Racism foes, skinheads arrive in North Idaho

The Associated Press

COEUR d'ALENE — Neo-Nazi skinheads and anti-racism demonstrators began arriving in this northern Idaho tourist town Friday and law enforcement officials tightened their grip in hopes of avoiding confrontations between the groups.

Between 800 and 2,000 demonstrators were expected to march in the seven-mile-long "Walk for Racial Equality" today that ends two miles from the Aryan Nations compound where white supremacists are conducting a three-day conference of neo-Nazi youths.

Kootenai County sheriff's officials instituted controls on the road leading to the site, including restrictions on media access. "No parking" signs were being posted along Rimrock Road leading to the Aryan Nations camp entrance, and press vehicles will not be allowed closer than a command center seven-tenths of a mile north. Reporters will be bused to the Aryan Nations gate.

Sheriff's deputies were seen posting "No trespassing" signs on fences of property adjacent to the Aryan compound.

Checkpoints are being established on the road leading to the Aryan Nations camp, where deputies will check the identities of people entering the area, said Capt. Tom Dickson.

"The law says an officer has the right to ask people to identify themselves," Dickson said, noting the checkpoints will not be roadblocks. Those who do not produce identification, or who are named in arrest warrants, could be detained, he said.

The Kootenai County sheriff's office is prepared for any unusual occurrence, Dickson said. "We don't anticipate any protesters (confrontations). We do not anticipate any arrests."

Despite the apparent tightening of security that differs from past gatherings of Aryan Nations followers, Dickson declined to give specifics on tactics.

"We've established what we feel to be tactics that are going to ensure the safety of all the parties involved," he said.

Meanwhile, students at North Idaho College on Friday distributed 6,500 orange ribbons as symbols of friendship, and some human rights and civic groups staged events intended to take the spotlight away from the white supremacist gathering.

Organizers of the march, who have asked for police protection, said preparations were going smoothly.

"I can't believe it, people are pouring in."

said Lisa Anderson, organizer of Citizens for Nonviolent Action Against Racism, the Coeur d'Alene-based group sponsoring the march.

Despite officials' fears that the march along a bicycle path adjacent to a highway appeared to be poorly organized, Ms. Anderson said she expects few problems.

"I worry about one thing that is out of place," she said. "This has really generated a lot of discussion about racism."

The march has split the human rights community.

It has been endorsed by such groups as the

Quiet march draws curious looks, queries

By JENNIFER KAUTH Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sporting orange arm bands and brandishing anti-racism posters, a crowd of about 100 wound its way through downtown Friday in support of human rights.

The quiet, low-key march, heralded by bright anti-apartheid balloons, inspired curious looks from passing cars and queries from folk strolling down Main Avenue East.

"What's going on?" an elderly woman asked.

"Jerome biology teacher Dick Jordan pointed to his sign and explained the rally's purpose.

"We're walking to show our support for human rights," he told her.

Kathy Dutt of Twin Falls said she was at the march "hopefully so my kids won't have to fight racism." She brought along her adopted children, 10-month old Rachel and 3-year-old Allen, both born in India.

Although she said she's never had racism problems, Dutt said she fears white-supremacist groups in Coeur d'Alene and Hayden Lake, where an Aryan Nations-sponsored skinhead conference is being held this weekend, could move south.

Many — maybe half — of the rally's participants were Jerome High School students who would have rather been rallying at their school or marching down the streets of their hometown.

"We must learn to live with the fact that racism plays a very large part in our lives in Idaho," said student Tami Campbell in a speech before the walk. "And not being able to have our rally in Jerome goes to show how much of a problem we do have there and in the Magic Valley."

Billed as "A Celebration of Human Rights," the Twin Falls march resulted from cancellation of an anti-racism rally Jordan had organized for his students. Jordan canceled the rally after Jerome school officials banned it from school grounds and law officers warned of counter-demonstrations if it were held on city property.

The Magic Valley Human Rights Coalition organized the Twin Falls march, preceded by an hour-long program at First United Methodist Church.

The program included speeches by students and the reading of a proclamation by Mayor Doug Vollmer, urging Twin Falls citizens to support human rights.

"It's time that we, as a society, get off our collective butts and make these people realize that equality and peace will win," said student Ben Burdick in one of the more fiery speeches.

He described skinheads, neo-Nazis and "Aryan Nations."

Andrus assails racist philosophy

The Associated Press

BOISE — Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus on Friday lashed out again at the racist philosophy of white supremacists as scores of neo-Nazi "skinhead" youth congregated at the Panhandle headquarters of the Aryan Nations Church.

"The people of Idaho stand united against hate groups and those who would spread a message of fear and intolerance," the governor said.

Leaders of more than 25 Idaho communities, including the county where the Aryan Nations compound is located, joined the governor in declaring this week "Human Rights Week" as part of the state's public stand against the three-day white supremacist conference sponsored by Aryan Nations Church founder Richard Butler.

The message has been sounded loud and clear from one end of Idaho to the other," Andrus said. "It is a message that racism, bigotry and hatred are unwelcome visitors to Idaho. ... That is not what Idaho is about."

He said Idahoans realize that when the rights and dignity of even one person are attacked, the human rights of everyone have been threatened.

Andrus, the state's Human Rights Commission and the Northwest Coalition Against Malicious Harassment have called for passive protests against the Skinhead conference at Hayden Lake, parting company with other organizations in the Northwest that have organized a major march and demonstration for Saturday to show their opposition to the white supremacist activity.

Duck-eating 'monster' apparently catfish

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The search for a mysterious "monster" from the black lagoon that may be gobbling helpless baby ducklings in a downtown nature pond ended Friday with the sighting of two well-fed catfish swishing lazily through the shallows.

The catfish were spotted by National Park Service ranger Helen Horton, who was sloshing through the muck wearing rubber hip waders and armed with a long-handled rake and fish net after the pond, normally about three feet deep, had been all but drained.

The catfish are a strong possibility, pronounced her boss, biological engineer John Hoke. "They just love ducks. Yes, the catfish are an awfully good smoking gun."

Hoke said he would refill the pond outside the main entrance to the Interior Department headquarters and set an underwater trap for the catfish as soon as possible. Meanwhile, the remaining three ducklings will have to take their chances on survival.

The ducklings' plight has aroused the sympathy and worried concern of scores of federal office workers who stroll past Bolivar Pond or pause for a midday picnic in the small, surrounding park that also features an equestrian statue of South American liberator Simon Bolivar.

A female mallard duck that had taken up residence in the pond with several male companions gave birth to 11 ducklings last week. On Monday, none of the fluffy, yellow-faced babies remained. The next day, there were seven.

Kathie O'Toole, an Interior Department budget analyst, became alarmed and telephoned the Park Service. She feared the ducklings.

Governor sees slight gains on waste issue

The Associated Press

BOISE — Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus, who banned further temporary radioactive waste storage last fall until the government begins removing current waste stockpiles, sees an apparent compromise on the opening of a New Mexico storage facility as progress.

But the governor acknowledged on Friday that an experimental 3 percent storage limit at the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant near Carlsbad would mean little chance that much of the more than 2 million cubic feet of radioactive waste now stored at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory could be moved.

"Initially there would be some moved out but not as much as we'd like," Andrus said. "But we're still making progress."

The governor, who eased back on his ban in February to accommodate national security concerns, said Energy Secretary James Watkins briefed him by telephone on the initial storage plan several days ago.

Under the plan to be formally announced next week, only 3 percent of the New Mexico facility's capacity could be used for storing low-and medium-level radioactive waste from the nation's defense plants as an agreement to determine safety and environmental impacts.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said the experiment could last up to five years.

Andrus said Watkins had not mentioned that kind of lengthy testing period during his briefing, and he said the entire waste storage issue would be discussed when he meets with Watkins in Washington, D.C., next Tuesday.

Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, with Rep. Joe Skeen, R-N.M., had sponsored an alternative plan

Thousands demand democracy for China

The Associated Press

BEIJING — Tens of thousands of students chanted for democracy and an end to dictatorship today as China's top officials, guarded by the military, entered the Great Hall of the People.

The officials arrived for Communist Party memorial ceremonies for disgraced former party chief Hu Yaobang, whose death last week touched off massive student demonstrations.

Saturday's student demonstrators, their numbers bolstered by the arrival of thousands of non-students in the early morning hours, waved colored banners, gave the victory sign and raised clenched fists in a tumultuous show of resistance.

They shouted "Down with dictatorship!" again and again.

The crowds in Tiananmen Square, which dwindled in the pre-dawn hours, swelled again to some as 150,000. Demonstrators filled a street leading to the square from the Great Hall, which was guarded by a triple line of People's Liberation Army soldiers.

The students did not try to break through the line. Many sat in the street in front of the hall, the national seat of government.

Party General Secretary Zhao Ziyang, Hu's successor, delivered a 10-minute address at the memorial service. He said Hu "worked unswervingly" for the party and Marxist ideals during his 60-year revolutionary career.

About 4,000 mourners, led by senior leader Deng Xiaoping and members of the Politburo, attended the ceremonies.

His body was draped in the red flag of the Communist Party. Most of the mourners wore Mao jackets and trousers but Hu was dressed in a

Service honors 47 USS Iowa victims

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The rifles fired 21 times, the Navy bugler played taps and a wreath of 47 yellow carnations was cast into the Elizabeth River on Friday to remember the 47 men of the USS Iowa who died at sea.

There were few dry-eyes among the more than 750 people who gathered on the waterfront with Gov. Gerald L. Baliles and representatives from the eight cities in the Hampton Roads area.

"With this ceremony, we wish to touch hands with our Navy friends and share as best we can their very deep anguish and grief," Norfolk City Manager James B. Oliver Jr. said to start the brief ceremony, organized by the city.

The sailors died Wednesday after an explosion rocked one of the battleship's huge gun turrets during exercises in the Caribbean.

There was a time, 45 years or more ago, when this community reeled from news of death at sea nearly every day," Baliles told the crowd of civilians and military. The sailors of the United States Navy gave their lives to prevail in war.

"But these are peaceful times and we're not used to such tragedy. We do not expect it ... and it leaves us even more deeply saddened. On the USS Iowa, 47 young men died too soon. That is the fact we face. ... We accept it, but we will not forget it.

"We will remember, and honor and grieve as a nation," he said.

Mayors or delegates from each of the cities, the Navy and the Chamber of Commerce presented wreaths to honor the dead.

The crowd stood in silence as a Navy-Marine Corps color guard led Baliles and Norfolk Mayor Joseph Leaf carrying the wreath of yellow carnations from the state onto the pier. As they cast the wreath onto the water, a police honor guard of seven riflemen fired three volleys from a knoll just north of the gathering.

When the last echo of the final volley died, a single Navy bugler in dress whites stepped from the crowd lining a portico above the gathering.

Over the strains of taps, sobs could be heard from those in the crowd.

"These are my shipmates in disaster and distress,"

'There really is a sense of family in the Navy.'
— Joan Taplett, wife of USS Glover commander said Jim Smith of Norfolk, who attended the service. A vice president of Branch 5 of the Fleet Reserve Association, the 63-year-old Smith was one of many veterans in the crowd.

"I served aboard the battleship North Carolina in 1946. I know about those big guns. At times like this, everyone seems to pull together, we become one family," he said.

Joan Taplett was there with her 3-year-old son, Paul, who sat in the sunshine eating ice cream. Mrs. Taplett said it was important for her and for her son to be there. Her husband is commanding officer of the frigate USS Glover.

"There really is a sense of family in the Navy. My son won't remember this, but I will always, and I can tell him about these men who gave their lives for the defense of country — so they won't be forgotten," she said.

"I'm from South Dakota... When I heard that one of the men killed was from there, I had to come. It's a small state. He came from a small town," she said.

David L. Hanson, a 23-year-old electrician's mate 3rd class from Bison, S.D., was among those killed. Bison has a population of 457.

"I guess I'm here for his parents. Something like this touches all of us... it reaches into little towns all over the country," she said.

Paul asked his mother why her hand — holding his cup of ice cream — was shaking. "It's just from the cold, honey," she said.

With the end of the ceremony, the Navy began its planning of a service for the Iowa's crew and families at the Norfolk Naval Station, tentatively set for 9 a.m. Monday. President Bush is expected to attend. Friday, Bush ordered all flags to be flown at half staff in memory of the dead. Flags in the Hampton Roads area have been at half staff since the explosion.

Jury out in Oliver North trial; alternate juror would convict

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver North's jury debated his guilt or innocence in a tightly guarded room Friday, as an alternate juror who heard all the testimony said she would have voted to convict him on some of the 12 charges.

The jurors deliberated for about six hours before quitting for the day. They will resume this morning.

"Mr. North ... wasn't made to do what he did. He had a choice in it."

North is charged with withholding information from Congress, lying to Attorney General Edwin Meese III about his activities in the Iran-Contra affair, destroying and altering documents, misusing money entrusted to him and accepting an illegal gratuity — a $13,800 security system at his home.

Ms. McKie said she had not discussed the case with other jurors — following the strict instructions given daily by U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell — and did not know how they feel.

Ms. McKie said she had not discussed the case with other jurors — following the strict instructions given daily by U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell — and did not know how they feel.

They could not help but notice their arrival — and on their departure — that the courthouse, between the Capitol and the White House, had become a news media center. Huge television trucks were parked on the street, wires snaked around the building and cameras were aimed at every entrance.

'Mr. North ... wasn't made to do what he did. He had a choice in it.'
— Alternate juror Horasina McKie

The jurors quickly had requests, relayed to the judge on notes. They asked for copies of Gesell's instructions, which took more than two hours to read in court; for note pads, paper clips and pencils.

Jury members will deliberate a half day today, but not on Sunday. Their lunches in the courthouse are being catered.

After a night sequestered in a downtown hotel, the jurors were brought to the federal courthouse in a van and taken to an 18-by-12 room only a few feet away from the courtroom where they had listened to testimony for eight weeks. Their room was further crowded with hundreds of exhibits, some still classified as top secret. A U.S. marshal guarded the door.

The foreman is a 34-year-old hospital clerk, Denise Anderson, who said during pre-trial questioning that she does not like news and that the extensive television coverage given North's testimony during the 1987 congressional hearings "made me mad. ... I did not look at it at all."

Ms. McKie, the alternate juror who commented in an interview with CBS News, touched on one of North's major defenses, that he was authorized to do all he did.

"No one said, 'If you don't do this we're going to fire you,'" the alternate juror said. In his instructions, Gesell had told the jury to remember that no one, including the president, had the right to order an unlawful act.

"I believe Mr. Reagan knew what was going on," Ms. McKie said. "I can't say, he knew everything, but I think he knew enough to know what was going on. I mean, you see (National Security Adviser Robert) McFarlane every week, he's only 100 yards from you or feet from you."

Reagan told the investigative Tower commission two years ago that he did not know the National Security Council staff was engaged in helping the Contra rebels in Nicaragua when official U.S. aid was banned.

North testified he was acting under orders, even when he lied to a congressional committee in denying he was assisting the Contras. He said that he had no idea any of his actions violated the law and that he had good motives for what he did.

If convicted on all counts, he could be sentenced to 60 years in prison and fined as much as $3 million. However, federal court practice is generally to limit sentences to the longest term for any one count — in this case 10 years.

Bush will propose service plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush plans to propose a national youth service program based on volunteerism, Energy Secretary James D. Watkins told a Senate panel Friday.

Watkins said the president would send proposed legislation to Congress in a month outlining such a program to be based solely on volunteerism because "civic obligation" rather than financial incentive should be the motivation.

Bush's program, to be known as Youth Entering Service, would be aimed at people under age 25 "to instill ... the notion that service to others is a necessary part of any definition of a successful life," Watkins told the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee.

"Through YES, young people will not be financially compensated by the federal government for their service," said Watkins, adding that the major "motivation for service should be a sense of civic obligation rather than the promise of remuneration."

Watkins said details of Bush's plan were still being worked out. He offered no immediate examples of how the system would work but he said the efforts would be tied in some way to service in local communities.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., the committee chairman, said the appearance by Watkins "is the first time that the Bush administration has testified before the Congress on the subject of national service. Kennedy chided the administration for delaying participation thus far in the legislative action.

The committee is considering nine national service bills, including a controversial proposal by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., linking government financial aid for college students to military or civilian service.

"Federal policy should enhance educational opportunities, not trade one important interest against another," said Gregory A. Humphrey, director of legislation for the American Federation of Teachers, in opposition to the Nunn bill.

Echoing that sentiment, Leon Horne, a member of the executive committee of the National Education Association, the nation's largest union of teachers, said such an approach would "undermine equal educational opportunity for students from low-and lower middle-income families."

Girl injured by bomb recovering

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The 5-year-old girl injured by a pipe bomb at a discount store was eating a frozen orange Twin Pop Friday and planning a trip to a hospital playroom after her condition was upgraded from fair to satisfactory.

Doctors at Methodist Hospital said Erin Bower has been recovering steadily since Monday night, when a bomb concealed in a toothpaste container exploded in her hand in a suburban K mart.

"She is more alert today," said Jon J. White, a hospital spokesman. "She is out of the bed, but she is not yet walking around. She is in a wheelchair."

Surgeons were not able to save her left hand, but said Thursday that the prognosis looked good for her left eye, which was damaged in the blast.

"The only pain she's experiencing is in the stomach, related to the injuries of the explosion — cuts and abrasions," White said.

Doctors planned to examine the eye again next week before determining when the child might be released from the hospital.

Investigators continued their search for two men seen leaving the K mart shortly after the blast, and a man clerks say bought BBs at the store last Friday. Witnesses said the purchaser matches the description of one of the two men.

The investigation has been hampered by "a flurry of unfounded bomb threats, including one that emptied another Indianapolis K mart Thursday night, Sheriff Joseph McAtee said.

Activists protest social cuts

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Hundreds of activists upset with proposed cuts in social services spending disrupted a city budget hearing Friday, and 12 protesters singing "We Shall Not Be Moved" were taken into custody.

Police led the protesters from City Council chambers after Deputy Police Commissioner Thomas McGehee asked them to move from council members' chairs so the hearing could resume.

Robert Brand, a research director for the hospital workers' union, was the first person taken out of the chambers. He said he joined the protest "to guarantee that the city passes a budget that doesn't kill people."

City Solicitor Seymour Kurland said he was not sure whether those detained would be charged.

Mayor W. Wilson Goode last month proposed a $2 billion budget that would cut spending for the homeless, AIDS and community organizations but bolster police and health clinic staffs.

Goode was not at the hearing.

Justice fights state constitution retirement age

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — The state constitution says Louis Peck is too old to be on Vermont's highest court.

Peck disagrees, and continues to hear and decide cases. "I don't think I should become senile as a matter of law," said Peck. "I might be as a matter of fact, but certainly not of law."

Peck turned 70 in December. According to Vermont's Constitution, he should have retired at the end of 1988. He did not, believing the provision violates a federal act that prohibits age discrimination.

On his side is an opinion from the state attorney general's office saying the federal act supersedes the Vermont mandatory retirement clause. But a recent federal appeals court ruling in Massachusetts raises new questions about Peck's standing.

"We have an attorney general's opinion that concludes Justice Peck is qualified to sit," said Thomas Lehner, the court administrator. "Whether the attorney general's opinion is correct is an open question."

The 1974 provision of the state Constitution is clear: "All justices of the Supreme Court and judges of all subordinate courts shall be retired at the end of the calendar year in which they attain 70 years of age."

But in 1986 Congress amended the Age Discrimination in Employment

Act of 1967 to prohibit discrimination regardless of age. Previously, the law did not apply to anyone older than 70.

In 1987, Peck and Gov. Madeleine Kunin asked the attorney general's office to review the apparent conflict between the state Constitution and federal law. In an opinion signed by Attorney General Jeffrey Amestoy, the office decided the federal law must prevail.

"The supremacy clause of the U.S. Constitution makes it clear federal law controls if there is a conflict," said Amestoy.

But rulings by the attorney general's office do not have the force of a court decision; they are only advisory. And a federal court decision in neighboring Massachusetts late last year shows there is room for disagreement.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the 1st Circuit, which covers Massachusetts, said it could not find any evidence in reviewing the congressional debate on the discrimination statute that Congress meant for the law to usurp the state power to govern the tenure of judges.

"Without question, the tenure of state judges is a question of exceeding importance to each state, and a question traditionally left to be answered by each state," the judges said. "Any federal encroachment on a state freedom of choice in this area, therefore, strikes very close to the heart of state sovereignty."

Peck wants the issue resolved in the courts. But it is unclear how or when that will happen.

The Massachusetts ruling has no force in Vermont. Only a ruling by the 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals, which covers Vermont, or by the U.S. Supreme Court, could end the uncertainty over Peck's position.

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission is looking for a case to bring to the U.S. Supreme Court to resolve the issue, but it may be years before the country's highest court issues a decision.

Lockheed to develop fuel rocket

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA on Friday selected Lockheed Missile Systems Division of Sunnyvale, Calif., to develop a new, more powerful solid fuel rocket for the space shuttle.

The space agency is moving ahead on the advanced booster despite last month's recommendation by a congressional safety panel that it discontinue the project.

Lockheed estimated total cost of the seven-year development project and facility work at more than $1.1 billion. The company's principal subcontractor is Aerojet Space Booster Co. of Sacramento, Calif., and its facility contractor is Rust International of Birmingham, Ala.

The contract includes an option for 44 sets of two motors each. The new motor will replace, in the mid-1990s, the current shuttle booster rocket.

A faulty booster rocket caused the explosion of the shuttle Challenger and loss of its seven-member crew in January 1986. The shuttle fleet was grounded for 32 months while the rocket was redesigned.

The Aerospace Safety Advisory Panel said the new booster should not be built because it would be too costly and would not be as reliable as the existing rocket.

The advanced rocket will enable the shuttle to carry 12,000 more pounds of payload. It currently can lift 50,000 pounds.

New facilities for the rocket development will be constructed at Yellow Creek, a site in northeast Mississippi.

Hawaii officials pass up coral atoll purchase

HONOLULU (AP) — Hawaii lawmakers have decided not to spend $33 million to buy a coral atoll nearly 1,000 miles to the south, and a member of the family that owns the property says plenty of other buyers have expressed interest.

The Fullard-Leo family of Honolulu had given state lawmakers until the end of their current legislative session, scheduled to adjourn Monday, to come up with the money or it would sell the uninhabited Palmyra atoll to someone else.

"If the state doesn't buy it now, I'm sure it's not going to be here next year," said Ainsley Fullard-Leo, 57, the youngest of three brothers who own the U-shaped string of islets 960 miles south of Hawaii and 200 miles north of the equator.

House Finance Committee Chairman Joseph Souki said the Palmyra was not included in the state budget when it was finalized by House and Senate conferees on Thursday.

"I think it's too expensive anyway," he said.

Told of the Legislature's decision, Fullard-Leo said, "I think the state's making a big mistake."

Now that the state has passed on it, the family will probably consider other offers, Fullard-Leo said. Offers in the $30 million range and higher have come from U.S. and Japanese companies as well as one unidentified Pacific nation, he said.

Palmyra has many attractive features, including its status as a U.S. possession, its deep harbor, an airstrip left over from World War II and 150 inches of rainfall a year, said Sen. Richard Matsuura, a strong supporter of purchasing the property.

It's located in one of the best fisheries in the Pacific and could serve as a mid-Pacific maritime center, he said.

University of Hawaii scientists say it is ideal for oceanographic and marine life research.

Lugar wants scrutiny of Panama vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration should act now to focus public attention on alleged efforts by Panama's military leader to control the upcoming election there and should send Defense Secretary Dick Cheney to inspect U.S. troops protecting the canal, Sen. Richard Lugar said Friday.

Lugar, an Indiana Republican who is a former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said that "the Bush administration is already behind in the game, but it's not too late to marshal public opinion to at least make sure this vitally important election doesn't pass by unnoticed on page 12 of a few newspapers."

Lugar said chances for free and fair elections in Panama on May 7 now appear to be remote because of control over the process exercised by that country's military leader, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

The senator said Cheney should visit the U.S. Southern Command in Panama within the next two weeks to highlight U.S. concern over the elections and to demand a halt to escalating attacks on American military personnel by forces loyal to Noriega.

The United States should also make clear now, he said, that economic sanctions against Panama could be strengthened if the elections are perceived as unfair.

The White House should also declare that the sanctions could be removed "altogether" if fair play prevails, he said.

"Noriega has clearly decided that controlling this election with overwhelming strong-arm tactics is more important than appearing legitimate to the world through victory in a free and fair election," Lugar told a news conference.

"He is trying to scuttle efforts by the Center for Democracy to help the world watch the election through the press," Lugar said.

Noriega also is tightening restrictions on travel to the country.

'Bring your own sacrifice' party a joke

ELKO, Nev. (AP) — Recent rumors of satanic activity and alleged threats have been laid to rest after an intensive investigation tracked down an apparent joke that got out of hand. Police Chief Gordon Fobes said Friday.

Fobes says a person who conceded being involved in satanism was interviewed extensively Thursday by police investigators.

Fobes said the person told them about a bring-your-own-sacrifice party at which the person suggested having a "bring your own sacrifice" party instead.

Two young women at the party picked up on the joke, Fobes said, and said they knew two virgins who could be sacrificed.

The running joke continued in the form of notes passed back and forth at school, Fobes said, fueling the rumors that a satanic cult was planning a sacrifice. "It got completely out of proportion," he said.

Neighbor David Kamerath comforts a child after pulling a victim from the burning home

Fire in Salt Lake City kills 2

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Two young people were killed and a 6-year-old girl remained in critical condition Friday after an early morning fire raged through their Salt Lake City home.

Gordon Nicholl, Salt Lake Fire Department battalion chief, said the dead included 11-year-old Heather Sheehan, a family friend from the San Francisco Bay area, and 4-year-old Elliott Clark.

Nicholl said neighbors alerted the fire department at about 6:30 a.m. after seeing smoke billowing from the three-story home's windows. When fire crews arrived, flames shot from the front door and smoke poured from the windows on all three floors, Nicholl said. He said neighbors placed ladders against the house in an effort to save the victims.

One neighbor, David Kamerath, managed to pull one child to safety before firefighters arrived, Nicholl said. Kamerath, 47, was treated for lacerations to his left arm and smoke inhalation at Holy Cross Hospital in Salt Lake City.

Another neighbor, Keith Nelson, 30, was treated for smoke inhalation.

The children's father, 40-year-old John Clark, suffered smoke inhalation and a fractured shoulder trying to save his children, Nicholl said. He was treated at Holy Cross Hospital while his wife, Carol Ann Clark, 36, was treated for shock at LDS Hospital in Salt Lake City.

Timothy Clark, 7 months old, was treated for smoke inhalation at Holy Cross, as was firefighter Jeff Scott.

Fire officials were unsure of the cause of the fire, but said it spread quickly from the main floor upstairs via an open stairway.

"Those homes are old and they're really dry," said Aggie Auer, the fire department's administrative secretary. She said fire crews were called back to the scene later Friday after an ember apparently flared up and the home reignited.

'Technical factors' boost March deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government posted a $35.78 billion budget deficit in March, up 22.2 percent from the same month last year and the highest monthly shortfall in nearly three years, the Treasury Department reported Friday.

Revenues last month were up 3.9 percent from March 1988 to $69.28 billion, while spending of $104.06 billion was up 9.5 percent.

The last time the monthly budget deficit was higher was in May 1986, when the shortfall was $39.4 billion.

For the first six months of the 1989 fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, the budget deficit totaled $128.43 billion, 7.4 percent ahead of the $119.61 billion shortfall posted by the same time last year.

Economist Louis Crandall of K.H. Wrightson & Associates in New York said last month's deficit surge was largely due to technical factors related to the timing of government payments for tax refunds and veterans' and disability benefits.

He said checks totaling $5 billion in tax refunds and $2.5 billion in benefits that normally would have gone out in April were mailed out at the end of March, artificially inflating the monthly deficit figure.

"If you take out technical factors, last month was right on top of last year's number," Crandall said. "This points toward an annual deficit in the $145 billion range, which would be better than last year and better than most people are currently expecting."

The Bush administration is estimating this year's deficit will total $163.3 billion, up 5.3 percent from the $155.1 billion shortfall posted in fiscal 1988. Under the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law, this year's deficit was not supposed to exceed $146 billion.

The administration and congressional leaders last week unveiled a compromise plan designed to reduce the deficit in the next fiscal year to $99.4 billion, just within the $100 billion target for fiscal 1990 established under Gramm-Rudman.

Economist Paul DeNoon of Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. in New York said that even setting aside the special factors that inflated March's shortfall, he expects the deficit this year to be in the range of $160 billion to $165 billion.

"Clearly, it's not doing as well as it was last year," he said.

DeNoon said much of the worsening in the deficit so far this year has been linked to government payments to help shore up the troubled savings and loan industry.

Analysts say the deficit also has increased because of higher-than-expected interest rates so far this year.

Lawyer complains about lack of access to Hinckley

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mark Lane, nationally known for his conspiracy theories about President Kennedy's assassination, complained Friday he has been kept from meeting John W. Hinckley Jr. by the mental hospital where Hinckley has been since shooting President Reagan.

A judge ruled Thursday that he could meet during regular visiting hours.

Lane said he has not decided whether to accept Hinckley's request that he take on his case.

However, the lawyer said, "We had an appointment a couple of weeks ago and the hospital authorities at the highest level decreed that I could not meet with Mr. Hinckley. Instead they wanted to meet with me, pulling together a summit meeting all the powers in Washington to brief me. ...

"I said that was absurd and that if a man wanted to obtain me, the sanctity of the attorney-client relationship is that it remains between an attorney and a client."

Hinckley told a federal court judge Thursday, in his first public testimony ever, that he wanted to hire Lane as his attorney because "he has done very well" defending famous criminals.

He said of the proposed March 28 meeting with Lane, "On the morning of the meeting, all of a sudden, it was pulled out from under me." Hinckley has been at St. Elizabeth's mental hospital since his 1982 acquittal by reason of insanity in the 1981 shooting of Reagan and three others.

Nevada gun control measure defeated

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — A bill to reserve to the state the power to regulate firearms failed Friday on a 21-20 vote in the Nevada Assembly.

That is one vote less than the 22 votes needed to send the measure to the state Senate.

However, proponents of the measure used a parliamentary maneuver allowing a reconsideration vote.

AB147 was rejected despite Assemblyman Danny Thompson's argument that the amendment to the measure would leave local gun control ordinances in force, although they couldn't be made any stronger.

Local ordinances that could have been preempted without the amendment include a Las Vegas 3-day waiting period on handgun sales.

Thompson also said a key reason for his introduction of the measure was to head off an effort by Boulder City to outlaw handguns altogether.

Despite the changes in the measure, critics of the bill argued it would infringe on local governments.

But Thompson, D-Henderson, said "I can't believe the debate here. This is not a criminal bill. This is not an attempt to tie local governments' hands. This just puts the regulation of guns in our hands, and...that's where it properly belongs."

Opponents included Assemblywoman Myrna Williams, D-Las Vegas, who said, "We are considering here passing a law that will make it easier for gang members to get guns. Do we want them to be able to buy the kind of weapons that kill our friends, our acquaintances?"

Assemblyman Bob Price, D-North Las Vegas, said local control should continue. He said that given the crime problems in metropolitan areas "if they are banning the sale of guns or bullets, they're doing it in response to local problems and that's their business."

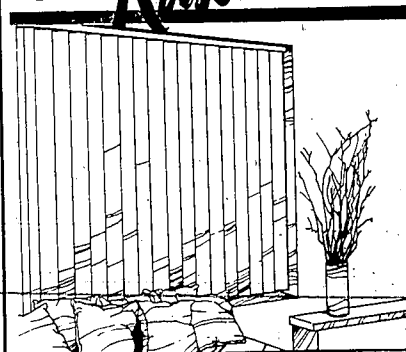

Price added he had supported a constitutional amendment that would guarantee the right of Nevadans to own guns, but still opposed Thompson's bill.

Assemblywoman Eileen Brookman, D-Las Vegas, added, "In this day and age when we have a society that is gun-happy, drive-by (shooting) happy, drug-related and gang-related, we don't need a law like this."

Philippine officials say rebels responsible for killing American

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Authorities blamed communist rebels for Friday's gun-bush-slaying of an American colonel, and the U.S. ambassador said the killing will only strengthen U.S. support for President Corason Aquino.

Col. James "Nick" Rowe was dead on arrival at a suburban Philippine military hospital moments after at least two gunmen in a stolen car sprayed his vehicle with gunfire as he headed for work, officials said.

Rowe, 51, a native of McAllen, Texas, was a decorated Vietnam War hero who was held in a cage for five years by the Viet Cong as a prisoner of war until he escaped in 1968.

Rowe was chief of the army division at the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group headquarters in the Manila suburb of Quezon City. The unit provides training and logistical support to the Philippine military, which is fighting a 20-year communist insurgency.

No group claimed responsibility for the attack, but Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos said Filipino officials believe the killers were communist rebels. He noted the rebels had threatened to attack U.S. targets unless the United States closed its bases here and stopped aiding Mrs. Aquino's government.

U.S. Ambassador Nicholas Platt said in a statement he was uncertain about the rebels' involvement.

"But should anyone think that killing this brave officer will alter in any way U.S. policy of support for Philippine democracy, they are wrong," he said. "...This act will only strengthen American resolve to stand with the government and people of the Philippines led by President Aquino. We will not be deterred by terrorists."

At the White House, press secretary Martin Fitzwater called the killing "a cowardly and heinous act."

Col. Rowe was in the Philippines to help the Filipino people in their efforts to defend democracy," Fitzwater said. "We will work closely with the Philippine government in their efforts to track down and bring to justice those responsible for this assassination."

Rowe's body, accompanied by his wife, Suzanne, and two children, was flown by helicopter from the hospital to Clark Air Base, 50 miles north of Manila. Funeral plans were incomplete.

Rowe's Filipino driver was wounded in the 7 a.m. attack. Three blocks from Rowe's office.

Police said up to three cars may have been in the ambush, but witnesses said they saw only one with at least three men, a driver and two gunmen. One gunman had an M-16 rifle and the other a .45-caliber pistol, they said.

The attack came five days after the communist National Democratic Front (NDF) rebels were "determined to make U.S. imperialism pay dearly for the continuing stay of its bases and its escalating intervention in our people's affairs."

The statement was issued to claim responsibility for the bombing of a U.S. communications station in the northern province of Benguet. No one was hurt, in the April 9 bombing.

In October 1987, rebels killed three Americans and a Filipino outside Clark. The killings caused authorities to increase security at six U.S. military installations and civilian offices here.

U.S. officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said future attacks probably would be against officers assigned to the advisory group for which Rowe worked. Soldiers were warned to vary their routes to and from work and to tint their car windows to avoid detection.

Soviet withdrawal near

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — The Soviet Union will begin the partial withdrawal of 10,000 of its estimated 62,000 troops in Hungary on Tuesday, the commander of the Kremlin's forces in the country said Friday.

Col. Gen. Matvei Burlakov said the pullout will involve 22 units comprising more than 10,000 men, 450 tanks, 200 pieces of artillery and 3,000 vehicles.

The pullouts are part of the withdrawal of 50,000 men and 5,000 tanks from Eastern Europe announced by Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev in December.

Soviet troops begin partial withdrawal from East Germany and Czechoslovakia next month, Burlakov said.

He said the withdrawal will begin with the departure of artillery and missiles from the Soviet's 13th tank division in western Hungary.

"Troop pullouts begin May 15, he added, followed by the departure of a training tank regiment June 6, and the pullout of an air defense regiment starting June 20, he said.

A fighter regiment will leave by Dec. 1, while the withdrawal of airborne forces and a non-commissioned officers' training school will go ahead next year, he added.

Burlakov said some 8,000 conscripts and around 2,000 officers will return to the Soviet Union from Hungary.

"Those nearing retirement will be pensioned off, but others will be redeployed on Soviet territory, he said.

According to figures published in Hungary, there are 62,000 Soviet troops in Hungary.

Burlakov declined to give a figure, saying only that the pullout affects roughly one-quarter of all Soviet units in Hungary.

The withdrawals will be accompanied by a shift of Soviet troops stationed near the border with Austria to points further east, Burlakov said.

Asked whether this meant the Soviet Union now sees little chance of an attack on the Warsaw Pact through neutral Austria, Burlakov replied, "We would like to create a zone of peace between the Warsaw Pact and NATO."

Austria is not a member of the Western military alliance or the Soviet-led bloc.

Increasingly vocal demands have recently come from Hungary's independent groups for Hungarian neutrality.

Asked whether he could envision this with Hungary either leaving or remaining in the Warsaw Pact, Burlakov replied, "I think the competent, high-ranking organs of the Warsaw Treaty ... will take a decision about that."

Replying to another question, he made clear that he could not envisage complete withdrawal of Soviet troops from Hungary unless NATO made similar steps.

Germany to seek missile talks

BONN, West Germany (AP) — West Germany will press the United States to agree to early superpower talks on the reduction of short-range nuclear missiles, officials said Friday.

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and Defense Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg will urge Washington to end its opposition to early talks with the Soviet Union on the missiles issue, said government officials, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The decision came out of talks between leaders of the government's ruling coalition parties that forged a common policy on the missile debate, sources said.

Genscher and Stoltenberg are scheduled to fly to Washington on Monday for talks with U.S. officials.

West Germany has resisted strong U.S. and British calls to upgrade the current aging generation of short-range nuclear missiles.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl wants NATO to postpone a decision on the missiles until after West Germany's national election in December 1990.

Kohl's party has lost heavily in recent state elections and a decision to replace the aging missiles with new weapons would be unpopular with voters in West Germany, where the current missiles are deployed and where the new ones would also be located.

Genscher has repeatedly called for early talks with the Warsaw Pact to reduce the number of short-range missiles.

The United States and Great Britain are strongly opposed to early talks, contending that Warsaw Pact superiority in conventional weapons requires a Western nuclear deterrent of short-range weapons.

A two-day meeting of NATO defense ministers that ended Thursday in Brussels sidestepped the issue.

Government sources said that during the coalition talks, leaders of Bavaria's conservative Christian Social Union Party agreed to drop their long-standing opposition to early talks on short-range missiles.

The position paper also reiterates Kohl's view that a West German decision on deployment of the modernized weapons is not necessary until 1991 or 1992.

The policy document urges the United States and the Soviet Union to negotiate on reduction of the missiles during the interim.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Juergen Chrobog said the ruling coalition parties agreed on the common stand on the missile issue during an intensive round of talks in Bonn late Thursday.

Chrobog refused to give details until NATO allies had been informed of the results of the talks.

Government spokesman Hans Klein said Kohl had telephoned President Bush on Friday to inform him of the West German position. He refused to elaborate.

Strife endangers perestroika

MOSCOW (AP) — The Kremlin's ideology chief said Friday that ethnic strife can kill President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's restructuring effort, and he pledged that republics will gain more autonomy under reforms expected this year.

Vadim A. Medvedev spoke at a meeting dedicated to the birthday of Soviet founder Vladimir I. Lenin as the country struggles with the aftermath of a clash between protesters and soldiers that killed 20 people in Georgia's capital, Tbilisi.

A member of the Soviet Union's new parliament charged in separate remarks that officials in Moscow knew in advance that the military would charge protesters in the April 9 independence demonstration.

Medvedev said: "The party is convinced the solution of the complicated problems of national relations is impossible outside perestroika." He said perestroika, or restructuring, "cannot be implemented without the cooperation, mutual action and unity of Soviet peoples."

"It is important that one nation not be set against another," he said in his nationally televised speech.

"We firmly say 'yes' to national sentiments and national pride, 'no' to national exclusivity and antagonism."

Soviet officials have promised that the policy-making Communist Party Central Committee will meet this year to take up ethnic issues that have caused tensions in the Caucasus republics, the Baltics and elsewhere.

That meeting had been scheduled for summer, but Medvedev indicated the problems might be discussed at a meeting next week.

Other top officials have confirmed that the Central Committee will meet Tuesday, and Medvedev told the gathering that the issue will come up at the next Central Committee meeting.

The ruling Politburo, at a meeting Thursday, told the Georgian Communist Party Central Committee to investigate the April 9 clash and take measures to improve party work and "consolidate social forces on the platform of perestroika," the official Tass news agency reported Friday.

Medvedev said: "Great attention will be paid to the creation of real conditions for the full-blood econom, governmental-legal, and cultural functioning of the republics, to the strengthening of the status of autonomy, to the carrying out of the rights of national minorities including the formation of national regions, rural and village councils, and the securing of rights and freedoms for Soviet citizens of all nationalities."

At a meeting earlier Friday, a newly elected member of the Congress of People's Deputies charged that Moscow officials knew in advance of the military's violent dispersal of protesters in Tbilisi April 9.

Eldar Shengelaya told a meeting at the Soviet Union of Filmmakers that members of the Communist Party's policy-making Central Committee "couldn't have not known about it."

Shengelaya, a Georgian, was one of six new deputies who wrote a critical report on the authorities' actions in Tbilisi that was published in the latest weekly edition of Moscow News.

He spoke after officials of the Filmmakers Union showed film of the clash, including bodies of the dead and interviews.

Jordanians riot about prices

SALT, Jordan (AP) — Hundreds of rioters smashed bank windows, looted buildings and pelted police officers with rocks Friday as prices caused by price increases spread to northern Jordan.

Troops banned Moslems from weekly prayers in troubled southern cities in an attempt to prevent unrest, which has killed eight people.

In Salt, a city of 100,000 12 miles north of Amman, children played inside shattered offices and hundreds of people milled around on the glass-strewn streets.

Demonstrators called for the ouster of Prime Minister Zaid Rifai, whom they blame for austerity measures and degrading living standards. They shouted support for King Hussein.

"We are fed up with this government. They have stolen all our money," said a man in his 60s who refused to give his name. He said demonstrators "trust the king's leadership and we know he will respond."

Riots also occurred Thursday night in the northern towns of Madaba and Taysay.

It was the first time disturbances had spread beyond the south since the unrest began Tuesday in the southern city of Maan. The demonstrators came in response to price increases of 10 percent to 50 percent on gasoline, cigarettes, heating oil and other commodities.

The increases were imposed Sunday as part of an agreement with the International Monetary Fund to reschedule Jordan's $6 billion foreign debt. They came out of rising unemployment and soaring inflation.

Residents of Maan and other southern cities said soldiers prevented people from attending Friday prayers at mosques. Cancellation of Friday prayers is highly unusual in an Islamic country.

The Koran, Islam's holy book, calls on Moslems to participate in the ceremony, and most take it as a binding duty.

Government officials earlier had hinted that Moslem fundamentalists had inflamed the unrest, the worst domestic violence since the 1970-71 war between the army and Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas.

Most of the rioting has involved native Jordanians, not the Palestinian half of the population.

An official statement read on state-run radio said four civilians and one policeman had died in Maan, and it blamed the deaths on "shootings by the rioters."

Residents of the city earlier had blamed the civilian deaths on the army, although they said rioters also were firing weapons.

Three other people were reported killed in Mazar, 55 miles south of Amman.

About 1,000 people demonstrated Thursday night in Taysay, a town 40 miles northwest of Amman.

Mayor Mahmoud Awneh said rioters smashed windows in a school and the town hall. He denounced the riot, but also criticized the price rises.

"They shouldn't have raised the prices so much," he said. "They should have increased them slowly ... When you do it 50 percent, the people can't afford it."

Relatives of Communist Party members said government agents arrested about 100 party members overnight after the party distributed a leaflet demanding the government scrap the price rises.

China hailstorm death toll reaches 87

BEIJING (AP) — The death toll from a hailstorm that ripped through southwest China's Sichuan province has reached 87, the official Xinhua News Agency said Friday.

About 4,200 people in 10 cities were injured in Thursday's storm, which caused an estimated $40 million in damage in the hardest-hit city of Luzhou.

The report quoted Sichuan officials as saying 90,000 homes were damaged in Luzhou, and 40 percent of the windows and doors in high buildings were damaged. Fifty-two air force training aircraft stationed in Luzhou were damaged.

More than 60,000 houses in Gulin County and 4,300 in Zigong City were destroyed, the officials said.

The storm struck shortly after midnight and continued until 4 a.m. Thursday, pelting the area with hailstorms measuring 1 inch in diameter and winds up to 63 mph.

Queen Elizabeth celebrates birthday

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II celebrated her 63rd birthday Friday by conferring honorary colonel-in-chief titles on two of her children and two relatives by marriage.

The titles honors an army regiment's achievements by giving it contact with Buckingham Palace and occasional visits by a royal figurehead.

It was the first such title for the queen's second son Prince Andrew, an active naval officer, and for the Staffordshire Regiment which he now heads.

Princess Anne's title was for the London Officer Training Corps which links London University and the army. She has 10 similar titles for regiments in Britain, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

The queen's daughter-in-law, Princess Diana, who already held the title for a British and a Canadian regiment, gained her third to head the 13th-18th Hussars.

Its 270-year history spans the 1815 battle of Waterloo, the 1854 charge of the Light Brigade, the Boer War relief of Ladysmith in 1900 and the World War II invasion of Normandy in 1944.

The Duchess of Gloucester, whose husband is a cousin of the queen, was made colonel in chief of the Royal Irish Rangers.

The queen is colonel in chief of 36 regiments.

Mellencamp hears his song on radio too soon

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indiana rocker John Cougar Mellencamp grabbed his car phone as soon as he heard one of the songs from his soon-to-be-released album being played too early on the radio.

Mellencamp called Dick Asher, president of Polygram, his record company, and had him obtain a court order to keep cuts from the album "Big Daddy" off the air.

Indianapolis radio station WFBQ-FM was playing a different cut each

Police officer resigns after dye prank

ROOSEVELT, Utah (AP) — A Roosevelt police officer who received a three-day suspension over a prank with dye at the city-city building last month has resigned from the force.

Kim Olson, who along with officer Steve Hooley was suspended after the dye was put on toilet paper in the men's room and on Mayor Lawrence Yack's desk, said Friday his resignation would take effect May 7.

The dye is used by police to catch criminals and is normally put on clothes in contact with the skin, after which it turns dark purple.

On March 27, the dye was placed on toilet paper in the men's room of the city-city building and on Yack's desk. Brad Hancock, city administrator, said the prank "turned more destructive than funny."

Yack's shirt and tie were ruined when he rubbed the dye from his desk on his clothes, and one city worker who blew his nose in the rest room got the substance on his shirt and pants.

Yack suspended the officers for two weeks, but the city council later reduced the suspensions. Olson was given an additional day because he had been formally warned following another prank, Hancock said.

The joke was not a malicious attack, but rather a harmless prank that's been blown-out of proportion, Olson said.

He said he and Hooley immediately apologized for the incident and offered to make restitution for the damaged clothing.

hour Wednesday even though the official release date is May 4.

"Sometimes it's worth breaking the rules a little for an exclusive, but once we take the cease-and-desist we were legally obligated to stop playing it," said WFBQ program director Michael Hughes. "It's just a case of the wrong people — John himself — actually hearing it."

John Denver walks from damaged plane

HOLBROOK, Ariz. (AP) — Entertainer John Denver flew off in another plane shortly after walking away from his damaged biplane after landing here.

The accident occurred after Denver's plane landed Thursday afternoon on a flight from Carefree, Ariz., to Santa Fe, N.M., with only Denver aboard, police and Federal Aviation Administration officials said.

Denver declined medical treatment and later left on another plane, Holbrook police spokeswoman Mary Benavidez said.

An FAA duty officer in Los Angeles said he understood Denver's plane was damaged when it spun around horizontally, possibly after being blown by a gust of wind, while taxiing after landing.

The duty officer, who declined to give his name, said the plane on which Denver continued his trip to Santa Fe probably was a charter arranged after the accident.

Denver's plane was a Waco biplane, the duty officer said. He said he didn't know details of the damage.

Larry King says he loves women, smoking

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry King, a radio and television personality, says he loves women and smoking.

"I love women, but I'm not in love with any particular woman, and, despite my reputation, I'm not a womanizer," King, 55, is quoted as saying in the May issue of Lear's magazine.

"Womanizers don't like women, I think."

King, who conducts radio and television interview programs, also told magazine editor Frances Lear that he has regretfully given up smoking since a heart attack. "Smoking is one of the all-time great habits," he said.

"Better than feeling around?" asked Lear.

Critics don't bother Bon Jovi group

SANFRA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Never mind that most critics consider Bon Jovi the musical equivalent of the Alaska oil spill. He says he'll just revel in popular adulation and dock the harpoons.

Bon Jovi, 27, and his band of the same name, have layered muted heavy metal music with melodies in such albums as "Slippery When Wet," which sold 9 million copies in the United States, and "New Jersey," 4 million.

With sales like that, you can let the critics take their shots. "I realize that America loves success, and they hate successful people," Bon Jovi, 27, said Tuesday.

Hundreds of expensive comic books stolen

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Holy sacrilege! Someone stole hundreds of comic books worth more than $5,000 from Craig Barnett's The Comic Book Shop, but a concerned foster parent's call led to the apparent recovery of some of the loot.

Five of the stolen comic books were of the Batman and Robin series. The theft came as the capped crusader and the boy wonder celebrate their 50th anniversary and await the release of their new motion picture this summer.

"It's like stealing from a church," said Barnett, who said he noticed a rear window smashed and some baseball-sized rocks on the floor when he opened shop Thursday morning.

The burglar apparently climbed through the window and took a cardboard box with about 300 comic books from a shelf. The culprit then scooped up some "hot" books — "the OOH and AAH collection" as Barnett calls it — from an unlocked glass case at the front of the store. Later Thursday, KIQ-TV said it received a call from a man who identified himself as a foster parent. The man said he noticed stacks of comic books in his 14-year-old foster son's room and notified police, but they didn't respond.

A reporter for the TV station went to the man's apartment and noticed stacks of plastic-sealed comic books bearing the comic shop's label in the foster son's room.

Burley Jiffy Stop gets fast start on lottery

BURLEY - Jiffy Stop got off to a jiffy start with the state lottery. The Burley convenience store is the first Idaho business to apply for an Idaho lottery instant ticket retail certificate. Owner Dean Taylor's application arrived at lottery headquarters just two days after more than 900 forms were sent to businesses across the state. Taylor said he filled it out the minute he got it Wednesday.

"To receive the first one two days after we mailed them is a good indication people are excited about selling Idaho lottery tickets," said lottery director Wally Hedrick. Taylor supports the lottery and also sees selling tickets as a way to acquaint new customers with his store.

Applications will continue to be available to interested businesses. For more information call 334-2600.

Market advertising attracts the wrong kind of customer

TWIN FALLS - Advertising slogans aren't supposed to be so persuasive.

The day after an advertisement trumpeted Albertson's Food Center as "Number 1 in Saving You Money," store employees caught a shopper helping himself to a 100 percent discount on a cart full of goods, according to police reports.

The man, unnamed in police reports, was caught as he started loading the merchandise into a pickup at 10 p.m. Thursday.

But when four employees and a bystander confronted him, he started pestering them with hot merchandise and escaped on foot.

The pickup was towed away and the loot, which included pliers, engine oil, Oscar Meyer hot dogs, two boxes of diapers and $20 worth of rib eye steaks, was confiscated. Police didn't name a suspect, and no charges were filed as of Friday.

Authorities investigate possible Castleford arson

CASTLEFORD - An early-morning fire at a blacksmith's shop-turned-storage shed is being investigated as a possible arson.

"There's no logical reason for it to burn, so we're looking at the possibility it was arson," said Harold Jensen, Twin Falls County chief deputy.

The 4:34 a.m. fire destroyed the shed, on the corner of Main and Rome streets, and its contents, Jensen said. He estimated damage at $25,000.

"Everything was a total loss," Jensen said. The building's owner, Orvel Brown, said he doubted the fire was arson-related.

Bald Mountain lift tickets may reach $35 next year

SUN VALLEY - Lift tickets for Bald Mountain next season may rise by $2 to $35 for a day of skiing for adults, Shannon Besoyan of Sun Valley Co. said.

The daily price for discount card holders will rise $1, to $18 on weekends and $21 weekdays, but the cost of the discount cards will remain the same.

With Bald Mountain closing Sunday, Sun Valley Co. has enjoyed its best ski season since 1981-82 with a final skier count of about 420,000 - a major improvement over last year, Besoyan said.

Investigators probe Idaho State Bank operations

The Associated Press

GLENS FERRY - Federal investigators are looking into possible irregularities at Idaho State Bank, a financially troubled bank with three branches in the Magic Valley. U.S. Attorney Maurice Ellsworth confirmed that a federal task force, made up of the FBI, Internal Revenue Service criminal division, Federal Reserve Board and his office has been investigating the Glens Ferry-based bank since August.

Ellsworth would not discuss who or what is being probed, or when the investigation might end. Bank spokesmen also declined to comment.

James Echtermeyer, Idaho State's new president and chief executive officer, said the privately held institution, which generally offers the only close-at-hand banking in the towns it serves, is not in danger of failing.

"I sure as hell wouldn't be here if I thought that," said Echtermeyer, who came from Colorado about two months ago to take over operations.

Idaho State Bank, which has offices in seven small towns, including Bellevue, Hagerman and Glens Ferry, suffered a net operating loss of almost $4 million in 1988.

The bank is seeking an infusion of capital to bolster its finances, which were racked by big loan losses. But it is "just about even" for the first three months of 1989, Echtermeyer said.

With the recent upswing in the area's farm economy, he said, "The bank has a lot of potential for recovery."

Customers' knowledge about the bank's situation and have not stopped their patronage, he said. "We have not had any runs."

Echtermeyer declined comment on the investigation, as did bank attorney David Lincoln of Boise.

"The task force, armed with a search warrant, conducted an on-site inspection" of the bank last Oct. 28, according to a document filed in 4th District Court litigation by lawyers for Boise businessman Pete Eliopoulos.

The bitterly contested legal battle between the bank and Eliopoulos, dating to 1987, relates to the financing of the now-defunct Spring Creek Winery, a Boise-area business he owned.

The bank sued Eliopoulos, charging he defaulted on $1 million in loans. In turn, Eliopoulos, accusing the bank of fraud and violating banking and racketeering laws, sued for tens of millions of dollars in 4th District and federal courts.

The bank denies those allegations and is attempting to take him into involuntary bankruptcy to collect debts. Decisions are pending on both the bankruptcy and the bank's motion to dismiss his 4th District Court claims.

According to Federal Reserve data, the bank's net operating loss was $3.9 million in

Driver Dwayne Tucker controls 'Tower One' ladder from platform

Twin Falls' custom-built ladder-pumper truck will boost city's firefighting capability

Twin Falls receives new custom-built fire truck

It's 'state-of-the-art'; will last 30 years

By KIRK MITCHELL
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - One year and $429,000 after putting in an order, the city has a fire truck that can shoot 1,500 gallons of water per minute from heights of 102 feet.

"This is the most impressive, large piece of rolling stock that we have ever had by a country mile," said City Engineer Gary Young. "It's big, red, shiny and all that."

Gruman Emergency Products, whose parent company Gruman Aeronautics builds the Navy's F-14 fighter jets, delivered the custom-built ladder-pumper truck Thursday night.

On the same night, about 20 firefighters, spouses and children washed the truck to give it a shimmering luster after its 2,000-mile trip, said firefighter Dwayne Tucker.

The "state-of-the-art" truck will boost the city's firefighting capability and is expected to last for 30 years, said Phil Clough, fire division commander.

A big advantage of the new truck over the city's only other ladder truck, which is 27 years old, is that it takes fewer men to operate. That will save labor costs, Clough said.

A rotating nozzle on the ladder's basket, fed from a built-in hose, will enable firefighters to change the water's direction without moving the ladder, he said.

Also connected to the basket is an oxygen hose, which will free firefighters from wearing heavy oxygen tanks, Tucker said. Powerful lights attached to the basket will illuminate fire scenes at night, he said.

"It gives you a good secure feeling," he said.

The ladder can be used at its maximum height with 50 mph winds and with a quarter-inch layer of ice on the basket, Clough said.

"This important ability would provide a much safer and more efficient working environment for all emergency personnel," Clough said.

He said because the truck will improve the city's fire insurance rating will improve.

"We can take this to every fire," Clough said. The other ladder truck was only used in about 10 percent of the fires.

He said next week a Gruman expert will spend at least three days in town showing firefighters how to use the truck. The truck will not be used until all the equipment is installed and firefighters know how to use it, he said. That may take a few weeks.

Once the new truck is ready for action, the older ladder truck will be placed of reserve status, he said.

Tucker said firefighters are overjoyed with the new truck.

"Not very many firefighters get to use a truck like this," he said.

All Castleford seniors will attend graduation

By DIANE SCHORZMAN
 Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD - High school seniors here who haven't met graduation requirements can go through ceremonies May 25 but the policy will revert to the old system beginning May 1990.

Despite a survey of community opinion showing the majority of those questioned favor the old system, the School Board decided this week to stick with its February decision to allow all seniors who don't meet all the requirements to go through graduation ceremonies. They will be handed an empty diploma folder.

The board stated graduation is too near to change the policy again.

Most of the schools' teachers also oppose the idea, vocational agriculture teacher Andy Wiseman told the board last month.

"We feel the students should not go through the line unless they've earned their diplomas," Wiseman told the board on behalf of the teachers.

The board then decided to survey local residents and found that most surveyed agreed with the teachers.

The board, however, will adopt a new policy, effective next year, allowing only those seniors meeting all graduation requirements to be in graduation ceremonies.

Two elementary teachers, Alice Baer and Quinn Barnes, have resigned their positions effective this fall, Chairman Fred Schaefer told the board.

Baer is retiring after 35 years, the last seven at Castleford. "I loved it," she says. "I've spent some of my happiest years at Castleford."

Baer added, "Castleford has a really good staff."

The board also received a resignation from second-grade teacher Quinn

Barnes, who plans to complete a fifth year of schooling at Washington State University in Pullman. Quinn, who has taught six years in the Spokane area, would like to teach in the Spokane area.

She'll begin school this summer.

In other business, the board:

- Moved to accept a $9,240 proposal from Satellite Technology at Twin Falls to supply the equipment the district needs to hook up with the College of Southern Idaho's long-distance learning program. The district will receive a $8,100 grant from the state to help buy the equipment, Erickson said.

- The board tabled a decision on what classes to buy.

- Accepted a sealed bid of $25 a share from Vivian A. Deas of Buhl for five shares of unused city water.

- Moved to combine students with the Buhl School District to form a summer driver's education session.

Price slump threatens Cassia mine opening

The Associated Press

BURLEY - Slumping prices are threatening the opening of a new gold mine in southern Cassia County, but Noranda Mining Co. officials say the soft market may only mean a delay in starting up the operation.

"We're probably six weeks away from making a decision on it," Project Manager Dan McLaughlin said this week.

He said the company will concentrate on the economic viability of the project, southeast of Oakley, as it comes to a final decision this spring. The area is in the Black Pine Division of the Sawtooth National Forest.

"It's a good property and has good potential," McLaughlin said. "We're still real hopeful."

But the price for gold has fallen about 10 percent from the $420-an-ounce when the year began, and one Idaho precious metals dealer said he would reconsider the project if it were his decision.

"Why not hold off until they can make a fair profit," dealer Hank Pahlhas of Boise said.

Forest Service Minerals Specialist Jim Wickel said the government had been expecting Noranda to reconsider the Magic Valley project for several weeks now.

But McLaughlin said the final operations plan is being finalized and "we hope to have it done in the next couple of weeks."

He said exploration work in the district will continue and the project could continue even if the Toronto-based company decides to postpone open gold mining due to depressed prices.

The time schedule for obtaining necessary permits for the mining operations does give Noranda some leeway to reactivate the project in the near future.

Feds defuse dangerous ammunition

By CRAIG LINCOLN
 Times-News writer

BUHL - When Buhl police asked some 4-to-7-year-old boys where they got the bullets they were playing with Thursday night, the boys took police to a nearby storage shed.

"Good Lord, there was small ammunition laying all over the ground," said Buhl police Sgt. Richard Floyd. Then he saw two artillery shells, 30 inches tall and nine inches in diameter, on the floor of the shed located in the 700 block of Linden Street.

The early-evening call about boys playing with .22-caliber bullets turned into a cleanup by federal experts.

Buhl Police Chief Les Cochran called in help from the Mountain-Home Air Force Base. Three Air Force explosive-disposal experts and a judge advocate responded and cleaned out the shed, Floyd said.

More than 20 explosive items, including two nine-inch naval gun projectiles of unknown origin, were taken from the shed. Also found were Army clothes with the name "Carlton" on a shirt pocket.

Floyd said he has a suspect, but he wouldn't release a name.

"It is against the law to have this kind of stuff in the city - especially where children have access to it," Floyd said.

Jackpot plans to replace equipment

By KATHY VITER
Times-News correspondent

JACKPOT The Jackpot Advisory Board recently approved accepting bids for a new greenscraper for the golf course.

The equipment is expected to cost $10,000-$15,000. Equipment is wearing out, greenskeeper Mike Magee told the board.

In a related item, heaters that keep waterpipes at the course from freezing will need to be repaired due to damage.

The board agreed to allow students to golf a design for the Jackpot Golf Course sign near Club 93. Although the city has received a year's extension, it is slated to be taken down due to federal regulations. Board members Carrie Yokum and high school art students have volunteered to paint it, redesign it and rehab it.

In other matters, work continues on the ballfield, Jay Snyder, liaison to the county, told the board. Rocks are being removed and new topsoil is planned for seeding, he said.

The sprinkler system installed earlier this year will be connected soon to the city system. The wet weather earlier this year slowed efforts until two weeks ago. There may be no grass for little league games for 30 days.

The board also discussed putting up bulletin boards at Club 93 and Cactus Pete's. Compliance with Biko family law, requiring that Biko family be posted on three bulletin boards. Bulletin boards have become increasingly difficult to find in Jackpot.

The board discussed Cactus Pete's proposal to pave and spruce up Keno Drive if the county will forego an agreement made when the Horseshoe Club was built to finish the street beside it by 1990.

Cactus Pete's needs additional water for its high rise project and plans to put in a 12-inch line to connect with the city water system.

The board will seek engineering information on the project.

SPANISH FORK, Utah (AP) — A Salem man was hospitalized Friday following what authorities described as a minor explosion at the Trojan Powder Plant — the second blast at the site in 10 weeks.

Junior Underwood, 62, was taken to Mountain View Hospital in nearby Payson, where he was treated for lacerations and bruises. The hospital said Underwood also suffered soft tissue damage to his left ear.

Underwood later was transferred to Utah Valley Regional Medical Center, where he underwent surgery to amputate his right long finger and was treated for a laceration above the left eye and ruptured eardrums, a nursing supervisor said.

Underwood was "stable and doing well" late Friday.

State ed board rejects changes in teacher certification

POCATELLO (AP) — State Schools Superintendent Jerry Evans says it's always hard to get people to support something they don't understand. An alternative teacher certification scheme is no exception.

The Professional Standards Commission worked on that for almost two years and I thought had met most of the serious objections," Evans said Friday after the Idaho Board of Education rejected the plan.

"Apparently that was not the case," he said.

The board voted 6-2 against Evans' bid to adopt the new policy and then sent it back to the commission. The panel will have an Aug. 15 deadline to submit a new proposal, but Evans said Friday's action means the new process cannot be used by anyone for the upcoming school year.

Individuals and three state legislators supported the change. But the Idaho Education Association and the Professional Standards Commission said it needed more study.

"The proposals shouldn't have come as a surprise to anyone, Evans said, but most people don't worry about a change in a rule until it gets down to the final stage of adoption. Many, many people were vaguely aware something was going on, but had never looked at that specific proposal until the last 60 days."

He said the IEA members on the task force, that drew up the new guidelines, had "reluctantly" supported it when the commission adopted it. But the IEA Delegate Assembly voted it down two weeks ago.

Once a new proposal comes to the board, Evans said it stands a good chance of being adopted but not until the 1990-91 school year.

One speaker called the rejected plan a step backwards after years of effort to improve teacher quality.

"This is not realistic at all," Karen McCall of Pocatello said. "It does not fit in line with what we have been trying to do for the last 10 years."

The commission will hold public hearings and bring the issue back to the board in time for its September meeting.

Board Chairman Charles "Tiny" Grant and other board members said they felt there was much confusion and misunderstanding about the proposal and more hearings were needed.

Some legislators said they liked the idea of allowing experienced people with college degrees and specialized knowledge to teach without going through several years of formal education training.

"We need to encourage our very best people to become teachers and get into the schools," said House Education Committee Chairman Janet Hay, R-Nampa.

The Department of Education proposal would have allowed, under specific restrictions, people to become fulltime teachers without going through the formal four years of education training. In fact, Evans said before the session that he feared the proposal was so restrictive that even if adopted, few people would be able to use it.

"If I had my druthers, I would make it not nearly so difficult," said Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly. "It hinders people that people with a high degree of skill are excluded from the classroom while people without those skills hold down those same jobs in the classrooms."

"I think it's got real merit, and you should go ahead with it," said Senate Education Committee Chairman Jerry Thorne, R-Nampa.

Thorne said he took education in college, and when he was finished he felt he had a lot of teaching skills but was not very strong in the subjects he was supposed to teach.

"It is sorely needed in my estimate," said Thorne. "Industry has been taking away our brightest people; this is a way to get some of them back."

Twenty-year teaching veteran Reed Moser of Idaho Falls told the board he was concerned about the knowledge that some people bring into the classrooms. It is unprofessional not to take the needs of the kids first.

Moser said it was possible that some education interests want to keep shortages in certain fields like special education to improve their bargaining power.

Zinser postpones start at U of I

POCATELLO (AP) — Elisabeth Zinser, the new University of Idaho president, won't be starting the job until July 24, three weeks later than originally planned.

Mrs. Zinser is to become the first woman president at Idaho, succeeding Richard Gibb. Gibb was scheduled to retire July 24.

The Board of Education approved a letter from the new president Friday, moving the starting date back to July 24.

Mrs. Zinser, vice chancellor at the University of North Carolina-Greensboro, said she wanted to spend a two-week vacation with her parents in California.

"Then I want to read and reflect on the vast array of books on Idaho I have received from my many new friends out there," she said.

In wrapping up its meeting in Pocatello, the board also elected George Alvarez of Caldwell as its new president.

Alvarez, who retired as comptroller for Boise Cascade Corp., succeeds Charles "Tiny" Grant.

Gary Fay, Twin Falls insurance man, was elected vice president and J. Ray Cox, Coeur d'Alene lawyer, will serve as secretary.

Panel OKs 'distance learning' without teachers

POCATELLO (AP) — Is it necessary to have a certified teacher on the receiving end of televised satellite education programs?

The state Board of Education decided against it Friday, after school superintendents said the requirement could sharply increase costs and eliminate advantages of satellite classes.

"If we have to hire teachers, we might as well have live classes in the first place," said Ron Erickson, superintendent at Castelford.

The board gave formal approval to regulations covering "distance learning" or televised classes. It allows high school students to accumulate up to 20 semester credits toward graduation.

But if the classes are not interactive, with two-way communication between students and instructor, the student can get no more than eight hours credit from that source.

Superintendents mainly from small, rural areas which benefit from the televised classes, said they felt no need for a requirement to have a certified teacher with the students on the receiving end, since the teacher on the sending must be certified.

"The cost of having a certified teacher in the room plus the registration fee for the distance learning course will make the program prohibitive," said a letter from Midvale superintendent Jim Kantola.

Sue Mosseau, representing the Professional Standards Commission which urged the board to require certified teachers on the receiving end, said there is more to teaching than instruction.

Teachers also must know classroom management, methods of learning and discipline, she said. Also, many classes are not two-way, and if a certified teacher is not present, there will be no one qualified to answer questions.

She said it would be a bad idea if a student could get nearly half his high school credits by television with no instructor present. Ms. Mosseau said satellite programs were set up to allow districts to offer more courses, not to save money.

Alan Smith, executive director of the Idaho School Boards Association, urged adoption of the rules without the teacher requirement.

"Electronic education is where it needs to be at in Idaho," he said.

Board member Gary Fay, Twin Falls, urged other members not to ignore the school boards.

"Why not just let the Professional Standards Commission come in here and make standards for us if we are going to ignore the school boards association?" he said.

At the request of schools Superintendent Jerry Evans, the requirement for a certified teacher was modified to say only that an adult paraprofessional is required on the receiving end, but a certified teacher is recommended.

VA nursing home begins building without all funds

POCATELLO (AP) — Officials will not know until August whether their $1.6 million commitment to a new veterans nursing home in southeastern Idaho will net the promised $3 million from the federal government to complete the project.

But the state Division of Veterans Services is starting to spend the state share, confident the Veterans Administration will hold up its end of the deal.

"I've received preliminary approval from the VA to go ahead," said state Veterans Services Administrator Gary Bermeosolo. The Division of Public Works has been asked to request proposals from architects for the design of the facility.

Tentative plans call for the Pocatello home, located at the Idaho State University Research Park, to have 60 nursing care beds and 22 domiciliary beds. A VA outpatient clinic currently renting space at the park would be attached to the nursing home.

The state currently has only one veterans nursing home, located in boise. Veterans groups have been pressing, not only for the Pocatello facility, but also for one in the northern part of the state.

Bermeosolo conceded Idaho was competing for a share of $42 million allocated by the VA for construction of new state nursing homes nationwide. Project requests have totaled $100 million, but he said the fact the state has already committed its share of cash for the project gives the Pocatello facility an edge.

"We have moved into the first-priority category," he said. "The question is how many first priorities are we competing with, and where do we fall among that number?"

"It's my understanding that this type of project, a nursing home with a VA outpatient clinic attached, is unique and may be a prototype for other states," Bermeosolo said.

If the federal government does not approve the project, he said the state will pull back and campaign for the money a year from now.

"Our matching funds will still be there and we'd have the design sketches," Bermeosolo said.

FMC offers some early retirement

POCATELLO (AP) — FMC Corp. is offering retirement incentives to about 30 senior employees in a bid to slash 5 percent off the payroll costs at its Pocatello elemental phosphorus processing plant.

Spokesman Mike Smith said Friday the reduction in force, to be achieved voluntarily, should shave $1.25 million from its annual payroll.

"We have made every effort to design a program which will protect and preserve affected employee retirement benefits," Smith said.

Salaried and hourly-paid personnel handling a variety of jobs throughout the plant will be offered the incentives. Smith said the program has not been finalized but compensation will depend on length of service and age.

Increased competition, declining sales, technological advances and the spread of phosphate detergent bans prompted the company's decision to launch a cost-cutting campaign, he said.

"Over the course of time, our industry has undergone dramatic restructuring," Smith said in a statement read to the plant's morning and afternoon shifts.

"Change has been accelerating for a number of reasons, and it has become evident that if we are to be successful in meeting the challenges which lie before us, we must act quickly, decisively and aggressively," he said. "The bare truth is that ours is a declining, increasingly competitive industry."

Horseshoe Bend may oust police chief

HORSESHOE BEND (AP) — One hundred of the 700 residents of Horseshoe Bend have signed petitions to force the ouster of their one-man police force, Chief Charles McConnell.

Residents presented the petitions to Mayor Doyle Woods and City Council members at a meeting Wednesday night. Woods said the town, 28 miles north of Boise on Idaho Highway 55, would take no action until he knew more about the situation.

"I don't know what the problem is for sure," Woods said Thursday. "Until I find out, I don't know what action the City Council will take."

A public meeting on the issue is scheduled May 4.

The main problem was that he didn't patrol the city and the city streets," Councilman Tony Kolar said. "The city police vehicle was parked at City Hall too much."

Hla Beyers, who has lived in Horseshoe Bend for 30 years, said she began the petition drive because she grew tired of hearing people complaining, but not acting on their complaints.

She said the biggest problem was that much of the traffic going through town travels at 40 to 50 mph.

"People think they don't have to slow down," Mrs. Beyers said.

"All of our kids have to go down this highway to get to the school," she said. And some people believe McConnell doesn't spend enough time parking along the road, where the sight of his car will encourage drivers to slow down.

Federal, in turn, had argued it had exhausted its duty to defend against the lawsuit, while the others alleged they had no duty to defend.

Emery Mining Co., operated the Wilberg at the time of the Dec. 19, 1984, fire that killed 26 men and one woman. As part of its operating agreement, Emery carried four layers of general liability insurance worth $50.5 million on UP&L's behalf, with Federal responsible for the first $600,000.

The judge noted that Federal had agreed to pay for a "reasonable insurance defense counsel's fee."

Bill would require growers to support spud promotion

By SUSAN HANSEN and AMY GAMERMAN
States News Service

WASHINGTON — The free promotional ride for a handful of potato growers and importers may be over.

Republican Sens. James McClure and Steve Symms are cosponsors of a bill that would require both foreign and domestic growers that sell potatoes here to contribute their fair share to the National Potato Promotion Board, which works to boost U.S. potato consumption.

Currently, the board collects 2 cents per each hundred pounds sold from U.S. potato growers. But at least five percent, including some of the largest growers, take advantage of a voluntary fee system that lets them request refunds of that money at the end of the year.

The bill, also sponsored by Maine Sens. George Mitchell and William Cohen would make payment of the fee mandatory for all domestic growers and for foreign producers who export their product to the U.S.

"The fact that almost all small growers pay the assessment shows that the assessment is not overly burdensome," McClure said. "Both foreign producers and many larger domestic producers don't pay and are getting a free ride."

The potato promotion board, based in Denver, devises national advertising campaigns and conducts marketing research for potato growers. The board has also sponsored nutritional studies.

"The board has really educated the consuming public about the nutritional value of potatoes," said Del Raybould, chairman of the group's board of directors and a potato grower in Rexburg.

Raybould praised the bill as a plan that will equalize the burden of promotion and advertising among all of the growers, large and small alike.

Canadian potato growers who market their crop in this country have benefited unfairly from the board's work, Raybould said. "We have seen a real increase in the number of potatoes that are marketed on the East coast," Raybould said. "They have really had a free ride on all our promotion and marketing, and it has increased their acreage."

The legislation has been endorsed by the Potato Growers of Idaho and the Maine Potato Board.

Judge rules against insurance company in Wilberg case

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Emery Mining Co.'s insurance carrier cannot contest or refuse contributions to a $22 million settlement between Utah Power & Light Co. and the families of 27 miners who perished in the 1984 Wilberg Mine fire, a federal judge has ruled.

In a 32-page ruling issued Friday, U.S. District Judge David Sam granted Utah Power's motion for a partial summary judgment against Federal Insurance Co., Emery's primary carrier, and excess carriers International, Twin Cities Fire and First State insurance companies.

The utility, which owns the Wilberg Mine and other coal mines in eastern Utah, had argued that since the insurance companies had not objected to the settlement in a timely fashion, they could neither contest the reasonableness of the settlement nor renege on promises not to challenge the amount.

Utah Power also argued the carriers could not challenge the reasonableness of the settlement because they had abandoned the defense of the lawsuit and refused to settle the claims against Utah Power within policy limits.

negotiated contract, the local was effectively broken, said Vincent Stroops, international representative for United Paperworkers International.

Subsequent attempts to bring complaints of unfair labor practices against Excel to the National Labor Relations Board have proven fruitless, he said.

Stroops said he was disappointed the local had disbanded.

Paperworkers Union Local 750 disbands

LEWISTON (AP) — United Paperworkers Union Local 750 has disbanded and donated part of the money in its treasury to the Valley Boys and Girls Club in Lewiston.

Marvin D. Hall, president of the Central Labor Council, said Thursday that the $1,500 donation was a memorial to a group of men and women who fought a battle for a better way of life and lost.

Local 750 was the certified bargaining agent for Excel Pulpworkers. The union was formed in January 1986 and its members became embroiled in a bitter four-month strike against the company in 1987.

About half of Excel's 80 truck drivers at the time walked out during the strike, which was prompted by a dispute over the method of paying wages. But by the third week, the ranks of striking workers had been depleted to about 15.

Briefly

Gooding Fair Board hosts spring cutting

GOODING — Champion horses from throughout the Northwest will compete this weekend in the third annual Gooding County Fair Board Spring Cutting.

Last year, more than 275 entries competed for $10,200 in prize money in the two-day event.

"This year, we anticipate as many (entries) or more," says Fair Board Chairman Lucy Osborne. "It's been rated one of the top cuttings in the state."

Events at the Gooding fairgrounds arena will begin each day at 8:30 a.m. Announcer will be Eldon Thompson of Bliss. York Cattle Co. of Bliss will furnish livestock and Gooding Sutures Farms of America will have a food booth.

The event is free to the public. The rider cannot use reins or any other visible aids to guide the horse. "He has to know his horse and ride to give that horse freedom," Osborne says.

Other "turn back" riders keep the show interesting by urging the cow toward the herd.

Each rider pays an entry fee that goes directly to prize money. This year, the fair board is adding $1,000 to the purse.

Pirates, Mariners make deal

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates, struggling offensively without three injured starters, traded pitcher Mike Dunne and promising minor leaguers Mark Merchant and Mike Walker to the Seattle Mariners on Friday for shortstop Rey Quinones and pitcher Bill Wilkinson.

The Pirates, who have been seeking a shortstop since last winter to replace the sick-fielding but punchless Rafael Bellard, said Quinones was expected to arrive during Friday night's game with Philadelphia.

Breland to take on Pineda

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Reach could be the difference Saturday when Mark Breland makes the first defense of his recently regained WBA welterweight title in a 12-round bout against Rafael Pineda of Colombia.

Breland, 6-foot-2, will enjoy an eight-inch height advantage over the undefeated Pineda in this match that was hastily put together less than a month ago.

Suns' Gilliam fined for brawl

NEW YORK (AP) — Armon Gilliam of the Phoenix Suns was suspended for two games and fined $7,500 by the NBA Friday as the result of his fight with Dwayne "Peezy" Washington of Miami that spilled over from the floor to the locker room.

Washington was fined $2,000 for his part in the incident that took place Wednesday night.

MOSCOW — The Idaho Fish and Game Commission has approved big game regulations for fall hunts designed to keep a grip on burgeoning populations of deer, elk and antelope, primarily in southern and eastern Idaho.

The commission voted Friday to offer extra antlerless deer tags in southeastern Idaho's Region 5, allowing all hunters a two-deer season limit.

It also approved 1,016 new controlled-hunt elk permits in eastern Idaho's Region 6, 1,650 second doe or fawn antelope tags for hunters statewide and 2,000 second tags for hunters to take additional antlerless deer in Unit 45 near Bliss, where ranchers were hit hard by big game depletion last winter.

Gov. Cecil Andrus, who addressed the commission meeting Friday in Moscow, cautioned that the harsh winter may have killed so many game animals that the additional tags could end up reducing herds too much.

Andrus acknowledged that the commission must evaluate its management policies to curtail damage to farms and ranches from marauding big game. But if information on winterkill shows an increased harvest by hunters is warranted, that action should be taken.

"If that's what it takes to thin the population, if that's what the experts say, then I'm with you," Andrus said.

The commissioners echoed the governor's concern.

"I'd like someone to convince me we should take 2,000 deer out of Unit 45," said Commissioner Norm Guth of Salmon, who later voted for the change.

"What we have is a carrying capacity of female deer reaching reproductive age," said Lonn Kuck, state wildlife game manager for the Department of Fish and Game.

"We expect a large explosion of deer this year," he said, adding that about 600 of the animals were seen recently in one all-female field alone near Bliss. Kuck said there is an estimated 9,000 deer in Unit 45.

Jerry Conley, director of the Department of Fish and Game, said wildlife managers have gained a good perspective on just how many big game animals were killed by winter weather statewide through aerials counts. Based on those surveys, he said, the increased tag allowances are justified.

The Legislature earmarked $500,000 from hunting and fishing license fee-receipts to compensate farmers that suffered depletion losses last winter. But Andrus said he still opposes using sportsmen license money to pay for damage caused when big game leave public lands stripped of adequate forage by grazing livestock.

While the commission increased deer, elk and antelope limits in some areas, black bear regulations were kept the same statewide, as were most mountain lion hunts.

However, two mountain lion hunts in central Idaho will be halted after five harvested females show up at Fish and Game check stations, and a Cassia County hunt will end when one female cat is taken.

"The mountain lion is the only successful carnivore now in North America," Morris Hornecker, a wildlife professor at

Money may dominate NFL draft on Sunday

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Sunday's NFL draft appears to be more a matter of bucks than of blocks.

Right after Troy Aikman signed with Dallas for $11.2 million over six years Thursday, the likely second choice, offensive tackle Tony Mandarich, said he wants even more from Green Bay.

The reasoning?

If Aikman, who will be the No. 1 choice in the draft by the Cowboys, gets more than three times Super Bowl winner Joe Montana, why shouldn't the Michigan State offensive tackle, whose overall scouting grades are almost a point-and-a-half higher than Aikman, get even more?

"I want a little bit more than that," said the 6-foot-6 inch, 315-pound Mandarich, who got 8.5 out of possible 9 from the NFL Scouting Combine compared to 7.6 for Aikman, who was ranked fourth.

"Who's the highest rated player coming out of college? I guess that speaks for itself."

Mandarich's demands, reported to be $8 million over five years or perhaps more, would be more than the $550,000 paid yearly to pro football's prototype offensive tackle, eight-time All-Pro Anthony Muñoz of Cincinnati.

It might also be enough to keep the Packers open until the last minute concerning trade bids — Chicago reportedly has offered to deal its two first-round picks, 11th and 12th and perhaps trading the pot with a quarterback to get him.

But Tom Brautzy, the Packers' vice-president, said of Mandarich: "If the draft were right at this moment, we'd go ahead and take him."

If the Chicago-Green Bay trade was unlikely, other teams seemed ready to pull the trigger, notably Washington, which is seeking running back Earnest Byner from Cleveland.

Though the Redskins have no No. 1 pick for the 16th time in 19 years, Byner's agent, Alan Herman, said Friday that the two teams have agreed on terms for the trade but that he must still negotiate a contract with Washington general manager Bobby Beathard.

"This could go right into the first round," said Herman, who is reportedly seeking a $600,000-a-year contract from the Redskins, who need a heavy-duty runner for their one-back offense.

"I wouldn't be talking to Bobby unless he felt he could arrange this deal. The deal can be done."

Kentucky nearing end of NCAA investigation

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — The end of the wait is near for Kentucky's beleaguered basketball program.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions will hear school officials plead their case regarding 18 allegations of wrongdoing Saturday in Charleston, S.C.

It was April 14, 1988, when the Los Angeles Daily News reported that a package sent via air freight to the father of recruit Chris Mills by assistant coach Dwane Casey was found unsealed and containing $1,000.

Fifty-three weeks, and another 17 allegations later, the NCAA probe is finally coming to an end with the date before the Committee on Infractions.

"I expect it to be an amicable meeting," UK President David Roselle said earlier this week.

The charges against the school range from improper recruiting to cheating on a college-entrance exam to failure to maintain administrative control of the program.

Roselle said the university simply wants to reach resolution of the allegations ... and begin with all good energy to rebuild our basketball program and to get it back on a very productive track.

"That's the outcome we will have from the meeting."

The Lexington Herald-Leader, quoting a source, reported last Sunday that the university does not dispute.

—The allegation that player Eric Manuel cheated on a college-entrance exam.

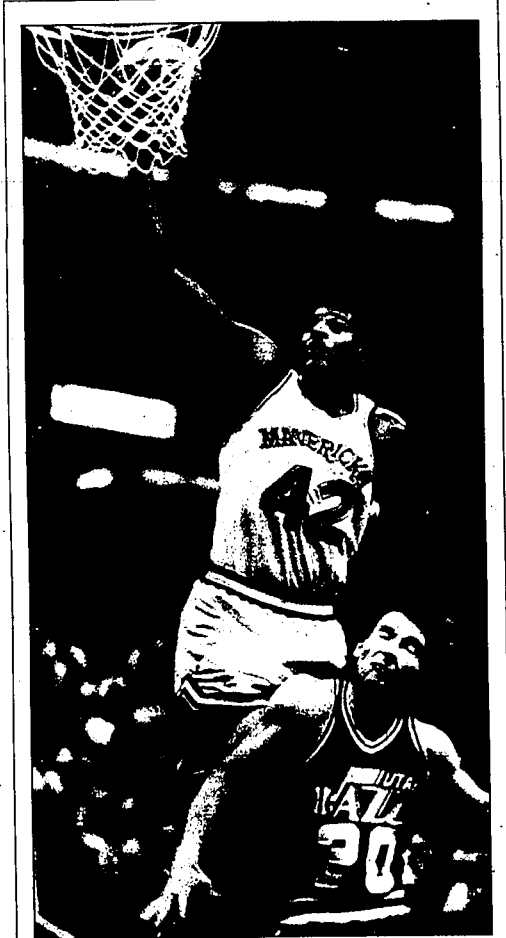

—That Manuel, teammate Sean Sutton and Case gave false and misleading information to the NCAA about travel to the test site.

—That $1,000 was sent to Mills' father.

The newspaper reported, however, that the university differed with the NCAA in that it considered the evidence was inconclusive that Casey sent the money.

The newspaper story also reported that three allegations would be dropped.

Those include one that talent scout Bill Chupel of Columbus, Ohio, brought a recruit to the campus in 1987 and two allegations that Casey improperly recruited Sean Higgins, a member of Michigan's national championship team.

Bruins face test against Pocatello

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Bruins will try for a breakthrough today in what is developing as a three-team race for the regular-season Region III Class A-1 high school baseball championship.

The Bruins will host the fast-improving Pocatello Indians today in a non-doubleheader at Harmon Park. Pogy, which lost two of its first three games this spring, is 10-4 overall and, more importantly, 2-1 in regional games. Twin Falls, now 16-3, has won eight in a row and is 3-1 in Region III.

Mnico, 9-3 overall, is also 3-1 in region.

"I really don't know anything about them and I haven't heard anything about them they split with Highland," said Bruin coach Bill Ingram of the Indians.

But Pogy coach Rick Parkin, whose ball club hasn't won in Twin Falls since 1985, is all too familiar with the Bruins.

The state championship last year that won the Bruins was the only one that Parkin. "We're going to have to play our best game to have a chance to beat them, and it looks like we're going to be without our best pitcher."

who separated his shoulder during football season, wrenched his knee sliding into second base in a game against Skylone on Wednesday. Wollenberger, who doubles as a second baseman, was hitting .414 and had a 3-1 pitching record. He would have opposed Bruin junior right-hander Chris Smith (5-0) in today's opener.

"Right now I'd say his status is doubtful," said Parkin. "If there's any doubt about his condition, we won't use him."

That means that Eric Forbis (2-1), a senior left-hander who owns a non-conference win over Minico this spring in the Mini-

Stover apparently out as girls coach

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — In a surprise move, the Twin Falls board of education apparently declined to renew the assignment of Paul Stover as Twin Falls varsity girls basketball coach.

Although none of the administrator contacted would comment on the situation, Stover's appointment was severed at the behest of board member Steve Tulman who introduced the matter in an executive session. It was not part of the monthly meeting agenda.

The Twin Falls girls basketball program has had three consecutive losing seasons but this has not been considered an "up" cycle for athletes at the school.

Apparently no other sports or coaching positions were discussed by the board.

Stover, who also has served as the Bruin girls varsity volleyball coach, probably will remain the varsity golf coach.

Mostly for fun: Boise Relays take place today

The Times-News

BOISE — The Boise Relays, one of those track meets that borders on the serious but comes closer to fun — hits at Boise State Stadium today, giving Southern Idaho coaches one of their rare looks at cross-state competition.

There's no scoring and a number of schools don't enter full teams as the Class A-2 and A-3 athletes take a bead at some of their more publicized A-1 counterparts. And, in the end, there's a chance to see people running in relays for the only time of the year.

The event begins at 10 a.m. today with some field events and the first of the running preliminaries. The finals are scheduled to split at 1 p.m.

Because of the relay format — like the two-mile relay, the distance medley, eed relay, those things that don't show up on another meet agenda, individuals will be running some new distances and events.

For instance, Twin Falls will be sending undefeated 100-meter dashman Ron Marsh as the first leg on the medley, "more probably to see how he's doing in the 200 than anything," says Coach Jerry Kleinkopf.

Marsh will be back for a return bout with defending state champion Chris Campbell, Capital junior, who he nipped by an eyelash in a meet in Twin Falls earlier this year.

Marsh's other showing will come in the 1600-meter relay and that could be, as usual, one of the best relays of the day.

Centennial and, of course, Jerome, will have very good 1600 teams. Centennial's run about the same time as we did last week and we definitely saw Jerome was a contender because it led us for three legs in

near Potato Grower,

Grower,

The J.R. Simplot Company is going to the field with a 1989 potato contract which has not been approved by Potato Growers of Idaho.

PGI estimates that the Simplot contract will pay less than $4 per cwt. to the grower based on the five-year averages. That is a 3% increase over the 1988 negotiated price.

Potato growers have had no increase in the contract price for the last three years. And the 1989 Simplot contract pays less than the potato contract 15 years ago.

Idaho growers deserve an increase in the contract to cover costs of production. And the costs of chemicals, fuel and utilities continue to rise.
