.

"I would like to inform you that the federal government has requested that we change our laws," said State Affairs Chairman Pam Bengson, R-Boise.

Yursa presented no legislation Friday, but said he's working on several options:

One would require candidates to file as early as March 5-19. If vacancies were filled by April 6, that would leave 46 days to print absentee ballots and mail them out before an election on May 22. Yursa said the federal government recommends a minimum of 45 days.

A second option would be to ban the filing of vacancies. That would allow the filing period to be later, March 19-30, Yursa said.

Another option would be to move the date of Idaho's primary, now late in May, to early June. Then the filing period could be March 19-30 and parties would have until April 16 to fill vacancies.

The third option would be to move the primary election to June with no vacancy filing. That would allow candidates to file for election in April.

McClure wants explanation of flood work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jim McClure is demanding an explanation why the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers failed to move forward with flood control work near the city of Salmon.

Flooding has been a periodic problem for Salmon residents when frazil ice builds up on the Salmon River near the mouth of Dump Creek, about 20 miles downstream.

Widening the Salmon River at that point is prohibited because of its Wild and Scenic designation. Corps researchers determined that installing ice screens upstream from Dump Creek could keep the water from backing up. The agency planned to test ice screens for several winters, but warm weather has prevented ice from forming.

Jury could indict boy's parents soon

BOISE (AP) — The parents of a Utah boy found abandoned east of Boise could be indicted by grand jury next week, Ada County, Idaho prosecutors say.

Ada County often uses a grand jury in cases involving children, and especially in cases of child abuse, to protect young witnesses or victims, Deputy Prosecutor Jay Rosenthal said Thursday.

Edward Donald Tuinman, 29, and Deborah Tuinman, 28, were arraigned Wednesday on charges of felony abandonment of a child.

Their son, 7-year-old Eddy Tuinman, was found by truck drivers at the Black's Creek exit of Interstate 84 on Jan. 4. He was wearing only a T-shirt and had been beaten and burned by cigarettes. Officials at Boise's St. Luke's Regional Medical Center said the mentally retarded boy's nose had been broken. He was transferred to a foster family after being treated at the hospital.

The Tuinmans are being held in the Ada County Jail on $50,000 bond each. They were arrested in Nephi, Utah as they traveled from Washington state to Arizona. Utah and Washington authorities are investigating the possibility of child abuse by the parents while they were in their states.

Tuinman asked to enter a plea at his arraignment, but 4th District Magistrate Lewis Woods refused to accept any plea at that time. Tuinman also said he was unable to read the complaint against him.

Their preliminary hearing was set for Jan. 31. However, a grand jury indictment cancels the preliminary hearing where the public defender would have been allowed to cross-examine witnesses.

Instead the couple would be bound over to 4th District Court where a trial date would be set.

Rosenthal said Thursday that officials working on the case said the couple had been divorced about three or four years ago.

Panel considers how to monitor INEL's safety

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Monitoring the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory will depend on more than technical expertise.

The program's success will depend on strong and independent leadership, possibly bypassing the normal layers of bureaucracy to report directly to the governor, state Sen. Laird Noh said Friday after hearing 7½ hours of testimony on the program this week.

Technical help will certainly be a part of the monitoring, but the system set up to ensure the INEL poses no threat to Idaho residents must also assume a public information and watchdog role, he said. Noh, R-Kimberly, is chairman of the Senate Resources and Environment Committee.

"Now is the time for the state to get tough in developing its own program and exerting pressure on the Department of Energy and Congress," he said. Idaho needs to make sure that along with new projects comes access to information and money for cleanup and for issuing the permits that will regulate the projects.

Much of the testimony the committee heard was on technical matters. State officials, INEL officials and private industry representatives left no doubt that the state Health and Welfare Department lacks the equipment, the money, the qualified people and the pay scale to attract qualified people to do the monitoring and permit issuing needed at the site in the coming year.

But the other testimony that had senators bending to take notes came from Boise freelance writer Pat Ford.

"I think the worst possible start for an oversight program is to hire six technicians and turn them loose," he said. "To me the policy aspect is the first priority. The major part is forward-looking analysis.

For example, the state might investigate what factors have helped INEL maintain a better record than other federal nuclear facilities, he said. "I think that can help us look to the future."

He envisions a state program that would verify federal monitoring, interpret technical results in layman's language, serve as a clearinghouse for public information and generally make sure the federal government respects state wishes.

The state needs to negotiate with DOE to spell out state authority and responsibility, he said. It also needs a strong presence to decide how to spend federal cleanup money, which he expects to be limited and allocated on a political basis. "We should not leave that choice entirely to the DOE," he said.

The state's timing is good, he said. Forming state policy on INEL is more important now than in the past, if the DOE carries out plans to make nuclear weapons in Idaho.

None of the DOE's nuclear weapons materials production complexes have escaped significant environmental problems and controversy, Ford said. Rocky Flats in Colorado, which manufactures the plutonium that triggers nuclear weapons and does other weapons production tasks, has polluted the groundwater under the site with heavy metals and radioactive materials.

Large classes hurt Jerome accreditation

By DENISE TURNER
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — A state committee recommended two elementary schools here lose state approval due to classroom size, not for academic reasons, Jerome Superintendent Richard Kugler said.

The standards used in this case deal strictly with numbers, Kugler said. "Our elementary classrooms are full, and this is the same problem we have always had and the same problem we are going to continue to have until we can build another building."

If approval is dropped, it probably won't affect state funding, a Idaho Department of Education official said.

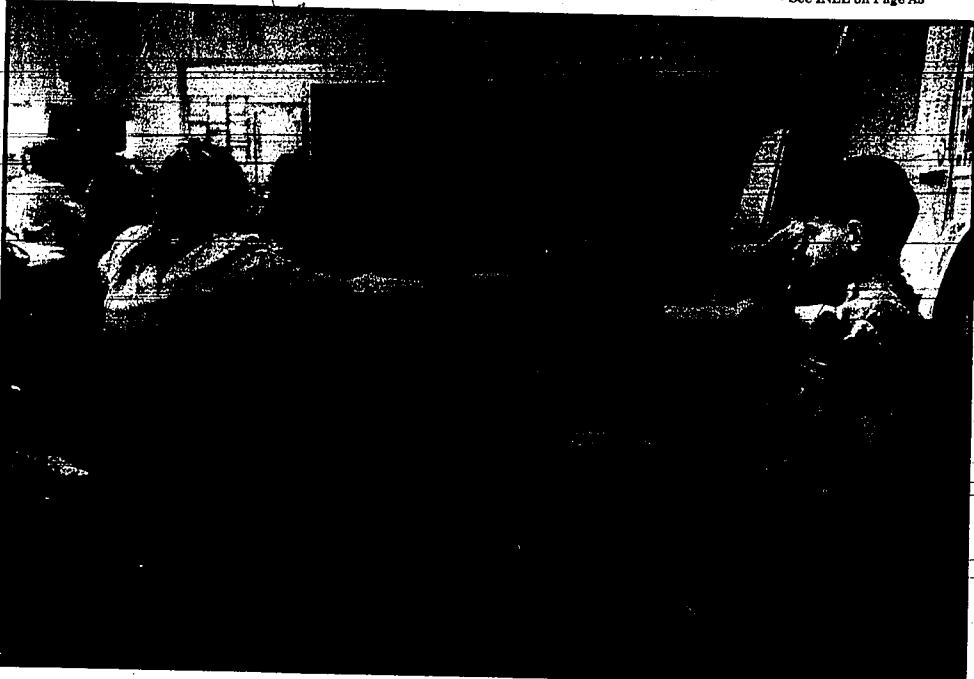

Jefferson and Central are among eight Idaho public schools out of 349 that a department committee recommended lose their accreditation or approval. The two Jerome schools are the only Magic Valley schools on the list.

Other Magic Valley schools have been "advised" or "warned" that improvements must soon be made in order to retain approval or accreditation. Elementary schools are approved, while secondary schools are accredited.

The state Board of Education will meet next week to make the final decision on the recommendations.

The loss of accreditation or approval of Magic Valley schools likely won't affect state funding, Jerry Pelton, chief of the department's Bureau of Instruction, said. A serious deficiency, such as non-certified teachers teaching classes, is required in order to jeopardize a school's state funds, Pelton said.

Still, the loss means a school has not met state standards, Pelton said.

Department of Education warns, advises 10 area schools

By DENISE TURNER
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Ten Magic Valley schools are among 73 public schools which an Idaho Department of Education committee has recommended be placed on an "advised" or "warned" list for failing to meet state standards.

Schools on the "advised" list are Albion Elementary, Richfield Elementary, Pershing Elementary, Heyburn Elementary, Lincoln Elementary, Morningside Elementary, Bickel Elementary, Robert Stuart Junior High and Hansen Elementary.

Washington Elementary in Jerome has been warned, while Central and Jefferson el-ementaries in Jerome have been recommended to lose their accreditation.

Changes in the lists are possible before the Idaho Board of Education meets Tuesday to make the final decision.

A number of infractions are listed for the schools but they generally don't affect state funding, Jerry Pelton, chief of the department's Bureau of Instruction, said. But they do reveal that a school is not up to state standards, he said.

"A parent could look at this in different ways. It is a report on your schools and is a serious matter in terms of being lined up against state standards, but some parents may not feel strongly about the fact that a classroom is overloaded or the school is

State finds O'Leary, Wood River excellent

TWIN FALLS — While 12 Magic Valley schools failed to meet Idaho Department of Education standards, two were recognized for their excellence.

O'Leary Junior High School in Twin Falls and Blaine County's Wood River High School were approved by the state and accredited with merit.

O'Leary Junior High was recognized as a result of a special department award given on July 1988 for meeting minimum standards and having additional special programs at the school, Principal Norman Wiseman said.

Wood River is in a new building. "People have increased their taxes regularly to support this school and most of our classes average below 25 students," acting Vice Principal Dave Neumann said.

short a counselor," Pelton said.

"Each parent has to evaluate the information for himself," he said.

Twin Falls School Superintendent Carl

Snow said a parent should be concerned only if problems are allowed to persist in a school and the school is continually being advised or warned.

"We don't have that situation here," Snow said, adding that it is not unusual for a school to be on the list one year and off the next.

Lincoln's overloaded kindergarten and third-grade class has been corrected, though two classrooms are still over the allowed number at Bickel, and Morningside is still short some administrative time, Snow said.

"At Robert Stuart, we have three teachers who have overloaded classes, and we are short a counselor," Snow said. "We will have to work on reducing class size and hiring a counselor there."

Black wants election of hospital board

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

BOISE — The only way to get the attention of county hospital boards appears to be to stop appointing them and start electing them, said a fed-up Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls.

He plans to introduce both legislation making county hospital board seats elected positions and legislation repealing the law that would have allowed Twin Falls County's hospital to reorganize under a private board.

"Board members are dealing with large sums of money or expenditures of money that can obligate the public for long periods of time," Black said Friday. "In essence the authority they hold can rival or exceed the authority of the county commissioners."

But unlike elected county commissioners, hospital board members are appointed and have no direct accountability to the public.

"After a hospital board meeting does the board member have to go back and explain their vote to anyone? You bet they don't," he said.

Black postponed a decision on whether to introduce the election bill until after three new trustees joined the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Board.

"I'm not sure those people aren't going to speak up more," he said. "But the responsiveness under the board chairman still isn't there."

A state law which would repeal a state law written by and passed for the Twin Falls' hospital in 1986. It would have allowed the hospital to reorganize ownership under a private, non-profit company.

But when voters were asked in a December 1986 election whether they wanted to restructure the hospital, about 60 percent said no. The hospital remains a county hospital facility.

Hospital officials said the restructuring was needed to keep the hospital out of the red. Without selling the hospital or starting a taxing district might be necessary, they said.

However, since the hospital now has a multi-million-dollar surplus, there is no need for restructuring, Black said. He favors removing temptation and repealing the law allowing restructuring.

Upstream irrigators prepare to battle Magic Valley

The Associated Press

REXBURG — Eastern Idaho irrigators say they'd like a donation of 10 cents per irrigated acre to help fund a battle against downstream attempts to upset their water supplies.

Farmers who pump water from wells to irrigate crops formed the Upper Valley Irrigators Association to represent them in the battle over water rights. About 50 farmers are involved, from Ashton to Blackfoot. It's believed to be the first group of its kind for groundwater irrigators.

Thursday's meeting came two weeks after farmers first started talking about fighting Magic Valley water users who filed petitions with the Idaho Department of Water Resources challengeing groundwater rights above Milner Dam.

"The petitions were withdrawn later, but the issue has not died, said Richard Smith, REXBURG farmer and organizer.

Smith plans to meet Jan. 31 with Keith Higginson, Water Resources director.

Smith said the Twin Falls and North Side canal companies have informed the agency that Idaho law requires the department to stop the flow of wells whenever it threatens stream flows.

Smith said attorneys for the canal companies have indicated they will refile the petitions or file suit against the DWR if nothing is done.

"This issue is still in front of us," Smith said. "The downstream water users contend that flows in the Snake River below Milner Dam and storage in the reservoir are affected gallon-to-gallon by water pumped from the aquifer above the dam.

They originally petitioned the agency for a moratorium on upstream permits for wells and extension of Water District No. 1 to include authority over groundwater.

Smith said he felt the issue affects surface water irrigators as well as groundwater pumpers. He encouraged all irrigators in eastern Idaho to join, but said the new association will primarily represent groundwater irrigators.

The steering committee will select a five-member executive board with the authority to act on behalf of the association. Until it does, a five-man committee will act as the executive board.

'Nit-picky' details will complete new jail

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — They came, they saw, they left a list of about 60 "nit-picky" tasks for jail contractors to complete.

Architect Joe Conrad, a mechanical engineer and an electrical consultant secured Twin Falls County's new 27,300-square-foot, $3.4 million jail for unsatisfactory work and found only minor problems, said County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman.

"It's probably as complete a jail facility that we have ever inspected," Conrad said. "They're done for all intents and purposes."

Hempleman said the inspectors split up at the jail and with Russell Corp. representatives following behind and taking copious notes, they pointed out ceilings with chipped paint, crooked electrical sockets and cracks behind toilet fixtures while sponging into hand-held tape recorders.

The painter was following us around painting the damn thing," Conrad said. "I didn't want to stop. I'd get smeared."

They worked about 5½ hours Thursday, Hempleman said. He said inspectors will transcribe the taped notes and send them to the contractors.

One electrical part that was sand-blasted up at the jail and with Russell Corp. representatives following behind and taking copious notes, they pointed out ceilings with chipped paint, crooked electrical sockets and cracks behind toilet fixtures while sponging into hand-held tape recorders.

It was no more than paint this, shine this, take the tape off of this," Hempleman said.

Contractors are scheduled to turn the building over to the county by noon Wednesday, Conrad said.

It should make other counties vary anxious," he said.

Commissioners will dedicate the jail on Jan. 28. An open house will be held Jan. 28 and 29, Hempleman said.

Sheriff Jim Munn said once the county occupies the jail it will take about two weeks to move supplies and inmates from the old jail and from jails around the state into the new jail.

He said the county has about 30 of its inmates in jails around the state because of a shortage of space at the fourth-floor jail in the courthouse.

The new jail will solve that problem by accommodating 141 inmates, Munn said.

Murtaugh will pursue sewer grant

By CHERI FORSYTH
Times-News correspondent

MURTAUGH — The city of Murtaugh has received permission to apply for a planning and engineering grant from the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare to find a way to upgrade its sewerage lagoon.

If the city meets the qualifications, the grant will pay for a study of the lagoon, which occasionally overflows its banks and travels along a ditch to the Snake River.

If awarded, the grant will cover up to 75 percent of expenses on the study. Richard Huddleston, Environmental Division of Health and Welfare, recently briefed the City Council on filing for the grant.

The cost of the study could be between $5,000-$10,000 but the repair costs could vary greatly — from $20,000 to $200,000 — depending on the work done, Mike McMasters, with the department in Twin Falls, said.

"We want to get the problem solved in the most cost-effective manner possible," McMasters said.

The lagoon's problem is that too much sewage is entering it but that doesn't necessarily mean the amount of sewage has increased, McMasters said. The problem's cause, for example, may be leaky pipes that flood the lagoon system with non-sewage liquids, he said.

Possible solutions would be fixing the leaks or using sprinklers to spread the effluent over land bought by the city, he said.

The city hopes to have the grant ready to file by the end of February and if it is awarded, the project will begin this summer, Mayor Robin Wright said.

In other business, the city hired Francis Johnson as town marshal, Johnson, a life-long resident of Murtaugh, has worked for the Bull Police and Twin Falls County Sheriff's departments. He was Murtaugh town marshal in 1976.

North Idaho College faces funding shortfall

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus' proposed increase in state funding for community colleges is inadequate and may force North Idaho College to ask legislators to remove limits on tuition and property taxes, NIC President Bob Bennett says.

"I think we ought to see if we can get those lids removed or we're going to be in a tight situation," Bennett told the school's board of trustees Thursday.

In his $783.4 million spending plan, Andrus asked for an 8.2 percent increase in state support for the two community colleges.

With NIC already charging the maximum tuition and property tax allowed by law, Bennett said the school figures an 8.2 percent increase in state funds amounts to a 2.9 percent increase in the overall maintenance and operation budget.

He said that's not enough to meet community needs or give employees a raise, Bennett said.

The governor, I think, firmly believes we should pick up that excess from local government or students," Bennett said.

NIC already charges students and taxpayers the maximum allowed. The board cannot increase funding from those sources unless legislators change the law.

Students pay $760, or $380 each semester, in tuition and fees.

Bennett said the school could ask voters for a supplemental override, meaning higher property taxes. But he said he's reluctant to do it because of the Coeur d'Alene School District's need for more money.

The break-ins occurred between 9 p.m. Wednesday and 9 a.m. Thursday, police records show. Doors to the businesses had been pried open, and only cash was taken from each store.

More than half of the money was stolen from Made in Idaho, which lost $750. Magic Floral got hit for $400, the Little Red Hen for $225 and The Broiler Works for $300 in quarters.

Police arrest 2 on cocaine charges
GOODING — A man and a woman charged with cocaine possession with the intent to deliver were bound over to District Court Thursday, according to Gooding County Prosecutor Lynn Nelson.

Nelson said the pair, 29-year-old James Ginella and 28-year-old Theresa Ann Lara, are scheduled for arraignment Monday.

Nelson charged the pair with the drug charges after police found one pound of a cocaine-crack mix in their 1966 yellow Ford pickup.

Law enforcement officers say Ginella was driving east on U.S. Interstate 84 near Tuttle when he was stopped on a routine traffic stop. State police notified narcotics officers, who searched the pickup and found the cocaine in an attaché case, Nelson said.

Gooding County Magistrate Judge Thomas R. Cushman ordered the pair to stand trial after a 2 1/2-hour preliminary hearing.

Ginella and Lara are free on $10,000 cash bonds.

Man hurt in rollover accident
BURLEY — A Twin Falls man sustained head injuries Friday when he fell asleep and rolled his pickup about 22 miles south of here, Idaho State Police said.

Fred Robinett, 57, was transported to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, where he was listed in stable condition, hospital officials said.

Robinett was driving west on Interstate Highway 84 when he fell asleep, drifted off the road, overcorrected and rolled his 1988 Ford pickup around 2:15 a.m., police said. There were no passengers.

Bundy interview puzzles investigator

BOISE (AP) — An Idaho criminal investigator is scheduled to have an interview Sunday with convicted slayer Ted Bundy — but he isn't certain exactly why.

Russ Renuau, chief investigator for the attorney general's office, said Friday Bundy's attorney invited Idaho to send someone to Starke, Fla., where Bundy is scheduled to be executed Tuesday morning.

"We don't have any unsolved crimes that we are aware of where he was suspected," Renuau said.

Bundy is scheduled to be executed in Florida's electric chair at 7 a.m. Tuesday for slaying 12-year-old Kimberly Leach of Pensacola in 1978. He has been suspected of killing dozens of young women in the Pacific Northwest and once was on the FBI's 10 most wanted list.

But Renuau said as far as his office can determine, Bundy was not investigated in any Idaho unsolved crimes.

On Wednesday, he said, the Washington attorney general's office was in talking with Bundy's attorney about unsolved crimes in that state.

Northwest and once was on the FBI's 10 most wanted list.

But Renuau said as far as his office can determine, Bundy was not investigated in any Idaho unsolved crimes.

On Wednesday, he said, the Washington attorney general's office was in talking with Bundy's attorney about unsolved crimes in that state.

Renuau said he planned to call Florida, but before he could, Bundy's attorney Diana Weiner, Sarasota, called the attorney general's office to offer an interview.

Renuau said one of the largest drug arrests ever in Shoshone County.

State Police said Jesse Salas Rocio, 22, and Miguel Abundis Cuevas, 23, Pasco, Wash., were held for investigation of possession with intent to deliver a controlled substance and possession of stolen property.

Schools

CASIA County Superintendent Norman Hurst said Albion was put on the list because of a kindergarten and first-and second-grade class that had only one teacher. They might have overlooked our aide," he said.

Darwin Anderson, assistant superintendent of the Mindoko district, said Heyburn classrooms are physically smaller than required, which Pershing has too many students for the number of teachers at the kindergarten and first-grade levels.

"Since the report was made, we have transferred an aide and hired a part-time kindergarten teacher to correct that situation," he said.

Hansen lacks a certified principal but will soon have one, Superintendent Richard Smith said. The current principal is one credit away from certification, Smith said.

Richfield District Superintendent Newman Malsen said Richfield recently approved. It just hadn't submitted my professional development plan when the initial recommendation was made," he said.

Evelyn Cairns, elementary consultant for the department, said schools must conform to certain criteria for elementary schools to be approved or a junior or senior high school to be accredited by the state.

"After being evaluated according to these criteria, which cover school philosophy, organization, curriculum, textbooks, facilities, policies, staff certification and local evaluation, a school is then rated.

Those schools which are approved or accredited cannot deviate from standards set by the state, Cairns said.

Those which are advised have one or more deviations and those which are warned have one or more deviations for one or more years. Schools which are dropped have one or more deviations for one or more years and show no significant improvement in the cited areas.

A committee made up of administrators from around the state works with the state to rate secondary schools. Cairns works with a committee of elementary principals from around the state to rate the elementary schools.

"We were dropped because of the size of our third- and sixth-grade classes," Kugler said. Classes in the three schools have 37 more children than allowed for approval, Kugler said. Sixteen of the three schools' 53 elementary classrooms are overcrowded, with one to three students over the limit of 32 in each classroom.

The problem has existed since 1982 and likely won't change in the next year or two, Kugler said. If the area's population grows, from the Tupperware plant sale, for instance, the district may build a new building on 23 acres it recently bought north of Forsyth Park, he said.

A third Jerome elementary school recommended lists shouldn't have been reviewed so early.

"I'm very upset about this information was leaked to the press before the Jan. 24 state Board of Education meeting, which would make the information official," Kugler said. The board had asked local school officials to refrain from discussing the recommendations until then, he said.

Pelton said the information was given to the press early in error. The information was inadvertently put into press packets," he said.

Eight criteria are used to evaluate whether or not a school meets state standards; Evelyn Kugler, elementary consultant for the Education Department, said. These are school philosophy, school organization, curriculum, textbooks, school facilities, school policies, certification of staff and overall evaluation by the school's staff and community.

Those elementary schools which are dropped from approval must have deviated from one or more points in these criteria for more than a year without significant improvement, she explained. "This would mean there is a problem in meeting the state minimum standards," she said, "which does not necessarily reflect on the educational program, but only on whatever specific standards are not met."

Judge bans school religious meeting SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - A high school cannot allow students to hold regular religious meetings in a classroom shortly before the school day starts, a federal appeals court ruled Tuesday. The ruling by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in a case from Renton, Wash., has implications for the Equal Access Act, a 1984 federal law that requires public secondary schools to allow religious clubs to meet at school the same as other extracurricular clubs. The court stopped short of declaring the law unconstitutional, saying instead that the Renton school system wasn't affected by the law because it barred all non-curricular clubs from meeting on campus. But the court also indicated that any on-campus religious meetings would probably violate separation of church and state rules.

Now credit cards can help needy

NEW YORK (AP) - U.S. Roman Catholicism's social-service arm, Catholic Charities, on Wednesday launched a system of raising money to help the needy through credit cards. Half of 1 percent of the amount charged on a specially endorsed credit card will be channeled by participating banks to the church's work among the deprived. The Rev. Thomas J. Harvey of Washington, D.C., executive director of Catholic Charities USA, called it a "creative way" of bolstering efforts at "lessening human suffering." "It will help us in our mission of protecting human dignity," he said.

Judge OKs lawsuit against nun

NEW YORK (AP) - A Roman Catholic nun who pressured an unwed woman to give up her newborn girl may be sued for social work malpractice, a state judge ruled. State Judge Diane Ledebef ruled in the state's first such case that Maureen Dunn could sue Sister Rosalie Gilson of Hicksville and her Long Island agency. Ms. Dunn, 30, of Wellesley, Mass., filed a $5 million suit charging the nun and the agency with "wrongful deprivation of custody." The judge, in a ruling issued Friday, denied Ms. Dunn's attempt to add Cardinal John O'Connor of the New York Archdiocese to the suit.

Walesa announces willingness to talk with Communist Party

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa said Friday the Communist Party's offer to legalize Solidarity doesn't go far enough, but he is willing to talk with the government because Poland needs it so badly.

"Seeing all the needs and necessities, I will try to do everything on my side to begin talks about Poland at the round table as soon as possible," Walesa said after a 90-minute rally with hundreds of workers inside the Gdansk shipyard where the Soviet bloc's only independent trade union was founded in 1980.

Walesa emphasized that the union's official position must await a weekend meeting of the Solidarity National Executive Commission.

"I will reach toward agreement. I don't know if I will make it but I will try," he said. "I will want to take advantage of all chances for agreement for Poland because we need it so badly. Time really presses us."

After a stormy two-day session of the party's Central Committee, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski on Thursday announced conditions could be negotiated to reinstate Solidarity, which has been banned since martial law was imposed in 1981.

The government's dramatic change in course, contained in a position paper allowing for political and trade union freedoms, appears to be an effort to bring the opposition into the battle to reverse the economic decline that has left Poland with chronic shortages, a mounting foreign debt and a dispirited populace.

Walesa noted the nation's deepening troubles, saying "in connection with all that it is more difficult that in 1980 to do everything."

"But we also have gained some experience," he continued. "I am an optimist, although we will face very difficult things."

Walesa said the legalization offer is a

"Band-Aid," with the party going only as far as it had to due to the pressing crisis but no further.

"It is very much (of a change) for the party. I repeat, very much," he said. "But as it goes for social expectations, it is a little bit little... You may say it is only what is necessary for today... It is like a Band-Aid for today."

Jaruzelski said the offer was "honest" and represented a "momentous event" for Poland.

The party position was printed in newspapers nationwide Friday and Jaruzelski's Thursday news conference was broadcast on radio and television. There also were short reports on Walesa's views.

Alfred Miodowicz, head of the only legal trade union alliance, warned Friday that rank-and-file workers are not ready for the changes and said they could result in unrest at factories.

"The situation is very tense in the country and I think we are facing very serious events in enterprises," he said.

However, although he voted against the party proposal at the Central Committee meeting, he appeared resigned to having more than one union at work places.

Czech police disperse demonstrators

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Riot police dispersed crowds that gathered Friday to hold a sixth day of demonstrations, and the government denounced calls for greater freedom.

Police threatened violence but did not use it on the would-be protesters in Wenceslas Square in central Prague that since Sunday had been the site of daily demonstrations.

The unrest marked the most sustained display of dissatisfaction with the government since the Soviet invasion in 1968.

The worst violence of the week came Thursday, when at least nine people were injured as hundreds of police with truncheons charged a crowd of more than 2,000 people calling for a free press, free elections and freedom of assembly.

Several dozen people were arrested Thursday, according to the official media. Activists said at least 20 leading dissidents remained held Friday.

Authorities close West Bank schools

JERUSALEM (AP) — Military authorities again shut all 1,200 schools in the West Bank on Friday, barely a month after they reopened, in a renewed effort to quell violence in the 13-month Palestinian uprising.

In the West Bank and Gaza Strip, a Palestinian alleged to be an Israeli collaborator was shot to death and another suspected collaborator died of wounds suffered earlier. At least 16 Palestinians were reported wounded in clashes with soldiers.

Most of the injuries occurred when troops fired on stone-throwing protesters at three Gaza Strip refugee camps, Arab reporters said. A 12-year-old boy was reported shot in the leg when a clash erupted after Moslem noon prayers in the West Bank city of Hebron.

The PLO and other Palestinians rejected a peace plan put forth by Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

The plan, which government officials said was Rabin's personal idea, called for elections of Palestinian leaders in the occupied territories followed by direct negotiations between Israel, Jordan and the new Palestinian leadership.

China executes 10 criminals

HONG KONG (AP) — Chinese authorities in Canton executed 10 criminals who were among a group of people convicted of murder and robbery, a newspaper reported Friday.

The criminals were found guilty by the Canton Middle People's Court at a stadium in the southern city, according to the pro-Beijing Wen Wei Po newspaper in Hong Kong.

It said the executions were carried out Thursday but gave few other details.

England's Field Marshal Harding dies

LONDON (AP) — Field Marshal Lord Harding, who commanded armor at the World War II battle of El Alamein and shrugged off death threats as governor of Cyprus in the 1950s, died Friday at the age of 92.

The former chief of the Imperial General Staff died at home in Nether Compton in southwestern England following a long illness, said his son, John.

"He will be remembered most of all for his distinguished leadership in the second World War, more especially with the 8th Army (known as the Desert Rats) in the Western Desert," said Alfred Morris, a member of Parliament.

Iran puts harsh drug laws into effect

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Harsh new laws mandating death for anyone found with small amounts of drugs take effect in Iran today, part of a ferocious crackdown in which scores of smugglers have already been executed.

The laws make the death sentence mandatory for people convicted of possessing 30 grams, or just over an ounce, of heroin, cocaine or morphine or smuggling 11 pounds of opium or hashish. Simple possession of opium or hashish carries a jail term.

It is the toughest crackdown since the early days of the Islamic revolution, when hundreds of alleged drug users and pushers were rounded up and executed.

The new campaign followed the Aug. 20 cease-fire in the Iran-Iraq war and an alarming surge in drug abuse blamed in part on hardships caused by the 8-year-old conflict.

Zero-year jinx fails to get Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, who often has described himself as being superstitious, has broken a jinx.

Despite a brush with cancer and an attempted assassination, the nation's oldest president left office alive Friday even though he was elected in a year ending in zero.

For nearly 150 years, every president elected in such a year had died in office until Reagan.

William Henry Harrison, elected in 1840, died of pneumonia at the age of 67 a month after taking office.

Abraham Lincoln, elected in 1860, was assassinated in 1865 at the age of 56.

James A. Garfield, elected in 1880, was assassinated a few months later at the age of 60.

William McKinley, re-elected in 1900, was assassinated in 1901 at the age of 58.

Warren G. Harding, elected in 1920, died of a heart attack in 1923 at the age of 58.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, elected to his third term in 1940, died of a cerebral hemorrhage in 1945 at the age of 63.

John F. Kennedy, elected in 1960, was assassinated in 1963 at the age of 46.

Reagan, 77, survived an assassination attempt outside a Washington hotel in 1981 and underwent successful surgery for cancer of the colon in 1985.

Reagan often has invoked superstitious beliefs from the world of show business and sports and declined to disavow first lady Nancy Reagan's reliance on astrology.

Reagan's last look at Oval Office somber

'Chills went through you' as ex-president turns, departs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan turned one last time as he headed out the Oval Office door Friday, casting his eyes about the room with a melancholy look.

"Chills went through you," said a witness after watching the nation's 40th president leave the historic office.

Just two hours before he turned over the presidency to George Bush, Reagan paid a sentimental visit to the spacious room in the West Wing he'd used for eight years.

Ronald Reagan walks down colonnade after leaving office

Sunlight streamed through the lightly green-tinted, bulletproof windows as Reagan met for one last time with his national security adviser, Lt. Gen. Colin Powell.

"The world is quiet today, Mr. President," Powell said, offering Reagan his last assessment of the world's trouble spots.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, who was present in the Oval Office, said the last piece of paper the president signed was a letter to British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, thanking her for her support.

Reagan also left a handwritten note to Bush in his desk, wishing him well, Fitzwater said.

The room had been swept clean of Reagan's personal mementoes — the pictures of his wife Nancy, children and friends that had adorned the table behind his desk, the engraved crystal paperweights and pens were atop it.

In anticipation of Reagan's successor, the trappings of the office remained — the multibuttoned white telephone on the large, wooden desk, the presidential seal and U.S. flags by the windows overlooking the South Lawn.

Reagan shook hands with the top aides who'd come to bid him farewell and greeted the photographers who'd been invited to capture the moment for history.

"Well, let's all line up for the picture," Reagan told them as they gathered for a photo with the man they'd captured on film for so many years.

The president walked over to his desk, an ornately carved and columned piece constructed from the timbers of the HMS Resolute. It had been presented to President Rutherford B. Hayes in 1880 by Queen Victoria.

Reagan sat silently for a moment, then put his hands on the desk's leather top, stood up and pushed his leather chair in place. Head bowed, he headed for the door, but turned to cast one last, sweeping look about the oval room before striding out the door.

"It was an incredible moment," said one of those present in the room, who asked not to be quoted by name. "Chills went through you."

Then, for the last time, Reagan walked down the arched colonnade toward the executive mansion. A small group of staff members and journalists called farewells to him through the glass doors near the Rose Garden.

Softly calling out "Goodbye" and lifting his arm in a brief wave, Reagan turned and strode toward the mansion and out of sight.

Inaugural attracts thousands

Bush gets his breeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 200,000 people assembled Friday on what President Bush called "democracy's front porch" for a chilly, first-hand look at inaugural history.

"A little crazy and a little blue ticket will get you here," said Carlos Vasquez of Antioch, Calif., one of the first to surge forward when makeshift gates on the Capitol's West Front were opened to standing-room ticketholders.

"It was like they were giving food away," said Tara Scully of Washington.

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush declared that "a new breeze is blowing" on Friday, assuming the presidency of the United States in balmy 50 degree weather.

Indeed, a northwesterly wind averaged 18 miles per hour was ruffling hairdos and judicial robes at the event.

Also of Washington, said Lyndsey Smith, also of Washington.

Red, white, blue and fur were the hallmarks of the windswept bicentennial-inauguration. Bunting and flags were draped all over the Capitol facade, and the U.S. Marine Band sat below the podium in bright red uniforms.

One spectator, Occidental Petroleum lobbyist Bob Robertson, made ink sketches on a yellow pad in preparation for a more elaborate watercolor he would paint at home. "I just want to get the flavor of it," he said.

The weather started out so warm and sunny that one young man closed his eyes and tilted his head into the sun, catching tanning rays as he listened to the patriotic musical prelude performed by the marine band and the Mormon Tabernacle Choir.

It turned cooler later, but not as severely as in 1984 when bitter cold forced Ronald Reagan to move his swearing-in indoors.

At Friday's event, thick clouds accompanied by a cutting wind rolled in about 90 minutes before the ceremonies began. The young members of the military color guard had to fight their way out of the flags furling around their heads. And as the sun disappeared, the furs came out.

In the diplomatic-spouses section of the audience, nearly every wife appeared to be wearing mink. Others were more daring. Betty Wright, wife of House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, wore a short, spotted fur as she sat in a conspicuous place of honor on the balustrade. And Monica Zunt of Cleveland sported a huge gray fur hat adorned with a dozen brown feathers.

"I figure, where else can I wear a fur?" said Zunt. "It's the official inaugural hat."

Gary Wetzel, snapping pictures of the U.S. Marine Band, wore a black T-shirt adorned with his medal of honor. "I'm from Wisconsin. This is spring weather," he said.

Florida court won't block Bundy's Tuesday execution

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A Florida court ruled Monday that it would not block the execution of Ted Bundy on Tuesday. Bundy, who was convicted of murdering three women, was scheduled to be executed at the Florida State Penitentiary in Raiford, Fla., at 10 p.m. Tuesday.

Hospitals' woes may be aired

CHICAGO (AP) — The names of hospitals with serious problems maintaining safety or quality could be revealed to inquiring members of the public under a proposal being weighed by a group that sets industry standards, a spokesman said Friday.

At present, when accredited hospitals slip in safety or quality they are listed as having "tentative non-accreditation," but that status is concealed from the public, said David Busbelle of the government-authorized Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations.

Accreditation, a seal of approval, qualifies a hospital to receive Medicare and Medicaid benefits, which together may total up to half a hospital's income.

About 420 of the nation's 7,000 hospitals fall into the "tentative non-accreditation" category, Busbelle said. "The designation allows hospitals up to a year to 'clean up their act' before their next inspection and possible loss of accreditation," he said.

"We found this system is too lengthy and inefficient and it undermines the credibility of the accreditation process," he said. "Also, hospitals performing satisfactorily and above-average hospitals under the old system are all grouped together with hospitals that are performing marginally, because the joint commission identifies all these hospitals as being accredited."

Rule changes being considered by the Chicago-based commission would force hospitals to correct problems faster, Busbelle said. They also would allow disclosure of a hospital's status to anyone who asked, he said.

"Under the new system, a hospital will be either accredited, conditionally accredited or non-accredited," Busbelle said, with "conditionally accredited" replacing "tentatively non-accredited."

Arthur Levin, director of the New York-based Center for Medical Consumers, said in a telephone interview Friday that providing information on request is not the same as making inspection results public.

Shooting victims' families keep prayer vigil

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — Families of the victims of this week's schoolyard massacre continued a prayer vigil Friday, while parents and teachers gingerly counseled children who witnessed the killings.

Three days and nights of Buddhist prayer began Thursday for two of the five Southeast Asian children killed Tuesday at Cleveland Elementary School by a fatigue-clad gunman who sprayed the schoolyard with an AK-47 semi-automatic assault rifle.

Services for the other children were scheduled Saturday and Monday.

Fourteen of the 29 students injured in the attack remained in hospitals Friday, but in almost all cases their conditions were reported improved. One teacher also was wounded.

An estimated three-quarters of the school's 970 pupils had returned to classes Friday, about three times the number of children in school Wednesday, the day after the shootings.

Counselors and school psychologists assisted teachers in classrooms, and some parents sat in with their children.

Miami panel seeks to keep weekend calm

MIAMI (AP) — A panel formed to investigate the slaying that touched off this week's racial violence met for the first time Friday as civic and community leaders sought to maintain calm for Super Bowl weekend.

"We can't go on having racial disturbances every five years — if this goes on, the whole city is going to burn down," said the Rev. Richard Barry, chairman of the 11-member panel of police officers and black residents.

The board will investigate the death of Clement Lloyd, 23, an unarmed black motorcyclist shot in the head by a Hispanic police officer Monday.

Riots triggered by the shooting left one man dead and seven others shot in two black neighborhoods. Thirteen buildings were torched and others looted, authorities said.

"I'm hoping we'll begin to deal seriously with this community's problems and do more than just put some iodine on its cancers," Barry said.

After an introductory session, the group agreed to hold its first working meeting on Monday.

William Lozano, 29, the officer who shot Lloyd, remained on suspension with pay during an internal police investigation. His attorney, Roy Black, said he expects the Colombian-born officer to be indicted in the slaying.

"He's been made a scapegoat to somehow save the Super Bowl, save civic pride, to stop the riots," said Black, who said the officer fired in self-defense as the motorcycle bore down on him.

Normal activity resumed Friday in the black neighborhoods plagued by violence earlier in the week, with police relaxing the perimeter around the Overton neighborhood and opening up highway exits into the area.

Most of the 372 people arrested in the riots remained in jail, unable to make cash bail of $260 or more.

few "rich and happy," though.

If a woman's skirt didn't cover her knees, she was a prostitute. Such was the general belief in the early 1930s.

In Benjamin Franklin's day, a man with a dull ax could buy a grindstone. Or he could visit somebody who already owned one. That's what freeloaders did then. Showed up, ax in hand. Of such, Franklin coined the line: "He had an ax to grind."

Writes a client: "It's unfair for a quarterback to get beaten up every time an offensive coordinator on the sidelines calls a stupid play. In the interest of sportsmanship, I propose an NFL rule change: That four designated linemen from the defending team be assigned to clobber the player called after every down."

Trick is to find someplace to sell what others think is unsalable. Tiffany & Co. did that in 1858. A stretch of cable 20 miles long was left over on the American end of the first trans-Atlantic cable. Tiffany bought it as junk, cut it into four-inch pieces, and sold them for 60 cents each.

CSI flies to 120-74 romp over Salt Lake CC

By LARRY HOVEY
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The public address announcer announced a seven-man College of Southern Idaho starting lineup Friday night and it must have felt exactly that way for the Salt Lake Community College Bruins.

The Eagles swarmed through the Bruins offensively and stopped them defensively in posting a surprisingly lopsided 120-74 Region 18 men's basketball victory.

The win, getting its early impetus from sophomore Cliff Martin on the boards and scoreboard, moves the Eagles to a chance to regain a share of the Region 18 lead tonight when they host the ninth-ranked Utah Valley Wolverines at 7:30 p.m.

The eighth-ranked Eagles trailed only once — 4-3 on a shot by Mel January — but any semblance of a battle ended when a fight erupted between Salt Lake's Mel Love and CSI's Sergio Gomes. That started with the two routing in the center spot, Love on offense. With the ball out front, the action swirled inside as some elbows flew and at the very end Love caught Gomes in the throat with a right hand.

CSI had the game in hand at 42-25 at the time and with the 6-foot, 10-inch Love on the sideline, the Golden Eagles enjoyed a big height advantage and exploited it on both ends.

But even before then, the Eagles were having a big night on the offensive boards with six putback field goals and three more slam-on-fast breaks.

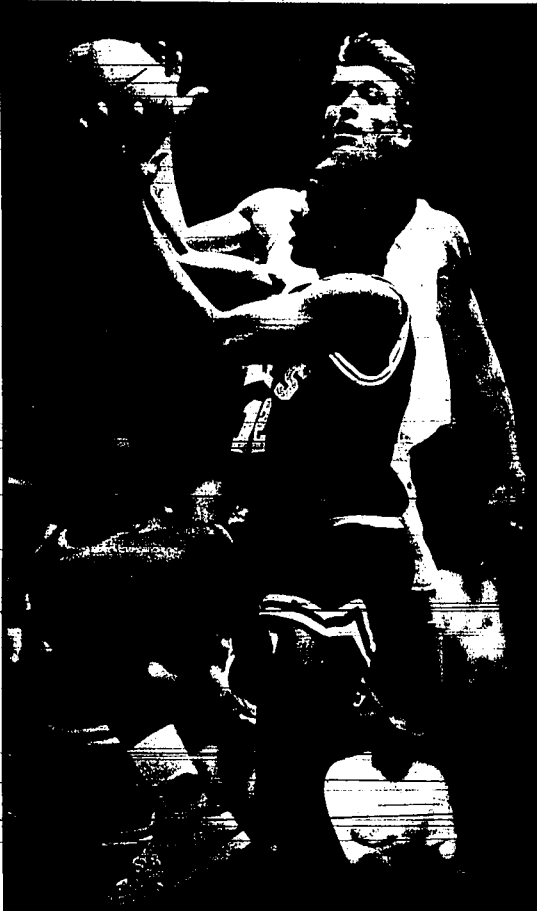

"We're overboarded almost to a man with CSI," said SLCC coach Max Lloyd, who lived in Twin Falls from birth to age 15. "With our only big man out, there was no way we could compete with their scoring and rebounding inside."

"No. 1," said CSI coach Fred Trenkle, "I think we play pretty good defense. No one in the region plays it better than we do unless it's Utah Valley, which is coming in here tomorrow night. But with our defense we stopped their transition game. This is exactly the same five they started at the first of the season when they were 12-1 and before John Stagers became eligible. They certainly are a better team than they showed tonight."

"Our goal tonight will be just like it will be tomorrow night. We will try to take the ball inside against their big people — and they've got a seven-footer," he added.

Although the game was only minutes past, Trenkle said "we can enjoy these wins too long" and noted his players would be back on the floor as soon as the crowd exited the gymnasium. "We will be walking through some things

CSI women break century mark to defeat Salt Lake

By LARRY HOVEY
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It was a go-figure-it game. The College of Southern Idaho women's basketball team looked great, shot well and committed only five turnovers in the first half to score 52 points. They had a three-minute scoring drought, committed 15 turnovers and didn't rebound as well in the second half.

No matter.

For the first time in a long while, the Golden Eagles broke the century mark and downed archrival Salt Lake Community College 105-81 Friday night.

That brings the Eagles up to tonight's major clash with Utah Valley, a team no Coach Ben Stroud coach team has beaten. That one begins at 6:15 p.m.

The Eagles had to weather a 37-point scoring performance from sophomore Cheryl Tye. But until Becky Killpack came alive with 14 second-half points, Tye didn't have a lot of scoring help.

Meanwhile, CSI was running, stealing and giggling through the first half, owning leads as large as 19 points before settling for a 52-36 halftime advantage.

Freshman Becky Brewer had her best half of the season with a few points but some big defensive plays and rebounds and three nifty assists.

"The best thing about this game and the first half particularly was that everyone contributed," Stroud said.

Early in the second half the Eagles threatened to blow it clear out of proportion, moving ahead by 24 points. But then came the scoring lull that was further compounded by turnovers and fouls.

"I got a little worried because we weren't scoring, just fouling and we put them in the one-and-one too early," Stroud said. "I didn't want them coming back on us at the line."

Salt Lake bounced back to within 75-60 but then it was the Bruins' turn to tie offensively as Kim Eproson and Audra Urie sparked a CSI flurry.

Eproson started it with a jumper in transition and Urie then wound up two fast breaks with crumples. Eproson had another transition

McCandless leads Filer to win

The Times-News

DECCLO — Filer guard Steve McCandless scored 31 points, including six three-point goals, to lift the Wildcats to a 75-84 Canyon Conference boys' basketball victory over Declo here Saturday night in a showdown between the two remaining undefeated teams in the league.

McCandless, who scored 22 points before halftime, tallied with 1 minute and 20 seconds left to lift Filer from a 63-62 lead into a 65-62 advantage and then hit a three-pointer at the 1:04 mark to put the game away.

"That was the turning point in the game," said Declo coach Ron Knowles, whose Hornets had a 10-game winning streak snapped by the Wildcats, who are now 10-2 and riding a 10-game winning streak of their own. "He got the three-pointers when they needed them and then they hit 13 of 15 free throws in the fourth quarter."

"Steve had a great game," said Filer coach Ladd Patterson. "But our bench kept us in the game in the second half when they started their run."

On the strength of 52 percent shooting in the first half, the Wildcats took a 36-29 lead at intermission and extended it to 10 points early in the third quarter. But three successsive offensive foul calls on Filer helped Declo tie the game at 44 before the end of the third period. The game was tied three more times before Declo guard Greg Kowitz fouled out with 7:29 left.

"I think that hurt them," said Patterson. "He's a quality kid and it hurts to lose a player like that in that situation."

Darryl Lierman converted both free throws, but Declo's Kurt Steadman put the Hornets ahead 54-53 with a three-point goal a few seconds later. Filer's Brian Coon got those points back with a couple of free throws with 6:39 remaining and Lier-

Burley girls take shot at Highland

By STEVE CRUMP
 Times-News sports editor

POCATELLO — Burley High School's girls' basketball team can take a giant step toward ending the Highland dynasty in Region III basketball here tonight.

The Bobcats, 16-2, will visit Highland for a game that will determine the top seed in the post-season regional tournament.

"We've played over there enough that we know how tough it is to win there," said Burley coach Gordon Kerbs, whose Bobcats wrapped up their third consecutive South-Central Idaho Conference championship earlier in the week. "We're going to have to handle their full-court pressure and stay in a half-court offense, because they're very capable to winning."

Highland is the only girls' basketball champion Region III has ever known, but the Beyer dynasty is definitely in trouble this year. Eleventh-year Highland coach Randy Rehner graduated all five starters from his team that finished second in the state Class A-1 tournament last year. His current ballclub is 8-9, but its only regional loss was to Burley, 57-46 in November, in both teams' season opener.

"Burley loses to Pocatello last month left the two teams tied for the regional lead. Both are 5-1. If we win we get the first-round bye and host the tournament," said Kerbs. "If we don't, Highland hosts, assuming they beat Pocatello next week and if we beat Minico in our last game of the season."

Despite the Rams' youth, Highland is averaging 45.3 points a game and allowing an average of 46.8, both of which rank third in the Gem State Conference. Center Julie Higgins, a 5-foot, 11-inch senior, leads the GSC in scoring with a 15.2-point average and ranks third in rebounding, with an average of 6.1 boards a game. Highland senior Kayla Angell, a 5-3 senior, is averaging 7.8 points and ranks second in the GSC in assists with an average of 4.7.

"Higgins is a tremendous player," said Kerbs. "She's very strong inside and she's going to be very tough for us to stop. Angell is a very good point guard."

Of course, Kerbs may have the best point guard in the state in Jennifer Beck, a senior, and who is the key to a consistent man-to-man defense that most opponents have found unbeatable.

"Basically, we have to do the things that we done all year," said Kerbs. "We've got to make our outside game work, play good defense and keep the tempo of the game under control."

"The regional champion gets a berth in the state A-1 tournament in Twin Falls next month, while the loser must play the third-place team from Region III for a possible second berth at state."

Cincy's Ickey is ready to shuffle

By JOB KAY
 The Associated Press

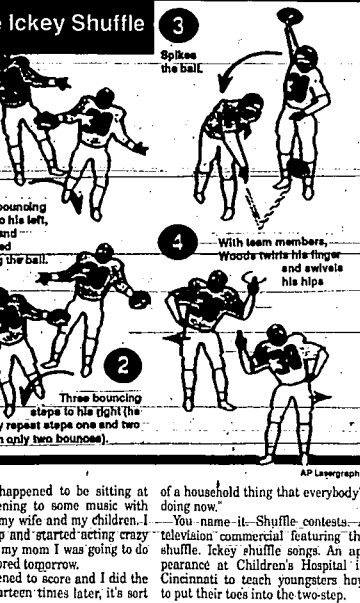

MIAMI — The "Ickey Shuffle" has become the hottest dance step in Cincinnati and attracted national attention for Bengals rookie Ickey Woods. This is a history of the craze and its particulars:

The shuffle has undergone revision during the season, but remains simple. Woods spreads his feet apart, holds the ball out with one hand, leans to the side and gives a couple of bounces. He then switches hands with the ball and leans the other way. The shuffle is capped off with Woods hepping on one leg and then spiking the ball.

Woods originally did the dance in the end zone after his touchdowns. But officials penalized him in a Nov. 27 game against Buffalo — when he scored three touchdowns — for an excessive end-zone celebration. Since then, he's used the sideline as his stage, running with the ball behind the Bengals bench after he scores to do his dance. Woods hinted he might risk a penalty and shuffle in the end zone if he scores in the Sunday.

During the playoffs, Woods has added a finishing touch to the shuffle. After spiking the ball, he and the Bengals offensive backs — who call themselves the "SWAT Team" — twirl their index fingers and yell "Woo, woo, woo."

Woods, who scored 15 touchdowns this season, developed the shuffle on the spur of the moment early in the season.

Idaho whips ISU, 67-52

The Times-News

POCATELLO — For 30 minutes Saturday's Big Sky Conference game between Idaho and Idaho State was a cliff-hanger.

A real nail-biter that is, until Vandal center Riley Smith, a 6-foot, 8-inch junior, took charge of an 18-4 run to propel Idaho to a 67-52 victory over 4,444-partisan ISU fans.

The win leaves the Vandals, who garnered their second consecutive road win, at 4-1 in the Big Sky and 14-3 overall with four-game winning streak.

ISU 5-11 in all games, stands 1-5 in league play. The Vandals now lead the series 44-30.

Just after ISU assumed a 42-41 lead on Butch Mettinger's three-pointer, Smith, who tied ISU's Steve Get inside for four quick points, (Thummar Ricardo Boyd added two from the baseline.

Lorenzo Nash took a rebound the length of the floor before Smith converted a layin for a 51-42 Idaho lead.

Girls' Southside tourney begins tonight

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

HANSEN — The hard reality of the District 4 Class A Southside Subdistrict girls' basketball tournament that begins here tonight is that a couple of pretty good basketball teams aren't going to the state tournament.

The Southside Subdistrict, like the Northside, gets a single representative in the state tournament next month at Twin Falls High School. There will be a District 4 playoff between the champions of the two subdistricts, but it will be strictly for seeding purposes at state.

There are four Southside teams that will take winning records into the subdistrict tourney, which should make the competition fierce for the single spot at state. Last year, when District 4 had 20 teams in the state tournament, Oakley won the district championship and Hagerman got the second spot by beating Northside champ Richfield. Richfield, in turn, lost an interdistrict playoff and didn't make it to state.

Second-seeded Shoshone, 14-6, will take on seventh-seeded Castledorf, 3-14, in the tournament opener at 5:30 p.m. in the Hansen High School gym, followed by the 7 p.m. contest between third-seeded Hagerman (10-8) and sixth-seeded Hansen (7-11) at 7 p.m. Fourth-seeded Murtaugh (9-7) will play fifth-seeded Raft River (8-9) at 8:30 p.m.

Magico Valley Conference champion Oakley, 16-4, has a first-round bye and won't see action until Monday night against the winner of the Murtaugh-Raft River game.

The tourney resumes Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, Jan. 28. The championship game will be played on Monday, Jan. 30, with a second title game, if it is necessary, slated for Tuesday, Jan. 31. The single berth in the state tour-namment makes next Thursday's tournament semifinal game all-important. The loser of that game would have to come back and win three games to make it to state.

Oakley, which has dominated District 4 small-school basketball for the past two seasons, will be the strong favorite to be the Southside representative to state, but the Hornets have been beaten this year — most recently by Shoshone last week in Shoshone.

Oakley and Shoshone are the only MVC teams to beat every other team this season, but the Indians lost on their home court by Hagerman earlier this week.

The Hornets, in fact, are the hottest team in the MVC, with five straight victories and wins in six of their last eight games.

Oakley has won four out of five and five of its last seven, while Shoshone has lost three out of six since Christmas.

Warriors win 7th straight

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Mitch Richmond's 9-pointer triggered a 10-point fourth-quarter run Friday night as the Golden State Warriors beat the Houston Rockets 121-114 for their seventh consecutive victory, matching their longest winning streak in 14 years.

Houston lost its fourth straight and dropped from a first-place tie with Utah in the Midwest Division. Sleepy Floyd scored 35 points for the Rockets and had 12 assists. Chris Mullin scored 26, Richmond 23 and Rod Higgins 20 for the Warriors.

Golden State led 43-26 early in the second quarter before the Rockets closed to 60-54 at halftime. Golden State was won nine of 11 with a 11-0 spurt.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Karl Malone's jumper with two seconds remaining Friday night gave the Utah Jazz a 98-96 victory over Milwaukee, the Bucks' first loss in nine games against the Western Conference.

Milwaukee led 96-94 on Paul Pressey's layup with 67 seconds left. Malone, who scored 15 of his 39 points in the fourth quarter, made two free throws to tie it.

After the Milwaukee failed to score, Malone made his winning jumper from 20 feet out on the lay-off pass from John Stockton.

The Eagles reacted positively on the scoreboard after the fight-and-gestions. Martin got a lob-alam. Williams hit on a pretty drive and Henderson scored four quick points to blow it open at 51-29.

The field point came for the Bruins at 16 minutes, 12 seconds with CSI holding a 70-40 advantage. From then on it was simply a matter of the clock running out.

The Eagles had seven men in double figures, headed by freshman Corey Warner at 18. CSI hit 39-64 from the field while Salt Lake struggled with 39 percent shooting.

The victory improved CSI's season record to 18-1 and its conference mark to 7-1, while Salt Lake dropped to 13-6 and 4-4.

Glenns Ferry overcomes Gooding in OT, 69-68

The Times-News

GOODING — Glenns Ferry shook off a 10-point Gooding lead heading into the final quarter tying the contest and winning it in overtime 69-68 in a boys' Canyon Conference basketball game Friday night.

Glenns Ferry led 31-21 at a pair of three-point buckets in the final minute to send the game into the extra period.

After the Pilots took the lead, Gooding had the ball twice in the final 12 seconds. They turned it over on their first possession and got two shots off in the final five seconds, but neither one would go through the basket.

Glenns had 28 points, including four three-point buckets, to lead all scorers while Duncan Farris added 22.

Danny Young led the Senator scoring attack with 23 points.

KIMBERLY — Kelly Holcomb's game-long performance and two late three-pointers by Randy Collins helped the Kimberly Bulldogs to a 62-57 Canyon Conference victory over the Wendell Trojans Friday night.

Holcomb hit on eight of 11 field goal attempts and dropped down 13 rebounds to help the Bulldogs stay in an airtight contest over the first three quarters. It was still tight until the late going when Collins hit his two three-pointers to move the Bulldogs away.

Idaho

Garryly replied for the Bengals, then converted two free throws but Idaho's Raymond Brown scored to keep them capitalized on one of 17 ISU turnovers.

Brown's three-point play provided the Vandals a double-digit advantage at 56-46 and former College of Southern Idaho guard Mauro Gomes stretched the bulge to 13 from NBA range.

"I was scared to death coming in here," said first-year Idaho coach Kermit Davis. "It's hard to get a win when Raymond Brown's a good ballplayer but when I bring Smith gets to playing, we're a better team. He's not a pretty 15-foot jump shooter, in fact he didn't shoot anything over 5 feet all night."

That came with 1 minute and 32 seconds left when the Vandals Boy scored his second straight basket to make it 35-28.

Smith's three-point play staked Idaho to a 24-19 lead but Todd Peterson, a 6-7 starting forward for the Bengals from CSI, sandwiched two free throws around a pair of fielders bringing ISU within one.

"Give credit to ISU," added Davis. "We'd get our lead up to five and, when we're right back to even again."

"When they got the second half lead, it was just too easy," ISU coach Jim Boutin. "That's a reflection of their discipline."

"I'm proud of our kids, though," he added. "We need a kid who can rebound. We were out-boarded in nine (37-28), they got 13 of those on the offensive end, a lot of those turned into putbacks.

After winning a pair of Big Sky contests in Moscow by an average of 35 points last week, the Vandals continue on to Ogden, Utah, to meet Weber State, an 87-77 victory over ISU eight days ago.

"We went to a zone in the second half, shot a little better and rebounded a little better," said Weber State will match up much better with Smith, said Davis.

Dow Jones slips to 2,235.36

The Associated Press
NEW YORK — The stock market declined slightly Friday, biding its time through the change of command in Washington.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 3.75 to 2,235.36, closing out the week with a net gain of 9.29 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 8 to 7 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks with 659 up, 755 down and 547 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 166.10 million shares, down from 192.03 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 139.85 million shares.

Analysts said the market had benefited in recent weeks from increasing expectations for George Bush's presidency.

But by about midday on Thursday, they said, the mood among investors began to change from anticipation to watchful waiting.

The market's recent rally stalled when the Dow Jones industrial average moved close to 2,250 — about the level where it stood on Oct. 16, 1987, just before the crash on Black Monday.

Brokers said that could turn out to be something of a psychological barrier for investors.

A flurry of trading near the close resulted in stocks involved in program trading strategies keyed to a set of opening options and futures on stock indexes. A narrow range of stock prices in the market resulted in what they fluctuated all day.

Digital Equipment rose 2 1/2 to 107 1/2. On Thursday the company reported quarterly earnings that surpassed analysts' estimates.

United Technologies jumped 1 1/2 to 43 1/2. The company reported record earnings for 1988.

Alcoa gained 4/8 to 67 1/2 in active trading. The company increased its dividend and said it would base future payouts partly on a formula determined by its earnings.

Assumore rose 1/4 to 35 1/2 after Montedison increased its offer for all the Assumore shares it doesn't already own from $33.50 to $35 a share.

Texas Eastern climbed 1/4 to 47 1/2 on expectations that the company, which is fighting a $42-a-share offer from Coastal Corp., would attract a higher bidder or bidders.

Briggs & Stratton fell 1 1/2 to 28. The company posted a loss for its latest quarter and said its earnings for all of the fiscal year ending June 30 will be significantly below the previous year's results.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"Thinking is, or ought to be, a cool, steady and a calmness; and our poor hearts thro, and our poor brains beat too much for that."
— Herman Melville.

Put yourself in today's West chair and defend against the four-spade game. (Cover the South and East cards with your thumbs.)

South takes West's club king with his ace as East follows with the deuce. Two rounds of trumps follow, and South leads a low heart toward dummy. Do you take the ace or do you duck?

Taking the ace is correct; there's nothing to be gained by ducking. Had dummy held K-J-10, there would be good reason to consider playing low.

What do you play after winning the ace of hearts? When this hand was played in a rubber bridge game, West cashed his club queen, catching East's jack along with icy stares. That ended the defense and South escaped with his "unmakable" game.

After winning the heart ace, West should pause for calm thought. He knows where three defensive tricks are. Where can he find a fourth one?

The only possibility is that East was dealt the J of clubs. West's ace derails his club queen to East's jack, and East switches to diamonds, to beat the game.
