China puts capital under martial law

The Associated Press

BEIJING — China declared martial law in parts of the capital today to crack down on hundreds of thousands of people demonstrating for political reform.

The government sent in troops, but residents blocked army trucks and some soldiers turned back waving victory signs.

Martial law began at 10 a.m. (7 p.m. MDT Friday) in eight districts in the central city, including Tiananmen Square, the center of the protests. No curfew was imposed, and no date was given for lifting martial law.

Shortly after martial law took effect, military helicopters were seen flying over the sprawling square.

The protesters, thousands of them on a hunger strike, have occupied 100-acre Tiananmen Square for a week, demanding talks with the government, a free press and an end to official corruption.

Premier Li Peng said they threatened Communist Party rule and were being manipulated by people who wanted to overthrow the government. Communist Party chief Zhao Ziyang, who opposed a crackdown, offered to resign but the party had not acted on his offer, sources said.

The official Xinhua News Agency said it signed the martial-law order to put an end to "serious turmoil ... (that) destroyed people's life and social order."

Beijing Mayor Chen Xitong signed six measures "forbidding" marches, strikes, class boycotts, distribution of pamphlets, spreading rumors, attacks on leaders and media outlets and "any other destructive actions."

Chen said soldiers were authorized to take any measures necessary to maintain order in the city of 10 million.

In a separate order, he said foreign reporters were forbidden to "incite or instigate Chinese to march" and could not conduct interviews or make tapes or videos on the streets or at government offices, schools, factories and mines. "Any violators will be stopped according to the law," the order said.

The government ordered the Cable

News Network to halt transmissions, and the network had to end its coverage at about 8:10 p.m. MDT. CBS also said officials cut off its transmissions.

CNN reported that even China Central Television, the state-run network, had been shut down after the work; it was the first time martial law was declared in Beijing since Communist China was founded in 1949. Beijing becomes the second city under martial law. Lhasa, capital of Tibet, has been under martial law since March after anti-Chinese riots.

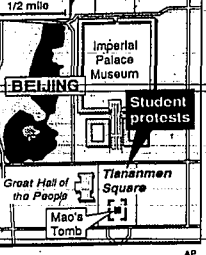

Soldiers began moving into the city from the east and west before dawn, but thousands of students poured into the streets to surround troop trucks. They parked factory trucks and buses across key intersections to serve as barriers, lifted lane dividers across the road and at some places formed human barricades.

"We are people and you are people! Why do you have no feelings?" one demonstrator shouted at the troops.

Military helicopters made repeated low runs over the city, a rare sight.

About 15 trucks, each filled with about two dozen soldiers, turned around and drove back the way they came after about 500 students and supporters surrounded them for sev-

Ida Heaviside of Twin Falls tours the former hospital where she worked as a nurse from 1934 until 1938

Farewell visit revives memories

By JENNIFER KAUTH Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sunlight filtered through dusty window panes and a slight breeze rustled torn curtains as a group of retired nurses roamed through the old county hospital building and reminisced about years long gone.

"I have so many fine memories of this old building," exclaimed 79-year-old Mae Herron as she glanced down a hallway.

The group of seven friends gathered Friday to say their good-byes to the old hospital where they used to work.

The building, scheduled to be demolished this June, will be replaced with a paved parking lot as Magic Valley Regional Medical Center expands its facilities to include a cancer treatment facility.

They didn't seem to mind the peeling paint, sagging ceiling boards and broken windows. They wandered the hallways and old wards, recalling stories of this patient or that and laughing about the quirks of doctors they had worked with.

Jan Reynolds, who said she was the oldest of the bunch, shared a favorite story about a kidney infection patient who could only see NURSES on Page A2

U.S., Bonn 'progress' toward missile accord

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — West German Defense Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg, ending two days of talks with Secretary of State James A. Baker III, said the two had "made progress" in forging a common stance on the future of NATO's short-range nuclear missiles.

"The overall discussions were very, very encouraging," the defense minister said after a senior West German government source said in Bonn that the United States and West Germany had agreed in principle on a compromise.

"The Germans gave Secretary Baker a proposal on the short-range nuclear force," said a senior White House official. "We made a number of changes and suggestions. Late today, the United States returned a paper to the Germans with a number of explicit conditions to consider. No responses have yet been received. As far as we know, we do not have an agreement."

But the official said, "It's fair to say there's been progress. We are exchanging papers and studying specific language."

Stoltenberg, talking with reporters, declined to comment on whether there was an agreement in principle on the issue, which has threatened to split the alliance 10 days before the NATO summit meeting.

Pressed on whether he and Baker had made progress, Stoltenberg said:

"We work for a common position, so we have to argue and try to come together. And we made progress."

One Washington diplomatic source close to the discussions said Baker and Stoltenberg were trying to come to a "gentleman's agreement" on the missile dilemma before the 16-nation NATO summit meeting in Brussels May 29-30.

April income tax payments net record budget surplus

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An unusually large surge in April income tax payments helped produce a record $41.45 billion budget surplus for the government last month, three times the surplus posted in April 1988, the Treasury Department said Friday.

The April surplus, representing the difference between what the government took in and what it spent last month, was farmed by a $8.53 billion bump in individual income tax receipts, up from the $33.33 billion collected in April 1988.

It was the largest monthly surplus on record, surpassing the previous high of $38.9 billion posted in April 1987 and far ahead of last April's $13.77-billion surplus, Treasury officials said.

"It's a very encouraging number," said Louis Crandall, chief economist for R.H.

Wrightson & Associates in New York. "What we're seeing suggests that the current tax structure is generating somewhat higher revenues than we thought ahead of time."

Analysts said tax revenues may be running ahead of expectations because of increased sales of stocks and other assets that resulted in higher capital gains and because taxpayers shockproofed some of their income from 1987 into 1988, when the top tax rate was lowered.

In April, the government had revenues of $123.95 billion, up 18 percent from the same month a year earlier. Spending, meanwhile, totaled $87.51 billion, down 8.4 percent from April 1988.

For the first seven months of fiscal 1989, which began Oct. 1, the government ran a $66.99 billion deficit, 17.9 percent smaller than the $105.84 billion shortfall at the same point in the previous fiscal year.

Stallings looks to '92 for Senate bid

The Associated Press

BOISE — Rep. Richard Stallings says he is under considerable pressure from northern Idaho Democrats to run for the U.S. Senate, but if he accedes it probably will not be until 1992 when he would take on Republican Steve Symms.

Stallings, the 2nd District congressman, made a trip into the other district last week. He said at receptions in Lewiston and Coeur d'Alene, the first thing everybody asked him was, "Are you going to announce for the Senate in 1992?"

"My answer was no," Stallings said Friday, in the taping of KTVB's weekend "Viewpoint" program to be telecast Sunday.

He said his first priority would be to run for reelection to his fourth term next year. "I'm happy in the House. I think I have been successful there. At this point, I have no interest in taking a demotion and running for the Senate," Stallings said.

The term of Republican Sen. James McClure is up in 1990. McClure won't say whether he plans to seek a fourth term, although he has hired a campaign director.

Stallings said there are a lot of northern Idaho Democrats who would like him to run against either McClure or Symms.

But he said even if McClure bows out, he probably would not run for the Senate in 1990.

"I would look at it, but my inclination right now is to stay where I am," he said.

When he asked if there were more likely that he would make a U.S. Senate bid in 1992 (Symms) rather than 1990, he said:

"There's no question about it, because I won't run (for the Senate) in 1990."

On another matter, Stallings said he thought Idaho's chances of landing the Special Isotope Separation project at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory slipped a little during the week.

A House committee voted to divert $6 million, which had been earmarked for SIS programs, to further environmental studies.

"I've said all along our chances were 50-50. A few weeks ago, I actually moved up to 60-40. I think I'm back to 50-50," he said.

Rep. Albert Bustamante, D-Texas, tried to divert $11 million in SIS funding for environmental studies, and Stallings said it was a "minor victory" that only $6 million was diverted.

"We won by two votes. That's a committee that in the past has been very supportive of the SIS. To have that close of a vote, obviously, we're very nervous," he said.

British math prodigy, 17, joins Harvard faculty

The Associated Press

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — A 17-year-old British math prodigy has accepted a one-year postdoctoral fellowship at Harvard University, becoming one of the youngest Ivy League faculty members ever, Harvard officials said Friday.

Ruth J. Lawrence was taught by her father in their home in Huddersfield, England, and had never been to school before she entered Oxford University at age 11 in 1983.

She graduated from the prestigious British university just two years later, at age 13, and expects to receive a doctorate in mathematics there this year.

"She's a very pleasant, well-balanced person, happy to talk about various topics and not particularly aggressive or particularly shy," said Vaughan Jones, a professor of mathematics at the University of California at Berkeley.

Lawrence was courted by several leading American universities, including Berkeley and the Institute for Advanced Studies at Princeton University in New Jersey, before she accepted Harvard's offer.

Jones, who has visited Lawrence in England, said she is a vegetarian and likes bicycling on a tandem bike with her father, a computer consultant.

While at Oxford, she carried a reputation as "the best undergraduate ever in mathematics there," Jones added.

Harvard officials said she will arrive in the fall and spend her first semester in Cambridge doing research, free of teaching responsibilities. In the spring, she is scheduled to lead a graduate seminar on knot theory, an area of theoretical mathematics dealing with knots and similar curved, three-dimensional objects.

Iowa probe may look at sabotage

The Associated Press

NORFOLK, Va. — The Navy declined Friday to say whether sabotage is under investigation as a possible cause of the April 19 explosion on the battleship Iowa that killed 47 sailors.

A Virginia newspaper reported that foul play was being looked into after the sister of a crewman who was killed told authorities that her brother and a surviving sailor had taken out life insurance policies naming each other as beneficiary.

Both policies, taken out more than a year ago, were for $50,000, with a double-indemnity clause in case of accidental death; the sister told the Virginian-Pilot and The Ledger-Star of Norfolk. The newspaper said the sister spoke on condition that her name and her brother's names not be disclosed.

Officials contacted by the newspaper confirmed that the NIS and the FBI were questioning the beneficiary. But a Navy spokesman at the Pentagon, Lt. Bruce Cole, said Friday they had no details on what the NIS was looking into and did not know if sabotage was a target of the investigation.

"In every large accident investigation such as this, it's standard procedure to ask the Naval Investigative Service to assist in exploring every possible cause which might lead to further understanding of the causes and circumstances of the tragedy, Cole said.

The newspaper also reported that Navy investigators have learned that the No. 2 gun turret where the explosion occurred was significantly undermanned and that a number of those working in the turret lacked required training.

The turret, one of three on the 887-foot ship, had far fewer crew members assigned than either of the other two, despite recommendations from the Iowa's gunnery officer two months before the explosion that the turret's staff be increased. According to the ship's battle bill obtained by the newspaper, the battle bill defines the positions that are to be manned aboard a ship in wartime conditions.

not swallow his pills. She walked down to the room, noticing the brown brick had been repainted pink; and brought to a crack between two bricks.

"The patient used to lipse up all his pills in that nook," she said, chuckling to herself. "Boy, was the doctor mad when he found out."

The women's footsteps echoed through the empty building where they used to put in 12-hour days and sometimes 20-hour "private duty" shifts.

"We worked with very little," said 81-year-old Elizabeth Sliger. "But we had no one to complain to, no grievance boards, so we had to make do with what we had."

The nurses lived next door in the old nurses building, which currently houses the Teen-Parent Program, some Girl Scouts of America offices and other offices. It will also be demolished this summer.

"We got room and board and they did our laundry for us," Reynolds said.

The seven all began working at the hospital around 1930. They talked of the Depression era, where the county coffers ran low and the nurses were paid with vouchers.

"When there was money, staff nurses were paid $70 per month and supervisors earned $90 per month."

And the group talked at length about changes in medicine. When they worked at the Twin Falls County General Hospital, there was no ward for newborns. Babies were delivered at home — the nurses were in charge of keeping the "o.b. bag" stocked.

"The hospital didn't even have a ward for children, since only two or three would be at the hospital at one time."

"We used to put the children's crib in the hallway so we could all take turns entertaining them," Sliger said. Children were mostly cared for at home in those days, she said.

Floorboards creaked as the women made their way through the old wards, big rooms where patients were housed all together.

Sliger said she hated working in the infectious disease ward, where typhoid fever sufferers were put in one room. And she told of the many babies that died during the whooping cough epidemic.

"We lost a lot of babies," she said with a sigh.

The big difference back then, the nurses said, was that the word "prevention" was never associated with medicine.

"We used to treat things as they popped up," Sliger said.

Clara Belle Tribulla, 78, summed up the difference between the nurses of yesterday and the nurses of tomorrow: "Now you got to know a lot more, but you don't have to break your back."

The women made their way out the back door to sit on the front steps one last time. Despite the building's cracked facade, it provided the perfect background to the old friends' chattering and story telling.

The stepped down into the shadow of the trees and followed the sidewalk around the corner.

"It sure does hold a lot of fond memories," said Lucy Belle Boughton, 81, as she glanced back at the building.

Marcos remains in critical condition

HONOLULU (AP) — Former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos was said to be responding to treatment Friday for kidney, heart and lung failure, medical officials said. He remained in critical condition. Marcos remained on kidney dialysis and a respirator in the hospital's intensive care unit, and is drifting in and out of consciousness, Tiwanak said. His prognosis is still very poor, he said.

"It is very serious, but he's hanging on," Imelda Marcos, wife of the 71-year-old deposed leader, told reporters with a smile as she arrived at the hospital Friday afternoon and was escorted into the hospital chapel.

Mrs. Marcos made a public appeal to Philippine President Corason Aquino to allow Marcos to return to his homeland to die.

Mrs. Aquino said she would not allow Marcos to return and would not permit him to be buried on Philippine soil, out of concern his presence would spark unrest.

Train crew clean of drugs, alcohol

LOS ANGELES TIMES

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. — The faculties of five crew members aboard the Southern Pacific freight train that derailed and killed four people here May 12 were not impaired by alcohol or drugs, according to results of toxicological tests released Friday.

The Federal Railroad Administration said blood and urine samples taken from the three surviving crew members and the two trainmen who died in the wreck contained no trace of alcohol or illegal substances.

Also Friday, federal investigators said that, seconds before the runaway train leaped the tracks at a bend and slammed into a row of homes, its engineer predicted the crew would not survive the ordeal.

eral hours in western Beijing and urged them to leave.

"You should think what you are doing," one young man said earnestly, standing on a truck's rear bumper and looking in the faces of about a dozen soldiers. No weapons were visible.

When the trucks turned around, the crowd cheered and some soldiers smiled, waved and flashed V-for-victory signs.

More than 200 trucks and 50 vans filled with soldiers still stood further down the road to the west, blocked by thousands of protesters about 10 miles out on the east side of the city, but a bus parked across the road blocked the way.

President Yang Shangkun said the army's task was to protect important ministries and key installations.

Zhao was not at the audience as Li and Yang announced the troop deployment Friday in a nationally televised address. Also not shown was senior leader Deng Xiaoping, 81, believed to be the main force behind the crackdown.

After Li's announcement, some students at Tiananmen Square said they would resume a week-old hunger strike, which had been called off late Friday.

Leaders said 200,000 demonstrators would participate, but many were seen eating after the announcement.

Agriculture Department scraps plan to cut back on inspectors

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department said Friday it will withdraw a controversial plan to cut back on federal inspections at major processing plants turning out hot dogs, chicken soup and other processed meat and poultry products.

Since the proposal was announced in November, a growing number of complaints has been leveled at the plan, mainly because it would put greater reliance on the plants themselves to meet federal inspection standards.

The decision to withdraw the proposal was hailed by consumer and industry groups alike.

Lester M. Crawford, head of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said the proposal would have allowed for "varying the intensity of inspection at meat and poultry processing plants according to a plant's ability to consistently produce safe and wholesome product in a sanitary environment."

Crawford said the proposal was withdrawn at least for the time being "in direct response" to more than 1,800 comments from the public since the plan was announced last fall. Most were opposed to all or parts of the proposal. He said the agency will gather additional information and then determine if a new plan will be drafted.

The withdrawal applied only to the so-called Improved Processing Inspection proposal, which affects processed meat and poultry products.

A 1986 law authorized overhauling the inspection system and putting in place a "risk-based" program in which processors with good records would require less direct supervision, while the most troublesome companies would come under tougher review. One effect would be to cut in half over time the number of federal inspectors.

Another proposal, called the Streamlined Inspection System for the slaughter of cattle is still under consideration. A number of consumer groups have rallied against it, alleging that it would increase the chance of tainted beef reaching consumers.

The streamlined cattle inspection program would let federal inspectors in slaughtering operations concentrate on looking for abnormalities such as tumors and abscesses while letting company employees check some of the routine tasks to ensure cleanliness.

Oil officials testify on cleanup policies in place at time of spill

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Oil port managers told federal investigators Friday that they did not know whether the temporary unavailability of 25 tons of cleanup gear hampered their response to the nation's worst oil spill.

The managers for Alyeska Pipeline Co. testified before a National Transportation Safety Board panel a day after the state environmental commissioner called the response inadequate.

Alyeska, the consortium of oil companies that owns the Alaska oil pipeline and Valdez terminal, normally kept a barge loaded with booms, a skimmer and other gear to contain and clean up any oil spill in Prince William Sound, engineering manager William Howitt said.

Howitt and Alyeska marine manager Lawrence Schier testified Friday that they did not know whether it made any difference that the barge had been unloaded for repairs when the tanker Exxon Valdez ran aground March 24, spilling nearly 11 million gallons of crude oil into the sound.

Schier said it took 10 hours to load the barge with 25 tons of gear, and an additional 3 1/2 hours to get it to the stricken tanker. Ice, snow and problems with the crane used to load the barge delayed the effort further, he said.

Environmental Conservation Commissioner Dennis Kelsa on Thursday accused Exxon and Alyeska of failing to meet deadlines to get equipment to the spill site, as required in their contingency plan.

But Howitt said Friday that "the spill plan does not require Alyeska to have the barge loaded."

An investigator asked Schier whether Alyeska would have been able to remove more oil if a fully loaded barge had been docked at Bligh Reef when the tanker ran aground there.

"I can't respond to that," he said after a long pause.

Later, Schier doubted whether getting a boom around the slick early would have made much difference.

Federal Reserve holds interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Policymakers at the Federal Reserve in March voted to hold interest rates steady unless the slowing of economic growth proved inadequate to restrain inflation, according to minutes of the meeting released Friday.

The Federal Open Market Committee, noting early signs of a slackening in economic growth, voted 11-1 at its March 28 meeting to leave rates unchanged initially.

But most members felt monetary policy "should be adjusted more readily and promptly toward greater restraint than toward ease," the minutes said.

The committee, which meets in secret eight times a year, sets monetary policy for the Federal Reserve, whose main job is to fight inflation.

Rep. Rose faces charges in civil suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department accused Rep. Charles G. Rose III, D-N.C. in a civil suit Friday of failing to report on his federal financial disclosure statements $138,694 in loans he obtained over six years.

The Justice Department sought $30,000 in civil penalties for the six alleged violations of the Ethics in Government Act in the lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court here. It also sought an injunction to bar future violations of the reporting requirements of the law.

The lawsuit charged that Rose, who chairs the House Agriculture tobacco and peanuts subcommittee, failed to report the loans from his campaign and financial institutions on the annual disclosure forms filed from 1980 through 1986, excepting 1983.

Rose's personal loans were obtained both from financial institutions and his campaign fund, from which he borrowed $52,995, according to the complaint.

Israel urges U.S. help in peace plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Arens urged the United States Friday to promote his government's peace initiative and to head an international fund-raising drive for $2 billion to rehabilitate Palestinian refugees in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

U.S. officials said that although the United States will do what it can, many questions remain about the Israeli proposals and the next steps are up to the Israelis and Palestinians themselves.

Arens presented his government's newly adopted four-point initiative to Vice President Dan Quayle after discussing it a day earlier with Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

Bush prepares to meet French president

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — President Bush met with top military advisers at his seaside home Friday to review plans for a NATO summit threatened by discord and to discuss strategy for arms talks with the Soviet Union.

As talks were under way in Washington to ease the NATO crisis, Bush met at his vacation retreat with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, Joint Chiefs Chairman Adm. William Crowe, national security adviser Brent Scowcroft and other aides. White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said no final decisions would be announced Friday from the meeting.

Under cloudy skies and in chilly weather, Bush and his advisers posed for pictures in front of the wind-swept sea wall near his home but did not comment on their talks.

The session came on the eve of the arrival here of French President Francois Mitterrand, who generally backs Bush on the NATO dispute. Mitterrand and his wife Danielle will spend the night in a guest home on Bush's compound, located on a rocky point jutting out into the Atlantic Ocean.

NATO's harmony has been shaken by a dispute largely between the United States and West Germany.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, facing domestic pressure for disarmament, has called for East-West negotiations soon on reducing short-range nuclear weapons. Bush has rejected the idea, arguing Western Europe needs the weapons to compensate for the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact's large advantage in troops, tanks and other conventional forces.

The SNF (short-range nuclear forces) issue of course is one that's under consideration right now and is driving the meeting of Bush and his advisers, Fitzwater said. He said he did not know if a compromise could be struck before the NATO meeting opening May 29.

In Washington, Secretary of State James A. Baker III held a second day of talks with West Germany defense minister Gerhard Stoltenberg to try to resolve the dispute.

Baker was to fly here Friday night to brief Bush and be on hand for today's meeting with Mitterrand. Also flying in was John Curley, the U.S. ambassador to France, and White House chief of staff John Sununu.

The West Germans also oppose a U.S. British effort to more than triple the range of existing Lance missiles to just below 300 miles. The aging, U.S.-built Lance now can hit targets from about 75 miles, and most of the 88 launchers and 700 single-warhead missiles are based in West Germany.

Wall Street experts scoff at bailout plan for S&Ls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wall Street financial experts on Friday called President Bush's savings and loan bailout plan a "banana republic" scheme that will cost taxpayers $30 billion to $50 billion more than a Democratic alternative.

A special task force of the House Budget Committee was told the extra expense of paying for the bailout through 30-year, off-budget bonds to preserve the illusion of deficit reduction will likely be 10 times the $3.8 billion to $4.5 billion the administration has acknowledged.

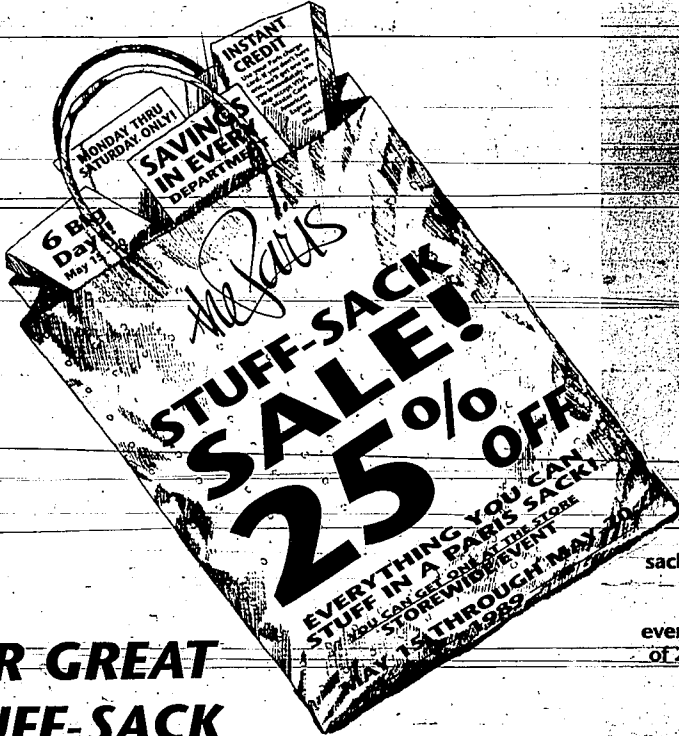

"This is an incredible price to pay for budgetary window dressing," said Bert Ely, who heads a financial consulting firm in Alexandria, Va. "Billions of dollars can be saved if the cleanup is funded for a few years with short-term borrowings until long-term rates decline."

Comptroller General Charles Bowsher, head of the government's General Accounting Office, agreed with Ely and representatives of Wall Street investment houses that Bush's S&L plan will tax the public tens of billions of dollars in unnecessary interest costs.

The administration has acknowledged taxpayers will have to pay up to $4.5 billion more over the 30-year life of the private bonds than if the bailout costs were borrowed directly through the Treasury.

Ely, however, estimated that the extra cost of Bush's plan at $49.7 billion over 30 years.

MOSCOW (AP) — A top-level commission Friday found evidence of "gross violations" of law by two anti-corruption crusaders and turned them over to the national prosecutor's office for investigation.

The report by a commission that included Minister of Justice Alexander Sukharov and KGB chief Vladimir Kruchkov brought to a head the dispute that started a week ago when one of the investigators said the names of Politburo member Yegor K. Ligachev and other top officials had come up in their inquiry.

"This kind of accusation, not based on any kind of objective evidence, is a gross violation of the honor and dignity of the individuals, which is protected by law," said the commission, which was formed by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, the country's highest executive body.

It said complaints and evidence from defendants as well as other investigators and government officials accused — investigators — Telman Galyan and Nikolai Ivanov of threatening defendants, inducing them to implicate others, arresting their relatives without evidence, holding suspects for months without questioning or charges, and carelessly handling valuable documents.

The commission said accusations against Galyan and Ivanov "have a serious basis."

March honors
20 who died
in ethnic clash

MOSCOW (AP) — Thousands of Georgians marched through the streets of the capital of Tbilisi on Friday in memory of 20 people who died in ethnic unrest on April 9.

The officially approved march that ended with a church service at the Sionky Cathedral came on the 10th day after the clash, a day of religious significance in the Georgian Orthodox faith.

Yuri Goldadze, an editor of the official Gruzinform news agency, said by telephone from Tbilisi that "many thousands" of people took part in the march of about 3 1/2 miles from the city's medical institute to the church. There they observed a minute of silence, he said.

Among the participants were city and national officials, who granted permission for the march, he said.

He said the march and religious service were "absolutely peaceful." The requiem service was being shown live on the Caucasus republic's official television, he said.

Nineteen people were killed when soldiers moved into a crowd of pro-independence protesters on Tbilisi's Rustaveli Avenue on April 9. One young man was shot and killed later for violating a curfew.

leaves 9 dead

HALHOUL, Occupied-West-Bank (AP) — Eight Palestinians were reported killed Friday and a soldier was slain in the first encounter with armed guerrillas of the 17-month-old uprising against Israeli occupation.

The deaths brought to 492 the number of Palestinians killed since the rebellion began Dec. 8, 1987. Twenty-two Israelis have been killed, including six other soldiers.

It was the highest death toll since April 16, 1988, when 14 Palestinians died in a day of widespread clashes after the assassination in Tunis of Khalil Wazir, the PLO military chief known as Abu Jihad.

The army sergeant and three members of a guerrilla squad were killed by a grenade blast and automatic weapons fire in Beit Aula, an isolated mountain village in the West Bank, the army said.

Weightlifter winner

MOSCOW (AP) — An Olympic weightlifting champion won a seat in the new Soviet parliament as Moscow finished choosing its more than 20 deputies just a week before the first session, according to results released Friday.

Weightlifter Yuri Vlasov won a run-off election with Viktor Shinkaretsky in Moscow's Lyubli-nsky district with 66.75 percent of the vote, according to statistics published by the official daily Vecher-nyaya Moskva.

Kansas teen wins national geography bee, scholarship

WASHINGTON (AP)—A teenager who attends a six-student church school in Great Bend, Kan., walked away Friday with the championship of the first National Geography Bee and a $25,000 college scholarship.

Jack Staddon, 6-foot-6 and 15 years old, correctly named a flat intermountain area in the central Andes to defeat Michael Shannon, 14, of Reading, Mass. The answer was Atilano.

Shannon, finishing second, will receive a $15,000 scholarship, while Kieu Luu, the third-place winner from Landover, Md., won a $10,000 scholarship. The money will be put into interest-bearing accounts until the winners go to college.

Some 15,000 to 20,000 schools in 55 states and territories participated in preliminary rounds of the bee, sponsored by the National Geographic Society and open to students in grades 4-8. The 55 state and territorial winners, aged 10 to 15, were in Washington this week for semifinals and the 10 top winners competed Friday.

Moderator Alex Trebek, host of the long-running TV trivia quiz show, "Jeopardy," used maps and slides in questioning contestants on everything from Zanzibar's most profitable 19th century trading commodity (cloves) to the two points connected by the Alaskan pipeline (Valdez and Prudhoe Bay).

Staddon said he studied geography trivia cards and read through a college geography book in preparation for the contest.

Nevertheless, with competitors allowed to miss only two questions before being eliminated, he blew his first question in both the final and semifinal rounds.

On Thursday, shown a slide of the Grand Canyon, Staddon missed its location by a state or two. "I said Utah," he recalled with a rueful grin. "It is actually in Arizona."

And on Friday, asked by Trebek to identify an unusual modernistic building, he replied after a long pause, "New York. I don't know." The correct answer was the Sydney Opera House.

"I had no idea what that was," Staddon said, laughing, after winning the bee. "I remember reading about that in my book but I had no idea what it looked like. If I had to do this again I would concentrate more on the pictures rather than on maps."

Staddon said there are two third-graders, two seventh-graders, a first-grader and an eighth-grader (himself) at the Great Bend Seventh Day Adventist Elementary School he attends. He said he wants to follow in the footsteps of his father and become a church pastor.

The National Geography Bee, set to become an annual event, is part of a campaign by the National Geographic Society to improve geography education. The group also sponsors teacher workshops and various other programs for students.

The initiative was launched after an international Gallup Poll commissioned by the society in 1988 showed that Americans ranked among the bottom third in geographic knowledge. Those aged 18-24 came in last.

The geography bee was modeled on a New Jersey bee where Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., was the host. "I never thought I'd appreciate a theft but I certainly appreciate this one," Bradley said before the finals began.

JOHN F. KENNEDY JR. Receives law degree

Kennedy gets law degree from NYU

NEW YORK (AP)—John F. Kennedy Jr. got his law degree Friday from New York University.

"I'm very happy it's over," Kennedy said as he posed for photographs with his mother, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, and his sister, Caroline Kennedy Schlossberg.

"I'm looking forward to taking the bar this summer and following in my sister's footsteps," said Kennedy, who will work in the Manhattan district attorney's office.

His 30-year-old sister graduated from Columbia University Law School last year and was notified earlier this month that she passed the state bar examination on her first try.

Kennedy, 28, was among 713 graduates honored during a ceremony at the Felt Forum. Asked how he would celebrate, he replied with a grin, "I can't tell you that."

Young Kennedy and his sister are the children of the late President John F. Kennedy.

Tabloids report tale of Thatcher's electric bath

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's office on Friday refused to comment on a U.S. magazine report that she keeps her looks by taking electrically charged baths, but London's tabloids plunged into the story.

"Indian Guru Keeps Her Switched On — Maggie's Bathtime — Secrets" screamed a bold Daily Mirror headline. "The Switched-On Prime Minister's Amazing Secret," said the Daily Express.

The newspapers quoted a story in Vanity Fair magazine as saying that Mrs. Thatcher visits an Indian woman practitioner of an ancient therapy called Ayurveda.

The magazine said the prime minister pays about $950 a session for treatments including mud therapy, natural herbs and oils and the baths, which are charged with 0.3 amps of electricity.

Asked about the reports, a spokesman for No. 10 Downing St., the prime minister's offices, said, "We're not saying anything about it at all because it's a personal matter. That's as far as it goes."

Several tabloids warned readers not to attempt such a treatment themselves.

The Daily Express reported it had discovered the Indian woman who was not identified in Vanity Fair. It identified her as a woman named Veronique who lived in a three-story Victorian semi-detached house in Shepherd's Bush, west London.

One of Britain's more serious newspapers, The Guardian, quoted from the Vanity Fair profile, calling it in a headline a "Shock Revelation On The Source of Mrs. T's Vigor."

Michigan governor talks at education day

OAK PARK, Mich. (AP)—Gov. James Blanchard didn't know Lake Erie is the warmest of the Great Lakes. And he was off a few hundred years in his estimate of when the first European explorers found the lake.

But the kids at Avery Elementary School didn't mind. They had other questions for Blanchard on Great Lakes Education Day.

The 19 fourth-graders were most impressed Thursday when the 62-year-old governor recounted his first experience with the 700-foot-high Sleeping Bear Dunes along Lake Michigan.

Ore-Ida Foods makes a new contract offer

BURLEY — Ore-Ida Foods Co. has made a new $4.38 contract offer to the Potato Growers of Idaho.

PGI members who grow for Ore-Ida will meet Wednesday to vote on the offer, said John Rooney, PGI executive director. Last week, 91 percent of PGI growers for Ore-Ida rejected a contract offer for $4.20 per hundredweight.

PGI, the major bargaining group for Idaho growers, has been asking for $4.40 per hundredweight contracts.

Growers for Lamb-Weston in American Falls voted unanimously Friday to reject a $4.27 offer from that processor, Rooney said.

"We're still in contact with the rest of the companies except Simplot and we're talking to them," he said.

Man faces trial on charges of stealing policeman's car

TWIN FALLS — The man charged with stealing an off-duty policeman's car in early April has been ordered to face trial.

Police arrested Kenneth Lee Van Blaricom, 27, on April 9 and charged him with stealing Sgt. Jim Mildon's 1979 Buick.

Several police cars had been led on a wild chase that ended in a dark railroad yard that night. The driver of the car blew the theft when he motored his way down Shoshone Street — past Mildon, who was checking downtown business doors for a private security firm.

Friday, 5th District Judge Nathan Higer decided prosecutors had enough evidence to justify a District Court trial. Blaricom next will have to enter a plea.

Prosecutor wants details of alleged embezzlement

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls prosecutors have requested more information on an alleged embezzlement from the Boy Scouts.

Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter said Friday she has received some reports — the county sheriff's department is investigating the incident — and has requested more information.

She said she hopes to make a decision next week on the incident.

Scout Executive Rod Leslie said earlier this week that a longtime employee was terminated last week, shortly after the Snake River Area Council discovered funds missing. He declined to name the employee.

Police arrest Burley man on drug delivery charges

RUPERT — Police arrested a 33-year-old man Thursday night as part of a series of drug arrests in the area.

Gary Allan Essig of Burley faces delivery of cocaine charges after police served a warrant Thursday. A $10,000 bond has been set.

Car crash sends high school student to the hospital

FILER — A two-car collision Friday in front of Filer High School sent a student to the hospital.

Wendy Willis, 16, of Filer, traveling west, had stopped for a pedestrian at a crosswalk, said Donald Barkley, Filer police chief. Horace Smith of Wells, Nev., also traveling west, struck her car, he said.

"He never even touched the brakes until he hit her," Barkley said.

Willis was treated and released from Magic Valley Regional Medical Center. Smith, 59, was cited for inattentive driving, Barkley said.

Sun Valley City Council OKs funds for bike tunnel

SUN VALLEY — The Sun Valley City Council voted this week to allocate $75,000 for a bike tunnel under Highway 75 at Elkhorn Road. The complete cost is estimated at $150,000, with the Blaine County Recreation Department picking up the rest.

The tunnel will connect the Sun Valley bike path with the Blaine County system.

Castledorf High School plans graduation Thursday

CASTLEFORD — High school graduation ceremonies at Castledorf will be at 8 p.m. Thursday in the gym.

Eight-grade graduation will be at 8 p.m. Friday, also in the gym. The last day of school for seniors was Friday. The last full day of school for all other students is Wednesday. There will be no school Thursday, but students will be required to attend from 8:30-10:30 a.m. Friday to receive report cards.

Environmentalists meet on public lands grazing

By N.S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

REDFISH LAKE — Livestock grazing on public lands has changed the face of Idaho, said a former government range specialist.

"Livestock grazing is one of the most ubiquitous activities in the West," said Georgo Wuerthner, now a free-lance writer and photographer.

While livestock graze on more than 12 million acres of public land in Idaho, only 2 percent of the meat raised in this country grazes on public land, he said.

Given the impact grazing has on the land, Wuerthner said, that land is better left to the antelope, coyotes and jackrabbits.

Wuerthner's talk opened this year's Idaho Conservation League Conference at Redfish Lake Friday evening.

Using a flyswatter as a pointer, he illustrated his talk with slides.

Slides of fence lines showed dramatically how grazing on one side of the fence had changed the nature of the vegetation compared with the ungrazed side.

"Grazing on public land continues,"

Wuerthner said, in part because of the assumptions many people make. People assume the way grazed land looks is the way it always has looked, he said.

People also associate the West with grazing. It's an important part of the history of the West and Idaho, he said.

"Ranchers have an inordinate amount of power in the West," he said. "Only a few ranchers have been able to maintain their position, while far more people would rather see the public land used for other things such as supporting more wildlife, he said.

Wuerthner's presentation showed some of the environmental impacts of overgrazing on public lands. His slides showed bare creek beds that once supported huge cottonwood trees. They showed overgrazed stream banks that had been eroded since their plant cover was eaten.

Not all overgrazing is done by livestock, he said, explaining that wildlife sometimes contributes to the destruction. But wildlife populations fluctuate with food supplies and the range has a chance to recuperate when

World Trade Day reveals foreign market demands

By MICHELLE COLE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Six years ago mink farmers Lee and Marta Moyle were dragged into exporting out of economic necessity.

"We knew absolutely nothing about what we were doing. We went into it cold turkey," Marta Moyle told a gathering of Magic Valley business owners during a world trade conference Thursday night.

"We found out during a visit to an auction house that the type of mink we were raising at the time had a higher value in Europe than the United States," she said.

It would seem logical that mink farmers hailing from tiny Heyburn, Idaho, would have to sell their product by exporting to the world's major markets. But trade experts, gathered in Twin Falls Thursday and Friday for the Idaho World Trade Day seminar, stressed that nearly every business in the state will have to someday turn to world markets — not just for additional profits but to survive.

"Either we will turn us around or foreigners will do it for us," said Penelope Hartland-Thunberg, an international business expert from The Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, D.C.

In a speech she herself described as "gloomy," Hartland-Thunberg painted a picture of world markets in the 1990s. Describing the mounting federal budget deficit and the U.S. trade imbalance, Hartland-Thunberg predicted the United States could topple from its position of world economic leader.

Consult experts in exporting

Where should a local manufacturer or agri-business interested in exporting start?

• Contact Stephen Thompson at the U.S. Department of Commerce Boise office at 334-3857. Or call David P.N. Christensen at Idaho's Department of Commerce, 334-2170. Both can offer advice on potential markets. For a fee, the federal government will even assist businesses in locating agents or distributors abroad. They can also do credit checks on potential foreign customers. The state Department of Commerce can also provide contacts in Asia.

• See a banker. Michael Drysdale, vice president and manager of the international department at First Security Bank, said there's lots to learn about extending credit to foreign buyers.

• Get a lawyer. Richard Christensen, a Boise lawyer specializing in international trade, said many times those who want to do business abroad hire a foreign agent or distributor. "Find legal counsel before you put together a written contract with somebody overseas," he said. "And be aware of the laws before you step into a country."

Mike Pechoes has balled Pancho out of the dog pound five times

Devotion can be costly

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Doubling impound fees has turned Pancho the pup into a high-priced punch — maybe too high to keep him alive.

Pancho's owner, Mike Pechoes, said he has used several tactics to keep Pancho penned up, including installing a six-foot high electric fence at his Rimview Drive home, but inevitably Pancho gets loose and a neighbor calls in a complaint.

So far, Pechoes, in bailing Pancho out of the dog pound, has shied $340 for impound fees, which under city rules start at $20 and double with each successive imprisonment.

Last time he paid $160. If a sympathetic dog pound attendant hadn't allowed him to pay $40 twice, it would have been $320.

Exasperated over the cost, Pechoes took his case to the City Council this week, asking officials to consider making the fees more reasonable.

"I feel like I'm buying the dog pound," he said. "If I have to pay $320, he could

Deputy county clerk pleads guilty to petty theft of $40

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A deputy county clerk resigned Thursday, was charged with stealing $40 Friday morning and pleaded guilty in the afternoon following a state investigation into allegations of missing money.

"There have been allegations floating around for a long time about money missing," said K. Ellen Baxter, county prosecutor. "It was based on these generalized, nonspecific allegations that I asked the Department of Law Enforcement to investigate."

Janet Sidwell, 38, of 456 Sixth Ave. N., pleaded guilty to one count of petty theft involving $40 that came up missing from the county clerk's office in January. She will be sentenced June 8.

She resigned Thursday and agreed to reimburse the county and forfeit her vacation.

Baxter said the $40 was paid to Sidwell for copies of recorded documents. But the transaction was never recorded in the county's formal "record book" and doesn't appear on the county's computer system, Baxter said.

"We have two or three places we have to put it," said Richard Penge, county clerk.

Penge said he understood Sidwell provided a receipt for the $40, but didn't record it in the books.

Sidwell was an 11-year, "clean-as-a-whistle" veteran of the recorder's office, said her attorney, J. Walter Sinclair. The Times-News was unable to reach Sidwell Friday.

Mike Harrop dies of brain tumor

By MARTA CLEVELAND
Times-News writer

IDAHO FALLS — Mike Harrop, a former Times-News outdoor columnist and former editor of the Jerome County Courier, died of a brain tumor Thursday in Idaho Falls following a short illness.

For years, Harrop wrote a weekly outdoor column that was a familiar fixture in The Times-News and other newspapers across the state.

"He was a very accomplished outdoorsman," said Times-News Managing Editor Stephen Hagen. "He could read the environment very well... and that was reflected in his columns."

Harrop raised the hackles of more-than-one government agency official with his strong public positions.

"He was controversial," Hagen said.

The 48-year-old Idaho native began his work at newspapers in 1970 as a reporter for the Lewiston Morning Tribune.

In 1975 he moved on to assistant city editor and outdoor writer for the Lethbridge (Alberta) Journal, where he stayed until 1977. He worked for the Edmonton (Alberta)

Icicles made a comeback Friday morning as temperatures dipped below freezing in the Magic Valley.

A Jerome lawn sprinkler left on overnight was responsible for the glazing this pine tree received.

populations are down. In Idaho, 3,400 people graze livestock on public land and contribute about 3 percent to state's income, he said. Of that 3 percent only 10 percent use public land for grazing, Wuerthner said. Given the small impact removing those animals from the public land would have, "it seems very absurd to continue livestock grazing on public land at all," he said. Ranchers in some areas are

"If there is no way to control an animal, then the animal would be better off put to sleep," he said. Pancho, nearly full-grown, allegedly has made threatening moves towards Oakley when she was out jogging, Vanderpool said. "This is not a minor offense," he said. "This is something to be taken seriously." He said although Pancho hits not

Trade

Among other things, Americans will be forced to cut back on their unbridled consumption. This could cripple any business that depends wholly on the American market, she said.
Also, Hartland-Thunberg said, as foreign producers and manufacturers of electronic equipment, they will be competing with American businesses - on American soil, on Idaho's soil.
The Moyleys may have entered the export world cold turkey, but Hartland-Thunberg encouraged Idaho manufacturers and agencies to develop a strategy that will allow them to expand into world markets. "As white our sights are cast on the emerging Pacific Rim, Hartland-Thunberg warned Idahoans not to turn their backs on Europe and Canada as a potential customer base.
"We have a lot of things in this state that will sell well internationally," said David P. N. Christensen, international trade specialist for Idaho's Department of Commerce, during a Friday workshop.
"In any country you go to in East Asia, if you say 'Idaho,' they say 'potato,'" Christensen said. "I don't think that's necessarily bad. I think we can build on this."
While 10 percent of Idaho's work force is dependent on Idaho exports and Idaho products account for more than a billion dollars in sales worldwide, Christensen said Idaho businesses are reticent to explore foreign markets.
Stephen B. Thompson, a trade specialist for the U.S. Department of Commerce, agreed. Idahoans think they have to submit endless forms and "in most cases they don't," Thompson said. They think they have to be licensed and 95 percent of all exporters don't need a license, he said.
But worst of all, Christensen said, Idaho manufacturers and agribusinesses fail to recognize that there is a market out there for their products.
"In the food market, especially Asia, tastes are changing," he said. "The Japanese market is growing for our frozen french fries."
Other Idaho products could do as well, Christensen enthusiastically added. The business are interested in our wood products. Others are interested in our Indian jewelry.
During her trips abroad, Marta Moyle learned first-hand that Europeans and Asians are hankering for American-made products. With this in mind, the local milk farm has slowed the export of pails for the time being while the owners concentrate on a new line of milk coats and garments to be introduced within the next two years. "Then we are looking at a wholly made-in-Idaho product," she said.

Jury seated to hear trial of Pratt brothers

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) - After more than four days of interviews, a jury was seated Friday to hear the case of James and Joseph Pratt, two brothers accused of murdering a U.S. Forest Service officer.
A panel of four women and eight men was chosen, along with two alternates.
James Pratt, 29, of Indian Hills, Colo., and his brother Joseph Pratt, 27, of Sandpoint, are each charged with first-degree murder in the Jan. 12 shooting death of Brent Jacobson, the first Forest Service law officer slain in the line of duty.
The Pratts are also accused of 17 other felonies in connection with a spree that began with an alleged botched burglary of a Sagle home on Jan. 11.
Jacobson was one of several officers who tracked the Pratts through deep snow to a wooded area near Dover.
The prosecution has said it will seek the death penalty if the Pratts are convicted on the murder charge. The trial was moved to Coeur d'Alene because of extensive news coverage in Sandpoint.

Jones, Rangen honored for exporting excellence

SANDPOINT (AP) - The State Division of Environmental Quality has stretched absorbent booms across the mouth of Sand Creek to stop oil from a seep from entering Lake Pend Oreille.
Ground Water Quality Manager Paul Jehn said Friday the petroleum seep was discovered a day earlier.
Jones accepted the award at the Idaho World Trade Days conference here Thursday that focused on Asia. Potato popularity in Asia is so strong that deep-fried embellishments of the root now command high prices, Jones said.
"Our customers come to see us now. We don't have to go to all of them," he said.
Jones said the food shows in Asia are a good way to give products exposure.
"We think it's an excellent market for our products and for Idaho," he said.
Rangen Inc. won the Governor's Export Marketing Award for 1988 and seven other companies around the state.
Employees.
Ken Corpron, Rangen's export manager, who accepted the award, said Rangen began emphasizing exports in the early 1980s.
"There's a lot more work required in selling your products overseas," Corpron said. "But the company enjoys the challenge, working with people of other countries and helping offset the trade deficit," he said.
Rangen's star export products to Asia are aquaculture feeds and a newly developed vitamin C supplement for fish.
The College of Southern Idaho also received an award in recognition of its excellence and dedication to educating and promoting exporting for Idaho businesses.
"They have done more than almost anyone in the state as far as export education goes," said Gary Whitwell, administrator of the Idaho Department of Commerce International Business Development Division.
Also honored were Moyie Mink of Heyburn, the Alliance for Upper County Hay Growers in Cambridge, and the Idaho Department of Agriculture and seven other companies around the state.

USFS forms coalition on Wolf Lodge

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — In an apparent bid to ease conflict over forest management decisions, the Forest Service has put a group of widely-varied interests together to help draft the long-range plan for the Penland's sensitive Wolf-Lodge Creek drainage. "This group of people is going to develop all the action alternatives — how are we going to cut timber, where we are going to cut timber," said Forest Service resource planner Pat Sheridan. The so-called sounding-board group, formed to help planners map out uses for the 23,000-acre Horizon Resource Area in the Fernan Ranger District will include environmentalists, timber interests, sportsmen and local property owners.

Korea, Idaho to increase business

POCATELLO (AP) — Idaho's official trade representative in South Korea is predicting his country will increase its business activity with the state this summer. Woo Jon Ching, the founder of the Korean-American Business Institute who signed a three-year contract as Idaho's trade representative last year, did not elaborate. But he said he had advised officials of the Hyundai Motor Co. to inspect a Pocatello industrial park, formerly the Naval Ordnance Plant, and state Commerce Department spokeswoman Georgia Smith said the department was aware that a group of South Koreans were in the Pocatello area last month, apparently looking at potential sites for a production facility.

Foreign investors offer Idaho funds

POCATELLO (AP) — State Treasurer Lydia Justice Edwards is being courted by foreign investors who want her to borrow their money instead of cash being offered by American lenders. Speaking to Pocatello civic leaders on Thursday, Mrs. Edwards said foreign investors, especially from Japan and France, have expressed an eagerness to underwrite state loans, often at substantially lower interest rates than domestic lenders. "Japanese investment, it's a hot topic," she said, and French or Japanese businessmen "are in my office almost every month wanting to do business." "I have an appointment on Monday with Mr. Correria. I think he's Japanese," she said. "I hear a lot from the French, too."

Pocatello pursues federal grant

POCATELLO (AP) — The Pocatello City Council is going after a $1.2 million federal grant, hoping it will be the bait to lure a major tenant to either the Kraft cheese processing plant or the new Gateway Industrial Park. The city has until May 31 to submit its application for the grant. City officials approved the application Thursday. Hearings on the application are scheduled next week.

Officials scrub trial of deputy sheriff

MOSCOW (AP) — A faulty indictment has scrubbed the scheduled trial of an Idaho County deputy sheriff accused of illegal wiretapping, but Teller officials say the charges still stand. On Tuesday, Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron Hosen asked U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan to vacate the trial date because language in the indictment was faulty. Because of two rulings Ryan made on pre-trial motions, Hosen also said he needs to consider additional facts before proceeding with the case. If the grand jury again decides to indict Marko, the new indictment will supersede the original, court officials said. Marko's attorney, Allen Derr of Boise, said he may file a motion to dismiss the case against Marko because of defective language in the original indictment.

Rural districts move to consolidate

ELK RIVER (AP) — Patrons in the Elk River School District will decide in July whether they want to consolidate their tiny school system with the neighboring White Pine District. The Elk River School Board voted this week to move toward consolidation. It will hold a hearing May 31 and officials hope to have a consolidation plan ready for the June 12 state Board of Education meeting, said board chairman Margaret Planagan.

Panel studies public works contracts

BOISE (AP) — It may be time to raise the $5,000 limit on public works projects which do not have to come under supervision of the Division of Public Works, a legislator says. An interim study committee on public works contracts held its first meeting at the Statehouse on Friday. Members discussed a state law raising public works contracts over $5,000 to be reviewed by the Division of Public Works. Under that amount, agencies and institutions do not have to go through the state agency. Chairman Rep. Con Mahoney, R-Idaho Falls, said it may be time to raise the limit. It was last increased 18 years ago, from $2,500 to $5,000. Since then, Mahoney said, inflation has caused huge increases in construction costs. The limit is "obviously outdated," Mahoney said. Sen. Rachel Gihbert, R-Boise, is co-chairman of the study committee.

Court: Alcohol test up to arresting officer

BOISE (AP) — It is within the discretion of an arresting officer which blood-alcohol test will be administered, not the person arrested, the Idaho Court of Appeals says. The court on Friday unanimously upheld a district court ruling reinstating the results of blood tests run on Robert Lee Cunningham after he was arrested for drunken driving in 1987 in Kootenai County. Cunningham won a ruling from a magistrate striking down the results of blood-alcohol tests, on the ground that Cunningham was denied his request to have a second, different test performed. Court records said after being arrested, Cunningham and the arresting officer passed a medical center; and Cunningham asked to have a blood test performed rather than just a breath test to determine the alcohol level in his blood. The officer refused, and Cunningham did not press his demand after a breath test was performed. The Court of Appeals held that the choice of evidentiary tests for determining blood-alcohol concentration is within the arresting officer's discretion. However, after submitting to the officer's test, the person may, when practicable, obtain at his own expense additional tests," the court said. Since Cunningham did not press his demand for an additional test after the original test, he was not "denied," his request for a second test, the court said. In another decision released Friday, the court ruled in favor of the state of Idaho and against the survivors of the pilot of a helicopter, which crashed while on a state charter to count game animals. Frank Fagundes was fatally injured in the 1987 crash. His survivors sued the state, which chartered the craft from a private company, contending the helicopter was not properly equipped and the state didn't start a rescue effort early enough. The court ruled the contract specifically stated that safety of the helicopter and safe operation were up to the charter company. Chief Judge Jesse Walters dissented from the portion of the ruling concerning whether the "peculiar risk" of physical harm of operating a helicopter over wilderness area should have been recognized by the state.

Environmentalists: Decrease public lands grazing

BOISE (AP) — Reductions in grazing on Western public land would help restore those lands without significantly affecting the livestock industry, environmentalists say. "The condition of the rangeland out there is bad. It's going downhill," said Randy Morris of the Committee for Idaho's High Desert. Morris joined Ron Mitchell, executive director of the Idaho Sportsmen's Coalition, in a news conference Friday in response to Thursday's National Federal Lands Conference, a gathering of about 300 ranchers and other public-land users. During that session, participants were urged to organize and fight against an environmental movement they believe is trying to drive them off federal land. Though he wants to see "radical changes" in the commercial uses of public land, Mitchell said banning grazing is not their intent. "We're not attempting to eliminate commercial use on public land," he said. "We want to ensure that the land is maintained for multiple use on a sustained-yield basis and a non-damaging basis." But Morris argued that ranchers have not been good stewards of the public domain and overgrazing has left much rangeland in poor condition. He recommended that the price of grazing permits be raised to fair market value, the amount that would be paid for leasing private land, with more funds to improve wildlife habitat.

With the higher fees, supply and demand would reduce grazing pressure on much of the rangeland, he said. Any restrictions on grazing should be made on a case-by-case basis depending on the condition of the allotment and should not be across-the-board, Morris said. However, the Bureau of Land Management needs to finish collecting data on the conditions of individual allotments before any decisions could be made, he said. Morris rejected claims that limits on grazing would threaten the livestock industry. The 300 million acres of public rangeland in 16 Western states account for only 2 percent of the nation's cattle feed, he said.

With only a few months excess cell space expected after the new prison opens this fall, Vernon said such a delay would probably force the state to negotiate with the counties on again using their jails as safety valves to keep prison population within limits acceptable to the federal courts. The board also approved a smoking policy for the new maximum-security prison. The smoking policy would generally limit smoking in the prison-to inmates, call for exercise areas and designated locations in common work and program areas.

Vernon explores solutions to prison overcrowding

BOISE (AP) — Under mounting pressure from counties for more money to house state prison inmates, Corrections Director Richard Vernon is developing alternatives that could include a minimum-security honor camp in operation by this fall. In addition, the Corrections Board gave Vernon the go-ahead on Friday to pursue construction of a two-story, concrete-block building that could be erected in just four months for less than $1 million and provide space for another 75 to 100 minimum- and even medium-security inmates. Vernon told the board the state will be able to clean its inmates out of county jails on Oct. 15 when the new multimillion-dollar maximum security prison opens in Boise. It will also have a few months of "breathing space" before the prison system is again filled to capacity.

He declined to identify the location of the complex, saying only it was isolated in a forested area of the state. Vernon said he was going to the area next week to discuss the plan with leaders of the small communities near the site and a decision could be made within a month. "I hate to use the words 'quick fix,'" Vernon said. But a package including the honor camp and concrete-block detention facility "could meet some of our needs on a quick basis. It would provide us with an opportunity to handle some of our overcrowding issues without having to wait two or three years." The current prison expansion was launched over two years ago, and during that construction period the inmate population has continued to climb. Vernon said he expected the population to grow by another 800 inmates to hit nearly 2,800 systemwide by the end of 1991. But while facing that kind of growth, Vernon conceded he has no money in his budget through mid-1990 to finance either the honor camp or the concrete-block building. The Legislature would have to provide the cash for either project, and that could yield adding any cell space until next spring or summer. With only a few months excess cell space expected after the new prison opens this fall, Vernon said such a delay would probably force the state to negotiate with the counties on again using their jails as safety valves to keep prison population within limits acceptable to the federal courts. The board also approved a smoking policy for the new maximum-security prison. The smoking policy would generally limit smoking in the prison-to inmates, call for exercise areas and designated locations in common work and program areas.

After considering and then temporarily closing space, Vernon said he has identified a rural site that already has the buildings to house 100 minimum-security inmates or more in the kind of honor camp program that other states have found successful for first-time drug offenders and others convicted on relatively minor felony charges.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"Security depends not so much upon how much you have, as upon how much you can do without."

South is odds-on to be able to develop dummy's diamonds. That fact does not mean that the diamond suit should hold the only key to a successful game.

South sufficed the second spade and cashed three top trumps. Next came a finesse to dummy's diamond 10, losing to East's Jack.

However, when the diamond 10 lost to East's Jack, South should not have tried to duck the suit.

Johnsons face off in NBA West

The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — It's time to find out who's the best Johnson in the West.

Magic Johnson and the Los Angeles Lakers play host to Kevin Johnson and the Phoenix Suns Saturday in the first game of the NBA Western Conference finals.

The series winner will advance to the championship series. The Lakers, undefeated in the playoffs after sweeping Portland and Seattle, are looking to send Phoenix-Ahmed Abdul-Jabbar into retirement with a third straight NBA title. The rejuvenated Suns, with only one playoff loss, are trying to return to the championship series for the first time since 1976.

"It's going to be a tough series," Magic Johnson said. "Phoenix does a lot of things well. They have an excellent passing game and great outside shooting."

Kevin Johnson makes it work. He gets down the court so fast. It's going to be up-and-down basketball—that's for sure."

Kevin Johnson — known as KJ — is in his second pro year and first full season with the Suns. He averaged 20.4 points and 12.2 assists during the regular season, becoming only the fifth player in NBA history to accomplish the 20-10 feat.

He is averaging 21 points in the playoffs, second to Tom Chambers' 25.4 average.

Kevin Johnson said backcourt mate Jeff Hornacek probably will have the starting defensive assignment on Magic Johnson, "but we might switch off later on. Earvin, I'm calling him Earvin during the playoffs. I'll be back to Magic after the playoffs. I don't want to be in awe of him when I have to play against him."

Phoenix coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said Byron Scott is the only Laker who can contain Kevin Johnson. KJ had 23 points and 12 assists in Phoenix's 114-97 victory over the Lakers on Feb. 1 when Scott was on the injured list.

"The night that Scott was out, they tried Magic and (Michael) Cooper and they couldn't deal with him. People have got to zone him or hold him.

Things are getting too noisy for trainer of Sunday Silence

The Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Trainer Charlie Whittingham would be happier with a little less company, but he wouldn't mind a crowd around him late Saturday afternoon.

Five days after Sunday Silence, Whittingham's Kentucky Derby-winning colt, will race in the Preckness.

"If I had my druthers I'd just as leave have one or two people around," Whittingham said Friday when asked how he felt about the constant media attention.

Of course, the 70-year-old Hall of Fame trainer understands the "why" of the intense attention focused on him, and he has handled it with grace and humor.

"That's about all I have to say," he told a crowd of reporters one morning. "I forgot my harmonica or I'd play you a tune."

Whittingham sees the 1 3/16-mile Preckness as pretty much of a two-race race, with the other horse being Easy Goer, the beaten favorite in the 1 1/8-mile Derby.

"There is a feeling among some horseman, however, that Houston, who was eighth in the Derby after setting the pace for a mile, could be a factor."

"First of all, I think my horse has more room to improve than the others," trainer D. Wayne Lukas said. "The other two had more seasoning, were raced harder and were certainly tighter than my horse. I think my horse has more room to improve. I don't think he has to improve that much."

"I've been very impressed with him since I have seen him here, a lot more than I was at the Derby," Shug McGaughey, who trains Easy Goer, said of Houston.

Six other 3-year-olds were entered for the 114th Preckness, but Awe Inspiring, Easy-Goer's stablemate, was still in New York Friday and will not start if the track is fast.

It was sunny and warm Friday with temperatures in the mid-80s. More of the same was forecast for Saturday.

Other Derby starters entered in the Preckness were Dansil, who was fourth; Hawkester, fifth; and Northern Wolf, sixth. Making their debuts in Triple Crown competition will be Rock Point and Pulverizing.

If nine start, each carrying 126 pounds, the race will be worth $679,200, with $411,480 to the winner.

Official wants college athletics to undergo major reforms

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A top higher-education official called Thursday for an end to athletic scholarships and shorter football, basketball and baseball seasons as reforms needed to correct "fundamental, systemic problems" in intercollegiate sports.

Robert H. Atwell, president of the American Council on Education, the umbrella organization for the nation's colleges and universities, told Congress that the so-called "affiliated" life-time sports programs are not so much isolated cases as they are symptoms of a not so much isolated cases as they are symptoms of a "basically unhealthy" enterprise.

In testimony to a House Education and Labor subcommittee, Atwell also proposed the elimination of freshman eligibility in football and basketball, and the equal sharing among all schools of the television revenues now monopolized by the powerhouses.

"First and foremost," said Atwell, "we must try to break the insidious connection between money and winning" in big-time college sports.

Atwell was among several academic, media and sports federation officials who testified before the Labor subcommittee on problems afflicting collegiate sports programs.

Frank Deford, former senior editor for Sports Illustrated, declared that "big-time college athletics has always been a scandal and always will be, unless major changes are made. It is a professional game which poses as amateur; a big business which uses free labor."

Deford rejected arguments that revenues generated by glamour sports benefit the higher education as a whole. "Rarely," he said, "does any money raised for big-time athletics leave the athletic department to enhance the university community."

Atwell, said his proposals were his own and not those of the council's member institutions.

Manley describes his former illiteracy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Watching teammate Joe Theismann's career shattered with a broken leg propelled Dexter Manley to learn to read and write.

"I can recall that vividly," the Washington Redskins defensive end told a Senate panel. "I had so much fear and insecurity. I was saying, I hope to God this never happens to me because what would I do?"

Theismann's leg was broken when he was tackled by New York Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor in a game three years ago.

Although judged to have a second-grade reading level when he enrolled in night classes at Washington-Lab-School three years ago, Manley graduated from Houston schools and then attended Oklahoma State University despite a severe learning disability that effectively rendered him illiterate. He left Oklahoma State 45 hours short of his degree.

"Somehow or another, you have to find the will ... to come forward and ask for help. That's the most difficult thing for a human being to do," Manley told Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., chairman of the Senate education subcommittee, Thursday. "I had to humble myself. I had to walk into the Lab School and not pretend. Today I can read and write. I have some self-respect."

Manley brought with him a written statement, but with all eyes on him in a hearing room packed with spectators and television cameras, he began to stumble from the first sentence. Sweat rolled down his face from the first sentence. Sweat rolled down his face from the first sentence.

After a long pause, Willy "Famous" Amos, the cookie magnate and spokesperson for the Literacy Volunteers of America, approached the witness table, put his arm around Manley and spoke softly to him.

"Just tell your story, how it came about," Simon told Manley after Amos had returned to his seat. "Don't worry about that prepared statement. This takes more courage than anything you've done on the football field." A relieved Manley told Simon and Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., about receiving 19 grades of "F" in second grade and being placed in a special education class for four years.

Unseeded Berger upsets top seed Mats Wilander

ROME (AP) — Unseeded Jay Berger upset No. 1 seed Mats Wilander 6-3, 6-4 today in the third round match of the Italian Open men's tennis championships.

Fellow American Andre Agassi, the No. 2 seed, won two matches today to reach the semifinals. He first beat Leonardo Lavalle of Mexico 6-3, 6-4, completing a match that had been suspended by rain after one set the night before.

In a quarterfinal match that began three hours later, Agassi defeated No. 8 seed Guillermo Perez-Roldan of Argentina 6-3, 6-1.

The 19-year-old Agassi lost his serve twice in the first set against Perez-Roldan, but broke the Argentine three times. Perez-Roldan, the world's 22nd-ranked player who lost in the final here last year to Ivan Lendl, gave Agassi a good fight, often matching him with returns from the baseline.

The second set was all Agassi. With the Argentine firing, Agassi stepped up the pace, thrilling the crowd with his topspin volley winners.

He meets unseeded Sergi Bruguera of Spain in the semifinal round.

Berger, the world's 34th-ranked player, used a strong first serve and an aggressive baseline game to defeat the sub-par Swede. After dominating in the first set, Berger took a commanding 5-1 lead in the second.

Faced with the threat of elimination, Wilander abandoned the baseline and took to the offensive, managing to claw his way back into the match.

Berger got his first match point while serving at 5-4. After a short exchange, the 22-year-old American drove a hard cross-court forehand deep into the corner which Wilander dived back into the net.

Berger also beat Wilander at Orlando, Fla., in 1988. Because of rain delays on Thursday, he was scheduled to return to court later today to play Jordi Arrese in the quarterfinals.

"I was serving well today," said the 22-year-old American, who won the U.S. Clay Courts tournament in Charleston, S.C., last week, beating American Lawson Duncan in straight sets. "I was going for it on the first serve because it's better to get a cheap point against Mats rather than try to grind it out against him."

Berger admitted he tightened up when leading 5-1 in the second set.

"I was rushing a little bit," he said. "I wanted to get off the court as quickly as I could. I was a little bit nervous. Overall, he was a little bit off today, but I think I played fantastic."

Berger said he wasn't looking forward to having to play a second match today.

"I think it's a shame and a pity. I'm a little bit tired. Playing against Mats is not a cakewalk. And my opponent hasn't had to play another match today," Wilander, who has not won a tournament since September and slipped from No. 1 to No. 3 in the world, said he lacked concentration.

Berger won two set points and then dropped her service to give up the game.

But Cecchini never held her serve again and Graf blasted through the second set. The match yoked over when Cecchini sent a backhand wide.

Graf later withdrew from the doubles competition, where she and her partner, Sabatini had reached the quarterfinals.

"It was very hot, I've lost a lot of fluids and I don't want to get any weaker," Graf said. The temperature reached 86 degrees during the mid-day match.

Sabatini took early control by sweeping the first four games before dropping her serve in the fifth. The Argentine also struggled in the seventh game but fought off a break point to take a 5-2 lead.

"She broke Hanika's serve again to close the set and from then on completely dominated the match as the West German made a series of unforced errors.

Graf, Sabatini advance to German Open semis

BERLIN (AP) — Top-seeded Steffi Graf of West Germany and second-seeded Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina advanced to the semifinals of the German Open women's tennis tournament with identical victories Friday.

Graf, although bothered by a cold, swept past seventh-seeded Sandra Cecchini of Italy 6-2, 6-0, while Sabatini trounced eighth-seeded Silvia Hanika of West Germany, also 6-2, 6-0.

In the semifinals of the Virginia Slims event played on red clay, Graf will meet sixth-seeded Helen Kelesi of Canada, who overcame Barbara Paulus of Austria 6-3, 5-7, 6-3.

Sabatini will play unseeded West German Isabel Cretz, who ousted Regina Hachytova of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 7-6.

"It was pretty good, but there is always something you can improve," Graf said. "I wasn't happy with my first serve, it was miserable. I also have a slight cold so I really have to concentrate."

Graf raced to a 5-1 lead in the first set but wasted two set points and then dropped her service to give up the game.

But Cecchini never held her serve again and Graf blasted through the second set. The match yoked over when Cecchini sent a backhand wide.

Graf later withdrew from the doubles competition, where she and her partner, Sabatini had reached the quarterfinals.
