Upper Snake River reservoirs

Dry soil absorbing water

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Snow packs that feed the upper Snake River reservoirs hold more moisture than normal, but dry soil left by last year's drought is slurping up the excess, says a federal hydrologist.

And that's why winter stream flows have been slightly lower than normal, said Mike Beus, hydrologist with the Bureau of Reclamation.

That's also why the bureau predicts this spring's runoff will be below normal as well.

"On Feb. 1, we were predicting we'd have a 95 percent normal runoff, but now that may go down," Beus said.

Last year's runoff was only 70 percent of what a normal runoff should be, Beus said. And the past two years have been in the lowest 20 percent of all years on record, dating back about 80 years.

The spring runoff usually begins in late May and goes through June, according to Bureau of Reclamation.

Budget writers take step back, pare down double-digit deficit

The Associated Press

BOISE — With colleagues beginning to question their sanity, legislative budget writers on Tuesday took a small step back from a looming double-digit deficit for 1990, only to aggravate what is building as a major financial crisis next year.

On a 177 vote, two more than the two-thirds majority needed, the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee reopened the $16.5 million spending plan approved last week for the judiciary and stripped from it $2.2 million earmarked for computerization.

But the money was quickly spent — $700,000 going to the Idaho Educational Public Broadcasting System to finally get its signal into isolated corners of the state and $800,000 as a down payment for a new Veterans Administration nursing home in eastern Idaho.

Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus recommended neither proposal in his budget that has fast become the less-expensive alternative to the committee's decisions.

Pay hike zips by — A3

The additional $700,000 for the public television system was the issue that prompted reconsideration of the court-budget. That money has been sought for years to purchase the transmitters and repeaters needed to get the signal into isolated areas of northern, south-central and south-eastern Idaho.

Among the projects under consideration is a satellite television station for Twin Falls.

The approval of that plan also headed off a second attempt by Rep. James Lucas, R-Moscow, to undermine the position of PBS General Manager Jerold Garber, whose management of the system in recent years has ruffled some lawmakers.

Lucas lost a move to completely eliminate Garber's job in a tie vote on Monday, and then the committee voted 14-10 against a second plan to place Garber under the authority of an eight-member committee.

The action Tuesday, coming a day after the chairman of the Senate-tax-writing committee labeled the panel's actions "lunacy," cut the Andrus administration's projection of the looming deficit by $600,000 to $13.7 million. By legislative projections, the red ink totals at least $8 million.

"I think we need to be looking at a bottom-line figure," House Appropriations Chairman Kathleen Gurnsey, R-Boise, told the committee. "We're in a world of hurt right now, boys and girls. We're spending more than we've got."

Wednesday's action on the judiciary budget marked the first time in years the committee has backtracked to re-

Cable TV official deplores sharp tax hike

By The Times-News
and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — A local cable television executive says huge property tax increases ordered by the state Tuesday translate to higher subscription fees, possible layoffs and curtailed expansion plans.

"The county is grabbing all the taxes it can get while hiding behind the skirts of the state Tax Commission," said Chris Talkington, manager of King Videocable. "It's a way to discourage business growth."

The Idaho Tax Commission Tuesday ordered 22 of the state's 44 counties to adjust property tax appraisals for cable television companies it contends were undervalued by as much as 3,400 percent, even though the counties already had raised cable company assessments substantially.

Talkington said Twin Falls County's original assessment — which was barely a third of what the commission ordered Tuesday — already was forcing King Videocable to raise its subscription fees by 40 cents as of April 1.

The tax commission ordered Twin Falls County to boost King Videocable's assessment from $3.8 million to $9.5 million, which means the company will have to pay $171,000 in taxes — a $96,000 increase.

"It's just out of our hands now and we will comply with this directive."

— Dorothy Hamby,

Twin Falls County assessor

crease. That is more than six times what the company paid in 1987, said county Assessor Dorothy Hamby.

Talkington said he has no idea yet how the new assessment will affect subscription King Videocable's rates, but it may result in worker layoffs. Plans to expand the company's service area may also be jeopardized, he said.

Blaine, Coconino, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka and Twin Falls counties are all among the 22 affected counties.

For example, the tax commission ruled that Gooding County's $110,000 assessment of King Videocable's Co.'s system in that county was about $3.8 million low. The increase means taxes could rise to about $62,000, or $44 for each of the company's 1,385 subscribers, said Gooding County Assessor R. Boyd Piquero.

"The tax commission's assessment for Buhl Cable Co. is about $500,000 more than the county's $269,000 assessment, raising the company's taxes from $6,000 to $17,000."

Hamby said counties have no choice but to follow Tuesday's ruling.

"It's just out of our hands now and we will comply with this directive," she said. "We are mandated by law to do whatever the state Tax Commission requires us to do."

Talkington, however, said county officials can't shirk the blame and will have to face the consequences in the next election.

"They are the ones I'm holding responsible," he said.

It honored by county assessors statewide, the order issued Tuesday would increase the 1988 tax bill for cable companies by millions of dollars.

Democrats unswayed; Tower fight turns nasty

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Lobbying by President Bush failed to persuade any Democrats to support the nomination of John Tower as secretary of defense on Tuesday.

Exhorted Senate Republicans responded with a last-ditch attempt to portray the nominee as the innocent victim of character assassination by an unprincipled Democratic majority.

The GOP strategy clearly was intended to undermine the reputation and credibility of Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and Tower's other Democratic opponents — a tack that was certain to leave lasting scars on Bush's relationship with Congress.

Although Bush met separately at the White House with at least nine wavering Democratic senators, his aides readily acknowledged that that none of the president's visitors had pledged to support Tower. Without at least five Democratic votes, the nomination is doomed to defeat.

On the Republican side of the aisle, however, GOP leaders were hopeful that the President's call for party solidarity would allow them to reassert control among the 45 Republicans in the chamber, at least one of whom, Larry Pressler of South Dakota, already has called on Tower to withdraw.

Unless some Democrats can be swayed by the president, Republicans are threatening what Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, described as "a hell of a fight" on the Senate floor that could delay the final vote on Tower's nomination until at least next week.

Democrats were hoping to begin debate on the nomination today and vote by Thursday.

While the Republicans' highly combative strategy was unlikely to win Tower any of the Democratic votes he needs to be confirmed as defense secretary, it clearly afforded them an opportunity to vent their anger and defend Tower's reputation against allegations that he has frequently engaged in excessive drinking and womanizing.

"He has a right to be vindicated, even though he may not win on the floor of the U.S. Senate," said Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., one of Tower's most outspoken defenders.

Some Republicans even suggested that Tower's accusers are as guilty of excessive drinking as the former GOP senator. Citing a long history of drunkenness in the Senate, Assistant Minority Leader Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., noted: "There's a couple that still gallop around with a little bit of the grape and grain on their breath."

And some Tower supporters took obvious pleasure in referring to a Wall Street Journal editorial about a 1964 automobile accident in which

Nunn was involved. Nunn, who was 26 when the accident occurred, admitted in a statement Tuesday that at the time he had "had enough to drink so that both my driving and judgment were impaired."

"He (Nunn) takes this stuff real personally," said a Senate GOP aide gleefully. "He's probably going bananas."

Despite the intensity of the battle, the vast majority of Senate Democrats showed no signs of wavering after reading a voluminous, top-secret FBI report detailing many of the allegations against Tower.

Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., a previously uncommitted Democrat who turned down an invitation to the White House and then announced his opposition to Tower, characterized the FBI report as very persuasive.

Drug use drops among seniors in high schools, survey shows

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Drug use among high school seniors last year dropped to its lowest level since 1975, said an annual survey released Tuesday.

Still, more than half of all students use an illegal drug at least once before graduating.

Researchers and health officials said they were particularly encouraged by results showing the second straight significant drop in cocaine use and the beginnings of a retreat in use of the smokeable and highly addictive form of cocaine called crack.

"The news is very encouraging," said Charles R. Schuster, director of the National Institute on Drug Abuse, which sponsored the study.

"But we don't want to imply that the war is won."

"The problem is there are still pockets, primarily among those who have dropped out of high school, where drug use remains at very high levels," he said.

The continued decline in drug use suggests that anti-drug campaigns educating the young about the hazards of drug use are being heard, said Lloyd Johnston, a University of Michigan social psychologist and co-director of the study.

"These important successes have been achieved not through supply reduction. They are due almost entirely to a reduction in demand," Johnston said.

However, he said the 15 percent of youth that drop out before completing high school present a troublesome issue because "the crack problem is particularly concentrated in this population, especially in the inner cities."

Some 16,300 high school seniors from 135 schools nationwide were polled in the survey. Johnston declined to identify the schools, but he said they included public and private schools across the continental United States.

The survey, which has been conducted by the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research every year since 1975, found that the proportion of high school seniors who reported having ever used an illegal drug dropped to 53.9 percent in 1988. That's the lowest level recorded since

Aviation experts seek safety work on jets

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A task force of aviation industry and government safety experts proposed Tuesday that the airlines' airlines transportation Secretary Samuel H. Henshaw applied the proposed rule to the FAA, which began procedures required to issue the massive airworthiness directives called for by the task force.

The FAA has jurisdiction over the proposed repairs to U.S. carriers. But it also could be done over several years time.

The group, set up by the Air Transport Association, which represents U.S. airlines, asked that 80 percent to 90 percent of the cost of the affected planes be borne by the FAA jurisdiction.

Daley leading in Chicago primary.

CHICAGO (AP) — Richard M. Daley appeared headed to a Democratic primary victory Tuesday over Mayor Eugene Sawyer and a step closer to the City Hall office held by his father for 21 years.

Daley jumped into a commanding lead in early returns from predominantly white wards on the city's Southwest and Northeast Sides. Although Sawyer, the city's second black mayor, ran up impressive margins in his own South and West Side strongholds, he appeared hampered by a lower turnout among blacks than whites.

Based on exit polls at 80 precincts and early returns, CBS News projected projected Daley would win with 55 percent of the vote.

Another derailment, evacuation

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Two thousand people evacuated for two days because of a fiery train accident, returned to their homes Tuesday, only hours before a second derailment prompted another evacuation in the center of town.

A railroad tank car carrying up to 25,000 gallons of butane tipped over as workers moved seven cars at 3 mph from the site of the first accident. Authorities then evacuated at least 80 people who live and work in the area.

Cargo door on 747 had problems

HONOLULU (AP) — A Boeing 747 front cargo door suspected of popping open during a United Airlines flight and hurling nine passengers to their deaths had a recent history of problems, federal investigators said.

Meanwhile, a similar United jumbo jet scheduled to land Tuesday in Honolulu from Sydney, Australia, was delayed 18 hours because of a faulty rear cargo door, the airline said.

First 2 cars of waste off to Idaho

DENVER (AP) — Two boxcars loaded with radioactive waste trundled quietly out of the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant Tuesday en route to Idaho.

Their departure came four months after Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus turned one of them back and closed his state's borders to such shipments.

Andrus partially lifted his ban last Thursday, saying he would allow two such boxcars a month for the next six months to unload radioactive waste at the temporary Idaho storage site.

Seven loaded boxcars had lined up on a siding at Rocky Flats during the interim before Andrus lifted his ban.

Andrus said he took the action last week in the interest of national security so that production of plutonium triggers for nuclear weapons could continue.

Rocky Flats spokesman Ed Heintz said the first two boxcars left the plant siding Tuesday, en route to Idaho.

"We got two of them off today about 12:30 this afternoon. Technically, these count as the March shipment. We will not be shipping again for 30 days," Heintz said.

The trip to the Department of Energy's facility at Idaho Falls, Idaho, usually takes seven to nine days, Heintz said.

He said departure of the boxcars was "a kind of quiet ... nobody knew when the trains were coming to pick up the cars. It was good for security purposes."

Rocky Flats could have been closed as early as next month by Gov. Roy Romer's order last October not to expand nuclear waste storage at the plant 17 miles northwest of Denver.

dence a spending plan it already had approved. It underscored the mounting frustration with the likelihood of a tax hike to make ends meet in a year that began with a $52 million surplus and a strong economic outlook.

"I doubt that anybody would criticize the members of this committee for having reflected and decided that was a wiser way to spend the money," Sen. Herb Carlson, R-Eagle, said.

The reduction in the judiciary allocation, made despite what members said was "intense" pressure from judges around the state, still left the court system with $2 million to handle the first phase of the two-year the survey began, when the rate was 55.2 percent.

Although the use of marijuana has been declining since a peak of 27.7 percent in the high school Class of 1979, the 21.4 percent reported for last year was higher than the 19 percent reported in the first year of the survey.

"One of the most striking figures," Schuster said, is the drop in daily use of marijuana among seniors — down from 11 percent in 1979 to 2.7 percent last year.

The proportion of seniors who have used cocaine at least once dropped from 15 percent in 1987 to 12 percent in 1988, and the proportion who said they had used cocaine at least once in the previous 30 days dropped from 4.3 percent in 1987 to 3.4 percent in 1988.

"We predicted such a decline in cocaine use would occur" once young people began to see its use — particularly experimental and occasional use — as more risky, and that's what now seems to be happening," Johnson said.

The survey found more than 89 percent of the Class of 1988 disapproved of even experimenting with cocaine, up from 80 percent in 1986.

One troublesome statistic for researchers was that 40 percent of those who had tried cocaine also have used crack. However, the proportion of those who said they had used crack at least once dropped from 6.6 percent in 1987 to 4.8 percent last year.

Besides marijuana and cocaine, the survey tracked use of hallucinogens, heroin, sedatives, tranquilizers, stimulants and inhalants as well as alcohol and cigarettes.

Alcohol is by far the most widely used of the substances, with nearly 64 percent of the seniors reporting that they had had a drink within the previous 30 days. Cigarettes were next with nearly 29 percent having smoked within the previous month and 18 percent reporting they were daily smokers.

officials. Although local temperatures have risen over the past week, the spring melt has not begun yet.

"We're still in winter-right now," said the bureau's Denny Davis.

He said snow gets wetter and wetter as it warms up but that it must reach a certain density before it starts dripping and running off.

"It's still pretty cold right now, there's not a lot of melting," he added.

The only significant gain in reservoir levels in the past month has been at American Falls, where the level rose from 53 percent of capacity to 65 percent.

That's common, Beus said, because springs feed that reservoir. The others "just sit there" during winter, he said. Bureau workers traveled mountain snow courses Monday and Tuesday to measure the amount of water in the snow, Beus said.

The exact moisture content figures will not be available until next week.

In Kimberly, the National Weather Service's Bill Galkin reports that moisture content in February's precipitation was 3 inches below normal at 39 inches.

"We've had clouds spit at us, and we've had some snow, but it's been dry snow," Galkin said.

He said the clouds that have been floating overhead are "all wrung out" by the time they reach the Magic Valley.

"But we officially still have three weeks left of winter," he added.

Cable

which in turn could be passed along to cable subscribers.

"It is extremely important in our view that all those properties be treated uniformly throughout the state," Tax Commission Chairman Larry Looney said at a news conference. "It is one of those areas where it criss out for uniformity."

But Looney acknowledged that the action undoubtedly would be challenged in court, "both procedurally and on the merits."

Looney said most of the potential extra cost to customers could be offset by county reductions in other property taxes.

For instance, the increase ordered for United Cable in Ada County would cost the company's approximately 45,000 subscribers less than $1 per month.

But the annual tax on $50,000 worth of property, such as a home, could be cut $4.60 if the revenue from United Cable's tax increase were applied to the county budget, he said.

Tuesday's order came after months of controversy over a commission directive last September for county assessors to make sure cable TV companies were appraised at full market value, using "recognized appraisal methods and techniques."

At least 22 counties balked at the idea of appraising the property based at least partially on income potential. Looney said most appraisals were 30 percent to 50 percent of what the commission determined was the actual market value.

Ed board to offer Zinser UI post

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Board of Education said Tuesday it is preparing a formal offer to Elisabeth Zinser to become new president at the University of Idaho.

Ms. Zinser is vice chancellor for academic affairs at University of North Carolina-Greensboro. After a long search, a committee came up with four finalists to succeed Richard Gibb, who is retiring to the classroom. But the three other finalists withdrew, leaving Zinser as the only candidate still under consideration.

Asked if it bothered her that three of the finalists withdrew from the race, Ms. Zinser replied: "I don't wish to interpret why people make the choices they do or how they respond to the situation."

Hearing set for Jeremy Broadhead

BOISE (AP) — A March 8 preliminary hearing date has been set for one of the youngest Idahoans ever charged with first-degree murder.

Jeremy Broadhead, 14, was arraigned Monday before Ada County Magistrate Thomas Neville on the charge stemming from the shooting death of Broadhead's father, 42-year-old John Steven Broadhead, last week.

Meanwhile, about 30 students from Meridian Middle School, where Broadhead is in the eighth grade, and a handful of parents held a candlelit vigil Monday night to demonstrate their support for a troubled classmate.

INEL to test waste stabilization

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Field tests of stabilizing buried radioactive waste by turning it into a glass-like substance could begin at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory this summer, Department of Energy officials say.

The DOE is continuing to study the in situ vitrification process to treat some two million cubic feet of transuranic waste buried at the INEL's Radioactive Waste Management Complex.

The first on-site tests would not involve actual waste, said Steve Morreale, program manager for DOE-Idaho's buried waste program. Testing of radioactive areas is scheduled to begin in 1991.

With in situ vitrification, four electrodes are placed in the ground. They melt the soil and waste materials. When the molten material cools, the waste is captured in a glassy substance.

US West employees fight transfer

POCATELLO (AP) — A group of US West Communications personnel cites the area's loss of income in its fight against the company's proposed transfer of 27 Pocatello employees to Boise.

Bannock County officials have asked the company to reconsider the shift.

"We're consolidating and centralizing our repair-dispatch center here in Boise," beginning May 1, said Wendy Carver-Herbert, US West external information manager.

Last October, the company moved 10 account representatives from Pocatello and it is scheduled to terminate three engineering positions there by the end of March.

Sivak loses 3 appeals in high court

BOISE (AP) — Convicted slayer Lance Sivak has lost three times in the same day in rulings handed down by the Idaho Court of Appeals.

Sivak, who has been under death sentence for the robbery-slaying of a Garden City gas station attendant, lost three appeals to the court on Tuesday. He is awaiting resentencing after his original death sentence was overturned on a technicality.

One petition filed by Sivak alleged he was being subjected to cruel and unusual punishment because he was deprived of empty tobacco and cigarette packages which he used for decorations. A second alleged that because he lost two to three pounds in weight over a one-month period, that was an indication he was not being properly fed.

House OKs state employee pay hike

BOISE (AP) — With no debate, the Idaho House has passed and sent to the Senate a resolution which ultimately could lead to more than $32 million in state employee salary increases.

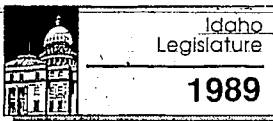

The vote was 78-5 on Tuesday as the House approved a resolution moving up the state's pay scale by 5 percent, but linking all raises to performance.

The measure, if it clears the Senate, will cost $19.2 million, including $10.9 million from the state general fund. And if the same raise is granted to public school employees, that will add more than $12 million.

Republican sponsor L. Ed Brown of Pocatello said the pay raise resolution would carry an accompanying statement of legislative intent that the raises must be based on performance evaluations.

All state employees will be eligible for the raises, which generally will be 5 percent, although for exceptional service they can be 10 or 15 percent.

Some workers also will get no increase, but legislators in committee testimony said they thought any worker recommended for no increase should think about looking for another job.

Brown said the intent is that raises be granted for "solid, mainstream, dependable performance" and not be limited to those providing "superlative, above and beyond the call of duty" work.

The proposal is based on supervisor evaluation of employees. "Increased communication between supervisors and employees will be required under this legislation," Brown said.

And one criterion used to evaluate supervisors for raises will be how well they handle the employee evaluation process, he said.

Voting against the bill were Republicans Robert Geddes of Preston; Elizabeth Allan-Hodge, Caldwell; Emerson Smock, Boise and JoAnn Wood, Rigby. Rep. James Stoicheff, D-Sandpoint, the minority party floor leader, also voted against it.

Based on a survey comparing state jobs with comparable positions in private industry, the Idaho Personnel Commission recommended a 9.7 percent pay raise. Gov. Cecil Andrus recommended 1.5 percent.

The Legislature intends that state employee salaries shall be based on market costs of labor and salary increases based on job performance as measured by factors such as productivity, reliability, effectiveness and the ability to achieve the goals and objectives of the particular position; the resolution states. "The Legislature recognizes the need to maintain spending patterns of state government within established guidelines."

The resolution also approves $166,400 for reallocations, or changes in compensation for various jobs.

Repeal of property tax limit measure withdrawn

BOISE (AP) — The first effort this session to repeal a limit on property tax increases has surfaced in a House committee, but was withdrawn almost as quickly.

The House Revenue and Taxation Committee on Tuesday voted to print and introduce legislation from Rep. Gary Robbins, R-Dietrich, to repeal a state law limiting property tax increases to 5 percent from one budget to the next.

It was approved for printing and introduction, but later was withdrawn when a tax official suggested it also should cover repeal of the 1978

1 percent tax initiative.

The Rev and Tax panel has heard testimony this session that the 5 percent limit actually is driving property taxes up, rather than limiting them.

The House in an earlier session voted to repeal the tax cap, but the proposal died in the Senate.

Associated Taxpayers of Idaho lobbyist Andy Anderson told the committee earlier there are 18 different exceptions to the limit. They allow local units of government to impose special levies for such things as court judgments, liability insurance and indigent medical care. "I feel like we need to put the responsibility (for taxes) where it belongs, at the local level," said Robbins. "Those people were elected to make those decisions, and they need to have the tools to do it."

Committee members said it appeared that if the 5 percent limit were repealed, the state would go back to the 1978 initiative. It provided that property taxes could be no more than 1 percent of property value.

But because of overlapping taxing districts, the Legislature never could figure out how to impose the 1 percent limit, and settled instead for the 5 percent cap.

Some legislators said if the 5 percent cap were repealed, under the 1 percent limit, property taxes could rise sharply in some counties.

Robbins said the best approach would be to repeal the cap. He said one-third of all property taxes now are outside that limit, with few controls on how much they can be raised.

Phosphate industry offers to pay for pollution

SANDPOINT (AP) — Southeastern Idaho's phosphate industry has offered to pay $50,000 for water pollution control in Sandpoint, which is considering a ban on the sale of phosphate detergents.

Mayor Ron Chaney said industry representatives did not say so, but he believes the money would only come in exchange for the city dropping the proposed ban.

"I'm sure that would be assumed," he said Monday.

They did not put any strings on it at all except it would be used for a phosphate elimination facility.

However, Chaney said $50,000 would not be enough to solve Sandpoint's problem with water pollution.

The mayor did not have the authority to accept or reject the industry offer, which was made last week during a meeting with representatives of FMC Corp., Monsanto Co. and a government relations consultant.

We should equalize Idaho school funding

Despite objections from representatives of smaller districts who would be hurt by the plan, the Idaho House Education Committee has approved a long-overdue bill which would equalize the state school funding formula.

The proposal, backed by larger districts including Twin Falls, essentially removes a previous inequity which gave smaller schools a bigger share of the state's education funding pie.

It did so by weighting classroom size allocations in smaller districts, thus giving a higher per-pupil expenditure to small schools at the expense of students who attend larger schools.

The unfairness of the formula has long been evident. The Idaho Constitution and state law assure every child an equal education in the public schools, but the formula has skewed the funding in the direction of smaller districts for years.

Now, that may be ending. The pressure for the change has come this year from larger districts, who put together a proposal for change which would shift the formula gradually.

But behind that move is the demographic reality of the state: more and more of Idaho's young people are attending schools in the larger districts. Indeed, three of four Idaho students are in the largest 15 of the state's 116 districts. That enrollment pattern is reflected as well in shifts in the state's adult population.

We think the Legislature should pass the formula equalization law and allocate school funds on the basis of where the students are, not on where they are not.

Why should this basic principle of fairness not apply? It is a fair question.

Anti-abortion stance is civilized

Boise's legislators are in the midst of the abortion dilemma, and around the country we have a group of brave men and women to whom the Americans owe a debt of gratitude. There may have been renegades who have hurt the cause, but renegades come in every cause and race. Yet the faithful are the backbone of our country, who with non-violence are supporting the cause of the undersirables.

The permissive attitude of many Americans toward abortion is hardly different from the Germans for having failed to organize opposition to the killing of the Jews. Americans cannot write their hands and express horror at what happened in the Nazi Holocaust if they continue to harden their hearts against what is being done to millions of unborn persons in the United States today.

As a citizen I have the right to assert that those who protect all human life are those who adhere to the ethos of an advanced civilization. I can also accuse those who promote an anti-life philosophy and ethos of returning to barbarism.

As a citizen, I have the right to protest against any law which endangers the basic rights of a human to be born.

Nova presented both sides fairly

As a former resident of Rupert from 1963-1968, I was pleasantly surprised to hear Twin Falls prominently featured last evening in the "Nova" science series on PBS.

The program "God, Darwin and the Dinosaurs" described the recent debate in the Twin Falls school district over the teaching of the origins of life.

The hour-long telecast fairly detailed the case for both sides in the dispute—creationism and evolution—and portrayed the debate in light of the important question: what should be the purpose of education?

I hope all my old friends and neighbors in south central Idaho will have an opportunity to see this well-made program and make their own decisions regarding the issue. If not, transcripts of the show are available at a cost of $5 per copy from WCHN-TV, Box 222, Boston, Mass. 02234.

Calvin and Hobbes isn't funny

While I realize it takes almost an act of Congress to change the funny papers, I'd like to register my complaints after weeks of putting up with Calvin and Hobbes.

This destructive Calvin is the epitome of unwanted behavior. What society or governmental department or taxpayer would want him? (He's assaultive; killing people in his imagination, destroying a downtown section of buildings.) What school board or teacher would want him? (He's bombed or shot his public school to rubble.)

What parent would want him? (He turned them into grotesque monsters holding weapons on their kid, and he has been disrespectful of their wishes.) What friend would want him? (He is abusive and disloyal.) What baby-sitter would want him? (He was an absolute terror and unkind.)

There is more than meets the eye and much can be taught through comics. Because the vehicle is "only a little boy's stuffed animals come to life in his comics" we should not tolerate or swallow bad taste and destructive messages to all we hold dear in our society and community.

While Calvin told his mom he sold his soul to the devil, it makes me wonder if the author has done the same because of his whimsies.

Previously, A. A. Milne had a similar plot, where a little boy's stuffed animals come to life in his stories. However, in contrast, Milne used his moral tastefully and with depth in creating Winnie-the-Pooh without containing the weird, grotesque, gory, bloodshed, monster mentality and lack of respect for others' property, power or authority.

Calvin and Hobbes is not the normal good guys vs. bad guys or the cowboys and Indians games of childhood. Please write The Times-News if you, too, would like to remove this newcomer from our community.

Guns have become far too deadly

A number of years ago, I wrote that guns were changing from man's best friend to become a bitter enemy.

The gun has just become too deadly, and is no longer the gun our forefathers had that was accompanied by a powder horn.

Comparing cars with guns is plain ignorance, for cars are essential to our way of life and are used every day for man's livelihood.

If it is true that only people kill people, why then do we make it easier and easier for them to do so?

A man with an AK47 rifle can kill many people in a few minutes. Is this what the rifle association wants?

Pointing to the Constitution and claiming that our forefathers were better informed than we are does give any credit to the advancement of the human race.

A hunter does not need a gun that makes it possible for him to shoot into a herd of deer, wounding all of them.

Man has become very good at making weapons that kill, having no respect at all for the commandment, "Thou shalt not kill."

The nuclear weapons we now have can destroy all life, many times over, and still there are those that want to make more and more.

The future of our civilization has been put into the hands of just a few people, and, sooner or later, these awesome weapons will destroy us, unless we get enough peace-loving people to help support the ones that say these weapons must go.

David Duke speaks the truth

Thank you so much for carrying the short piece of wisdom submitted by Wayne Bretz.

I have lived close to 80 years and have learned during those years that it is wise to stand by the man, or the woman, whom the insiders gang up to persecute.

The Anti-Defamation League (ADL) is not a dependable authority. Without the ADL and all of its affiliate groups, our nation would be in a safer position; our leaders unafraid to back the truth.

David Duke always looks the audience in the eye and tells it like it is, and the old adage "The truth is what hurts" has his toes up in arms. I am old enough to recall some activities of the KKK, and I do know it was organized in the onset because something had to be done, and no one was doing the appropriate thing.

No doubt they have erred, but no way is it possible that a member of the Klan would be guilty, as accused, of opposing or destroying a nativity scene. Look into the ADL if you would search for an Anti-Christ who would likely commit that wrong.

I know in my early years that a neighbor cruelly abused his wife and children. It was a known, grievous fact, undisputed. The law knew it; witnesses were eager to testify.

Finally, this man awoke one morning to find a bunch of slender tree branches tied together and placed on his doorstep. It was no secret that the KKK had taken over some ignored duties of the law on former occasions, and this family abuser knew it. Those bundled switches made a different person of that bully, and it cost the taxpayers not one cent of court cost.

Of course, since our leaders are stealing, robbing and deceiving the people, they are the ones needing a warning via a bundle of switches; but if a group, be they KKK or any other, should attempt to scare an evil person into becoming less cruel, our leaders, tutored by the Zionist, would be the first to lay on the heaviest punishment allowed.

I believe that, reluctantly, the general public is beginning to see from where the evil comes and in time will throw off the brain washing that has been pounded in, soaked in and whitewashed as good.

clear weapons production, other than over our aquifer at INEL.

VOTE on INEL again requests our representatives to delay construction of the SIS plutonium plant.

During this delay, VOTE on INEL has requested answers in writing to four areas of concerns with radioactive-waste clean up and storage.

Those four areas are:

1. A complete timetable for all clean up through to the finish.
2. An accurate accounting of where in the budget will the money come from to meet the complete cleanup timetable.
3. The present status of what we know and what we don't know regarding the technologies for permanent storage facilities, for high- and low-level radioactive waste.

This should include storage-volume totals for past, present, and future wastes. This should include a complete timetable. It should also answer if it is possible these permanent storage facilities will never open.

4. The present status of what we know and don't know regarding the status of cleanup technologies. Is it possible that we may never be able to clean up all of the buried and above-ground waste, even if money was no problem?

Dr. PETER RICKARDS
VOTE on INEL

Pacifists should oppose change in INEL mission

The senior senator's comments about a "broad national conspiracy" for a national coalition against INEL does not apply.

What has changed is that the senior senator, single handedly, changed INEL from just a national dump for radioactive materials to a nuclear weapons production center evidenced by the proposed NPR and SIS. This means INEL merits the opposition of pacifists.

The environmentalist and the pacifist often sing the same song, but they dance to a different tune. The environmentalist wants his children and grandchildren to live in a nuclear-toxic-waste-free world.

The pacifist may say "me, too" but has in mind the primary goal of peace through nuclear disarmament. Stopping NPR and SIS are worthy pacifist as a means to that end.

Pacifists form no conspiracy since they are as diverse as the denominations of Christianity. They are subversive, as subversive as the Prince of Peace. They far out number, as voters, the INEL employees and environmentalists combined.

Given the 10-year cycle time necessary to get NPR built, one may, in an overstatement, conclude that the pacifist will have made the need for NPR production unnecessary. But, in due time, the voters will tell you that.

We can't afford blind faith in nuclear politics

When Washington, D.C. shoves nuclear radioactivity upon us, it likely amounts to homicide. When we accept it, in Idaho or elsewhere, it can be suicide and eventually homicide. When we, the reportedly "thinking" animals, accept the word of our elected tools of industry, we are no longer thinking.

As for that so-called "conspiracy," it is working to reduce our hazards. We can join it by supporting the Snake River Alliance and the Natural Resources Defense Council, which are supporting our needs.

Twin Falls has seldom, if ever, been pushed around. Its concern is that of the state and nation. May it keep up the good work.

NELLE TOBIAS

McClure should hear No SIS, NPR message

I read with interest and a laugh today the front page article which reported Senator McClure's concern that the opposition to nuclear weapons and nuclear projects originated with a national conspiracy.

A conspiracy, we are told, which funds the opposition within Idaho to the SIS and NPR projects proposed by the Department of Energy for the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

As conspiracies go this is a pretty poorly funded one compared to the real national conspiracy of which Senator McClure is a part. In terms of full-time paid advocates for the SIS and NPR, I can count all the major elected officials of the State of Idaho; all appointed officials in Washington, D.C. and Idaho of the Departments of Energy and Defense; as well as such corporate executives as Westinghouse, Dupont, Exxon and E.G. & G.

This conspiracy, which we have come to know fondly as the military-industrial complex, has succeeded beyond all call. Not only do we have 13,000 ready-to-fire nuclear warheads in place to preserve us from Godless Communism, but we have gained a national cleanup debt at our nuclear weapons facilities of $110 billion and rising by the week.

No doubt we should express our thanks to Senator McClure for his part in this achievement since his arrival in Washington 23 years ago. Perhaps he would step forward to take responsibility for the waste problems which proliferated during those years he was the chairman of the Senate committee approving all funding for the Department of Energy.

And he should tell us now, it seems to me, where the money for clean up is coming from as well as the billions for more bomb factories.

Before the legislature leaps forward to install our future license plate logo—"Nuclear Potatoes," I recommend to all thoughtful Idahoans that they join me and other supporters of the Snake River Alliance in sending Jim McClure and his fellow conspirators a simple clear message: No SIS. No NPR.

North trial stalls again over issue of classified document use

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver North's retrial trial ground to a halt and was thrown into confusion Tuesday by documents introduced in court as classified but made available in uncensored versions to a private activist group.

North lawyer Brendan Sullivan asked the judge to throw out all 12 criminal charges in the case, asserting prosecutors were guilty of "a fraud on the defense."

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell said he was "not trying to look for sanctions against anyone but was concerned about "getting to the bottom of what's going on" regarding the use of classified information at the trial.

"My concern is whether this presents an example of looseness in governmental dealings with this problem of classified information," the judge said during a lengthy afternoon hearing. He wondered aloud whether all the pretrial work on rules for handling such information would have to be done over.

The stumbling block was the discovery that 10 memos introduced in the trial with names and other information blocked out had long ago been turned over, uncensored, to the Christie Institute as part of a lawsuit filed by the group, which is strongly opposed to administration policy in Central America.

The memos had been written by Robert Owen to North during a two-year period when Owen acted as a courier between North and rebels fighting the government in Nicaragua.

Thomas Hylden, Owen's lawyer, said that at a conference with prosecutors on Feb. 10 he noticed they were working from a censored version of one memo and remarked that his copy was uncensored and that he had given on a copy to the Christie Institute.

Michael Bromwich, a member of the prosecution team who was at that conference, said he called in a security expert who said he would retrieve Christie's copy; then forgot about the matter until the defense raised it late Monday night.

Bromwich said it was his understanding that a document could be classified even though it was in the public domain already.

"For two and a half weeks, a jury has been ready to try this case and hasn't been able to try it," said Gesell. "Now I hear we are dealing with classified documents that can be classified ex post facto.

Amid the discussion over government secrets, Gesell sent the jury home early on Friday, again after the noon recess on Monday and at the start of the day Tuesday.

Gesell said he had a continuing motion from the defense relating to "whether or not a fair trial can be given" under rules set by a law governing disclosure of state secrets at trial.

"The government is simply unable to manage the classified information at issue here in a manner that permits a fair trial," Sullivan said Tuesday in a motion filed with the court.

President defends invitation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said Tuesday he had no obligation to inform the Chinese government in advance that he had invited the country's leading dissident to dinner.

Bush acknowledged the Chinese "may have a point" in contending that the flap over their unwillingness to let Fang Lizhi attend the U.S.-hosted dinner in Beijing might have been avoided if the United States had submitted the guest list ahead of time.

But when asked during a Cabinet meeting picture-taking session whether he felt he should clear such dissident invitations with the host government, the president replied, "No. And I think they understand that."

Bush said the question of human rights and the United States' commitment to it is much broader than whether a dissident is allowed to attend a dinner.

Earlier Tuesday, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater had said Bush believes he should push human rights in talks with communist leaders but that it should not be pursued to the exclusion of other concerns.

While defending Bush's advocacy of human rights during the two-day visit to China, Fitzwater acknowledged "there is some degree of difference" between Bush's handling of the issue and way former President Reagan dealt with it.

Questions have been raised about how much emphasis Bush will devote to human rights in the wake of the flap over Fang.

A 52-year-old astrophysicist, Fang was intercepted by police en route to the Sunday night dinner. Bush voiced regrets the following morning to Chinese Vice Premier Wu Xueqian, the senior official present for the president's departure, and asked Ambassador Winston Lord to seek a meeting with the Foreign Ministry to find out what happened.

Bush had mentioned human rights during a dinner toast on the night of his arrival in China, but in general terms his public statements focused on positive aspects of the Sino-American relationship.

But the incident involving Fang also brought into question whether Bush aggressively pressed the human rights issue in his private meetings.

Plant shutdown set

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Mario Cuomo announced Tuesday that he and the Long Island Lighting Co. had signed an agreement to close the Shoreham nuclear power plant permanently.

Under the agreement, which does not need approval from the state or Suffolk County, LILCO will sell the $5.4 billion Long Island plant to the state for $1 and it will be dismantled by the state Power Authority.

The agreement is important because it would bypass the state Legislature.

High court sets tough standards for civil rights violation lawsuits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that local governments may be forced to pay monetary damages when their deliberate indifference lets inadequately trained employees violate someone's rights.

The court's unanimous decision, although a potential threat to municipal treasuries nationwide, might not result in numerous successful lawsuits.

Filed in a Canton, Ohio, case by Justice Byron R. White, the court set a hard-to-meet standard of proof for those who file such suits.

The justices said a city or town cannot be held legally accountable when an inadequately trained public employee violates someone's rights unless the harm is directly linked to governmental deliberate indifference.

White said creating any less-stringent standard of proof would open local governments to "unprecedented liability" and saddle federal courts with "an endless exercise of second-guessing municipal employee-training programs."

Lynn Brannan, a professor at the Thomas M. Cooley Law School in Lansing, Mich., who has studied the case, called Tuesday's ruling "a moderate, middle-of-the-road approach."

The municipal fine is protected because mere negligence will not suffice, she said, "but individuals are protected and on occasion can reach into a city treasury's deep pockets to recover for violations of their rights."

Past Supreme Court decisions make clear that a much-trusted federal civil rights law may not be invoked to sue a local government every time one of its employees violates someone's rights.

In Tuesday's ruling, the court for the first time said a local government's valid official policy may be challenged successfully — if the policy is subverted by inadequate training.

The decision is a setback, but not a final defeat, for Canton officials who sought to kill a lawsuit by a woman who says police violated her rights by failing to get needed medical attention while she was in their custody.

Geraldine Harris sued Canton over an April 26, 1978, incident in which she was stopped for speeding while driving her teen-age daughter to school.

In other decisions, the court:

- Ruled 6-3 that railroads and airlines may punish strikers by giving their jobs to employees with less seniority who stay on the job or return to work before the strike ends.
- Voted 9-0 in a case involving two Canadian citizens with bank accounts in Washington state to make it easier for the federal government to give tax information and financial records to a foreign government.

AIDS treatment costs set at $24 billion for 5 years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The lifetime cost of treating AIDS patients diagnosed with the disease in the five-year period beginning in 1988 is estimated at $24 billion, according to a study released Tuesday.

The report said that the lifetime treatment cost for a patient with acquired immune deficiency syndrome is about $60,000, a figure that may change as treatment improves.

The report gives these estimates for the numbers of AIDS patients diagnosed in the indicated year and total lifetime medical cost of those patients:

- 1988: 39,000 AIDS new cases, total lifetime medical treatment $2.6 billion.
- 1989: 54,000 cases, $3.6 billion.
- 1990: 71,000 cases, $4.7 billion.
- 1991: 91,000 cases, $6.0 billion.

• 1992: 114,000 cases, $7.5 billion.

Fred J. Hellinger, an economist at the National Center for Health Services—Research and Health Care Technology Assessment and who compiled the study, said the estimated $60,000 lifetime medical cost per patient is lower than some earlier estimates because AIDS patients now are spending less time in hospitals and receiving more care as outpatients.

Hellinger said that research by three insurance organizations estimated that about $60,000 will be paid by health insurers for each AIDS patient. For the study, he added $5,000 for expenses not covered by the insurance companies and another $5,000 for the cost of AZT, an antiviral drug approved by the Food and Drug Administration in 1987.

Consumers dislike 'smokeless' smokes; they're off market

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Consumers didn't like them, so R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. is withdrawing its Premier brand "smokeless" cigarettes after five months of market testing.

The company said Tuesday in a statement that "while smokers are very interested in the concept, the current product has not achieved adequate consumer acceptance."

R.J. Reynolds had test-marketed Premier in Arizona and eastern Missouri.

Magazine denounces Soviet party's 'lies'

MOSCOW (AP) — A prominent state-run magazine has scathingly criticized the Communist Party, accusing it of spreading "political lies" that have deceived the Soviet people for generations.

The unprecedented attack in the literary monthly Novyi Mir also questioned the rationale of the 20 million-member party's legal monopoly on power, enshrined by the 1977 Constitution, and says genuine democracy is impossible until the party permits open dissent in its ranks.

Even in the franker atmosphere fostered by President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's campaign for "glasnost," or greater openness, such harsh criticism of Communist Party practices in an official Soviet publication would have recently seemed impossible.

The article, by widely known sociologist Igor M. Ilyamkin, also hints at the central paradox of Gorbachev's blueprint for political change, by noting that Soviet "democratization" is taking place in a system where one party has declared itself society's sole legitimate ruler.

The criticism comes at a time when Soviets are preparing for their first national multicandidate elections.

Ilyamkin does not openly call for the creation of a multiparty system, but that seems the inescapable conclusion many will draw from his criticism of anti-democratic practices, he says the Communist Party has engaged in starting from the days of Soviet founder Vladimir I. Lenin.

The article, in the February edition of Novyi Mir, seems certain to fuel debate about the party's role.

Israeli jets blast bases

AINAB, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes struck Palestinian bases in the Chouf Mountains southeast of Beirut on Tuesday, killing two guerrillas, and also blasted an elementary school, wounding 26 children, police said.

Panicked children aged 4 to 10, some with blood streaming down their faces, ran screaming and sobbing from the school, a teacher said. A blackboard in one classroom still listed Tuesday's subject for discussion: "The War."

Five of the children were critically hurt. In addition, eight other people were wounded in the raid on the bases by six fighter-bombers.

The guerrilla casualties were members of the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Marxist group that is part of the Palestine Liberation Organization, said a police spokesman.

Iran assembly votes to sever ties to Britain

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran's parliament voted Tuesday to sever ties with Britain, restored to normal only three months ago, unless London condemns "The Satanic Verses" and stops criticizing Iran for ordering the author killed.

The official Islamic Republic News Agency said the parliament gave Britain a week to meet the conditions, but Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government made clear it would not do so.

"The British position will not be altered by threats of any kind," said William Waldegrave, minister of state in the Foreign Office in London.

Mrs. Thatcher told the House of Commons that freedom of speech and expression are "subject only to the laws of this land" and will remain subject to the rule of law. It is absolutely fundamental to everything in which we believe and cannot be interfered with by any outside force.

Author Salman Rushdie, 41, was born in Bombay, India, to Moslem parents but now is a British citizen and does not practice religion actively.

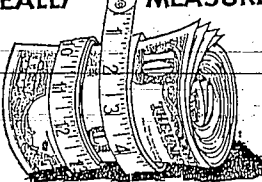

Rushdie has been in hiding since Feb. 14.

Bankruptcy judge OKs Hawkins bean milling

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

BOISE - U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Alfred Hagan listened to the wishes of farmers Tuesday and awarded Curry Grain Co. a contract for milling Hawkins Co. Ltd. beans, despite a last-minute proposal by a creditor, Klein Brothers Ltd.

The decision clears the way to prepare the beans for marketing by Hawkins. Proceeds will then be distributed to farmers and other creditors of the financially beset Filer warehouse operator.

Although Klein proposed a fee structure that some thought would save as much as $50,000, the majority of farmers said they would prefer the Curry Grain contract.

Farmers "think the apparent difference in price is nonexistent," said attorney John Melanson. "The last-minute finagling, growers can do without."

Mostly, however, attorneys representing most farmers questioned the propriety of letting Klein, a fellow creditor in the suit, mill the beans.

"There is a strong sentiment among growers that someone as tied up as Klein is going to be (as a claimant) should not be involved in the physical handling of the beans," said attorney Richard Greenwood.

Warehouse audit bill goes to House

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

BOISE - Rep. Doug Jones' bill setting tougher warehouse standards proved such a dog that not only was it trounced by fellow Magic Valley Republicans Tuesday, but even Jones couldn't bring himself to vote in its favor.

Yet, he left the House Agricultural Affairs Committee smiling. A more modest bill, also sponsored by Jones, to help the Department of Agriculture audit warehouses was sent to the full House. And a debate that may yet lead to tougher standards for bonded warehouses and commodity dealers was begun, he said.

"It's no accident that Jones lives in Filer, where Hawkins Co. bean warehouse filed for bankruptcy this year and where the state is investigating $3.5 million worth of allegedly missing beans. Hawkins is one of several commodity warehouses or dealers that have failed during the last decade, leaving surprised farmers scrambling to collect a portion of their crops' value."

Under the proposal that was approved, the state could get its hands on more and better financial information about warehouses and commodity dealers.

First, the bill would require companies to provide a statement of net worth before being issued a license - a first in the Idaho warehouse industry.

Second, warehouses would be required to give the state a reviewed financial statement prepared by a certified public accountant. Now statements must be compiled by an accountant, but a review is not mandatory.

Jones originally planned to re-

"We can't tell if the checks and balances in the contract are going to be sufficient" to give Klein the contract, said attorney Terry Myers. Among those in favor of giving Klein the contract were Klein and First Security Bank, whose attorney said the Klein contract appeared to save money.

Curry Grain would have charged $5 per hundredweight for milling, picking and bagging seed beans. The price would go up $1 per hundredweight per treatment, bringing the cost for tagged and triple-treated beans to $8 a hundredweight. Klein Brothers Monday afternoon proposed a flat fee of $6.25 per hundredweight, whether it were single, double or triple-treated.

Both companies would charge the same price for milling and processing commercial beans - $2.50 per hundredweight bulk or $3 bagged.

The growers' interest in giving the contract to James Brennan, doing business as Curry Grain Co., carried weight in his decision, Hagan said.

He was also concerned about awarding the contract to a creditor. Although bankruptcy law would not specifically prohibit it, he said, "You are familiar with the expression 'the appearance of impropriety' and I think we have that here - if not an appearance of impropriety, then a suspicion of impropriety."

If growers are willing to take a possible loss, then he would be willing to give Curry Grain the contract, he said.

Hawkins Co. filed for bankruptcy Jan. 6. The company's warehouse license was suspended in November after an audit revealed inventory shortages. Since then, farmers who have stored beans in the Filer warehouse have been contending with Hawkins' creditors over own-

Craters of Moon may still become a national park

By AMY GAMERMAN
States News Service

WASHINGTON - The National Park Service had a pleasant surprise for Rep. Richard Stallings at Tuesday's meeting on the Craters of the Moon National Monument.

Rumor had it that William Mott, Jr., director of the park service, would reject Stallings' plan to turn the craters and three neighboring scenic areas into Idaho's first national park. In an earlier survey, the park service's regional director recommended against the change, which Stallings says would attract tourists to the area and vitalize local economies.

But Mott neither endorsed nor rejected the plan, recommending instead that a new study be conducted on the craters. Stallings said he was encouraged by the meeting.

"We had seen an in-house memo (that rejected the proposal) but we found out that was not even being considered during this scoping (process)," Stallings said. "What they were doing at this level was to identify the strengths of this area to see if it would warrant further study for a park or for another category."

"I was sort of given the impression we were going to have to fight," Stallings added.

Mott praised the scientific and scenic value of the craters and the other areas, which include the Southern Butte, Crystal Ice Caves and the Great Rift, the world's deepest volcanic rift.

"For instance, the report points out that this rift is the largest one in the world and is of national significance," Mott said in a telephone interview after the meeting.

The new study must determine whether the Idaho landmarks are unique and sufficiently outstanding to warrant the national park designation, Mott added. Other factors, such as the possible size of the area, would also be determined by that study.

But as yet there is no federal funding for the study, which would take at least six months to complete. The search for funding could delay the study's completion by as much as a year, Stallings said, adding that he would approach Idaho state and local governments for the needed funds.

In the meantime, he intends to push on with his own legislation to change the designation of the craters, "knowing full well the bill we introduce will not be a final process."

Stallings said he is committed to the plan regardless of the park service's eventual recommendations.

"While I recognize the need for such a study, I remain convinced that the area is worthy of national park designation," he said.

Utah hospital sues Twin Falls County

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A Utah hospital has sued to force Twin Falls County to pay $84,000 in medical bills for two unemployed Twin Falls men.

"This is the first time I have ever seen a hospital take this step," said County Welfare Director Juanita Bryan. "I was shocked when I got (a copy of the suit)."

'This is the first time I have ever seen a hospital take this step. I was shocked when I got (a copy of the suit).'

- Juanita Bryan, County Welfare Director

The suit challenges the county's last-resource policy - under which it denies indigent health-care claims unless applicants have exhausted all other avenues of assistance.

"The policy has no basis in statute, is in conflict with the general laws and is void as a matter of public policy," the suit states.

The University of Utah Hospital and Medical Center in Salt Lake City is asking that the county be required to pay Michael Pollard and Hyrum Morrison's hospital bills, $3,000 in attorneys' fees and interest on the bills.

County commissioners, after separate appeal hearings for Pollard and don't feel we should pay for something when another agency is going to pay it."

The lawsuit, however, brands the commissioners' decision "clearly unsupported, erroneous, arbitrary and characterized by an abuse of discretion."

Pollard, who was injured in a one-car accident on July 1, 1988, was transferred from the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center to the Utah hospital, where his medical bills amounted to some $42,000. County commissioners then denied his Aug. 3, 1988, request for county assistance.

Morrison on Jan. 19 and Jan. 25, postponed a decision on the two until the federal Social Security Administration finishes reconsidering its own rejection of aid for the men, according to court documents.

Until Social Security responds to reconsideration applications submitted by both men, the county should not have to pay the bills, Bryan said.

"It's still unknown, so we're not the last resource yet," Bryan said. "I

Holiday Inn sells; renamed Weston Plaza Hotel

By MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The Holiday Inn has been sold and renamed the Weston Plaza Hotel.

Rosco Weston of Logan, Utah, bought Twin Falls' largest hotel for an undisclosed sum from the Connecticut Mutual Insurance Co.

Weston and two brothers, Todd and Jim Weston, own the Weston Inn located south of the Holiday Inn on Blue Lakes Boulevard.

"I'm excited about the change," said Virgil Sisiom, the manager.

"The good part about this is we'll have an owner that is in the hotel business and who is from the West."

Changes are already in the works. New signs will go up soon. The front of the building and the lobby will be remodeled soon, and an indoor pool and spa are planned later.

At the restaurant, which has been renamed the H.R. Weston, "We are in the process of reducing food prices and improving the quality," Sisiom said.

Hors d'oeuvres and live music four nights a week also have been added to the lounge's attractions.

"He's going to definitely keep the staff," added Sisiom, who has worked at the hotel for 15 years and will remain the manager.

Weston is diversified; he owns hotels, farms and a flour mill. Sisiom said. Weston's company is called Rosco Weston's Lamplighter Hotels Wyoming, Inc., headquartered in Evanston, Wyo.

The 200-room hotel was built in 1964 by Craig Nielsen, who owns Cactus Pete's in Jackpot, and originally sported a golf course in back. It was then bought by Frazier Management Co. in 1983. Connecticut Mutual of Hartford, who had been a minor partner with Frazier, became the sole owner.

Alleged Jerome funds theft undetected for 2 years

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

JEROME - The alleged theft of money from the Jerome County Weed Department went undetected for more than two years until the supervisor charged with the theft resigned late last year.

"Everything was on the books," said Commissioner Veronica Lierman. "The books were quite accurate."

Jerome County Prosecutor John Horgan filed five grand theft charges last week against James Harry Miller, 31, of Jerome. Horgan charged Miller with cashing checks for Weed Department services instead of turning those checks over to the county.

Miller was arraigned Monday and has been released without bail pending a preliminary hearing. The Times-News was unable to reach Miller Tuesday despite repeated phone calls, and his attorney, Eugene Fredericksen, declined to comment.

According to a report filed in court by Jerome County Sheriff Larry Gold, Miller said during an interview he borrowed the money.

"I'm going to come right out and tell you, Larry, I did borrow some money from the Weed Department," Gold quoted Miller as saying in a report filed in court. "And I want to pay it all back."

According to Gold, Miller admitted taking between $4,000 and $5,000.

However, Miller is charged with five thefts to - See MONEY on Page B2

Local detectives stand by on TV show

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Two Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies will get a taste tonight of crime investigation television.

The Idaho detectives will join several telephone operators in Los Angeles while NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries" airs a segment on a Twin Falls murder. The show begins at 7 p.m.

The sheriff's deputies, Bill Tilson and Chief Deputy Harold Jensen, will anxiously wait for the one call that will crack the murder case.

"We have to get optimistic," said Deputy David Chene. "We don't put any undue hope on it, but anything's worth a try."

Tilson and Jensen were in Los Angelen Tuesday.

"We usually get quite a few calls for each segment," said John McLaughlin, one of the show's researchers. Some crimes featured on the show spark as many as 150 calls, he said.

Tilson and Jensen hope a viewer will call in the tip they need to crack the murder of Donald Edward Smith, a California man whose badly decomposed body was found May 27, 1987, near Miracle Hot Springs. Investigators believe he was killed after being beaten on the head at least two weeks before. They suspect the murderer is a hitchhiker Smith apparently picked up between Jean, Nev., and Blackfoot.

The show provides several telephone operators who take calls to a toll-free number, McLaughlin said. The operators simply type out the leads or clues, unless it's a "hot call," he said.

Those hot ones will be jugged to Tilson or Jensen. Last month, a phone call led to the arrest of a Florida man within minutes of the show's airing, McLaughlin said.

"We're just hopeful," McLaughlin said. "It's a real intriguing case."

The Twin Falls segment - about 12 minutes - is the first on tonight's show on Channel 7 for cable subscribers and Channel 38 for others.

Many of the scenes for the Twin Falls segment were shot in the Magic Valley area.

Former mayors recommend no raise in salaries of Buhl's public officials

By MIKEL BENTON
Times-News correspondent

BUIHL - Although the salaries of Buhl's public officials have remained constant for eight years, they should not be raised, recommended a committee consisting of five former Buhl mayors.

The salaries of Buhl's council members, except for the mayor, are above the average of those in other comparable cities around the state, former Mayor Jim Barker told the council Monday.

Tom Tappen, the city's current mayor, said the council likely will discuss the report at its next meeting. He said he was surprised at the results. Tappen earlier this year asked the former mayors to study the issue because he felt city officials were underpaid.

He may still feel that way, he said. The report may indicate that officials across the state are underpaid, Tappen said after the meeting. He placed some responsibility on Idaho state law, which requires city council members to vote on salary changes during election years.

The obvious political sensitivity of voting yourself a pay raise just prior to an election can inhibit pay raises that may be warranted, he said. "That's why it's been eight years since we've had raises," Tappen said.

The committee found that Buhl council members, who are paid $250 a month, receive more than the average $173 for 26 cities around the state. Those salaries range from $35 to $400.

The committee cannot justify a raise because the Buhl salary is "on the high side," Barker told the council.

The survey also listed monthly mayor salaries ranging from $100 to $850, with an average of $366. Buhl's mayor is paid $350.

Barker described the mayor's salary as low in relation to the council members. "If any salary were to be raised," the committee felt, "it would be that of the mayor," he said. "There is no doubt that the mayor's salary by comparison is too low considering the work load put on the mayor by administrative duties, meetings with council, and grant application meetings and out of town events."

After further consideration, however, the committee decided it could not recommend a pay raise for the mayor, on the basis that the position is not full time.

Tappen said he agrees with the committee's assessment of the low salary. "I think that's born out in the fact that you don't get people to run again," he said.

He said he's not urging a raise for himself because he probably won't run for re-election. His term ends this year. "It's just the principle of the thing that I'm on," Tappen said.

Barker also cited the struggling farm economy and the resounding defeat in September last year of the College of Southern Idaho's $7 million building levy as reasons for not supporting increased salaries. "A further point is that the electorate in the city of Buhl seem to want the city-government to be lean and mean with no frills," he said.

Barker reported that the committee has also discussed the possibility of instituting a city administrator position, which would add continuity to the city's government. "Of the five past mayors, one died in office and another moved away prior to finishing his term," he said, adding that the idea was at least worthy of discussion.

Other committee members are Myron Thompson, Frank Squires, Ted Pence and Dale Christensen.

In other business, the council voted to award 1989 the city engineering contract to JUB Engineers of Twin Falls. Councilman Dean Gillett said that it would cause problems to change firms in the middle of the projects planned for the recently obtained grant funds.

"JUB's been doing a good job for us," Gillett said. "By the time someone else got to where they are now, the project could have been finished."

Scott Bybee, of JUB, reported on the status of Buhl's Economic Development Association grant application. "The EDA is meeting in full committee in Seattle to review it," he told the council. "No later than next week, we should be hearing their initial finding."

5th arrest made on drug charges

BURLEY - A fifth person has been arrested in Cassia County's drug roundup.

Abel Davila, 40, of Burley was arrested Tuesday morning at his home, said Sheriff Billy Crystal.

An arrest warrant was issued for Davila Friday after the Cassia County Sheriff's Office decided to end a year-long investigation and start arresting people.

Davila was charged in Magistrate Court Tuesday with one count of delivery of marijuana, according to court records. Bail was set at $10,000.

The sheriff's department is still looking for nine others.

quire audited statements, but said he reduced the requirement to reviewed statements when he learned how expensive they would be. Bruce Newcomb, B-Riley, said the audited statement would cost $14,000 for one warehouse company lobbying against the bill.

Now 72 percent of warehouses provide audited or reviewed statements and 28 percent provide compiled statements. Commodity dealers provide a slightly higher percentage of compiled statements.

"I think reviewed statements are a deterrent" as much as anything, Jones said. "They're going to have a CPA come in and review their books."

If there is a discrepancy, they're going to uncover it.

The bill that the committee rejected would have added one more licensing requirement: That net worth be equal to 10 percent of the prior year's sales.

Commodity dealers and warehouses would have been required to meet that amount or $50,000, whichever was larger. Thus, a company with $10 million in sales would need $1 million net worth.

Committee members Newcomb and Rep. Gary Robbins, R-Dietrich, hammered Jones for that proposal.

"I don't see any relationship between total sales and net worth," Robbins said. "A lot of companies today that are relatively strong would not qualify."

There was also concern that the bill didn't address whether sales made elsewhere by national and international companies could inflate net worth requirements.

Other state ties net worth requirements to warehouse space, but Jones said he was looking for a formula that didn't penalize warehouses to the advantage of commodity dealers.

After the unanimous vote to kill the bill, Robbins and Rep. Tim Tucker, D-Portland, issued a sort of apology for what Robbins called "beating up" on Jones. While they didn't like Jones' solution, they applauded him for being the lone legislator to address the problem.

Farmers and Department of Agriculture officials have made clear to the committee that the state lacks safeguards against warehouse failures, Tucker said. "I achieved something because I certainly stimulated discussion," Jones said after the meeting. "If the issue is stirred up, maybe we'll come up with a workable plan next year."

crash of the beans.

After Hagan's decision, Hawkins Co. will now be able to market the processed beans. Proceeds would be banked for distribution to farmers and other creditors.

A proposed order would prohibit the beans from being sold for less than $1 under the average dealer price listed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in the Bean Market News. If the company wants to sell for a lower price, the transaction would have to be cleared by a committee of growers.

The court has already approved a sale of 10,000 hundredweight of the remaining 194,000 hundredweight of beans to fill an existing seed bean contract with a Canadian firm.

The next step in the bankruptcy proceedings is to establish the validity of claims and determine how the money will be distributed. The court has asked Hawkins to begin that work by March 17.

taling $2.78. Horgan said he doesn't think any more charges will be filed.

The checks were discovered after Miller resigned last October. Lierrman said she took responsibility for billing county residents for the department's services after the commission decided not to hire a replacement immediately.

"I look over the books, sent out the billings, and through sending out bills on accounts receivable, the problem became evident," Lierrman said. Each of the checks Miller charged with cashing were listed as accounts receivable, Lierrman said.

They sent out a couple of bills to people and got phone calls from those people saying, "Hey, we've already paid," Horgan said.

For various reasons, Social Security often turns down an application but approves it after reconsideration, she said.

If the two men receive denials for Social Security assistance a second time, they will both likely qualify for county aid, Bryan said.

Dan Kress, director of the Idaho Disability Determination agency that decides which Social Security claims to honor, said about one-third of the disability claims his office receives are accepted and about 15 percent of applications for reconsideration are accepted.

Proposed school funding helps big districts

BOISE (AP) — A proposed shift in the way state money is distributed to local school districts would benefit mainly the larger ones.

Under the plan approved Monday by the House Education Committee, 46 Idaho school districts would benefit, while the remaining 69 would get no extra money, at least not next year.

For example, Boise School District would get $432,389 the first year and Pocatello would receive $247,561, while smaller districts such as Council, American Falls and Payette would receive no extra money under the bill.

"It's going to take money from an awful lot of districts and give it to other districts," said Rep. Ernest Hale, R-Burley, who voted against the measure.

But Rep. Edward Osburn, R-Boise, said the current distribution formula is unfair and should be changed.

"I'd be embarrassed if we wait," he said. "We've had a hearing and strong reason to support it."

The bill does not add to the public school budget. The proposed $394.3 million budget for fiscal 1990 is due for action on the Senate floor this week.

The formula bill approved Monday would shift less than 1 percent of that figure, about $3 million, during the next fiscal year, which begins July 1. The following year, the amount would rise to $6.2 million, and to $9.7 million in the third year.

State money is distributed to schools partly through counting classroom units in a district. But the weight given to the number of students varies by district.

A small district, for example, would receive about $34,000 for a 12-student classroom, while a bigger district might get the same money for an 18.5-student classroom.

Larger districts have complained about the formula used to distribute the money, and 12 of them supported a plan to change the numbers used to determine dollars — but only for the designated amounts for each of the next three years.

A few smaller districts would get none of this money the first or second year, but would begin the second or third.

Boise's School District enrolls about 10 percent of Idaho students, but receives 9 percent of the state schools budget.

Rep. Jim Hansen, D-Boise, said that about three-fourths of Idaho's students attend schools in the 15 largest districts in the state, and these districts often have relied on supplemental levies passed by voters.

Castleford seniors must achieve C average for diploma

The Times-News

CASTLEFORD — High school seniors here must meet the state's C-average rule to receive diplomas this spring.

The School Board decided that no other certificates, such as a certificate of attendance, will be given, although all seniors will be allowed to participate in the graduation ceremonies.

The board agreed that those seniors who do not meet the rule will be allowed to go through the line at graduation, but they will receive a blank folder.

The board also adopted the state's guidelines on the use of correspondence courses in high school.

The guidelines state that three units of correspondence credits may be accepted toward high school graduation and that correspondence courses will be used only under extraordinary conditions or extenuating circumstances.

The board agreed to contact McMullen, McPhoe & Co. of Twin Falls to do the school district's 1988 audit.

The district will again lease out its five unused water shares for this summer. Anyone interested in leasing the water shares can submit a sealed bid to the school.

2 Osmonds testify against Sheets

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Two more members of the singing Osmond family testified Tuesday in the federal fraud trial of former Utah businessman Gary Sheets, claiming they lost $30,000 each from their pension funds in investments arranged by Sheets.

Sheets, 54, the former chairman of the now-defunct CFS Financial Corp. and J. Gary Sheets & Associates, is on trial in U.S. District Court on 34 counts of fraud and embezzlement involving $1.8 million.

Prosecutors contend he misrepresented financial resources, diverted pension funds and promised impossible returns to investors.

Melvin Wayne Osmond, Provo, testified his recollection of details was sketchy, but that his 1985 transactions with Sheets involved placing money in a highly speculative program called Working Fund II.

"In the past we had entrusted our wealth and fortunes to certain people," he said. The investments went bad, "and it caused a lot of stress in my life ... I was under very heavy medication."

Asked by Acting U.S. Attorney Steward Waltz if he had authorized the money transfer from his pension plan, Osmond replied, "No sir."

He said he was not aware of a disclaimer that the venture was extremely risky and would not have allowed it under those conditions.

"First of all, my wife would have killed me," he said. "I hate to make things like this public, but my mental condition was not very sound at that time of my life." Osmond said his wife handled such matters at the time.

Defense attorney Peter Stirba asked Osmond whether he understood that the pension account was actually a bank account in First Security Bank.

Former lawmaker Ellsworth, 68, dies

SALMON (AP) — Former state Sen. James Ellsworth died Monday in Salmon.

He was 68.

Ellsworth, a Republican from Lendore, served in the Idaho Senate from 1965 to 1977 and was president pro tem for three terms. He also served as a Lemhi county commissioner and a member of the Lendore School Board.

A longtime rancher, he was president of the Idaho Cattlemen's Association for two years.

Ellsworth was born Nov. 8, 1920 in Lewisville, Idaho. He is survived by his wife, Mabelle Frances Mulkey Ellsworth, three sons, five daughters, four brothers and three sisters. The cause of death was not disclosed.

Funeral services are set for Thursday at 2 p.m. at the Lendore High School.

Hayden Pines has water rates fixed

BOISE (AP) — State utility regulators have ordered changes in Hayden Pines Water Co.'s rates after reconsidering a decision to reduce rates for the company's 1,800 northern Idaho customers.

The Public Utilities Commission told Hayden Pines in October to drop its monthly customer charge from $14.30 to $10.30 and its commodity charge from $1.25 to 90 cents per 1,000 gallons.

The 28-percent cut stemmed from a complaint against the company filed in late 1986 by the Hayden Pines Ratepayers Association.

But the PUC said Tuesday that effective March 1, Hayden Pines' monthly customer charge will be $11.26 and the commodity charge will be 98 cents per 1,000 gallons.

The commission said the adjustments are the result of several errors of computation and omission in its October order, which was reconsidered at hearings in Post Falls and Coeur d'Alene in January.

The change cuts the basic rate reduction for Hayden Pines customers to 16 percent, but the PUC said they will be reduced an additional 5.8 percent until May 1990 to return some $14,000 in "overcharges" between March 1985 and April 1988.

Authorities seek escapee from Elko

ELKO, Nev. (AP) — Elko County authorities were searching late Tuesday for a Utah man who escaped from sheriff's deputies moments after he was sentenced to 10 years in the Nevada State Prison.

Officials said Larry Vigil, 32, of Moab, Utah, was being led from the courtroom into a waiting sheriff's cruiser when he made his break and fled down the street.

Deputies said he apparently injured his head in the breakaway, but did not say how that happened.

He was described as a 5-foot-8 Indian with brown hair and brown eyes and was wearing bright red jail coveralls and a chain belly belt, although a court spokeswoman said his hands were not cuffed.

District Judge Tom Stringfield sentenced Vigil to 10 years for the Sept. 27 burglary of a pickup truck at a downtown Elko hotel. The spokeswoman said his sentence was stiff because of several prior arrests.

up to $875,000 during the lottery's first year.

"We want to have the most effective advertising possible, and to contract for that service through an open and competitive process," Hedrick said in a news release.

The initial "Notice of Intent to Issue a Request for Proposal" went out to all advertising vendors registered with the state Division of Purchasing. It also was sent to advertising agencies that had notified the Idaho Lottery office in writing that they wanted to be considered.

"We're trying to make sure no one who wants to be considered is left out," Hedrick said. "If agencies who weren't on the mailing list will call the Lottery by Friday, we'll make sure they get a chance to compete."

He said he hopes to sign an advertising contract by the end of April.

Lottery spokesman Bob Cooper said up to 3.5 percent of the revenue from lottery ticket sales may be spent on advertising and promotion. If first-year lottery sales hit the projected level of $25 million, Cooper said $875,000 could be available for advertising.

However, he said not all that money would necessarily be spent, and not all of it would necessarily be allocated to advertising work done outside the Lottery office.

It's amazing how a speech and hearing disorder can affect the simplest conversation.

If your speech is even slightly impaired, people just might misinterpret what you say. And a little bit of a hearing problem could make an enormous impact on how well you understand what people are saying. Both of which may lead to a confusing end to any conversation. That's why it's important that you be checked. And why the US WEST Foundation is sponsoring free statewide speech and hearing screenings.

Coordinated by the Idaho State University Department of Speech Pathology and Audiology, these free screenings are designed to identify speech and hearing problems. And, if any are detected, the staff will refer you to further counseling and treatment.

McCandless

Filer senior Steve McCandless thrives on late-game pressure

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

FILER — In recent weeks the play of Filer High School guard Steve McCandless has drawn lots of attention — much of that from opposing defenders.

When Mike Brady, to that point the Wildcats' leading rebounder, went down with a broken foot late in the regular season, attention focused even more on McCandless.

Not to worry, Filer fans, he's enjoying the additional challenge.

"I like pressure situations," said McCandless, a 5-foot, 11-inch senior. "It makes me play a little better, I guess, and it makes me work harder."

It must. A pair of McCandless free throws stayed off a Grace comeback in one Filer victory, his three-pointers provided the decisive points against Buhl and a 27-point game — including his team's final four — downed Declo for the District 4 Class A-3 championship.

"That's pretty much the way he's been. He wants it at the end," said second-year Filer coach LaBall-Batterson. "He's not bashful. We have some things set up for him and he's the kind of player who can do it for you."

A varsity starter since his sophomore season, McCandless is averaging a team-high 18.2 points-per-game on 54 percent shooting from the floor and nearly 78-percent accuracy from the foul line. Add in a 53-for-115 performance from three-point range (46.1 percent) for a complete picture of his offensive firepower.

Or is it?

"He's not a gunner, though he's not going to pass it up if he's open," emphasizes Batterson. "He knows when to get rid of it. Our kids enjoy playing with him knowing that if they pass to him they'll get it back."

The basketball talents the 18-year-old sharpshooter has displayed in leading his team to an 18-6 record, co-championship of the Canyon Conference and the district championship are a far cry from grade school ball at the YMCA on Saturdays, though he's never been very far from a hoop in all those years.

"I've always liked basketball," said McCandless. "I tried football as a sophomore — I was a quarterback, but I didn't really have that much fun."

Steve has really put in a lot of hours," his coach said. "He gave up football and went to work on the basketball court. Not only here at school, but in the park and he's spent a lot of time at home. It's paid off for him."

It may have been a little lonely in the park, while many of his teammates toiled on the gridiron, but there were those four-hour summer sessions with just about everyone on hand and Steve's never lacked for competition at home.

"My dad always used to play basketball with me," McCandless explained. "He showed me how to shoot, and really got me started. He always had me work with my off hand. I'm left-handed, but I do layins better right-handed."

In addition to the moral support — you'll find John McCandless at all Wildcat games — another opportunity to improve himself in the sport-Steve loves have been provided.

"I've been to lots of camps," said the younger McCandless. "I went to CSI-camp a couple of years, then from the seventh grade on to Northwest Basketball Camp at Medical Lake, Wash."

Both McCandless, who played for the West team in the 1988 Basketball Congress International tournament, and teammate Shane Blakelse were picked for that camp's Australian tour next July.

Much more than a one-dimensional player, McCandless has 118 rebounds, 39 of those on the offensive boards to his credit, and has averaged 2.5 steals per outing.

"He knows how to play man-to-man," Batterson said. "I don't put him out there just to score points."

Just about the only thing that's slowed his pro career was the hip pointer McCandless suffered late in his junior year. But neither that nor a major change in his role has done much to dampen his spirits.

Jimmy Johnson apologizes

The Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Jimmy Johnson began his career as the new coach of the Dallas Cowboys and successor to Tom Landry Tuesday with an apology.

"I'm sorry if I hurt anyone, I apologize," Johnson said in his presence in Dallas the day before the firing of Landry, the only other coach the NFL team has had in 29 years.

"I was in Dallas to talk face to face with Jerry Jones," Johnson said at a news conference.

"The fact I was seen in public apparently offended some people. I'd like to sit down and visit with Tom sometime about it. We'll do it at a time of his choosing."

Jones, an Arkansas millionaire, bought the team from H.R. "Bum" Bright in a sale announced on Saturday night after Johnson flew home to resign as coach of the Miami Hurricanes.

"Things happened so fast that we didn't mean any disrespect to anybody," Jones said. "I have deep feelings for the Cowboys and Coach Landry."

Hostile questions about Johnson's visit to Dallas before Landry was axed used up almost half of the 60-minute press conference.

Landry was told he had been fired by Jones and club president Tex Schramm on Saturday afternoon at the Hills of Lakeway near Austin.

"It hurts me to say I did something out of disrespect for Tom Landry," Johnson said. "I don't expect to replace someone like him. But just let me do my thing and judge me by what happens later."

Landry said he thought his dismissal "could have been handled better."

He was left twisting in the wind for almost two days after Jones had shaken hands on a done deal with Bright.

There was a report that Cowboy player personnel director Gil Brandt had talked with Johnson Thursday about the transaction. But Johnson disputed that, saying, "I haven't talked to Gil Brandt in two weeks."

Jones took the media for task for banging on the Landry issue.

"I'd hate to put Tom Landry through what I've been through over this," said Jones, who stood near Johnson during the press conference.

"I'm wrong and there was no right way I visited with Tex about the sale then got to Tom as soon as I could."

Jones added, "Tom Landry and Tex Schramm are bigger than money, bigger than life."

Jones also said that the sale with Bright was final.

Asked how he could win some of the disgruntled Dallas fans, Johnson said, "I hope they are as excited as I am. We need your help. I don't claim to have all the answers but I want to take them to the Super Bowl."

Baseball season here — CSI splits opener

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — College of Southern Idaho got its baseball season off to a chilly and break-even start Tuesday afternoon.

The Eagles nipped the College of Idaho 3-2 by scoring twice in the bottom of the seventh inning of the opener but then bowed under a barrage of nine walks and eight hits to lose the nightcap 11-1.

"This was our first time out in the yard and we simply haven't seen any live pitching offensively and our pitchers haven't had much live work," said pitching coach Jim Dawson. "We did not throw the ball very well today but we will get better. This is a hard-working team and I expect to see a lot of improvement by Saturday (when Treasure Valley comes to town for a 1 p.m. doubleheader)."

Tuesday's games were the makeup of a season-opening double-header originally scheduled for last Saturday but postponed because of wet grounds.

CSI had an early lead when sophomore catcher Jessie Flores, who missed most of last year with a broken finger, drilled a solo homer in the third inning. But the Coyotes rebounded immediately, greeting reliever Robert Kuhn with three straight hits. Rod Millares doubled in one run and Bill Hartnett singled Millares home.

That 2-1 lead stayed until the bottom of the seventh when Chris Loftus led off with a walk. He was replaced on the bases by Brian Avram, who immediately moved to third when a pickoff attempt went awry. Kent Schow and Paul Murphy drew walks with Avram trying the score on a wild pitch while Murphy was at bat. Murphy and Schow then worked the double steal to win it.

CSI's only bright spot offensively came in the fourth inning of the nightcap when Butch Nolan doubled in Murphy, who had walked.

High school competition is becoming commercial

By STEVE BERKOWITZ

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The growing nationalization of high school sports crystallized even further this month with word of an impending national cable television contract for a basketball game of the week and plans for licensing and endorsements similar to those used by pro and college teams and leagues.

While some educators remain wary of high school sports moving beyond backyard gyms into larger arenas, as well as the nation's living rooms, others use the trend as an incentive and hope to use new revenues to help defray the spiraling cost of high school sports while promoting their games and athletes to a

For those who gauge the high school experience with a once-every-five-years look at the old high school yearbook, or the movie "Boyz n the Hood," consider these recent developments.

* The national newspaper, USA Today, does weekly top 25 polls for football and boys and girls basketball.

* National sports magazines preview the best athletes annually in football and basketball to the point where some high school players are its well-known as professionals by the time they say yes to one college recruiter and no to 200 others.

* The national cable sports network, ESPN, has a weekly half-hour show devoted to high school sports, and occasionally televises high school basketball tournaments and all-star games.

Regional teams congregate

By LARRY HOVEY

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The cream of the Region 18 junior college basketball crop begins arriving in Twin Falls today on the eve of what should be the biggest and best three days of basketball in the town's history.

All seven of the teams have scheduled "shoot arounds" in the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium from 4 to 10 p.m. today. The tournament begins with two games Thursday afternoon and concludes with the championship battle at 8 p.m. Saturday.

The regional winner will entertain the Arizona (Region 1) champion in a bi-regional March 10 and that winner will advance to the national tournament in Hutchinson, Kan., March 14, playing the 10th district champion in the tourney opener at noon.

Two of the four teams coming into the meet are ranked in the top 20 in the final poll with host the Eagles holding the No. 1 spot. CSI coach Fred Trekle, however, still believes that athletically, if not politically, the 18th region could logically have four in the top 20.

There is no doubt in my mind that Region 18 is the toughest in junior college basketball nationally this year and I believe our being ranked No. 1 substantiates that, Trekle said.

He added that Utah Valley, ranked 19th, and Dixie and North Idaho have the capabilities of winning national.

"I have been around this tournament as a player, spectator and coach since 1967 and I have never seen the caliber of teams and individuals that will be here this weekend," he said.

Meanwhile, about 120 reserved seats and 800 general admission tourney passes remain available at the gymnasium from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The general admission tickets are priced at $12 each. CSI Athletic Director Karl Kleinkopf said tournament passes still available as of noon Thursday will be available at the gate for both the noon and 6 p.m. sessions. Individual session tickets will be sold only if available.

The opening round of the tournament will pit Utah Valley against Snow College at noon Thursday with Dixie taking on Ricks at 2 p.m. CSI meets Eastern Utah at 6 p.m. with North Idaho and Treasure Valley winding up at 8 p.m.

Barring any first-round upsets, the semifinals of Friday should be the single best session in regional history.

That would send 26-5 Dixie against 27-4 Utah Valley and those two traded home and home victories in the 6 p.m. game. CSI at 30-1 would collide with 22-9 North Idaho, and North Idaho faces a veteran Treasure Valley team that upset the Cardinals three weeks ago. While Dixie swept Ricks, the Rebels needed a 27-foot three-pointer at the buzzer from Boobie James to pull out the second meeting at Rexburg.

Eagles nip Odessa for No. 1

By LARRY HOVEY

Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — For the third time in the program's 23-year-history, the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team will go into postseason competition with the additional on-honor-of-the-No. 1 ranking in the nation.

"The Eagles, who begin trying to prove the contention of the voters in the Region 18 tournament opener here Thursday night, nipped Odessa Community College of Texas, in the final National Junior College Athletic Association poll of the season."

CSI, 30-1, which moved into the top spot last week for the first time in 12 years, received 14 of the 24 first-place votes cast by the NJCAA regional directors, but outdistanced runnerup Odessa by just six points, 209-203.

Odessa, like CSI, ended its regular season at 30-1. Of note is the fact that Clifford Martin, a starting forward for CSI this year, was sixth man on the Odessa team last year.

"It is an honor and we are enjoying it," said CSI coach Fred Trekle. "But we're in the situation now where one had night and you're gone."

That was thoroughly driven home Monday night when Jacksonville Community College of Florida, ranked No. 2 virtually all year until dropping its first game three weeks ago, was shocked and eliminated by a 50-50 team in what was considered to be a pre-regional positioning round.

Jacksonville reportedly was easily the best team in Florida and everyone in the San Jacinto half of that Texas regional felt they were playing for second place. But, zap! They're gone with a 30-2 record. Trekle said Jacksonville was 10th in Tuesday's final juro poll.

Utah Valley, 27-4 and meeting Snow College in the regional opener at noon Thursday, finished 19th in the final poll. The Wolverines had arisen as high as ninth place in the regular season.

Newman wins Buhl NAB stop

BUHL — Ed Newman had to go to two extra frames to nip Donny Tucker for the title in the National Amateur Bowlers, Inc. weekend stop at Buhl's Sunnyside Bowl.

Newman's overtime win ended a bid by Tucker to move from third in early qualifying to the championship.

Gary Rene, Twin Falls, paced qualifiers with a 668 total in the preliminary round but in the semifinals Newman took the lead with 734 with Tucker at 621 and Rene 620.

In the step-ladder head-to-head competition, Tucker topped Rene 221-183. Tucker then battled to a 216 handi-cap game tie forcing the roll-off.

Newman won $115 for his efforts while Tucker took $55 and Rene $35.

The association's next tournament is March 12 at Pocatello's Tough Guy Lanes. Qualifying begins at 1 p.m.

Playboy prints Big East story

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — Administrators at Big East schools adamantly opposed Playboy's attempts to recruit students to pose for its pages, but the magazine succeeded and the results hit the newstands Tuesday.

Administrators at all nine Big East Conference schools, six of which are Roman Catholic, barred Playboy photographers from interviewing on campus and did not allow advertising in campus publications, said Elizabeth Norris, a spokeswoman for the Chicago-based magazine. Some area hotels also prohibited interviews.

"All this publicity just backfires on the schools by getting the word out," she said, adding that sales have been known to increase as much as 600 percent in areas featured in an issue.

The Big East Conference comprises Boston College, Georgetown University, Providence College, St. John's University, Seton Hall University and Villanova University — all Catholic schools — and Connecticut College, University of Pittsburgh and Syracuse University.

PGA bans square-grooved clubs

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — All square-grooved golf clubs will be banned from PGA Tour competition beginning Jan. 1, 1990, PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman announced Tuesday.

"It's a firm decision" confirmed by the tour's Policy Board, Beman said.

The board's decision was "unilateral" and was not endorsed by the U.S. Golf Association, traditionally the rules-maker for golf.

The USGA has said that square grooves do conform to the rules of golf except for the "Ping Eye 2." USGA spokesman John Morris said by telephone from his office in Far Hills, N.J.

"In keeping with the traditional concept of the role played by the USGA in the formulation and implementation of the Rules of Golf, the Board will again request a position of the competition providing for the use only of V-groove clubs in Tour events."

Henderson: Yanks were drunks

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Rickey Henderson said Tuesday that former Yankees pitcher Neil Allen was one of the New York players that drank excessively during the 1988 season.

On Monday, Henderson claimed that alcohol abuse on the Yankees last season hurt the team's pennant chances.

"What we should've been busting our tails, we didn't," Henderson said Tuesday. "We were too drunk. We were getting into our rooms too late and drinking too much. We weren't ready to play."

Henderson said that one night on the road last season he helped Allen back to his hotel room after the pitcher passed out on the dance floor because of excessive alcohol use.

Allen, now a member of the Cleveland Indians, said he had a drinking problem in 1983 while a member of the New York Mets.

In a prepared statement on Tuesday, Yankees owner George Steinbrenner said, "If it did go on, there's going to stop, and in a hurry. But I don't know anything about it. And since this is the first I've heard about it, I don't have anything more to say."

Edwards barred from World Cup

LONDON (AP) — Eddie "The Eagle" Edwards, one of sports' most famous losers, has been barred from competing in World Cup ski jumping events at least through the end of the current season.

The British Ski Federation said Tuesday it had decided to keep the British plater on lower-level events for the time being. Edwards is expected to return to action soon after recovering from a shoulder injury suffered in training last December.

Although Eddie is again fit to jump, "I am delighted to hear the good news — it was not what I needed," said John Leaning, the federation's Nordic competition director.

Edwards became a celebrity a year ago as he finished last in both the 70- and 90-meter jumps at the Winter Olympics in Calgary. His jumping style was dubbed "ski dropping" by one reporter but his self-deprecating humor and willingness to give one of the world's most dangerous sports a try endeared him to fans.

Erickson: Nothing from Miami

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Washington State University football coach Dennis Erickson reiterated Tuesday he's not interested in the vacant University of Miami coaching job.

Jim Livengood, Washington State's athletic director, said Erickson — who led the Cougars to an appearance last season in the Aloha Bowl — has not been contacted.

"Dennis is a Cougar. That's where it's at," said Livengood.

Erickson coached at the University of Idaho from 1982 to 1985. Miami assistant head coach Gary Stevens, the frontrunner to replace his former boss, Jimmy Johnson, said Tuesday that Athletic Director Sam Jankovich plans to interview two other candidates before making a decision.

Stevens, the only coach to publicly express interest in the job, met with Jankovich for 7½ hours Monday.

The Hurricanes' job opened up last weekend when Johnson was named coach of the Dallas Cowboys after Arkansas' interim Jerry Jones, a college teammate of Johnson's, bought the club. Johnson replaced Tom Landry, the only coach in the Cowboys' 29-year history.

Another head coach mentioned as a candidate — Mike Archer of Louisiana State — has denied that he's interested.

Going back to the basics

Old-fashioned dishes often spark childhood memories

After a flurry of interest in nouvelle dishes, most of us are rediscovering the pleasures of old-fashioned dishes — foods that satisfy both the body and the soul and, perhaps, spark childhood memories.

Unfortunately, unlike our mothers or grandmothers, we simply can't spend hours preparing dinner. Today's savvy cooks, thrifty with time and money, look for opportunities to piggyback recipes.

The Quick Classic French Onion Soup, for example, is based on the poaching liquid left from the savory Peachpot Beef.

An easy, streamlined version of the traditional pot pie, Speedy Sirloin Steak Casserole calls for refrigerator pie crust, eliminating messy dough making. The Mini Beef and Cheese Meatloaves are ready in under 15 minutes — thanks to your microwave.

To round out any back-to-basics meal, try Baked Apples Norwegian-style, also prepared fast and easy in your microwave.

utes before carving. During standing, roast will rise approximately 10 degrees to 150 degrees F for medium-rare.

Remove string. Meanwhile use 1 cup poaching liquid to prepare Mustard Sauce. Carve roast into thin slices and serve with sauce. Makes 6-8 servings.

Reserve remaining poaching liquid to make Quick Classic French Onion Soup.

MUSTARD SAUCE

2 teaspoons cornstarch
1 cup beef poaching liquid, strained and divided
2 to 2½ teaspoons Dijon-style mustard
2 teaspoons chopped parsley
Dissolve cornstarch in 1 tablespoon poaching liquid. Combine cornstarch mixture, remaining poaching liquid, mustard and parsley. Cook and stir over medium heat until sauce is clear and slightly thickened, about 3 to 5 minutes. Yields ¾ cup.

QUICK CLASSIC FRENCH ONION SOUP

1 pound yellow onions, thinly sliced
1 teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons olive oil
5 cups beef poaching liquid, strained
¼ teaspoon black pepper
4 French bread slices, cut ½-inch and toasted
6-ounces Jarlsberg cheese, thinly sliced
In Dutch oven, cook onion and sugar in hot oil over medium heat, 15 to 20 minutes or until deep golden brown, stirring frequently. Slowly add poaching liquid and pepper; bring to boil. Reduce heat; cover and cook slowly 20 minutes. Ladle soup into deep 1½-quart ovenproof casserole or tureen, or individual ovenproof bowls. Place bread slices on top of soup; top with cheese.

Place soup under broiler, 3- to 4-inches from heat; broil 3 to 5 minutes, until cheese is lightly browned and bubbly. Makes four servings.

POACHED BEEF WITH MUSTARD SAUCE

2 (¾-pound) boneless beef chuck shoulder roast
2 tablespoons olive oil
4 cups water
1 can (10½-ounces) condensed beef broth
1 cup dry white wine (or unsweetened apple juice)
2 cloves garlic, minced
1½ teaspoons dried thyme leaves
½ teaspoon cracked black pepper
Mustard Sauce

The boneless beef chuck roast with heavy string at 2-inch intervals. In Dutch oven, brown roast in oil over medium-high heat until all sides are browned. Pour off drippings.

Add water, beef broth, wine, garlic, thyme and pepper. Bring to a boil; reduce heat to low; cover and simmer 18 to 22 minutes per pound. Temperature will register 140 degrees F.

Remove roast to serving platter. Cover tightly with plastic wrap or aluminum foil and allow to stand 10 minutes.

Cooking with wine can be a tasty alternative to using salt

By CARLETON JONES
The Baltimore Sun

The sudden American stampede away from salty seasonings, canned soups, meats and other fatty foods may be great news in nutrition circles, but it can leave something of a flavor gap.

It is a hiatus the health food industry has been trying to fill with all sorts of harmless accents like dried herbs and fruits. There is one enhancer, though, that is also harmless and easy and inexpensive.

Wine will do the trick. Only small amounts are ever required for food preparation, and almost any good basic wine will make hot-food flavors sing (if desired, the alcohol content can be slowly simmered away in a few minutes). Cold foods, too, desserts and fruit compotes, benefit from a touch of fortified sweet wine, Sauternes, Tokay or port.

Wine does for modern gourmet dishes what vinegar and cider used to do for American cooking a century ago and more — generate sparkle and an extra dimension. For hearty patients and dieters it can replace salty accents with another interesting taste.

In general, if the right wine is used with the right food, the taste is richer, better. The right wine does not need to be expensive. But hard and fast rules governing which wine to use do not always seem to work.

For example, custom dictates white wines go with fish, either as a drink or in a sauce or both. But Fredy Girardet, of Crissier, Switzerland, regarded by many as one of the greatest living Continental chefs, serves some of his whitefish dishes, Dover sole included, in sauces made from a cup or more of Beaujolais, the bouncy, French pop red wine. In one whitefish recipe, he uses red and white wines in sauces.

Informed cooks are rarely scared about what wine, especially a little (1 cup or less), will do to their expensive main ingredients.

But there are some "don'ts." My opinion is that truly hot and spicy dishes do not need, and even fight, fine still wines as an ingredient. Sweet vermouth and some of the great Mediterranean-region wines like vermouth, Marsala, Malaga, Madeira and port can be used with fragrant spicy things, especially cold fresh fruits. Often they are right where cognac or brandy are right (By contrast, it is dry vermouth of the Martini breed that can pungently enoble any simple poultry recipe). Remember that you want some of the wine flavor to show through the result; less rather than more heat is a good practice. Cooking will alter the flavor fairly rapidly in different stages, and that is why many chefs add a full strength, uncooked splash of the cooking wine as an accent toward the close of a dish's preparation.

You can expect many wine additions to cooked dishes to disembody themselves gracefully and transform their own flavor while doing indescribable things to the main ingredients. Vermouth has a sort of stand-up-and-fight aftereffect in cooked food — it is still on stage; in hot dishes, sherry and Madeira add a similar presence.

Most cuts of red meat benefit from a night or two in the refrigerator covered in a bath of a cup or two of wine plus water. It can have a mildly tenderizing effect. You can reduce the

Etoouffee is delicious Southern dish

Southern Hospitality. It's not just a rumor, it's a real tradition. We found out firsthand.

We were enjoying the southern sunshine when sister-in-law had the first stirring of labor. Though she was weeks away from ETD (estimated time of delivery) no one bothered to tell that to the baby.

After the first scary hours, when she was shuttled by ambulance to a bigger metropolitan hospital, things settled down a bit.

Actually just long enough for the doctors to take a good look at the baby using all the newest and fanciest equipment and decide it was okay for it to be born then and there.

There was the lovely city of Savannah: a great name for a little girl, right? Well, it turned out to be a he and yes, he got a "southern style" name too, Rhett.

If you can't be at home for some of these things, I guess the South is best with its kind ways and soft-speaking people.

Earlier that week in New Orleans, I learned a new (to me) southern dish, called Etoouffee (A-toou-fay). It means smothered and it's delicious.

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

Most of the time this Etoouffee is made with fresh crawfish or shrimp, but since our chances of finding a couple of pounds of crawfish in our markets is about even with finding a great, fluffy, baked Idaho potato deep in the bayous, then let's stick to shrimp.

One more note. Most southern cooking is based on a roux. Now you've learned from watching Paul Prudhomme on television that this is really nothing more than flour browned in oil. Sounds simple and actually is except to do it right it takes at least 20 minutes.

The flavor extracted from this slow browning really does make a difference and you don't get a "floury pasty" taste.

SHRIMP ETOUFFEE

3 tablespoons of butter
3 tablespoons cooking oil

6 tablespoons all-purpose flour
2 cups chopped onions
1 cup chopped bell pepper
1 cup chopped celery
4 individual cloves of garlic
1 (6-ounce) can of tomato paste
2 (10½-ounce) cans of beef con-somme

2 cups water
3 bay leaves
1 teaspoon dried basil leaves
½ teaspoon dried thyme leaves
1 teaspoon chili powder
¼ teaspoon cayenne pepper
¼ teaspoon black pepper
1 teaspoon salt
3 pounds peeled shrimp (fresh would be best, but frozen is okay)
1 cup chopped green onions (shallots would be great)
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley

Melt the butter and cooking oil together in your heaviest pot. Add the 6 tablespoons of flour and stir over low heat until the flour is browned. Take your time on this step and get a nice brown roux.

Now add the "Southern Holy Trinity of Cooking," the onions, the green peppers and the celery. Stir these over a slightly higher heat than the roux and add the garlic cloves.

These ingredients put together this way are the basis for much of "Southern Cooking" and now you can add the ingredients to make the dish distinctive. While you're at it, enjoy the aroma, it's great!

Now add in the tomato paste and stir in well. Add the consommé and water, mix well again and let mixture simmer.

While simmering, add the seasonings, the bay leaves, basil, thyme, chili powder, cayenne pepper, black pepper and salt.

Now let it simmer for at least 45 minutes more.

Add the shrimp, shallots (or green onions) and parsley and cook for 20 minutes longer. Let the pot sit for another hour or so to let flavors meld, then reheat and serve over rice with crusty bread and a crisp salad.

This dish is a great remedy for the late winter doldrums.

Enjoy!

Brewing the best coffee and tea

The Washington Post

Making coffee and tea are old arts. But it's amazing how they have gotten lost through the years. There is a right way and a wrong way to brew each, and unfortunately, they are not the same.

While very hot — but not boiling — water should be used for coffee, boiling water is best for tea. That's for starters.

Coffee: Brewing the perfect cup of coffee requires the perfect cup of water. The water should be between 185 and 205 degrees (more would be boiling and cut off the oxygen), while the best brewing temperature is 160 to 165 degrees. To begin, place on 2 ounces of ground coffee per 12-cup pot. Pour the grounds into the open filter and pour your water over them. The best coffee is quality.

fresh coffee, so try to brew a pot using individual, prepackaged packets. The best guarantee of freshness from larger quantities, whether whole beans or ground, is air-tight storage in the freezer.

Tea: The use of hot water leaves most of the tea flavor in the tea leaves, not in the pot, so remember the adage: "Bring the pot to the kettle, not the kettle to the pot." In other words, keep the water boiling until you pour it into the tea pot. Heating the tea pot first, preferably a glass or clay pot — with hot tap water — helps. Then pour the water over the tea (about one teaspoon per person and one for the pot) and cover to help keep the aroma in the tea. Steep for 3 to 5 minutes and remove the leaves immediately.

As for storage, keep the tea in an air-tight canister away from damp places; never put it in the refrigerator, because the tea could absorb the open filter and your water moisture there and impair the over them. The best coffee is quality.

Store in Paris satisfies American tastes

PARIS (AP) — In the heart of Paris, home of fantastic foie gras and sublime sauces, Americans can satisfy an urge for pumpkin pie, peanut butter, creamed corn and even Cheesecake.

But The General Store is more than just a kitchen away from home for expatriates.

It's operators, Jean-Pierre and Françoise Bourbeillon, say it is increasingly popular with the French, who are developing a taste for American food.

Bourbeillon is French and his wife is from New Zealand, but they know a lot about cranberry sauce, chocolate chip cookies, taco shells and molasses.

They got hooked on American fare when Jean-Pierre was a commodities trader in the United States from 1976 to 1984.

"The European idea of American food is built on preconceived notions and prejudices, mostly developed from lack of knowledge and being exposed to the fast-food craze," Bourbeillon, 46, said recently as he served customers. There is more to American food than burgers and hot dogs.

When the Bourbeillons returned to France from Boston, they made a list of foods, "a good representative idea of what America has to offer," regional products like maple syrup and clam chowder from the Northeast and Tex-Mex from the Southwest.

They opened the store three years ago, and their clientele is split evenly between Americans and the French.

"There has always been a love-hate relationship with the United States. The French have always had a tremendous fascination with anything American," Bourbeillon said.

A French woman, Françoise Roger, entered the store on a narrow Left Bank street for a look around, and bought a bottle of blue cheese salad dressing and a jar of blueberry chutney.

"I'm curious about the tastes of other countries," she said. "Today, I'm concentrating on typical American tastes. I'm here looking for sauces."

Many customers come for the fresh brownies, cookies and pies Elaine bakes daily.

"In the beginning, we got a lot of press like we were some oddball operation, selling California wine to the French," Bourbeillon said. "But the French have moved from a kind of amused interest to a genuine liking for American food."

"And there are other trends. The French are taking to brunches and are starting to like making pancakes, or having a chili dinner for 20. It's becoming an accepted thing to do, at least in Paris."

Said Bourbeillon: "It is a change in attitude and a new way of life. I don't think it's a passing trend. It is an evolution."

The General Store is busiest at Thanksgiving.

"Last year we discovered we were becoming famous," Bourbeillon said. "The year before we did turkey for the first time, with all the fixings, plus pastry, pumpkin and pecan pies. This year we produced literally hundreds of meals."

Bourbeillon was so great that they joined forces with a poultry dealer down the street. Mrs. Bourbeillon furnished a staff stuffing recipe and a neighbor cooked the turkeys while she baked the pies.

"He kept running up here with pans of it for tasting sessions," she said.

"For the French we had to tell them what to do with the yams and cranberry sauce. We gave out little recipes. It was a lot of fun," she said.

Clarified butter can be made in 4 easy steps

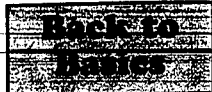

The Los Angeles Times

Clarified butter, drawn butter and ghee are one in the same — butter that has been melted and had the milk solids removed. The result is a clear yellow liquid that tolerates higher cooking temperatures and, stored in a covered jar, keeps for weeks in the refrigerator and even longer if frozen.

To clarify butter, place any amount in a heavy pan over low heat. As the butter melts, the white milk solids will begin rising to the surface.

Keep the heat low so the butter does not brown. Continue to boil until the white solids look curdled. Then remove the butter from the heat and pour it into a glass measuring cup.

After standing for a few minutes, the butter will settle into three layers. Skim the thin butter fat layer from the top and pour or strain the clear yellow liquid into a clean container with a tight-fitting lid. Discard the milk solids that settle to the bottom.

Each one-half cup of butter should yield about one-third cup clarified butter. Use the clarified butter for sautéing delicate flavored foods, as a sauce for lobster, to make brown and black butter and as a baking ingredient.

Basics

1-inch thick
1 clove garlic, minced
2 cups (1/2 cup) red wine vinegar, divided
2 tablespoons olive oil, divided
1 large Spanish onion, thinly sliced
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
1/2 teaspoon salt, divided
1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper

1 (jarred) whole roasted red pepper, cut in thin strips
4 to 6 ounces Jarlsberg, sliced (or Nookloost, for additional spice) cheese
2 (8-inch) rolls

Place beef top round steak in plastic bag or utility dish; spread garlic on both sides of steak. Combine 1/4 cup vinegar and 1 tablespoon oil; pour over steak, turning to coat. Close bag securely; or cover dish with marinate in refrigerator 5 to 8 hours (overnight, if desired) turning at least once. Pour off marinade, leaving garlic on steak.

Place steak on rack in broiler pan so surface of meat is 3- to 4-inches from heat. Broil 8 to 10 minutes; turn and broil second side of steak 8 to 10 minutes to desired degree of doneness (rare to medium).

In large frying pan, cook onion in remaining hot oil over medium-high heat 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Add remaining vinegar, cumin, 1/4 teaspoon salt and crushed red pepper and cook until most of vinegar evaporates. Remove from heat. Carve steak into 1/2- to 3/4-inch thick slices. Place beef mixture in bottom half of bread; top with cheese. Place sandwiches under broiler to melt cheese. Makes four servings.

MINI BEEF AND CHEESE MEATLOAVES

8 ounces ground beef
3 to 4 ounces Nookloost cheese, shredded

2 tablespoons chopped green onion
1 tablespoon EACH: milk, crushed rye crackers
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon black pepper

Combine ground beef, 2 ounces Nookloost cheese, onion, milk, cracker crumbs, salt and pepper, mixing lightly but thoroughly. Divide meat mixture into two equal portions and mold into small loaves. Place loaves in microwave-safe baking dish. Cover with waxed paper and microwave on HIGH 2 to 2 1/2 minutes; rotate dish 1/2 turn and continue cooking 2 minutes.

Sprinkle remaining cheese on loaves. Cover with waxed paper and let stand 5 minutes. Makes two servings.

Conventional Oven Method: Place loaves in baking pan. Bake at 250 degrees F 20 to 30 minutes. (Top with the remaining cheese 5 minutes before end of cooking time).

SPEEDY SIRLOIN STEAK CASSEROLE

1/2-pound beef top sirloin steak, 1/2-inch thick

2 tablespoons cooking oil, divided
1 sheet refrigerated pie crust
1 teaspoon dill weed
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 medium onion, coarsely chopped
1 pound mushrooms, quartered
1 tablespoon flour
1/2 cup milk

1 teaspoon EACH: ground nutmeg, beef bouillon granules

8 ounces (2 cups) Jarlsberg cheese, shredded

2 cups frozen peas

Cut sirloin steak into 1/4-inch thick slices. Cut each slice into 1-inch pieces. Combine with 1 tablespoon oil. Allow pie crust to stand at room temperature, as package directs.

Heat large non-stick frying pan until hot. Stir-fry beef mixture (half at a time) 1 to 2 minutes. Remove meat mixture; combine with dill and salt and reserve.

Heat remaining oil in same frying pan; add onion and cook until softened, about 3-4 minutes. Add mushrooms and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Sprinkle with flour; cook 1 minute. Add milk, nutmeg and bouillon. Bring mixture to boil and cook, stirring constantly, until it thickens. Add Jarlsberg cheese; mix lightly until cheese melts. Stir in reserved beef mixture with juices and peas.

Spoon mixture into round 2-quart casserole. Fold pie crust edges under, to fit inside casserole. Bake 30 minutes, and place on top of meat mixture. Crimp edges decoratively and cut slits in several places near center (to prevent cracking). Bake casserole in preheated 450 degree (hot) oven 10 to 12 minutes, or until crust is browned. Makes six servings.

BAKED APPLES

NORWEGIAN STYLE

2 large red baking apples
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded Gjetost cheese

1/3 cup chopped pecans
1/4 cup raisins
2 tablespoons brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon ground nutmeg

Cut each apple in half crosswise; remove core. Combine Gjetost cheese, pecans, raisins, brown sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg; spoon an equal portion into and over each apple half. Arrange apples in 8-inch microwave-safe baking dish. Microwave, uncovered, on HIGH 5 to 6 minutes, rotating dish and apples 3 minutes. Cover with plastic wrap and let stand 3 minutes. Makes four servings.

Conventional Oven Method: Place apples in baking dish; get dish in pan containing 4 cup water. Tent tightly with foil. Bake 30 minutes at 350 degrees.

Wine

both to a seasoning stock after drying and trimming the meat, readying it for a grill, oven, pan or microwave.

Some chefs treat fresh salmon as a sacred thing, to be caressed only by lemon, butter or a top-flight bland cream, but here again versatility can pop up. Girardet, for instance, imaginatively cooks an elaborate salmon brochette with a sauce that calls for 2 cups of white wine. He is similarly brave in a curried salad in which white wine plays a significant role.

Although wine is undeniably a flavoring bargain, its use requires a certain amount of expertise, plus imagination, to do it justice.

Traditionally, the food and wine pairings are: Light white wines with fish, ham, chicken, snails, crayfish and sausages. Light red wine with soups and mild cheese. Heavy reds with peasant soups, vegetables, meat, game and highly-flavored cheese and some fowl dishes. It is vermouth with pork.

The list can serve as a rough starting point for someone learning to cook with wines. Let the type of food, within limits, pick its escort. As a rule, choose sturdy wine flavor over light in the seasoning business: a Muscadet over a chardonnay; for instance, in a white sauce, fish or poultry preparation; a pinot noir or a Bordeaux over a blush or a Beaujolais when preparing hearty hot meats. There is no reason to use expensive fine Burgundy, eminent California reserves or classified Bordeaux wines of stature in cooking. Moderately priced selections will do as well or better. The great vintages should be drunk alone or with minimal food efforts. But, paradox though it is, flat French champagne is a wonderful sauce ingredient in almost everything.

The following recipe is from The American Heart Association Cookbook, fourth edition (Ballantine Books, 1984).

CHICKEN IN ROSE SAUCE

4 chicken breasts, split and skinned

4 tablespoons margarine
2 tablespoons of flour
1/4 cup chicken broth
1/2 cup rose wine

1 cup thinly sliced green onion
1/2 cup sliced mushrooms

1 (10-ounce) package of frozen artichoke hearts, cooked according to directions, or 1 (14-ounce) can artichoke hearts packed in water.

Melt 2 tablespoons margarine in baking pan, add chicken breasts and bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Melt remaining margarine in a saucepan, add flour and cook briefly, stirring. Add chicken broth and wine, stirring constantly until sauce is thick and smooth. Remove chicken breasts from oven, turn, and cover each with sliced mushrooms, green onions and artichokes. Pour sauce over all and bake for 30 minutes, until tender.

The following recipe is from "Madelaine Cooks," by Madeline Kamman (William Morrow, 1986, $17.95).

RED WINE BEARNAISE SAUCE

3 shallots, chopped extremely fine
2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1/2 cup dry red wine

2 tablespoons each chopped chervil and tarragon stems, or 2 teaspoons each dried

1/2 teaspoon coarsely cracked white peppercorns

Small bouquet garni of 5 parsley stems, 1/2 bay leaf and a sprig of thyme

1/4 teaspoon salt
2 egg yolks

1/2 pound melted, unsalted butter, barely warm

Luke-warm salted water

1 1/2 tablespoons each chopped chervil and tarragon leaves, or 1 1/2 tablespoons of chopped fresh parsley

In a heavy pot, mix shallots, red wine vinegar, red wine, 2 tablespoons chervil and tarragon stems, pepper, bouquet garni and salt. Bring to a boil, turn down heat and cook until the mixture is reduced to 2 tablespoons of solids and liquids together. Turn the heat off. Have a small wire whisk ready. Add the egg yolks one at a time. The first-in the pot will cook the egg yolks. As soon as the first yolk hits the bottom of the pan start whisking very quickly with a small whisk. Whisk until the egg yolk has turned pale yellow and very thick. Then whisk in the melted butter 1 tablespoon by 1 tablespoon until all the butter has been absorbed. If the sauce seems too thick, add an occasional half teaspoon of salted water. Place the 1 1/2 tablespoons chopped chervil and tarragon leaves in a clean small pot and strain the sauce over the herbs. Stir well. Keep the sauce warm on the side of the stove before serving. Makes about 1 cup.

Bay leaves can help develop savoriness in soup, stew

By American Spice Trade Association

HEARTY BEAN AND SAUSAGE SOUP

For centuries, whole bay leaves have been used by European cooks to help develop the savoriness in long-simmered soups and stews. The heat extracts the bay leaf flavor.

It's possible, however, to obtain that depth of flavor in a quickly-cooked soup by doubling the amount of bay leaves used; in seasoning a quick-soup serving four people, use two bay leaves instead of one.

Add bay leaves to Bean and Sausage Soup for flavor sausage), cut in 1/4-inch thick slices

2 bay leaves
1/2 teaspoon caraway seeds
In a measuring cup combine water, onion and garlic; set aside for 10 minutes to heat. Add onion and garlic mixture; cook and stir until tender, about 4 minutes. Add tomatoes, beans, chicken broth, sausage, bay leaves and caraway seeds; simmer, uncovered, to blend flavors, 15 to 20 minutes. Remove bay leaves.

YIELD: 4 portions
CHICKEN POTPIE SOUP

2 cups chicken broth
2 cups milk
1/2 teaspoon thyme leaves, crushed

2 bay leaves
4 tablespoons butter or margarine, divided
8 ounces boned and skinned chicken breasts (cutlets), cut in 1/2-inch pieces

1 and 1/3 cups (4-ounces) sliced fresh mushrooms
1 package (10-ounces) frozen mixed vegetables, defrosted

1/3 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper
1/4 cup herb-flavored croutons

In a medium saucepan heat chicken broth, milk, thyme and bay leaves until simmering. Remove from heat; let stand for 10 minutes. Meanwhile, in a Dutch oven or deep skillet heat 2 tablespoons butter until melted. Add chicken; cook and stir until chicken is still pink in the center, about 2 minutes. Add mushrooms; cook and stir until tender, 2 to 3 minutes. Add remaining 2 tablespoons butter; heat until melted. Add mix vegetables; sprinkle with flour stir until vegetables are coated. Add reserved milk mixture, salt and black pepper; cook and stir until mixture boils for 1 minute. Remove bay leaves; serve with herb-flavored croutons.

Storage merchandise available to help clean up the clutter

By MINNIE BERNARDINO
The Los Angeles Times

One of the fastest and easiest things to do in the kitchen, or the whole house for that matter, is to clutter. Reversing the scene — turning the place into a neat, well-organized space — is, of course, one of the most difficult tasks to do.

Coming on the market is a huge array of storage and organization merchandise for the home. And the category is growing. Organization sections are being added to national housewares shows. Shops selling goods geared solely to reducing chaos at home and in the office have opened and continue to squeeze in more new items, from utilitarian rack carts to fashion-colored trash bins. An increasing number of mail-order catalogs also are dedicating space to storage items. For instance, Williams-Sonoma has introduced "Hold Everything," while Chef's Catalogue "Space-Smart" not only lists gourmet products but includes items for kids' rooms, travel, laundry, work rooms and offices. The catalog's goal, said buyer Arlene Harris, is for the consumer to become a "VOP" (very organized person).

In the kitchen, some goods are meant to be displayed, others to be hidden away. Consider cook pots, for example: If you elect to hang them up on a wall or in ceiling racks, you are not just saving on cabinet space and on time, but you are also giving the cooking area a decorative treatment.

Le Creuset offers Pot Racks in fashionable striking colors of red and cobalt blue as well as the pristine white and high-tech black hues. Made of heavy-gauge steel, the racks are sturdy enough to hold the heavy Le Creuset pots and skillets or any other collection. They come in two types — the Deluxe Rectangular Ceiling Rack ($125) and the popular Half Round Rack ($45) for wall mounting. The pot racks are easy to assemble without special tools and come with several hooks.

Another heavy-duty line of hanging racks is made by Calphalon. The Calphalon Cache Racks (from $35 for the simple bar wall rack to $180 for the large oval rack) are crafted of aluminum, hard-coated to a handsome gray finish with the Calphalon process. A wonderful feature of this product is the innovative design of the hooks, which allows complete movement on the rack but prevents it from being displaced from the rack when a pan is removed. The Cache Rack line consists of the oval ceiling rack with a center bar (in two sizes each with eight hooks), the round ceiling rack with five single hooks; the half-round wall rack with four single hooks; the rectangular ceiling rack (in three sizes with five to eight hooks); and the bar type wall rack with three single hooks. Spacesaver hooks that fit sideways are available separately in sets of four.

The Canrack ($19.95) from Atlantic Representations, Inc. in Los Angeles is designed to ease the congestion in the pantry by compactly storing canned goods and dispensing them efficiently. Designed by company president Leo Dardashti, a former civil engineer who switched his whole interest into housewares, the Canrack is a collapsible three-tiered shelving that can hold up to 60 small cans.

With Canrack, not only can you store more cans in a limited space, but you can eliminate the aggravation of stooping and emptying an entire cabinet to find the can you want," he said. "The removable shelves and dividers allow easy height and width adjustment of the rack so that you can store various sizes of cans from the mini tuna fish cans to large juice cans." It works on the principle of gravity, so that when you pull out a can in front, the next one moves down. Made of heavy-gauge vinyl-coated steel wire that won't rust or chip, the Canrack is packaged in a gift box.

ClickClack storage containers have been around kitchens for a few years and continue to be popular for their airtight quality feature. Imported from New Zealand by Schiller & Asmus, these attractive food storage canisters and boxes are made of a tough, odor-free, non-toxic plastic. Color-coordinated with Le Creuset products, the lids of these see-through containers come in white, cobalt blue, slate blue and red.

The storage systems include shallow and deep rectangular boxes ranging from 0.25 quart to 5.4 quarts, in three and four piece sets ($19.99 to $29). Dishwasher safe, they are equipped with stainless-steel snap locks. They are great for storing fruit, vegetables, sandwiches, meats and leftover foods in the refrigerator or freezer and are ideal for picnics.

What is new with ClickClack? The boxes are now microwaveable, with plastic snap-top locks to prevent electrical arcing in the microwave.

Increase soil temperature to make early planting possible

The cold weather and extra snow this winter will probably cause spring to come later than in the two previous years. If the soil stays cold and wet longer, it will delay vegetable garden planting. However,

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

Home/Garden

there are some ways to increase soil temperature and make early planting possible.

Soil temperature often limits how soon vegetables can be planted in the Intermountain area. Most hardy vegetables need soil temperatures of about 45 degrees for seed germination. Most tender vegetables need soil temperatures of 60 to 65 degrees for proper sprouting and growth.

Hardy vegetables include peas and the root, leaf and flower bud vegetables. Tender types include most of the fruiting vegetables except peas.

During the last several years I have been using gardening practices that increase the soil temperature and trap warm air around vegetable plants. These aids make earlier planting possible. They increase the growth rate during the early part of the season. Some of them provide frost protection also.

Black plastic mulch has become a regular practice for many gardeners in the Intermountain area. Black plastic sheets laid flat on the ground after the soil is prepared absorb the sun's heat and transfer it to the soil underneath. Strips of plastic are placed over furrows or rows before planting. Then holes are made at proper intervals and seeds or plants are planted in the holes. The plastic raises soil temperature by 5 to 10 degrees, so seeds sprout more quickly and plants grow faster. The plastic also shades out weeds that might grow in between plants.

Various kinds of row covers act like miniature greenhouses to trap heat for the plants growing underneath. They raise not only the soil temperature, but the air temperature around the plants, sometimes as much as 20 degrees.

Clear plastic row covers are usually supported by wire hoops. They usually must have slits for ventilation to avoid overheating.

The newest development is spun or woven plastic fiber row covers that look similar to cheesecloth. Several brands are available that allow 75 to 99 percent of the light to pass through. They are usually bunched loosely over a row without any support. They are often referred to as floating row covers, since they float right on top of the plants. Floating row covers are porous, so rain and sprinkler irrigation water pass through.

Black plastic is often used with row covers for large vegetables.

Wall O' Water is a series of interconnected plastic tubes which, when filled with water, provide cold protection for frost-sensitive plants such as tomatoes, peppers and melons. It creates an insulated, teepee-like enclosure around individual plants. The water absorbs heat during the day and gives it off at night. Wall O' Water makes earliest planting possible because of its frost protection capability.

I have prepared a vegetable gardening guide that explains how to use black plastic and row covers for early garden planting. For a copy, send $1 and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Allen Wilson,

P.O. Box 343, Rexburg, Idaho 83440.

House's worth depends on who does appraisal

By ANDY LANG
The Associated Press

How much is your house worth? It depends on who is making the appraisal and why it is being done. If you, as the homeowner, are judging its value for the purpose of selling the house yourself, you are likely to set too high a figure at the start of the marketing.

If an appraiser is estimating the cost for a lending institution to determine the amount of a maximum mortgage loan, he may produce a figure a bit on the lower side.

If a real estate broker is setting a selling price, the figure is likely to be fairly realistic, allowing for the fact that he will add a certain amount for the purpose of negotiation.

No matter who is making the appraisal or what the reason is, the most important factor in making the decision is the real estate market at that time.

Determining the condition of the market is neither an opinion nor a guess. It is found simply by finding out the sales prices of similar houses in the neighborhood that were sold recently.

Town records do not show the exact prices of the houses that were sold, but there are certain indicators, such as tax stamps, that enable a knowledgeable person to determine what the sales prices were.

There are other factors that go into the appraisal, such as the age of your house (compared to the others), the condition it is in (again, compared to the others) and what extra qualities it has.

But the starting point must be what prices the other houses have been generating. After that, the appraiser weighs the factors that make your house better or worse than the others and comes up with a figure.

Sure the location of a house is vital to its value, but presumably others in the neighborhood have similar site advantages or disadvantages.

SUN VALLEY — A new chapter of the Idaho Native Plant Society is forming in central Idaho.

The INPS is a statewide non-profit organization of amateur and professional botanists with a common interest in Idaho's native plants.

The first gathering for the new chapter will be Sunday and will include a wildflower slide show to be followed by a question-and-answer period. Several of the area's local enthusiasts will be on hand to answer questions: Don Cohen (formerly of Mt. Springs Nursery) — trees and shrubs; Bill McDorman (High Altitude Gardens) — wildflowers; Kelley Weston (Native Landscapes) — native landscaping; Florence Mulder — wildflower gardens.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in the Limelight Room at the Sun Valley Lodge. Admission is a $2 donation at the door. For more information call Bill McDorman at 726-3221.

Buyers thank car dealer for friendly service

I'm writing in regards to a new 1989 Toyota 4x4 that we just purchased through Wills Motors here in Twin Falls.

I've had terrible experiences in the past with pushy salesmen and fast-talking credit managers. Not in this case at all. They let us take the test drive by ourselves. We had time to talk between ourselves about this big decision. We went to other car sales but returned to Wills because of the way we were treated — no pressure sales! The contract was not pages and pages of mind-boggling detail that only a lawyer could understand.

In all, it was a pleasant buying experience, and we just wanted Twin Falls to know, there are honest car salesmen and easy-going companies. This we did not know until our experience with Wills. Thank you, Bob Wahles, we love our new 4x4, and everyone else that helped us there.

Humane Society offers thanks for contest help

People for Pets Humane Society would like to thank Anita Parrot and Skateland for their help and participation in our Operation S.P.O.T. Poster Contest.

We would also like to thank both the Twin Falls and Kimberly School Districts and the school children for their participation in the contest. The posters drawn by the children depicting the homeless dog (Spot) at the Animal Shelter were fantastic. The drawings demonstrated the tremendous compassion that children feel for pets in need of a good home.

Skateland was very generous in donating a portion of the 'Let's Roll for SPOT' funds to our new adoption program at the Twin Falls Animal Shelter (Hound Pound).

SUN VALLEY — A new chapter of the Idaho Native Plant Society is forming in central Idaho.

The INPS is a statewide non-profit organization of amateur and professional botanists with a common interest in Idaho's native plants.

The first gathering for the new chapter will be Sunday and will include a wildflower slide show to be followed by a question-and-answer period. Several of the area's local enthusiasts will be on hand to answer questions: Don Cohen (formerly of Mt. Springs Nursery) — trees and shrubs; Bill McDorman (High Altitude Gardens) — wildflowers; Kelley Weston (Native Landscapes) — native landscaping; Florence Mulder — wildflower gardens.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in the Limelight Room at the Sun Valley Lodge. Admission is a $2 donation at the door. For more information call Bill McDorman at 726-3221.

California teacher gives language lesson to Abby today

DEAR ABBY: A little while ago, I took a break from my job of reading and grading essays written by high school juniors. Their grammar, spelling and punctuation defy description—but with the mail you get, you probably have a pretty fair idea.

Anyway, I relaxed for a few minutes, scanning headlines and reading Dear Abby, and there it was: Confidential to Eunice! All men do not cheat on their wives. But it's a fairly safe bet that the man who says they do, cheats on his.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

Abby, I believe what you meant to say was that not all men cheat on their wives, since what you did say stated that there weren't any men who cheat on their wives, and, unfortunately, we all know better than that.

Forgive me for being so picky, but I used a lot of red ink today.

—ADELE CHRISTENSEN, CALIFORNIA SCHOOL TEACHER
DEAR MS. CHRISTENSEN: I forgive you for being so picky, and regret that my editor lacked the pickiness to pick up on this error.

Thus far only you and another sharp-eyed San Francisco Chronicle reader have written to correct me. He wrote:

DEAR ABBY: There you go again. Perhaps you meant to say, Not all men cheat on their wives. What you have said is like saying, All women writing advice columns do not say it that way. (Some do, including your sister.)

—JERRY THOMPSON
CUTTING SANS CHIEFS

DEAR ABBY: I want to thank you for your quiz about homosexuality in which you debunked many myths. I am sure you educated many people, but, Abby, you write about gays as though they were another species, as if the reader had never known any, as if there were none among your readers. The fact is, we are your readers. We are also your sons and daughters, your grandchildren, your brothers, sisters, cousins, aunts, uncles, mothers and fathers.

We are your neighbors, your teachers, your supermarket checker, your stockbroker, your plumber, your mail carrier, your nurse, your doctor or your lawyer. In short, we are people you know, and often people you love. Because people often confuse of femininity in men and masculinity in women with homosexuality, most are not aware how many gays they come in contact with every day.

If they knew, and stopped thinking about us as strangers or strange creatures, it would go a long way toward helping solve many of the problems gay men and women face in our society.
