Trade deficit declines but hints at trouble

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The U.S. merchandise trade deficit declined by a dramatic 22 percent last year to show its first improvement since 1980, the government reported Friday.

But the year-end figures held disquieting news for the future as the deficits for the last two months began climbing anew.

"It's very disturbing that the improvement is stalling out at a very high level," said Lawrence Climerine, chairman of the WFFA Group of economic forecasters. "The trade deficit is going nowhere fast," added Allen Sinal, chief economist of The Boston Co. and Economic Advisors Inc.

Nonetheless, 1988 marked a major turning point in the international trade picture: an end to a series of record-high U.S. deficits that had caused major dislocations in the American economy during the eight years of the Reagan presidency. The 1988 decline in the trade deficit was the first since the 12.5 percent drop in 1980, to $31.4 billion, the last year of the Carter administration.

The 1988 deficit was $18.7 billion, a $33.4 billion decline from the previous year's $52.1 billion. By another measure of the U.S. trade balance, which inflates the value of imports by including freight and insurance, the 1988 deficit was $137.3 billion, compared with $170.3 billion the year before.

White House Press secretary Martin Fitzwater hailed the 1988 improvement as "good news that does show steady improvement, a trend toward improvement."

The deficit for December stood at $10.2 billion, a $100 million dip from the November deficit, as both imports and exports set new monthly highs. The deficits for both November and December, however, turned upward from previous months and were higher than the $9.9 billion monthly average for the year.

Commerce Secretary Robert A. Mosbacher credited the trade deficit's decline to a surge of exports, which increased by 27 percent to a record $22.2 billion for the year. Imports increased by just 8.3 percent to hit a three-year low of $49.6 billion.

But Mosbacher said "it is imperative" that the United States "further improve our overall trade deficit." He urged American manufacturers to increase their commitment to export.

North trial set to start on Tuesday

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The trial of former White House aide Oliver L. North is set to begin Tuesday after almost a two-week delay caused by disputes over rules governing disclosure of government secrets at the proceeding, court officials said Friday.

U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard A. Gesell concluded preparations by approving a 44-page prosecution account, called an "admission," describing deals the Reagan administration made for secret third-country contributions to the Nicaraguan Contras.

Deranged elk holds woman, officer in home

The Associated Press

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Colo. — A deranged elk chased a 74-year-old woman and a police officer into a house in the heart of this mountain town and held them there for three hours Friday.

The animal also attacked lawn chairs, cars and wildlife officers.

The cow elk eventually was lured to an open spot along the Colorado River and drowned while wildlife officials were wondering what to do with her, said police Capt. Don Williams.

Nadine Hurst, who has lived in Glenwood Springs since 1919, heard her dogs barking about 7 a.m. and looked out the window to find "the biggest elk I ever saw" looking into her yard.

Hurst said she thought the animal might be hungry and went outside with some apples to feed it.

"I scratched it under its chin," she said. "All of a sudden, it got up on its hind legs and lunged at me with its front feet. I opened the gate and here it came."

"I can't move too fast but I sure must have traveled, fast then so that elk wouldn't catch me," she said. "It could have been disastrous."

Hurst escaped inside the house with bruises to her arm, thigh and

Hudson's lover receives another $7.25 million

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A jury gave Rock Hudson's lover an additional $7.25 million in damages Friday, boosting his total award to $21.75 million because the late movie star kept his AIDS diagnosis a secret.

The latest award was against Hudson's secretary and confidant, Mark Miller, who admitted he agreed not to reveal Hudson's illness to Marc Christian. Jurors found that Miller acted maliciously and intended to injure Christian by keeping Hudson's secret.

Christian shook hands with each juror and thanked them as they left the courtroom. Several of them told him, "Good luck."

If Rock Hudson had told me he had AIDS, none of us would be here today," Christian said as he left the courtroom.

The jurors refused to comment immediately afterward. Reached by telephone later, juror Raymond Blanton, 27, a postal worker, said he thought the award was excessive and dissented on damages. Civil cases can be decided by agreement of just nine of the 12 jurors.

"I thought it was just totally too much money. I could not understand that. I did agree that Marc Christian won his case, but I thought that the $14.5 million was too much," said Blanton, who thought damages of $10 million were appropriate.

Hudson was diagnosed as having AIDS in June 1981, but Christian said he was kept in the dark about it.

Apology may save writer's life

The Associated Press

Iran's president said Friday that Salman Rushdie, author of "The Satanic Verses," might save his life with an apology.

An Iranian envoy said Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's call for the writer's death was "purely a religious statement."

"This wretched man (Rushdie) has no choice but to die because he has confronted a billion Muslims and the imam (Khomeini)," Iranian president Ali Khamenei said at prayers in Tehran.

Khomeini, Iran's spiritual leader, said Tuesday that Rushdie's novel slanders Islam and ordered Muslims to track down and kill the author, an Indian-born British citizen.

Some diplomats in the Middle East have speculated that the Rushdie issue was promoted by factions in Iran opposed to recent moves by more pragmatic figures to improve relations with the West.

Reports on official Tehran Radio suggested an attempt to set apart the furor over Rushdie from Iran's

Arctic has no ozone 'hole' now but danger exists

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Arctic may soon face significant ozone destruction, scientists said Friday, although adding that a six-week research effort had found no evidence so far of a vast "hole" in the region's ozone layer.

The international research effort, which began early last month with more than two dozen high-altitude, data-gathering flights, uncovered high levels of chlorine gases, which have been blamed for ozone destruction.

The researchers, who worked from a base at Svalbard, Norway, also confirmed the existence of clouds of ice particles in the arctic stratosphere that intensify the destructive chemical reactions that deplete the ozone layer.

The findings, while they did not confirm significant ozone destruction over the Arctic as yet, added to concerns about pollutants, primarily chlorofluorocarbons, or CFCs, blamed for ozone depletion.

Scientists worry about the loss of ozone because the stratospheric gas that envelops the planet more than 12 miles up filters harmful ultraviolet rays emitted by the sun.

These rays can cause skin cancer and damage eyes and, if allowed to bombard the Earth unimpeded, could upset the planet's ecosystem.

Sentencing in embezzlement case follows emotional appeal

Former city worker receives probation

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After making an emotional appeal on her family's behalf, Donna Fahey was sentenced to two years' probation Friday for stealing money from a city water hookup fund.

"I wish I could go back and never let it happen," said Fahey, her voice cracking. "It's been emotionally terrible on all of us. I've hurt the people I love, and that hurts me."

"It's something I never intended to do," Magistrate Charles Brumbach also ordered Fahey to pay a $1,000 fine and to continue seeking counseling. Fahey, a city finance department employee for more than seven years, pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor count of theft that in connection with $7,191 that was discovered missing from a water deposit fund.

She earlier paid $6,000 in restitution.

At the sentencing hearing Friday, Fahey's attorney, Jeff Saker, called a former city employee and Fahey's bishop to testify on Fahey's behalf.

Elizabeth Walden said the city previously allowed employees to use IOUs or checks to borrow public money without interest. Walden quit her job in 1985 following discovery of one of her IOUs.

"I told them it was a practice, and they were saying that it shouldn't have been and were giving me a bad time about it," Walden said. "I asked them to ask the rest of the employees, but evidently they didn't."

Walden said she discussed the practice with City Manager Tom Courtney and former finance director Bryce King.

Since entering into a plea agreement in January, Fahey has said that she considered the money a loan.

Ex-official denies charges — A6

Vern Barnes, Fahey's bishop of five years in the Sixth Ward of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, testified that Fahey had apologized to her former co-workers and that last week she asked for the forgiveness of the church congregation.

Brumbach said he had received at least a dozen letters from members of Fahey's church, asking for leniency in Fahey's sentencing.

Fahey told the court that she started taking the money to pay for groceries. She said her family ran into financial difficulties when her husband was injured at work and temporarily had to quit working.

Her family did not know that she was taking money, Fahey said. Discovery of the theft has taken its toll on her daughter, who has been teased about it at school, she said.

"That's been hard for her to deal with, and that hurts me because she shouldn't have to be punished."

Nez Perce plan 'friendship luncheon'

KAMIAH (AP) — Nez Perce Indians at Kamiah plan a "friendship luncheon" Saturday to ease community relations with non-Indians.

Indian leaders have been at odds with Kamiah businessmen over the operation of an Indian convenience store. A bill introduced in the Legislature would end a tax exemption which Kamiah merchants say gives the Indian store an unfair advantage.

Indian leaders announced earlier they would voluntarily add a sales tax of 3 percent to non-Indians and 9 cents per package of cigarettes in an effort to stave off the bill. It may be put before the House Revenue and Taxation Committee again next week.

All Nez Perce who live in Kamiah have been invited to the noon meeting at the Community Center in what was called a "neighbor-to-neighbor" approach toward working out the problems.

Parents allege theft; son arrested

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A Coeur d'Alene man was arrested at the request of his parents after he allegedly broke into their Hayden Lake home and stole $517 worth of items.

First District Magistrate John Luster ordered Barry William Baker, 26, held in the Kootenai County Jail Thursday on a charge of second-degree burglary. Bond was set at $2,000.

James G. Baker, 59, and his wife, Donna, 52, asked deputies Wednesday to arrest their son after they learned he had allegedly broken into their home and stolen three rifles, power tools and other items, a Kootenai County sheriff's report said.

The Bakers discovered the items missing when they came home about noon on Tuesday. They then learned the items had been pawned at three local shops by their son, the report said.

Albertson's to buy building again

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — For the second time in a year, Albertson's Inc. has agreed to buy the state Division of Highways regional headquarters building in Coeur d'Alene.

The Boise-based grocery chain's offered $3.7 million for the 14-acre site — $1.2 million more than it offered last March.

That deal collapsed after legislators rejected the state Department of Transportation's request for funds to help build a new headquarters complex.

The second agreement between the state and Albertson's should stick, officials say, because this year the state got a better price for the site.

"This has to go before the Legislature and governor for approval ... but we don't see any problems," said Tom Baker, head of the department's northern Idaho operations. "We feel real good about the sale."

Man enters plea of innocent

BOISE (AP) — A Boise man accused of killing his niece in the heat of an argument has pleaded innocent in 4th District Court.

Judge Duff McKee Thursday scheduled Jacques Koenen to stand trial May 1. He is being held without bond in the Ada County Jail.

Koenen, charged with first-degree murder and use of a firearm in the commission of a felony, elected to proceed to trial by entering his plea.

The 53-year-old Dutch-born defendant waived his preliminary hearing last week. Ada County Deputy Public Defender Edward Odessey said his client was considering a plea-bargain agreement.

Prosecutors have offered a second-degree murder conviction with no promises of a reduced sentence.

He was arrested Dec. 10 after reporting that a woman had been injured in his apartment. The victim turned out to be his niece, Glenna May Fleck, 41, of Boise. An autopsy determined she died of pistol shots to the head and chest.

Cambron faces 8 more charges

BOISE (AP) — Sean Cambron, already charged with first-degree murder, has pleaded innocent in 4th District Court to eight additional criminal charges.

Judge Duff McKee set a trial date for June 5, about a month after the scheduled start of his murder trial.

The 18-year-old defendant is charged with four counts of second-degree burglary, one count of grand theft and three counts of petty theft. If convicted of all charges, he faces a maximum prison term of 37 years.

Cambron, a high school dropout, is accused of fatally shooting pregnant clerk Cheryl Hanrahan, 22, during a robbery attempt last November at a Boise convenience store.

Last U of I president candidate takes time to 'reflect, deliberate' on the job

BOISE (AP) — Even though she is the only remaining candidate for the job, the state Board of Education said it and Elisabeth Zinser both need time to "reflect and deliberate" on whether she will be the University of Idaho's next president.

"We're still with a candidate that we're in contact with and continuing the process of her becoming the president of the University of Idaho," board President Charles Grant said Friday after a four-hour interview with Zinser, who currently is vice chancellor for academic affairs at the University of North Carolina in Greensboro.

"No hurdle has come up yet that we can't get over," and board members would conduct a conference call in the next few days to prepare for "the next stage of talks," he said.

Finding someone to succeed Richard Gibb as president of the Moscow school has been anything but easy. Three of the four finalists for the position withdrew in the past week, including one during a final interview with the board on Thursday.

Board Executive Director Rayburn Barton denied in an interview with the Lewiston Tribune on Thursday that Ryan Amacher, a Clemson University dean, had dropped out of the competition. But the board confirmed on Friday that Amacher withdrew from consideration during his interview on Thursday, which Barton attended.

"Dr. Amacher did not indicate to me he was withdrawing," Barton told the Lewiston Tribune on Thursday. When asked Friday, he said Amacher "did not tell me that personally."

That left Zinser, 48, as the only candidate for the $81,000-a-year position Gibb is leaving June 30 to return to teaching.

Grant said Amacher, dean of the College of Commerce and Industry at Clemson University in South Carolina, was dissatisfied with the role he would play in Idaho's higher education system as university president. He also would have had to take a $17,000-a-year pay cut.

"He doesn't see himself fitting into the system that exists in this state," Grant said. "He felt there wouldn't be the freedom that he as an individual would want to express if he was the president of an institution."

Amacher and his wife checked out of their hotel after meeting with the board and traveled to Colorado for a two-week ski vacation. He later told the Idahoan newspaper in Moscow that the board had made a point of keeping him away from the media during his stay in Boise.

They've created a de facto chancellor system of higher education where the president answers to the board through the executive director, who directs the job evaluations, determines raises and judges your success," Amacher told the Idahoan Thursday. "That's fine if it works for the state, but it's not the job they advertised and it's not what I want to be."

Zinser also had some initial misgivings about the relationship between the board's executive director and the authority of the university's president. But Grant said talking with the board eased her fears.

"The discussions we had eliminated any concerns she had in those areas," he said.

Barton said the salary question did not come up during Friday's interview, but that it was among issues still to be discussed.

"She said she had to go home and hug her dog and think about it," he said.

Before accepting her job at North Carolina, Zinser was president of Gallaudet University in Washington, D.C., for five days last March.

She resigned from that position under pressure from faculty members, students and alumni at the college for the deaf who wanted a hearing-impaired president.

Panel considers 2 minimum wage bills

BOISE (AP) — The House State Affairs Committee will have its choice of two bills increasing the $2.30 per hour state minimum wage, although Democrats say they don't like the version introduced on Friday.

The Idaho Innkeepers Association prepared a bill approved for printing and introduction that sets the Idaho minimum wage at $3.35 per hour, the same as the federal minimum. But for employees receiving tips, it allows up to 40 percent of the minimum to be met by the tips.

Rep. James Stoicheff, D-Sandpoint, said that would allow employers to pay as little as $2.01 per hour, with the rest to be made up by tips.

"This is a step backwards," he said.

But Dave Hand, lobbyist for the innkeepers, said the need for a higher minimum wage is "more perceived than rent."

He said a survey of 27 establishments indicated only two pay tipped employees a base salary in the $2.45-$2.65 per hour range; most were $2.75 to $3.

"Do you really think $3 per hour is too much to pay a waitress, plus tips?" Stoicheff asked Hand.

Idaho's minimum wage has been $2.40 per hour since 1977. Rep. Gino White, D-Cataldo, failed last session to win Business Committee approval of a bill raising it to $3.

This year, State Affairs approved

Parks offers school funding option

BOISE (AP) — Rep. Raymond Parks is trying once again to push his proposal to change the base for local school financing from property taxes to income tax.

"Property tax is the most unpopular tax of all," the Blackfoot Republican told the House Revenue and Taxation Committee on Friday.

The committee voted printing and introduction of the Parks proposal.

A similar version last year won its way through the committee and the House approved it on a 46-5 vote three weeks before the end of the session. But in the Senate, it was sent to the Local Government and Taxation Committee and died there when the session adjourned.

Parks didn't get into details of his proposal Friday, but told committee members he would provide more information and testimony when it comes before the committee for final action.

He did say it was designed to keep the utility and corporation proportion of school financing about the same.

"This is landmark legislation. Interest in it is growing statewide, printing and introduction of White's proposal.

State Affairs Committee Chairman Pam Bengson, R-Boise, said both minimum wage proposals would be put before the committee at the same time.

The innkeepers' bill defines "tipped" employee as anyone regularly receiving at least $30 per month in tips. If a dispute arises between employer and employee on how much tip income a worker receives, it will be up to the employer to prove the worker's tip income.

Bush, lawmakers to discuss budget

ST. LOUIS (AP) — President Bush said Friday that fledgling talks with Congress on his $1.16 trillion spending plan are making progress and he will sit down with House and Senate leaders next week to push for "a quick and early resolution to this budget crisis."

The president said top Democrats and Republicans in Congress will come to the White House on Tuesday, the eve of Bush's departure on a five-day trip to Asia.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the session was intended to keep the momentum of budget talks going while Bush was out of the country.

Bush announced the conference with congressional leaders during a speech before students at Washington University, his third address in a week on the budget.

He got a warm reception in the university field house, though outside his motorcade encountered hundreds of demonstrators against his anti-abortion stance.

In his speech, Bush once again failed to offer a formula to produce the $9.6 billion to $11 billion in budget cuts needed to offset the cost of his commitments for new spending on domestic programs such as education, child care, the homeless and cleaning up the environment.

"There are certain priorities that demand attention," Bush said. "Yes, we can afford to increase spending — modestly, selectively but only after tough choices are made."

Democrats have complained that the president is taking credit for expanding social spending while making Congress take responsibility for finding ways to pay for it.

However, Bush gave an upbeat assessment of the budget talks, which are in their infancy, saying "We are making progress." Suggesting he would share responsibility with Congress, he said, "Together we've got to make the budget process work."

Many homeless as Kentucky floods persist

By The Associated Press

One town was an island and unknown number of people were homeless Friday in flood-stricken Kentucky, where several swollen rivers crested and began to recede, and sudden areas of Tennessee got a fifth consecutive day of rain.

Kentucky Gov. Wallace Wilkinson made another tour of flooded areas Friday and was expected to seek a federal disaster declaration to make the state eligible for federal assistance.

Tennessee Gov. Ned McWherter asked for similar relief Thursday.

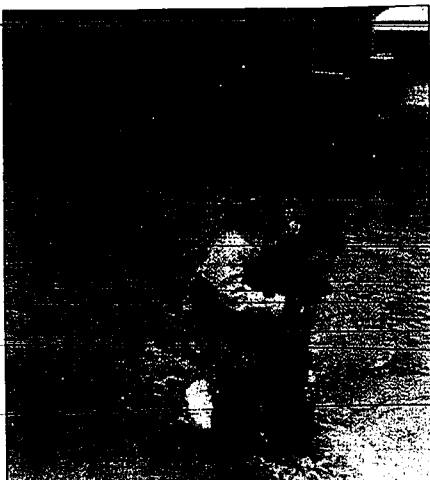

The two states have gotten a week of rain, more than 10 inches in some places, that flooded roads, closed schools and some businesses and claimed at least three lives.

While the region is part of the area affected by last summer's drought, Tennessee farmers worried that the heavy rain could harm their winter wheat crops, planted last fall for harvest this year.

The National Weather Service said several Kentucky streams had crested, although the Ohio River, which forms Kentucky's northern border, and the Green River in central Kentucky continued rising.

Mike Callahan, a weather service hydrologist, said the broad Ohio could force some river levels higher again when its high water backs up into lower streams.

Kentucky's capital city, Frankfort, got a break Friday when the Kentucky River finally stopped rising.

A Kentucky man carries his wife to a National Guard truck cresting 13.2 feet above flood stage at 44.2 feet.

Frankfort City Manager Ken Thompson said officials were still trying to determine how many people were left homeless by the flood, but there was no firm count because most evacuees moved in with friends or relatives. He said they were water in several hundred buildings in the city, but the state Capital complex was high and dry.

The city's civic center was packed with evacuees' furniture and other belongings.

The forecast was a chance of light snow or rain through Saturday, with temperatures dropping. Hardest hit in Kentucky was the tiny town of Boston, about 23 miles south of Louisville, which became an island Thursday when the last road into town was flooded. The Rolling Fork of the Salt River reached a record-topping 51.7 feet, well above flood stage of 35 feet.

Conditions in Boston won't improve significantly until the Ohio crests at Louisville, 23 miles north and allows the Salt River to begin draining, Callahan said Friday.

"We've got plenty of food. As long as nobody gets sick, we're all right," said Betty Vandiver, who has lived in Boston for 32 years.

Rain fell Friday for the fifth straight day in much of western and central Tennessee and more rain was forecast for Saturday.

Since Monday in Tennessee, Memphis had received 5.29 inches of rain, Jackson 5.24 inches and Nashville 5.30 inches.

High water overloaded Nashville's sewage system and raw waste was flowing toward the Cumberland River.

In flood-stricken Obion County, on Tennessee's northwestern corner, the Obion River was receding after breaking a levee Thursday unleashing 3 feet of water that forced 377 people from their homes in the towns of Obion and Rives.

Tower criticism rises; White House confident

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House on Friday expressed confidence in Defense Secretary-designate John Tower, despite increasing public criticism and new reports that Tower kept mistresses in Geneva during arms talks.

"I'm not worried," President Bush told reporters on a visit to St. Louis, although he declined to respond directly to questions about the latest allegations or a soon-to-be-released FBI report on the embattled nominee.

A White House spokesman, B.J. Cooper, said there was "no discussion whatsoever about any change in confidence in Senator Tower's nomination or that he will be confirmed."

But the ranking Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee, John Warner of Virginia, refused to assess Tower's chances "until the evidence is in."

Tower has been dogged by allegations of drinking and philandering. Many senators have said they are also concerned whether Tower could avoid conflicts of interest after receiving more than $1 million as a consultant for major defense contractors since he left the Senate four years ago.

Warner told an impromptu news conference that the panel has received additional material on Tower which it has forwarded to the White House. He described the material as "several letters" but refused to elaborate or discuss their contents.

The senator said he and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the panel, are sharing with the White House any material that "certain members might take... into consideration as they make their judgment." He said he and Nunn were available "whenever the White House wants to meet" to review the latest FBI report, which is expected early next week.

First lady celebrates black history with children

WASHINGTON (AP) — First lady Barbara Bush swayed, sang and won legions of young fans Friday as she participated in an elementary school assembly celebrating Black History Month.

"When I get home I'm going to scream and tell my mommy," said Bernice Graham, 8, a glee club member at Scott Montgomery Elementary School.

"We liked her very much. We want her to come back," said Monica Osgood, 10. "We hope she'll come back again with President Bush."

Montgomery, serving a low-income neighborhood dotted with dilapidated houses, empty lots and convenience stores, is part of a matching grant enrichment program for needy schools sponsored by the private Washington Parent Group Fund.

Mrs. Bush has belonged to the group for six years. "We know you are our friend," school principal Harriette Freeman told Mrs. Bush, citing her service in the parent group "long before you became Mrs. President. We are honored and we hope you will return to our school many times." Added the principal: "For 11 years I have told the boys and girls that what they do will someday be seen and heard around the world. This is the beginning."

Mrs. Bush's visit to the school was kept secret until right before the assembly. Students were not told in advance in order to keep scores of parents and neighbors from cramming the small auditorium and also "to cut down on the tension," said glee club director Frances Ball.

Federal judge reinstates INS rule for political asylum-seekers

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A federal judge on Friday reinstated an Immigration and Naturalization Service policy barring political asylum-seekers from traveling beyond the Rio Grande Valley while their applications are pending.

Justice Department officials still had not revealed a plan for sheltering the thousands of Central Americans to be held here under the restriction. A congressman has said the INS would set up a "tent-city" detention camp, but the agency said that was only one of several options under consideration.

The INS estimates, more than 100,000 Central Americans will pour into the area this year after crossing the Rio Grande illegally near Brownsville.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela on Jan. 9 blocked the INS from restricting the travel of asylum-seekers, after a group of immigration attorneys sued the INS over the procedure that was blamed for flooding the area with hundreds of homeless Central Americans.

Consumer groups say alcohol labeling rules are too lax

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer groups say temporary regulations governing the size and placement of warning labels to be printed on alcoholic beverage containers are too lax to ensure that people will notice them.

The federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms on Thursday published the rules on the warning labels, which Congress last year voted to require on alcoholic beverages sold in the United States starting next November.

The regulations say the print in the labels must be at least 2 millimeters high for containers larger than 8 ounces, and at least 1 millimeter for smaller containers.

Hostage's wife makes plea on anniversary

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wife of Marine Lt. Col. William R. Higgins, speaking on the anniversary of the U.N. officer's abduction in Lebanon, joined U.N. Secretary General Perez de Cuellar on Friday in a plea for her husband's release.

"Today is a special day. It is an anniversary. A year is an awful long time for someone who is serving with the United Nations, serving for the cause of peace and freedom, to be deprived of his," Robin Higgins said.

Mrs. Higgins, who has rarely commented publicly since her husband's abduction, spoke briefly with reporters after a speech by the secretary general.

She said she chose to speak out because of the length of his captivity.

Higgins, who commanded a 76-man U.N. observer group monitoring the Lebanon-Israel border, was taken hostage one year ago Friday.

In contrast to some other hostage families, Mrs. Higgins said she would refrain from traveling to the region in an attempt to gain her husband's release.

"I have often thought it would be nice to be in the same time zone with him, be in the same climate with him," she said, offering a slight smile.

"My only aim is to bring him home, and I don't think that (by) my going there it could be accomplished," she added.

New phone number for jail

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — On Monday, a painstaking gathering process will begin. Sixty-nine jail inmates scattered throughout the state will be brought together in a new, high-tech Twin Falls County jail.

They will be ushered individually through a sophisticated, computer-aided booking procedure at the new $3.4 million jail, Sheriff Jim Munn said.

He said the county will first transfer inmates it is holding in the old jail, get them situated and then start bringing in inmates who have been boarded in county jails throughout the state.

The whole process should take about two weeks, he said.

Munn said the jail's phone number will be changed to 734-0060. The sheriff's office phone number will not be changed, he said.

Former finance director dismisses allegation

By KEN ARMSTRONG
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Former City Finance Director Bruce Williams has denied allegations that he authorized employees to borrow public money without interest.

"I want to make it explicitly clear that I had no personal knowledge of such a practice occurring during my short tenure as finance director for the city, nor do I accept any responsibility for such a practice," Williams wrote in a letter to The Times-News.

'What's important to me is clearing my name. That's one of the things I pride myself on is being honorable.'

— Bruce Williams, former finance chief

On Jan. 31 The Times-News reported that between 1989 and 1991, the city maintained an apparently illegal practice whereby employees could use checks or IOUs to borrow money interest-free from city cash drawers. Finance department employees told police that two consecutive finance directors, Williams and Bryce King, authorized the practice and took advantage of it themselves.

Williams dismissed the allegations as an attempt to spread the blame around.

"It's unfortunate that people get themselves in tight spots and then don't have the gumption to step forward and say, 'I did it. I'm responsible for it,'" Williams said in a telephone interview. "That's ludicrous."

Williams, city manager of Steamboatville, Ohio, could not be located for comment when the original article was published. King, reached in Mesa, Ariz., denied knowing of the practice.

Williams was finance director from August 1989 to December 1991. He was succeeded by King, who left the job in September 1991.

Williams left to become city manager of Cottage Grove, Ore., and he took the Steamboatville job about 15 months ago, he said. Local family members mailed him a copy of the Jan. 31 article, he said.

"What's important to me is clearing my name," Williams said. "That's one of the things I pride myself on being honorable."

In his letter and in an interview Friday, Williams alluded to other

'Chemigation' proposal will cost farmers

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

BOISE — Proposed "chemigation" regulations may be costly, but not as costly as cleaning up an aquifer, said Senate Resources and Environment Chairman Laird Noh, R-Kimberly.

His Senate committee began discussion Friday of a bill that would require safety devices on irrigation systems farmers use to apply fertilizers, herbicides or pesticides.

Farmers would need licenses to apply the chemicals through a process known in farm lingo as chemigation.

Committee Vice Chairman Lynn Tominga, R-Rupert, estimated that the safety systems would cost from $700 to $1,500 per irrigation system if existing equipment such as pressure shut-off valves could be used. Starting from scratch would cost $2,500 to $3,500.

Farmers who do not comply with the act would be fined a minimum of $1,000 and could be fined as much as $25,000.

The fines are "an attempt at preventing contaminants from reaching the groundwater," said Mike Nugent of the Legislative Council, who helped draft the legislation.

"It's relatively easy to obtain a license, but if you chemigate without one, you're going to have to pay the piper."

The legislation is intended to protect the aquifer from contamination from pesticides or fertilizers if chemigation systems fail and the chemicals are sucked into wells.

The legislation would satisfy requirements of the federal Environmental Protection Agency. But the bill is also timely as farmers prepare to apply the chemical Dyston through chemigation this spring to fight an infestation of the Russian wheat aphid.

Farmers applying for $25 chemigation licenses would be required to certify that their systems meet state safety standards and that they have read and will follow state regulation regarding chemigation.

Annual license renewal would cost $5.

The Department of Agriculture could also require farmers to attend chemigation seminars.

Pesticide and fertilizer suppliers would also carry some of the burden for keeping the aquifers clean, under a provision that Noh says may be controversial. They would be required to tell customers about state regulations if they think the customers might use chemicals for chemigation. That potentially could give dealers a share of liability in case of contamination.

The chemigation regulations would be policed with at least 250 inspections of chemigation systems annually.

The Senate committee considered the proposed legislation Friday as the first of five bills designed to protect groundwater. Discussions will continue next week.

Hailey schools, parents adopt drug education plan

By KRISTAN WATKINS
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Wood River residents are fighting the drug problems here with an extensive program designed to educate people about drugs and prevent drug abuse among students.

Ray Grosvenor, chairman of a drug education committee organized by the School Board, told the board Wednesday the program "Here's looking at you 2000" is underway and being supported by parents, teachers and kids.

The program, which was purchased from the Comprehensive Health Education Foundation in Seattle, is designed to provide information specifically for each grade level. "We wanted to have a consistent program — a program that flowed from kindergarten through graduation," Grosvenor said.

The program includes different kits to use in each grade. Teachers were formally trained how to discuss and implement the program. The kindergarten kit for example, uses puppets and games to describe the dangers of drugs and how to deal with peer pressure. The 12th-grade kit has more sophisticated information, including the dangers of drinking and driving and fetal alcohol syndrome.

Grosvenor said the program is important for Hailey schools. "There is not a town in the country that doesn't have a drug problem," Grosvenor said.

The program also talks about chemical dependency as a disease and how to recognize problems at home, he said. "The program comes across with a strong 'no drug' message," he said.

The program is funded by a national grant, but a local parent organization, Families in Action, has kicked in $5,000 more. The national grant has allocated $10,000 so far.

In other business: Superintendent Phil Homer reviewed the accreditation rating report. It shows deficiencies at Carey school which Homer said "doesn't accurately reflect the Carey school."

"The board adopted a long-term substitute teacher policy. It specifies different pay levels for different experience levels of substitute teachers.

"The committee formed to study population trends in the valley will meet on Feb. 23. There is growing concern among School Board members that current facilities will not accommodate the rate of growth in the Wood River Valley.

Local songs for Centennial to be cooperative effort

By KRISTAN WATKINS
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Songs reflecting Idaho's history and local heritage will be available later this year, thanks to the cooperative efforts of Blaine and Camas counties' Centennial committees.

As part of the Centennial celebration, Blaine and Camas counties have pooled their resources and are producing an audio cassette featuring the Boulder Brothers. A local folk group here in the Wood River Valley.

The project recently was awarded a $2,000 grant from the state's Centennial organization. Blaine County's committee has already given the project $1,000 and local efforts hope to produce another $1,500.

"This cooperative effort between two counties is the kind of thing we like to see," said Kathryn Keen-Hoene, local projects coordinator for the committee.

To qualify for the $2,000 grant, two counties must work together on the project, Keen-Hoene said. "We're trying to get away from the regionalism that has been part of Idaho's past," she said. "We're trying to bring this large state together," she said.

The Boulder Brothers, a five-member local band, has donated 150 hours of its time for the project. Sun Valley Audio has also donated time to produce the tape. The songs' themes will include hunting and fishing, working cowboys and will be mostly county western and folk.

Blaine County Centennial Chairwoman Wendy Jaquet said the project will tie together other Centennial happenings around the two counties. "The Boulder Brothers will be making appearances at events like Wagon Days and the Camas County 4th of July celebration," said Jaquet. She also said tapes will be for sale at those events as well as retail outlets.

Jaquet said the Boulder Brothers tape will have 10-12 songs. Plans are to produce 1,000 tapes, then more if they sell well. Proceeds from the sales will go to the Blaine County Museum and the Camas County Information Cache.

The official statewide centennial kickoff will be Jan. 9, 1990, when the U.S. Postal Service unveils an Idaho postal stamp. County kickoffs will be different all over the state, Keen-Hoene said.

"Each county has its own tie in and local event to kick off the celebration," she said.

County commissioners bounce hospital budget amendment right back to board for decision

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The county hospital's budget amendment has come full circle, landing right back in the hospital's lap.

Idaho District Judge Daniel Harburt ruled Thursday that the budget amendment, rejected by the county commissioners, did not fall under the county's jurisdiction, leaving the decision to the county commissioners who had passed it to him in the first place.

The county remains open, reports, but will have to work Friday after several days of a meeting in Boise, promptly landing the case back to the hospital.

After meeting with County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter, the commissioners sent a letter to hospital officials, asking them what they will do next — and giving them seven days to decide.

"We'll have it in their park and go from there," said County Commission Chairman Marvin Hempleman. Baxter said the hospital had asked the county commissioners only to "pass a resolution to seek judicial authority to pass the amendment, which the commissioners did," Harburt, however, rejected the request.

Because it is the hospital that is requesting the change, now they have to decide what they want to do, Baxter explained.

The hospital needs the budget amendment in order to continue with plans to build a cancer treatment center, purchase a magnetic resonance imaging system and replace worn-out equipment.

Until now the hospital has never recorded in its budget how much money it spends on capital equipment and improvements. Nor has it formally budgeted the reserve funds that will help pay for the projects.

Only recently did officials learn they must budget the expenditures. Unless the budget amendment is approved, the cancer center and other projects must wait until the next fiscal year begins in October.

What steps will come next for the amendment are unclear.

"Anything's possible, I guess," Hempleman said Friday afternoon. A hearing before the county commissioners is a good possibility, he noted.

Hospital administrators were out of town at a training session Friday and could not be reached for comment.

But Kent Taylor, the Hospital Board's attorney, said, "I think we still have the alternatives the judge alluded to in his opinion." Taylor had said Thursday he thought Harburt's decision left two more avenues for getting the hospital's budget amendment.

One state law allows the county commissioners to amend department budgets in emergencies. Another law allows budgets to be amended to include "unscheduled revenue from federal and the state government."

Harburt referred to the "unscheduled revenue" clause and wrote, "While the surplus here was not received from the government, it appears to fall under the policy of the Legislature to have county budgets accurately reflect all county funds on hand."

"We'll have to take a closer look at the two alternatives and see if they do apply to us," Taylor said.

James Watt keeps hard environmental line

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Former Interior Secretary James Watt says the nation and its legal profession are faced with a battle over whether morality is relative or subject to absolute standards of right and wrong.

Watt, who served as interior chief under President Reagan for three years before being forced to resign over his controversial wilderness policies, told students at Mormon Church Brigham Young University that they had a special responsibility on the battlefield of ethics.

"We're faced with a battle between those who believe morality is based on absolutes and those who believe in situational ethics," Watt told the Public Lands Conference Friday.

"Those of us with a religious background, and I am an evangelical Christian, believe the absolutes come from the one true God," he added, noting that many students in universities today believe that truth is relative.

Harkening back to his days as interior secretary, Watt said he and former U.S. Solicitor General Rex Lee, now a BYU law professor, went to Washington to get back on-track a federal government that they felt had gone astray.

Lee's legal power became essential to Watt's land use policies, Watt said, along with the president's appointments to all levels of the judiciary.

"Judges became central to the program. You have to understand what kind of judge will take this kind of case, who is going to be the next U.S. Supreme Court judge, and who will fill the hundreds of other judicial posts in the country," Watt said.

"We made a tremendous impact because the courts are being used to make public policy," he added. "Lee and I went to Washington to bring about a crusade... we moved in a very aggressive fashion and I made the legal arm of the Department of Interior a critical part of public policy."

Watt, who came under fire from environmentalists for his wilderness policies, maintained that he actually was a friend of wilderness, designing 1 million more acres in his three years in office than the Carter Administration did.

Earlier Friday, an administrative assistant to Rep. Wayne Owens, D-Utah, says the Central Utah Project is one of the most environmentally unsound developments ever planned in the United States.

However, Kenley Brunsdale told participants at conference that the $2 billion water project has been scaled back and is beginning to take new direction.

He said there is a vocal and growing contingent of people who are concerned with environmental issues surrounding CUP, including 180 members of the House of Representatives.

Brunsdale said the goal is to bring all those diverse organizations together and to develop a project that is more environmentally acceptable.

The current price tag for finishing the project has been brought down from $750 million to $350 million.

In other matters, Clay Parr, a Salt Lake attorney who represents public land users, decried the amount of time it takes for the federal Bureau of Land Management to approve permits for mineral development, oil and gas leases, recreation and other land uses.

And Roland G. Robison, deputy director of the BLM, strongly criticized congressmen who are introducing bills on the designation of wilderness lands in Utah before the BLM has completed its studies.

"It is a mistake to have these bills introduced before our study is completed," he said. "I don't know how they can go ahead."

JAMES WATT Speaks out on environment

Law enforcement conference will focus on Ted Bundy

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Law-enforcement authorities from around the country will meet next week in Quantico to discuss information provided by serial killer Ted Bundy before his execution in January, FBI officials said Friday.

The FBI will hold the conference at the National Center for the Analysis of Violent Crime, although the exact day was not specified.

"One of the agents was with Bundy prior to his death and will be sharing that information with law-enforcement officials," FBI spokesman Bill Carter said Friday in a telephone interview from his Washington, D.C. office. "We have invited police officers from all over the country."

An FBI statement said the conference was being coordinated among all interested law-enforcement agencies that had been involved in meetings with Bundy before his Jan. 24 execution in Florida's electric chair for the brutal 1978 slaying of sixth-grader Kimberly Diane Leach of Lake City, Fla.

"The object is to further analyze the information supplied by Bundy," the statement said.

Officials said a joint statement might be released at the end of the conference.

"The conference had been planned for quite some time to get a resolution on some of the cases that might be out there," Carter said. "It's to share information, compare notes."

Law-enforcement officials from Colorado, Idaho, Utah and Washington state met with Bundy at the Florida State Prison during his final days. Carter said Special Agent William Hagmire, who is assigned to the center, was present at Bundy's request at the interviews, in which Bundy confessed to the slayings of 23 women in four states, including 11 in Washington state.

Some investigators, however, have said they think Bundy actually killed 100 or more women.

Hagmire will be discussing Bundy's statements with other officials, Carter said. Hag-mire had interviewed Bundy several times in the past as part of the center's research into serial violence, he said.

Through interviews with criminals such as Bundy, agents at the Quantico center have been able to come up with a profile of serial criminals, Carter said.

"They can actually give a psychological profile," Carter said. "It's been helpful to pass this information on to other law-enforcement agencies that have unsolved serial murders in their jurisdictions."

Carter said that in the past, officials working from specific crimes have been able to come up with extremely accurate profiles of the criminals. He said the specifics include age, marital status, race and occupation of the criminals.

"Previously, law-enforcement agencies had to rely on academics, and they weren't really set up to handle it," he said. "We have agents who are trained in this. It's a resource that law-enforcement agencies can utilize in solving murders, rapes, and child molestation in their areas."

Carter did not have details on which day the conference would be held or how many law-enforcement officials would attend. FBI officials in Quantico did not immediately return telephone calls from The Associated Press.

Gondola route irks town residents

WARDNER (AP) — Residents of this tiny community are upset at the thought of skiers and sightseers riding over their homes in a $13 million gondola the neighboring city of Kellogg plans to start building in May.

"I was pretty unhappy," said John Matthews, 77, after he recently found a surveying stake marked "Tower 16" next to his flower garden.

Without consulting their neighbors, Kellogg city leaders decided the best route for the gondola would be through the center of Wardner, a community of about 100 homes in a gulch above Kellogg.

In recent weeks, surveyors have driven stakes in people's yards, and several months ago workers painted a white line to mark the gondola's route over the only through street in Wardner. The gondola will go from a site near Interstate 90 to Silverhorn ski area.

Many of the residents are elderly people who have lived in their homes for decades. They fear they'll lose their privacy when gondola cars start cruising past their windows, or that they'll be forced to sell their homes.

"Wardner is a city of its own, and they can't stop on us," said Mary Lou Peterson whose husband is a former mayor.

Kellogg officials have apologized for surveyors traipsing unannounced through Wardner, and residents have been told that no one will be forced to leave his home.

Kellogg is seeking to buy "aerial easements" from property owners in the path of the gondola.

Lowell Hatfield, another property owner, said he's contacted a lawyer to determine whether Kellogg's right of eminent domain extends into Wardner, which would allow the city to purchase properties at fair market value regardless of whether the owner wants to sell.

Navajo leadership still bone of contention

WINDOW ROCK, Ariz. (AP) — Leadership of the nation's largest Indian tribe became more unclear Friday as Navajo Tribal Chairman Peter MacDonald announced he had reconsidered and wasn't taking paid administrative leave after all.

But MacDonald, who had capped a long day's contention by saying Thursday night he was taking the leave, wasn't present as members of the tribal council returned to their assembly room Friday afternoon.

And Vice Chairman Johnny Thompson, who had argued that Navajo regulations made him acting chairman when MacDonald wasn't filling the position, entered the chamber with the council which had rejected that argument the previous evening.

The council subsequently had approved a resolution appointing a chairman and vice chairman pro tem for the duration of its winter meeting despite some contention that such an action required a two-thirds majority vote rather than the simple majority by which it was approved.

The status of these interim officials — chairman pro tem Marshall Plummer of Coyote Canyon, N.M., and vice chairman pro tem Irwin Billy of Tuba City — remained unclear as the council resumed its winter meeting, normally a session that lasts several days even without the time-consuming debate surrounding MacDonald's chairmanship.

Plummer and Billy presided over the Friday session, which included discussion with tribal Attorney General Michael Ushaw. The council met for approximately 90 minutes before beginning a closed executive session.

Ushaw said the council had to resolve questions regarding it should have done prior to MacDonald's announcement he was taking administrative leave and whether or not the council was following tribal code in its actions after MacDonald's announcement.

Tribal spokeswoman Tazuhali McCullah said Friday the council's action Thursday night and any other moves made after MacDonald's leave of absence statement were meaningless and without validity. She gave no immediate rationale for her statement.

Also unclear was Ushaw's status — whether Councilmember Donald Be-nally of Shiprock, N.M., said Friday had been suspended by a 38-13 vote with 16 members abstaining.

However, Ushaw said that action only applied to certain items on the council agenda. Also, Ushaw's suspension was among the actions Ma-

McCullah said were invalid, however. Some council delegates have called on MacDonald to step down in the wake of a U.S. Senate Select Committee investigation of corruption on reservations.

Ethiopian army officer to discuss his country, Marxist dominator

TWIN FALLS — Col. Solomon Belete of Ethiopia will talk about "How the Marxists Are Destroying Ethiopia" at 7:30 tonight in Room 117-118 of the CSI Shields building.

A graduate of Haile Selassie University, Belete served in his country's armed forces for 20 years. He fled Ethiopia in 1977.

Belete currently is active in the Ethiopian resistance effort. His appearance is sponsored by the Larry McDonald Crusade to Stop Financing Communism, said Adrian Arp, Twin Falls.

There is no charge and the public is invited.

'Mardi Gras '89' kicks off in high style

MOSCOW (AP) — The Bellhop Mardi Gras Ball at the Compton Union Building on the Washington State University campus Friday night kicked off the 11th annual Mardi Gras celebration.

This year's "Mardi Gras '89" was expanded to two days, and Pullman is included in the carnival festivities. But the centerpiece of the two-day celebration remains the parade, which was scheduled Saturday morning in downtown Moscow.

In addition to the giant paper-sculpture floats designed and built by University of Idaho art students, dozens of marching groups were scheduled to appear.

Among them was the popular briefcase-carrying, briefcase UH low school students, the newest entrant, "Louisiana Lech and the Fancy Strutters"; a variety of local bands; children, pets and some last-minute surprises.

"We promise fun and entertainment for the entire family," Mardi Gras board member Mike Hebling said Friday. "We have 83 entries so far and a record-breaking 32 floats."

To add to the carnival atmosphere, officials planned to hand out bags of confetti to children along the parade route.

Boise mayor pleads for Idaho unity

POCATELLO (AP) — Boise Mayor Dirk Kempthorne says Idahoans need to recognize that they are not just North Idaho, Southeast Idaho or Southwest Idaho, but that together, they are Idaho.

"We all wear the same colored jersey. We are all part of a team and the sooner we recognize that, the sooner this state will enjoy the great promise we are all individually aware it possesses... we can't pit one region against another," he said.

Kempthorne, mentioned as a potential gubernatorial candidate in 1990, was the keynote speaker at the East Idaho Lincoln Day celebration at the Quality Inn Thursday night.

Pocatello City Council President David Jones introduced Kempthorne, who was recently named Idaho's citizen of the year by the Idaho Statesman.

"He has been one of the fastest-rising stars in the Republican Party and he has the potential to be the next governor in this state," Jones said.

Although his speech held numerous political overtones, Kempthorne stopped short of committing to a run for the governor's seat in 1990.

"I honestly don't know what my plans are," he said. "This is the fourth year of my first term in office and so right now my attention is focused on Boise."

"While I feel good about many things that we've accomplished in Boise, there are still a lot of things I'd like to accomplish," he added.

Kempthorne, who has been hailed for his progressive efforts in rejuvenating Idaho's capital city, said his purpose in accepting invitations to speak around the state is to get Idahoans to feel good about the progress being made in Boise.

questionable practices that he said were corrected during his time as finance director, but he refused to provide specific details.

"A tremendous amount of work went into correcting many significant departures from acceptable accounting practices," he wrote. "I do not care to discuss these, as there is no reason to publicly embarrass those who were involved."

While employees were not allowed to borrow money, Williams wrote that he was aware of "certain instances where city employees would write checks to the city of cash or for their personal utility bills. On occasion these checks were returned NSF and were held until the employees had sufficient funds in their account to cover them."

Williams said the same procedure was generally followed for utility customers who weren't city employees.

ISU enjoys enrollment jump since spring

POCATELLO (AP) — Idaho State University's academic enrollment has jumped 17.3 percent since the 1988 spring semester, partially due to the success of a statewide substance abuse program, ISU Registrar Darold Chambers says.

The substance abuse education program is offered through ISU's Department of Physical Education and Health Education to all Idaho school districts.

Currently, 732 Idaho educators are using the program and earning college credit.

Overall, Idaho State University has 7,380 students enrolled for academic credit this semester, compared with 6,233 last spring semester.

Conservative Episcopalians still protest female bishop election

BOSTON (AP) — A conservative Episcopal group on Thursday renewed efforts to muster resistance to female priests with a full-page newspaper ad less than a week after the 450-year-old church ordained its first woman bishop.

"Episcopalians! Do Something," trumpeted the advertisement in the Boston Herald, a daily newspaper in the diocese that consecrated Bishop Barbara C. Harris.

Sponsors said the ads will run elsewhere in the country this spring. Boston was the logical place as it is the home of Canon Brian Kolker of the Fort Worth, Texas-based Evangelical and Catholic Mission, which is behind the ad campaign.

Kolker said it is unlikely the Episcopal Church will reverse its 10-year policy of allowing women into the priesthood. He said a Synod, or council, the mission is organizing to be held this June is intended to "find a way to allow ourselves to live and breathe within the Episcopal Church. Whether the official channels of the Episcopal Church will tolerate that, I think that's really a great question right now."

The ad asks readers to sign and return to the group a "declaration of common faith and purpose."

Kolker said mission members believe that biblical teachings portray the church as a family with a man, or husband, as the head.

"These are strong Bible images that we really think can't be overturned," he said. "It really has nothing to do with equal rights."

It was the latest dose of discord since Harris was elected last September, a position that gave her entry into an apostolic succession the church traces back to the time of Jesus.

At Harris' consecration as suffragan, or assistant, bishop, two men spoke against the ordination, including one who turned it over to her. But the congregation of about 8,000 rejected its approval when asked if it was their will that she be ordained.

The 58-year-old black Episcopal priest from Philadelphia had been criticized for being a woman, being divorced, lacking formal seminary degrees and having served as publisher of the liberal Episcopal publication "The Witness."

Byron Rushing, an Episcopalian and state representative who is a friend of Harris, said the advertisement was a surprise.

"This organization has been beating up on the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. and has sent up on Barbara when she was executive director of that company," he said.

Gorbachev asks Bush to assist in ending Afghanistan fighting

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has appealed personally to President Bush to help bring peace to Afghanistan now that the Red Army has withdrawn, a top Kremlin diplomat said Friday.

Both the diplomat and a Soviet general acknowledged at a news conference that the Soviets are worried about continued bloodshed in Afghanistan, but rejected any parallel between their pullout and the 1973 withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam.

"The Americans simply fled and abandoned everything when they left Vietnam," said Gen. Valentin I. Varennikov, deputy defense minister and chief of Soviet ground forces. "We did not abandon anything. We were not in a rush."

Alexander A. Bessmertnykh, Soviet first deputy foreign minister, said an "individual message" from Gorbachev to Bush seeks U.S. backing for Kremlin suggestions on how to achieve a political settlement in Afghanistan, including a halt in arms supplies to the U.S.-backed insurgents and the establishment of a border-based government. "We are proposing that we assist in a cease-fire," said Bessmertnykh, referring to the joint superpower action sought by Gorbachev. "We consider that the United States and the Soviet Union can always play a positive role."

In what appeared to be a wide-ranging Kremlin effort to prevent the violent overthrow of the pro-Moscow government of President Najib, the Soviets also sent messages to France, Britain, West Germany and Italy asking them to give humanitarian and economic assistance to Afghanistan, Bessmertnykh said.

Messages were also sent to China, Iran and Pakistan, which have given weapons and other support to the guerrillas.

Western diplomats and the insurgents have predicted Najib's government will fall soon now that the Soviets are gone. The last of the Red Army's 115,000 soldiers that had been stationed there returned home Wednesday.

Bessmertnykh said the withdrawal had created an "extraordinary opportunity" to end Afghanistan's nearly 11-year-old civil war, sparked by the April 1978 coup in which the Marxist People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan seized power. The Soviets sent tanks and troops in the following year.

"We believe all countries should respond to the emerging opportunity to put an end to the drawn-out conflict by promoting the complete and fair settlement of the situation and the reinstatement of Afghanistan as a prosperous, strong, independent, neutral and non-aligned nation," Bessmertnykh said.

The message to Bush from Gorbachev was delivered to the White House on Friday by Soviet Ambassador Yuri Dubinin, said Bush press secretary Martin Fitzwater. Bush, who was in St. Louis at the time, did not have a chance to read the full letter, Fitzwater said.

Fitzwater said the message from Gorbachev "generally repeats their public position."

Fitzwater said he did not want to be more specific about the contents.

Najib says his people need aid, not weapons

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — President Najib said Friday the people of Afghanistan need sympathy and economic aid, not guns, and appealed to the United States to stop arming Moslem guerrillas.

He declared himself "completely ready" to return vast stores of sophisticated weapons left behind by departing Soviet troops if the 11-year-old civil war ended.

Kabul radio said guerrillas fired rockets into the cities of Kandahar, Herat and Jalalabad, killing two people and wounding four. The day before, it reported 12 people killed by rockets in Kabul and Ghazni.

Government soldiers killed 35 guerrillas Parwan and Kandahar provinces, the radio said.

At U.N. headquarters in New York, the Soviet Union urged the United Nations to arrange a cease-fire and put pressure on the United States to stop arming the insurgents.

Najib said he had sent emissaries to Rome to talk with former King Zahir Shah, who was overthrown in 1973, and his government had been in touch with the guerrillas. He did not elaborate.

Yuli Vorontsov, Soviet deputy foreign minister, gave a similar report at a news conference in New Delhi, where he held talks with Indian officials aimed at ending the war.

In an interview with NBC News, Najib said in English: "I want to give a message to the people of the United States of America and the message is very simple, since it emanates from the hearts of the long-suffering people of my country after a decade of horrible and devastating war."

"We have had enough war and bloodshed. I think now is the time to heal the wounds, to construct our ruined country."

He conducted most of the interview in his native Dari through an interpreter.

They predict his Marxist government will fall quickly without the support of Soviet military forces. Najib, 43, said in the interview: "The last Soviet soldier has left Afghanistan and there should be no further reason for the United States or any other country to supply weapons to the opposition."

"What the people of Afghanistan need is more sympathy and economic assistance, not more arms and guns."

Bush said Thursday the United States would continue supplying weapons to the guerrillas because the Soviets still were arming Afghan government forces.

Balloonist gives up on flight

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese balloonist Fumio Niwa is giving up his attempt to cross the Pacific Ocean alone because of uncooperative winds, and he plans to bring his craft down on the sea, officials said Friday.

Project spokesman Ren Kato said an airplane would determine Niwa's location early Saturday, and that Niwa then planned to bring his giant orange-and-blue balloon down to wait for a ship to pick him up.

Niwa lifted off early Wednesday from his hometown of Yokohama with the goal of becoming the first person to travel 5,000 miles across the ocean alone in a balloon.

But the flight was frustrated from the start by winds that blew to the north rather than to California, where Niwa had hoped to land on Sunday.

On Friday, his craft floated 4.4 miles above the Pacific about 1,450 miles southeast of Tokyo, Kato said.

Kato said waves in the area were estimated at 20 feet in height, and that Niwa might not be able to bring down the craft until they subsided. Although the six-foot plastic gondola carrying Niwa can float, high waves would batter it and possibly hide it from rescuers, Kato said.

Japanese marine officials said no boats were in the area and that a coast guard ship would not arrive until Sunday night.

Conservative Episcopalians still protest female bishop election

BOSTON (AP) — A conservative Episcopal group on Thursday renewed efforts to muster resistance to female priests with a full-page newspaper ad less than a week after the 450-year-old church ordained its first woman bishop.

"Episcopalians! Do Something," trumpeted the advertisement in the Boston Herald, a daily newspaper in the diocese that consecrated Bishop Barbara C. Harris.

Sponsors said the ads will run elsewhere in the country this spring. Boston was "an logical place as you to begin," said Canon Brian Koehler of the Fort Worth, Texas-based Evangelical and Catholic Mission, Koehler said it is unlikely the Episcopal Church will reverse its 10-year policy of allowing women into the priesthood. He said a Synod, or council, the mission is organizing to be held this June is intended to find a way to allow ourselves to live and breathe within the Episcopal Church. Whether the official channels of the Episcopal Church will tolerate that, I think that's really a great question right now."

The ad asks readers to sign and return to the group a "declaration of common faith and purpose."
Koehler said mission members believe that biblical teachings portray the church as a family with the man, or husband, as the head.

"Those are strong Bible images that we really think can't be overturned," he said. "It really has nothing to do with equal rights."

It was the latest protest of discord since Harris was elected last September, a position that gave her entry into an apostolic succession the church traces back to the time of Jesus.

At Harris' consecration as suffragan, or assistant, bishop, two men spoke against the ordination, including one who termed it sacrilege. But the congregation of about 8,000 men also applauded when asked if it was their will that she be ordained.

The 58-year-old black Episcopal priest from Philadelphia had been criticized for being a woman, being divorced, lacking formal seminary degrees and having served as publisher of the liberal Episcopal publication "The Witness."

Byron Rushing, an Episcopalian and state representative who is a friend of Harris', said the advertisement wasn't a surprise.

"This organization has been beating up on the Episcopal Church Publishing Co. and beat up on Barbara when she was executive director of that company," he said.

Gorbachev asks Bush to assist in ending Afghanistan fighting

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev has appealed personally to President Bush to help bring peace to Afghanistan now that the Red Army has withdrawn a top Kremlin diplomat said Friday.

Both the diplomat and a Soviet general acknowledged at a news conference that the Soviets are worried about continued bloodshed in Afghanistan, but rejected any parallels between their pullout and the 1973 withdrawal of U.S. troops from Vietnam.

The Americans simply fled and abandoned everything when they left Vietnam," said Gen. Valentin I. Yaronnikov, deputy defense minister and chief of Soviet ground forces. "We did not abandon anything. We were not in a rush."

Alexander A. Bessmertnykh, Soviet first deputy foreign minister, said an "individual message" from Gorbachev to Bush seeks U.S. backing for Kremlin suggestions on how to achieve a political settlement in Afghanistan, including a halt in arms supplies to the U.S.-backed insurgents and the establishment of a broader-based government. "We are proposing that we assist in a cease-fire," said Bessmertnykh, referring to the joint superpower action sought by Gorbachev. "We consider that the United States and the Soviet Union can always play a positive role."

In what appeared to be a wide-ranging Kremlin effort to prevent the violent overthrow of the pro-Moscow government of President Najib, the Soviets also sent messages to France, Britain, West Germany and Italy asking them to give humanitarian and economic assistance to Afghanistan, Bessmertnykh said.

Messages were also sent to China, Iran and Pakistan, which have given weapons and other support to the guerrillas.

Western diplomats and the insurgents have predicted Najib's government will fall soon now that the Soviets are gone. The last of the Red Army's 115,000 soldiers that had been stationed there returned home Wednesday.

Bessmertnykh said the withdrawal had created an "extraordinary opportunity" to end Afghanistan's nearly 11-year-old civil war, sparked by the April 1978 coup in which the Marxist People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan seized power. The Soviets sent tanks and troops in the following year.

"We believe all countries should respond to the emerging opportunity to put an end to the drawn-out conflict by promoting the complete and fast settlement of the situation and the reinstatement of Afghanistan as a prosperous, strong, independent, neutral and non-aligned nation," Bessmertnykh said.

The message to Bush from Gorbachev was delivered to the White House on Friday by Soviet Ambassador Yuri Dubinin, said Bush press secretary Marlin Fitzwater. Bush, who was in St. Louis at the time, did not have a chance to read the full letter, Fitzwater said.

Fitzwater said the message from Gorbachev "generally repeats their public position."

Fitzwater said he did not want to be more specific about the contents.

Najib says his people need aid, not weapons

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — President Najib said Friday the people of Afghanistan need sympathy and economic aid, not guns, and appealed to the United States to stop arming Muslim guerrillas.

He declared himself "completely ready" to return vast stores of sophisticated weapons left behind by departing Soviet troops if the 11-year-old civil war ended.

Kabul radio said guerrillas fired rockets into the cities of Kandahar, Herat and Jalalabad, killing two people and wounding four. The day before, it reported 12 people killed by rockets in Kabul and Ghazni.

Government soldiers killed 35 guerrillas Parwan and Kandahar provinces, the radio said.

At U.N. headquarters in New York, the Soviet Union urged the United Nations to arrange a cease-fire and put pressure on the United States to stop arming the insurgents.

Najib said he had sent emissaries to Rome to talk with former King Zahir Shah, who was overthrown in 1973, and his government had been in touch with the guerrillas. He did not elaborate.

Yuli Vorontsov, Soviet deputy foreign minister, gave a similar report at a news conference in New Delhi, where he held talks with Indian officials aimed at ending the war.

In an interview with NBC News, Najib said in English: "I want to give a message to the people of the United States of America and the message is very simple, since it emanates from the hearts of the long-suffering people of my country after a decade of horrible and devastating war."

"We have had enough war and bloodshed. I think now is the time to heal the wounds, to construct our ruined country."

He conducted most of the interview in his native Dari through an interpreter.

He said, "They predict his Marxist government will fall quickly without the support of Soviet military forces."

Najib, 43, said in the interview: "The last Soviet soldier has left Afghanistan and there should be no further reason for the United States or any other country to supply weapons to the opposition."

"What the people of Afghanistan need is more sympathy and economic assistance, not more arms and guns."

Bush said Thursday the United States would continue supplying weapons to the guerrillas because the Soviets still were arming Afghan government forces.

Balloonist gives up on flight

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese balloonist Fumio Niwa is giving up his attempt to cross the Pacific Ocean alone because of uncooperative winds, and he plans to bring his craft down on the sea, officials said Friday.

Project spokesman Ren Kato said an airplane would determine Niwa's location early Saturday, and that Niwa then planned to bring his giant orange-and-blue balloon down to wait for a ship to pick him up.

Niwa lifted off early Wednesday from his hometown of Yokohama with the goal of becoming the first person to travel 5,000 miles across the ocean alone in a balloon.

But the flight was frustrated from the start by winds that blew to the north rather than to California, where Niwa had hoped to land on Sunday.

On Friday, his craft floated 4.4 miles above the Pacific about 1,450 miles southeast of Tokyo, Kato said.

Kato said waves in the area were estimated at 20 feet in height, and that Niwa might not be able to bring down the craft until they subsided. Although the six-foot plastic gondola carrying Niwa can float, high waves would batter it and possibly hide it from rescuers, Kato said.

Japanese marine officials said no boats were in the area and that a coast guard ship would not arrive until Sunday night.

Peter O'Toole says he hasn't changed since 1962 movie

NEW YORK (AP) — Peter O'Toole says he doesn't think he has changed much since "Lawrence of Arabia" made him an overnight star in 1962. "My hair is a slightly different color," the 56-year-old actor says in an interview in the March 6 issue of Us magazine. "People who haven't seen me for a long time tell me I haven't changed physically."

"And inside I don't feel any different from when I was quite a young fellow."

O'Toole said he has no regrets about the ups and downs in his life, not even his drinking days.

"I wouldn't have missed one drop of alcohol that I drank," he said, noting that most of his drinking buddies — Richard Burton, Peter Finch and Robert Shaw — are dead.

"The risks we took, the life we led. Sadly that's all over," he said. "My

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) —

Ole Opry star Porter Wagoner donned a cap and gown instead of his trademark rhinestone outfits for an appearance this week.

Wagoner, Dolly Parton's former duet partner, was guest speaker Wednesday at a ceremony for 21 graduates of the McGavock High School general education development degree program for people who have dropped out of school.

"I told them that it was such a great compliment to themselves that they had the internal discipline to go back and get their diploma after they were already in the workplace," Wagoner said Thursday.

"I wore a cap and gown and it was a really exciting thing for me to do," he said.

Baseball legend Leo "The Lip" Durocher remained in serious but stable condition Friday, recovering from injuries suffered in a traffic accident.

Durocher, 83, a fiery manager who led three New York teams to the World Series, suffered head lacerations Wednesday when his car struck another vehicle that turned in front of him, said Detective Terry Robinson. The other driver, not identified, also was injured.

Susan Pond, a nursing supervisor at Desert Hospital, described Durocher's injuries as serious but said his condition had stabilized. She would not elaborate.

Koch's voice helps Sanitation Department.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Big Apple's Mayor Ed Koch loves to talk and his voice is rarely drowned out, but in some cases he just isn't loud enough.

The city Sanitation Department has been using a recording of the mayor on its trucks to get motorists to move illegally parked cars, but says the tape just didn't have enough volume.

So it was adjusted in a sound studio and now booms loudly enough to summon even drivers who are in a store.

"This is Ed Koch, your mayor," the recording bellows. "You know—the Sanitation Department can't sweep the street if you don't move your illegally parked car. 'Puh-lease! Get it out of here!'"

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — The picture of a father waiting on the coffin of his son who was killed in the Armenian earthquake won the annual World Press Photo award for American David C. Turnley, it was announced Friday.

Associated Press, won the first prize in the People in the News category with a picture of the Soviet Politburo voting President Andrei Gromyko out of office.

The Armenian earthquake and other natural disasters, such as the floods that hit Bangladesh, dominated 1988's crop of top press photos, according to John G. Morris, European correspondent for the National Geographic and chairman of the nine-member jury.

However, "With wars on the wane, the look of the world is becoming less tragic," Morris said during the presentation of the winning pictures.

Turnley will receive $2,500 with the award, which has been awarded annually since 1955.

Other winners included West Germany's Martin Fueger of the DPA news agency, whose picture of the collision of two Italian stunt planes during an air show in Ramstein, West Germany, earned him the top slot in the Spot News category.

In the Sports category, American photographer Brian Smith of the Agence France Presse won a first prize with an action picture of Greg Louganis, a U.S. diver who hit his head on the diving board during the Olympics in Seoul.

Cab Calloway tries new therapy after surgery: watching race horses

NEW YORK (AP) — Cab Calloway, just out of the hospital after treatment for complications from abdominal surgery, has developed a new course of therapy: the race course.

Calloway, the 81-year-old big-band leader who popularized the song "Minnie the Moocher," stayed home a few days upon his release from White Plains Hospital, but his long-time love — the racetrack — beckoned.

"He got up early this morning, put a copy of the Racing Form under his arm, took his little bag of medicine, grabbed his binoculars, got in his car and drove to Aqueeduct," his wife, Nuffie, told the Daily News.

"It's like the mail going through. Nothing keeps Cab away from the horses. He may be pushing it a bit but I think it's good for him. Anyway, how are the horses going to run without him?"

U.S. delays decision on joint fighter plane project with Japanese

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A deeply divided Bush administration Thursday put off for at least a month a decision on whether to let Japan build a new fighter plane with U.S. help after lawmakers and government officials worried that the arrangement may be a giveaway of American technology.

Pentagon officials who negotiated the deal were pushing for quick approval, hoping the president would sign an agreement while he is in Tokyo next week for the funeral of Emperor Hirohito.

But the proposal has turned into a test of whether the new president will continue to give the U.S. security relationship with Japan a pre-eminent position over economic, trade and technological considerations.

The issue pits the State and Defense departments — which favor the coproduction arrangement — against critics in the Commerce, Treasury and Energy departments, the White House Office of Science and Technology and the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative, administration and congressional sources said.

Japanese officials, apparently making U.S. ratification of the agreement a matter of national honor, have been saying they will produce the new-generation fighter themselves if the Bush administration backs away from the deal.

The Pentagon negotiated the agreement to coproduce a new fighter, called the FSX, after Japan refused to buy the U.S.-made F-16, considered one of the world's best warplanes.

Under the arrangement, General Dynamics Corp., maker of the F-16, would be sub-contractor to Mitsubishi Heavy Industries, getting 35 to 40 percent of the $1.2 billion Japan would spend. The FSX would be an updated version of the F-16.

Defense and State argued that the arrangement would keep some of the work on the fighter in the United States and give this country access to new Japanese technology.

But that view was disputed during an inter-agency meeting at the State Department.

It's Burley, Madison for title

TWIN FALLS — Defending champion Madison will take all that experience and height against Burley Bobsats with all that enthusiasm and quickness for the Idaho Class A-1 high school girls' basketball championship tonight.

That was established when Burley battled through an overtime to trim Idaho Falls 48-44 and Madison followed with a 64-51 decision over Coeur d'Alene in the semifinals Friday.

Tipoff time is 8:20 p.m. in the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium. Idaho Falls and Coeur d'Alene will play for third place at 11:55 this morning.

Earlier Friday, Centennial and Borah survived the loser's bracket and will collide at 10:15 today for the consolation trophy. Centennial handied Lewiston 63-46 and Borah edged Boise 51-49.

Burley 48, Idaho Falls 44 (OT)
The Rodney Dangerfield of the state tournament, Burley, finally got some respect Friday night.

The Bobsats, who last made an appearance in the state tournament in 1982 — the state A-2 tournament — used a 4-0 advantage in overtime for the margin of victory.

"Nobody gave us a chance," said Burley coach Gordon Kerbs, whose ballerub took the Region III championship away from three-time state champion Highland earlier this month. "Everybody said we'd get beat in state the first two games."

Kerbs silenced his critics Friday as his girls shot nearly 50 percent from the field, while Idaho Falls struggled to hit about 35 percent of their shots.

For a while, the Bobsats seemed like they would walk away with an

TWIN FALLS — Lakeland had a late Valentine's gift for the Shelley Russsets and it came in the form of a Daisy.

The Daisy turned out to be Daisy dePaulis, who scored 20 points to lead Lakeland to a 64-58 victory over Shelley Friday and put the Hawks into the Idaho Class A-2 high school girls' basketball championship game against Kuna tonight.

The Kayvemen bumped off last year's state runner-up Preston 64-56 in the other semifinal Friday.

Earlier in the day, Buhl broke a 15-game losing streak at state tournaments with a 50-49 overtime victory over Kellogg, while 6-21 Weiser upended District 3 rival Middleton 51-49 in the day's other loser-out contest.

Lakeland and Kuna will play for the state championship at 6:45 p.m. in the College of Southern Idaho gym, while Shelley and Preston will settle third place at 3:15 p.m. Buhl will meet Weiser for the consolation trophy at 1:35 p.m.

Lakeland 64, Shelley 58
"This is what we worked for since what, June or July?" said Lakeland coach Mike Bayley, looking at dePaulis for confirmation. "But we're not satisfied yet."

Down by one at the half, the Hawks came back to outscore Shelley 28-21 after intermission.

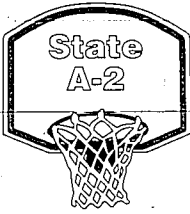

dePaulis had a dozen points in the second half, while her teammate Tracy Hanson added nine of her 15 points after intermission.

The Hawks just couldn't put away the Russsets, especially in the early going.

They held an early 7-2 lead, but Shelley cut the deficit to 7-6. Lakeland took a 16-9 advantage with two minutes left in the first period, but back-to-back buckets by Shelley cut

Boise State's Foster, King stop Weber State, 58-53

OGDEN, Utah — Boise State used the inside-outside combination of Wilson Foster and Brian King in a 58-53 Big Sky Conference basketball victory over Weber State Friday night.

Foster scored 17 points from inside the key while King added 17 on five of six 3-point baskets in a slow-paced game.

The victory improved the Broncos' record to 19-4 overall and 10-2 in conference action, giving Boise State a tie with Idaho for first place in the conference.

"What we didn't do was let them get started with the three-point shots," said BSU coach Bobby Dye. "I thought it was a pretty solid 40 minutes. We stayed solid for 40 minutes and withstood some surges."

The Wildcats fell to 15-7 overall and 8-5 in league play.

Utah Valley fails to catch Eagles

The Times-News

OREM, Utah — The follow shot, the thing that was killing College of Southern Idaho most of the night, turned on the Utah Valley Wolverines Friday night.

CSI sophomore Kenny Jarvis tailed in Caio DaSilva's miss with eight seconds left. When the Wolverines threw the ball away two passes later, the Eagles had wrapped up an 83-82 victory, the top seed in the Region 18 tournament and send Utah Valley into third place.

Earlier, the CSI women topped Utah Valley 71-67 to knock them out of the regional tournament and remain in a tie with North Idaho for first place. Both CSI teams travel on to Salt Lake Community College tonight.

The victory over SLCC tonight would clinch a share of the regular-season title for the Eagles.

Although they led most of the time — as much as 11 in the first half — the Eagles ran into serious competition over the last five minutes and fell behind on a couple of occasions. The one that hurt was a Bryan Santiago putback three-point play with 1 minute, 36 seconds left. He missed the first one but 7-foot Peter Martin recovered it and threw it back for the second one.

That gave Utah Valley an 82-81 lead and the Wolverines met in both two chances to win it at the foul line. Santiago was the victim in each, missing the front end of a one-and-one with 45 seconds remaining. After Jose Jube missed a long attempt, Santiago again was fouled with 18 seconds left but again saw the first one bounce out.

CSI then brought it down for DaSilva's jumper and the clincher by Jarvis.

Murtaugh stuns Indians in Southside semifinal

The Times-News

JEROME — Third-seed Murtaugh upset top-seeded Shoshone 72-68 Friday night to advance to the championship game of the District 4 Class A-4 Southside Subdistrict boys basketball tournament.

The win put the Red Devils in the driver's seat for an automatic berth in the Class A-4 state tournament. Shoshone, ranked third in the latest AP poll, needs to win three games in a row to advance to the state playoffs for the fourth straight year. This was the first setback for Shoshone against any Magic Valley Conference squad.

First, the Indians will have to get past Hagerman, a 31-48 winner in the loser-out contest against Castleford. Shoshone will play the Pirates in a loser-out game tonight at 7:30 at Jerome High School.

The tournament continues Tuesday with Murtaugh meeting the winner of Saturday's game at 7:30 p.m. Saturday's winner would have to beat Murtaugh twice to get the subdistrict title and an automatic berth in the state playoffs.

The Red Devils, after trailing 12-5 at the end of the first quarter, outscored the Indians 42-26 over the next two quarters and held off a late Shoshone rally for the victory.

The story of the game was Shannon Widmeyer, who tossed in four three-pointers in the second quarter. He finished the game with five three-pointers and had 20 points.

However, Widmeyer was not the hero. He was not even the second highest scorer.

Kelly Boring scored 21 points, including three perfect free throws in the free throw line in the second half. Evan Nebecker had 16 points to lead the Red Devils.

Shoshone's offense had to rely on catch-up and was unable to shoot from the outside during the second half.

Shoshone's defense was not as good as it seemed. Murtaugh led the game with 25 points.

Hagerman had some trouble with the Indians. The Wolves led the game for the entire first half, including scoring the first eight points of the game. The Pirates, led by Ron Pharis 14 points, finally caught up with the Wolves midway through the third period.

Hagerman increased the lead to eight points in the fourth quarter, but Castleford battled back, but not Pharis had a bucket late in the contest. Hagerman had a three-point lead and the victory.

Erk Alfred had 16 points to lead the Wolves.

Madison 64, Preston 56
Hansen and DePaulis helped Lakeland host its advantage to five points and the Hawks cruised to the win.

The girls told me it was the funnest game they played all year. I said Bayley after the contest. It was a little nerve racking, but I had fun. It was more fun because we won.

Kuna 64, Preston 56
Kuna's quickness and the inside punch of Jaymie Amsden led the Kamenovs off the considerable size advantage Preston enjoyed.

With Denny Neider provided solid ball-handling and Nicki Ghormley tossing in some key buckets, Kuna protected narrow leads through the first half and then started moving away midway through the third.

On Thursday, Castleford and Hagerman survived to fight another day in the Southside tournament. The Wolves defeated Hansen 44-26 and Hagerman beat Oakley 71-43.

Hansen tried to lead the game down against the Wolves, but with little success. The Hawks trailed 11-12 at the end of the first half and 33-16 at halftime.

Alfred paced the Wolves with 14 points. Erik Alfred was without the Wolves. He scored 14 points. He scored 14 points.

In the other contest, the Pirates were held in check by the Wolves. The Wolves led the game for the entire first half, including scoring the first eight

The Russes, Marked By Kris Stears' four points and an assist to Tanya Stanley, took the lead in the second quarter and held a one-point advantage at the break.

The Russes poured it on in the second half as Lakeland didn't score for the first three minutes and Shelby boosted its lead to 42-36.

But four minutes later, a bucket by Jennifer Ebel knotted the score a 44-44.

DePaulis sparked the Hawks' offense, scoring two buckets in a row going Lakeland to four-point lead.

Moran Coon came up with six points to help offset the absence of Ammon on the bench with four points as Kuna moved from a 33-28 lead to 31 and 12 points over the final two minutes of the quarter.

With 5:54, 2-inch Carol Schumann coming up with 10 fourth-quarter points, Preston managed to pull to within 56-51 with 1:47 remaining, but Sommer Moore counted with four free throws.

Buhl 50, Kellogg 49 (OT)
Shannon Cato's four-point, fourth-quarter burst at the end of regulation play may have done more for the command of Buhl's morale than the encouragement of Pat Milk.

Cato hit a putback field goal, then led the rebound pass that led to a foul at the buzzer and the senior deflected both chances to shove the game into overtime.

In the extra session, Buhl had just enough to outlast Kellogg. It was a very timely feeling for Cato as she stood at the foul line, the clock reading double zeroes in the time slot and the scoreboard favoring the Wildcats 49-43.

"She had a 1-0 shot situation facing her and she stood at the line pressing both hands to her face as she waited for the official to hand her the ball. 'I was shaking so bad,' she said. 'I was pretty confident but I was really nervous. I shot them both — but while still dropped to 45-43." Central 63, Lewiston 46

Centennial forced Lewiston into 26 turnovers and picked up another eight steals in winning this one. Despite the lack of success of getting the ball across the 10-second line, the Bengals trailed only 24-23 at intermission.

But early in the third quarter Melanie Weber and Jennifer McDonough started converting those steals and turnovers into Centennial points and the Pirates enjoyed five to eight-point lead through the quarter. The fourth quarter was totally Centennial.

McDonough ended with 26 points while Weber had 18 — and those two outscored Lewiston by themselves. Deedra Blazzard's 15 paced Lewiston.

Cosch Emery Roy's Patriots improved to 15-7 for the season, while Lewiston exited the tournament at 19-7.

Borah 51, Boise 49
Boise, which dropped a pair to Borah during the season by 15 and nine points during the regular season, simply refused to roll over this time.

The Braves got strong performance from everyone but particularly Shawn Moss, Andi McCarthy and Boie Hall.

On a couple of occasions early, Borah appeared taking charge but each time Boise would catch back up and the teams entered the final quarter even at 40.

Points from Angie Echevarria and April Brainard sent Borah up 45-42 and the Lions stayed just in front until the closing 30 seconds when Michelle Jensen and Annelise Leaven, Buhl also was still not out of the woods.

In the overtime, Jami Korte and Kristi Lutzgens gave Buhl a 49-47 lead while Kellogg's Rhonda Merrick replied with free throws that cut it to 47. With 25 seconds remaining, Korte hit a free throw and missed the second, giving Kellogg one last chance. That ended in a Buhl foul on Kellogg's Stacy Fulton with a second left and a chance to return Cato's earlier pressure shot.

Fulton hit the first but the second caught the right side of the rim, bounced a couple of times and rolled off as Buhl fans went into celebration.

"Now that first win wasn't so hard, was it?" joked Buhl coach Joe Shepard as he and the Indians shed eight points of frustration. This streak was getting heavy for the girls to carry," he continued more seriously. They were tired of hearing it around school all the time — 6-14, 9-15."

Weiser 51, Middleton 49
In perhaps a microcosm of the post-season, Weiser was going against a team that had beaten it twice during the regular year and came out on top.

Never more than five points separated the two and no more than three in the fourth quarter. Middleton held half way at 44-43 on a Jacki Cota free throw and less than developed over the next two minutes. With 1:55 showing, Gail Houston sent Weizer ahead with three free throws but Viking Kim DeBoard came from the line and the field, the two-point coming with 39 seconds left. Houston then dropped the two winners from the foul line 18 seconds later and never team could, score coming to the end.

Pitching great Lefty Gomez, 80, dies

LARKSPUR, Calif. (AP) — Hall of Fame pitcher Verlan "Lefty" Gomez, who starred with the great New York Yankees during the 1930s, won the first All-Star Game and was known for his many sense of humor, died Friday. He was 80.

Gomez died at Mann General Hospital of congestive heart failure. Born in the small town of Redeo, about 30 miles northeast of San Francisco, he was signed for $35,000 by the Yankees but was only 2-5 in 1930, his first season in the major leagues.

However, he quickly justified New York's confidence, going 21-9 in 1931 and 24-7 in 1932, two of the four seasons in which he won more than 20 games.

Gomez had his best year in 1934, when he went 26-5 with a 2.33 earned run average and led the American League with 25 complete games. He was inducted into the Hall of Fame in 1972.

His overall record, including an 8-1 mark with Washington in 1945, his final year in the major leagues, was 194-102. He had a 6-0 record in seven starts in five World Series.

2 tied in LPGA event after 2 rounds

HONOLULU (AP) — Alice Ritzen and Sara Ann McGeeck were tied for the lead at 6-under-par 126 after Friday's second round of the $300,000 Hawaiian Ladies Open golf tournament.

Ritzen and McGeeck both shot 69 and shared a one-stroke lead going into Saturday's final round of the 54-hole tournament.

Amy Buz, who led throughout much of the day, finished tied with Sherri Turner at 109. Buz shot a 70 and Turner 69.

Terry-Jo Myers, who led after shooting a tournament-record 69 Thursday shot 82 and falling to an 81 mark with Washington in 1945, his final year in the major leagues, was 194-102. He had a 6-0 record in seven starts in five World Series.

Elkington, Wiebe tied at S. Diego Open

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Steve Elkington and Mark Wiebe tied for the lead at 11-under-par 133 Friday after the second round of the $700,000 San Diego Open.

Elkington, a native of Australia, shot a 6-under-par 63 in the second round and Wiebe shot 70 on Friday.

Dave Barr and Dave Hummel were both one stroke behind the leaders at 134. Barr shot 68 and Hummel shot 69 on Friday.

Mark Lye, who was in a three-way tie for the lead the first round, was tied with Barr, McKernan and Bill Sander at 135. Lye shot 70 Friday.

Mark Calaverchia, winner of the Bismarck and Los Angeles Opens, missed the cut by three strokes. He shot even-par in each of the first two rounds.

GOODING — Coach Ryan scored 27 points, including 12 in the fourth quarter, but Friday night's second-seeded Richfield 62-56 to make the championship game of the District 4 Class A-4 Northside Subdistrict boys basketball tournament.

Dietrich and Camas County, the top seed in this tournament, will be held at 2 p.m. today in the District 4 Northside gymnasium. The championship will be an automatic berth in the state A-4 tournament in Burley on Monday.

Shoshone's offense had to rely on catch-up and was unable to shoot from the outside during the second half.

Shoshone's defense was not as good as it seemed. Murtaugh led the game with 25 points.

25 S&Ls put under U.S. control

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal regulators placed another 25 insolvent savings and loan institutions in 14 states under government control on Friday as part of President Bush's plan for resolving the S&L crisis.

The action, by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., brings the total number of S&Ls put under federal conservatorship over the last two weeks to 36.

Bush has ordered the FDIC, which insures deposits at commercial banks, to take control of about 224 insolvent S&Ls over the next four to six weeks. He has asked Congress to approve an S&L rescue plan that would cost $12 billion over the next decade, about half of it from taxpayers.

While Congress considers the package, the FDIC is attempting to minimize losses at the failed S&Ls and root out any as yet undiscovered fraud. It is directing a task force of more than 1,200 examiners from four bank and S&L agencies, including itself.

The 25 institutions involved in Friday's action include five in Nebraska, three in Arizona; two each in Florida, Kansas, Louisiana, New Jersey and Utah, and one each in Alabama, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Illinois, Missouri and Wisconsin.

The FDIC, in a statement, stressed that the S&Ls will remain open during normal operating hours and that all deposits up to the $100,000 insurance limit are guaranteed.

Meanwhile, in another development, the Congressional Budget Office said in a report Friday that Bush's off-budget financing plan for the S&L crisis could damage the integrity of the budget and harm deficit-reduction efforts.

How well do some of America's top players defend? Not too well, according to a report on today's hand in the monthly magazine, The Bridge World (39 West 94th St., New York, NY 10025-7124).

Editor Kaplan, the magazine's editor, foresaw a routine top-level defense. Declarer wins the first spade and passes the diamond jack, which holds.

How did the experts fare? Only two Wests pitched clubs on the diamonds, two discarding a club and a heart (goodbye to four heart tricks).

Who says that accurate defense is an easy part of the game?
