sources Defense Council, Snake River Alliance and Palouse-Clearwater Hanford Watch — say the project's environmental impact statement is inadequate and doesn't comply with the National Environmental Policy Act.

An Energy Department spokesman, Will Callcott, said there would be no official comment on the suit. A spokesman for Idaho Republican Sen. James McClure, a fervent supporter of the project, called the suit "more mischief from environmental lawyers."

Alliance Director Liz Paul of Ketchum responded that "taking action against a federal agency that is in violation of the laws that the Congress of the United States put in place is not mischief. I encourage Sen. McClure and other would-be critics to let the courts decide the merits of this case."

Paul said the environmental impact statement did not consider alternative sources of plutonium, including scrap, spent power reactor fuel, retired nuclear weapons and operation of the project prototype.

The final version of the impact statements also included new information, which the public had no opportunity to comment on, including accidents at the Idaho Chemical Processing Plant and seismic and volcanic activity, Paul said.

The Energy Department's statement did not include a classified appendix called for in the department's impact assessment process implementation plan, she said.

The final statement did not address concerns raised by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, except in a general way, Paul said, quoting a department memo.

"DOE simply has not lived up to its obligation to look before it leaps into a potentially unnecessary and dangerous plant," said Dan W. Reicher, an attorney for the Natural Re-

"The DOE's refusal to consider any alternative to disposing of 440 metric tons of plutonium-contaminated waste per year at the WIPP facility when there is continuing uncertainty that WIPP will be fully operable by 1995," Paul said.

SIS lacks support, Stallings declares

The Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS — The $1 billion Special Isotope Separation plutonium refinery proposed for Idaho does not have a national constituency to support it, Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, says.

The laser-driven facility at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory and military aircraft projects are under review by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney as he looks to cut his budget by $10 billion. But the aircraft projects are located in a number of states with more support in Washington, D.C.

"This becomes one of our problems," Stallings said Thursday. "There is no national constituency for the Special Isotope Separator."

Idahoans will have to take the lead in lobbying for SIS, Stallings said, but he recognized they may face a balancing act. While they might be lobbying for a national defense project, it might look like they're pushing for a local economic plum, the Idaho Democrat said.

The Bush administration has proposed to spend $198 million in Energy Department funds on SIS in the 1990 budget year. But Cheney is looking to reduce his budget.

Some in Congress, and even the DOE, think the project could be delayed one more year, Stallings said. This would allow the DOE to finish project tests at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in California, and allow some waste cleanup at the INEL, but would also push up the project costs, he said.

On another issue, Stallings said the DOE will probably not meet its Sept. 1 deadline on the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant, but it should be open by October. The New Mexico storage site would take transuranic waste from the INEL.

"The September date was very optimistic," he said. "It was saying, 'If everything goes right...'"

Gov. Cecil Andrus has said he will check waste shipments to the INEL, if WIPP is not open by Sept. 1. He banned shipments last October, and agreed to allow limited waste shipments in February.

HANSEN — The 100-year-old trees at historic Stricker Ranch are dead or dying — but their offspring are being saved.

Andy Holderreed of Castleford is grafting sprigs from 20 old fruit trees at Stricker to save them from years of neglect.

"I make trees for a hobby," said Holderreed, pointing toward the rows of fruit trees that line his property. "It just occurred to me that my hobby could be a way of saving some of the trees in the orchard at Stricker Ranch."

The Friends of Stricker Ranch will sell the young trees to raise funds for rehabilitating the historic site stage stop.

The area around Stricker Ranch once had nearly 100 trees, but years of neglect have slowly reduced their numbers and those remaining are struggling to remain alive. "Whole rows of trees have been ripped out," Holderreed said. "And, with age and cattle rubbing against them, the ones left will probably not remain for long."

Tritium lack claim was exaggeration

By ROBERT BURNS The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Energy Department's decision to scrap plans for resuming production of tritium this year suggests that Pentagon warnings of an imminent shortage of the vital nuclear material were exaggerated.

Energy Secretary James D. Watkins said Wednesday and the Pentagon on this week that he had decided the department's tritium-producing reactors in South Carolina would not be restarted until early next year at the earliest.

Watkins said he wanted more time to assess safety conditions at the Savannah River Site, where three reactors have been idle since last spring for mechanical repairs and to address safety problems.

The reactors are the nation's only source of tritium, a radioactive gas used to boost the explosive power of nuclear warheads. Tritium decays relatively quickly — at the rate of 5.5 percent a year — so replacement supplies are needed to maintain the nuclear arsenal.

The production hiatus has had no immediate effect on weapons production, since the arms factories can dip into a tritium reserve. The size of that reserve is classified, and the government has not said exactly how long the surplus will last.

The Pentagon said publicly last fall, before the extent of problems at Savannah River were known, that the United States faced the prospect of unilateral disarmament unless it was able to resume tritium production by this summer.

"That whole scenario was orchestrated for political purposes by certain people in the Pentagon," Chris Paine, an aide to Sen. Edward Kennedy on nuclear defense issues, said in an interview Friday.

Some Energy Department officials had echoed the Pentagon warnings. Several times earlier this year, the department's chief of defense programs, Troy Wade, testified at congressional hearings that the problem had become "critical."

"If a reactor is not restarted this year, then the supply of tritium could be reduced to such an extent that the nuclear stockpile may be affected," Wade told a Senate Armed Services

Power spike, vapor cloud scrub Atlantis launch

The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The launch of Atlantis was scrubbed Friday less than a minute before its planned liftoff when controllers detected an electrical surge in a main engine fuel pump.

Five astronauts were on board, along with a robot probe that NASA is sending to Venus. Launch director Bob Sieck said it will be at least Monday before a second launch attempt can be made, and he termed that timetable "optimistic" after revealing that NASA was also checking on an unexpected "vapor cloud" that emerged around a hydrogen fuel line.

Among tens of thousands who gathered for the rare afternoon liftoff were some of the country's most renowned planetary scientists. They have been waiting to resume solar system exploration since 1978, when Pioneer-Venus was launched on the last U.S. planetary expedition.

"That's just the way it is," shrugged James Hood, a geologist from Brown University following the postponement. "We've got a nice long launch window," he said, noting NASA has until May 28 to get Magellan on its way.

"We have waited a number of years for this flight, and a few extra days won't matter," said Lennard Fisk, NASA's chief scientist. "The window is a month long. Having the shuttle ready on the first day is ample time to solve the problem and get us on our way to Venus."

Sieck said NASA probably would not understand the precise cause of the problem until inspecting the spacecraft over the weekend. He also said technicians, reviewing film, discovered that a troubling vapor cloud appeared around a fuel line towards the end of the countdown.

He said it could be "well into next week," if

Star Wars' future depends on mini-missiles technology

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The ever-evolving "Star Wars" space-based defense program is now staking its future on an embryonic technology known as "Brilliant Pebbles," swarms of new mini-missiles designed to detect, track and pulverize incoming Soviet nuclear missiles in flight.

The new scheme marks a radical departure from previous Star Wars designs and represents, some officials say, the last hope for the costly and controversial anti-missile program, which is formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Brilliant Pebbles was endorsed by Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney this week as the centerpiece of Pentagon anti-missile research. He indicated that if two years of intensive research on the new concept fail to yield results, the entire Star Wars program would be delayed and would have to be re-evaluated.

Critics immediately assailed the idea as unaffordable and technically impossible, charges they have leveled at all previous Star Wars proposals.

The Brilliant Pebbles idea, devised by weapons scientists at California's Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, would place thousands of miniature interceptor rockets encased in solar-powered "life jackets" in space awaiting orders to blast enemy missiles as they rise through the clouds on an attack toward the United States.

The three-foot-long, 100-pound rockets would be guided by an electronic "brain" with the capacity of a Cray supercomputer shrunk to the size of a deck of cards. The rockets would hurl 10-pound, non-explosive projectiles — the "pebbles" — into thin-skinned ballistic missiles at ultra-high velocity.

Pentagon officials estimate that the brilliant pebbles interceptors can be built for less than $500,000 each because of dramatic advances in sensors, computers, guidance systems and thruster rockets.

Lt. Gen. James Abrahamson, who recently retired as director of the Star Wars program, estimated that a brilliant pebbles system could be deployed in space for $25 billion, compared to $69 billion for last year's model, known as the space-based intercept-tor.

Cheney told Congress last week that if the brilliant pebbles concept does not work out after an aggressive research and testing schedule, the entire Star Wars program will be canceled.

Environmental groups file suit to block SIS

By The Times-News and Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Three environmental groups Friday sued the Energy Department in an attempt to block construction of a $1.2 billion laser-driven plutonium refinery in Idaho.

The suit, filed in federal District Court in Washington, seeks to stop preparations for the Special Isotope Separation plant, which the department plans to start in June at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

The environmental groups — Natural Resources Defense Council, Snake River Alliance and Palouse-Clearwater Hanford Watch — say the project's environmental impact statement is inadequate and doesn't comply with the National Environmental Policy Act.

An Energy Department spokesman, Will Callicott, said there would be no official comment on the suit. A spokesman for Idaho Republican Sen. James McClure, a fervent supporter of the project, called the suit "more mischief from environmental lawyers."

Lucy's family plans gathering

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lucille Ball's family will gather to remember her, but there will be no funeral, a spokesman said Friday.

"I can't go to a formal service, as such. What is going on is totally private, with the family, and I don't know when or where," said Tom Watson at Lucille Ball Enterprises.

Miss Ball died unexpectedly of a burst aorta Wednesday, eight days after emergency heart surgery at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. She was 77.

Her family said afterward through a spokesman there would be no funeral for the red-haired comic actress, who starred with her then-husband Desi Arnaz in the 1951-1957 "I Love Lucy" series that revolutionized TV.

Reports later said there would be a private funeral. But when asked if such a service would take place, Watson said, "Not in the usual sense of the term, no."

"I'm carrying out Lucy's own wishes in this regard, and she just wanted everything to be very quiet, with her own immediate loved ones," Watson said. "There's not going to be that kind of formal service."

He had no information on burial plans.

Miss Ball was being memorialized by fans who continued Friday to call her offices to express their condolences.

"We have been inundated, as has almost every agency she has been involved with. People who were only mildly connected to her, along with fans from all over the world have been calling here," said Watson.

Television stations around the country also planned or had already offered "I Love Lucy" weekend marathons.

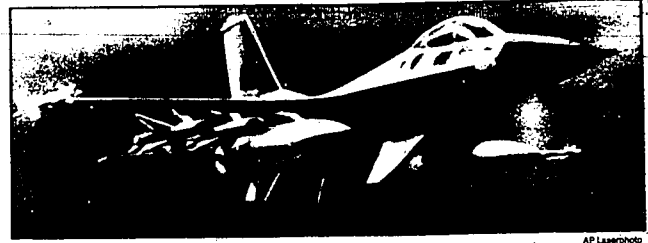

"It's very much appreciated," said Watson. "It's nice enough to do it, but to do that and give up their advertising revenue for 10 hours, that's a wonderful, wonderful tribute on their part."

In New York, WNYW, Channel 5, ran two hours of classic "I Love Lucy" episodes Wednesday. The Museum of Broadcasting has 60 hours of Lucille Ball programming, and announced it will run a mini-retrospective next week.

On cable, the TNT network planned to run five Lucille Ball theatrical films, while the Arts and Entertainment Network scheduled a Friday broadcast of "A Woman's Lot." At that time, the service said that it wanted to begin daytime flights of the batlike warplane and acknowledged that such training flights would lead to sightings by civilians.

KRIV in Houston will broadcast a five-hour "We'll Always Love Lucy" Sunday special.

The plane uses special designs and materials to elude detection by radar. At that time, the service said that it wanted to begin daytime flights of the batlike warplane and acknowledged that such training flights would lead to sightings by civilians.

Bush agrees to proceed with U.S.-Japan fighter jet project

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush announced Friday he agreed to proceed with a hotly debated deal with Japan for production of the new FSX fighter jet after assurances that U.S. jobs and technology would be protected.

He said the deal was "in the strategic and commercial interests of the United States."

"And we weighed this matter from the standpoint of trade, of our industrial growth and technology transfer, as well as strategic and foreign policy considerations," Bush told reporters at the White House.

The agreement, a refinement of a deal initially worked out in the last days of the Reagan administration, calls for the United States to have a 40 percent share of both the development and production stages of the advanced version of the U.S.-built F-16 by General Dynamics and Japan's Mitsubishi Heavy Industries.

There will be no cost to the American taxpayer and at the same time the Japanese will improve their ability to carry their share of the defense burden," Bush said.

Congress has 30 days to review the agreement, signed Friday by Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Japan's Ambassador Nobuo Matsunaga. The House and Senate can reject it by a joint resolution of disapproval.

Opposition to the plan surfaced almost instantly on Capitol Hill, where critics contend that the arrangement amounts to a giveaway of advanced technology that Japan may use to help propel its civilian aircraft industry into head-to-head competition with the United States in the world market. They say Tokyo should purchase American-made planes to help offset the $50 billion U.S. trade deficit with Japan.

Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., said he would introduce a resolution of disapproval and mount a campaign to scrap the idea. He said Japan could best help reduce the trade deficit with the United States by purchasing the existing U.S. F-16 warplane "off the shelf."

Rep. Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., said Japan does not deserve the co-production deal because Mitsubishi, a Japanese firm, built a metal fabrication plant in Libya which Hunter said is intended to produce the bombs and canisters to hold poison gas made at a nearby desert facility.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., chairman of the FSX task force in the House, condemned the Bush decision as a "giveaway of American technology."

Gephardt who ran for the Democratic presidential nomination last year under a deal with the trade protectionists said the deal will undermine long-term U.S. competitiveness by giving the Japanese an edge in an area of U.S. dominance.

Addressing concerns over U.S. technology, Bush said that "sensitive source codes for the aircraft's computer will be strictly controlled. Access will be granted to only those codes that are essential to complete the project."

NASA has to replace the pump or the fuel line. For a Monday launch, "Both of them would have to fall into mystic to expect that."

The postponement set back NASA's plan to eject its robot Magellan spacecraft out of the shuttle, toward Venus. The $550-million Magellan mission would revitalize NASA's unmanned space science program.

Atlantis' astronauts were strapped in and the countdown was advancing toward a launch, less than a minute to go, when a controller detected something wrong on a monitor and informed Steick. "Possible problem... recommend hold at T-31 seconds."

Launch commentator Hugh Harris quickly reported, "There is not enough time to recycle and launch today."

Stealth fighters flying over California desert

WASHINGTON — Sharp-eyed observers have spotted flocks of the Air Force's most secret fighter jets flying over Southern California in recent weeks, according to a report from an aircraft that has remained shrouded in mystery for more than 10 years, according to an authoritative defense industry magazine.

Groups of 10 F-117 Stealth fighter jets have been seen during daylight hours streaking over Mojave, a small town outside Edwards Air Force Base, about 90 miles north of Los Angeles, Aviation Week and Space Technology reported in its May 1 issue.

After flying the F-117 for five years, the Air Force last November unveiled the aircraft to the public for the first time.

engineering Laboratory and other defense installations.

Originally scheduled to open in the mid 1980s, WPP's opening was moved back to October 1988. That opening also was delayed. The department now hopes to open the billion-dollar facility in September 1989.

The SIS plant, to be built by 1995, would use laser technologies, under development at a government laboratory in Livermore, Calif., to refine weapon-grade plutonium out of fuel-grade plutonium now stored at the Hanford Nuclear Reservation.

Private analysts of the government's nuclear weapons program contend the need for the Idaho facility has not been demonstrated because the government has enough plutonium to last for the foreseeable future. The size of the nation's plutonium inventory is secret.

"In light of the plutonium surplus,

SIS appears to be a $3 billion pork-barrel project," Paul Leventhal, president of the Nuclear Control Institute, said in a letter to congressional leaders last month. He was referring to the estimated $1.2 billion construction cost and $1.9 billion operating cost.

The Energy Department, in a report on its nuclear weapons complex modernization plans, labeled the Idaho project "time-critical and essential" and ranked it among its top defense program priorities.

Energy Secretary James D. Watkins is reassessing the Reagan administration's long-range plans for the weapons program.

The Special Isotope Separation facility in Idaho should be constructed to provide flexibility and technological diversity to a production complex burdened by reactor operating constraints," he told a House panel earlier this month.

NASA has to replace the pump or the fuel line. For a Monday launch, "Both of them would have to fall into mystic to expect that."

The postponement set back NASA's plan to eject its robot Magellan spacecraft out of the shuttle, toward Venus. The $550-million Magellan mission would revitalize NASA's unmanned space science program.

Atlantis' astronauts were strapped in and the countdown was advancing toward a launch, less than a minute to go, when a controller detected something wrong on a monitor and informed Steick. "Possible problem... recommend hold at T-31 seconds."

Launch commentator Hugh Harris quickly reported, "There is not enough time to recycle and launch today."

subcommittee in early February.

Private analysts who monitor the government's weapons program have been saying for months that the Energy Department and the Pentagon have overstated the supply problem.

Dan Reicher, an attorney for Natural Resources Defense Council, an environmental group that has sued the Energy Department to block most of the Savannah River reactors, said Friday that Watkins' decision undercuts the idea of a looming crisis.

"The longer we go without production the more we see there is no tri-um crisis," he said in an interview. "Again the Pentagon and DOE have cried wolf."

Last week, 11 prominent U.S. scientists issued a joint statement urging the Energy Department to hold off on restart of the Savannah River reactors until the Soviet Union has been sounded about possible negotiated cuts in nuclear materials.

They said enough tritium exists today to sustain a fully adequate weapons stockpile for at least five years without new production if better management techniques were used. Among these would be the use of tritium from weapons scheduled for retirement or held in storage.

Watkins said in a letter to congressional committees last week that he had ordered changes in the department's management of tritium inventories, but he gave no details.

Reicher and others have said they believe the earlier warnings about a tritium crisis were aimed in part at galvanizing congressional support to spend $5.8 billion to build two new tritium-producing reactors. They would replace the Savannah River plant in the 1990s.

A legislative battle over the new reactors is expected to reach a head this summer.

trees ready," he said.

Long-range plans are for a duplicate of the Stricker orchard planted somewhere in the Magic Valley as a continuous source for raising funds. "It would be like a bank from which we could get new wood to make new trees," Holdreed said.

Currently, he's concentrating on two plant, two pear and 16 apple trees.

His primary graft is the clef. He splits the tops of roots from a Washington State nursery about one inch down and slips in sharpened pieces from Stricker. He wraps the connection in twine and seals it in wax to prevent it from drying out.

If that doesn't work, he'll use the whip graft, which is similar to the clef graft but that wedges are cut out of the two pieces before they're connected.

He's growing the young trees, which he calls "daughters" because they do the bearing, in buckets so they can be easily removed and planted.

If the orchard is begun, Holdreed will plant the new trees at a 45-degree angle, which produces earlier fruit because the tree remains under a protective layer of snow during winter.

Holdreed, 74, has been grafting trees since his childhood farm days. In India, where he served as a Brethren missionary, he taught young people to raise rice, fruit and vegetables.

Stricker Ranch isn't his only project.

"Many people have old trees which were planted by their grandparents that they want to save, so I go to work to save them," Holdreed said.

"I'm doing a plum tree for a fellow neighbor here now that's a variety I've never seen before."

But the ranch project is special to him.

"In hearing about the Stricker Ranch it occurred to me that in connection with the Centennial to have some trees by next year would be an excellent time," he said.

be pushed back two years, meaning the first deployment of a system would not take place until after the turn of the century.

Democrats in Congress have already grown impatient with the cost and the apparent slow progress of the Star Wars program. Failure of yet another scheme could doom the cherished project of former President Reagan.

"Every year or so there's a big new idea that turns the program around. For a program that's spent $17 billion already, this is a bit disturbing. This program appears to have very shallow roots," said Bruce McDonald, an aide to Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., an influential "Star Wars" critic.

Brilliant Pebbles is a refinement of an older concept known as "smart rocks," which were larger non-explosive projectiles carried aboard rockets. "Pebbles" are smaller and have much more advanced targeting and guidance systems, according to the system's designers.

But "pebbles" still faces grave technical challenges. Although early tests of the rocket's propulsion and maneuvering systems have been encouraging, the sensor eyes and computer "brain" of the missile remain on the drawing board.

Any space-based anti-missile system confronts a difficult technological task — to identify ballistic missiles in the very early stages of flight, to pick out the rocket body from its large plume of fire, to track and then home in on the target before the weapons-carrying "bus" separates and releases the nuclear warheads.

Economic indicators take nosedive for 2nd month

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said Friday its chief economic forecasting gauge took a 0.7 percent nosedive in March, marking the first back-to-back declines in more than a year in a portent of progressive weakening in the economy.

Last month's drop in the Index of Leading Economic Indicators, which is designed to foretell economic activity six to nine months into the future, followed a 0.3 percent dip in February and was the biggest falloff since a 0.8 percent decline last July.

Should the index point downward again for April, that would make three declines in a row, the traditional signal of a forthcoming recession.

At the White House, press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the report was not bad news and shows some slowing of the economy which is probably good.

Overall it shows the economy is still sound and moving on a steady course, he said.

Analysts said the performance of the index thus far is another indication that the economy is losing steam and that the slowdown will become more pronounced later this year.

It's very clear we're going to have a very marked and worrisome slowdown in the economy, said economist David Levy of Levy Economic Forecasts in Chappaqua, N.Y.

Whether the slowdown will deteriorate into a recession is a neck-and-neck race at the moment, Levy said.

But Fitzwater said that the declines probably are

Report finds 34 countries unfair traders

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration on Friday charged 34 countries with erecting significant trade barriers against U.S. products in the first stage of a process that could result in retaliation against nations that refuse to open their doors to American goods.

The U.S. review, ordered by the 1988 trade law, has raised fears from Bonn to Tokyo about what actions the United States might take against countries it brands as persistently unfair traders.

Japan was given the most space in Friday's report with 18 pages of complaints about trade barriers. Complaints against the 12-nation transitional movements to a sustainable rate of economic growth without accelerating inflation.

Despite declines in February and March, the average of the leading indicators index for the first quarter is higher than the average for the fourth quarter of 1988, he said.

Using the three-month rule of thumb, the index

European Community and South Korea occupied nine pages each.

In all, "The National Trade Estimate Report on Foreign Trade Barriers" singled out 34 separate nations, the European Community and the Gulf Cooperation Council, a trading group which includes Saudi Arabia, as trading partners with major barriers to U.S. products.

The report, prepared by U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills, is the first step in drawing up a "hit list" of priority countries the administration will target for intensive negotiations aimed at getting the trade barriers eliminated. That priority list, drawn from the countries mentioned Friday, is due on May 30.

The requirement for a target list of countries, known as the "Super 301" provision, was the most controversial section of the 1988 Omnibus Trade Act.

Many economists worry that it could set off a global trade war in which U.S. efforts to punish unfair trade practices are met by counter-retaliation against U.S. products.

Foreign governments, which are concerned by the tight deadlines for negotiations to be completed, have already mounted an intensive lobbying effort to keep from being placed on the priority list.

I don't see any real (recession) signal yet, but if we do get another month or two of decline and if history repeats itself, we would be looking for either a systematic slowdown or a recession, Moran said.

The last time the index registered two straight declines was when it fell for five straight months from September 1987 through January 1988, the months surrounding the October stock market crash.

While many analysts feared that the nation was headed for a recession after the market collapse, the economy rebounded and the record peacetime expansion is now in its seventh year.

For the past year, the Federal Reserve has been pushing up interest rates in an effort to restrain economic growth and thus control inflation. However, some analysts have expressed concern that the anti-inflation campaign will prove too potent and stifle the economic expansion.

In March, nine of the 11 indicators that make up the leading index declined, with a drop in building permits counting as the biggest negative factor.

Other negatives included: a dip in manufacturers' orders for consumer goods; a shorter average work week; an increase in initial claims for jobless benefits; a drop in an index measuring consumer confidence; faster vendor deliveries, signaling slower demand; a contraction in the money supply; a decline in manufacturers' unfilled orders and falling stock prices.

Federal agents seize weapons cache including grenade launcher; 6 jailed

WASHINGTON (AP) — City police and federal agents seized 20 weapons, including a grenade launcher, and arrested six people in a raid on a motel in the capital's northeast section early Wednesday.

A Nazi flag was found in one of two cars with Texas license plates searched during the raid, said John Kelso, assistant special agent in charge of the FBI's Washington field office.

The investigation started Thursday afternoon when a suburban Dallas woman called the FBI's Dallas field office to report that her son, John Barnhart, 33, of Rowlett, Texas, had been kidnapped. The unidentified woman said Barnhart, who had been missing two weeks, instructed her to wire him $1,000 here or "some harm would come to him," according to Kelso.

FBI agents traced the man to the motel and determined that he hadn't been kidnapped, Kelso said.

Apparently they may have been low on funds and this may have been an effort by him to get some additional funds, Kelso said.

FBI agents discovered the hotel rooms contained automatic weapons and notified city police, the Secret Service and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, the FBI official said.

Two of the suspects — Richard William McEwen, 40, and his wife, Billie Joy McEwen, 43, both of Rowlett — suffered minor injuries during the police raid when officers had to restrain them from reaching their weapons, said police spokesman Joseph Gentile. Both were briefly treated at D.C. General Hospital and released to police custody.

The other suspects, in addition to Barnhart, were identified as Margaret Arredondo, 29, of Dallas; Kevin Owen, 21, of Washington, D.C.; and Diane Joy McEwen, 28, of Rowlett.

Woman admits to drinking while pregnant

SEATTLE (AP) — A woman who sued a liquor company over her son's birth defects testified Friday that she drank herself unsteady several times during her pregnancy, but never was warned that alcohol would hurt her baby.

Candace Thorp, 39, an admitted alcoholic, said under cross examination that she drank heavily during the 1984 pregnancy, even though she had previously been in alcohol treatment programs.

David Strauber, an attorney for defendant Jim Beam Brands Co., asked Mrs. Thorp whether she drank herself into unconsciousness every night of the pregnancy.

"At times I did," she said. "A lot of times I did not."

Mrs. Thorp and her husband, Harold, of Seattle are seeking to force Jim Beam to pay for lifetime care of their 4-year-old son Michael, who is mentally retarded and has other birth defects in a pattern known as fetal alcohol syndrome.

They have maintained they would have stopped drinking if they had known it could harm the unborn baby. They claim Jim Beam knew of a link between alcohol consumption and birth defects, and was negligent by failing to put warning labels on its products.

Attorneys have said the trial is apparently the first in which damages are sought from an alcohol company for FAS.

The company has denied a link between alcohol and birth defects, but also says any problems that may have been caused by alcohol in Michael Thorp's case were due to Mrs. Thorp's own negligence.

Mrs. Thorp testified that no doctor ever told her about the danger of drinking while pregnant, even though she had been in several alcohol treatment programs and had two previous children.

Under prodding from her attorney, Kandice Tezak, Mrs. Thorp also noted Michael's birth defects on a large-color picture displayed to the jury. She noted the child's small nose, thin lips and lack of indentation above the lip, and also said he had a short attention span, poor coordination and was not toilet-trained.

"If I knew it would cause the birth defects it was I wouldn't have drunk," Mrs. Thorp said, adding that she occasionally read the label on bottles of Jim Beam liquor and that there were no warnings against consumption by pregnant women.

If there had been such a warning she would have stopped drinking while pregnant, she said.

North jury begins 2nd week of deliberations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Oliver North trial jury began its second week of deliberations Friday, yielding no signal on its progress: no notes, no words to the judge and no requests for clarifications or to rehear testimony.

After working for five hours — for a total 37½ since deliberations started — the jurors told a U.S. marshal they intended to come in Saturday for a half-day session, the same as last week.

The jurors' weekday schedule has not varied. It begins with their arrival from a downtown hotel at 8:20 a.m., then juice and pastry and a 9 a.m. start. At noon a caterer arrives with lunches chosen individually by each juror from a menu.

On Friday, the order got mixed up — the caterer delivered the wrong lunches — and the jurors went back to work until 12:30 when the right food arrived.

North took advantage of the jury's 9-to-4 pace on Thursday with a quick trip to deliver a speech to the Bankers Club of Cincinnati, presumably for the same $20,000-$25,000 fee he has received for other recent appearances.

The former National Security Council aide spoke about traditional values and received a standing ovation, according to Bankers Club members who heard his speech.

Steven Doherty, an Ohio State University sophomore from Cincinnati, said North spoke highly of former President Reagan, the club's next scheduled guest, booked for September.

Protesters picketed outside the club before the speech.

"We don't care whether North sees us or not," said Roy Silver, organizer for the Central American Task Force. "We're demonstrating against the Bankers (Club) for giving him $25,000 while there are homeless people in this city sleeping on the streets."

The Bankers Club did not disclose North's fee.

"You're all a bunch of pro-communists" shouted a well-dressed businessman at the demonstrators.

The North jury has before it 12 criminal charges, most of which accuse North of lying or withholding information about his and the NSC's support for the guerrillas fighting the leftist Nicaraguan government.

North is accused of lying to Congress to cover up his role in secretly assisting the Contras and lying to the attorney general about aspects of the diversion of funds to the Contras from the Iran arms sales.

Teamsters' former president Williams dies

LEETON, Mo. (AP) — Roy Lee Williams, who rose from trucker to international Teamsters president, died at his farm home Friday, seven months after his release from a prison term for conspiring to bribe a U.S. senator. He was 74.

Williams had been in poor health for years with emphysema and an enlarged heart and died just hours after a doctor was called to the house.

Williams, a protégé of former Teamster President Jimmy Hoffa, served as president from 1981-83. He was forced to resign the presidency to delay the start of a 10-year sentence following his conviction with four other men for attempting to bribe then-Sen. Howard Cannon of Nevada to influence trucking deregulation.

Danny Johnson, who now holds positions once held by Williams as president of Teamsters Joint Council 56 and Local 41 in Kansas City, praised his former boss.

Roy Williams was the best thing to happen to the Teamsters outside of Jimmy Hoffa, Johnson said Friday. "There's been a lot of bad publicity about him; and maybe some of it rightly so. But he went to jail for trying to keep out deregulation, which has eliminated over 160,000 Teamster jobs."

"You couldn't ask for a better man, as a Teamster, as someone that cared about his members, and as a leader of that movement," Johnson said.

There was no immediate reaction to Williams' death from the Teamsters union headquarters in Washington, but William J. McCarthy, current union president, made it clear earlier this month in testimony before Congress that he was no fan of Williams or Hoffa, who disappeared in 1975.

Cassia officials rule boy died accidentally

BURLEY - Cassia County officials have decided a 12-year-old boy's April 22 death wasn't a suicide.

"He just didn't show any of the signs of a suicidal-type person," said county Coroner Paul Young.

Kyle Pearson Oleson of Burley died just before midnight of a self-inflicted .22-caliber gunshot to the head. A family member discovered him at 9 a.m. the next morning.

Young and Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal decided the death wasn't a suicide after interviewing family, friends and teachers. They first thought the death was probably a suicide.

"We found a well-adjusted, happy young man who got along well at school and at church," Young said.

Oleson was a Boy Scout, a sixth-grader at DeLoe and in January became an LDS deacon.

MVRMC receives mobile MRI detection system

TWIN FALLS - A van carrying a magnetic resonance imaging system rolled into the county hospital's parking lot Friday morning.

The MRI, which takes pictures of the body without using radiation, won't be fully operational for another couple of weeks, said Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Spokeswoman Sue Summers.

The hospital will lease the mobile MRI unit while the new cancer-treatment center is under construction. A permanent MRI unit will be installed as part of the project.

Woman facing prostitution charges fails to appear

TWIN FALLS - The city's first prostitution case in a long, long time may never go to trial.

Yong Cha Talbert, 49, failed to appear in court this week, and officials suspect she left for California. She was charged with a misdemeanor count of prostitution for allegedly soliciting police Detective Ron Atxman April 13 at Lee's Massage on Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

Prosecutors can't extradite Talbert, a Korean, because she was charged with a misdemeanor, not a felony, said Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter.

Airport Manager Madsen stable after bypass surgery

BOISE - Airport Manager Ron Madsen was in stable condition Friday night after a five-hour quadruple heart bypass surgery Thursday, his wife says.

Madsen was in the intensive care unit of St. Luke's Regional Medical Center in Boise, said Clare Madsen.

She said doctors expect he will be released from the hospital within a week and a week to 10 days later he should be back at work part time.

"If he had his way he would be back a lot sooner," Madsen said.

MVRMC hosts health fair today; public is invited

TWIN FALLS - A "Health Fair" will be from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. today at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Events such as free skin cancer and blood sugar screenings will be featured and there will be activities for children. Information on foot care, the Red Cross and the Safe Kids Program will also be offered.

The event is open to the public.

Sun Valley enjoys big jump in skier days over 1987-88

SUN VALLEY - The installation of new quad chairlifts and good snow in the Wood River Valley this winter have paid off with a big jump in skier days over last year.

Sun Valley's 53rd ski season, which ended April 23, has turned in impressive results in skier days totals for both the alpine and nordic skiing facilities.

Total skier days for Bald and Dollar mountains numbered 417,238, a 33 percent increase over last season. Dollar produced its best season since 1981-82 with a total count of 45,994 skiers, a direct result of the area's "Kids Stay and Ski Free" program.

The Sun Valley Nordic Center ended its season April 9 with a skier count of 18,400 - up 55 percent over last year. A total of 365 downhill season passes were sold for the season, a 20 percent increase over last year.

Symms meets with Magic Valley farmers

By N. S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The recent grape scare may have been the work of communists trying to undermine efforts to establish democracy in Chile, Sen. Steve Symms said Friday.

The incident involving cyanide found on two Chilean grapes nearly destroyed that troubled country's agricultural industry when all Chilean produce was boycotted. Communist opponents of Chilean leader Gen. Augusto Pinochet may be to blame, Symms suggested.

The U.S. senator spoke to about a dozen local farmers and ranchers at a Friday meeting. Symms visited with producers throughout the Magic Valley Friday.

Concerns covered a broad range of topics at the luncheon meeting with the Idaho Republican.

Reregistration of agricultural chemicals is "the biggest single threat facing agriculture today," Symms told the gathering.

Government regulations require agricultural chemical producers to reregister their products. Some companies, however, may not want to spend the money to recertify chemicals used only on "minor" crops such as potatoes.

The reregistration process threatens some of the basic tools of Idaho farmers.

"High on the list of farmers' and ranchers' concerns was the concentration of meat packers and other agricultural products buyers. Large companies such as ConAgra buy smaller packers and increase their control of the market."

A short time after several recent acquisitions, ConAgra dropped its price on lambs by 30 percent, said Laird Noh, a

Sen. Steve Symms, left, discusses agricultural issues with Jerome County farmers at Friday meeting Republican state senator and Kimberly sheep rancher.

Talk of anti-trust suits against the meat packers passed around the lunch table along with coffee pots and ketchup.

Symms, between bites, expressed his outrage at recent chemical scares involving aldrin, a growth regulator used on apples, and aldicarb or Temik, a pesticide used on potatoes.

The scare cast a pall over the apple industry's normally colorful and shining product. It began with an unsubstantiated report and sprouted under testimony from people such as actress Meryl Streep, who confessed she was not an expert but just a concerned mother worried about her children, Symms said.

"It's just unacceptable," he said, that people can get away with damaging the agricultural industry.

A person would have to eat 28,000 pounds of apples a day for 70 years to get the same dose of aldrin that gave a laboratory mouse cancer, Symms said.

The aldicarb scare did not damage the Idaho potato industry much. A Symms aide explained that the J.R. Simplot Co.'s refusal to buy aldicarb-treated potatoes isn't based on fears of the chemical's possible health effect. The reason is that the McDonald's hamburger chain won't buy treated potatoes, he said.

USFS chief gives Idaho outfitters 1-year warning

The Associated Press

IDAHO FALLS - The head of the U.S. Forest Service has given Idaho outfitters one year to break up their camps in the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness.

But Howard Spalletta of Idaho Falls says the federal agency has wasted four years while the outfitters' camps have become "deplorable."

Chief Forester Dale Robertson issued his directive last week for outfitters and Forest Service managers to develop an action plan on the management and use of wilderness.

For 1989, Robertson used the continued use of unwieldy equipment, such as cookstoves. But when not in use, equipment and temporary facilities must be dismantled and stored in an unobtrusive way. Permanent camps will be phased out, as detailed in the Wilderness Management Plan reached in an out-of-court settlement last year.

Robertson said the Forest Service will set final requirements after reviewing this outlining season.

"I believe that with a little time and understanding the issues can be resolved in the field by the district rangers, outfitters and guides, and interested members of the public," Robertson wrote.

But Spalletta, a public wilderness user who has lobbied against the camps, said he feels Robertson's decision goes against the Forest Service's original intent.

Law seminars will cater to public

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Joe Public will have a chance to learn the ins and outs of today's legal intricacies at a series of presentations next week.

Included are talks on bankruptcy law for creditors and debtors, landlord-tenant law and water rights. The seminars are sponsored by the 5th District Bar Association and a dozen local lawyers will speak, said Derek Pico, the attorney organizing the event.

"We're just trying to educate the public as to what the law is," Pico said.

A representative for Idaho Legal Aid Services, an organization serving low-income and indigent residents, will be on hand each night to discuss the organization's role. Other lawyers will explain the Idaho Statute Bar pro bono program for offering free legal counsel.

The "town meetings" will be from 7 p.m.

to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday in 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt's courtroom at the county's Judicial Annex.

On Monday, lawyers will explain social security and public entitlements; wills, estates and probates; the judges' role in the courtroom; consumer rights; and landlord-tenant law. Tuesday's topics will include bankruptcy for creditors and debtors; adoptions, guardianships and conservatorships; domestic relations; and criminal law and procedure.

Wednesday's discussions will cover water rights; farm crop loss; partnerships and corporations; workmen's compensation laws; and insurance claims.

Pico said the bar isn't holding the seminars to drum up business.

"That's not the purpose at all," he said.

Lawyers will also visit two local junior high schools during the week to speak with students.

Frank Charlton retires amid accolades of friends

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Described as "awesome" by students and "supportive" by teachers and staff members, high school Principal Frank Charlton has earned a reputation as a caring man with an open door.

"You can talk to him on a one-to-one basis, he's personal and he always has time," said secretary Mona Neill. "He always puts everyone else's problems first."

Neill said she calls Charlton a "marshmallow."

"There's a certain image he has to maintain as a principal, but there's a human side to him too," she said. "That's why people like him so much."

Teachers and staff say they'll miss Charlton, whose retirement after 37 years at the high school was announced this week. But Charlton said its time for a change. He said he could continue working, but he'd like to have more time to do some other things - like work on his farm and do some landscaping.

"I feel good about my job right now and the job I've done," he said. "It's time for a change, change is good, and I felt within myself that it was time to retire."

Born and raised in Buhl, Charlton has worked in education for 39 years. He began his career in 1950 in the Meridian school system, where he stayed until 1965. He taught business and coached football, basketball and track. After two years teaching business at Nampa High School and a year as a counselor in Boise, Charlton in 1968 was offered the Buhl High School principal job, where he stayed until his move to Twin Falls High School in 1972.

In contemplating his almost four decades in education, Charlton, 62, said students nowadays have more educational opportunities, such as learning how to use computers. But he said he's noticed a decrease in parent and student involvement as both groups have taken on heavier work loads. He said the school used to be the center of everything.

The nationwide increase in drug use among students has been the most negative change in schools, Charlton said, although he stressed that 90 percent of the kids are "in school to learn" and don't use drugs.

In explaining how he landed in the education field, Charlton said: "I always liked school as a child ... And some of the people I most admired growing up were teachers."

Now, teachers - and others - are returning that admiration.

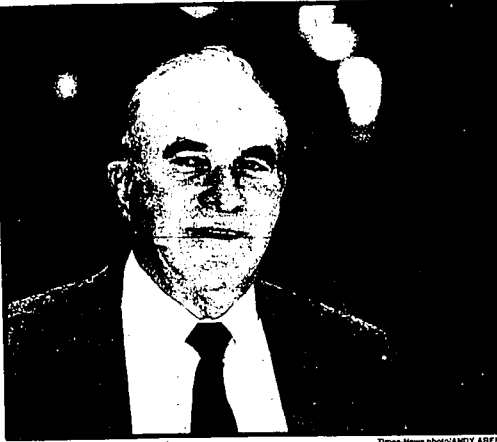

"I've learned a heck of a lot from Frank in just one year," said Vice Principal George Arossa. "There'll never be another Frank Charlton."

Arossa said he admires the way Charlton handles people, that he's always supportive, and trusts people to do their jobs.

"He's accessible, compassionate and a friend too," said Head Librarian Shirley Thorpe.

"He's well-respected by my crew," said Head Custodian Joe Ross. "He's a very honest man who treats everyone fairly."

"He's awesome," said senior Marissa Whitaker. "He's easy-going and easy to get along with."

Cable TV tax

If State Tax Commission loses in court, special levies may be needed to repay money

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Idaho's counties may have to resort to special levies to pay back cable television companies in the event the Idaho State Tax Commission loses a court battle against their owners, Bonneville County Valuations Assessor Ron Hall says.

"If the cable company pays the tax and they win the lawsuit, we have to refund the money. If it has already been spent, by the taxing entities like the city, the county and the schools, what can we do?" he said.

Bonneville is among 26 counties the commission has ordered to raise 1988 cable company valuations.

The counties used to evaluate the cable TV companies on their assets. But the tax commission has ordered the assessors to also take into consideration the companies' market value and their ability to earn money.

Earlier this month, Upper Valley Telecable filed appeals with the Bonneville County Board of Equalization and the Tax Commission protesting the commission's new approach, which would raise their tax bill from $40,018 to $29,383 in Bonneville County.

Upper Valley Telecable had been assessed at about $2.1 million in Bonneville County. The tax commission's valuation is $16.4 million. In the appeal, the cable company asked the commission to enter a judgment determining the value at about $3.6 million.

If the order is overturned after Upper Valley Telecable pays the additional taxes, the money will have to be given back, Hall said.

"In the event the cable companies lose, it's no problem," he said. "The cable companies are very confident that they will win."

"If it's been figured into department budget, and then not paid, everyone is short," he said. "This is what we'd call a procedural dilemma."

Hall predicted that it may take more than two years for the case to be settled. Meanwhile, the additional cable tax money is going into a trust fund. Other suits have been filed over the issue around Idaho.

Original homesteaders gather for reunion today in Rupert

RUPERT — A reunion of the original homesteaders on the A & B Irrigation District project is today at the Rupert Elks' Lodge.

A get-together time begins at 6 p.m. and the buffet supper begins at 7 p.m., with a short program to follow. Music for dancing will be provided by Dolores Rochford from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Coffee and punch will be available throughout the evening.

Homesteaders from 1856-57 will be recognized and honored at 11 p.m. and cash-door-prizes will be given in a drawing. Call Cletus and Mea Bubel at 531-5389 for reservations. Tickets are $10 per person.

Russell and Flo Adams are chairing the committee, assisted by numerous others.

The A & B Irrigation District encompasses the largest veterans' homestead project in the nation, with the first drawing in 1853 and the last in 1962. About 537 farm units were homesteaded by military veterans and their families from throughout the nation. The project covers 77,000 acres in Minidoka and Jerome counties.

Outfitters

Stevensville, Mont., a retired forester, were encouraged by the Forest Service in 1965 to file an opinion in the outfitters' appeal of the management plan.

"We were assured that the decision would be timely, based on existing facts and laws, and on the written appeal record as required by Forest Service regulations. Four years later, we are back where we started," he said.

"Robertson thinks that with a little time and understanding the issues can be resolved in the field by the district rangers. The deplorable condition of these camps is a result of 25 years of neglect and mismanagement by the outfitters and Forest Service," Spalletta said.

Spalletta said he and Wolf have asked Secretary of Agriculture Clayton Yeutter to make a final decision on the issue.

A Forest Service task force recommended in December that all existing caches be removed from the wilderness as previously proposed.

The panel determined that outfitters could provide safe quality service to clients without permanent camps. It also found that most of the camps observed were unsightly and indicated "ownership" of the area by the outfitters.

Doug Tims, executive director of the Idaho Outfitters and Guides Association, said Robertson's decision is a challenge to his organization.

He said the outfitters will work to identify where unobtrusive storage is necessary for them to provide their services.

Pope welcomes Gorbachev meeting

ANTANANARIVO, Madagascar (AP)—Pope John Paul II said Friday at the start of an African tour that he would welcome a meeting with Mikhail S. Gorbachev when the Soviet leader visits Italy in November.

It would be the first meeting between a pope and a Soviet Communist party chief. But the pope said obstacles block a first, papal visit to the Soviet Union, including the repression of Ukrainian Catholics who form the largest underground church in that country.

John Paul was speaking to reporters on his way to Madagascar, where he kissed the earth of this divided island nation on his arrival amid a "papal truce" called after six days of anti-government riots claimed six lives.

Standing together on the runway to greet him were President Didier Ratsiraka and Archbishop Victor Razafimahatratra, whose clergy includes student strikers of the Madagascar leader.

But the pope saved his displeasure for the problem of the Ukrainian Catholic Church, brutally suppressed in 1946 when dictator Joseph Stalin ordered it absorbed into the Russian Catholic Church. Today Ukrainian Catholics make up the largest underground church in the Soviet Union.

"This is really a very difficult problem," the pope said of the issue still being discussed with Soviet Orthodox Church leaders.

John Paul often has expressed a desire to visit his flock in the Soviet Union, and some church officials hope a meeting with

Gorbachev could pave the way for it. "Naturally I am always willing to receive who ever asks for a meeting with me," the pope said in Italian. "I would meet him (Gorbachev) with great respect as the head of state, the head of a system."

Then, as far as this could be linked to the visit to the Soviet Union, that is something else because that is a church matter.

On his arrival in Madagascar, the pope noted the severe economic difficulties facing the island as they do most African nations.

"The bishops of this country are working with all their brothers, with determination, for national recovery," he said.

Madagascar is the first stop on a trip that also is to take the pope to the French Indian Ocean island of Reunion, and to Zambia and Malawi.

Like many African countries, Ratsiraka has abandoned socialist policies to gain Western aid and improve a moribund economy. At the same time he has moved to mend fences with the church.

In his welcoming remarks, the Madagascar leader wasted no time trying to turn the pope to political advantage. Opposition parties, which claim electoral fraud in the March 12 presidential elections, urged a pause in the street violence, and the Federation of Madagascar Churches, which supports the opposition fraud claims, also appealed for tranquility during the papal visit.

The Roman Catholic Church is a member of the church group and some of its clergy may be victims of retaliation for their outspoken criticism of Ratsiraka's government.

"In 1988, four separate murders of clergymen again raised speculation that the Catholic Church, whose officials often speak out on controversial issues, is being targeted by unknown political groups to silence church criticism," says the State Department's report on human rights in Madagascar.

National Day of Prayer to be May 4

TWIN FALLS.—May 4 marks the 37th consecutive observance of the National Day of Prayer.

Though days of prayer are found throughout our history, and the National Day of Prayer has been in existence since 1952, this is the day's first year as a specific calendar date.

Following unanimous action of both houses of Congress, President Reagan signed a bill on May 5, 1988, making the National Day of Prayer the first Thursday of every May.

Participating Magie Valley churches will sponsor a no-host breakfast at 7 a.m. Thursday at the Golden Griddle Restaurant, 2026 Kimberly Road; and the public is invited. For information call Jack Muldoon at 733-8831 or David Kribbs at 733-2422.

Briefly

Convicted killer gets life sentence

POCATELLO (AP) — Convicted killer Barrett Enno escaped the death penalty today, receiving a life prison term without possibility of parole for last fall's brutal slaying of a Pocatello woman. Enno, 18, was convicted in the October murder of Joann Freeman, 38, following a dispute between the two. Ms. Freeman was strangled, beaten with a board and run over by a car before her body was set on fire. But 6th District Judge William Woodland ruled that mitigating circumstances in the case more than offset the nature of the crime.

Child abuser receives 10-year term

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A man who pleaded guilty to abusing a 14-year-old girl at her Coeur d'Alene home was sentenced to 10 years in prison. After imposing the sentence Thursday, First District Court Judge James Judd retained jurisdiction on Kenneth McMahon, 23, and ordered him to serve 180 days in the sexual offender program at North Idaho's Correctional Institute at Cottonwood. McMahon was ordered to pay $111 in restitution for the victim's counseling.

Nampa man dies in one-car crash

COTTONWOOD (AP) — A Nampa man died Thursday night after a one-car accident on U.S. Highway 95 about 11 miles north of Cottonwood, Idaho State Police reported. Jay Edward Jewell, 19, was taken from the crash site to St. Mary's Hospital in Cottonwood, where he died about 8:30 p.m., a police dispatcher said.

School water shows contamination

EAGLE (AP) — One of the five drinking fountains at Eagle Elementary School was turned off after tests showed its water had a higher level of lead than is considered safe by the Environmental Protection Agency. Meridian School District Superintendent Nick Hallett said Thursday that the water had a lead reading of .072 parts per million. Federal guidelines recommend levels no higher than .05 parts per million.

VA shelter home couple evicted

BOISE (AP) — Delinquent rent has led to the eviction of a couple who managed a Boise shelter home where the Veterans Administration believes patients were abused. VA social workers in Boise removed three veterans from Reflections Shelter Home in March, after the veterans reported witnessing verbal and physical abuse of residents. The state is investigating similar reports.

Amoco Oil faces fine for gas spill

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare has proposed a $20,000 fine against Amoco Oil Co. for groundwater contamination caused by a Jan. 24 gasoline spill at the company's Boise tank farm. Amoco estimates that 40,000 gallons of gas may have entered the groundwater under the site since the spill. Health and Welfare spokeswoman Mary Keltz said the agency's Division of Environmental Quality said Thursday that gas in the groundwater has created a potential health hazard, but there has been no evidence of drinking water contamination.

Idahoan receives Bush appointment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Micron Technology Inc. President Juan Benitez on Friday was appointed a deputy assistant secretary in the U.S. Department of Commerce. Benitez, 38, was the first Idahoan to gain a senior position in the administration of President Bush. Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher said Benitez will oversee science and electronics in the department's International Trade Administration.

Bennion to be new Ricks president

REXBURG (AP) — Steven D. Bennion, currently president of Utah's Snow College, has been selected to replace Joe Christensen as president of Mormon Church-owned Ricks College. The junior college's board of trustees made the announcement Friday jointly with the Utah State Board of Regents, which was meeting in St. George, Utah. Bennion, 47, will leave Snow College, a junior college located in Ephraim, on July 1, to take over at the 7,500-student Ricks, the largest privately owned junior college in the United States. Christensen was called April 1 to be a member of the Mormon Church's First Quorum of the Seventy.

McClure strategy attacks tree spiking

MOSCOW (AP) — Idaho Sen. James McClure suggests a trade-off of 100 acres of wilderness brought under the axe for every acre of trees "spiked" by radical environmentalists. "I don't think they (tree spikers) ought to get away free," he said. "When they see it's not just a free statement anymore, they're going to pay a price." Earlier this week, an anonymous letter notified the Clearwater National Forest that 500 pounds of steel spikes had been pounded into trees in the proposed Post Office timber sale along the Lochsa River. Chainsaws or bandsaws at the mill can explode into shrapnel if they hit a spike in the wood. McClure said Thursday that he would be willing to introduce legislation calling for the opening of wilderness to logging as a penalty for tree spiking if current federal penalties do not put a stop to what he labels an "eco-terrorist" practice. For every acre of trees spiked, McClure said, he would support opening up 100 acres of wilderness land to timber harvesting. Asked if such a law would penalize everyone for the actions of a few extremists, McClure replied: "Of course, that's what ordinarily happens. Whenever you get a situation where a certain number of people take actions that have to be condemned by society, you ordinarily pass rules and regulations that inhibit other people as well. That's characteristic, and I'm sorry it has to happen that way." McClure and Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, were both instrumental in passing legislation in 1987 leveling criminal penalties for spiking, injuring or destroying any tree held in trust by the federal government. "These are criminal acts and must be dealt with firmly and decisively," Craig said. "Now is the time for the people of our region to form a united front against such bootlegging." The timber industry in Idaho and the Clearwater Forest will contribute at least $5,000 to a reward fund to track down the tree spikers. Clearwater officials say the investigation into the spiking is now the top priority within the northern region of the U.S. Forest Service.

U of I student senator resigns in fee hike flap

MOSCOW (AP) — A University of Idaho student senator and supporter of a student fee hike has resigned, heading off plans by other student leaders to court him for publicly backing the fee hike in the face of overwhelming student opposition. But Sen. Craig McCurry said he decided to step down, not because he was labeled a "traitor" by other student leaders, but because he wanted more time to study for his final examinations next month. He is scheduled to graduate this spring. In a letter to Senate President Lynn Major, McCurry said he stood by his statements in support of the fee hike to the Board of Education last week and his decision to resign "is not in response to pressure you or anyone else has attempted to exert upon me." Despite a preliminary board decision to shelve the fee-hike plan in March and a subsequent two-to-one advisory vote of students to oppose any increase, McCurry accepted an administration invitation to take a charter flight to Pocatello with university officials to help revive the plan at the board meeting. Student President Tina Kagi, an opponent of the fee increase proposal, also took the charter to attend the meeting. The board eventually reversed its earlier decision and agreed to set in motion the machinery toward a $25-a-semester increase in fees at the University of Idaho. Major claimed McCurry misrepresented student government's stance on the issue in his presentation to the board. McCurry was the lone vote on the 12-member student Senate against a resolution denouncing the administration's fee-increase scheme. "I had contacted Tina and a couple of senators to discuss if impeachment or asking for his resignation were actions we wanted to partake in, and the general consensus seemed to be, 'Yes,'" Major said. "I was going to ask for his resignation ... anyway."

'Splat-gun' theme park moves ahead

BOISE (AP) — Saying it could not pass moral judgment on a legal activity, the Ada County Commission agreed to waive some conditions on development of a "splat-gun" theme park imposed by the county Planning and Zoning Commission. The three-member commission voted unanimously on Thursday against throwing roadblocks in the way of the business, which is being developed by Peter Covino of Meridian at a former ice skating rink west of Boise. "This board cannot judge what goes on in the building if it is not illegal by state or federal law or city or county ordinance," said Commissioner Mike Johnson. The proposed amusement center would include a 20-foot castle, 15-foot volcano, underground passageways, trap doors and ghost towns where players could stalk each other with paint-shooting air guns. Covino told commissioners no one under 14 years old would be admitted, and anyone under 17 would have to show written permission from parents. He said he plans to invest about $130,000 in the center to open in early summer. But residents living near the abandoned ice rink asked the county to stop Covino's development, saying it would promote violence. Opponents presented the county with petitions against the project containing more than 400 signatures. In response, the Planning and Zoning Commission imposed conditions including proposed limits on hours and a requirement that Covino hook up a city sewer line more than 1,100 feet away. "I don't feel there's a moral issue here," Covino told county commissioners Thursday. "I think of the place as a family amusement center and activity. There's no danger or health hazard." He said he had contacted similar splat-gun amusement centers from California to New Jersey, and none of the ones he contacted reported any protests about their games. "Apparently I'm the only one who's being targeted," he said. "I think the initial people who were against us were totally misinformed as to what we're doing in there."

State OKs out-of-court settlement in spill of ag herbicide dinoseb

BOISE (AP) — The state has reached an out-of-court settlement on a two-year-old hazardous chemical spill in southeastern Idaho, marking the first finalized action under the 1986 Hazardous Materials Transportation Enforcement Act. The Department of Law Enforcement and the attorney general's office said Friday ACB Trucking Inc. of North Little Rock, Ark., will pay $15,000 in penalties and response costs for the April 24, 1987, spill of the agricultural herbicide dinoseb near Montpelier. Deputy Law Enforcement Director Dick Cade said the settlement payment will be used to reimburse local authorities for their costs in responding to and investigating the spill of the toxic chemical and to offset the state's costs in taking the case to court. Since the spill occurred, the trucking company has gone into receivership and is currently insolvent. Attorney General Jim Jones said, prompting the decision to settle the case rather than press ahead ahead for even stiffer penalties. He pointed out that company officials were notified that the truck was leaking the chemical when in Wyoming and still told the driver to "keep on truckin'." "This case should send the message that improper handling of hazardous wastes and materials on our highways is not going to be tolerated," Jones said. "When hazardous cargoes are transported in Idaho, those responsible will have to pay damages and response costs when a spill occurs." Several other enforcement actions, including one covering the 1987 chemical spill in the Little Salmon River that caused a significant fish kill, are still pending under the 1986 law, and Jones said the Montpelier spill case has pointed out the need for some modifications. Since local officials are typically the first on the scene after a spill occurs, Jones said the law should make it clear that not only state but also local response costs can be recovered from carriers.

Country marks 200th anniversary of Washington's inauguration

NEW YORK (AP) — Drum and bagpipe corps blared Friday to trumpet the start of a star-spangled celebration marking the 200th anniversary of George Washington's inauguration, including a speech from the president to take participants from George to George.

Organizers say as many as a million people could watch today's fireworks display, with hundreds of thousands at Sunday's reenactment and parade featuring President Bush and a stand-in representing George Washington.

The hoopla may not rival the Bicentennial of 1976, or Liberty Week-end of 1986, but "momentum is building," said Wayne Baruch, of Radio City Music Hall Productions, which is putting on the shows.

It was 200 years ago that Washington slept here, when the city that never sleeps was a relatively small town of 30,000 and served as the nation's capital.

"People don't realize that every 50 years there's been a huge celebration of the inauguration in New York City," Baruch said. "This is the fourth one."

On Friday, there was a smattering of events up and down Manhattan, from a scholarly symposium on Washington at the Fraunces Tavern Museum downtown to a ceremony on the 100-year-old Washington Bridge over the Harlem River.

Organizers drummed up interest in Washington Square with performances by a drill team from La Salle Military Academy and the Long Island Minutemen, a drum and bugle corps. They were joined by members of the Daughters of the American Revolution, in period garb.

Today's schedule includes a flotilla of ships, followed by the second-largest fireworks show in the city's history. The Statue of Liberty show remains No. 1.

On Sunday, the inauguration will be re-enacted at Federal Hall on Wall Street and will resemble the 1789 original, if you can ignore the large-screen television alongside the platform.

Bush will speak at the Sunday ceremony, then join a parade to Washington Square: of modern military bands and 18th-century style life and drum corps.

The Designated George for the festivities is William Sommerfield, a gray-haired Philadelphian who looks and acts the part of Washington and will take the oath of office at Sunday's reenactment.

"It'll be George to George that day," Baruch said. "Two centuries of the presidency is one of the great success stories in human history. What we're celebrating is the enduring strength and leadership of the presidency."

"It should be more exciting than Liberty Weekend because people will see a lot of special effects," said Donna Grucci, vice president of Fireworks by Grucci, which is handling the pyrotechnics.

The 12-barge show will include the Grucci Split Comet, "a golden weeping willow that crosses and crackles at the tips," magnesium blasts "which will turn the night into day," and humbler, multi-colored low-level fountains "like they had 200 years ago," she said.

On Friday, Sommerfield, the stand-in George Washington, attended a ceremony at the Intrepid Sea-Air-Space Museum on the Hudson River. Models of the six frigates commissioned by Washington in 1794 were unveiled. At Fraunces Tavern Museum, George-ophiles attended a symposium on their favorite topic.

"He's both the most celebrated hero and the most heroic celebrity of our times," art historian Mark Thiethwaite said. "I think he would be amazed by how he's still needed and still being utilized. But he'd probably really be floored by it all."

GEORGE WASHINGTON

On April 30, 1789, George Washington, Revolutionary War general and national hero, was sworn-in as the first President of the United States. ## Horseshoe maker hopes Bush will boost sales

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — The world's largest horseshoe maker is hoping President Bush will pitch the backyard sport into the American consciousness and boost its sales the way his predecessor helped the jelly bean industry.

The first 100 days of the horseshoe-happy president have brought smiles to the St. Pierre Manufacturing Co., a second-generation factory begun by an amateur inventor more than a half-century ago.

"It's so crazy, just the fact that Bush's playing horseshoes has an impact on this industry," said Edward St. Pierre, 47, treasurer and son of the founder.

Although it's too early to tell how big the impact the White House and Camp David courts will have on the sport, St. Pierre said he has a hint from early orders this will be the company's best year yet.

The family is secretive about exactly how many shoes they sell, saying only that they ship thousands of shoe-and-stake kits yearly. But the president of the National Horseshoe Pitcher's Association supports their claim of being the largest pitching-shoe maker in the world.

The company's shoes were flung by the chief executive in a recent issue of Sports Illustrated and St. Pierre believes he set his top-line model at the April Fool's Day televised inauguration of the horseshoe pit Bush installed next to the White House swimming pool.

He is the proud possessor of a presidential letter dated Election Day. "Thank you very much for sending me the great pitching horseshoes," the Bush letter says. "Needless to say, the gift will get a lot of use and I appreciate your thoughtfulness."

Historians say the conquering Norman soldiers brought the game to England in the 11th century and early settlers brought it to America. The game came requires only two horseshoes per player and two stakes 40 feet apart. Players take turns throwing shoes, and those that encircle the stakes are "ringers," earning three points. The shoe that lands closest to the stake earns one point. Thus came the maxim, "Close only counts in horseshoes."

"When people first started pitching, they would use whatever discarded old shoe Dobbin threw off," said company Marketing Director Nanette St. Pierre, 44, sister of Edward and two other brothers in the family business.

The National Horseshoe Pitcher's Association regulated shoe size in the 1920s to a size slightly larger than the shoe on the average horse.

Bush, an NHPA member, is a better-than-average player, said association secretary Don Roberts. "He averages 25 percent ringers. That's not too bad."

The president's interest in the sport reportedly began a few years ago when a court was installed for Secret Service agents at his summer residence in Maine.

The National Horseshoe Pitcher's Association has been deluged with calls about the president's passion since his election.

SYDNEY OMARR

ASTROLOGICAL FORECASTS

IF APRIL 29 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are intuitive, a natural psychologist and character analyst. You learn by teaching, family relationships have been unorthodox. Your mother wanted so much to communicate but various circumstances thwarted that desire. Capricorn, Cancer, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. Domestic adjustment is due, will relate to where you live and to marital status. You are sensitive, sensual and usually give more in love than you receive. November will be memorable for you this year.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Individual who was in "romantic mood" just one week ago could appear indifferent. Spotlight on friends, variations, elements of deception. Your own popularity continues, you do not communicate but various circumstances thwarted that desire. Capricorn, Cancer, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. Domestic adjustment is due, will relate to where you live and to marital status. You are sensitive, sensual and usually give more in love than you receive. November will be memorable for you this year.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Results obtained from recent business venture, investment. Relationship intensive. Pressure of deadline exists. Door will be open for you to hit financial jackpot. Capricorn, Cancer figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Appointment that had been missed approximately nine days ago will now bring desired results. Focus on confidence, communication, ability to broaden personal horizons. Aries plays a minor role.

CANCER (June 21-July 21): Be ready for fresh start, display pioneering spirit, wear bright colors. Many comes from surprise source. What had been kept a "financial secret" is revealed to your advantage. Leo plays role.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 22): You'll be urged to cooperate with individual who plainly is your adversary. You'll choose between principles and convenience. If chase is the latter, many of your admirers will be disillusioned.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Study Less money. Leave fine points, details for another time. It's important that you gain overall view. Emphasis on how you relate to those who serve. Accent moderation. Questions will be answered.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Individual, supposedly an ally, would like to see you trip, fall. Be alert. Beware of possible trap. Romance, credit, style, envy are all part of scenario. Member of opposite sex verbalizes resentment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lively people are present, want you to "join in the fun." Be ready for change, travel, variety, excitement of discovery. Take notes, check dates for important appointment. Gemini plays prominent role.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Major domestic adjustment takes place, money is involved, agreement regarding rent, lease, taxes will figure prominently. Stress verbal, utility hunt, sense of your own threat. Virgo plays significant role.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Refuse to give up something of value for nothing. There have been rumors which some will attempt to use against you. Hold fast to principles, define terms, let others know you are not without allies.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Various cycles, numerical and astrological, tell of deadlines, emotional pressures, relationship that is being tested. Finally your own judgment will prevail. Reward or credit will be given if contributions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Obtain hint from Aquarius message. You'll locate article that had been lost, missing or stolen. You'll no longer be motivated. Focus on erasing fears, willingness to travel. Prediction is fulfilled.

L.M. BOYD
What's what

Scotland's Chopsticks
Q: Is anyone alive today who was born before "Chopsticks" was written?
A: No, sir, but maybe a few - those over 112 - were born before it was published. At Glasgow, Scotland, in 1877. By then, it had been a two-finger parlor piece for years.

Couples who go to marriage counselors rarely tell them the truth, contends one of same. At first, anyhow. This practitioner says it's the counselor's job to dig out the truth. Sometimes, though, when they finally see the truth, they wonder why they stayed together so long.

Lagnappe of a survey to find out about something else turned up this oddity: One American man in 50 thoroughly despises his neighbors.

The female housefly lives 29 days, the male 17. About. Seems longer.

MILKMEN
Imagine you could get your milk left on your doorstep as of old, if U.S. milkmen worked the way British milkmen do. They take bets on the horses. Typical note to a milkman over there: "Two pints of milk and half a crown on Good Night Nurse in the 4 o'clock at Newmarket."

Q: What was the first western invention the Japanese adopted?
A: Buttons.

Did you recognize the sound of your own voice the first time you heard it played back on tape? Tests show two out of three people don't.

COLLECTORS
Hobbyists who collect specialty items - stamps, comic books, glass, baseball cards - rarely save things meaningless to them - old clothes, twin, broken furniture. Hoarders of meaningless things rarely collect specialty items. Odd how that works.

Q: What's the difference between and male holly tree and a female holly tree?
A: The female is the one with the berries.

Sometimes baby sharks - even before they're born - eat other baby sharks.

Q: Who was our first golfing President?
A: William Howard Taft, the 32nd pounder.

University professor claims 'Ulysses' is riddled with errors

BOSTON (AP) — James Joyce, a shy Irish writer who liked a good joke, figured out a way to ensure his immortality.

"I've put in so many enigmas and puzzles that it will keep the professors busy for centuries arguing over what I meant," Joyce told a friend in 1922, shortly before his controversial "Ulysses" was published.

Sure enough, scholars have been quibbling for more than six decades over the metaphorical, pun-strewn masterpiece detailing Leopold Bloom's Homeric wanderings through the streets of Dublin.

The debate heated up in recent years with the 1984 release of a revised text of "Ulysses" billed by its editor, Hans Walter Gabler, as the definitive version. It is currently the only English-language edition available.

The controversy promises to come to a boil next month when a committee of Joycean specialists begins considering arguments by a renegade scholar that Gabler's edition is "a scandal and a travesty," riddled with errors and pulled from the market.

The committee will present its findings to Random House Inc., publisher of the classic.

The spelling, punctuation and syntax — never mind the underlying meanings — in "Ulysses" have been the source of furious argument since Joyce had the manuscript published in France after it was banned in Britain. Many errors were introduced into the text by French typesetters unfamiliar with English.

The author proofread the galley and made some revisions, but he suffered from severe eye disease and his vision was poor. No complete manuscript exists, so scholars have had to rely largely on corrected page proofs with the author's emendations scrawled in the margins.

Adding to the confusion was the fact that Joyce, a master of languages, wrote in a stream-of-consciousness style that often omitted punctuation and purposely misspelled words to make puns, sometimes in foreign languages.

Professor John Kidd, Boston University's impassioned Joycean specialist, has spent seven years ruminating on the work, as long as the author spent writing it.

He and assistants have spent thousands of hours reading the 700-page book aloud, comparing such minutiae as hyphenation and transposed letters among the 250 editions in 25 languages that have appeared.

Since Random House's revised edition hit the market, Kidd has been up in arms. "This man has made monstrous errors unparalleled in modern scholarship," he said in a recent interview.

Gabler, a West German Joycean scholar, claimed his version corrected more than 5,000 errors in previous editions.

Kidd has documented what he thinks are hundreds of errors in Gabler's version into a 300-page volume, "An Inquiry into Ulysses: The Corrected Text," that will be published early in May by the Bibliographic Society of America and examined by the Random House commission.

G. Thomas Tanselle, the head of the four-member committee, said he and his colleagues believed Kidd's arguments merited consideration.

"He has proceeded in a careful way to examine the (Gabler) edition and his comments have to be looked into seriously," said Tanselle, vice president of the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation in New York. "To say anything else would be premature."

Among the errors Kidd claims Gabler made were erroneously adding 60 periods to the text and deleting an equal number. He said that's just the tip of the iceberg.

Gabler was attending a conference in Australia and could not be reached for comment. But Princeton University's Professor A. Walton Litz, one of the country's foremost Joyceans, said the controversy "is in the mind of John Kidd."

Litz was one of three advisers on Gabler's edition. He doesn't claim Gabler's work is flawless but maintains the scholarship was sound.

Kidd located a few errors here and there, but his response has been exaggerated. And, of course, now he's got a terribly strong vested interest," Litz said from his New Jersey office.

Some may find it silly that academics are arguing at such length over semantics and capitalizations. But to the thousands of professors nationwide introducing undergraduates to the richness of Joyce's writing, the battle is as significant as choosing which edition of "Ulysses" to teach.

"It's worth all the tussle because the book means so much to the students," said Adele Dalsimer, who co-directs the Irish Studies program at Boston College.

Dalsimer said she and her colleagues were in a quandary about whether to trade their much-thumbed and heavily annotated older editions in for the revised Gabler edition.

"Anyone who teaches 'Ulysses' carries a book with years and years of notes," said Dalsimer. "To change the text of Joyce is not like changing any other text. It's a relinquishing."

Kidd said he can't accept that Gabler's latest version is the only one available to the 100,000 people who buy the book annually. "It's a crime," he said, voice rising.

Joyce would have relished Kidd's name, a possible pun on the renegade professor's place in academia. Many of Kidd's scholarly elders have dismissed the 36-year-old as young, brash and arrogant.

"It can be irritating to a bunch of pompous old scholars when a wacky young guy catches them up. They would have taken it better from a more august personage," Kidd said.

He has nevertheless kept up his crusade, saying, "It's only the infant who will announce the emperor has no clothes."

'This man has made monstrous errors unparalleled in modern scholarship.'

John Kidd says 'Ulysses' should be pulled from market

Utah woman fulfills father's wish, returns painting to Soviets

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mary Olsen fulfilled her Russian-born father's dying wish Friday when she formally handed over a painting to a Soviet art courier for return to the U.S.S.R. and a spot in a Leningrad gallery.

Olsen's father, Benjamin George Vaganoff, died in Salt Lake City March 23, 1981, at age 81. The artist's last request was that his painting, "Surrender — Never," be given to the motherland he had left in 1921.

Olsen said she had delayed in meeting her father's final wish because she found it emotionally taxing to think about giving up the work, which depicts a Russian soldier symbolically clad in armor with a burning World War II Stalingrad, under attack by Nazi planes, in the background.

Stalingrad has since been renamed Volgograd, but the heroic theme of what Soviets recall as the Great Patriotic War still has currency, said Rep. Wayne Owens, who helped arrange the transfer.

Owens said the return of the painting to Nikita Khrushchev, a courier for an international exhibit currently on display at the University of Utah, was another milestone for the Soviet Union's glasnost, or openness, policies.

"The manifestation of the Soviet individual is more visible now through the warmth that glasnost has brought," said Owens, D-Utah. "A new step in openness will be the carrying of this painting by the delegate back to Russia."

Olsen contacted Owens' office a year ago about returning the painting to the U.S.S.R. Owens' staff at first considered having a member of the Soviet Intermediate Nuclear Forces treaty delegation, here take the painting back with him.

A 30-member Soviet delegation is based at Hercules Inc., 25 miles southwest of Salt Lake City, to monitor American compliance with the INF treaty banning all intermediate-range nuclear weapons.

Eventually, Owens determined it would be quicker to have Fomin handle the painting. Fomin planned to return to the Soviet Union late Friday or Saturday.

Vaganoff was a prolific artist who worked in a wide variety of media and most favored snowscapes, Olsen said.

Bonn draws support on missile talks

BOON, West Germany (AP) — Nearly half the NATO countries have turned against the United States and Britain to support West Germany's demand for superpower talks on short-range nuclear missiles, government officials said Friday.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl's call for the talks has thrown him into a tense battle of wills with President Bush and with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who plans to discuss the issue with Kohl on Sunday in West Germany.

Mrs. Thatcher failed Friday to persuade Italy to change sides in the dispute, one of the most divisive to hit the 16-member North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Most of NATO's short-range nuclear weapons are based in West Germany, and West Germans are nervous about the arsenals because they would be used exclusively on German soil in case of war.

West Germany insists the United States agree to superpower talks on the weapons.

The United States and Britain reject the idea of talks, saying negotiations on short-range arsenals cannot begin as long as the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact has a superiority in conventional forces. West German polls show that the electorate favors such talks. The military reductions announced by Mikhail S. Gorbachev has made the Soviet leader a popular figure in Western Europe.

West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher discussed the issue Friday with the U.S. ambassador in Bonn, Vernon A. Walters. A Foreign Ministry statement said both sides expressed their belief that the Alliance will jointly resolve the still-open question of a formulation of a comprehensive (disarmament) concept.

But there were no indications that was about to happen. West German officials say most NATO nations on the European continent are starting to line up behind Kohl.

"We can see that we are finding more and more understanding for this position (for negotiations) within the whole Alliance," Genscher told Parliament on Friday. "Juergen Chrobog, Genscher's chief spokesman, told reporters that seven of the NATO nations favor talks on short-range missiles. Denmark, Belgium, Norway and Italy have announced their support of Kohl, and Chrobog said Greece and Spain were behind the West Germans as well.

France has not given a clear signal where it stands, but French President Francois Mitterrand said last week: "Nothing should be done that will compromise the movement toward disarmament."

The Netherlands has offered to mediate between the founding NATO members, and Dutch Premier Ruud Lubbers plans to travel to Bonn on Wednesday.

Kohl is slated to travel to Rome on Tuesday for discussions with Italy's leaders on the dispute, and Genscher will have talks in Paris the same day with French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas.

Italy's prime minister, Ciriaco de Mita, met for three hours Friday with Mrs. Thatcher and urged understanding of the West German position, saying the situation there must be taken into account. He apparently was referring to the housing in West Germany of most short-range weapons.

A spokesman at Mrs. Thatcher's 10 Downing St. office said Mrs. Thatcher argued strongly in Free

Soviet party readmits historian

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party has readmitted Roy A. Medvedev, a historian whose exposure of the bloody dictatorial rule of Josef Stalin prompted his expulsion 20 years ago, Tass said Friday.

Medvedev, 63, said he reacted positively to the news. Asked in an interview if he attributed his restoration to President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's reforms, he responded: "I didn't change my views. A turnaround occurred in the party, the Central Committee. They stopped discriminating against me. I have been published here."

Tass said Medvedev had asked the Central Committee's Party Control Committee to be restored as a party member, and the request was approved. But Medvedev told The Associated Press he had not made any request. He said party officials approached him several months ago and asked if he wanted to become a member again. They asked me how I would react, and I said I would not object."

Medvedev said he never considered asking to be restored as a party member during the rule of President Leonid I. Brezhnev because, "That was another epoch. Brezhnev died in 1982."

Like many Soviets out of favor for what once was considered dissent, Medvedev has gradually been restored to good graces.

Gorbachev likely to have opponent

LONDON (AP) — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev will have at least one opponent when parliament elects the country's new president next month, the head of the Tass news agency said Friday.

Leonid Kravchenko, director general of the official Soviet news agency, said a group of Moscow deputies plans to present an alternative candidate to Gorbachev. He did not identify the deputies and said he did not know who their candidate was.

"I know from the sentiment of Moscow there are a group of Moscow deputies who are going to present an alternative candidate. They didn't tell me who it was. This is not to express distrust of Gorbachev, but to stress the commitment to democracy," he told a news conference.

The new 2,250-seat Congress of People's Deputies will elect the Soviet president and elect 542 of its members to a new full-time legislature, the Supreme Soviet.

The president also will be chairman of the Supreme Soviet. The congress will meet May 25-June 1, the Tass executive said.

Gorbachev, who replaced Andrei A. Gromyko as president on Oct. 1, is expected to be chosen. Kravchenko was the first Soviet official to state publicly that the election would be contested.

Kravchenko, one of 1,500 deputies elected by voters to the congress, said the president would be chosen in the early days of the meeting and "one thing is certain, the procedure will be conducted by secret ballot."

He said any deputy could propose a candidate "and the congress will decide whether to accept the nomination."

Asked whether Gorbachev's opponent might be former Moscow party boss Boris N. Yeltsin, the political maverick elected to the congress in a landslide following an anti-establishment campaign,

Soviet people demand solutions to national ills

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev said Friday his program of perestroika has so enlivened the Soviet people that they are demanding unprecedented efforts to cure the country's ills.

In a meeting with Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the 58-year-old Kremlin chief said the party's Central Committee concluded this week that the people support his program of reform but demand that it be implemented persistently and consistently.

"Perestroika here in the U.S.S.R. has emerged now to such a scope, changes in all spheres of life have found such depth, that unprecedented exertion of force is demanded of the party," Gorbachev said in remarks carried by the Tass news agency.

The people's call for stronger measures, he said, was clearly voiced in recent parliamentary elections, in which at least three dozen senior party officials were defeated.

At a meeting Tuesday of the policy-making Central Committee

Gorbachev said shortages of housing, consumer goods and food were growing despite perestroika, which he launched four years ago. He blamed the ruling Communist Party's top leadership and local officials.

Other speakers at the meeting made startling admissions of failure, saying the party had lost its leading role in society as well as the people's faith.

A senior Western diplomat said Friday that publication of the admissions in the party daily Pravda may have been a ploy by Gorbachev to force the officials to back perestroika more solidly.

A total of 110 senior party officials resigned at the meeting in a housecleaning of oldtimers that gives Gorbachev a freer hand to push for more radical reforms.

Gorbachev told Jaruzelski that extreme swings in the public mood are common in such trying times because tension is surfacing between people who want to change everything today and others frightened by the tempo of change.

Bangladesh tornado death toll hits 660

SATURIA, Bangladesh (AP) — Rescuers pulled 48 bodies from the twisted wreckage of tornado-battered villages on Friday and a dozen people died in hospitals, raising the death toll to 660, officials said.

Hundreds more remained missing and officials said deaths from the storm may exceed 1,000.

Relatives of the dead wept and recited holy chants as rescuers labored in the debris in Saturia, one of more than 20 small villages in central Bangladesh hit hard by the storm.

The toll jumped sharply on Friday when rescuers recovered 40 bodies in Saturia and nearby Harganj, according to Relief Ministry officials speaking on the condition they not be identified.

About 400 people have been listed as missing, including 200 fishermen whose boats were capsized.

An army officer supervising the rescue, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the final death toll may exceed 1,000. At least 12,000 people have been injured.

The tornado swept into the Manikganj area, 25 miles northwest of Dhaka, on Wednesday night, blowing away people, animals and houses.

China hail, wind storm tolls heavy

BEIJING (AP) — Hail and windstorms in southern China have killed at least seven people and injured 530 other this month, the official Xinhua News Agency said.

The storms have hit 32 counties in Guizhou province, one of China's least developed regions, and destroyed 4,750 houses and 12,350 acres of crops, the news agency said.

A hailstorm killed 87 people and injured 4,200 in the southwestern province of Sichuan last week, according to Xinhua.

Ricks, Golden Eagles tangle today

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

REXBURG — Ricks College, which last weekend turned the northern division of Region 18 upside down by reaching out of a 3-10 baseball season to break even in its league-opening road swing, will try its luck with division-leading College of Southern Idaho today.

The Eagles, 19-14 overall and 3-1 in regional games, will take on the Vikings, 5-12 and 2-2, in a 1 p.m. doubleheader today. A sweep by CSI with six regional games remaining at home would all but guarantee the Eagles a spot in the post-season regional tournament.

But the Vikings have other ideas. "It's going to be tough," said Ricks coach Don Schiess, "but that's the reason we put on the pinstripes and pull on the spikes."

Meanwhile in Coeur d'Alene, Treasure Valley Community College, 14-15 overall and 2-2 in league games, will visit North Idaho College, 19-7 and 1-3.

CSI owns 7-6 and 11-0 wins over Ricks this season, but neither of those games was played here and neither counted in the league standings.

The Vikings has traditionally played well against CSI in regional competition.

"Ricks is Ricks," CSI coach Jim Walker said earlier this season. "They always seem to be tough on us."

"Probably consistency is the biggest thing for us," said Schiess. "I think if our pitching is consistent, we've got a chance to win, but consistency has been our biggest problem this year. The biggest difference for us now seems to be that we're reasonably healthy."

Along with Ehrhardt, a three-year starter at Idaho Falls High School, the Vikings' roster is loaded with familiar southern Idaho names, including Aaron Morehouse, a freshman shortstop from Meridian and a high school teammate of CSI's Lonnie Reiber and Brian Avram, who is hitting .318. Another is outfielder Bart Adamson, a sophomore and a .285 hitter for the Vikings, who played for three years at Idaho Falls' Bonneville High School.

Ricks' offensive leader is freshman outfielder-Clete Wendt, a right-handed hitter who is batting .342, followed by sophomore third baseman Steve Davis, hitting .321.

CSI is still led by sophomore outfielder Troy Hymas, batting .380, and sophomore catcher Jlesie Torres, hitting .373. But sophomore third baseman Butch Nolan and freshman second baseman Stacy Ayers, batting .301 and .333, respectively, hit well on last week's league-opening road swing. Nolan is starting at third in place of Ayers, who was moved to shortstop because of a leg injury. Murphy in turn is replacing sophomore Jonas Hamlin (.289), who is nursing a sore shoulder.

Carlesimo to decide next week

The Associated Press

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. — P.J. Carlesimo is not expected to decide about the Kentucky basketball coaching job until at least next week, Seton Hall athletic director Larry Keating said Friday.

"When he comes to a definite, final decision, he'll think about it for another week," Keating added.

Carlesimo, who guided the Pirates to a 31-7 season that ended a point short of a national title, has refused to comment on reports that the Kentucky job is his for the asking.

"If I knew you guys were waiting out here for me I would have come out and talked to you," Carlesimo said with a smile to reporters as he left his office for a banquet in Connecticut on Friday night. "I can't now or else I'll be late for my plane."

The Associated Press reported Tuesday that Carlesimo would accept the Kentucky job, but not until he talked to Seton Hall officials.

After Keating's statement Friday, a source at Kentucky said Carlesimo seemed to be having second thoughts.

"Maybe he isn't going to do it now," the source said. "It's up to Carlesimo now, but they sure thought they had him locked up."

The source said Carlesimo never definitely accepted the job and it was never even formally offered to him.

Another Kentucky source said "it's still on hold."

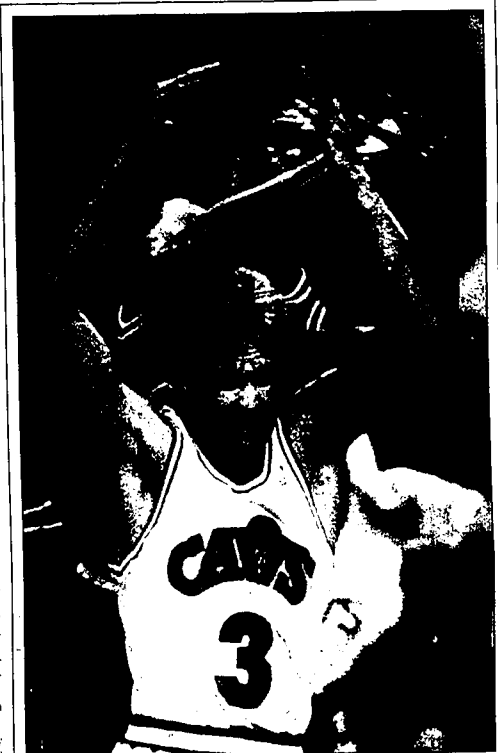

While Carlesimo considered the Kentucky job that would pay him about $600,000 annually, two of his assistant coaches were thinking about other jobs.

Assistant Tom Sullivan spent Friday interviewing at Bryant College in Rhode Island. Sullivan, who has spent two years on the Pirates staff, has talked about returning to New England even before Carlesimo was considered for the Kentucky job.

Bruce Hamburger, who has spent three seasons here, is considering whether to apply for the head coach job at Trenton State, the runner-up in Division III this past season. Hamburger was an assistant coach at the Ewing Township school for two years before joining Seton Hall.

Trenton State coach Kevin Bannon was named head coach at Rider, a Division I school, on Friday.

"I've lived my whole life in New Jersey and when I was there I did a lot of the recruiting and I know a lot of the people," Hamburger said. "I've now had experience with a big-time program here. It's something I want to consider."

Region III teams meet today at Minico Invitational

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

RUPERT — Twin Falls, Pocatello and Highland high schools, the traditional track powers in Region III, have historically held a getting-to-know-you meet in mid-April to size up the competition and make adjustments for the regional championships.

But when Twin Falls left the Gem State Conference last year, principals of the nine remaining league member schools voted that the Bruins would participate in no more conference regular-season meets.

So today's inaugural Minico Invitational, the first meeting of the season of all five Region III schools, will have more than usual significance.

"I just wish there were going to be few less teams there so we could get a better comparison between us," said Bruin coach Duane Stands. "Maybe we'll get lucky and have Ronnie Marsh draw some of the Highland sprinters in his heat or have our relay teams run against their relay teams."

Minico coach Wes Patterson has tentative commitments from 17 teams in the biggest meet ever held on the Minico's 14-month-old all-weather track. In addition of Minico, Burley, Pocatello, Twin Falls and Highland, the other six members of the GSC will be on hand along with Oakley, DeLo, Wood River, Buhl and Murtaugh.

Competition is scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m. with the 3,200-meter run finals and the first of the field events. Running event preliminaries will continue until noon, with the other running finals to start at 1 p.m. The balance of the field events will be completed in an 11 a.m. session.

"It will be good to get the five Region III teams in the same meet," said Minico coach Wes Patterson, who will host the regional finals on this track in three weeks. "Twin has never been on our track, so it will be good for them."

"We make adjustments every week, but it's been harder this year since we really haven't seen that much of Paky and Elko and Scott Holloway of Boise has entered. On the local scene, Twin Falls' Perry Hanchev, always a contender, is joined by David Driscoll and Jim Purves. Steve Hays of Blackfoot will be the major representative from Eastern Idaho.

Hopes for a local titlist ride with Jim Welch of Buhl and Doug Mackay of Felt. The field of 182 amateurs from across the state will be playing out of the Clear Lakes Country Club's new clubhouse and on their year-old 18-hole course.

Social highlight will be a steak fry tonight about 7 p.m. — or following completion of the first round.

Burley's Blakeley defends Buhl Amateur title

The Times-News

BUHL — Magic Valley's amateur championship golf season gets underway today with a lot of familiar faces teeing it up in the first round of the Buhl Amateur Golf Tournament.

The field will play at its convenience in today's round but will be paired and assigned tee-off times for Sunday's closing 18 holes. The championship flight is expected to begin leaving the tee about 1:30 p.m. for the final round Sunday.

Burley's Glenn Blakeley will be on hand to defend the title he won with a strong round in high winds in last year's finale. Blakeley, a former state amateur champion, will be very familiar with his major competition.

Western Idaho is sending down a solid contingent of players, including former state champion Joe Malay and the Caldwell father-son duo of Gordie Crockett and Todd Crockett.

But they won't be the only father-son act as Mickey Dugger is coming up from Winnemucca to join father Doyle Dugger. Glen Kushlan, maybe the only lefty in the title fight.

Nevada also is sending Bert Elliott of regional, at the Twin Falls Classic May 13.

"The Highland and Poky coaches would love to schedule us in a regular-season meet, but it's out of their hands," said Stands.

A stronger-than-expected Twin Falls boys' contingent combined with a relatively young Highland boys' team will make that matchup intriguing. Marsh has been southern Idaho's premier sprinter in Class A-1 this spring, while the Bruins' relay teams have been formidable.

Marsh will square off against Highland sophomore Matt McClung in the 100, which both have run under 10.9 seconds. Another feature matchup will be the medley relay, where Pocatello has a season best of 3:31.4; Twin Falls has run 3:39.7.

On the girls' side, Highland and Twin Falls will square off in three relays. The Rams have run a 50.5 4x100, while Twin Falls has a 52.67. Highland has a 1:45.7 4x200, while Twin Falls has run 1:51. The Rams have a 4:03.1 4x400 relay, while the Bruins have run 4:13.7.

Joe Robbie tired of highly paid rookies

MIAMI (AP) — Bad news for Louis Oliver and other recent draft picks of the Miami Dolphins: Team owner Joe Robbie is complaining that NFL rookies are overpaid.

The basic inequity of our current system of compensation is how much money is spent on the draft choices," Robbie said. "That money should be cut back so that more money is available to ... the tested veterans."

Robbie cited as an example the $11 million, six-year contract given by the Dallas Cowboys to their first-round pick, quarterback Troy Aikman.

approaches," Robbie said. Miami drafted the top-ranked quarterback in NFL history with the 27th pick in 1983.

From Smith, Robbie said, the Dolphins will get offensive help right away.

"Our balanced attack the last three or four years has been the long pass and the short pass," Robbie said. "Now I'll be the running game versus the pass again."

But first, the rookies must sign.

I don't see any rookie coming into this league making more money as a quarterback than (Dan) Marino and (John) Elway, without ever having faced an NFL line. We've never failed to go into the market when you can go into the market. I think what frustrated fans fail to realize is that you can't buy talent in the NFL. It isn't the biggest payroll that wins.'

— Joe Robbie

"I don't see any rookie coming into this league making more money as a quarterback than (Dan) Marino and (John) Elway, without ever having faced an NFL line," Robbie said.

Robbie made his comments even before Oliver's threat Thursday to sit out the 1989 season unless he is offered big money, but the owner predicted a struggle in signing the Florida safety and the Dolphins' other first-round choice, Florida State tailback Sammie Smith.

There's going to be nothing easy about it," Robbie said.

Every Dolphins first-round pick since Don McNeal in 1980 has held out for part of training camp. Defensive end John Bosa missed the most time, 40 days, in 1987. But Robbie denied dreading the prospect of negotiating with two first-round picks, rather than just one.

"If they want to test me, they can give me another first-round draft choice," he said.

The 72-year-old owner generally is inaccessible to reporters, but the Dolphins' success in the draft left him almost eager to be interviewed.

Robbie regarded the selection of Oliver on the 25th pick as a steal.

"It's the same as thinking all 26 of the teams that passed on Marino every time Thanksgiving agents don't want to be criticized for making a deal that isn't comparable to other contracts for first-round picks.

"We had no chance to sign Bosa until we did it," Robbie said. "We couldn't get into a serious conversation about negotiations because his agent was bidding his time."

Some Miami fans regard Robbie as stingy. But he has been generous with money as the Dolphins have taken advantage of new rules regarding free agency, signing 22 free agents this year.

"We've never failed to go into the market when you can go into the market," Robbie said. "I think what frustrated fans fail to realize is that you can't buy talent in the NFL. It isn't the biggest payroll that wins."

Last year, the Dolphins had the eighth-highest payroll in the league. They finished with a 6-10 record.

Pohl takes 2-stroke L. Vegas lead

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Dan Pohl overcame a bogey on the first hole and shot a 61 Friday to take a two-stroke lead after the third round of the Las Vegas Invitational.

"It started out like it was going to be a tough day, but after the first hole it was a flawless round," Pohl said.

Pohl has a total of 199, 17-under par, in the five-day, 90-hole tournament. He has played one round over each of three desert resort courses.

"I just wish there was one round to go instead of two," Pohl said. "With 36 holes to go, there's a ton of guys up there who can shoot some numbers, so it's still anybody's ball game."

Pohl went in front alone with birdies on two of his last three holes at Spanish Trail.

Robert Wrenn, Craig Stadler and Scott Hoch Club — shared second at 201, 15 under par.

Wrenn, who opened his round with an eagle and two birdies, shot a 66.

"I had a little hot streak going there," he said. "But with the scores everybody is shooting, you just about have to have a 66 or 67 to keep pace."

Stadler had a 65 and Hoch shot 67. And each could have been better.

"It was nice and easy early, and then it got ugly," said Hoch, who bogeyed two of his last five holes.

Stadler, who hasn't won a tournament in five years, was at 16 under par going to the par-five finishing hole and had a chance to tie for the lead. But a three-putt bogey dropped him back into a tie for second.

"I putted extremely well," Stadler said. "It's coming around now, I'm pretty much back where I was when I had a lot of success in the early '80s."

Steve Pate, Jim Carter and Billy Glasson were tied at 202, three back of the leader.

Pate had a 67 at the Desert Inn. Carter birdied four holes in a row in his 65 at Las Vegas. Glasson, in a tie for the lead through the first two rounds, slipped to a 70 at Spanish Trail.

Webb Heintzelman was well back at 209, but got there with one of the more unusual rounds of the year at Spanish Trail.

He played his first nine in 38, then came home in 28, matching the low nine-hole score on the PGA Tour this year.

He had six birdies and an eagle in a stretch of seven holes.

Tom Purtzer, who was tied for the second-round lead, shot a 75 at Desert Inn and finished 54 holes at 207.

Defending champion Gary Koch had a 76 at Las Vegas and failed to qualify for the final two rounds at 219.

The final two rounds will be played at the Las Vegas Country Club.

Geiberger-Henning team shoots 2nd 61

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Al Geiberger and Harold Henning fired their second consecutive 61 Friday to take a 3-stroke lead in the $650,000 Legends of Golf.

The 18-under 122 total tied the 36-hole record for the two-man, better-ball seniors event. The record was set in 1982 by Don January and Sam Snead.

First round co-leaders Bob Charles and Bruce Devlin were alone in second at 125 after a second-day 61 over the par-70 Onion Creek Club course.

Three teams were another shot back in third — Gardner Dickinson-Dave Hill, Tommy Jacobs-Ken Still and defending champions Bruce Crampton-Orrville Moody.

Although there were thunderstorms in the area much of the afternoon, only scattered rain fell on the course late in the round.

Geiberger and Henning birdied four of the last five holes, including the last three.

"A 3-stroke lead is not much," Henning said. "It's not a course you can be complacent on with a 62 or 63. Everybody's saying out there, 'Wow, you've got such a big lead.' But (several teams) are hanging around us like vultures."

It's the first year that Geiberger has been paired with Henning.

Geiberger has four titles on the Senior Tour, while Henning has two.

Devlin said the pair is formidable.

"They're a tough team," Devlin said. "I think they were the favorites. They have both played very well all year."

In the Legendary Champions division, an option for players over age 60, Doug Ford and Jerry Barber shot a 7-under-par 61 for a two-round total of 130.

"It's a real fun tournament. There's not a lot of pressure on you," said Barber, who turned 73 earlier this week.

Lopez' 66 puts her in 5-way tie at Sara Lee

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Nancy Lopez shot a 66 Friday to move into a five-way tie for the lead after the first round of the $425,000 Sara Lee Classic.

Lopez, looking for her first LPGA victory of the year, had three birdies and an eagle on par-5 holes at the 6,242-yard Hermitage Golf Course. She also made a 12-foot birdie putt at the par-3 third hole.

"I hit the ball real well and I hit my driver very well," said Lopez, who has 39 career victories. "It also felt good to make some of the putts I've been missing the last few weeks."

Sharing the lead at the 54-hole tournament were Missie Bertocci, Colleen Walker, Cindy Figg-Carrier and Patty Sheehan. Beth Daniel and Betsy King were one shot back at 67.

Lopez, who started her round on No. 10, pulled into a tie for the lead on the 485-yard eighth hole when she hit a 4-wood to the green and made a 15-foot putt for an eagle 3.

"It's important to have a really good start in a 54-hole tournament and to stay close to the leader. You really don't have the chance to falter and then recover," Lopez said.

Walker, Bertocci and Figg-Carrier each had six birdies and no bogeys.

The course played real well, the greens were smooth and the wind didn't pick up until we were on the back nine," said Walker, a two-time tour winner who is looking for her first 1989 victory.

Walker made birdie putts of 18 feet on the par-4 first hole and 25 feet on the par-4 10th to keep pace with the leaders.

"This is the type of course that if you keep it on the right side of the green you can score well," Walker said. "The greens are so good you can hit it straight at the hole."

All of Bertocci's birdies came on putts of less than 10 feet, except for a 20-footer on the par-4 12th that

Milt Thompson may be earning a starting spot

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Milt Thompson came to the St. Louis Cardinals as a reserve outfielder, but a 15-game hitting streak and steady fielding may turn Willie McGee into a benchwarmer.

"I've played alongside Kirby Puckett and McGee, two of the best center fielders in the game," right fielder Tom Brunansky said. "We haven't missed a beat with Milt."

When the Cardinals acquired Thompson last December for catcher Steve Lake and outfielder Curt Ford, Manager Whitey Herzog's plan was to have Thompson serve as a fourth regular of sorts, spelling Vince Coleman in left, McGee in center and Brunansky in right.

"I played all three positions in spring training to get ready for that," Thompson said. "It's hot here during the summer and guys need to have days off."

But McGee has had a lot of days off. A nagging injury to his left side has limited him to three pinch-hit appearances since the third game of the season.

When he's ready to return, the Cardinals may have trouble finding a place for the 1985 Most Valuable Player.

"I don't like to make blanket statements now," Herzog said. "We'll just have to deal with it when it gets to it."

But Herzog likes this kind of problem. In the Cardinals' first 19 games, the left-handed hitting Thompson was batting a team-leading .369 with six doubles and four runs batted in. His 15-game hitting streak that ended Wednesday tied him with Jim Rice of the Boston Red Sox for the season's longest streak, and he has debunked the theory that he was strictly a platoon player.

Thompson got only 20 at-bats against left-handed pitchers last year, but he was 10-for-27, a .370 clip, with four doubles.

to make the best of it," said Thompson. "Whitey has a lot of confidence in me and he's giving me the opportunity to play."

Thompson says playing every day, combined with some advice from batting instructor Johnny Lewis, helped him put together his streak. He was hitting .500 after his first 22 at-bats and his streak ended when he went 0-for-2 with an intentional walk that set up a run-scoring single by Brunansky.

"That's baseball," Thompson said. "I knew it wasn't going to last forever, but it was good while it lasted."

Scouting reports say to jam Thompson, but with Lewis' help he has had more success handling inside pitches.

"Before I was mainly an inside-out hitter and I used to hit it to left all the time," Thompson said. "Now I'm trying to hit it where it's pitched. The ball's in there and I'm just reacting, turning on it."

Thompson was a .288 career hitter before this season, and Herzog says he's been a complete player since coming to St. Louis.

"We didn't expect him to hit .400, but we knew he was capable of being a regular when we got him," Herzog said. "He's played very well in the outfield and he's getting a good jump on the ball."

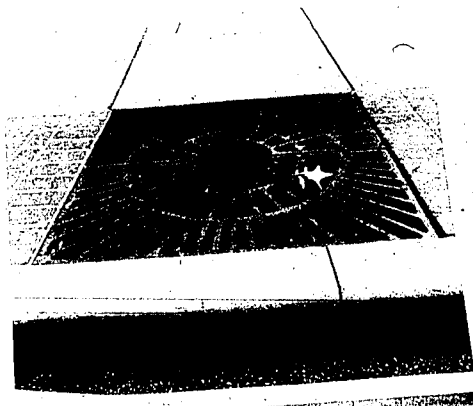

McGee wasn't considered to be injured seriously enough to go on the disabled list, but he hasn't yet played in the field and can only bat right-handed without pain.

"I'm still alive," McGee said. "That's all I have to say."

"When I get healthy, I'll tell the man, I'm not in a position to dictate any special day when I'll be ready to play. I'm improving."

Since the injury, McGee's name has been often mentioned in trade rumors. The Cardinals have been shopping for a starting pitcher for a long time, and need another arm more than a fourth starting outfielder.

Help fill 100 Million vacancies by 1992.

What can you do to help solve environmental problems? Join other Americans across the country in planting trees. You'll be shading your community and reducing heat-trapping CO<sub>2</sub> build-up in the earth's atmosphere. And, you'll be doing your part for Global ReLeaf.

There are at least 100 million tree planting sites available around our homes, towns and cities. And it's time these vacancies were filled. Planting trees is something you can do, right now, to make a difference in your community and the world.

This is just one of the goals of our Global ReLeaf campaign. Can it be done? Certainly. But not without your support. For more information on how you can help, write Global ReLeaf, American Forestry Association, P.O. Box 2000, Dept. GR1, Washington, DC 20013.

You can make a world of difference.

Market quiet after Thursday rally

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market showed little change in slackened trading Friday, bogging down after Thursday's rally to new post-crash highs.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 19 to 2,418.60, finishing the week with a net gain of 9.34 points.

Advancing and declining issues ran about even in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 738 up, 716 down and 502 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 158.39 million shares, down from 191.17 million in the previous session.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 188.50 million shares.

The Commerce Department reported Friday morning that the index of leading economic indicators fell 0.7 percent in March, following a 0.3 percent decline the month before.

The latest figure slightly exceeded the consensus estimate on Wall Street, and provided new evidence of the kind of slowing in business activity that many investors have been hoping for.

Interest rates fell in the credit markets on the news.

Analysts said the response in the stock market was muted, however, by some misgivings about the potential implications of the figures for corporate earnings.

In addition, brokers said traders were leery of chasing after a rally that has proceeded for more than a month with few interruptions.

Nevertheless, the Dow Jones industrial average finished April with a gain of 155.18 points. For the first four months of 1989, the average is up 250.23 points, or 11.51 percent.

Among individual issues in Friday's trading, Ford Motor dropped 1/4 to 47 1/2 in active trading. On Thursday the company reported higher first-quarter profits, but said its earnings for the full year might not equal the record total reported for 1988.

Elsewhere in the blue chip sector, General Electric rose 1/4 to 48 1/2; American Telephone & Telegraph dropped 1/4 to 34 1/2; Exxon fell 1/4 to 43 1/2, and USX was down 3/4 to 34 1/2.

Rite Aid fell 1 1/2 to 34 1/2. Ohio associates arrested the company's president on bribery charges Thursday. In a statement Friday, Rite Aid called the charge "totally without merit."

Precious metals issues were weak as the price of gold fell $5.40 an ounce to $377.90 on the Commodity Exchange in New York. ASA Ltd. dropped 3/4 to 11 1/2; Battle Mountain Gold 3/4 to 13 1/2; and Freeport-McMoRan Gold 1/2 to 11 1/2.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $2.13 billion, or 0.07 percent, in value.
