Golden Eagles No. 1 in national rankings

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — After a 12-year hiatus, the College of Southern Idaho's men's basketball team has returned to the No. 1 spot in the national junior college poll.

CSI received 12 of the 24 first-place votes cast by the National Junior College Athletic Association regional directors who make up the poll committee.

The Eagles, 29-1, received 201 points to 176 points and four first-place for second-place Champlain College of Vermont, 25-0. Odessa Community College of Texas, 29-1, which has held the No. 1 ranking for most of the season, dropped to third place with 164 points.

CSI was ranked third in last week's poll.

The Eagles, who last attained the No. 1 ranking while astride a 49-game winning streak in 1977, thus will have an opportunity to end the season there again if they can knock off Dixie College and Snow College on the homecourt Friday and Saturday night.

"First, we will all agree that it's an honor," said Coach Fred Trenkle. "But as everyone knows, it's where you are at the end of the year. But I'm very pleased for our players because they've worked hard all the way through. It is a nice reward for their dedication."

"But now if you're asking me will this make us play harder or better this week and in regionals next week, the only thing I can say is I don't see how we can be more enthused or harder working than we've been all year," he added with a smile. "Hard work has been the trademark of this team."

CSI was never ranked higher than second during the 1988-89 season, when the school won the NJCAA basketball championship.

"We got this No. 1 ranking without any politicking," Trenkle said. "I have not once picked up the

Court assists war on porn

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, boosting a growing nationwide drive against pornography, ruled Tuesday that states may use anti-racketeering laws to crack down on adult bookstores.

But the justices said prosecutors may not use such tough crime-fighting statutes to shut down the stores before trials are held to determine whether any of the material sold is obscene.

The justices, by a 6-3 vote, said Indiana's Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) may be applied to adult bookstores.

The law is patterned after a federal statute aimed primarily at organized crime. Most states have similar anti-racketeering laws, and in 19 states besides Indiana the law can be used to battle pornography.

A presidential commission on pornography, appointed during Ronald Reagan's administration, urged all states to take similar steps to limit the spread of sexually explicit material.

In another action, the court:
• Refused to kill a $90 million lawsuit against television evangelist Jimmy Swaggart and others filed by Marvin Gorman, a defrocked evangelist Swaggart had accused of adultery in 1986.

• Allowed Kentucky to begin enforcing a 1986 abortion law as altered by a federal judge last year. The law requires girls under the age of 18 to notify their parents or obtain a judge's consent before having an abortion.

• Ruled, by a 6-3 vote in a Texas case, that states may not give preferential treatment to religious publications by exempting them from taxes imposed on other books, magazines and newspapers.

In the pornography case, the justices rejected arguments that Indiana's law is too vague.
"Given that the RICO statute totally encompasses the obscenity law, if the latter is not unconstitutionally vague, the former cannot be vague either," Justice Byron R. White wrote for the court.

In a dissenting opinion, Justice John Paul Stevens said Indiana's anti-racketeering law violates freedom of speech.

Thaw leaves area awash atop frozen ground

By N.S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Warm weather, rain and melting snow have conspired with still-frozen ground to wash out roads and cause runoff problems.

The Lilly Grade south of Castleford was washed out Monday by a combination of snow melt and rain. The road has been repaired, said Clyde Burney, manager of the Twin Falls Highway District. Bell Rapids Road also washed out but has yet not been repaired.

"Culverts could not carry the amount of water that was coming down," Burney said. He did not have an estimate of the cost of the damages.

Because the ground still is frozen, rain and snow melted by the warm weather have run off fields and feedlots into local streams, with little of the moisture soaking in, said Mike Mc-Masters of the Twin Falls state Division of Environment office.

The runoff is causing some waste water containment ponds to overflow at feedlots, dairies and other areas with confined animals. Problems with excess water are especially bad at operations with inadequate containment facilities — releasing raw manure into streams, Mc-Masters said.

Runoff contains high levels of nutrients such as nitrogen and phosphorus from agricultural lands and containment ponds, as well as sediments eroded from the land — all of which eventually winds up in the Snake River.

The ground in most of the Magic Valley is frozen down to almost three feet, with only the top three to four inches thawed by the recent warm weather, said Bill Galkin of the National Weather Service in Kimberly.

As long as the ground remains frozen, water from rain or melting snow runs off after soaking the thawed top few inches of soil, and none will soak into the soil, and help recharge groundwater.

The extended forecast calls for below-normal temperatures and above-normal precipitation. Unless the ground thaws to let more water soak in, a heavy rain could cause worse problems with erosion and runoff, Galkin said.

Tuesday's temperature was about 45 degrees, and the high Wednesday is expected to be near 50 degrees, Galkin said.

House passes measure to aid handicapped preschoolers

The Associated Press

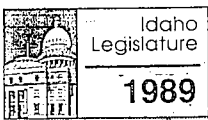

HOISE — Sponsors called it not only cost-effective, but the right thing to do.

Opponents claimed it was vague, with no limit on eventual cost.

But after an emotional debate of more than two hours Tuesday, the Idaho House voted 59-19 for legislation declaring that handicapped preschoolers ages 3 and 4 will be part of the school system, eligible to take part in special programs to help them.

Just one day earlier, sponsors of the program won another battle. The Joint Finance Appropriations Committee education budget included $2.5 million to pay for the first year.

Chief sponsor Rep. Doug James, R-Filer, told House members, experts say at least 34 in long-term special service expense will be saved for each $1 invested in early childhood help for the handicapped.

But more importantly, he said, it's the sort of thing that a humane, caring society should do.

"It is good for society to make more productive citizens," he said. "It is the right thing to do for these children and their parents."

Passing the program, he said,

"means caring members of society and this Legislature are taking one more step forward."

Opponents argued the legislation has problems because it does not contain precise definitions. Rep. W.O. "Bill" Taylor, R-Nampa, estimated costs at $7 million per year.

Rep. R.L. "Dick" Davis, R-Tetxburg, said, "I think it is something we can get along without."

He said school districts will need new buildings for the programs, and will find it hard to locate enough qualified teachers. He said there's no limit on the cost.

Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls, said the best estimates are that 2,500 children will be eligible for the services next year.

The bill declares that each school district must offer services to handi-

Gas, atomic fuel hold off greenhouse

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A House panel was told Tuesday that the nation should react to the greenhouse effect on global warming by using natural gas instead of coal and by developing "safe and publicly acceptable" nuclear power.

Robert M. White, president of the National Academy of Engineering, said these are among measures needed to prevent further build-up of greenhouse gases that could be responsible for global warming.

White and three other witnesses cautioned that scientists still do not know whether burning of fossil fuels and other human activities will cause significant

Senators examine report on Tower; vote Thursday

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush on Tuesday denounced as "vicious rumor" allegations against Defense Secretary-designate John Tower and declared they had been "rumored down" by a thorough FBI report.

"A Senate committee vote on the embattled nominee was tentatively scheduled for Thursday."

Urging the Senate to move "forthrightly" on the nomination, Bush said at a news conference that he had personally reviewed portions of the FBI report into Tower's alleged drinking, philandering and financial improprieties.

"What I got from it was that there has been a very unfair treatment of this man by rumor and innuendo, over and over again rumors surfacing with no facts to back them up," the president said.

Members of the Senate Armed Services Committee, meanwhile, scrutinized the report, which the White House forwarded to committee chairman Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and ranking Republican John Warner of Virginia late Monday.

The two senators said in a statement that the committee would meet in a closed session today and hoped to vote Thursday "assuming that members of the committee have read and analyzed the latest FBI report."

Asked about the closed committee session, Nunn later told reporters: "I want to hear what other people think too. This is a committee decision, not a decision by the chairman or the ranking members. All the members will have access to all the information."

Sen. John McCain of Arizona, said he had reviewed the FBI's findings and had nothing to disqualify Tower.

Barton clarifies school organization chart

MOSCOW (AP) — The Idaho Board of Education has not created a chancellorship for higher education, despite what is depicted on an organizational chart given to finalists for the University of Idaho presidency, a board spokesman said.

The board's executive director, Rayburn Barton, called the chart, which shows a direct line of authority between himself and the presidents and no lines between the presidents and the board, a "mistake."

"That chart has caused some misperceptions and some discomfort, and there was no intention to do that," Barton said Monday. "I'm going to do my damndest to get this straightened out."

University at Clemson, S.C., and a finalist for the UI job, withdrew from the race last week because of the way he understood the relationship between the UI president and the executive director.

He reiterated his concerns Monday, even in light of Barton's concession that the chart does not reflect reality.

"It wasn't just the organizational chart; it was the whole job description of the executive director," he said in a telephone interview.

"Whether the board calls it that or not, they have created a system. That changed the whole ball game for me and made it much less interesting," Elizabeth Zinser, who also expressed concern about the governance structure while at Moscow earlier this month, still was deliberating about the UI job Monday. Barton said he hopes to set up a conference call with Zinser sometime this week.

The board last week stopped short of offering the job to Zinser, who is vice chancellor for academics at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Barton said he developed the organizational chart at the request of state Rep. Edward Osburn, R-Boise, chairman of the House Education Subcommittee on Governance. He submitted it to six of eight board members in closed session Jan. 23. "All six of them looked at it and said it was OK," Barton said.

EchoHawk continues attorney general moves

BOISE (AP) — Bannock County Prosecutor Larry Echolaw, who has been used for campaign telephone, mailing and travel costs, he said.

Echolaw said he was forming a committee to help gauge his statewide support and decide whether he should run. He said he will announce names of key supporters and advisers in about one month, and will announce a decision even if he chooses not to run.

If Echolaw enters the race, he could wind up running against incumbent Republican Jim Jones; he said Monday he has not decided whether to run for reelection or enter the governor's race.

"It's not an official announcement," Echolaw said. The bottom line is intended to "let people know I'm

Panel deliberates public school budget

BOISE (AP) — Controversy over the seating of a substitute Democratic member on the legislative budget committee Tuesday abruptly halted deliberations on 1990 state aid to higher education.

Action on that key spending plan was put off until Wednesday, while debate continued on the public school aid bill the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee narrowly endorsed a day earlier.

Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus remained confident the bill he quickly labeled deplorable would not be the final word on public school support. But Republican State Schools Superintendent Jerry Evans maintained the $39.3 million proposal indicated a high priority for education among lawmakers.

"It does focus on some very specific needs of our school districts," Evans said, citing money for increasing the starting salary for teachers statewide and reducing classroom sizes in the early elementary grades.

The public school total endorsed by a GOP majority on the budget

The latest dispute to arise in the budget committee came midway through Tuesday morning's debate on support for the four state colleges. Assistant Senate Republican Floor Leader Jerry Twigg of Blackfoot said the proper procedures had not been followed to legally send Marcelline Beitelbacher, the mother of Sen. Ron Beitelbacher, D-Grangeville. Mrs. Beitelbacher was sitting in for her son, who had been called away on business for the day.

Senate President Pro Tem Michael Crapo said Mrs. Beitelbacher had been sworn in to replace her son earlier in the morning. But Twigg said there was no formal letter of replacement filed by the governor's office with the Senate Secretary's office until after the dispute arose.

"She is caught in the middle of a very awkward situation," Senate Finance Chairman Atwell Parry, R-Melba, said.

panel is $800,000 higher than the governor's proposal. But it provides only 70 percent of the increase in basic support Andrus seeks. The difference was made up with $12 million from the one-time state revenue surplus that is not being guaranteed beyond next year.

GOP legislative leaders point out that one-time money injected into the public school allotment in past years has never been removed in subsequent budgets.

Still, administration officials argued that the spending direction being taken in the committee will leave lawmakers facing a major budget crisis next year. In that case, they said, spending increases in the 1991 budget would have to be held to a minimum or a major election-year tax increase would be needed.

Department of Commerce backs bill promoting Idaho tourism tax

BOISE (AP) — Idaho's Department of Commerce says the $1.9 million per year Idaho spends on tourism promotion is dwarfed by the amount spent by surrounding states, which averages at least twice as much.

The department backed a bill before the House Revenue and Taxation Committee Tuesday which would have expanded taxes for tourism advertising to $4 million per year.

But the committee voted to hold the bill indefinitely, usually a killing motion, after representatives objecting to being taxed to benefit the tourism industry.

There were no dissenting votes as the bill was ordered held, but Chairman Rep. Steve Antone, R-Rupert, said he would set up a special subcommittee to look at the concept of funding for tourism.

"That particular bill is dead," he said of House Bill 189.

Idaho now levies a 2 percent hotel-motel-campground tax which is used for tourism promotion.

House Bill 189 was the seventh version of legislation designed to expand the tax to a wider base.

It proposed lowering the hotel-motel tax to 1 percent, but imposing a one-half percent surtax on the price of tickets to certain events, restaurants and bar sales; ski passes, sales of outfitter and guide trips and vehicle rentals.

Dave Hand, lobbyist for the sponsoring Idaho Innkeepers Association, said the ideal solution would be a general fund appropriation for tourism promotion, because the industry is so important to the state. He also said an increase in the state 5 percent sales tax also would be a good way to fund the effort.

But he said "political realities" indicated those approaches wouldn't work.

Irrigation wells high in nitrogen

Fort HALL (AP) — Nitrogen levels in 11 irrigation wells on the Fort Hall Indian Reservation exceed federal drinking standards, U.S. Geological Survey officials say.

Samples taken from 60 wells last July indicate nitrogen concentrations range from 0.7 to 24 milligrams per liter. The federal standard is 10 milligrams.

Meanwhile, high levels of sodium have been discovered in the domestic wells of five Pocatello property owners, as well as trace amounts of lead and other metals. The nitrogen and sodium contamination are unrelated.

Roger Turner, the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes' water resources technician, said the water with the high nitrogen levels was taken from agricultural wells and is not expected to pose a health risk to the reservation population.

However, he said the Indian Health Service has been notified of the contamination. High nitrogen levels have been shown to cause a type of anemia among infants.

Authorities suspect the nitrogen is from overapplication of farm fertilizers, which permeate the sandy soil and enter the aquifer.

Ted Wall, an EPA spokesman in Seattle, said persons drinking from the wells have been advised to consult a physician if they are hypertensive, pregnant or are on a low-sodium diet.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has notified the five Pocatello parties that tests of wells last fall found sodium concentrations exceeding federal standards.

Ed funding promises fiscal responsibility

Imagine, for a moment, that you come into some unexpected money, say $5,000.

Which would be wiser: to make a commitment to buying a $30,000 auto when you know you can only make the first year's payment? Or should you spend the money cautiously, in smaller amounts on purchases which do not require another payment tomorrow?

The first, in our view, is how Gov. Cecil Andrus and other state interests want to spend the state's unexpected revenue surplus. The second is how the Legislature's Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee has acted.

But this being politics, guess who was first with the rhetoric on the issue? The ink was barely dry Monday on the public school funding package recommended by JFAC when the sniping started from Legislative Democrats and Andrus.

It isn't a perfect bill, but as an initial effort at school funding, the proposed schools budget as outlined by JFAC looks pretty good for us.

Its primary feature is its prudence, a quality in public funding which is in very short supply today among the various groups which are yammering for increased commitments of public funds.

In Idaho, those groups generally seem to include the Idaho Education Association, the teacher's union; state employees and various politicians, who waste little time in trying to get us to believe that all Republican office holders are simply cheapskates when it comes to public needs.

The education budget which emerged from JFAC this week will give them further ammunition. It approves an across-the-board teachers' pay increase of 5 percent, well below what Andrus and the IEA wanted.

Instead, the budget spends additional money more cautiously, allocating some money from the state's sizeable surplus as one-time expenditures, and placing other funds in key areas such as helping handicapped preschoolers.

These allocations strike us as essentially reasonable; they don't commit the state to huge future expenditures by spending one-time surplus money on continuing commitments. That is simple prudent financial management.

But neither is the public education budget a "deplorable" one as Andrus alleges. That kind of terminology is simply political posturing. Look at the numbers:

The JFAC proposal allocates $382.3 million for public schools for the coming year, an increase of 7.4 percent. Of the total, some $25 million is to an across-the-board pay increase and a 2.5 percent increase in operating expenses.

Another $5.2 million is to go to helping school districts reduce classroom size in the critical lower grades; $3 million to bring the state's starting teacher salary to $16,000 statewide; $2.5 million for the handicapped preschoolers program; and $620,000 for a program to help beginning teachers.

Some $12 million is also allocated from the surplus for non-recurring expenses, including books, equipment for science labs, and lab facilities remodeling.

That adds up, in our view, to a substantive commitment by the Republican-dominated Legislature to public school funding in Idaho.

To be sure, it is not a huge pot of unrestricted money into which the governor and the IEA can dip without controls, year after year from now.

But to allow that, in our view, would be as irresponsible as the governor has been in labeling the budget "deplorable."

Nuclear debate isn't radical

For years I've been calling for a full, honest and open debate on all the issues surrounding the nuclear industry — both military and civilian.

This is not a radical idea, but the only way in which we can separate truth from falsehood, fact from fiction, national security from pork barrel and principle from indulgence.

There are many questions that need answers. They include environmental, economic, technical, social and political questions, questions of policy and profit, and ultimately questions of morality and spirituality. These questions pertain to all aspects of the nuclear industry, the mining, the processing, waste disposal and the use of nuclear materials.

One small but significant step in getting that national debate is presented to us in a "joint memorial" to the Congress and president of the United States from the Idaho Legislature. The memorial calls for such a debate and also urges Congress to finance the clean-up of KREI.

The memorial known as SJM105 is up for hearing before the Senate Health and Welfare Committee on Thursday, Feb. 23, at 9 a.m. at the capitol in Boise.

If you can be there, great; if not please contact your state senators and representatives urging their support with the stipulation that clean-up takes place before other projects are considered.

It is time to lay the cards on the table. We've got to come to grips with this issue, not as a public-relations campaign, not with one side winning or losing, but as a society facing the greatest question we have created for ourselves.

One person should be top cop

When I was a kid I played cowboys and Indians and cops and robbers with my friends. Some of the kids grew up to become cowboys and cops, one became a robber.

I've always admired law enforcement officers, but never envied them. Their job is the most difficult one in criminal justice — apprehending, suspected criminals and physically bringing them in.

The street policeman sees the worst of everything and everyone at their worst. The policeman knows that many of these criminals they arrest will go back into society and repeat their offenses. Lack of evidence and plea bargaining sets many criminals free too soon. The job of a street policeman must be very stressful and frustrating.

The chief of police is there to mediate their problems. The chief has to give encouragement as well as discipline and try to help the officers keep a perspective on the role they play in the criminal process.

I don't think it would be a good idea for the city manager to replace Chief Qualls' position with two jobs: one to keep the office and one to run the troops.

I believe that one person like Chief Qualls can keep tabs on what's going on in addition to exerting a strong influence on the daily police activities. One person working both ends is better able to advise direct operations and avert some of the lawsuit problems that tend to arise. I think Chief Qualls deserves the support of the city manager, city council and the citizens of Twin Falls.

Kids can abuse adults, too

Re: Mr. Williams, Ms. Stalley and Ms. Fuller.

I read your article and letters with interest and some concern.

I do volunteer work for organizations that are of special interest to me, one being the Guardian Ad Litem program. I know how traumatic it is for the victims of sexual abuse and have always supported and will continue to support anything that would help prevent this from happening to children.

Until I became aware of the Child Protective Act law, I didn't realize that sexually abused children do receive protection from several agencies/departments — law enforcement agency (peace officers) — Guardian Ad Litem — Health and Welfare (social workers) — and the prosecuting attorney.

The Child Protective Act law protects the children from adults. What law protects adults from children?

At the present time I know of a case where the child was angry at her parents because she had to eat pork chops for Thanksgiving dinner, so she accused her father of sexual abuse.

The parents lost their jobs, vehicles and their home. They had to sell what they could to pay attorney fees, as only the child's legal fees are paid by the state.

The parents have had no support from any agency/departments to help them cope with mounting problems and concerns.

After doing some research, I founded an organization called V.O.C.A.L., Victims of Child Abuse Laws. V.O.C.A.L. is a pro-family, support, informational referral group which represents families, individuals and children who have been victimized by the misuse of Child Abuse laws.

V.O.C.A.L. networks persons affected by this misuse with professionals in the fields of law, psychiatry and psychology. V.O.C.A.L. wishes to bring about true justice to both individuals and the community.

We shouldn't abuse civil liberties

Lloyd Trimmer

Public interest in issues surrounding child abuse rise and fall with the demonstration of a child abuse case. All too often the cry is "lock 'em up and throw away the key."

Accusation equals guilt. In this country, where citizens are considered innocent until proven guilty, forget any and all rights once an individual is accused of child abuse.

Big, bold-print guilty for the rest of your life, by innuendo, even if the charges are dismissed or thrown out. Unfortunately, newspapers are not good at removing that false claim, that tarred identity and the future stigma-irretrievably.

Two recent letters, Kent Feb. 2 and Williams Feb. 5, imply that laws are not sufficient, that the courts are not fair to victims and that agencies apparently are working to keep child abusers "on the loose." Hysteria runs high and newspaper sales higher. Just print CHILD ABUSE in big, bold print.

A defenseless child, abused, deserves reasonable protection but wrongful accusation of an innocent person, quite frequent in abuse cases, can destroy an innocent life or family.

Find some social workers willing to misquote child abuse figures and give the "gloom and doom of society" — and newspapers can stir the messy stew.

Child abuse hysteria is simply a 20th Century witch hunt, far eclipsing even Senator McCarthy's communist trials. If the hysteria begins to fade just add in the possibility of satanic worship with child sexual abuse. Zoom goes the hysteria and newspaper sales.

Child abuse exists. I won't attempt to deny or lessen this tragic fact. Child abuse needs to be treated in our society. Unfortunately prison is not the answer for people guilty of child abuse.

Unfortunately because elected officials are not willing to put forth the money necessary for treatment programs that have been found to work and have decided that institutional incarceration will have to suffice. We don't have money available for treatment plans because Idaho's too busy building jails.

I am tired of news stories which picture child abusers under every rock and around every corner. The societal child abuse problems will not be corrected or eradicated with a witch hunt mentality or advocating hysteria through misinformation of facts and figures. Consider this:

Child abuse claims in divorce or custody situations seem to be the new female "weapon." Typically an abuse claim is made after the couple separates. The woman begins to realize that the children's father could be granted custody.

Also typical of what happens: the father is accused — considered guilty though rarely are formal charges ever filed, and visitation with his children greatly restricted or "temporarily" denied. Under the child abuse hysteria any allegation is accepted as fact, the accused guilty, the father's constitutional rights thrown away.

More to the truth is the Washington Post headline (3/9/87) which stated ABUSE CHARGE IS GROWING TACTIC IN CUSTODY CASES or the New York Times story (1/19/87) which stated CHILD SEX ABUSE CHARGED IN MORE DIVORCES. 1986 University of Minnesota Medical School information on divorce-linked sex abuse cases show nearly 77% of these cases prove a hoax.

Furthermore, nearly 7 of every 10 child abuse claims nationally are proved unfounded. Recent studies in Michigan, Massachusetts and reports presented to the American Academy of Psychiatry and the Law show false accusations used by children, teenagers and vindictive adults as potent manipulative weapons with highly consistent situations frequently missed by mental health professionals and social workers.

To correct this problem we need to accurately establish how severe the problem really is. An improved, realistic definition of child abuse is needed before social agencies can effectively deal with abusive, life-threatening problems.

This is what their services were intended to provide. This is not a socialist state where social workers are to abuse the constitutional rights of citizens, parents or families.

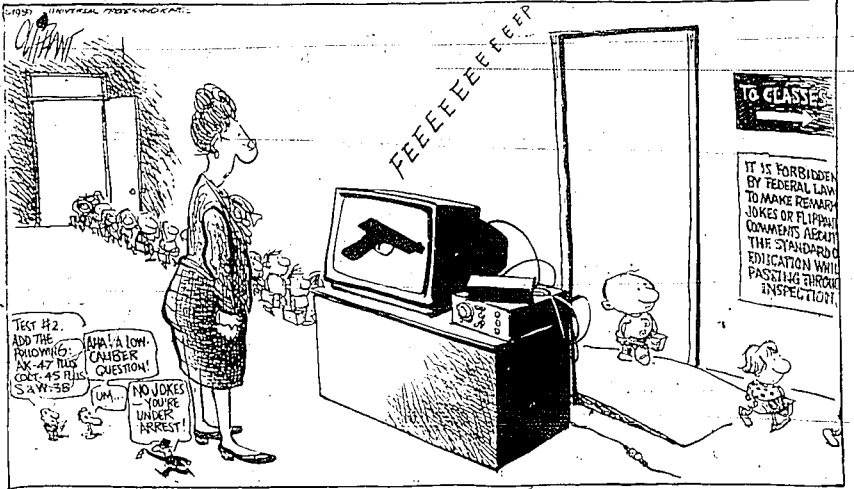

Idahoans should be just as active to punish individuals that initiate or make false abuse claims as they are in wanting heads to roll for anyone that abuses a child.

Agencies must discontinue violating the civil rights of individuals claiming immunity for these violations. Prosecuting attorneys should stop charging multiple crimes as a form of intimidation, or "insurance," for plea bargaining alone.

Breaking innocent citizens financially and emotionally, through intimidation, is not proper in our judicial system.

Finally, the press should discontinue association in this witch hunt hysteria.

Lloyd Trimmer, Gooding, is a state delegate in Idaho for FAIR, Father's Advocacy and Referral Corporation, which he describes as "a national non-profit, tax-exempt organization...serving America's fathers, second wives and grandparents in the frustrations which often surround divorce, custody and visitation situations."

So far, Bush budget strategy is working

Fred Barnes

Democrat Thomas Foley, the House majority leader, has uttered the words that President George Bush and his budget chief, Richard Darman, were desperate to hear. The Bush budget, Foley said, "is not dead on arrival."

That meant three things. First, negotiations between the White House and Democratic leaders in Congress would begin. Second, it meant the Bush team had won the first skirmish with Congress. And third, Democrats have a problem.

Since Bush's election, Darman has had one big worry. How could he and Bush draw congressional Democrats into serious and prolonged budget talks to trim the deficit to $100 billion or less in 1992? Recent experience was discouraging. Darman's anxiety was compounded by Bush's promise in the campaign not to raise taxes and his general agreement with the spending priorities of the Reagan years. The strategy he worked out was simple. Bush would neither act nor sound like Reagan, and he would not be as specific either.

Bush kicked off the strategy with his inaugural speech. He paused during his remarks and stretched his right arm in the direction of House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, and Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine. "This is the age of the offered hand," Bush said. "Let us negotiate soon and hard... The American people await action. They didn't send us here to hicker."

Scarcely mentioned in the Bush rhetoric were spending cuts. True, he advocated a $5 billion reduction in Medicare. But the deepest cuts in the Bush plan are unspecified, to come from a pool of social programs.

The cuts from the pool would be more painful than any since 1981, when Reagan pushed through spending reductions devised by David Stockman, his budget chief. Democrats squawked that Bush was too vague about his plans and had not shown leadership by ducking a decision on the cuts.

But all that was to be no avail. "We put the ball back in their court," said a White House official.

The lack of specificity was crucial. It not only got Bush off the hook for the time being on unpopular cuts, but it also removed an obstacle to getting budget talks started. Instead, Democrats find themselves in an awkward position. If they withdraw from the talks, they will be the heavies. But if they stay, they will be playing on Bush's turf. He has presented a plan for meeting the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit target. Now it is their turn.

That Bush won the first round with Congress was confirmed in the ABC News-Washington Post poll taken Feb. 10 to Feb. 14, after his budget address to Congress. Bush got a higher rating than Reagan ever got. That should give congressional Democrats something to think about,

GOP will accept ex-KKK head

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Newly elected state Rep. David Duke, a former Ku Klux Klan grand wizard, will probably be accepted by Republicans as one of their own if he's seated in the House, GOP legislative leaders said Tuesday.

A freshman independent has said he will challenge Duke's seating, but Democrats and Republicans alike said they don't expect the move to succeed.

If the Republican Legislative Caucus lets him in, Duke will be one of 18 Republicans in the 106-member House. There are six Republicans in the 39-member Senate.

Duke has said he has proof he lived in the district, a nearly all-white bedroom community of New Orleans.

"We will see if Mr. Duke is what he says he is or what the media says he is," said Rep. Pappi Bruescine of New Orleans, GOP caucus chairman. "If he's what he says he is, he has no problem. He's got to be the same way everybody else did."

Bruescine also is chairman of the committee that would hear a challenge if Bacque gets 65 votes, a majority of the membership.

"I certainly will listen to Mr. Bacque and then make up my mind and vote," said Bruescine. "If it gets to my committee both sides will have the right to a full, fair hearing."

Both President Bush and former President Reagan endorsed Duke's opponent in Saturday's election, homebuilder David Green. After Duke won, GOP National Chairman Lee Atwater vowed to have Duke censured and barred from using the GOP name.

Bush condemns death decree

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush condemned Iran's death decree against British novelist Salman Rushdie as "deeply offensive to the norm of civilized behavior" and warned on Tuesday that Tehran would be held accountable for any actions against American interests.

Bush said he strongly supports the decision of European governments to recall their ambassadors and chief diplomats from Iran in protest of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's order for the assassination of Rushdie, the author of "The Satanic Verses," a novel that many Muslims consider blasphemous.

On another matter, Bush said he was not concerned that Soviet Foreign Minister Edward Shevardnadze's diplomatic trip to the Middle East would diminish the U.S. role in the region.

Asked what role Moscow should play in the Middle East, Bush said emphatically, "I think it should be a limited role and I think that's what it's going to be."

Bush said he would not "send somebody charging off on a mission to counter Mr. Shevardnadze's trip."

The president made his comments at a hurriedly called news conference at the White House on the eve of his departure for a five-day Asian trip to attend the funeral of Emperor Hirohito in Japan, followed by stops in China and South Korea.

Bush used the opportunity to urge the Senate to "move forthrightly" to approve the embattled nomination of John Tower as secretary of defense after repeated allegations of womanizing, excessive drinking and questions about Tower's relationship with defense contractors.

Bush said the allegations amounted to "very unfair treatment of this man by rumor and innuendo, over and over again." The president said a new FBI report, released Monday,

"gunned down" the allegations of misconduct.

Saying Tower will be a good secretary of defense, Bush declared, "I've never wavered in my support for John Tower."

Up until now, Bush has been silent on the worldwide controversy over the ayatollah's death threat against Rushdie, an Indian-born British citizen who now is hiding under police protection.

Asked if he hoped European nations impose economic sanctions against Iran, as the United States did years ago, "They will be discussing that, I'm sure, but I don't know where we go from there."

Bush called the press conference to announce that second-term Rep. Bill Grant of Florida was switching his registration from Democratic to Republican.

"This is good news for our party not only in Florida, not only in the South, but nationally," Bush said.

Polite talk marks meeting on budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush and his budget director on Tuesday prodded congressional leaders to join them in budget negotiations, but Democrats responded by chiding them for withholding their views on where spending cuts should be made.

Talk of more talks was put on hold while, with Bush heading for Japan, Congress began budget hearings amid efforts to extract more detailed information from the White House.

"We've got an administration here that wants to embrace the concept of a line-item veto but won't give us a line-item budget," said Sen. Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

The president met at the White House early Tuesday with Sasser, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine; House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, and other top Republicans and Democrats from Capitol Hill.

It was the first such meeting since Bush revealed his $1.16 trillion fiscal 1990 budget in a speech to Congress on Feb. 9.

Laymakers said they told the president that before negotiations could begin they needed more detail, especially on how he would pay for the new programs he wants for education, the environment, child care and other areas.

Dole pledges to work with unions

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole on Tuesday promised to work with labor and piqued the interest of union leaders by calling for a flexible pension system, but she also disagreed with them on several issues.

The tone of the first meeting between the AFL-CIO Executive Council and Mrs. Dole was amiable despite the differences, a stark contrast with the first such session of the Reagan presidency, when then-Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan and union leaders clashed publicly over the president's economic plans.

There was no such acrimony after the meeting with Mrs. Dole, although federation President Lane Kirkland said it was inevitable that labor would disagree with the Bush administration on some issues.

"I want continued dialogue with the individuals in that room and certainly I want to leave my door open and be in touch with them," Mrs. Dole said after her private meeting with the 35-member council.

Analysts criticize Bush rescue plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's plan for rescuing the savings and loan industry is based on overly optimistic economic assumptions and understates the program's true cost by billions of dollars, private analysts said Tuesday.

The White House Office of Management Budget released figures Tuesday showing, among other assumptions:

- long-term interest rates falling 3 percent in two years in the lowest point in 20 years;
- savings and loan deposits growing at an annual rate of 7.2 percent even as the government will be curbing high-flying, fast-growing institutions.

"These assumptions are highly optimistic, exceedingly optimistic," said Bert Ely, a financial institutions analyst in Alexandria, Va. "They're just not realistic."

If the administration's interest rate projections are off, the government will have to spend hundreds of millions of dollars more a year to finance the borrowing.

If the deposit growth is lower than predicted, then insurance premiums paid by the industry will fall far short of the $2 billion projected over the next decade. That will mean taxpayers will have to pay more.

Fed will push interest rates up, chief says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said Tuesday the central bank will keep up its inflation-fighting efforts by pushing interest rates higher to combat what he termed a troubling acceleration in price pressures.

Greenspan, in his semiannual report to Congress on monetary policy, said the Fed expects to support continued economic expansion while putting in place conditions for a gradual easing in the rate of inflation over time.

He added, however: "Let me stress that the current rate of inflation, let alone an increase, is not acceptable, and our policies are designed to reduce inflation in coming years."

Since last March, the Fed has been nudging up interest rates in an attempt to slow economic growth and avoid a flare-up of inflation. Those efforts intensified last week after a report on prices at the wholesale level showed a 1 percent increase during the month of January, equivalent to a compounded annual inflation rate of 12.7 percent.

Prices at the consumer level in 1988 increased by 4.4 percent, the same pace as during the previous year and a rate that Greenspan considers worrisome.

"With the economy running close to its potential, the risks seem to be on the side of a further strengthening of price pressures," the Fed chairman said. "In these circumstances, the Federal Reserve remains more inclined to act in the direction of restraint than toward stimulus."

Fall kills chutist

SHERIDAN, Ore. (AP) — A Frenchman fell to his death doing what he had done more than anyone else in the world — parachute jumping.

"He would jump with anybody anytime," said Ted Mayfield, founder of the Pacific Parachute Center, where 59-year-old Ruch Pierre Charmet died Monday when his parachute failed to open properly. "That was his whole life."

U of I jazz festival will feature Soviets

MOSCOW (AP) — The Lionel Hampton Jazz Festival this week at the University of Idaho will include the first North American performance by two of the top jazz musicians in the Soviet Union.

Festival director Lynn Skinner said it's taken two years to obtain the Soviet government's permission and clear all the diplomatic hurdles for the duo of pianist Leonid Vintskevich and saxophonist Lembit Saarsalu to come to the festival.

The 22nd annual festival begins its three-day run Thursday and will feature performances by the Soviet jazzmen at each night's featured concert in the university's Kibbie Dome.

"They don't speak any English, but they speak the language of jazz," Skinner said of Vintskevich and Saarsalu. "The recordings they've sent us have been the very finest you could imagine in terms of performance skills."

"They fit stylistically into what we're doing. They are mainstream jazz musicians who play a very contemporary, Western style."

Although Saarsalu lives in Estonia and Vintskevich several hundred miles away in Kursch, they have played a number of concerts together in the Soviet Union and have teamed up at European jazz festivals, Skinner said.

When their interpreter was asked how the duo gets together to rehearse, his reply was "they don't rehearse, they play," Skinner said.

They'll get a chance to play at the festival with Hampton and his New York Big Band, along with other American jazz greats such as Grammy Award-winning trumpeter Wynton Marsalis, Stan Getz, vocalist Carmen McRae and guitarist Kenny Burrell.

The festival at the university's School of Music also draws vocal and instrumental ensembles from colleges, high schools and junior high schools from the Western United States and Canada. More than 15,000 students are expected to participate in competitions and clinics at the festival.

Kitty Dukakis 'terrific' at treatment center

BOSTON (AP) — Kitty Dukakis is "terrific" after two weeks of treatment at an alcoholic rehabilitation center, said her husband, Gov. Michael S. Dukakis.

"Kitty sends her best. She's doing very well. She'll be back in a couple weeks," Dukakis said Monday during an address to the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company.

Mrs. Dukakis, 52, entered Edgehill Newport in Rhode Island on Feb. 6. Most patients undergo a 28-day rehabilitation program followed by three days of observation on the premises.

Dukakis attributed his wife's excessive drinking to "physical exhaustion, the stress of the campaign effort and the post-election letdown."

Miss Mississippi will marry Steissippi

MOSS POINT, Miss. (AP) — Miss Mississippi 1987, Toni Seawright, is engaged to National Football League star Louie Lippis, her mother says.

Annie Laura Seawright said her daughter and Lippis, a former star at the University of Southern Mississippi and now a wide receiver with the Pittsburgh Steelers, will marry on June 10.

The family hosted an engagement party around the first of the year, the mother said.

"He's just like one of the family and we love him," she said.

The wedding will be held at First Baptist Church of Moss Point, 20 miles east of Biloxi.

Senator, physicist are among award winners

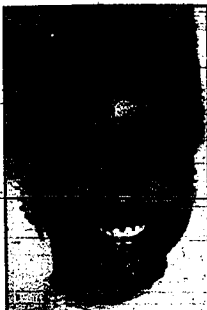

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Former U.S. Sen. J. William Fulbright and physicist Amory B. Lovins are among this year's recipients of the Onassis awards, worth $100,000 each.

The prizes, announced Tuesday by the Alexander S. Onassis Public Benefit Foundation, honor international contributions in scholarship, human rights and the environment. Premier Andreas Papandreu will present the awards April 20 in Athens.

Fulbright, 84, of Arkansas, will be honored for establishing the Fulbright scholarships, "this century's largest international study fellowship program of academic and cultural exchange," said foundation president Yannis Georgakakis.

An Onassis prize will go to Lovins, 41, for "his notable contribution to the protection of the natural environment by working towards alternative solutions to contemporary energy problems," Georgakakis said.

In 1982, Lovins established the Colorado Rocky Mountain Institute, which explores links between energy,

Son of William O. Douglas dies

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — William Eugene Douglas Jr., son of the late Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas, died in an accident at his Eugene home. He was 56.

Douglas, a prominent local actor, director and teacher, was repairing an automobile when the vehicle slipped off a jack and crushed him last Thursday.

Douglas' ashes will be spread across a mountain lake in northeastern Oregon, a favorite family vacation spot, said his wife, Gretchen. A wake is planned March 4 at the Unitarian Church in Eugene, she said.

Douglas' final role was as Sidney Bruhl, the lead character in "Death Trap," a comedy thriller that closed

Feb. 4 at Lane Community College. Douglas began his acting career while studying English at Whitman College in Walla Walla, Wash.

As his interest in theater continued to grow, he traveled to France where he studied mime for five years under Marcel Marceau, the world's foremost mime artist. While in France, he earned a master's degree from the Sorbonne.

Douglas returned to the United States to work in television and movies. His credits included a part as a crewman in "PT-109," a movie based on the Navy experiences of former President John F. Kennedy and television roles in "Peyton Place" and "The Outer Limits," and his own series, a one-season show called "Weapons Man."

Douglas came to Oregon in the late 1970s and married in 1983, the year he moved to Eugene.

An ardent fan of playwright Sam Shepard, Douglas helped produce two of Shepard's plays locally, "Fool for Love" and "True West."

Douglas is survived by his wife, who lives at the family home in Eugene; two daughters, Sean Levison, of Washougal, Wash., and Eva Oveson, of Walla Walla, Ore.; a son, Pierre d'Arnaud, of Walla Walla; and four granddaughters. Douglas' father, who died in 1980, served on the Supreme Court from 1939 to 1975.

Santa Monica makes innovation. Computers connect city with its citizens

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Starting today Santa Monica residents can fire off a complaint to City Hall, look for a job or check to see if the latest best seller is at the library, all by tapping a few computer keys.

Touting itself as the city of the future, Santa Monica will be the first with a computer system that will allow residents with personal computers a direct hook-up with City Hall.

Officials say they will answer each computerized missive with a reply sent to that person's own computer.

But residents can use the system to do more than complain about municipal problems. They can comb the computer network to find out such things as where to get parking permits and dog licenses, what events are scheduled at the pier and the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium, which city agencies are hiring, and whether or not the books they want to pick up at the local library have already been checked out.

Eventually, the system will be used to apply for licenses and permits, said Assistant City Manager Lynne C. Barrette.

The idea is the brainchild of community activist Michael Hill.

"This is a marvelous way to access the (city) staff reports," said Hill, who suggested the computer network two years ago. "You can play a truly effective role. People who feel disenfranchised can find a way to be a part of government."

Not all reaction to the system has been positive, however.

Some officials fear the computer system will give this seaside community an air image as an elitist city catering to affluent personal computer owners. They hope to overcome that by setting up computer terminals at the library and other public centers to give everyone access.

Computer experts expressed concern that neither the public nor bureaucrats may be ready for such an innovation.

"It may overburden ambivalent department heads and city employees who want to be responsive but aren't getting additional resources," said Judith Payne, a social scientist at Santa Monica's Rand. Corp. think tank.

The cost of setting up the system has been nil, however. The $350,000 system, called Public Electronic Network, was a gift from two computer companies. Hewlett Packard provided the hardware and Metasystems Inc. donated the software programs.

The system is designed to work with any model personal computer. There is no charge to use the network, although frequent users will see their phone bills increasing, officials said.

Inflation worries affect market

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones industrial average posted a tiny gain Tuesday but broader market measures slumped in what some analysts say was a reflection of deepening worries about inflation and interest rates. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which climbed 38.75 points last week, eked out a gain of 1.61 points to close at 2,326.43.

The U.S. financial markets reopened Tuesday for the first time in three days after being closed on Monday in observance of the President's Day holiday.

Twin Falls tries to counter pet over-population

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - People who adopt dogs from the city shelter will have to sign contracts ensuring that their new pets will not be able to breed, thanks to a new city ordinance.

The City Council voted unanimously Tuesday to approve the ordinance that requires owners to spay or neuter their new pets.

As an incentive, however, the cost of the operation will be part of the standard adoption fee.

People for Pets Humane Society of the Magic Valley proposed the new ordinance to help control the ever-increasing stray-animal population, said Laurie Simonds, who heads the society.

"We need people who are willing to stop and face the problems confronting pets in our community," she said.

Under the new law, the adoption fee will stay at $35 for an adult dog, but it will also pay for the spaying or neutering, which costs about $85 at many animal clinics.

Of the fee, $30 will go to the veterinarian who performs the operation, and $15 will go to the city for a rabies vaccination, a license and an impound fee. Whoever adopts the dog will sign a contract to have the dog spayed or neutered, Simonds said.

The adoption fee for dogs already spayed or neutered will be $25, according to the new ordinance. The adoption fee for a puppy, now $4, rose to $35.

Along with their $30 share of the fee, participating veterinarians will be paid $10 by the humane society's Special Pet Owner Treasury fund.

The humane society will call people who adopt the pets to make sure they spray or neuter their new pets, according to the new ordinance.

Councilman Jim Vickers said he is pleased to see the efforts being taken by the humane society and hopes it will continue to find new ways to protect animals.

"I think this is the beginning of something good," Vickers said.

City Manager Tom Courtney said the new rules are the result of considerable planning on the part of the humane society.

The pound destroys about 50 dogs a month, Simonds said. Typically dogs are not kept longer than two days.

City Council members also unanimously approved a federally mandated citizen participation plan, which keeps the city in line for Idaho Community Development Block Grant Program money.

The resolution requires the city to hold at least one public hearing for each proposed block grant the city seeks. The grants are for projects such as airport and street construction.

Each hearing must include an explanation of why the project is needed, where funding will come from and how much it is for.

City officials must also provide translated transcripts for non-English-speaking residents.

County may take old Bon building

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - County commissioners are considering an offer by the owners of the old Bon Marche building, a county commissioner says.

County commissioners and staff on Tuesday toured the old downtown building, being offered by its New Jersey owners, the Hood family, said the Hood's attorney, Harry Turner.

County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said before the county accepts the building, however, commissioners want to make sure the county will not be straddled with expensive asbestos removal costs.

The owners are contracting to have asbestos removed from pipes at the building, but commissioners want to make sure that is the only source of asbestos at the building, Hempleman said.

"I don't want a white elephant," he said.

He said the county can have the building if it is able to take it over by May 1, when the current Bon lease expires. The county would also be required to pay some minor closing costs, Hempleman said.

The building, some 40,000 square feet of space, offers plenty of room for county offices and more, Hempleman said.

"We can see a lot of possibilities, but we can see a lot of headaches too," Hempleman said. "It's a monstrous building."

He said the building's renovation into office space would cost about $350,000 and heating it in the winter would cost between $2,500 and $3,000 a month.

The county is looking for a location to house six offices that would be displaced if the building they are in next to the hospital is demolished, Hempleman said.

The Hospital Board has voted not to demolish the building but the county fears it eventually will have to be because it would be so close to the front entrance of the hospital's proposed addition. If the board approves demolition, it would be responsible to replace the office space lost, Hempleman said.

The Hospital Board already has budgeted funds to replace space lost by the county when it demolishes two other buildings next to the hospital partially used by the county for storage, Hempleman said.

However, the hospital project is in limbo while county commissioners and hospital administration consider ways to amend this year's hospital budget to include the project.

Last week, 5th District Judge Daniel Harbutt declined to approve the budget amendment because he said it was out of his jurisdiction.

"If the additions cannot be made, the county offices would stay where they are," he said.

The departments being displaced are the Planning and Zoning Administration, the Weed Bureau, the Parks and Recreation Department, the Solid Waste Department, the University of Idaho Cooperative Extension Service and the federal Soil Conservation Service.

The agencies often interact and should be kept together in the same building, Hempleman said.

Along with the office space, he would like the new building to include:

Community group will help choose police chief

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A community group of eight has been chosen to help select the city's new public safety director, city officials say.

The following have accepted positions: Rudy Ashenbrenner, owner of Price Hardware; Dan Board, owner of Goodyear Tires; Paul Ostyn, a retired educator and former Twin Falls mayor; Ron Corbin, a chiropractor; Mike Glenn of the College of Southern Idaho; Mike McBride of Independent Meat; Jack Miller of Idaho Power Co.; and Donna Brizee, a CSI board member and owner of Brizee Heating and Air Conditioning.

The final positions were filled Tuesday, Mayor Doug Vollmer said.

This week the community group, the City Council and city employees will review applications from 10 prime candidates, whom they will rate from "most to least preferred," Vollmer said.

From that process, the top three to five candidates will be selected for interviews, he said.

Background checks will be done on each of the final candidates, Vollmer said.

The community group and city staff members will interview the candidates next week and make a recommendation to the City Council, which will then interview the candidates and make a final selection by March 10, he said.

The public safety director is in charge of the combined police and firefighting functions. Outgoing Director Tim Qualls plans to leave the post April 1.

In reviewing the applications, Vollmer said he likes three, who all have backgrounds in public safety and management.

He said the community group provides a forum for comments from a wide cross-section of town.

"We just felt like it was an important enough position that we wanted the community to have input," Vollmer said.

Law enforcement award runs in family

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Law enforcement runs in the family of a College of Southern Idaho graduate honored Tuesday during a crowded Board of Trustees meeting.

CSI President Gerald Meyerhaeffer presented law enforcement program graduate Brian W. Dobbs with the Claude E. Wiley Memorial Award, named after Dobbs' step-grandfather, a 35-year Twin Falls law enforcement veteran.

But the family's ties to police work don't stop there.

Dobbs' father, Wesley H. Dobbs, is a professor of law enforcement training at CSI.

"This means an unbelievable amount to me," said the younger Dobbs, "because of my father and grandfather."

The Wiley award has been given each year since 1965 to the CSI law enforcement graduate with the highest grade-point average. Dobbs graduated with a perfect 4.0 and has been hoping to earn the honor, due his family ties.

"I had no idea his mind was on winning the award," said Dobbs' father. "I am certain Brian will live up to the police badge and what it represents as well as to the sincere devotion to duty shown by Claude E. Wiley during his long career," he added.

At the time of his death, Wiley was Twin Falls County coroner. He also served as chief deputy of the sheriff's office, chief of police in Jerome, chief detective for Twin Falls and worked as an Idaho State Police officer.

While continuing his education at Boise State University, the award recipient works as an assistant psychiatric technician at Boise's Northwest Passage Hospital, a hospital for troubled teenagers.

Gooding Hospital seeks more Medicare

By MIKEL BENTON
Times-News correspondent

GOODING - The Gooding Hospital Board of Directors is looking at ways to increase the hospital's Medicare revenues.

Due to Medicare restrictions, the hospital currently is able to claim only expenses directly related to patient care. However, the Rural Health Clinics Act, passed in 1977 but rarely cited, allows certain clinics to be reimbursed for such indirect costs as quality assurance, physician recruitment and emergency room coverage.

Gooding hospital would have to establish a clinic to qualify for the program. The clinic could be located in the hospital and its function wouldn't necessarily differ from that of the hospital, Administrator Mike Pifer said.

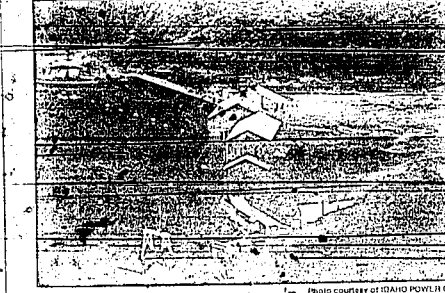

To qualify, a clinic must meet specific requirements. It must be located in a federally designated rural area which is experiencing a health manpower shortage. The Gooding hospital is ranked high in this regard, said Rick Spilvoev, of LHS, the company managing the hospital.

The clinic must also use physician extenders, such as nurse practitioners, at least three days a week.

The program could mean as much as an additional $100,000 annually for the hospital, Pifer said. The hospital should know more March 24 when representatives of May and Associates will be in Gooding to determine the feasibility of the project. Completion of the study is expected to take at least four months.

The charge for the feasibility study is $3,500, which LHS will pay, Spilvoev said. His firm hopes to gain

Swan Falls may double power capacity

By N.S. NORKENTVED
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Idaho Power Co. wants to rebuild its oldest power plant on the Snake River.

The Swan Falls Dam, built in 1901, was the first hydroelectric project on the Snake River. Idaho Power is seeking permission from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to build a new powerhouse and to double its generating capacity, at a cost of about $3.8 billion.

The commission had granted permission for the expansion when the Swan Falls license was renewed in 1982. But the utility, facing a power surplus, put its license amended to postpone the upgrading, said Larry Taylor, Idaho Power spokesman. The 1982 license included rebuilding of the dam's spillway which was completed in 1986. Idaho Power now must reapply for permission to rebuild its powerhouse and to increase its generating capacity to 25 megawatts from 12 megawatts.

Rather than rebuild the historic original powerhouse, the utility will build a new one. The new powerhouse, which will be located next to the existing building, will have two turbine-generators to replace the existing generators. The old powerhouse will be renovated and historic equipment put on public display, Taylor said.

The company hopes to complete the project within five years, though the timing will depend on the commission.

The original power plant was built by the Trade Dollar Mining Co. to power mines and the community of Silver City, about 24 miles away. Power from the dam was marketed by the Swan Falls Power Co. The dam was sold to Idaho Power in 1945.

The capacity of the original power plant was 900 kilowatts, or 900,000 watts. In 1913 two 1,250 kilowatt generators replaced the originals. Then in 1918 two more 1,250-kilowatt generators were added, along with four 800-kilowatt generators. Two generators totalling 11 megawatts, or 11,000 kilowatts, were added in 1941.

Two new turbines with a 25 megawatt capacity will replace the 10 old generators.

Renovation will not change the size of the reservoir. The new generators will be able to generate nearly twice as much power with the current flow. The facility is known as run-of-river dam because it depends on the flow of the river - instead of stored water in its small reservoir - to generate power. It takes advantage of water falling over a natural drop in river level rather than damming, a large amount of water to create the pressure needed to turn the generators.

Wendell School Board clarifies attendance policy for students

By TERRELL WILLIAMS

Another factor, he said, is that the petition requests some kind of rationality from parents as to why the absences were excessive.

WENDELL - Marilyn Pope says her son Ryan missed 11 days of school because of illness and the school should give him credit for the semester.

"Mrs. Pope chose not to submit anything... to the petition was denied," Crawford said.

School Superintendent George Crawford says the eighth grader's credit was denied mostly because of lack of parental comment.

Pope said her son has been chronically ill and she either called the school or sent written excuses each time her son was kept at home.

Also, he said, Ryan won't really be penalized because students don't lose credits until they reach 11th grade.

Crawford said an extraordinary circumstance usually is a single, very serious injury or sickness. "Pope asked the trustees to give parents an exact definition of 'extraordinary circumstances.'"

Trustee Don Fowler said it is better for a committee to review each case than to have a standard definition.

Trustee Don Fowler said it is better for a committee to review each case than to have a standard definition. He said the committee system is "excellent" and "fair" in enforcing state attendance standards.

Every student who missed more than 10 percent of class time can lose credit for classes but can petition for a variance. That petition, including written evidence on why the absences occurred, is reviewed by a committee of two teachers, two school counselors and two parents from the community.

Crawford later noted that the Pope case was the only one out of about 25 that was taken to the trustees. He said this shows the petition-committee system is working well.

The junior high uses the same report cards as the high school and Ryan was not given credit on his card.

Crawford said the junior high is included in the 90-percent attendance system to familiarize students into the process and teach them to be accountable for absences, even though there is no actual penalty for the younger students.

In this case, he said, the committee considered Ryan's absences to be normal rather than extraordinary.

The trustees, including Ryan's father Clayton Pope, took no action to

Bannock, Pocatello recruit physicians

POCATELLO (AP) - Bannock and Pocatello regional medical centers have contracted with a medical recruitment company to attract new physicians to the community.

Bannock administrator - Alan Stevenson said the hospitals were asked by the state internal medicine committee to hire the recruiters to bring new internists to the city.

Officials will meet with representatives from Jackson and Kohler's offices next week, Stevenson said. A number of physicians in Pocatello have retired or left the area in recent years, he said.

information from the study to use in other hospitals they manage.

Spilovsky explained the act to the Gooding Hospital Board Monday.

"Sometimes it can double what is reimbursed through the clinic," he told the board. "It reduces expenses throughout the hospital and benefits Medicare patients by decreasing their personal share."

Board Chairman Joyce Scanlon agreed this would be beneficial, noting that there is an abundance of Medicare patients in the area.

There are other benefits as well, Spilovsky said. Gooding's chances of recruiting doctors would increase because it is closer affiliation with the federal government.

Board member Bill Oakley said the program might help recruit physicians. "It should open the door and make it a little more interesting for a doctor to come here," he said.

Spilovsky said he knows of no disadvantages to the proposal. According to his figures, there are 10 such clinics in the nation. "It appears that these things are working great," he told the board.

Glenns Ferry police officer resigns; denies allegations

By THERESA CONSTANTINEAU
Times-News correspondent

GLENN'S FERRY - The Glenns Ferry City Council has accepted the resignation of former police officer Richard Bunker due to "repeated" instances of sleeping on the job, according to the city police chief.

Bunker, however, denied all allegations that he had been sleeping on the job but declined further comment. He said he would be willing to discuss other accusations after he's found another job.

Former officer Bunker was asked to resign due to repeated offenses of sleeping on the job," Chief Frank Segovia said. In one instance, Segovia said Bunker was found asleep during a convenience store stake-out about a month ago.

Segovia also said Bunker was suspended for three days after police department had received numerous complaints concerning his falling asleep while on duty.

Segovia also said Bunker was asked to resign, not forced to.

But Bunker said the request for his resignation was issued with the threatening overtones that he would be fired if he did not resign. "You do it or else," Bunker said.

In a related matter, the council decided to wait until later to decide whether to hire another full-time police officer for the city.

The city has decided to ask for more information on its lease with U.S. West Communications for a building it uses. The lease expires April 30 and the rent would be $720 for the coming year.

The council approved the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988, which requires anyone receiving federal grants to provide a drug-free workplace. The requirements for federal grant recipients of the act will become effective March 19.

Recipients must certify to the Environmental Protection Agency that they will meet the following requirements:

- Publish a drug-free policy statement that states that drugs are prohibited in the workplace and sets penalties for violations.
- Establish a drug-free awareness program.

- Issue a copy of the policy to all employees working under the assistance agreement.
- Notify employees that they must abide by the terms of the policy statement.
- Notify EPA of any employees convicted of a drug offense occurring in the workplace.

- Require satisfactory participation in a drug abuse rehabilitation program by any convicted employee.

Andrus OKs emergency Hawkins bill

BOISE - Gov. Cecil Andrus signed into law Tuesday a bill that will save Hawkins Co. Ltd. lien holders thousands of dollars.

The law, sponsored by Rep. Doug Jones, R-Filer, voids a requirement that growers send copies of their lien filings to all other lien holders by certified mail at a cost of about $2 a letter. Approximately 400 Hawkins Co. lien holders would have been re-program by any convicted employee.

- Make a good faith effort to maintain a drug-free policy.

The warehouse is in bankruptcy proceedings and the company has been under state control since inventory shortages were discovered and the owners' warehouse license was suspended Nov. 22.

The bill takes affect immediately.

Firefighters battle fire on roof of Kaiser Aluminum rolling mill east of Spokane, Wash.

Fire damages Kaiser rolling mill

SPOKANE (AP) - Fire damage to a portion of Kaiser Aluminum's Trentwood rolling mill "doesn't look that bad," a steelworkers' union official said Tuesday, but a company spokeswoman said it will take several days to assess damage.

Kaiser spokeswoman Susan Ashe said workers were reporting for their regular shifts, despite an estimated 100-square-foot hole that burned in the roof over the hot-rolling mill during Monday's fire.

Most of the plant's metal moves through the rolling mill during the production process, but it was not immediately known whether the fire damage would affect production.

It will take several days before the extent of damage is known, Ms. Ashe said, refusing to comment on any effects on the plant's production.

"We're going to run the rest of the mill flat out," she said of operations in the plant's undamaged portions. The Trentwood plant, about 10 miles east of Spokane, is Kaiser's only significant producer of rolled aluminum.

Bruce Walter, president of Steelworkers Local 338, said the roof of the building housing the mill was being repaired after Monday's fire, and that only a few of the 1,700 employees at Kaiser's Trentwood plant would be affected by shutting down the rolling mill.

"The mill doesn't look that bad," Walter said after meeting with the company's industrial relations department. "We're looking at maybe a couple of weeks (shutdown). We're just trying to come up with contingency plans."

The hot-rolling mill is one of three mills inside the giant plant. The mill building damaged in the fire is part of a $200 million operation called the "hot line," where ingots of aluminum are heated and rolled into coils to be cut into sheets.

Two of the mills were replaced in the early 1980s to enable Kaiser to produce aluminum meeting tougher quality standards. The replacements were part of a $260 million modernization of the Trentwood plant.

The blaze erupted suddenly Monday afternoon when a hydraulic gauge ruptured, spraying oil onto the ceiling above the mill. The oil ignited and flames shot through the roof, filling the building with smoke, but there were no serious injuries.

Fire crews brought the blaze under control in about an hour.

Measure requiring reporting of tax-exempt property narrowly clears the Senate

BOISE (AP) - A mandate that local assessors inventory and report on the amount of tax-exempt property in their counties has narrowly cleared the Idaho Senate.

"Let's get a handle on this thing," Sen. Rachel Gilbert, R-Boise, said late Tuesday in helping cajole her colleagues into approving the bill, S.B. 117.

The bill was prompted by increasing local disputes over the tax-exempt eligibility of fraternal and benevolent groups like the Lions and Eagles as well as the rising number of exemptions from the property tax rolls.

In addition to requiring the inventory, the bill also requires fraternal, benevolent and charitable organizations to apply for their property tax exemption annually - effectively forcing them to prove that their property is not being used for income-producing purposes.

The federal and state governments already have two-thirds of the land in the state off the tax rolls, leaving only about 31 percent of the state's 53 million acres.

But among that portion, Ms.

Gilbert said. "There are thousands and thousands of parcels off the tax rolls."

"There is a growing perception in this state that there are a lot of properties not on the tax rolls," she said.

She cited records for Ada County, the state's largest, that show nearly half the property is tax exempt, declaring, "These growing exemptions are eroding the tax base of this state."

The bill, recommended by a special legislative committee reviewing the property tax structure last summer, was targeted at fraternal, benevolent and charitable groups, Sen. Jerry Thorne, R-Nampa, said, because "this area is where we find all of the misuse of property-exempt status."

An exemption that was justified when it was originally granted, he said, may no longer be because the organization has changed the use of the property and is making money from it not directly related to its non-profit purpose.

Some critics claimed the bill was the first step toward stripping many of those groups of their tax exemption, maintaining their was no abuse in their areas, while others said the inventory posed an almost impossible task for assessors. They also complained that their were no guidelines on how the value of tax-exempt property should be determined.

But Thorne said he had no intention of "repealing any justified exemption. The bill, he said, will protect those and catch up with the ones using their property for money-raising purposes.

Tax exemption rollcall

Andrus lauds ban on nuclear waste

IDAHO FALLS (AP) - With his ban on further temporary storage of radioactive waste in Idaho now four months old, Gov. Cecil Andrus said Tuesday his action to force clean-up of waste at the federal Idaho National Engineering Laboratory is working.

"We have gotten their attention," Andrus told the National Engineer's Week dinner in Idaho Falls. "We are very close to getting the job done."

The Democratic chief executive took the optimistic stance as he prepared for Wednesday's meeting in Denver with Energy Department officials, Colorado Gov. Roy Romer and representatives of the state of New Mexico on progress being made to meet his conditions for lifting the ban.

Andrus said earlier in the week the session would be used to review the bidding, and if he is convinced the federal government has moved far enough in complying he will consider negotiating at least a partial reopening of INEL to temporary waste storage.

Most affected by the Oct. 19 ban, imposed because the government renewed a second time on opening a permanent waste repository in New Mexico, was the operation of the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons production plant in Colorado. The bulk of the waste being stored at INEL prior to the ban was coming from Rocky Flats and loss of that storage site has threatened continued operation of the facility.

The governor has demanded that the Energy Department open the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant in New Mexico, begin removing of more than 2 million cubic feet of radioactive waste now stored above ground at INEL and start cleaning up on the 2 million cubic feet of waste stored below ground at the eastern Idaho facility.

"All I have tried to do is give the process a final, positive nudge in the right direction, Andrus said Tuesday night in defending his actions and asserting his support for operations at INEL.

But, he added, "The site's future depends on public confidence and a comprehensive effort to clean-up the waste problems of the past."

"The people of Idaho will support growth at INEL," he declared. "What they won't support, and we won't support, is a waste disposal site. That is the issue I am trying to deal with."

In Washington, during a House Armed Services Committee hearing, Idaho Congressman Richard Stallings suggested the Energy Department take a serious look at relocating the Rocky Flats facility in New Mexico near the permanent waste repository since it generated much of the waste destined to be deposited there.

Latah panel battles over work hours

MOSCOW (AP) - Latah County Commissioners Dana Magnuson and Nancy Johansen contend the $4,944-a-year raise commissioners got last fall requires them to spend more time on the job, but Commissioner Tom Spangler disagrees.

Magnuson and Johansen work 21 hours a week, Spangler works 12. The commission unanimously agreed in January to create a 21-hour work week, scheduling board meetings for seven hours a day on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

But Spangler has been made to rearrange the afternoon hours he works as a bus driver for the Moscow School District. He regularly leaves commission meetings after 2 p.m.

"It's not a full-time job, although some people make it into one," Spangler said Tuesday. "The work has been getting done, period."

But Magnuson and Johansen argue that formal hearings have to be stopped when Spangler leaves. If Magnuson and Johansen hear a presentation in the afternoon, they must go over the subject again when Spangler is present.

South Carolina names grid coach
COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina reached into Division I-AA and named Appalachian State's Sparky Woods its football coach Tuesday, ending a search that began just over two weeks ago following the sudden death of Joe Morrison.

Woods coached the I-AA Mountaineers to Southern Conference titles in 1986 and 1987 and was named

Winnipeg coach moves to Stanford
STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Mike Riley, the Canadian Football League coach of the year in 1988, will leave the Winnipeg Blue Bombers to become Stanford's defensive coordinator, a Stanford assistant coach said Tuesday.

However, assistant coach Scott Schuhmann said the job will go to Riley, who led the Bombers to an upset, win over the British Columbian Lions in the Grey Cup in November.

Schuhmann, an offensive line coach in Winnipeg before joining Stanford last month, said he recommended Riley for the job but the school felt landing the Bombers' coach would be a long shot.

Dallas Mavericks trade Schrempf
DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks, still waiting for Adrian Dantley to end his holdout, traded forward Delf Schrempf and a second-round draft pick to the Indiana Pacers on Tuesday for forward Herb Williams.

The Mavericks own Indiana's first-round draft choice in 1990 if it's a lottery pick. If not, Dallas will get the 1991 choice. Indiana's second-round pick from Dallas comes in the year the Mavs get a first-round selection.

Schrempf has worked hard for us these past four years and we believe he will fit into Indiana's running offense in a positive way," said Dallas' chief operating officer and general manager Norm Sonja. "This trade should benefit both teams. I've always respected Williams as a shot blocker and as a force who can play power forward as well as center."

The 31-year-old, 6-foot-11 Williams, a first-round draft pick in 1981, was averaging 12 points and eight rebounds a game.

Illinois, 22-4 and 9-4 in the Big Ten, got 29 points from Kenny Battle, 14 from Lowell Hamilton, and 12 by Larry Smith.

Tony Jones scored 20 points for Purdue, 11-15 and 4-9 in the conference.

With a 45-23 advantage at the start of the second half, Illinois continued to coast. It was the worst defeat of the season for Purdue.

Stanford 68 USC 52

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Howard Wright scored 20 points Monday night and No. 16 Stanford held Southern California without a field goal for more than 10 minutes late in the game as the Cardinals rolled to a 68-52 Pacific-10 Conference victory.

The win was the sixth in a row for the Cardinal, which has won 16 of its last 18 games. Stanford has won 10 straight over the Trojans.

Todd Licht added 16 points for the Cardinal, 21-5 and 12-3 in Pac-10 play.

Sophomore forward Ronnie Coleman led Southern Cal, which fell to 1-13 in conference play and 8-18 overall, with a career-high 26 points and eight rebounds. No other Trojan scored more than six points.

Stanford led by as many as 13 points before settling for a 39-31 halftime lead. The Trojans outscored the Cardinal 12-3 to begin the second half to take a 43-42 advantage, their only lead of the game.

However, Stanford scored the game's next five points to go ahead for good. It was 49-45 with 10:06 remaining when the Cardinal began a onside led. Joel Tribelhorn extended the Rams' lead with two free throws in the closing seconds.

Durham had 19 points on the night to lead the Rams, followed by Tribelhorn with 16.

High-scorers for the Falcons were Dudley with 23 points, including four 3-pointers, and Bowling with 11.

S. Methodist 99 Baylor 66

DALLAS (AP) — LeQuita Smith scored 21 points Monday night to lead Southern Methodist to victory over Baylor 99-66, the most points the Lady Mustangs have scored all season.

Baylor went four minutes without scoring early in the second half as SMU extended its 51-38 halftime lead to 70-33.

SMU moves to 11-9, 7-5 in the Southwest Conference. Baylor is 3-19, 1-11 in the SWC.

Bonnie Henson scored 20 points while LaNita Luckey scored 16 and had six rebounds to lead the Bears.

SMU's 99 points are the team's third highest scoring total in school history.

The game was scheduled to be played Feb. 11 but was rescheduled following the death of Baylor player Angel Gist, who was killed in a car accident early that morning.

Seton Hall 63 St. John's 60

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — John Morton scored all 22 of his points in the second half and Andrew Gaze's two free throws with 2:17 left broke the final tie Tuesday night as No. 15 Seton Hall beat St. John's 63-60.

The Pirates assured their first win-and-out season in the Big East with their ninth victory in 14 conference games.

Jayson Williams scored 4-25 points for St. John's, 14-10 and 5-8, which lost to Seton Hall for the second time this season, the first time that happened in the Big East.

Neither team led by more than five points in the second half. There were five lead changes and six ties, the last as when Williams scored on a drive with 2:24 remaining.

Greenwell, Seitzer settle; rumors of Mariners trade downplayed

Boston Red Sox 3rd baseman Wade Boggs dives for a ground ball during training camp Tuesday.

By The Associated Press

Mike Greenwell of the Boston Red Sox and Kevin Seitzer of the Kansas City Royals settled their contract disputes Tuesday, while Ramon Martinez and Gilberto Reyes of the Los Angeles Dodgers solved their visa problems. However, reports that the Seattle Mariners were about to trade pitcher Mark Langston to the New York Mets appeared to be somewhat premature. Greenwell and the Red Sox ended more than a month of difficult negotiations when they agreed to a two-year deal worth $1.725 million. Earlier in the day, Greenwell and his agent walked out after the Red Sox refused to offer more than $1.7 million.

"We were too close and I didn't want the thing to fall apart," said Greenwell, who hit .325 in 1988 with 22 homers and 119 runs batted in. "We didn't call. We just walked in and said let's try to get it done. It was frustrating at times, a lot of ups and downs. But now I'm very happy with it. It's an excellent package."

Greenwell, agent Joe Groba, Boston general manager Lou Gorman and Red Sox co-owner Haywood Sullivan sat in the left-field seats at Boston's spring ballpark in Winter Haven, Fla., working out the final details.

Greenwell will get $500,000 this year and $1.225 million in 1990. In addition, he would get a $100,000 for winning the American League MVP, $75,000 for finishing second in the voting and $50,000 for finishing third.

He earned $205,000 in base salary last year plus $100,000 in bonuses.

"I'm an honest person who wants to play baseball and have fun doing it," said Greenwell, who is 75 days short of salary arbitration eligibility. "Now I can do that and try to help the team win a World Series."

Seitzer, who finished second to Oakland's Mark McGwire in the 1987 AL rookie of the year voting, agreed to a one-year deal for $340,000, a raise of $155,000.

He hit .304 last season with five homers and 60 RBI after batting .323 as a rookie with 15 homers and 83 RBI.

Meanwhile, the Dodgers said they expected Martinez and Reyes to be at Vero Beach, Fla., Thursday. Martinez, a pitcher, and Reyes, a catcher, both are in the Dominican Republic and were awaiting their papers.

Camp News

There was a report Tuesday that Seattle and the Mets had agreed on a deal that would send Langston, outfielder Jay Buhner and infielder Jim Bowie to New York for pitchers Sid Fernandez, David West and Kevin Tapani and infielder Howard Johnson. The report, in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, said that Mariners general manager Woody Woodward was waiting for approval from Seattle owner George Argyros.

However, a management source denied that the deal was that far along and Ara Tullium, Langston's agent, said that he knew nothing about it other than the rumors.

"I would presume that if a team was trading for Mark, given the way things work in baseball today, that they want to work out a multi-year deal," Tullium said. "I have not heard from Seattle or the Mets and as of last night, neither had Mark."

Langston last month agreed to a one-year deal with Seattle worth $1.3 million. He can also be a free agent at the end of the season. Also a focus of trade talk was Atlanta Braves center fielder Dale Murphy from the rumor mill.

"Right now we're assuming that Dale will be here this year," Braves general manager Bobby Cox said. "Some clubs may be willing to make a deal, but there's nothing happening right now."

Cox said he will keep exploring trades for Murphy, who slumped last year to .226 with 21 homers and 77 RBI.

"They're going to have to give us what we want," Cox said.

Medical Report

Several Chicago Cubs pitchers Tuesday talked about their recoveries from injuries.

"There's about three or four of us that need to show the Cub organization we're healthy," said Pat Perry, who had back pains last year and went 2-2.

"I've just got to work slowly," said Al Nipper, who went 2-4 in 1988 while he was bothered by a sore elbow. "I'm healthy, so that's all I can ask."

"I don't have any expectations," said Scott Sanderson, who was 1-2 and had back surgery. "My plans are to show this team and the baseball world that I still have a lot of years left to pitch." The San Francisco Giants, who had every starting pitcher miss at least one start because of injuries last year, named Rick Reuschel to pitch against San Diego on opening day.

University files intent to question Reporter's source interests Kentucky

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The University of Kentucky told a court Tuesday that it plans to question a newspaper reporter about his source for confidential information about the school's response to NCAA allegations about its basketball program.

A notice of intent filed in Fayette Circuit Court was made part of the suit filed by the Lexington Herald-Leader and The (Louisville) Courier-Journal to make the response a public record, according to university spokesman Bernie Vanderheide.

The Courier-Journal reported Sunday that Kentucky's response indicated Coach Eddie Sutton may have wanted a high school basketball coach "to give false and misleading information to the NCAA" about the transportation of Kentucky basketball players Eric Manuel and Sean Sutton to a college entrance exam in Lexington in June 1987.

Sutton started the College of Southern Idaho basketball program and coached at CSI for three years. The allegation concerning Sutton was not part of the NCAA's 18 allegations against the program, and Sutton has denied any improper conduct.

The story, written by Richard Wilson, quoted directly from Kentucky's response. The university will seek the deposition from Wilson about March 1, Vanderheide said.

The leak prompted two members of the university's board of trustees to call Monday for an investigation.

David Hawpe, editor of The Courier-Journal, on Tuesday said, "I'm surprised and disappointed that UK would pursue this. It appears to be an effort to intimidate and harass our reporter. If they want this information, why don't they ask the people who have the report? UK knows, or ought to know, that forcing our reporter to break the confidentiality of his sources would clearly violate Kentucky law and the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution."

Vanderheide said that the lawyers for Manuel, assistant Kentucky coach Duane Casey, Lexington Lafayette High School basketball coach Donnie Harville and Sutton also have copies of at least parts of the response.

Vanderheide, however, said the attorneys would not be under restrictions facing the university in withholding the response from the public. "They're pretty much on their own," he said. "But any person with the response could incur the same problems that the university is encountering."

Horner near salary agreement

Baltimore Sun

SARASOTA, Fla. — Bucky Wojo, who represents free agent first baseman-designate Bitter Bob Horner, said Tuesday that he was real close to working a deal with the Baltimore Orioles to bring Horner to camp.

Wojo said that Horner, 31, would probably be brought in on a "best case" basis, but that Orioles General Manager Roland Hemond would call him Wednesday with a contract proposal in case the team decides Horner is healthy and worth a contract and that's privacy of the individuals named.

"There's no legal impediment to their doing what they want, but they could face the same liability."

Terry McBrayer, Eddie Sutton's attorney, charged that a university official leaked part of the response in an effort to promote the firing of Sutton at the end of the season.

The university maintained Monday that it was not responsible for the leaks.

The only two people with copies of the response were questioned and assured the university's legal counsel that they had not released any portion of the document to the newspaper, Vanderheide said.

"The University of Kentucky wants its alumni and friends and fans to know no one at the university released this information," Vanderheide said Monday.

"I don't know where it's coming from but it's coming from somewhere in the university," Sutton said after Kentucky's 77-75 loss to Auburn Monday night. "I thought when we submitted all the information to the NCAA that we would not hear anymore until we went before the infractions committee."

Sutton also said he had no plans to resign as coach.

"I am certainly not planning to leave," Sutton said. "I'm out there recruiting as hard as I can and coaching as hard as I can."

On his program radio show, Sutton said he favored release of the response.

"Rather than this happening piece by piece," Sutton said, "I'm very much in favor of releasing the whole 2,200 pages and let everybody take a look at it. That's better, for it to come out, than for that (the leaks) to keep happening."

McBrayer, asked why he thought the leak was from the university, said, "There were only a very limited number of people who have the responses, and most of those rest with the university."

McBrayer said others who have copies would have had no interest in leaking the response. He declined to identify anyone not connected with Kentucky who has at least partial copies of the responses.

Kentucky's response to the 18 NCAA allegations of wrongdoing against its basketball program was completed earlier this month after a nine-month internal investigation.

Horner underwent left shoulder surgery last summer and didn't play after early June.

"I'm guardedly optimistic that I had good about this," Wojo said. "Unless Holland totally shucks me with his contract numbers, and I don't think he will, I think we can cut a deal tomorrow, or at least have Bob ready to report Thursday and work out Friday. I expect this deal to work out."

Wojo said a deadline would probably be set for the Orioles' 76 deadline they want to sign Horner and used March 20 as an unofficial date.

Homebaked pizza has no equal

A pizza freshly baked and hot from your home oven has no equal. And it's not hard to make. All you need are three basics: a crisp crust, flavorful spaghetti sauce and premium-quality cheese. You may want to throw on some traditional toppings such as mushrooms, ripe olives and pepperoni slices or, you decide to be innovative, topping your pizza with artichoke hearts and prosciutto.

Follow the Master Pizza Dough recipe here and choose a pizza to suit your mood or appetite. You'll find recipes for closed-in a crisp pocket of dough. Serve hot from the oven or make ahead, freeze and reheat for a fast weeknight supper.

Cheese lovers will adore the Four-Cheese Pizza. The sharp, bold flavor of aged cheddar and Parmesan cheeses contrasts happily with mild mozzarella and tangy Fontinella. A hint of garlic and zesty red pepper flakes rounds out the flavor sensation.

Buono Appetito!

MASTER PIZZA DOUGH

Makes dough for two pizzas
5 1/4 to 6 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 package rapid rise, or active dry yeast

2 cups water
1/4 cup olive oil or vegetable oil
In large bowl combine 2 cups flour, salt and yeast. In small saucepan heat water and olive oil to 125 to 130 degrees. Add to dry ingredients; beat 2 minutes with electric mixer at medium speed, scraping bowl occasionally. Then beat 2 minutes at high speed, scraping bowl occasionally. With spoon, stir in enough remaining flour to make soft dough. Knead on lightly floured surface until smooth and elastic, 4 to 6 minutes. Cover, let rest 10 minutes (20 minutes for active dry yeast). Divide in half; shape and bake half according to selected recipe. Freeze remaining half.

COUNTRY DEEP DISH PIZZA

Filling:
1 pound onions, sliced
2 tablespoons olive oil
1/4 cup crumbled crisp bacon (about 1/2-pound uncooked)

1 egg
Black pepper to taste
2 cups shredded mozzarella and/or provolone cheese (8-ounce)
1 cup spaghetti sauce
1/4 cup grated Parmesan or Asinigo cheese (1/2-ounce)
Dough:
2 3/4 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 package rapid rise or active dry yeast
1 teaspoon rosemary leaves
1 cup very warm water (125 to 130 degrees)

2 tablespoons olive oil
1 egg at room temperature

Tips for perfect pizza

When making a large pizza, put less topping in the center so that the pizza cooks evenly and the crust becomes crisp.

Sprinkle baking pan with cornmeal to give crust added texture and crispness. After baking, transfer pizza to a wire rack to retain crisp crust.

One easy way to cut thin-crust pizza is to use kitchen scissors. You get neat slices and pans aren't scratched by a pizza cutter or knife. Allow pizza to cool briefly before cutting.

To freeze pizza dough: Wrap airtight in double thickness of plastic wrap or aluminum foil. Freeze up to 2 months. Thaw at room temperature or in refrigerator. Use as directed in selected recipe.

Perfect for a party, the Four Seasons Pizza features an elegant combination of artichoke hearts, ripe olives, prosciutto, crunchy walnuts, thick spaghetti sauce, mushrooms and mozzarella cheese.

For a heartier meal try Country Deep-Dish Pizza. Its home-style filling combines crumbled bacon, sweet onions, flavorful spaghetti sauce and two cheeses. An easy no-knead batter dough flavored with rosemary provides a flavorful crust.

A calzone provides a new twist on the classic pizza. This pizza-style turnover features a hearty filling of tangy feta cheese, eggplant and spaghetti sauce en-

Cooking for 2 may call for adjustments

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Cooking for two, again — after years of feeding a family, means making some adjustments in recipes and grocery shopping. After the last of Shirley Hull's three children left home 15 years ago, she says she overshopped and overcooked before making the necessary adjustments.

"You don't realize what a change it is if you're used to feeding three or four and all of a sudden you're feeding two," she says.

Hull likes her food to be fresh, so in choosing recipes for two, she looks for those that will not have leftovers.

When purchasing fresh fish, she picks up just enough for one meal. Hull says she buys meats that perhaps cost a little more per pound, but have no waste.

She cuts pork tenderloin into four sections; cooks one and freezes three for a later date. "You don't have to have a whole roast," Hull says. "You can make little breaded cutlets with those real easy."

She bakes her own bread, but because Hull and her husband, Gene, do not finish a whole loaf very fast, she cuts them in half and freezes the bread that way.

Along with sharing recipes for one of her delicious, but quick-to-fix meals, Hull offers this tip for storing chicken broth.

After straining the broth and removing the fat, pour it into an ice cube tray, freeze it, pop the cubes into a plastic bag and return them to the freezer. Then when a recipe calls for two tablespoons, a cup or whatever, take out only as many cubes as it will take for the required amount. And now, let's make dinner, starting with...

CHICKEN CUTLETS WITH

SHERRY MUSHROOM SAUCE

1 package of 4 chicken breasts with ribs (or, if desired, buy the boneless, skinned ones). When making this for two, a couple of the pieces may be bagged and frozen for another meal.

1/2 to 1 cup chicken broth (instructions for making your own follow — otherwise use the canned variety or the chicken cubes)

Milk
Flour
1 egg
Bread crumbs
Olive oil
Margarine

About 1 to 1 1/2 cups sliced fresh mushrooms.

1/4 cup dry sherry (optional)
Salt and pepper, to taste
1/2 to 1/4 teaspoon Seasoned Salt
1/2 teaspoon tarragon or marjoram leaves

Bone out the breast meat and discard the skin. For the broth, simmer the bones, barely covered with water, along with a bay leaf, celery leaves, salt and pepper, for about 1/2 hour to 45 minutes, until the meat falls off easily. This will make 1/2 to 1 cup broth.

Put chicken breasts in just enough milk to cover. Soak for about 1 hour. Remove from milk and pound with a saucer, meat pounder or knife, just enough to flatten it a little and tenderize the outer membrane. Be careful not to break the pieces apart in doing so. Dust chicken in flour, dip into beaten egg, and lightly turn it in bread crumbs. Put chicken pieces on a cake rack, and let stand for at least 1/2 hour. If the room is warm, refrigerate it. This helps to keep the breading from falling off during cooking.

When the rest of this dinner is ready, in a skillet heat about 1 tablespoon olive oil and 1 tablespoon margarine (using a Teflon-coated pan, this should be enough — otherwise, gauge accordingly). Fry chicken about 5 minutes per side, on medium-high heat.

While chicken is cooking, put the sliced mushrooms in another skillet, with a little olive oil and margarine. Sauté them a little, and then remove the cutlets.

If there is not enough oil left over in the pan to make about 2 tablespoonsful, add margarine. Then add 1 tablespoon of flour, and heat until golden brown. Carefully pour in

Light cuisine can keep its good taste

By ROSE DOSTI
The Los Angeles Times

Have you decided, like many of us who want to keep weight down and health status up, to "go light" on cooking?

You know, low-fat and low-calorie cooking. But you probably also want the cooking to be glamorous and appetizing, and, last but not least, fast and easy.

Tall order, yes, but we are here to help.

We have put together a group of recipes that we hope will give the cook a good idea of how simple it is to reduce fat and calories in almost any recipe you choose without loss of taste or looks. You'll get excellent results by using proper ingredients and cooking methods that are aimed at reducing fat while keeping appeal high.

In the recipes given here, we try to show how normally healthy persons can reduce fat content, not by eliminating fat, but by cutting down.

Some red meats contain more fat than others. Meats such as sirloin, top loin, chuck arm and blade and round beef contain less total fat than brisket, rib roast and tenderloin. However, taste often dictates choice, and moderation should, therefore, be a guide.

Steaming, poaching and broiling will automatically cut fat content, because little or no extra fat is necessary in these cooking methods. But you won't have to eliminate grilling or stir-frying if you reduce the amount of fat in the recipe. Investing in non-stick skillets can help too (Using liquid fat will help keep cholesterol down, as well).

In our recipe for Grilled Chicken Wrapped in Radicchio, we used only 2 teaspoons oil instead of the 2 tablespoons called for in the original

Wine: Seeking a taste of the vintage years

By DAN BERGER
The Los Angeles Times

Just because a wine is old is no reason to revere it. On the other hand, some old wine, carefully nurtured, can be a treasure worth cooing over.

All this came to mind several weeks ago when, within a 24-hour period, I had a chance to taste four dozen old treasures dating back to the early 1970s. Doesn't sound particularly old? If you had been there for about 40 of the wines, you would realize how wizened some of them had become.

The first event was put together by the Hotel Sofitel chain in San Francisco, which had bought a collection of wine from the wine cellar of the Beverly Wilshire Hotel in Beverly Hills, Calif. Well, perhaps it wasn't a "cellar." It appeared that most of the wines had been stored in the trunk of an Oldsmobile.

Sofitel bought about 4,000 bottles of wine dating back to the 1960s. Most of the imports appeared to be in good shape. Executives were worried, however, about the California wines. Fearing some bottles were not stored properly, they in Beverly Hills.

Rather than take any chances, the Sofitel asked a dozen wine experts to evaluate the bulk of the

Chill beaters, bowl before whipping cream

By JOAN DRAKE
The Los Angeles Times

Back to Basics

A recent column on beating egg whites prompted a request for a similar technique — whipping cream correctly. Once again a wire whisk can be used for the task, but those lacking a strong arm may opt for an electric mixer.

It is important to begin with a bowl and beaters that are not only spotlessly clean but well-chilled in the refrigerator. The whipping cream also should be well-chilled and at least a day old (hardly a problem for the average consumer). Fat content of the cream must be between 30 percent and 40 percent for it to whip satisfactorily.

The cream will double in volume during whipping, so place it in a bowl large enough to accommodate this increase and whip on medium-high speed.

After a few seconds the cream will become frothy. This is the stage to begin adding sugar or flavorings, if desired. As the cream begins to thicken, lower the mixer speed and watch carefully, periodically stopping to check the progress.

Cream beaten to the soft peak stage is soft, still glossy and incorporates well with other ingredients. When the beaters are lifted, the cream folds in soft peaks or drops in large globs. This is comparable to the stiff, but not dry, stage of beaten egg whites.

If the cream is to be used decoratively, continue beating to the stiff peak stage. It may then be spooned in dollops, sculpted or placed in a pastry bag with a decorative tip.

Overbeaten cream will eventually clump and turn to butter. If only slightly overbeaten, however, it is possible to recover the product by adding one to two more tablespoons cream and continuing to beat.

It is best to whip cream just before using. If it must be prepared ahead, some sources suggest adding a small amount of powdered sugar during the beating process. The cornstarch in this type of sugar acts as a stabilizer. Other references suggest adding a packet of unflavored gelatin, softened in one tablespoon water, for each cup of whipping cream. Beat the gelatin in as the cream begins to stiffen.

Kitchen gadgets available to please any cook

By The Los Angeles Times

The mandolin is music to the ears of the many cooks who take pride in custom cutting fruits and vegetables for a beautiful presentation. The smooth sweep of a food item into the sharp blades of this slicing device makes the most evenly julienned, French-origins tool does it all for you. Once you have mastered the mandolin, you may prefer it over a food processor for its evenness in cutting spuds for French fries and sliced rice rounds of firm foods such as sweet potatoes, zucchini, carrots, apples, turnips and beets.

Manufactured in West Germany, the Boerner V-Slicer is the type of mandolin that never fails to capture a crowd and hold their attention when demonstrated. The product always gets "oohs" and "aahs" for swooshing pretty lattice slices, long, thin shreds of carrots and perfect potato matchsticks. Everyone wonders at the super thinness of sliced tomatoes, sweet peppers, potatoes, mushrooms, leeks, daikon radish and whatever fruit or vegetable is on hand at the moment. What amazes people isn't just the uniformity of the results but the swiftness and smoothness of the whole operation.

Can the inexperienced perform as well as the professional demonstrators? With just a little practice, yes; in fact, we found it rather easy after several tries.

"You have to go home and actually do it," says John Duncan, sales representative for Marjorie Duncan & Associates. "The trick is not to strain or push but do it in a relaxed way, applying light pressure." One of Duncan's favorite applications is creating fine shreds of apples to sprinkle over his bowl of cereal.

When using the tool, it is important that you follow directions carefully and use the safety holder or protector to keep fingers safely away from blade injury when processing the food. The holder guides the item to be sliced across the blade, pressing it in place with steel prongs. A small knob pushes the food down as it is processed. Long vegetables such as zucchini, cucumber and daikon, when sliced crosswise, may not require the holder until the produce reaches an unsafe, shorter size.

Molded of sturdy plastic with sharp metal blade inserts, the Boerner blade system features extra attachments that offer other garnishing cuts.

Another brand of mandolin slicer comes from Leifheit in West Germany. Well-designed, the product is made from a very durable plastic material fitted with a blade that never needs sharpening. The Vario-Slicer ($21.95) is easy to use and stores conveniently. Aside from slicing tomatoes, fruit, cheese and cold meats, it will also shred cabbage for coleslaw and cut potatoes for chips.

The unit consists of a ridged frame with handle; a stainless steel blade with scalloped edge, a side adjustment for regulating thick and thin slices, liquid draining slots and a safety food holder. On the underside of the frame is a wave-form base that sits securely on the rim of a bowl for ease in slicing.

Leifheit also carries the 4-in-1

Grater-Slicer ($27.95). Similar in frame design to the Boerner, it has four interchangeable steel blades for slicing, for pureeing and for shredding ranging from coarse to fine size. Dishwasher safe, the blades are rust-proof. The set also comes with a safety protector.

about 1/2 to 3/4 cup of the chicken broth, stirring as you go. If omitted the sherry, add up to 1 cup of the broth. Add sherry, salt, pepper and seasoned salt. Rub tarragon or marjoram leaves between hands to pulverize, and drop it into the sauce. When sauce thickens, put the mushrooms in and stir.

To serve, put a little mushroom sauce on each chicken cutlet.

Hull says you really need to have the other part of the meal pretty much ready to go on the table because this should be served while it's warm. The sauce tends to cool quickly, and then set up. The chicken may be kept warm in the oven while making the sauce, if necessary.

And for a vegetable, try...

Salt and pepper to taste
Cut carrots into about 1/2-inch thick slices, until there are enough to fill an 8- or 9-inch saucpan about 1-inch deep. If doubling the recipe, use a saucpan with a larger diameter. Cover just to top of carrots (no more) with water. Add honey or sugar and butter or margarine, salt and pepper. Rub tarragon between hands, and add to carrots. Bring to boiling, uncovered. Turn heat to where it boils steady, but not hard. Watch as this cooks. It will take about 10 minutes for all the water to boil away. The carrots will be left with a glaze, and should be crisp-tender. Stir to mix.

Using the tarragon, the carrots will have little green flecks. This also will give them a pungent flavor. Round out this meal with a...

SPINACH SALAD

Serves four for just enough for two can be prepared, storing the rest of ingredients in the refrigerator for another meal. If doing this, leave the pit in the avocado.

1 bunch spinach leaves, washed, patted dry and refrigerated
1 large pink grapefruit, seeded and the sections separated from the membrane, using a knife, leaving them as whole as possible

A small portion of a red onion, sliced paper thin

1 large or 2 small avocados
Italian dressing

The spinach and grapefruit may be prepared ahead and refrigerated. When ready to serve, peel avocado. Divide spinach onto four plates. Arrange grapefruit over it. Put a few slices of red onion around that. Slice avocado full lengthwise about 1/2 to 1-inch, and lay it in a spiral on plate. Pour a little bit of Italian dressing around all of the salad. Do not toss ahead of time, as your salad will not taste as good.

Japanese receive permission to import puffer fish into U.S.

By The Los Angeles Times

Japanese seafood firms have received permission to export the infamous fugu, or puffer fish, into the United States.

The fish, whose toxin claims several lives each year in Japan, is considered a delicacy.

Since 1980, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration had banned import of fugu because the species contained tetrodotoxin, a strong poison, for which there are no known antidotes.

The FDA's change of heart was contingent upon importers meeting several restrictions that are designed to ensure adequate consumer safeguards.

Wine

California collection. Red wines only. Among those brought in to taste were Andrew Lawlor of Dexter, Mich., and Haskell Norman of Marin County, Calif., two of the most knowledgeable wine collectors in the United States.

The experience was near disaster. After going through six flights of wine, the conclusion was obvious: the wines all tasted as if they had been kept in erratic storage conditions; in which temperatures were allowed to rise and fall. Most of the wines tasted cooked.

In the first flight of four Merlots, only the 1979 Keenan seemed to be going strong. A '75 Bynum and '76 Chateau St. Jean were "maderized." In a flight of Zinfandels, a '76 Caymus was fine, but 1977s from Tuloca, Estrella River and Montevina were shot.

It got worse. In the Pinot Noir flight, we discovered Hanzell wines from 1976, 1977 and 1978 to be dull and oxidized; '77 Santa Cruz Mountain Vineyard was so tannic as to be undrinkable; '77 Trefethen and '78 Mt. Eden were flat. Only the '77 School House and '78 Chalene showed signs of life.

The Cabernets were in better shape, but all clearly had seen better days. Among the sad experiences were 1972 Heitz Martha's Vineyard; 1974s Beaulieu Private Reserve, Mondavi Reserve; and Gemello; a handful of 1976s (of which the Caymus showed best) and 1977s.

In general, all the wines had brownish edges, and some were downright prune-brown in color. Oxidized odors filled the room.

The hotel chain is to be commended for dealing with this situation before a knowledgeable consumer got a bottle at dinner and created a stir.

The following evening, Bob Andrews of Santa Rosa, Calif., an inveterate wine collector, staged a birthday party for 50 friends. The wines served were 15 magnums. All the 50-ounce bottles had been stored perfectly in a cellar in which the temperature varies no more than a few degrees year-round.

The wines were impeccable. Not only were they well-chosen, but the perfect storage conditions had made them smell and taste fresh and lively — and the experience was all the more exciting for me because I had just come from the sadness of the hotel evaluation a day earlier.

...until golden, 10 to 15 minutes; cool. Stir in bacon, egg and pepper; reserve.

Prepare dough while onions cook: Combine 1 cup flour, salt, yeast and rosemary in large bowl. Add very warm water and oil. Beat 2 minutes at low speed with electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add egg and 1/2 cup flour; beat 2 minutes at high speed. With spoon, stir in enough remaining flour to make stiff batter. Cover, let rest 10 minutes + 20 minutes for active dry yeast; stir batter down. With back of large spoon or greased hands, spread batter in bottom and up sides of greased 9-inch springform pan.

Sprinkle mozzarella cheese over dough. Top with onion mixture. Spread spaghetti sauce over top. Cover loosely with plastic wrap. Let rise in warm, draft free place 20 minutes.

Bake at 400 degrees for 40 minutes. Remove sides of pan. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese and return to oven 10 more minutes or until golden. Cool on base of pan on wire rack 15 minutes. Cut into 6 wedges.

To cook bacon in microwave, arrange bacon slices on 3 layers of paper towels and cover with another towel. Cook bacon on High for 5 to 6 minutes, or until crisp.

1 1/2 cups spaghetti sauce
2 ounces thinly sliced prosciutto or ham, cut into strips
1 jar (6-ounces) marinated artichoke hearts, drained, cut into thin wedges
1/2 cup pitted ripe olives, halved
1 cup sliced mushrooms
1/4 cup chopped walnuts
2 tablespoons olive oil
Grated Parmesan cheese, optional

Prepare pizza dough. Spread dough evenly in greased 14-inch pizza pan. Sprinkle 1 cup Fontina cheese evenly over dough. Cover with spaghetti sauce. Place remaining Fontina cheese in center to form 2- to 3-inch circle. Arrange prosciutto in a ring around cheese. Arrange mushrooms in a ring around the edge of crust. Top with walnuts. Lightly brush top with olive oil. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese, if desired. Bake at 435 degrees for 20 to 25 minutes or until crust is crisp and lightly browned. Cut into 8 wedges.

until soft but not brown. Add eggplant; continue to cook, stirring occasionally, for 15 minutes or until eggplant is soft. Stir in spaghetti sauce. Cook about 5 minutes to blend flavors; cool. Add mozzarella and feta cheeses and olives to sauce; set aside.

Punch dough down. Divide into 8 equal pieces. Roll each piece into 7-inch circle. Place about 1/2 cup filling on 1/2 of each circle. Fold dough over filling; pinch seam or press with tines of fork to seal. Place pizzas on oiled baking sheets. Cover; let rise in warm, draft-free place until doubled in size, about 30 minutes. Bake at 400 degrees for 25 minutes or until crust is lightly browned. Serve warm.

recipe, (a saving of 135 calories) to cook the radicchio rolls in a skillet. We also used 2 teaspoons oil in a pasta dish containing tomatoes. The same dish using the normal amount of fat (about one-quarter cup butter) would have contained more than 300 additional calories.

A skillet dish in which vegetables are combined with eggs for a brunch entree uses only 2 teaspoons of oil to cook the vegetables, before adding eggs for poaching. Eggs are an excellent low calorie and fat alternative to most meats, chicken with skin and even some high fat fish such as salmon, trout or mackerel, for persons without cholesterol restrictions. An egg contains 4.6 grams total fat (1.7 grams saturated fat), but 255 milligrams cholesterol, compared with 27 grams total (10.6 grams saturated fat) and 85 milligrams cholesterol for ground meat, and 34 grams total fat (4.4 grams saturated fat), and 91 milligrams cholesterol for roast chicken with skin. We used less-fatty ground turkey instead of beef for a Greek-Style burger, and lean sirloin steak (instead of the more fatty tender cuts) for a stir-fry steak and potato dish.

Lean leg of lamb was the choice for a curry using lean meat. You can try the same recipe with skinless chicken, turkey, shrimp, fish or vegetables, as well.

Low-fat yogurt is used in place of sour cream for a sauce with the burger and scallop kababs that are cooked on the grill or under the broiler. Lime instead of fat is used for the basting sauce for the scallops.

chicken broth and bring to boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 15 minutes.

Drain liquid and add olive oil to skillet. Heat, then toss rolls in hot oil until radicchio wrapping is lightly browned. Or brush rolls with olive oil and place under broiler to brown tops. Serve with hot cooked rice. Makes 6 servings.

2 teaspoons olive oil

Many flowering houseplants can be started from seed

There are a number of flowering house plants that can be started from seed right in your own home. Most of them require from several months to a year to get into bloom. If you have a sunny window or a greenhouse it can be a rewarding experience. It can be very satisfying to produce a full grown flowering plant from a tiny seed. Besides saving money, you will be able to grow something which you couldn't even buy as a finished plant.

Persian Violet or Exacum is one of the easiest small pot plants to grow. They produce dozens of 1-inch, fragrant, lavender blue or white flowers on 8-inch ball shaped plants. Gerberas are bright colored daisies that are now available in strains growing only 8-inches high. They can be transplanted outside in the summer and brought in again in the fall for winter bloom. Flowers are as full as 4-inches across.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

Achimenes, Gloxinias, Begonias and Cyclamen are often grown from bulbs. However, seeds are now available for all of them. Achimenes make beautiful hanging baskets inside or outside in the shade. They come mainly in shades of pink, blue, lavender and white. Gloxinias have large flowers and large trumpet shaped leaves in velvety shades of red, purple and pink. Tuberosus begonias have large double flowers like Camellias. Fibrous begonias have smaller waxy leaves and smaller flowers. Both types can be grown outside in the shade as well as inside. There are no pot plants showier than Cyclamen with their rosette of heart shaped leaves topped with a mass of waxy flowers growing up through the center.

Calceolaria and Cineraria are two pot plants which like cool growing conditions. Calceolaria has small bulb shaped flowers in shades of orange and yellow, often with contrasting spots. Cineraria has daisy-like flowers in shades of pink and blue. Many flowers are striking bicolors with white centers. Even fuchsias with their graceful hanging flowers which resemble a ballerina, can be grown from seed.

There are several members of the Gesneriad family which can be grown easily from seed. As soon as they have reached flowering age, they bloom almost continuously. Included in this group are Columnea with tubular flowers on hanging stems, Stimpfelia with smaller plants and horn shaped flowers, Lipstick plant with bright red flowers on trailing plants, and Flame Violet, which resembles a hanging African Violet. Two of the best sources of seed for flowering pot plants are Park Seed Co., Cokesbury Rd., Greenwood SC 29647 and Stokes Seeds Inc., Box 548, Buffalo, N.Y. 14240. Both companies have free catalogs with good selections of flower and vegetable seeds as well.

Americans look for modern convenience, nostalgia in products

By KIRSTIN DOWNEY
The Washington Post

ATLANTA — American consumers are harkening back to a comforting past and reaching for protection from a perilous present, if the new products for the home unveiled at the annual National Association of Home Builders convention here are any indication.

Upscale products that emphasized a sense of heritage and history were in evidence everywhere. Exhibitors hawked richly scrolled stairways, beveled-windows, intricate plaster moldings and engraved doors made of shining mahogany.

There were curved-glass windows in the Victorian tradition, street lights made to look like old-fashioned lamp posts and alcohol-fueled fireplaces that allow residents of even the smallest apartment to enjoy a roaring fire — all products showing the same fascination with the past.

"There's a lot of nostalgia today in America," said Robert D. Grossman, chairman of the board of Classic Lamp Posts, a Miami-based manufacturer of antique-style street lights made of poly steel, a polyethylene material that looks like cast iron. People want carousel horses and they want antique street lamps.

At the McClary executive building editor of Better Homes and Gardens magazine, said she sees consumers turning their homes into a kind of personal haven.

"As the ride gets faster and scarier, the tendency to grasp on to something familiar becomes stronger," she said, quoting another editor.

But while they revel in the glories of the past, consumers apparently are equally averse to ensure themselves a secure future. Among the more than 1,000 exhibits unveiled at the annual convention were many dedicated to protecting residents against crime and such environmental dangers as radon gas and polluted water.

Monsanto Co. of St. Louis introduced a new laminated glass for windows and doors that the company said would make it difficult for criminals to force their way into a home. The glass, called Saflex, is the same kind of extra-strength glass used in car windshields. Unlike standard glass, Saflex glass does not easily shatter and break into slivers when hit by hard objects like bricks or crowbars. The glass can only be broken by repeated hard blows, making it difficult for burglars to break in.

Monsanto sales representatives estimated that adding Saflex glass to the bottom floors of a single-family house would cost about $1,000 to $1,500 more than regular plate glass.

Other products recently introduced to the home market allow homeowners to escape from the contaminated drinking water plaguing many communities.

Pure Water Inc. of Lincoln, Neb., is offering home water-purification systems, marketing them by displaying a large, plastic-bound notebook containing articles on water pollution from every state in the nation. The home water-distillation units range in price from $319 for a manually operated system that produces four gallons of drinking water a day to $1,249 for an automatic system that produces 12 gallons daily.

Even some of the products designed to promote the good life were marketed with an eye on environmental dangers.

The Wyndham fireplace, which runs on a special alcohol fuel, is a newly developed movable product that allows consumers, even those whose homes do not have chimneys, to enjoy a burning fire in any room of the house. The fireplace ranges in price from $1,200 for the basic unit to $2,000 for one placed under a traditional mantel or with an oak base. The fuel, designed specifically for this kind of fireplace, costs about $3 to $4.50 for a three-hour fire.

The people selling the new fireplace concept were quick to note that the product had been approved by Underwriters Laboratory.

"It burns clean," said product developer Wayne Meyers, who is affiliated with Hunter Douglas Inc. of Upper River, N.J., which manufactures the fireplaces. No negative emissions. No toxicity.

At least one product addressed homelessness, a topic that received considerable attention and discussion at the conference. A Mexican company, Rotoplas S.A. of Mexico City, has introduced a plastic shoveling that can be used as a playhouse, or, according to the company, as an inexpensive way to house servants, guards and — at least as a temporary, stop-gap method — the homeless.

The building, which looks like a big plastic bubble, measures about 8-feet across. Made of polyethylene, it costs about $1,200. It has no bathroom, kitchen or heating system, but a similar product now being developed will contain these features and retail for about $3,000, according to Rotoplas sales representatives.

But the vast majority of the products displayed on the exhibition floor, which was the size of 17 football fields, were intended for the use of those who already own homes and want to further upgrade their standard of living. In that category, the products echoed the past as much as they projected the future.

Letters of thanks

Clek family appreciates established scholarship

There were many things that gave Joe Clek pleasure in his life: his wife and family, his church, the Iowa Hawkeyes. All were unique and special in Joe's mind, and he cared deeply about all of them.

His love for the people of Twin Falls always had a special place in his heart. To say that he gave a great deal of his life to the community is not entirely accurate. They gave him much more than he ever contributed.

The Clek Family is touched by the kindness for the community to establish the Joe Clek Business Scholarship Fund. It is a wonderful tribute which combines Joe's love for this area and his love for youth.

The fund-raising goal of $25,000 has been met. The interest from the fund will be used to send at least one Magic Valley high school student to Business Week and to fund two $300 scholarships which will be awarded to College of Southern Idaho business students. The assets are presently under the management of the CSI Foundation. Further contributions can be sent to the Foundation.

We thank everyone for this perpetual gift. Although Joe is gone, Twin Falls has not forgotten him.

BPA shares activities with community

Last week, Feb. 12-13, was Business Professionals of America Week in conjunction with Vocational Education Week. Business Professionals of America is one of the vocational clubs at Twin Falls High School.

Vocational clubs, such as BPA, have students involved in competition at the regional, state and national levels. We also have a torch awards program for individual achievement by members, and our special project for BPA is Special Olympics.

We would like your readers to know that throughout the year, our club does many activities. In October, we placed second in state at the upcoming parade. At Christmas time, we donated a food basket to the needy, and on Monday we held a Mr. Twin Falls High School pageant. Proceeds from the pageant go to send members to Olympics.

Woman thanks others who helped her after fall

I would like to thank the kind people who were so compassionate and supportive when I fell in front of Butrey's Saturday afternoon. So many unknown faces were there giving me help. I especially am grateful to the young woman who held and comforted me with her blanket until the ambulance arrived. So many good Samaritans who did not turn away in the time of need. The gentle and professional care of the ambulance and emergency room attendants. Thank you all so much.

Valley life

Extramarital sex can prove to be extraordinarily dangerous

DEAR ABBY: During my college days, I was a very popular girl — "promiscuous" would be more accurate. If you were to put a gun to my head and demand that I name every guy I'd ever gone to bed with, I couldn't do it.

I am now middle-aged, happily married and have children. I am proud of it. I am avoiding specific numbers because I live in a small town where everybody reads Dear Abby, and I don't want to be identified.

Not long ago, I went back to my hometown to spend a little time with one of my parents because the other parent was seriously ill. I saw some of my old friends, and among them was a fellow I had had a hot and heavy romance with before I married my husband. Well, I went to bed with him again — it wasn't a "love" thing — it just happened. I used a diaphragm, which protected me against pregnancy but not from sexually transmitted diseases.

Yesterday, I received a telephone call from this fellow informing me that his wife just told him that she had had a one-night stand with an IV-drug abuser who informed her that he tested positive for AIDS. This means that I am at risk, and so is my husband!

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

Abby, please warn your readers that if they engage in extramarital sex to have the decency to protect themselves and their spouses. I wish I had.

— TEARS ON MY PILLOW

DEAR TEARS: Your letter may save more lives than you know. I hope you are one of the lucky ones.

Readers: As I have pointed out in previous columns, sexually active people should ALWAYS use a condom, but because condoms sometimes break or slip off, one should also use a jelly lubricant containing Non-Oxynol-9, which will kill both the sperm and the AIDS virus. The active ingredients in a lubricant are listed on the outside of every package, so read before you buy.

According to the American Foundation for AIDS Research, of which I am a director, the AIDS virus may lie dormant in the body for years before causing the disease, so take no chances. This column isn't exactly an upper, but it is one of the most important columns I've ever written. (Would I lie to you on George Washington's birthday?) Please pass this on to a sexually active friend.

Wedding bells? Wedding bells!

Who pays for what and everything else you need to know if you're planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Diplomatic battle over 'Satanic Verses' escalates

By The Associated Press

Iran recalled all its ambassadors from European Common Market nations Tuesday and Britain expelled an Iranian envoy as the diplomatic battle grew over Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's death threats against author Salman Rushdie.

In Washington, President Bush said he supported the retaliatory moves by the European countries.

However offensive Rushdie's book, "The Satanic Verses," may be to Muslims, "inciting murder and affording rewards for its perpetration are deeply offensive to the norms of civilized behavior," Bush said.

The United States does not have diplomatic relations with Iran. Bush noted existing economic sanctions against Iran and said: "I don't know where we'll go from there."

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said Iran's diplomatic recall was in response to Monday's decision by the 12 nations of the European Economic Community to withdraw their envoys from Tehran for consultations.

Iranian parliament speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani called the EEC move "a big mistake."

"The EEC decision ... is a clear sign which proves claims that the issue of this blasphemous book ... is a plot designed by Western imperialism to fight true Islam," IRNA quoted him as saying.

"We do not fear such threats. ... We are prepared to follow our own path at a cost," said Rafsanjani.

The confrontation over Rushdie appeared to be eroding efforts by some Iranian officials, including Rafsanjani, to strengthen ties with more nations despite opposition by fundamentalist hard-liners.

Although Rafsanjani was not quoted as endorsing the death sentence, his comments indicated Iranian leaders were closing ranks in the face of retaliation for Khomeini's death call.

President Ali Khamenei, a Rafsanjani ally, said Friday that Rushdie might be pardoned if he repented and apologized. Rushdie, a Muslim himself, apologized the next day, but Khomeini ignored the overture and renewed the death threat.

European intellectuals increase protests

The Associated Press

LONDON — Iran's death sentence on novelist Salman Rushdie has appalled European intellectuals and stung them into a concerted protest that appears to be spreading throughout the non-Muslim world.

"We find ourselves caught up in a religious war," Edward Mortimer, a British commentator, wrote Tuesday.

In London, authors and free speech advocates announced they would seek support for "A World Statement" to be published in newspapers internationally.

Expressions of disgust came from Mexican novelist Octavio Paz and the Australian government. American writers led by PEN American Center president Susan Sontag also have begun mobilizing, and President Bush added his condemnation Tuesday.

Rushdie's novel "The Satanic Verses" has been judged blasphemous by Muslims because of its treatment of the prophet Mohammed and the Koran, Islam's holy book.

Modern protests began in Britain soon after the novel's publication last fall, but their demonstrations and public book-burnings were widely regarded as more as a curiosity than as a threat.

Then came last week's riots in Pakistan and India that claimed as many as six lives, followed by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's death sentence on Rushdie and his publishers.

Almost immediately, British playwright Harold Pinter led a group of writers to Prime Minister

Margaret Thatcher's doorstep to demand action "over an intolerable and barbaric state of affairs."

The British government's initial tactic apparently was to wait and see whether an apology from Rushdie might lift the death threat. Rushdie, who had gone into hiding, issued an apology Saturday for causing offense to Islam. When that had no effect, the government decided, with its European Economic Community partners, to get tough.

On Monday the 12 EEC countries resolved to withdraw their envoys from Iran. Non-EEC countries also took action. Sweden recalled its ambassador, and the Austrian, Swiss and Finnish governments summoned Iranian diplomats to express their condemnation.

In France, the affair has dominated the headlines.

Leaders arrive for Hirohito funeral

The Associated Press

TOKYO — Representatives of 16 countries arrived Tuesday for Emperor Hirohito's funeral, and concern for the safety of visiting world leaders grew with the discovery of two homemade projectiles near Tokyo's airport.

The projectiles were in launchers aimed at the heavily guarded airport, about 40 miles east of the city, and apparently were planted by radicals opposed to Friday's state funeral, a police official said.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said a timer also had been activated to say at what time it was set.

Cargo traffic and flights through Narita International Airport and Tokyo's domestic airport will be restricted this week, and 32,000 police have been mobilized in Tokyo.

Officers were stationed at checkpoints throughout the city and patrolled downtown neighborhoods. They also have searched homes along the funeral route.

Authorities say the massive police presence is justified by Japan's small but active radical groups and fears that international terrorists could attack as visiting leader.

Officials say representatives of 163 countries will attend the funeral.

Workers on Tuesday made final preparations at the funeral site in a Tokyo park.

Hirohito's son, Emperor Akihito, and Empress Michiko met briefly with Finnish President Mauno Koivisto and his wife, Tellerov, at the Akasaka Palace. It was the royal couple's first meeting with foreign dignitaries since Hirohito died Jan. 7.

They are expected to meet other heads of state and visiting royalty during the week.

Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita is to meet with about 40 of the 55 heads of state who plan to attend the funeral, and Foreign Minister Sousuke Uno will meet about 90 foreign officials, the Foreign Ministry says.

Many of those talks will last less than half an hour, but Takeshita plans longer meetings with President Bush and President Francis Mitterrand of France.

The diplomatic contacts began Tuesday with a meeting between Deputy Foreign Minister Takakazu Kuriyama and his Soviet counterpart, Igor A. Rogachev.

Afghan hard-liner takes prime minister's duties

The Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — Sultan Ali Kishnamud, a ranking member of the ruling Communist Party's Politburo and a hard-liner, Tuesday took over many of the duties of prime minister, government sources said.

Moslem guerrillas, meanwhile, fired a salvo of rockets into the Afghan capital, killing one person and injuring three others on the ninth anniversary of an uprising against the Soviet-backed government.

Mohammed Hasan Sharq stepped down as prime minister Monday, and a 21-member Supreme Military Council took power.

State-run Kabul Radio said Kishnamud, who served as prime minister for seven years until May 1988, had been charged with supervising the government's council of ministers. Government sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said this meant the 52-year-old Kishnamud would effectively be the prime minister.

His return was seen as another move by President Najib to consolidate the power of his communist government.

Najib appointed Sharq, a non-communist, prime minister last May in an effort to portray his government as willing to share power.

The guerrillas' rocket attack on Kabul was the first since Thursday, when at least seven people were killed.

The Foreign Ministry said the fatal rocket in Tuesday's assault hit near a government refugee office.

Dissident Havel is convicted

The Associated Press

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — Leading dissident Vaclav Havel was convicted Tuesday for his role in a banned rally and sentenced to nine months in jail in a trial that drew criticism at home, in the East and West.

In a six-hour trial, Judge Helena Havranova found Havel guilty on charges of inciting citizens to take part in banned demonstrations and obstructing police officers. The internationally renowned playwright was taken into custody June 16 following gatherings in central Prague, and his continued incarceration had sparked unprecedented calls for his release at home and abroad.

The prosecutor had demanded a one-year sentence for Havel and a fine of about $2,600.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

BOBBY WOLFF

"Have a place for everything and keep the things someplace else. This is not advice; it is merely custom." — Mark Twain.

Nothing went right for East and West in today's interesting deal. Not only did they miss a laydown game, but they then found a way to allow South to score his game.

Who gets the blame for missing five spades? At that contract, East loses only a trump and a diamond to South to score his game.

How about the defense? West led his club deuce, an obvious singleton, and East won and returned the suit for West to ruff.

Once again it goes to East. Before giving West the obvious club ruff, he should have cashed his heart ace.
