Fire forces evacuation of area near Filer

By CRAIG LINCOLN and KIRK MITCHELL Times-News writers

FILER — An explosive fire at a manufacturing company's storage yard north of Filer forced evacuation of an one-square-mile area

Friday night, left a volunteer firefighter hospitalized and may have contaminated nearby well water.

"We left with only our coats," said Michelle McCulloch, 117 Ramsey Drive. "We got the heck out of there very fast."

The fire broke out in the shortly before 8 p.m. in a storage yard owned by Acme Manufacturing Co. Inc. Barrels containing a toxic chemical called methyl ethyl ketone were stored there, said Robert Gauthier, a Twin Falls County deputy sheriff.

Methyl ethyl ketone is a flammable liquid resembling acetone, used chiefly as a solvent. Gauthier said he didn't know whether the drums were empty or full.

About two hours after the fire broke out, sheriff's dispatcher Aaron Brown said he was asking local radio stations to warn people in Buhl, Twin Falls, Hagerman and Filer. "If they can smell a sensation like burning rubber they should leave for approximately two hours."

Brown said officials contacted civil defense authorities and the local Environmental Protection Agency office.

Firefighters built dikes around the fire to contain water used to quench the fire. Authorities, concerned the water would contaminate groundwater, advised people not to use wells.

"The people who have wells in the Stevens Road and County Road area should not consume or use water from their wells until the EPA checks the well water for contamination," sheriff's Sgt. Ike Maxson said.

Earl LeMaster, 30, a Filer volunteer firefighter, collapsed near the fire about 9:30 p.m. LeMaster was reported to be alert and in stable condition at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Deputy Dan Mort also went to the hospital, complaining of nausea and skin irritation. But he was reported in good condition and returned to the scene.

Some nearby residents who returned to their homes before authorities gave their approval, also complained of nausea and headaches, Maxson said. By 11 p.m., he said the small had subsided and authorities hoped to know by midnight whether residents could return home.

About a dozen firefighters from Buhl and Filer, along with sheriff's deputies and Filer police moved quickly to minimize damage from the chemical. By 8:20 p.m., the main body of the fire had subsided.

"On arrival, we had a very large cloud of black smoke approximately 30 feet off the ground and heading west," Gauthier said. The smoke eventually curled east, at times dropping close to the ground.

Sheriff's deputies and other emergency personnel blockaded the area surrounding the yard, and Filer Police Chief Don Barkley ordered an evacuation of everybody within one-half mile of the area.

At 9:30 p.m., Gauthier radioed into the area to tell everybody in the cordoned-off area to discard their clothing before leaving. Gauthier said he was unsure whether toxic chemicals other than methyl ethyl ketone were at the site. By 9:30 p.m., Acme employees were going through company records to determine what chemicals were in the yard. "At this time, we are unsure of the exact chemicals in the dump," Gauthier said. McCulloch said she and six family member watching the blaze from her lawn felt a wave of heat from the blasts.

"It was weird," McCulloch said. "There was great big black holes burning around it."

"It was blowing barrels from over there to there," said neighbor Arletta Johnson, 115 Ramsey Drive, as she stood in her backyard and pointed at opposite sides of the field surrounding the storage yard.

"The fire got so hot it turned green and blue inside," she said.

Johnson's husband, Mack, said the fire exploded at least three times, "about four times as high as our house."

At about 8:20 p.m. a police car with a bull-horn drove through the subdivision. An officer ordered, "Get in the car and leave the area. Go east on county roads, somewhere east of town for the next two hours. There may be contaminants in the area."

McCulloch said a police officer came to her door later to urge the family to leave, and when they tried to ask him questions he said, "I don't know, just get out."

McCulloch said the officer did not tell her family how far away she needed to go or when they could safely return.

"I just wish they had a place for us to go," she said. "We don't know where to go or what to do."

McCulloch said her family went to a friend's house in another part of town.

"I'm scared to death for our dog because we couldn't find it," she said.

FDA lifts ban on importing Chile grapes

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration lifted its ban on Chilean grapes though not on other Chilean fruit Friday.

The agency will begin to inspect 5 percent of all Chilean grapes coming into the country to assure the "maximum feasible safety" against cyanide poisoning, FDA Commissioner Frank Young announced Friday.

But late Friday night fruit industry leaders refused to say whether they would cooperate with the FDA plan. Diana Sun, a spokeswoman for the Chilean Exporters Association, acknowledged the industry had problems with what the commissioner said at the briefing.

An FDA official said the industry agreed in private to cooperate in general terms, but that, there was some confusion among industry representatives about how much of the burden of the inspection each of them should carry.

"We are pleased that the FDA came down where it did," said John McClung, a spokesman for the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association. "We believe these are the right steps to take." But he added that the industry expected the inspections to be carried out by the government, not by industry.

Meetings were expected to resume today to resolve the differences.

At the same time Young announced the plan Friday, he said that another threat to poison Chilean fruit was received by the U.S. embassy in Santiago, apparently from the same caller who phoned in previous threats which launched the fruit crisis.

Cheney takes over Pentagon

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted without dissent Friday to confirm Rep. Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., as secretary of defense.

The action came in what amounted to an anticlimactic finale to the bitter fight over President Bush's earlier choice of former Senator John G. Tower to head the Pentagon.

Approving Cheney just eight days after it rejected Tower, the Senate echoed with bipartisan praise for the 48-year-old Wyoming congressman and House minority whip. But there were also a few echoes of the rancorous fight over Tower and his two-month nomination struggle.

The confirmation of Cheney put the Pentagon under the direction of a staunch conservative with pragmatic political skills who has championed causes ranging from military aid to the Nicaraguan contras to tie-detector tests for Pentagon employees and the "Star Wars" anti-missile defense program.

Cheney, who was nominated for the post the day after Tower was rejected, was approved by a vote 92 to 0 and then sworn in at an informal ceremony in his congressional office. He resigned his House seat just before being sworn into his new job.

Tower was rejected for a number of reasons, including what many senators described as an appearance of conflict of interest in work he did as a defense consultant.

Library board OKs call for expansion

By KIRK MITCHELL Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An ad hoc panel and the city's library board have called on the City Council to ask voters for a $1.7 million library expansion.

The expansion would double the library's size.

"I feel good about this one," said panel member David Mead. The panel's efforts should be well received by the City Council and the public, he said.

The dedication of this group has been phenomenal," said Chairman Randy Hansen.

With 13 of 30 Library Expansion Advisory Panel members absent, the panel on Friday unanimously adopted a 60-page report that details construction costs and the expansion's impact on operating expenses.

The Library Board of Trustees held a special meeting after the panel's vote, approving the document and recommending that it be forwarded to the City Council for action. Panel members will meet with the council at 4 p.m. Tuesday in city chambers.

To finance the project, the report recommends that the city place a bond issue on next fall's general election ballot.

At an earlier meeting, panel members said a draft report did not give adequate detail about how the expansion would affect the library's staff size or operating budget.

The final report states that the number of people using the library would have more to do with staffing needs than the building's size would.

However, the existing and unanswered need for one and one-half personnel positions is of concern to the panel and would seem to be aggravated by increased patron use of a renovated and enlarged building, the report says.

Library Director Arlan Call said the library is short-staffed 17 positions.

The panel finds it imperative that the Board and Council achieve a resolution of this issue prior to the conclusion of fiscal year 1989, the report says.

The extra positions together would cost between $11,000 and $27,000.

Using more volunteers could reduce the need for more staff members, the report says.

House battles over IEA role, approves teacher negotiators

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Idaho House spent most of Friday battling over the Idaho Education Association before voting 45-39 for legislation allowing teacher organizations to use professional negotiators to work out contracts.

Idaho law allows school boards to hire negotiators, but not teacher groups. Although the debate was on a specific bill, many legislators from rural areas used the occasion to complain about the power wielded by the teacher organization many called a union.

But sponsor Rep. Michael Simpson, R-Blackfoot, said it was not an

IEA bill. "This is not an anti-or pro-education issue," said Simpson, noting that the teacher organization has not supported him in past elections. "I don't believe this is going to cause us to give up control of the schools to the teacher unions," Simpson said.

When many legislators complained about state laws allowing teachers to negotiate, Simpson said, "There is no legislation before us to do away with the negotiations act."

Before recessing for lunch, the House debated for more than an hour whether it would "level the playing field" or send school costs soaring to the benefit of teachers.

"The IEA has too much power already," said R.L. "Dick" Davis, R-Rexburg. He said it appears that all teachers want is more money for less work.

Several legislators said during debate that what they'd really like to see is a bill saying that, if one side hired professional negotiators, the other could also.

More efficient cars, heating systems will help beat warming

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States must take major steps to cut energy consumption — including more efficient automobiles and home heating systems — if expected global warming problems are to be eased, the Environmental Protection Agency said Friday.

In a report to a Senate environmental subcommittee, the EPA outlined actions that are needed by the end of this century if the movement toward a dangerously warmer earth is to be slowed.

While the report said the United States should take the lead in meeting the global warming or greenhouse problem head-on, EPA Administrator William K. Reilly emphasized the problem is international in scope.

"The response to this problem cannot be a unilateral one," Reilly told the Senate subcommittee on environmental protection, adding that if there is not international cooperation U.S. actions could be canceled out by other countries.

But Reilly said the United States "is going to have to lead by example" and that President Bush has made clear he intends to take a leadership role.

The recommendations outlined in the EPA report will be used by the administration and Congress in assessing what kinds of regulatory action or legislation might be needed on global warming.

The EPA report, concluding two years of study, acknowledged that there remains considerable uncertainty about the magnitude of global warming. But it said there is a "growing consensus" in the scientific community that if nothing is done to reduce the discharge of pollutants into the atmosphere, the earth can be expected to become 4 to 11 degrees Fahrenheit warmer over the next century.

There's no doubt that there is a consensus that the greenhouse phenomenon is very real," said Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., the subcommittee chairman.

Sharp rise in wholesale prices points to inflation comeback

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Wholesale prices surged 1.0 percent in February, marking the January increase as the worst back-to-back news on inflation in nearly eight years, the government said Friday.

The identical increases in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index mean that prices one stop short of the retail level have risen at an annual rate of 12.6 percent so far this year.

Not since March and April of 1981 have prices risen so sharply for two months in a row. Wholesale prices rose 4.0 percent last year.

Stock bond prices tumbled after Friday's report. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks plunged 60 points in the first half hour of trading and never recovered, closing at 2,292. The evidence of resurgent inflation renewed traders' fears that the Federal Reserve Board will push interest rates higher.

That would increase the government's cost of financing the $2.7 trillion national debt, which would be bad news for President Bush, who is trying to trim the budget deficit without raising taxes.

Bush, speaking to reporters as he returned to Washington from Colorado, said his administration would "always be vigilant against inflation (and) never relax our concern."

He said the best way to beat inflation would be an agreement with Congress to reduce the deficit and called Friday's report, "Another clarion call to do something." Negotiators from Capitol Hill and the White House will exchange proposals next week on bringing down the deficit.

Bush's remarks amount to a shift in his rhetoric. Previously, the president has said he is not overly concerned with inflation and interpreted economic reports less negatively than the Federal Reserve.

Many economists had dismissed the January inflation news, including a 0.6 percent rise in the Consumer Price Index, the largest in two years, as at least a partial aberration and had predicted only a moderate 0.4 percent climb in wholesale prices in February.

With the latest report, "It's difficult to put a happy face on it," said Undersecretary of Commerce Robert Ortner. "There's no other interpretation that can be put on it other than it shows a pickup in inflation."

Prices in both January and February were pushed up by soaring energy and food prices, but the cost of other items, which are generally more stable, increased at a worrisome rate in February as well.

Wholesale food prices rose 1.2 percent last month, the steepest increase in 13 months. They had risen 1.1 percent in January.

Meat and most other food items rose, while eggs dropped 15 percent after rising 20.1 percent in January. Food prices were led by 35.3 percent increase in vegetables, including a huge 158 percent rise in tomato prices.

Strikebound Eastern Airlines has notified aircraft brokers it wants to sell part of its 250-plane fleet as its owners and Machinists union fight that talks are under way to sell the carrier, now reorganizing in bankruptcy court.

"We're exploring the market," Eastern spokesman Robin Matell told The Associated Press on Friday. He added that he did not know the total number of aircraft for sale, but it was "nowhere near most of the fleet."

The notice to aircraft brokers worldwide was issued either Thursday or Friday and included listings of DC-9s, Boeing 727s and 737s, Matell said. He said that the airline made similar notices "hundreds" of times in the past.

"Given the current situation it obviously draws much greater attention and people wonder just what it means," Matell said, noting that the company had been in an interview since the Machinists struck the carrier nearly two weeks ago that assets would be sold to finance Eastern's rebuilding.

"There is nothing unusual" about the company's latest attempt to sell aircraft, Matell insisted.

Eastern's pilots, who joined with flight attendants in sympathy strikes against the carrier, have maintained that Eastern's parent company is stripping the company's assets to prop up non-union sister Continental Airlines.

In another development Friday, a Pan Am Corp. union official said he would meet with the leader of Eastern's striking Machinists in Miami to discuss a possible joint employer buyout of the two airlines.

William F. Genoece, director of the Teamsters union's Airline Division, told The Associated Press that he and Machinists District 100 President Charles Bryan plan to discuss a buyout plan Saturday to combine the airlines.

Pan Am, like Eastern, has been racked by financial losses and labor tensions. Pan Am Chairman Tom Phelts recently said the carrier probably would need to merge with another airline to ensure its survival.

Texas Air Corp. Chairman Frank Lorenzo has indicated a renewed interest in selling all or parts of Eastern since the airline filed for bankruptcy protection March 9. Eastern is operating only about 10 percent of its pre-strike schedule of 1,040 daily flights.

"It's possible that the most sensible way for Eastern Airlines to proceed would be for some different types of ownership in some way," Lorenzo said in an interview recorded for ABC-TV's "20/20" show Friday night.

But Lorenzo promised that his goal hasn't been to sell off Eastern.

Bryan, the union chief who for years has advocated employee control as a leading solution for Eastern's problems, confirmed he would meet with Genoece but declined to say whether they would explore an Eastern-Pan Am combination.

"We're going to be discussing a whole range of subjects," the Machinists leader said, adding, "I never make any statements about any possible sales or transactions."

pat down and had a beer with him, believe it or not," Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., said he, too, had a Sunday or two with him.

But the wounds of the Tower ordeal were still raw and were quickly reopened when Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., judged the Senate of a "rush to judgment" on Cheney, contending that the allegations against Tower were spawned in large part because of the protracted deliberations over his nomination.

Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who led the drive for Cheney as well as the fight against Tower, vehemently denied Specter's charge and later commended to a reporter, "I gather what he wanted us to do is wait for the rumor and innuendo to come in."

Senate Minority Leader Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., also weighed in with commendation for Cheney faced with sharp criticism for release of a Federal Bureau of Investigation summary

Today's weather Mostly cloudy with chance of snow or rain

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Coeur d'Alene. Today, mostly cloudy. Chance of rain, or snow changing to rain. South winds 10 to 20 mph. High 45 to 60. Tonight and Sunday, rain showers likely, changing to mixed rain and snow showers on Sunday afternoon. Windy. Lows in the mid 30s. Cooler and windy Sunday. Highs in the mid 40s.

Camas Prairie and Wood River Valley: Today and tonight, snow likely, except mixed with rain below 5,600 feet this afternoon and tonight. New snowfall of 1 to 3 inches expected, up to 6 inches over the higher mountains. South winds 5 to 16 mph. High 35 to 40. Lows around 30. Sunday, snow showers. Highs in the 30s.

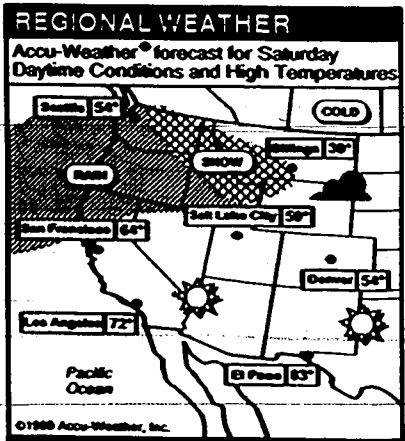

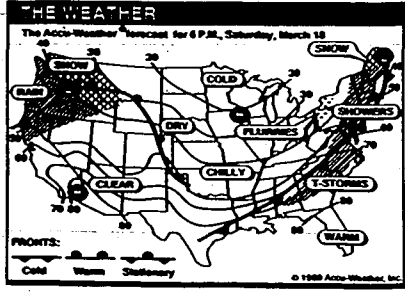

Northern Utah and Nevada: Utah — Increasing clouds today. Few showers late in the day. Milder. Scattered rain or snow tonight and Sunday most widespread western portion. Cooler. High today mid 40s to mid 50s. Low tonight mostly 30s. High Sunday 40s to low 50s.

Nevada — Increasing clouds today with rain spots, snow developing west by early this afternoon and into east and central this evening. Snow level 6,000 to 6,000 feet. Scattered showers north Sunday with partial clearing from the west by afternoon. Sunday night. High today in the mid 50s to mid 60s. Lows tonight in the 30s to high 30s. High Sunday in the upper 40s to upper 50s.

Summary: The National Weather Service says scattered snow showers were over Idaho on Friday in the wake of the cold front that moved east and out of the state earlier in the day.

Repetitive amounts were heavy in some places with frontal passage but amounts from the scattered showers have been mostly light. Skies were partly sunny over southeast Idaho, but the rest of the state was already clouding up in advance of the next approaching weather system.

Snow advisories were issued for Saturday and Saturday night for the west and southwest mountains of Idaho. The storm track from the Pacific Ocean will remain over Idaho for the next several days. Therefore, the state's weekend weather will generally be breezy, showery and cool. Significant snowfall is possible over most of Idaho's mountains during the next few days.

The pollen count in Twin Falls Friday was 41 particles per cubic meter of air.

The extended forecast for southern Idaho — Partly cloudy and warmer Monday. A chance of showers Tuesday and Wednesday. Highs mid 40s to the upper 50s. Lows mid 30s to the mid 40s.

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 57 degrees at Hagerman, Ketchum and Soda Springs reported the coldest at 15 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 95 degrees at Childress, Texas. The lowest was 24 degrees below zero at Hibbing, Minn.

Roll call vote on negotiators

HOUSE (AP) — Here is the roll call vote by which the Idaho House voted 68 Friday for legislation allowing teacher organizations to use professional negotiators to work on contracts.

Republicans for (25) — Bengson, R.Black, Bull, Brooksom, Brown, DeKard, Duncan, Gurney, Haagenson, H.Hansen, Jay, Kellogg, Loveland, Lucas, Maloney, Osborne, Ramsey, Reynolds, Roberts, Simpson, Smeek, Sorenson, Steyer, Stone, Wilde.

Democrats for (2) — Adams, P.Black, Braun, Hill, J.Hansen, Horvath, Johnson, Judd, Lawson, Lloyd, McClann, McDermott, Reid, Rossen, Stuckel, Tucker, Vandenbergh, Vickers, Vincent, White.

to put the bill up for amendment for that purpose, but lost a 78-29 vote.

Rep. Phil Childers, R-Briggs, also touched off a major squabble when he tried to link the negotiations bill with a Senate-passed measure on grievance processes for non-certified educational personnel.

Rep. Patricia McDermott, D-Pocatello, objected that Childers was improperly linking testimony on two separate bills. When House Speaker Tom Boyd told Childers to limit his debate to the negotiations bill, Childers challenged Boyd.

He lost a 67-27 vote and was ordered to debate only on the single bill.

"It will just cost extra money and time and create dissension," said Rep. Golden Linford, R-Rexburg. "It will create problems that are not there now."

"You can't defend a situation where one side can employ a negotiator and the other cannot," said Rep. Dean Haagenson, R-Coeur d'Alene. "Fair is fair."

It says although expansion would not require more money for books and materials, it would likely double maintenance costs.

Overall, annual operating expenses would increase 4.5 percent, or $17,000, to about $360,000, the report says.

During the term of the bond issue, non-resident fees could be increased to help pay for the construction, it says.

Construction would cost the owner of a $40,000 house an additional $13 a year in property taxes, based on 15-year bonds at 7 percent interest, the panel's cost analysis committee said.

Other funding sources include private donors and a $246,703 federal grant that the Idaho State Library has already earmarked for Twin Falls, the report states.

According to the report, some of the events that would lead to library expansion include:

- The City Council gives approval to proceed with project plans.
- Library consultants prepare a building program statement that outlines what the project should include.
- An architect prepares basic drawings from which a more accurate cost projection can be made.
- The City Council adopts an ordinance calling for a referendum vote.
- City residents approve the project in October's election.
- Architect prepares working drawings.
- The City sells bonds.
- The City takes bids from contractors and awards the project to one of them.
- Construction starts sometime in the spring or summer of 1989.

Buyers make run on assault rifles

By The Associated Press

Gun dealers reported runs on semiautomatic assault rifles as collectors, shooters and investors reacted to a ban on imports and a U.S. company's announcement it would stop selling them.

"Yeah, there's been a run," said Barry Cupp, manager of The Bulletop, a gun shop and target range in Marietta, Ga. "I've sold every assault rifle and everything that looks like an assault rifle."

Dealers said the run on guns has been limited to the rapid-fire assault weapons, which have been the object of protest since a gunman killed five schoolchildren in Stockton, Calif., in January.

The massacre and publicity about the use of the guns by drug dealers, have spurred many city and state governments to consider banning the guns. Several cities, particularly in California, have approved bans already.

On Wednesday, Colt Industries of Hartford, Conn., said it was suspending sales to the public of its AR-15, a civilian version of the military's standard M-16 with a price ranging from $739 to $1,359.

The company said the suspension was a voluntary reaction to the Bush administration's temporary import ban on semiautomatics, announced Tuesday.

Bennett says NRA has made him a target

WASHINGTON (AP) — National drug director William J. Bennett has been receiving third-party threats to his political future in the name of the National Rifle Association and he's ready to fight the powerful lobbying group in public if he needs it, an administration source said Friday.

"Right now, he's very angry at the NRA because he's received warnings through third parties ... to the effect that the NRA is a pretty potent organization that can put together sizeable warchests," said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity. The NRA denied any involvement.

The source said the warnings to Bennett threaten that "if he has thoughts of a political future, he can forget them if he doesn't respect the power of the NRA."

"The allegations are absolutely ridiculous," said Wayne LaPierre, executive director of NRA's Institute for Legislative Action.

Bush says his gun view has changed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said Friday he's had a "pulse change" in his views on gun control that was reflected in the administration's decision this week to ban the importation of most semiautomatic weapons.

Bush, speaking with reporters on Air Force One as he flew from Colorado, said that the national debate over assault weapons like the AK-47 had gotten "a little bit" too hot.

"We'll make our decisions in a cool way. ... We won't be swayed by the temper of the debate," he said.

Bush said that the decision to limit imports of five models of semiautomatic weapons "represents a heightened concern on my part about AK-47s" but that he is not prepared at this point to move beyond that action.

"We have to find an accommodation between the police and the sporting interests," Bush said.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said the government may ban imports of additional kinds of semiautomatic weapons.

The bureau is still reviewing the uses of all types of imported semiautomatics but has not reached a decision on whether to suspend importation of more models than the five types banned from import this week, said Jerry Rudden, a spokesman for the agency.

"The process is ongoing. Additional firearms may very well be added to the list. ... Large numbers of firearms are being looked at," he said.

National Rifle Association lobbyist Wayne LaPierre met with Bush's chief of staff, John Sununu, on Thursday. But an aide to Sununu said LaPierre did not push to block an expansion of the ban to more weapons models.

President Bush talks to reporters on Air Force One about his attitude toward gun control.

Asked if the import ban — which does not affect sale of U.S.-made weapons — was a change of position on gun control, Bush held his hand up to his wrist and said: "It's a pulse change."

He voiced support for the decision this week of a U.S. firearms manufacturer, Colt, to impose voluntary restraints on its production of semiautomatic weapons.

"I'm certainly not going to differ with that decision," he said.

Bush said he could understand the emotionally charged nature of the debate on guns. "I can understand when kids are shot down by semiautomatic weapons, I can certainly understand the public outcry."

When asked whether he was looking at further steps, Bush said: "Well, we'll let you know."

Air Force grounds H-3 helicopters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing two crashes in a week's time, the Air Force said Friday it had grounded its fleet of H-3 helicopters from all but emergency missions as a safety precaution.

"The flight restriction order, which is indefinite in length, will allow the choppers to fly search-and-rescue missions but restrict all other flying until a thorough investigation has been completed," the Air Force said.

Deputy secretary of state confirmed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Friday confirmed President Bush's selection of Lawrence Eagleburger for deputy secretary of state.

Bush's nomination of Eagleburger for the No. 2 post at the State Department was approved by voice vote shortly after the senators confirmed Dick Cheney for secretary of defense.

The choice of Eagleburger had been approved a day earlier by the Foreign Relations Committee, 19-0. That tally even included the vote of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who spent two days questioning the nominee's business relations with former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Funds raised for Landsat satellites

WASHINGTON (AP) — Money has been raised to keep the Landsat earth-sensing satellites going for at least four months, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration told Congress on Friday.

The satellites had been threatened with shutdown on March 31 because of a lack of money, but passing the hat among agencies that use information from Landsat has generated enough pledges to keep the satellites operating.

The Defense Department pledged $3 million; $1.6 million will come from satellite operating receipts; $1 million from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration; $500,000 from the Interior Department, and $300,000 from the Department of Agriculture, said

Car seats for children being recalled

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 1.5 million Fisher-Price car safety seats for children are being recalled by the manufacturer because they do not meet federal flammability standards, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said Friday.

The agency said it had received no complaints of fires or fire injuries from the seats, which are Models 9100 and 9101 manufactured from 1985 to 1989.

Lawmakers claim PAC is a foreign agent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three Democratic senators say an imported-car dealers' group that spent almost $1 million against them in recent elections is really a foreign agent, and they want the Justice Department to investigate.

Leaders of the car group deny they're working for foreigners. And one said Friday two of the senators are "hypocrites" who asked for money from them and took $8,000 when it was offered.

"I think it's nothing but sour grapes," said Tom Nemet, chairman of the Auto Dealers and Drivers Free Trade PAC, a political action committee that last year spent nearly $2.6 million on House and Senate elections.

Of that total, about 83 percent was spent to help Republican candidates, according to figures compiled by the Federal Election Commission.

Sens. Harry Reid and Richard Bryan, both of Nevada; Bob Graham of Florida, and David Boren of Oklahoma signed a letter to the Justice Department alleging that the PAC is a foreign agent working for the Japanese car manufacturers.

Boren, who has neither been opposed by nor accepted money from the group, signed the letter because his colleagues asked him to and because he is opposed to the role political action committees in general are playing in American politics, said spokesman John Deeken.

Under federal law, individuals or firms representing foreign governments, people or companies have to register with the Justice Department as foreign agents and report what activities they have carried out for their clients.

While foreign agents could still give money to political campaigns as individual American citizens, the law does not permit them to make such contributions in their role as foreign agents.

Nemet and Frank Glacken, the imported-auto dealer PAC's executive director, said in a telephone interview from their office in New York City that Reid, Bryan and Graham are trying to get even because the group spent large amounts of money against them.

Nemet and Glacken said the organization's funding comes entirely from American citizens.

The PAC also spent money independently on two House races and the beneficiaries there were Democrats.

Rep. David Skaggs of Colorado had $90,000 spent independently for him, and Rep. Richard Stallings of Idaho got $45,000 spent independently on his behalf.

The PAC spent $430,500 against Graham in his 1986 race against then-Sen. Paula Hawkins, and it gave the legal limit of $100,000 to the 1986 campaign of James D. Santini, who lost to Reid, the FEC records show.

Saudis smooth over Islamic divisions over 'Satanic Verses'

By ALY MAHMOUD
The Associated Press

Riyadh, Saudi Arabia — Prince Saud al-Faisal, the Saudi foreign minister, is credited by delegates at an Islamic ministers' conference with persuading Iran to accept a compromise over "The Satanic Verses."

His efforts appear to have been a triumph for the Saudis, who were trying to prevent a split on the issue between Sunni and Shiite Muslims at the conference, which ended Thursday.

Iranian delegates arrived in Riyadh demanding that the 46-member Organization of Islamic Conference support Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's religious edict that the novel's British author, Salman Rushdie, be killed for blaspheming Islam.

The Iranians also wanted Islamic countries to break ties with Britain and other

Analysis

West European states that support Rushdie. Tehran broke relations with Britain on March 7.

The Saudis, mindful of the image Khomeini's religious ruling on the author created in the non-Muslim world, took the view that condemning the book was sufficient.

Prince Saud conferred privately with delegates, especially Mohamed Hashkiri, the mid-level-ranking cleric from the Islamic Guidance Ministry who headed the seven-member Iranian delegation.

He cautioned that a split between the majority of Sunni Moslem states and Shiite Iran would tarnish Islam. Many member states agreed that Iran's extremist stand was already damaging enough.

The Sunnis, the Shiites' historical rivals, comprise about 80 percent of the world's 800 million Moslems. That division has been particularly sharp between the Saudis and Iranians.

One conference source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the soft-spoken Prince Saud told Hashkiri, known for his eloquent, ringing revolutionary sloganeering: "It takes a bit of self-abnegation and rationality to place the supreme interests of our religion above private and selfish interests."

An Egyptian diplomat noted: "Luckily for Prince Saud, the Iranian responded favorably. The results were astonishing."

The conference declared Rushdie, born into an Indian Moslem family, an apostate, which under Islamic law is punishable by death. The conference called on member states to ban his book and take joint action to prevent Islam being abused.

But no mention was made of Khomeini's death sentence and calls for Islamic states to break diplomatic links with the West.

It was not immediately known why the Iranians backed off. But it was clear that most Arab, African and Asian Moslem states were not prepared to support Khomeini's call that Rushdie be put to death and that events in Afghanistan to some extent eclipsed the Rushdie affair.

The Saudis broke off relations with Persian Iran last April, citing subversion and terrorism during the Persian Gulf war, in which the Saudis supported their fellow Arabs, the Iraqis.

Although both sides have sent signals they were prepared to resume relations, Khomeini's actions alarmed the Saudis.

Prince Saud was also credited with persuading the conference to give Afghanistan's vacant seat at the conference to the interim government formed by Pakistani-based Sunni Moslem guerrilla groups.

Lehran has demanded that smaller Shiite groups based in Iran should be given seven portfolios in the interim government.

No details were available on how the Saudis smoothed over Iran's objections to seating the interim government. But conference officials noted with relief that Hashkiri was among the first delegates to vote in favor.

Despite the differences between Lehran and Riyadh, Hashkiri in his remarks paid tribute to Prince Saud's "diplomatic astuteness and decorum."

The Saudis have been active in mediation efforts in the roiled waters of Arab and Islamic politics.

Saudi and Jordanian efforts brought together Hafez Assad of Syria and Saddam Hussein of Iraq at a secret November 1987 meeting in Jordan.

Over Flight 103 bombing British legislator blames U.S., airline

LONDON (AP) — Relatives of those killed by the bomb that destroyed Pan Am Flight 103 should direct their anger at the airline and the U.S. government, not Britain, a legislator of the governing party said Friday.

Pan Am confirmed it had been warned by the West German government Nov. 10 about the kind of radio-cassette player bomb involved.

Politicians of the opposition Labor Party charged Transport Secretary Paul Channon with bungling a warning dated two days before the disaster but not mailed until several days later.

John Prescott, the Labor transportation spokesman, accused the government of planting stories in several London newspapers Friday that said the bomber was identified or even arrested.

Scottish and West German authorities denied the reports of an arrest.

Investigators have said a bomb in a radio-cassette player brought the Boeing 747 down Dec. 21, killing all 259 people aboard and 11 residents of the market town of Lockerbie, Scotland.

David Wilshire of the Conservative Party, who specializes in transportation issues, said some relatives of victims have been blaming the British government, blaming Heathrow, blaming anybody except the people I think they ought to be complaining about, namely the American government and Pan Am.

West Germany had warned Pan Am, which also received a warning from the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration on Nov. 18, Wilshire said, "so what has it got to do with the British government? Are Pan Am deaf or not?"

In New York, Pan Am spokeswoman Pamela Hanlon confirmed Friday that the West German government's warning was received Nov. 10.

Responding to Wilshire's charge that the airline "forgot to tell anybody" about earlier warnings, she said: "Frankly, I don't think it's for the company to disclose that."

Ms. Hanlon said Pan Am tightened security after receiving the warning and those precautions remained in effect.

The West German warning followed the arrest Oct. 26 of 13 alleged members of a radical Palestinian group, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command. Authorities reported seizing a radio-cassette player bomb with a detonator rigged to go off at high altitude.

Shamir says Israel won't yield ground

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Friday the new peace plan he will present in Washington would not include giving up Israeli-occupied land to the Palestinians.

Shamir, speaking in an interview with the daily Haaretz, said he would not talk to the PLO and his peace proposals would not be based on a territorial compromise.

Shamir's ideas set Israel on a possible collision course with a United States administration that wants Israel to show greater flexibility to get peace talks started.

In the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, five Palestinians were shot and wounded in clashes with Israeli troops on Friday.

In another development, arsonists in Jerusalem attacked the homes of a journalist and a relative of a left-wing legislator. Police attributed the attacks to a right-wing underground group.

Shamir told Haaretz: "In everything I will present, there is no territorial element. I don't think any kind of territorial combination can help in achieving peace or quelling the Israeli-Arab conflict, he said.

Shamir said he would propose a step-by-step solution for the occupied territories when he meets with President Bush next month. He did not elaborate. In the past, Shamir has proposed limited Palestinian autonomy leading to a settlement.

Salvador mayors, election officials quit

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels frightened city mayors and election officials into quitting, but a guerrilla commander said Friday they will not attack polling places or people who vote in the presidential election.

The rebels have declared a truce before Sunday's vote, threatening to attack vehicles.

No commercial traffic moved on rural highways, and rebel sabotage kept much of El Salvador without power. At least one van was attacked with a firebomb, news reports said.

Few buses operated in San Salvador, but army trucks carried people and some pickup trucks took passengers for fares.

"You can't stop people," said a driver named Roberto, who said he was charging the normal bus fare of 20 cents. "I did not come out yesterday, but I need to work so here I am."

All three leading candidates have condemned the rebel actions and stressed their efforts to end a 9-year-old civil war that has cost more than 70,000 lives.

Campaigning ended Wednesday by law in preliminary polling, Fidel Chavez Mendez, of President Jose Napoleon Duarte's Christian Democratic Party trails coffee millionaire Alfredo Cristian of the rightist Republican Nationalist Alliance, known as Arena.

Guillermo Ungo, a former leader of the rebel political wing, is a distant third for the leftist Democratic Convergence. Four minor candidates also are running.

The mayors of Chalatenango, the northern provincial capital, and Metapan, a northwestern city, resigned under threats from the rebel Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front. More than half the country's municipalities are without mayors, and nine mayors have been assassinated.

Election officials in three precincts near the eastern city of San Miguel were reported to have resigned. The guerrillas have told election officials to quit before Sunday.

A guerrilla commander in northern Cabanas province told The Associated Press that no attacks would be made on polling places or civilians voting on election day, but right-wing squads might attack civilians disguised as guerrillas.

Rebel leaders declared the boycott after an unsuccessful offer to participate if the election was postponed.

PAVIA, Italy (AP) — A 900-year-old tower collapsed onto a square Friday, killing two people, injuring 25 and damaging an adjacent cathedral. Rescue workers pulled three people from the rubble.

None of those treated at the San Matteo hospital in the northern Italian town of Pavia were injured seriously, doctors said.

Experts said the 255-foot tower crumbled either because of natural decay in the mortar holding the bricks together or because of a sudden sinking following a dry spell that lowered the water table.

Planes raid rebels

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan planes bombed Moslem guerrilla positions outside the strategic Afghan city of Jalalabad, and the insurgents claimed Friday that government soldiers were among those killed in the attacks.

Guerrillas claim more than 100 people may have been killed in latest fighting for Afghanistan's third largest city, where the insurgents launched an offensive nearly two weeks ago.

Radio stations controlled by two guerrilla groups said the bombardment occurred north, east and south of Jalalabad.

Prince Charles forgoes polo tournament for security reasons

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — The Prince of Wales, after a much-touted plan to star in an international polo tournament in the United Arab Emirates, did not show up at all on Friday.

People who spent up to $260 for the privilege of watching Charles swing his mallet at the Dubai Polo Club were told that Charles had been advised by Britain not to play "for security reasons."

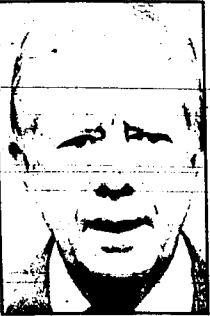

Charles left later in the day for a two-day visit to Saudi Arabia.

Iran has criticized the tour of the Gulf states that Charles and his wife, the Princess of Wales, started Sunday.

Iran broke relations with Britain on March 7, accusing it of trying to undermine Islam by supporting British novelist Salman Rushdie and his book "The Satanic Verses." Muslims consider the book blasphemous and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini issued an execution order against Rushdie.

Tehran radio accused the British government of exploiting the royal tour to "give a cold shoulder to the world," Muslims, warning that Britain would face their "wrath."

Charles and Diana made stops in Kuwait and Bahrain before arriving in the United Arab Emirates on Tuesday.

George McGovern now plays role of innkeeper

STRAITFIELD, Conn. (AP) — After spending countless nights in hotels on the campaign trail, former presidential candidate George McGovern has become an innkeeper himself.

McGovern helped celebrate the grand opening Thursday of the room-and-board Stratford Inn, the 150-room motel he bought last year for $1 million from the Irish Hotel Group Inc.

I've been in politics for 30 years and I spent a third of that in hotels and inns," the fit-looking, 66-year-old former senator from South Dakota said. The inn is McGovern's first business venture.

McGovern, who left the Senate in 1980, has been making weekly trips to the motel to direct $500,000 worth of renovations.

and he and his wife took up temporary residence at the Normandy Inn, also run by the Irish Hotel Group.

When the company decided to divest its American holdings, O'Donnell called McGovern, who had expressed interest in owning a hotel.

Executives applaud accused trader Milken

NEW YORK — (AP) — Multimillionaire bond trader Michael Milken, the subject of a federal securities fraud probe, was warmly received by chief executives of some of the nation's biggest companies at a black-tie dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel.

The audience gave Milken two standing ovations during his speech to Financial World magazine's "CEO of the Decade" dinner Thursday night.

It was Milken's first public appearance in New York since Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. agreed to fire him and withhold his 1988 pay as part of a plea deal with the government.

In his speech, Milken did not address charges that include insider trading in a Securities and Exchange Commission suit against Drexel that names him.

I have been learning about rights I no longer have. I was afraid they were trying to take away my right to speak, but the doctors of New York have told me I will be all right."

Milken, 42, has received a target letter from the government indicating that he will be indicted on criminal fraud and other charges.

Milken defended a wave of management-led buyouts, debt-leveraged corporate expansions and employed stock ownership programs that he said have "allowed employees to once again have a stake in this country."

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Holy Cross High School renamed its library the Vikki Carr Learning Resource Center after the singer, who has donated more than $500,000 to the school.

"Ms. Carr, who has played 10 benefit concerts at the school, established the Vikki Carr Foundation in 1971. The foundation has made it possible for 170 Mexican-American youths to attend college.

"I came here and saw the pride you had in this district," Ms. Carr told 520 students, alumni and parents Thursday. She first visited the school in 1968. Ms. Carr, who along with comedian Cheech Marin will cohost the Tjano Music Awards Friday.

Egyptians find mummy dating back 4,400 years

GIZA PLATEAU, Egypt (AP) — An ancient mummy of an aristocratic young woman, her Mona Lisa smile frozen in a plaster death mask, has been unearthed in a shallow pit at the foot of the Great Pyramid of Cheops.

"She's really lovely," said Aly Hassan, director of the Egyptian Antiquities Organization. Hassan dated the mummy as 4,400 years old, one of the earliest ever found in Egypt.

The mummy was not identified, but Hassan said the woman's nobility was established both by the finery buried with her and the site of her burial, a cemetery reserved for officials of the ruling court.

She was about 22 years old when she died and stood five feet tall, Hassan said. He said the body dates from the Fifth Dynasty, which lasted from 2465 B.C. to 2323 B.C. He said he dated her body from that dynasty because other bodies in the cemetery were from that period.

Her body is so dried out that it has been wrapped in protection, and bound beneath the head as a precaution.

Zahi Hawass, director general of the Giza area, said the new mummy might have been an important person reburied for safekeeping.

Two vast cemeteries lie under Giza Plateau, one with royal tombs to the east of the Cheops pyramid. To the west lies the one with the new mummy, put into use five years into the reign of Cheops 4,600 years ago. Inspectors have identified the owner of the complex in which the shaft was found as Sankh Ptah, but his position under the pharaohs and his relation with the mummy remain mysteries.

Jewelry, pottery, wooden items, a piece of glass, flint, obsidian, a clove of garlic and more than a dozen teeth lay nearby. The wood and garlic may have been placed in the grave to keep insects away.

Palm Springs braces for break

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — A bolstered police force started working 12-hour shifts Friday for the annual hard-partying of Easter week spring break that kicked off this year with St. Patrick's Day tipping.

"Oh sure, we are going to have a great time," police Lt. John Clem said sarcastically on the eve of the Easter Week influx in which the desert oasis' population swells from the year-round 40,000 to 100,000.

In addition to St. Patrick's Day, the holiday also was ushered in Friday with the California Angels exhibition baseball opener.

"We are going to watch the girls, play baseball and drink green Slurpees," said Clem.

High school and college students bent on celebrating booze, sun and one another traditionally descend on this resort city 110 miles east of Los Angeles each spring.

Police crowd control tactics of rigid enforcement and high visibility were adopted after a near-riot in 1986 when unruly toughs harassed motorists, pulled off women's clothes and hurled bottles.

The 81-member police force started 12-hour shifts Friday with help from a contingent of Riverside County Sheriff's deputies and California Highway Patrol officers.

Supermarkets had amply stocked their shelves, hotels prepared identification bracelets for guests and fast food restaurants prepared for huge crowds.

"We are encouraging the kids to come. As long as they bring their manners along with them they are welcome here," said Clem.

But he warned: "We want them to know they will be put in the slam if they misbehave. And if they are minors, mom and dad will be called to come and get them."

In addition to a tan, the most coveted Palm Springs spring break souvenirs are $13 T-shirts with the im-

U.S. films disappointing to Joseph Mankiewicz

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Joseph L. Mankiewicz, the 80-year-old filmmaker who won four Academy Awards by 1950, says he is disillusioned with the Hollywood of today.

"And I know — and I'm very sad — that American film has become, in my opinion, the major motivation for the American being as detested as he is — throughout — the world," Mankiewicz said.

"All they see in American movies is variations on obscenity, boozing and (sex)," Mankiewicz told reporters Wednesday.

On Thursday, Mankiewicz received the 1989 Akira Kurosawa Award for Lifetime Achievement from the San Francisco International Film Festival. He was the fourth recipient, and the first American.

Mankiewicz produced "The Philadelphia Story" and "Woman of the Year." He won his two Academy Awards — for best direction and best screenplay — in 1949 for "A Letter to Three Wives." In 1950, he won the same two Oscars for "All About Eve."

Among other films, he wrote and directed "Julius Caesar," "Gys and Dolls," "The Barefoot Contessa" and "The Late George Apley." His last film as director was "Slouch in 1972.

He is not only made movies. He made news. During the McCarthy era, it was Mankiewicz who provided much-needed leadership within the Directors Guild.

He also recalled that his "No Way Out," among the first films to focus on race problems in America, was banned in Chicago.

Credit cards come to movie theaters

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — A credit card is all movie-lovers need to buy tickets, popcorn and candy at a new suburban Washington theater, but owners said Friday most patrons probably aren't ready to leave their cash at home.

"I think we have a lifetime of cash transactions to overcome," said Dick Doddridge, senior vice president for corporate marketing of Kansas City-based American Multi-Cinema Inc. "People obviously are not used to whipping out a credit card when they go to the movie theatre, so I think it's going to take a while for it to catch on."

By midday Friday, the opening day for the new AMC Courthouse Plaza 8 Theaters, eight people had telephoned ahead to charge tickets and concession stand vouchers, said manager Charlie Stoessel. The theater began accepting credit card reservations Tuesday.

Wendell teacher settles lawsuit; dispute goes on

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

BOISE - The lawsuit is settled, but the dispute continues over a former Wendell teacher's claim she was fired for union activities.

Angelee Eames received $50,000 last month, when her lawsuit was settled shortly before a federal trial was scheduled to begin.

With insurance-company check in hand, the Idaho Education Association announced the amount of the settlement Friday. But the settlement doesn't settle the controversy surrounding Eames' dismissal after the 1985-87 school year, her second year at Wendell.

Eames and the IEA call it a victory for teachers. The district's attorney calls it simply an economic decision by the insurance company and downplays its significance.

"I think it's real important that we did win, because I just don't want that to happen to another teacher, ever, in this state," Eames said in an interview.

Eames charged in her lawsuit that her constitutional rights to free speech and association had been violated, mostly because of her high-profile union activities as the Wendell Education Association incoming president.

The special-education teacher received good evaluations for her first three semesters at Wendell, according to an IEA press release. After the third, the school placed her on probation, saying she must get along better with supervisors.

The district decided not to renew Eames' contract at the end of her probation. She said that school officials told her she met the letter but not the spirit of the probation.

"I would urge school boards in the Magic Valley to be more careful about dealing with teachers fairly," said Terry Gilbert, Region 4 director for the IEA. "The role of the association is to make sure they do. This is a case in point."

"One thing we've learned from this case, that when we're dealing with the IEA, we have to deal with them in a much more careful manner," responded Fritz Wonderlich, one of the Twin Falls attorneys representing the school district. "That means we cut off all contact with IEA once a matter becomes an issue."

Eames originally sued for $400,000 in damages. She also wanted the district to remove damaging material from her personnel file and to be prevented from releasing that material in the future.

That request apparently went by the wayside in the settlement because of publicity surrounding the lawsuit, Eames said.

"I think I'm probably a topic of discussion at superintendents' meetings, just based on that," Eames said.

After losing a motion for a summary judgment, which would have dismissed the case before trial, the Wendell District's New York insurance-company offered Eames the settlement. Wonderlich said the insurance company arranged the settlement, and neither the district nor his law firm was directly involved.

District officials probably would have decided otherwise, Wonderlich said. "They wanted their day in court," Wonderlich said.

At issue in the case was a disputed statement by School Board member Vernon Mason that Eames' firing was "definitely an IEA thing" and that she was considered an Legislature confronts college building needs

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

BOISE - If you ask a Democrat, chances are "slim and none" the College of Southern Idaho will get its proposed $2 million science and agriculture building wing.

But ask a Republican, and you'll be talking to a legislator confident enough about at least some of the state's colleges getting building money that he's lobbying for the building project proposed for his own district. And Magic Valley Republicans say CSI's chances of winding up in the money are reasonably good.

Whether - and which - college building programs are funded remains the most controversial issue still facing the 1989 Legislature, says House Speaker Tom Boyd.

Both parties' leadership agree that the state must meet long-term budget obligations without a tax increase before it can pay for new college buildings. Where they part ways is how much is enough.

When an early version of a higher education budget was killed because lawmakers feared the state could not afford a $20 million college building program, promises were made that any leftover money would be used for the project. A "surplus eliminator" bill would be written, specifying how any extra money would be spent.

Democrat legislators, after meeting with Gov. Cecil Andrus Friday, said they want $52 million in the bank before a surplus eliminator kicks in and money collected over that amount is channeled to colleges and universities for buildings.

The state is projecting a $37 million surplus at the end of this fiscal year June 30. But that's already been budgeted in 1990, along with about $15 million more, Democrats say.

Chances of a surplus eliminator "are slim" and none, said Senate Minority Leader Bruce Saweely.

Even if the state does go over the $52 million mark, reaching a consensus on how to spend a small surplus eliminator might not be possible. If left to the Permanent Building Fund Advisory Council to decide how to spend the money, CSI would have little chance of a new building wing, since the project is well down the council's list of priorities.

But Republicans have different ideas. They agree that the state is going to have to make up $10 million to $15 million by the 1991 budget, but they believe with a strong economy that can be done without tax increases and without having the money on hand by this June.

M-K wins Milner Dam contract

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Morrison-Knudsen Co.'s San Francisco office will engineer a long-awaited improvements at Milner Dam.

The San Francisco office of the Boise-based company won the engineering contract with a bid of about $3.5 million, said Jack Eakin, manager of the Twin Falls Canal Co. Two other companies bid on the contract, he said.

Morrison-Knudsen will develop specifications to repair the dam and build a hydroelectric plant 1 1/2 miles downstream. Its contract is for engineering only, Eakin said, and officials will gather more bids for dam and hydroelectric plant construction.

Eakin said officials hope to start repairing the dam in October and be completed by January. The hydroelectric plant's construction is slated to start in 1990 and be completed by 1992.

The project is a cooperative venture of the Twin Falls and Northside canal companies and Idaho Power Co. The companies estimate the dam's repair will cost about $3 million and the hydroelectric plant $5 million.

Idaho Power will pick up construction costs, and the canal companies will pay the money back by supplying water not needed for irrigation to the hydroelectric plant.

Milner Dam supplies water to nearly a half-million acres of Magic Valley crop land.

Shoshone P&Z regulations limit large vehicles

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE - Changes to the Shoshone planning and zoning law, including restrictions on large vehicle parking on city streets, will be in effect April 10.

The City Council has adopted regulations that have been nearly a year in preparation.

According to the new zoning laws, it will be unlawful to park trucks larger than 16,000 GVW in residential sections of Shoshone for longer than one hour. Exceptions include parking along state Highway 75 and U.S. Highway 93, which intersect in downtown Shoshone.

The regulations also provide for longer parking if the vehicle is being loaded or unloaded "with reasonable dispatch."

The new regulations will be a major change for some truck drivers and owners in town. Large vehicles parked overnight and longer in residential districts were the topic of several heated discussions in council meetings last summer.

Residents complained the vehicles were left running, creating noise and odor pollution; or that the large trucks were blocking streets, driveways and the view from homeowners' windows.

Hagerman elementary asbestos to be removed

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN - School officials in Hagerman are advertising for bids to remove 9,000 square feet of ceiling tile containing asbestos.

The tile is at the elementary school, built in 1974 when asbestos was still an acceptable building material. The removal is part of the district's two-year asbestos management plan. Asbestos at Hagerman schools, Superintendent Ken Black said, is all non-friable, meaning it is all entirely contained and presents no danger in its current condition. Friable asbestos is loose or flaky and is not allowed in Idaho schools.

State regulations do not require removal of non-friable asbestos, but the Hagerman School Board has decided to remove all asbestos from the district as funds allow.

In the meantime, it must be maintained. Insulation containing it must be protected from being torn up or broken, Black said.

In addition to the ceiling tile, Hagerman also has some asbestos in floor tile and on steam pipes.

"Eventually it will all be removed, but it doesn't have to be," Black said. "There's no danger. We just feel we would like to remove it."

The cost of replacing the ceiling tile might turn out to be prohibitive for the district to have done this year, he noted.

Crop expert recommends 'cautious optimism'

By MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writer

BURLEY - "Cautious optimism" is the watchword for Magic Valley farmers this season, a commodities market analyst said.

Farmers should be prepared for an inflationary recession, said Jim Bell, agricultural representative for Key Bank of Idaho. If one doesn't count, they will be stronger than ever. If one does, they will be ready and will fare better, he said.

Bell gave his analysis to Mini-Cassia area farmers at the first agricultural economic luncheon sponsored by Key Bank.

"Our agricultural borrowers are probably stronger now than any time since 1980," Bell said. All the same, he recommended farmers limit their exposure to risk this year by forward contracting some of their crop.

Since it was St. Patrick's Day, Bell spoke first about potatoes.

"It seems we are in a potato famine," he said.

Demand for potato products has increased dramatically. Exports of processed potatoes are climbing steadily. And potatoes are back in force on American dinner tables due to strong industry promotion.

Prices are high for potatoes and seed, but they won't remain there at the end of the year, he said.

By way of a warning, he reminded farmers that historically a 1 percent decrease in the potato production level, up or down, produces a 4 percent change in the price. In 1985, a bumper crop caused a strong downturn in price. In 1988, drought-induced shortages have buoyed the price to near

O'Gorman 'doing well' with her 2nd liver

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Tracie O'Gorman had to go back to the operating room Sunday after her body rejected a liver transplanted last week.

University of Nebraska Medical Center physicians gave the 19-year-old Twin Falls woman a second liver transplant Sunday morning and she was listed in critical but stable condition Monday, said Monica Foster, a hospital spokesperson.

"And according to the medical team, she's doing well," she said.

O'Gorman's condition started to get "kind of bad" Friday, Foster said, and O'Gorman was listed in critical over the weekend. That status apparently placed her at the top of the medical center's liver transplant list.

O'Gorman's name had been on the same list, but at a different priority level, since September. She received her first liver during an 8 1/2-hour surgery last Thursday.

"The odds of her getting that second liver were probably the same as the first time around," Foster said.

O'Gorman's illness - a disease that attacked her own liver - came to the public's attention when she

The fund has dedicated $7,500 each to O'Gorman and to Amber Thacker, a Kimberly 14-year-old also in need of a liver transplant. Thacker's name is on the same liver transplant list, but a suitable liver has not yet been found.

Price index jump sends buyers scurrying; Dow plummets 48

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market took its sharpest drop in nearly a year Friday as news of a surprise increase in inflation fueled Wall Street.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 48.67 to 2,292.14, for its biggest point decline since it tumbled 101.46 last April 14.

That all but wiped out strong gains recorded earlier in the week, leaving the average with an increase of 10 points from the previous Friday's close.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by almost 7 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 225 up, 1,445 down and 305 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board reached an eight-week high of 242.90 million shares, against 196.04 million Thursday. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 278.31 million shares.

Before the opening, the government reported the producer price index of finished goods rose a full percentage point in February, matching its increase the month before.

That news came as a roost shock to stock traders, who had been expecting a gain of about half that size, and set off a new wave of inflation and interest-rate worries.

In the credit markets, prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, fell about $7.50 for each $1,000 in face value.

Conjecture immediately began to spread in the financial world that the Federal Reserve would feel compelled to take further steps soon to tighten credit in its effort to keep inflation restrained.

Late in the session, the market was hit with another setback when International Business Machines, the No. 1 holding of investing institutions, said its first-quarter earnings would fall short of analysts' expectations.

IBM shares fell 5% to 112 1/2. The intensity of activity in the stock market was heightened by the so-called "triple witching hour," a quarterly occasion when the last trading occurs in a set of expiring options and futures on stock indexes.

This circumstance prompts heavy trading by professionals engaged in computer program strategies that involve both the options and futures and individual stocks.

In Friday's case, these program traders appeared to help the market recover slightly by buying stocks at the close. At its worst, the Dow was down more than 80 points.

Aside from IBM, losers among the blue chips included Ford Motor, down 1 1/4% at 49 1/2; American Telegraph & Telegraph, down 3/4% at 22; Exxon, down 1/4% at 45, and General Electric, down 1 1/4% at 44 1/2.

Some analysts noted that the discount rate will apply only to electricity used beyond Micron's current 4.8 million kilowatt-hours per month.

With the Boise-based computer chip company's current expansion plans, the PUC estimates the increased usage will be about 2 million kw per month.
