Maker of Alar pulls chemical off the market

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The manufacturer of Alar, the apple chemical that stirred a national furor over a possible cancer risk to children, said Friday it is taking the substance off the U.S. market immediately.

Uniroyal Chemical Co. continued to defend the chemical as safe but said continued use on apples is causing doubt and confusion about the safety of America's food supply.

Apple growers and processors had pleaded for such action because fears about Alar had drastically cut into apple industry sales.

The company said sales of daminozide, which is marketed under the name Alar, would continue to about 70 markets outside the United States, including some that export apples and apple products to this country.

However, a spokeswoman for the International Apple Institute said most imported apples are green ones, such as Granny Smiths, which are not treated with Alar.

Supplies of the chemical held by U.S. customers may be returned for refunds, the company said.

The Environmental Protection Agency said late Friday it has reached agreement with Uniroyal on a plan to monitor the removal of Alar from the U.S. market, although there is no government ban on its use. The EPA said it also will notify foreign governments about agency concerns about Alar.

"The action taken by Uniroyal will significantly reduce risk from exposure to daminozide," said Victor Kinnear, the EPA's acting assistant administrator for pesticides and toxic substances.

The EPA has said it plans to ban use of daminozide in food products because tests in laboratory animals have indicated the chemical can cause cancer. Final action on the proposed regulation is not expected until late 1990.

Uniroyal has disputed the findings. And James Wylie, company vice president, said Friday, "We want to emphasize that we have not changed our opinion about the safety of daminozide."

The EPA estimates that from a percent to 15 percent of the U.S. apple crop is treated with Alar, a

Chinese throngs push back troops

The Associated Press

BEIJING — Tens of thousands of troops marched toward Tiananmen Square today but were pushed back by throngs of people who implored soldiers not to crush the student-led movement for democracy.

An official report said three people were killed when struck by a police car in an accident Friday night. Students linked the deaths to their demonstrations and called for a general strike in protest.

Soldiers advanced down Changan Avenue, the capital's main road, but tens of thousands of students used trucks, buses and their bodies to stop them in front of the Beijing Hotel, several hundred yards east of the square.

The middle of the square remained calm, with the "Ode to Joy" from Beethoven's Ninth Symphony blaring over student loudspeakers. Thousands more students poured from Beijing University and Beijing Normal University and sped toward the square on their bicycles in support.

Citizens backing the students blocked the street with four trucks, and blockades formed by city buses went up on side streets around the square to keep troops out. About 200,000 soldiers are reported camped around the city.

A convoy of 15 trucks also advanced from the west but was stopped by crowds of about two miles from the square, students reported. Ten military trucks entered the Great Hall of the People on the square's west side about midnight, they said.

Hundreds of people surrounded two unmarked buses, one carrying about 40 troops and the other supplies including automatic rifles, about 1.2 miles west of Tiananmen.

Fault could squelch Nevada waste dump

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Energy Department said Friday it is reconsidering the possible existence of a geological fault near its bomb-testing site in Nevada.

If confirmed, the fault could kill plans for building a nuclear waste dump there.

The department, which previously had concluded there was no such fault, sent a team of scientists to Nevada last month to review existing data on the question "to make sure we didn't overlook something," said Ginger King, a department spokeswoman.

The review was prompted by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, which raised questions about the department's decision to dismiss a 1982 study that reported the possible fault, said Carl Gertz, manager of the Yucca Mountain project, which is to be the nation's first permanent dump for high-level nuclear waste.

"There doesn't appear to be a fault," Gertz said in a telephone interview, but it's not possible to know for sure until the department begins actual digging work that work can't start until Nevada grants certain permits, he said.

The site borders the Nevada Test Site, where underground nuclear tests are conducted.

The NRC, which must approve a license for the waste repository, also recommended more extensive study on whether the site contains significant amounts of gold, Gertz said.

Any gold mining activity could disrupt the repository, but Gertz said preliminary Energy Department studies indicated no significant amounts of any valuable minerals at the site, which is about 100 miles northwest of Las Vegas. He said additional studies were

Symms says farming not blackmail victim

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Friday's voluntary market withdrawal of the chemical Alar is not a signal that the agricultural sector is caving in to "environmental blackmail," Idaho Sen. Steve Symms maintains.

The conservative Republican, whose family commercially produces apples in southwestern Idaho, endorsed the action by Uniroyal Chemical Co., saying it should restore American consumer confidence in the domestic apple crop.

Alar, a growth regulator to extend the shelf life and enhance the color of apples, has been linked to cancer by the Natural Resources Defense Council, and earlier this year the Environmental Protection Agency urged it be removed from the market.

Government officials have said that levels of Alar in apples are safe, but the industry has been suffering because of the cloud cast over the chemical that has been used in 15 percent or less of the nation's apple crop.

Because of that concern, Idaho two weeks ago became the first state in the nation to ban the use of Alar.

Symms said the action by Uniroyal will allow the scientific review of Alar to go forward but expressed concern that the voluntary withdrawal not be viewed as a capitulation to environmental blackmail.

"It would be disastrous to send the message that Congress will sit by while agricultural technology is regulated by 50 Minutes," the television news magazine that broadcast a report on the health effects of Alar, Symms said.

"Modern chemical technology in the United States has helped us produce the most plentiful and healthiest food supply in the world," Symms said. "If we let eco-terrorist propaganda control that chemical technology, we risk jeopardizing that food supply."

Despondent sailor latest focus of probe

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Investigators of the USS Iowa explosion that killed 47 sailors are now focusing on a despondent sailor who showed "off" a timing device and was quoted by a crewmate as saying, "If you've got to go, go in a blast," NBC News said Friday.

The sailor, killed in the explosion, was gunner's mate Clayton Hartwig, 25. The network said he was the last man to touch the gunpowder that exploded in the ship's second turret on April 19.

A witness told investigators that Hartwig showed off a $16 timer available in hobby stores said that if it were rigged to a battery it could set off the ship's gunpowder, NBC said.

Defense Department spokesman Air Force Maj. Alan Freitag said he could not comment on reports about the Iowa investigation until the Navy completes it.

NBC said Hartwig was often despondent and aloof, and that he reportedly told the witness, "If you've got to go, go in a blast. You go quick. You go painless."

Hartwig could have inserted a homemade "detonator" between bags of gunpowder in the breach of the turret's center 16-inch gun, NBC said. Navy explosive experts have successfully tested a similar timing device in a simulation, the network added.

Investigators reportedly said that such a device could have given off smoke or made a noise that could have served as a warning to other sailors. It had been known earlier that the last words of sailor Richard Lawrence, spoken on a telephone, were, "We've got

Cooler days extend period for snowmelt

By N. S. NORKENTVED Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An early snowmelt has put runoff about a month ahead of schedule, and many worry that natural flows will slow earlier in the year than normal.

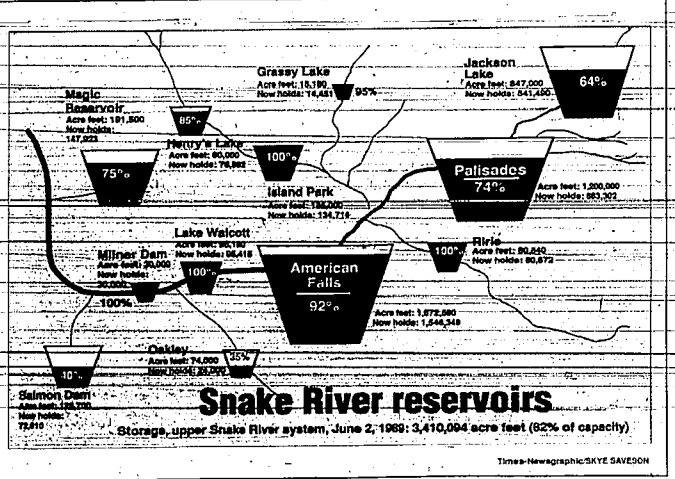

Jerry Beard of the Boise office of the Soil Conservation Service said most snowpack in Southern Idaho already is melted, but snow levels in the Upper Snake River Basin above 7,600 feet are near or above normal.

"Below that, it's pretty much depleted," Beard said.

Cool weather followed the early melt and has driven out the snow-melt-filling natural-flow requirements and reducing storage requirements, said Mike Beus of the Bureau of Reclamation.

Upbeat Bush home, calls for moving ahead to end Cold War

Los Angeles Times
— KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — President Bush, upbeat but ready for a day-off, returned Friday to the United States after an eight-day tour of Europe that patched the fraying fabric of the Atlantic alliance, and declared "we must get to work now to end the Cold War."

Reflecting the sunny finale of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization summit in Brussels, and his quick follow-up stops in Bonn and London, Bush told a welcoming crowd at Pease Air Force Base in Portsmouth, N.H., that "we are ready to help shape a new world."

Returning with what he said was a "message of hope" at a time of ferment in the Soviet bloc, the president said, "We have a great and historic opportunity to shape the changes that are transforming Europe."

"Working with our allies in Europe, we set a course for the future," he said. "And we must move to fulfill that promise—moving beyond containment, moving beyond the era of conflict and Cold War that the world has known for more than 40 years, because keeping the peace in Europe means keeping the peace for America. Our alliance keeps a less militarized Europe—a safer world for all of us."

With the president and his senior aides unanimous in their assessment of the summit's success—and a parade of senior officials marching off on Air Force One to report to reporters the moments of summit triumphs—the only note of caution was sounded by Brent Scowcroft, Bush's assistant for national security affairs.

Speaking with reporters aboard Air Force

One as the president flew from London to New Hampshire, Scowcroft replied with a start "No—when asked whether the Soviets could be trusted."

But, he said, the president's proposal to reduce the conventional, or non-nuclear, military forces of the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization "is not built on trust," which he said "is the last thing that comes between opposing sides."

Rather, Scowcroft said, such an arms reduction agreement "is built on mutual self-interest. We trust in their self-interest."

forces, lesser cuts on the part of the Atlantic alliance, which maintains fewer troops in Europe, and would, Bush said, "transform the military map of Europe."

While Bush told reporters Friday that he had not yet received a response from Soviet Premier Mikhail S. Gorbachev, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze has described the proposal's limits on Western forces "a serious step in the right direction."

Scowcroft said the administration views the Soviets' initial reaction as "very encouraging."

fect by 1992 or 1993.
The trip had been viewed in Europe and the United States with some trepidation before it began; out of concern that differences over the future role of short-range nuclear weapons in Europe could play havoc with allied unity—but the upbeat finish, stemming from support for the president's conventional arms control proposal, left the entire administration team proclaiming the Atlantic alliance in better shape than at any point in its past 40 years.

"In this period of historic change, the NATO alliance has never been more united, never has been stronger," Bush said in his remarks at the air force base. "The summit was a triumph for the alliance, a triumph of ideas, and most of all, it was a triumph of hope."

growth-regulator that improves the apple's appearance and gives it a longer shelf life.

Wylie, of Uniroyal, said at a news conference, "Our voluntary action is taken to ease public confusion and we hope to let the proven scientific process work."

Uniroyal has become the focus of a needless controversy that is causing doubt and confusion about the safety of America's food supply—a needless controversy that is hurting the apple industry and the American public," he said.

The company indicated that it intends to resume selling Alar if a government scientific review, scheduled to be completed next year, concludes the chemical is safe.

Apple growers applauded the decision by Uniroyal, but some suggested that the company should have made the move "much earlier." The International Apple Institute estimates that growers have lost more than $100 million because of the apple scare over Alar in recent months.

"This action is most welcomed... since it will allow any remaining concern consumers may have about small levels of Alar in apples and apple products," said Larry Davenport, executive director of the Processed Apples Institute.

Many growers have stopped using the product since concern about its health effects gained widespread attention earlier this year. Wylie, although not providing any specific production figures, said sales of Alar in the United States have dropped 75 percent during the past three years.

Apple growers applaud move to halt chemical's use in food

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) — Members of the Washington apple industry applauded the decision by Uniroyal Chemical Co. to voluntarily withdraw Alar from food use.

The Middlebury, Conn., company announced Friday in Washington, D.C., that it would immediately remove the farm chemical labeled as a possible carcinogen until final test data is reviewed by the Environmental Protection Agency and a final regulatory decision is reached.

"They are darn late in getting to this point," said John McAlister of Tree Top Inc., the nation's largest apple "juicer" maker. "We've been after them for a long time and consumer confidence is being eroded."

"We should be hopeful and expect this will be the beginning of restoring consumer confidence," said McAlister, whose company has suffered a sales drop of more than 20 percent since the Alar controversy began in February.

Ironically, a strong stand against Alar use was reportedly a major factor in the forced resignation of Tree Top president Dennis Colleran earlier this week. Colleran called for a ban on Alar, apparently angering some of the juice cooperative's growers who supported use of the growth-regulator that enhances the appearance of apples.

Sales to supermarket apples also have slumped dramatically, costing growers an estimated $100 million nationwide this year.

"It won't make any difference for this year, but it certainly should help us as far as sales for next year's crop is concerned," said Bill DeWitt of the Washington Apple Association, which charts apple sales. DeWitt reported Friday that out-of-state apple shipments for the week ending Thursday were down 22 percent from the week before.

But he said that was primarily due to a short work week caused by the Memorial Day holiday.

Shipments totaled 863,000 42-pound boxes, down from 1.1 million the week before. During the same week last year shipments totaled 984,000 boxes.

Of much greater concern to growers are the 12 million boxes left in storage, including an unknown number of Alar-treated apples that retailers do not want.

The inventory is 3.3 million boxes above last year at this time.

Alar—the marketing name for damathione—was labeled a possible carcinogen by the private Natural Resources Defense Council in a February report. The findings have been disputed by Uniroyal and the federal government has pronounced apples safe to eat for the time being.

The EPA was one of the agencies involved in pronouncing apples safe, but in a separate action it said it plans to ban Alar next year, although tests could affect that decision.

Today's weather Cooler temperatures may bring showers

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Gooding:
Partly cloudy today and cooler. Scattered showers or thunderstorms. Highs from low to mid 70s. Northwest winds from 10 to 20 mph.
Cameo Prairie and Wood River Valley:
Breezy and cooler today. Mostly cloudy with scattered showers or thunderstorms. Highs in mid 60s.

Northern Utah and Nevada:
Utah — Variable clouds today through Sunday. Variable clouds with a gradually increasing chance of showers and thunderstorms during the afternoon and early night hours. Gusty winds likely near any thunderstorms. Highs in the 70s. Lows in the upper 40s to near 50.

Nevada — Partly cloudy today through the afternoon with widely scattered showers or thunderstorms developing. Partly cloudy tonight. Partly cloudy Sunday with scattered showers or thunderstorms. Lows at night mostly from upper 30s to upper 40s. Highs today middle 70s to middle 80s and Sunday from 70s to low 80s.

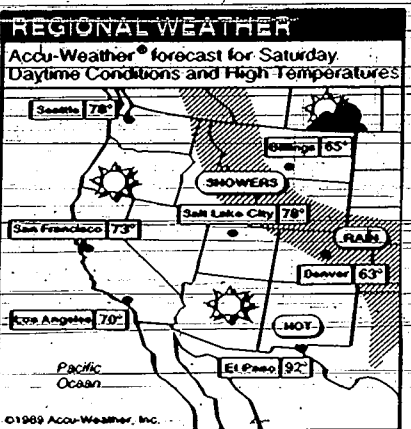

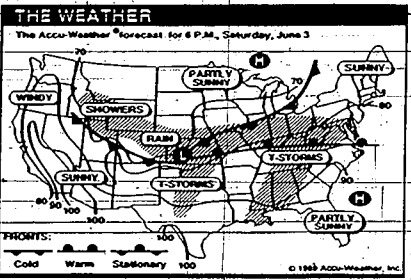

Summary:
The National Weather Service in Boise says cooler northerly flow will dominate Idaho over the weekend.

Disturbances in the northerly flow will cause the area to experience cooler temperatures, scattered showers, thunderstorms and gusty winds. Skies were partly cloudy across most of the state Friday. Afternoon temperatures climbed into the mid 70s to mid 80s across the south. In the north, 70s were common.

The pollen count in Twin Falls Friday was 48 particles per cubic meter of air.

The extended forecast for Southern Idaho — Monday through Wednesday, fair but a slight chance of afternoon thunderstorms. Highs from 80 to 85 in the western half and from mid to upper 70s in the eastern half. Overnight lows near 50 in the western half and from mid to upper 40s in the eastern half.

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 88 degrees at Caldwell, while Stanley reported the coldest at 25 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 101 degrees at Laredo, Texas, and Palm Springs, Calif. The lowest was 28 at Gunnison, Colo.

a problem in here."

"A different voice was heard saying something that appeared to be 'Smoke smoke smoke, help help,' NBC said.

Defensive positions had been found in various positions, but not with their arms covering their heads, the network said.

In addition, NBC said investigators found that Hartwig had written letters that spoke of his death and the destruction of the second turret.

The network quoted sources as saying they believed Hartwig lived in a fantasy world and told relatives of a coming traffic jam in London that the Navy said he had not been given NBC said Hartwig's close friend, Kendall L. Truitt, was heard by two other sailors as saying immediately after the blast, "I can't believe he actually did it."

Truitt has asked the Navy for an apology for linking his name to the criminal investigation of the explosion.

CBS also reported that a witness was seen on commercial television and a federal government has pronounced apples safe to eat for the time being.

The EPA was one of the agencies involved in pronouncing apples safe, but in a separate action it said it plans to ban Alar next year, although tests could affect that decision.

The Nevada state government strongly objects to the project and has accused the Energy Department of disregarding the 1982 study that said there may be an uncharted fault parallel to the Ghost Dance fault, which cuts through the site.

In a letter to Gertz on Tuesday, the Nevada Nuclear Waste Project Office said the 1982 report contains "strong evidence" of a fault intersecting the area where two exploratory shafts would be drilled. Earthquakes could seal the holes.

The state contends that if the additional fault were confirmed it would disqualify Yucca Mountain as a waste dump because the Energy Department's site criteria rule out sites with underground facilities closer than 100 feet from a fault.

The NRC raised a similar point, according to Sue Gagner, a commission spokeswoman. She said the department was told in a meeting in early May that "it looks like they may be violating their own criteria."

She said the NRC would publish a lengthy analysis of the Energy Department's preliminary site study in July.

Gertz said a team of researchers would spend the next two months reviewing all the existing scientific data on the possible existence of an uncharted fault, but that the key to ending the debate was getting started with exploratory drilling.

"Rather than rehash all their old data we want to get on the mountain," he said.

The students, who have gained considerable support from ordinary citizens, are demanding more democracy, an end to corruption among officials and talks with the government.

Another bonus this year—the improvement completed earlier this year by the Jackson Lake that has tripled the storage capacity of the reservoir.

Precipitation for April and May was below normal and much of what did fall soaked into the dry soil parched by two years of drought, Beard said.

Targhee land swap put on hold

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed land exchange between the Targhee National Forest and owners of Grand Targhee Ski Resort has been put on hold for 15 days.

Dale Robertson, chief of the U.S. Forest Service, said Friday that the stay was granted to give officials time to study an appeal filed by Boyd Bowles of Alta, Wyo.

The agreement calls for the exchange of 970 acres of Targhee National Forest land at the base of the ski area in western Wyoming for about 900 acres of private land along the scenic South Fork of the Snake River in eastern Idaho.

Forest Service officials said a ruling on Bowles' appeal should be made by July 4. By law, the land exchange must be completed by July 14.

Teacher wins part of court battle

BOISE (AP) — Betty Jane Flemmer, teacher in the Tammany School District at Lewiston, has won half a victory in her appeal to the Court of Appeals.

The court on Friday sent her lawsuit against the district back to district court, reversing part of Judge E.B. Ponack's decision against her. But the court upheld other parts of the ruling, concluding the district acted properly.

The Court of Appeals ruled that the district failed to prove that it made an adequate effort to hire Ms. Flemmer as a substitute for an ill teacher in the 1985-86 school year. But it upheld the district's contention it was justified in hiring Ms. Flemmer only as a substitute for the 1986-87 school year, even though she worked the entire year for the same teacher, who was ill.

The lawsuit asked for an injunction, forcing the district to rehire her as a regular teacher. But the Court of Appeals noted that was moot, because she was hired for 1987-88.

The question of possible damages for the fact Ms. Flemmer was hired as a substitute for only 43 of the 185 days the regular teacher was ill in 1985-86 must be resolved by district court, the appeals ruling said.

Monsanto earns resources award

SODA SPRINGS (AP) — Monsanto Corp. reclamation efforts at its phosphatic mine east of Henry have earned the elemental phosphorus producer an award from a group of federal-state natural resources agencies.

The award will be presented June 13 at a state-land Board meeting, said Monsanto Mine Superintendent David Farnsworth.

The J.L. Simplot Co.'s Smoky Canyon Mine and NuWest-Condals Partnerships' Mountain-Fuel Mine were two other operations nominated in the same category. It was general excellence in continuing reclamation of a mine over 75 acres. Three of the five nominees in that category are in Caribou County.

Unclaimed property goes to state

POCATELLO — The state Tax Commission will be $21,305 richer, courtesy of a somewhat disgruntled Pocatello City Council.

The money represents the amount on the city's books which state officials contend is unclaimed property — reportedly owed people for such things as utility deposits, interest on municipal bonds, and un-cashed checks.

"I don't think it's fair, but it's the law and we have to give the state the money," City Clerk Pete McDougall said prior to Thursday's meeting.

The unclaimed property was discovered during a recent Tax Commission audit and the funds date back 13 years. The city has little option but to send in the check, McDougall said.

Drunk driver receives prison term

POCATELLO (AP) — Pocatello businessman Robert Rowland, 48, has been sentenced to up to six years in prison, with a minimum of 2 1/2 years, for causing the traffic death of an Idaho State University student last March.

Sixth District Judge Lynn Winnill said Friday the sentence was a tough one to make, but noted that Rowland has had three previous convictions for drunken driving and evidently has an alcohol problem.

Donna Minton, 21, Idaho Falls, died after an accident in which she was struck on Interstate 15. The other driver fled the accident, but Rowland later voluntarily turned himself in. A charge of leaving the scene of an accident was dropped when he pleaded guilty to vehicular manslaughter while driving under the influence of alcohol.

Winnill recommended that Rowland be held in minimum security, but actual classification will be up to the Board of Corrections.

Man receives sentence for child abuse

BOISE (AP) — An illiterate transient who prosecutors said has "abnormal" and "disturbing" characteristics has been sentenced to at least 3 1/2 years in prison for abandoning his badly abused, mentally retarded son at a freeway rest stop near Boise.

Edward Donald Tuinman, 29, was sentenced by 4th District Judge Alan Schwartzman on Friday after pleading guilty March 29 to a felony charge of willful abandonment of a child.

"I made a mistake, Tuinman said, breaking down in tears before being sentenced. "That's all I have to say." Schwartzman said Tuinman must serve at least 3 1/2 years of a 10-year prison term before becoming eligible for parole. He was given credit for 145 days already spent in custody.

The judge called the 3 1/2 year term a "one-for-one" sentence for the physical and emotional abuse 7-year-old Eddy Tuinman Jr. had suffered since his father removed him from a special school in Utah in 1985.

"Even the lowest form of animal life does not abuse its young in such a way," Ada County Deputy Prosecutor Jay Rosenthal said in requesting the maximum 14-year prison term, with at least the first seven years fixed.

But Schwartzman, while acknowledging that the boy was in an appalling condition when he was found abandoned in January, noted that Tuinman still faces felony assault charges in Yakima County, Wash., for allegedly abusing his son there last winter.

There also were mitigating circumstances to consider, the judge said, including that the child almost certainly would have died if he had remained with Tuinman much longer.

"So what you did with Eddy has at least a tinge of mercy to it," Schwartzman told Tuinman. "In fairness to you, I must exercise some restraint on the obvious question of physical abuse."

The mute boy was found Jan. 4 at an Interstate 84 rest stop east of Boise. He was emancipated, covered with bruises and cigarette burns and was only 17 months old.

Prosecutor Jay Rosenthal said Eddy "looked like something out of a concentration camp."

Debra Tuinman, 28, a co-defendant in the abandonment case, has told investigators her ex-husband physically and emotionally abused her and her four children. The charge against her is on hold, and Rosenthal said he expects it to be resolved within two weeks.

The charges in Washington state accuse Tuinman of beating, choking, burning and starving Eddy while the family lived at a migrant labor camp south of Yakima.

James Cook, an Idaho Department of Health and Welfare child protection supervisor, testified Friday that Eddy now is receiving around-the-clock care in a state-licensed group home.

Cook said the boy has made dramatic improvement since he was found. He may never be able to communicate verbally, but is learning sign language, has gained weight and is being toilet trained.

The child now is able to sleep through the night in his own bed, uses eating utensils and functions well in a group, the social worker said.

Deputy Public Defender Mark Stewart, seeking a three-to-eight-year prison sentence for Tuinman, said his client realized it was wrong to abandon the boy. But at the time, he said, Tuinman believed it was a choice between deserting the child or killing him.

"The situation could have been much worse," Stewart said. "He could have left him in the middle of nowhere, but he didn't."

Stewart cited Tuinman's low intelligence level and lack of education as reasons why he was unable to understand help for his son was available through social agencies agencies when the family lived in Utah.

"Tuinman has a seventh-grade education, but Rosenthal said Friday that he functions at a third-grade level, has a low IQ and "possible neurological impairment."

Combined with a long history of drug and alcohol abuse and aggressive behavior, the prosecutor said, a prison term was necessary, both as punishment and to protect society.

"I would suggest, your honor, that anything short of a penitentiary sentence depreciates the seriousness of the crime," Rosenthal said.

But since being arrested Jan. 7 near Nephr, Utah, Stewart said, Tuinman has changed and begun trying to understand his problems.

"Ed Tuinman, the true person that he is, without the influence of drugs, is coming back to the surface," Stewart said. "He's not the evil monster the state portrays him to be."

Jury finds lobbyist guilty of drunken driving charge

BOISE (AP) — William C. Roden, a prominent Boise lobbyist and attorney, has been convicted of drunken driving following a one-day trial.

A four-woman, two-man Ada County Magistrate Court jury deliberated about two hours Thursday before finding Roden, 60, guilty of the misdemeanor charge.

"We're pleased with the verdict," said Deputy Attorney General Jack Haycock.

Visiting Carnus County Magistrate John Varin scheduled sentencing for June 27. Roden faces up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine for a first offense.

Roden was arrested after midnight on June 28, 1988, after a Boise Police officer saw the attorney's station wagon weave into another lane at 18th and Main streets in Boise.

He was taken into custody after failing field sobriety tests and later refused to take a breath test at the Ada County Jail.

A first trial on the charge in January ended in a hung jury, split 2-2 in favor of the defendant.

Roden, who represented himself during Thursday's trial, told the jury that he and law partner Charles Tom Arkoosh were working late that evening in their downtown office.

After being interrupted by window cleaners shortly before 9 p.m., the pair decided to get something to eat at a nearby bar and grill. When they arrived, the grill was closed, so the lawyers instead ordered rounds of vodka-tonics. Roden estimated that he had five drinks before leaving the bar.

Addressing the jury as his own witness, Roden said he refused to take a breath test because he doubted the reliability and accuracy of police equipment.

Roden was arrested on another drunken driving charge in 1986, but an Ada County judge dismissed the case after ruling that the city's evidence was inadmissible. During that arrest, Roden submitted to breath tests, producing blood alcohol readings of 0.17 percent and 0.16 percent.

Roden was a lobbyist during the 1989 session of the Idaho Legislature.

Officials pay tribute to fireman

BOISE (AP) — Pallbearers hoisted the casket of Earl B. Robinson onto a fire-engine-red pumper truck as part of an official fireman's funeral.

With its lights flashing, Boise City Fire Engine No. 9 led a procession of 50 cars on Thursday to the Cloverdale Cemetery.

Robinson worked 44 years as a city fireman before retiring as battalion chief in 1980. He died Monday of natural causes at age 74.

"To work there 44 years, you have to have something extra," said Charles Brock, a retired assistant chief.

Robinson was buried in his fireman's uniform.

"That was his wish," Brock said. "He wanted a fireman's burial and to ride out on a fire truck."

McCall airport receives federal grant

WASHINGTON (AP) — The city airport in McCall, Idaho, has been awarded a $970,200 federal grant for equipment, runway construction and land acquisition, the U.S. Department of Transportation announced.

The grant, awarded Thursday, will be drawn from the Airport Trust Fund managed by the Department of Transportation and Federal Aviation Administration.

Money for the trust fund comes from an 8-percent tax on airline tickets, a 5-percent tax on airline cargo, a 12-cent-per-gallon tax on aviation fuel and a $3-per-person charge on international flights.

Work at the McCall Airport to be financed by the grant will include construction of a new taxiway, installation of weather reporting equipment and acquisition of land for development and approaches.

Boise man charged in accident

BOISE (AP) — A Boise man has been charged with two counts of involuntary manslaughter, following a Memorial Day weekend accident in which two people were killed.

A summons will be issued to James Kappelman, 29, to appear in 4th District Magistrate Court on the charges, Ada County Prosecutor Greg Bower said Thursday.

The charges are misdemeanors, punishable by up to one year in jail and a fine of $2,000 on each count.

Kappelman was in serious condition on Thursday at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, Bower said. A summons to appear in court will not be sent until Kappelman's condition improves.

"We are not going to bring him into court if it endangers his life," he said.

According to the Ada County sheriff's office, Kappelman was driving east on Victory Road about 8:35 p.m. Monday when he failed to stop at a stop sign at Locust Grove Road.

His vehicle was hit by a car driven northbound on Locust Grove by Melissa Wheeler.

Proposed land exchange stalls

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — A proposed land exchange between the Targhee National Forest and the Grand Targhee Ski Area has been put on hold pending the outcome of an appeal of the proposal filed by a group of Teton Valley, Idaho, residents.

U.S. Forest Service officials said while work will continue to prepare for the exchange of property, no titles will change hands until the appeal, which calls for an environmental impact statement on the proposal, can be settled.

"We will proceed with all the activities related to the exchange, except we will not exchange deeds... until the appeal has been resolved, and the secretary of agriculture has had his 15-day period for a review of that decision as well," said Wallace Shiverdecker, a regional spokesman for the Forest Service.

Forest Service and ski area officials have agreed to an exchange of 270 acres of federal land at the base of the ski area for 700 acres of environmentally sensitive private land along the South Fork of the Snake River in Idaho.

Boise attorney plays role in settlement

BOISE (AP) — Veteran Boise attorney Charles "Chuck" McDevitt played a key role in the out-of-court settlement of one of the largest disaster litigations in American history.

A federal judge last month accepted the proposed payment of up to $100 million to settle hundreds of lawsuits stemming from the 1986 Dupont Plaza Hotel fire that killed 97 people.

There were about 2,300 plaintiffs in the case, seeking damages from 230 defendants. There were 204 separate lawsuits, seeking $1.8 billion in damages.

McDevitt represented three of the defendants. They included, Edeco, Inc., and Tertiary, Inc., limited partnerships owning part of the stock in the hotel. The other defendant was Hotel Equipment Leasing Associates, which leased equipment to the hotel.

As is typical in such massive litigation, the judge selected to preside over the proceedings, U.S. District Judge Louis C. Bechtel, Philadelphia, allowed some cases to proceed to trial to set a standard for the other cases. McDevitt was one of seven lead counsel for those cases.

For six weeks, McDevitt was engaged in the trial, "negotiating settlements at the same time."

"I made more than one all-night fight to a negotiating session, then back to the trial," McDevitt said.

Massive lawsuits, which at times involved 250 attorneys, can become unmanageable, McDevitt said. In many countries, the government will handle the claims.

"In our system, it's the only way to handle it," he said, appointing a special master to try a few cases to set standards for possible settlement of the others.

As an example of the complexity of the case, McDevitt said he had four three-ring binders just listing and describing the exhibits he planned to use in the case.

In any event, in his numerous trips to Puerto Rico, McDevitt says he got to meet some of the country's top attorneys. "They are nice fellows," he said.

McDevitt, a Pocatello native, has been in legal practice since 1956. He spent a few years with Boise Cascade Corp. and Singer Co. and worked as a public defender before returning to private practice.

The hotel fire on Dec. 31, 1986, killed 97 people and injured more than 140. It broke out in a ballroom on the first floor of the 22-floor hotel, and most of the victims were trapped in the casino. The beach hotel was nearly filled on New Year's Eve with nearly 1,000 guests.

The hotel was cited for 25 violations by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, including a lack of emergency exits from the casino where 84 of the victims perished.

The $100 million settlement McDevitt helped negotiate was only part of the litigation. Trial was scheduled to start this week in another phase.

The first phase covered all the defendants allegedly involved in or related to the ownership or control of the hotel or allegedly related or affiliated enterprises comprising more than 150 defendants.

More than 4 million documents were identified as evidence in a trial that was expected to run one year to 18 months, until out of court settlement was reached.

Legislator May dies Thursday

SPOKANE (AP) — Longtime Spokane legislator, labor leader and poet William May is dead at 87.

May, who represented Spokane's 3rd legislative district from 1960 to 1980, died Thursday of heart failure at a Spokane hospital.

An avid golfer and songwriter, May's humorous rhymes could both entertain and gently prod an opponent in the House.

In 1961, an album for which May wrote the words and music won the Western Heritage Award as that year's outstanding Western musical composition.

Wright relaxes as Demo leaders jockey for positions of power

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright relaxed in his office Friday as other Democratic leaders jockeyed for inside position in the race to move ahead in the power structure after Wright's resignation takes effect.

"He's taking calls. He didn't have much time to take them yesterday," said Mark Johnson, the Texas Democrat's press secretary.

Wright, who announced Wednesday that he would step down as speaker upon selection of his successor, spent Thursday doing interviews with reporters. He planned a relaxed weekend, but planned to join the congressional delegation traveling to Miami on Sunday for a memorial service honoring Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., who died this week.

Wright's reign as speaker is expected to end Tuesday, the day a Democratic caucus has been scheduled to nominate a new speaker, almost certainly the current majority leader, Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash. Republicans also planned to meet Tuesday to nominate Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-

Ill., as speaker. But there was no known opposition to Foley among the Democrats, who hold a strong majority in the House, and it was given they will their own nominee rather than the Republican nominee when the full House votes Tuesday after the separate party caucuses.

Even among Republicans, Foley is well-liked and regarded as showing much more courtesy to the minority party than Wright. Foley said this week he wanted to turn the House away from the partisan bitterness of the past few months and get legislators back to work legislating. President Bush, returning from Europe on Air Force One, was asked Friday about talk of a political war in the House.

"I don't like it," he replied. But the president, a former House member himself, declined to offer advice on the new Democratic leadership team. "The last thing they need is advice from the executive branch about how to proceed," Bush said.

While Foley appears headed toward certain election, several candidates are vying for the other Democratic leadership slots. The voting for those positions probably will take place no sooner than a week after next week's speaker election.

Reps. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., and Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., are competing for Foley's position of Majority Leader. Gephardt is a member of the Democratic leadership who ran unsuccessfully last year for the party's presidential nomination. Jenkins is a popular member of the more conservative wing of the party.

Leakers are targets of Thornburgh's ire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Dick Thornburgh threatened Friday to fire Justice Department leakers but also criticized the news media as "aiders and abettors" in publicizing unauthorized information on a controversial story.

He expressed the wish that journalists would share with federal officials the names of their sources on the story and said that if reporters would name anonymous sources, "every leaker in town would be gone before sundown."

Thornburgh, on Capitol Hill to testify on another matter, was questioned about possible leaks leading to recent stories saying Rep. William Gray's office personnel practices are under Justice Department scrutiny.

Gray, of Pennsylvania, the fourth-ranking House Democrat, has complained vigorously about leaks and has asked for appointment of an independent counsel to look into the matter.

The attorney general has rejected that demand, but he told the Senate Judiciary Committee he has appointed the No. 2 man in the Justice Department, Edward Dennis, to seek the source of unauthorized disclosures.

No debris reaches ground as Soviet rocket plunges

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Soviet satellite booster rocket reentered the atmosphere over the U.S.-Canadian border with no sign that any debris reached the ground, a State Department spokesman said Friday.

The Soviet news agency Tass reported the launch Wednesday and said in a later dispatch that the third stage of the Proton rocket booster, which had put three satellites into orbit, descended over the U.S.-Canadian border.

There was "no indication that any debris of any kind hit the ground," said State Department spokesman Richard Boucher. He said the descent of such boosters is a routine occurrence and that they almost always burn up in the atmosphere before reaching the ground.

Capt. Thomas Niemann of the U.S. Space Command at Colorado Springs said the Soviet rocket booster was tracked back into the atmosphere at 12:34 p.m. MDT Wednesday at 48.5 degrees north and about 86 degrees west, which would place it over Minnesota's border with Canada.

Tass said the rocket launch was designed to test elements of a global space navigation system being created to track civil aircraft and vessels.

Iowa gambling rising

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Gambling "games" have been sprouting like corn in Iowa.

In less than a generation the state has launched high-stakes bingo, a lottery, dog and horse racing and now riverboat gambling.

Experts on gambling addictions say Iowa will harvest a bumper crop of compulsive gamblers as a consequence.

"There's no question, some people are going to lead disastrous lives, some families will be broken up, some parents will cash in their individual retirement accounts," said Henry Lesieur, associate professor of sociology at St. John's University in New York.

Lesieur and other experts on compulsive gambling gathered in Des Moines this week for the state's fourth annual conference on the subject. All agreed that the number of problem gamblers is bound to increase as exposure to gambling increases.

In the early 1970s, Iowa law didn't permit gambling and the state attorney general made headlines by raiding the North Buena Vista church picnic and confiscating bingo paraphernalia. Since then, the state has allowed high stakes bingo, three pari-mutuel dog tracks and a horse racing track, and state-run lotteries. Beginning in 1991, it will also allow casino-style gambling on riverboats.

"Yes, riverboat gambling will create jobs, but these other things are going to happen, too," said Lesieur.

Nuclear attack sub to be commissioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nuclear-powered attack submarine will be commissioned into service this weekend in Norfolk, Va., the Navy announced Friday.

The USS Newport News will be commissioned at ceremonies today at the Norfolk Naval Base, with Sen. John W. Warner, R-Va., delivering the principal address.

The sub, a Los Angeles-class vessel, is the third Navy warship to be named for the city of Newport News, Va., which is near Norfolk and is a major shipbuilding center.

The submarine is 200 feet in length, 33 feet wide and displaces about 6,900 tons when submerged.

Kentuckians convicted in bank robbery; death

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. (AP) — Two Kentucky men were convicted Friday of stealing $286,000 in West Virginia's biggest bank robbery and then threatening potential witnesses. The man described as the ringleader was convicted of killing a witness.

Sentencing was set for Aug. 14 for John P. McCoy of Slaters Branch, Ky., and Doyle David Moore of Lowell, Ky. They were found guilty of being two of the four men who held up the Matewan National Bank branch at Kermit on Jan. 3, 1987.

Complex issues confront church in next century

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Presbyterian church must tackle such complex issues as the effect of medical technology on the quality of life if Christians are to face the uncertainties of the future, a prominent educator told church leaders Friday.

"There is no question that the 21st century will be different from the 20th," Roger Heyns told a symposium of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Heyns, former chancellor of the University of California at Berkeley, was the keynote speaker for "Continue the Journey: Symposium on the Future" this weekend.

Over $1 trillion in pension funds in danger, report states

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than $1.6 trillion in pension funds potentially are at risk because of poor regulations and inept enforcement of federal laws, the Labor Department's inspector general said Friday.

He spoke of a "possible 'nightmare' dwarfing the savings and loan crisis."

"In this vital, asset-rich area, the risk of ignoring the potential consequences of inadequate enforcement is monumental," J. Brian Hyland said in urging Congress to immediately investigate potential abuses and shortcomings of federal pension laws.

"These are savings American workers have set aside for their future," Hyland said. "These workers trust that the government will protect these funds by holding the managers and trustees of their pension funds accountable. They deserve no less."

The report came under immediate attack from a group involved in pension policy. Labor Department officials outside the inspector general's office did not immediately return telephone calls.

Also, a spokeswoman for the federal agency that insures private pension funds said Hyland appeared to be overstating the government's — and taxpayers' — potential liability in the event of a major pension funding crisis, the likelihood of which she said was "smaller than remote."

But Hyland, while not alleging any specific abuses, said existing laws and regulations allow employers and pension fund managers to hide abuses from the government and understaffing at the Labor Department leaves the government little chance to catch offenders.

Indeed, Hyland said, the department does not even have a system to detect when reports pension funds are required to file are delinquent. And permissive regulations allow fund administrators and their accountants "to omit from reports information that could alert the government to fraud, abuse and mismanagement," said the inspector general.

"The intent of Congress to assure adequate enforcement in large part through sound, meaningful reporting and disclosure has not been achieved," the report said. "Legislative reconsideration is needed."

Hyland said his and other reviews of enforcement of the 1974 Employee Income Retirement Security Act have found "a striking number of parallels" to the current savings and loan crisis, particularly in the failure of managers and private accountants to pinpoint and report significant management and operations problems.

"As, unfortunately, has been demonstrated by the recent savings and loan crisis, government regulation of an industry does not ensure that invested assets are protected," he said.

"I think he is very dramatically overstating any problems," said Dallas L. Salisbury, president of the Employee Benefit Research Institute, a Washington organization that tracks benefits policy.

Spending bill may be done next week

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate set its sights Friday on finishing a $3.3 billion "dire emergency" spending bill next week after the legislation bogged down under a load of amendments.

In about three hours Friday, lawmakers worked their way through several non-controversial amendments, ranging from resuming food aid to Haiti to financing University of Wyoming research for last summer's fires at Yellowstone National Park. The session followed a nearly 14-hour day Thursday.

The Senate then recessed until Tuesday, when it will consider several proposals likely to spark lengthy debate. They include provisions delaying the start of catastrophic care programs for the elderly and repealing a tax law regulating employee benefit programs.

Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., has shown impatience with the pace of work on the bill. After another senator thanked colleagues for coming to the floor for debate, Byrd responded, "That's where we ought to be. We're getting paid for it."

The so-called dire emergency spending bill, first requested by President Bush in March, is designed to finance agencies running low on funds for fiscal 1989's final four months.

Pentagon contract scheme lands 2 in prison

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Consultant William L. Parkin and the former Navy engineer he bribed were given 26-month prison terms Friday for illegally scheming to help two companies get lucrative Pentagon contracts.

Parkin, 65, and Stuart E. Berlin, 51, were each fined $25,000 and ordered to serve two years of supervised probation following their release from prison. They each could have received up to 25 years in prison and fined $750,000.

Berlin, who choked back sobs before U.S. District Judge Claude Hilton imposed the sentence, said his crime was "the worst mistake that I ever made in my life." He added, "The last year has been a living hell for me."

The judge said both defendants, who have cooperated with the Justice Department's "Operation III Wind" investigation of Pentagon procurement fraud since pleading guilty, could serve their time in minimum-security prisons.

Parkin pleaded guilty to charges that he bribed Berlin to provide secret Navy bid information that would help Teledyne Industries Inc. and Haselbine Corp. of Long Island, N.Y., obtain lucrative contracts to sell electronic equipment to the Pentagon.

Berlin was sentenced for taking nearly $5,000 in bribes in return for giving Parkin the bid information.

Parkin, a former Navy employee, admitted that he had taken $50,000 in bribes over a 10-year period.

Lukens plans to stay in office, push appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Donald E. "Buz" Lukens, rebuffing calls for his resignation, announced Friday that he intends to stay in Congress while he fights to overturn his conviction of having sex with a 16-year-old girl.

"I refuse to allow the lies and deceit of one delinquent individual to ruin me. I am now fighting for my life," the Ohio Republican said in a statement released by his office.

Lukens, 58 and divorced, was convicted May 26 of contributing to the delinquency and unruliness of a minor, a misdemeanor. The Franklin County, Ohio, jury found him guilty of having sex with the girl at his Columbus apartment last November.

Lukens said in his statement that his accuser had "fantasies of getting even with the establishment."

But the court refused to allow him to bring up evidence he wanted to present to raise doubts about her reliability, the conservative lawmaker said.

"My legal counselors assure me that prospects for a reversal in my case are excellent," he said. "Only at that time will I make my final decision regarding any future political activity," he said.

Vowing to prove his innocence, he declared: "I am not a quitter."

Lukens' statement made no mention of a report Thursday by a Columbus television station that another teen-age girl said she also had sex with Lukens, in 1985 when she was 15. The station said Lukens said the girl for sex on five or six occasions.

WSIX-TV said the girl, identified only as "Paris," had been sought by the grand jury to testify in Lukens' case but was not found.

Would You Put a Miracle on the Line?

This weekend, you can make a miracle happen by simply picking up your phone. When you pledge yourself to the Children's Miracle Network Telethon, you'll join thousands of others in helping kids at St. Luke's.

Kids like two-year-old Whitney Morris. All she needed was a fighting chance to beat the odds and overcome complications from such a rare disease as infant botulism. Or Riley Downum. Born with viral pneumonia, he spent months thanks to the support of St. Luke's High Risk Clinic. And Summer Putman. Facing congenital heart problems since the age of three and undergoing heart surgery for the third time last March, she's finally looking forward to better things in life as every teenager should.

Children's stories like these are what this weekend is all about. But without your help, these stories might never be told.

It's your dollars that count. In a hundred different ways. For thousands of kids. From Lewiston to Winnemucca, Baker to Burley. Because the dollars you give today are the ones that bring life to our kids tomorrow. And the best part of all is knowing every dollar stays right here. To care for kids like Whitney. To make a difference in the life of Riley. And bring hope to the heart of Summer.

So pledge yourself to make a miracle. Give to the Children's Miracle Network Telethon. Live from the Red Lion Riverside. From 7 p.m. June 3, until 4 p.m., June 4, on KIVI Channel 6. Just pick up your phone and call. There's a miracle waiting at the end of the line.

Unemployment

Source: U.S. Dept. of Labor. AP

Slowdown evidence increasing

WASHINGTON (AP)—Unemployment fell slightly to 5.2 percent last month but job growth sputtered to a three-year low, the government said Friday in a report laden with evidence of economic slowdown.

The Labor Department said civilian joblessness fell from April's rate of 5.3 percent, with a decline in the number of people looking for work offsetting an anemic expansion of non-farm payrolls.

Financial markets reacted favorably to the report, which immediately renewed speculation among economists over whether the Federal Reserve is ready to relax its tight hold on credit in the face of a slowing economy.

"Are they going to ease on the basis of this report alone? No, I don't think so," said Lyle Gramley, chief economist for the Mortgage Bankers Association and a former Fed governor.

Only 101,000 new jobs were added to the economy last month, the lowest monthly total since 84,000 in March 1986 and well below the average monthly gain of 215,000 jobs for 1987 and 1988. The average month-to-month gain over the last three months has slipped to 160,000.

It suggests to us that we're going to have either slow growth or no growth in the second half of the year, said Merrill Lynch chief economist Donald H. Straszheim. "This slowdown is not a statistical fluke—it is an event."

"This is a rather weak report on employment but I don't see any indications of recession," said Gramley. "The economy certainly does not appear to be headed next year for a recession," said Allan Sznur of Boston Co. Economic Advisers Inc.

There was a bit of good news on inflation as average hourly earnings increased just 0.1 percent last month on a seasonally adjusted basis after shooting up more than 0.6 percent from March to April.

But coming on the heels of a report showing first-quarter unit labor costs rose 0.6 percent on an annual basis, analysts said the encouraging wage data in the unemployment report was not enough evidence to say inflation was waning.

The slowdown in payroll expansion was essentially across the board, with declines in the goods-producing industries and gains on the service-producing side well below 1987 and 1988 averages.

Construction payrolls fell by 14,000 and manufacturing jobs by 18,000, according to the Labor Department's survey of business establishments. Overall, the goods-producing sector lost 33,000 jobs last month.

Growth in the service-producing sector offset some of those losses but was sluggish, nonetheless, including the slowest month-to-month gain in service jobs—65,000—in six years.

Wholesale trade added just 2,000 jobs last month and retail trade 17,000, while governments expanded their payrolls by 32,000 workers, the government said.

The Labor Department said the average private-sector nonagricultural workweek fell 0.3 hours, to 34.6 hours. The average factory workweek also fell last month, slipping 0.2 hours to 41 hours while average overtime fell an equal amount to 3.8 hours.

Those could be further signs of slowing growth, but the Labor Department cautioned that they also could reflect adjustments from April, when the data was skewed somewhat by seasonal formulas.

High school principal Joe Clark recovers from heart surgery

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Tough-guy principal Joe Clark has to put aside his bulldog and bat for a while as he recovers from surgery to replace an infected heart valve.

Clark, whose patrols of Eastside High School in Paterson earned him acclaim and criticism from educators, was in satisfactory condition Thursday at Beth Israel Medical Center in Newark, said hospital spokesman Tom Casey.

The 52-year-old principal, whose life is the subject of the movie "Lean on Me," underwent surgery Sunday to remove a bacterium that had infected one of his heart valves. The infected aortic valve was replaced

Man who attacked actress will get parole

Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Actress Theresa Saldana, six months pregnant, is frightened.

Her dark eyes seem sheathed in glass. She stares into the unknown.

"This man is going to kill me if somebody doesn't help," she says quietly, with conviction. "That is the truth."

This man is Arthur Richard Jackson, the deranged Scottish drifter who seven years ago tried and miraculously failed to kill Saldana by stabbing her 10 times. He is scheduled to be paroled from state prison June 15.

In several letters and phone calls to journalists during his imprisonment, Jackson has threatened to complete his "divine mission." He is "the benevolent angel of death," Jackson says. He will take Saldana, "the countless angel," to heaven.

But such are only words, prison officials say. And the law has tied their hands.

Because he has had no serious disciplinary problems while imprisoned, Jackson's 12-year sentence—for attempted murder and inflicting great bodily harm— at the time, the maximum under California law—has been reduced for good behavior.

Moreover, earlier this year, the courts overturned a conviction that kept him incarcerated beyond that date on a year-by-year basis if state psychiatrists determined that he was still dangerous.

"What can I say?" Saldana asks, her eyes widening with incredulity. "This is my life. And I stand for other with an artificial one during the four-hour procedure, Casey said.

Rock stars attend video premiere

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A galaxy of rock stars attended the video premiere of a new song intended to spark public outrage over the destruction of the Earth's rain forests.

Thursday night's preview audience of rock stars, diplomats, and U.N. officials — including participating artists Olivia Newton-John, Thomas Dolby, and Taylor Dayne — saw the five-minute video of "Spirit of the Forest," and heard several speakers stress the importance of awakening the public to the crisis lurking behind the elimination of the rain forests.

"At this very moment, thousands of trees are being cut," said Paulo Rivera, a resident of Brazil's rain forest.

"Spirit of the Forest," which will be released Monday, features a Brazilian-punctuated rock beat.

The British band Gentlemen Without Weapons conceived the project and wrote and produced the song, which is in the tradition of the African hunger relief anthem "We Are the World."

As in that video, the camera pans over a chorus of stars, including Joni

Mitchell, Deborah Harry, Iggy Pop, Belinda Carlisle, Donna Summer, Ringo Starr, and Brian Wilson of the Beach Boys.

All proceeds from the record will be donated to organizations dedicated to saving the world's rain forests, according to Richard Brandstad of Virgin Atlantic and Virgin Records Inc., which is marketing and distributing the record.

Newman's case involved a dispute

Paul Newman wins tax dispute with state

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Actor Paul Newman has beaten a $41,000 tax bite on income from "The Sting."

Newman won the tax dispute when the California Supreme Court rejected the state's claim for a greater portion of Newman's income from the movie.

Newman's case involved a dispute over the definition of working days of them filming and five on call. While filming "The Sting," Newman spent 30 days in California in 1973, 25 and 24 days outside California, only two of them filming.

B&M Bean to break ground at ceremony

BIUHL - A ground breaking ceremony for the $5 million B & M Bean plant expansion at Pot, Inc. will be at 1:15 p.m. Monday. Following the ceremony, Gov. Cecil Andrus will certify the city of Buhl as one of Idaho's "Gem Communities."

At the ground breaking, 2,000 helium balloons will be released and Pet Inc.'s president, J. Robert Copper, will present Andrus with the Pet Partnership Award for his support in helping create a positive economic climate.

The expansion was made possible in part by a $52,450 Idaho Community Development Block Grant.

Plant construction will begin immediately following the ceremony and should be completed next spring.

Forty new jobs should be created, nearly doubling the existing plant staff of 8. The expansion is expected to bring in $6 million annually to the Buhl economy including $2 million from the purchase of dry beans from area farmers.

Pet's present facility produces evaporated milk.

Mall Cinema will reopen the week of June 16-23

TWIN FALLS - The Mall Cinema, damaged in a fire May 25, should reopen the week of June 16-23, said Larry Roper, managing director.

The projection screen, damaged by smoke, will be replaced by a screen being imported from England at a cost of nearly $200.

The cinema sustained $7,500-$10,000 in damages, most of it in the lobby area. The lobby will be reconstructed and the ceiling gridwork will be replaced, Roper said. The concession counters are also being rebuilt, he said.

The theater is being thoroughly cleaned, Roper said, noting that the historic theater has not been closed since Interstate Amusement purchased and remodeled the building in 1976.

The first movie to hit the new screen will probably be Ghostbusters II or Batman.

Next Hawkins Co. hearing planned in Boise, June 30

BOISE - The next hearing in the dissolution of Hawkins Co. Ltd., the bankrupt Fiber bean warehouse, is set for 10 a.m. June 30 in Boise.

The hearing is essentially a continuation of last week's hearing, designed to bring together all parties in the suit so they can agree on the facts of the case and establish procedures for deciding the legal questions later.

The bankruptcy judge Alfred Hagan has set a July 10 deadline for resolving factual disputes in the case. Legal issues will be decided at other hearings in July.

Hagan also will hear such "adversary" motions as attorney Lloyd Walker asking the court to remove the beans stored in the warehouse from the Hawkins Co. estate and return them to their growers.

Hawkins Co. directors filed for bankruptcy Jan. 6. The company's bean warehouse license was suspended by the state in November after a year-end audit revealed inventory shortages. Farmers, banks and bean dealers are embroiled in the legal tangle.

Hagan said last week that future hearings will be in Twin Falls at the College of Southern Idaho.

Wendell swimming pool will open this Monday

WENDELL - The Wendell swimming pool will open Monday. Hours for open swimming are 1:30-5:30 p.m. and 6:30-9 p.m., says Larry Tinker, pool manager.

Family hour is 5:30-6:30 p.m. Anyone interested in lessons can call 536-6796. The pool is closed Sundays.

County Fair & Rodeo board to hold a public meeting

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls County Fair & Rodeo board will hold its monthly meeting at noon Monday at the County Courthouse.

The discussion will focus on building progress; the premium book, rodeo and Oak Ridge Boys tickets, contracts, the Boy Scout food booth, Miss Rodeo Idaho and a request from the Idaho Lottery Commission.

The public is welcome.

Brauns bask in national exposure

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Fresh from laughing it up with Jay Leno and a Green Room chat with celebrity guests, the Little Braun Brothers raised their voices here Friday in the high, sweet yodels that won over a Tonight Show audience Wednesday.

"We had lots of fun," said Cody Braun, 12, as he nonchalantly signed autographs and politely answered fans' questions after a Western Days performance at the Lynwood Shopping Center.

The highlight of the California visit? Getting autographs from "brat pack" star Lou Diamond Phillips, whom the boys had seen in "Young Guns."

They may have no electricity and no television in their remote cabin 20 miles up the Salmon River from Stanley, but they are well-acquainted with Hollywood.

"Grandma has a VCR," Gary, 9, told Leno on the show.

Tonight Show Executive Producer Jim McCawley spotted the four brothers performing with their father, Muzzie Braun, at the Elko Cowboy-Poetry Gathering in January and promised them an appearance on the show.

Although the boys have been performing since they could toddle across the stage and have just released their first album, they were a little nervous, they said. So were the producers, who feared the boys might become suddenly bashful on the air. As a precaution, they invited them to the taping of the Tuesday night show - where they met Phillips - and Leno and the staff made a point of making the boys feel at home, said their mother, JoAnn.

They needn't have worried. Cody, Gary, 11-year-old Willy and 7-year-old Micky performed like the veteran stars they are.

After singing a medley of yodeling tunes accompanied by their father on guitar and Cody on the fiddle, the boys sauntered over to center stage to shake Leno's hand and answer his questions about life in the Idaho mountains.

They study at home with their mother as a teacher, they said. In the winter they take baths by heating water in the stock tank.

Then Muzzie said the words that had likely never been heard on the Tonight Show before: "We'll be playing in Twin Falls Friday."

A rendition of Muzzie's "Proud To Be From Idaho" closed their segment.

"Yeah, I'd definitely do it again," Cody said Friday.

The boys are the third generation of Brauns to entertain Twin Falls audiences. Their grandfather, the late Muzzie Braun of Twin Falls, played the piano, organ and accordion in Jackpot. Their father and uncles played rock 'n' roll while attending Twin Falls High School, later drifting into country-western and forming separate bands.

Western Days offers parade

Local judges consider Supreme Court openings

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A handful of Magic Valley judges are eyeing the two Idaho Supreme Court openings, counting on a local appointment to what has historically been a geographically representative court.

Friday, former Judge Lloyd Webb became the first local candidate to announce his application. Fifth District Judge George Granata and 6th District Magistrate Michael Redman both said they are also considering applying. A fourth likely candidate after interviewing for a court vacancy in 1987, 5th District Judge Daniel Harbut, said he hasn't decided yet whether to apply.

"I'd like to have something to say in formulating law," said Webb, a Twin Falls attorney. He served as a judge from 1963 to 1966 for what was then the 11th District, covering Twin Falls, Jerome, Cassia and Minidoka counties.

Like Harbut and Redman, he applied for the 1982 vacancy. But Byron Johnson of Idaho City was appointed to what Magic Valley residents considered their traditional seat on the court, leaving the area unrepresented.

This time, with two openings, Magic Valley attorneys should have a better chance, Webb said. Until the two current vacancies, Northern Idaho had one seat, Eastern Idaho the second and Southwestern Idaho the remaining three.

The Idaho Judicial Council will receive applications until June 16 from people who want to succeed Justice Robert Huntley Jr. of Pocatello, who is resigning to return to private practice. The council has not decided yet whether to start a separate nomination process to fill the vacancy left by the unexpected death a week ago of Justice Allan Shepard of Boise.

"They're about going to have to consider geography," Webb said. "The bar and the public thinks it's significant. I think two of the appointments should be east of Elmore County."

Having a justice from each area of the state not only makes good political sense but allows attorneys to present their case before at least one justice whom they are likely to know, Webb said.

Senate Judiciary and Rules Chairman Denton Darrington, R-Deer, is also calling for a Magic Valley or Eastern Idaho appointment and has put his support behind Granata.

"It's nice to be thought of and have someone with the stature of Denton Darrington support you, but I haven't decided yet," Granata said.

He is still considering whether he wants to trade trial work for appellate work and whether he and his family want to leave their Burley home for Boise, he said.

Gov. Cecil Andrus will make the decision on the appointment, choosing from nominations made by the Judicial Council.

The three remaining members of the court are Chief Justice Robert Bakes, Justice Stephen Bistline and Johnson.

Albion Normal to become folk arts center

By JULIE FANSELOW SWETYE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The former Albion Normal School, abandoned two decades ago and falling into disrepair, got a new lease on life Friday as the Idaho Commission on the Arts allocated $10,000 for the development of a folk arts center on the Cassia County campus.

The commission, holding its annual grants allocation meeting at the Weston Plaza, also gave funds to arts organizations in Twin Falls, Oakley and Sun Valley.

The planned Idaho Folk Museum in Albion received one of the commission's largest grants in a first-ever round of funding specifically for improving physical facilities for Idaho arts organizations.

The museum will occupy a stone building built in 1893 - known locally as Swanger Hall - and listed on the National Register of Historic Places. Backers hope to complete renovations and open the facility in time for the campus centennial in 1993.

Funds for the facilities grants were made available by the state budget surplus. The panel-tapped 14 groups statewide for a total of $100,058 in grants at its sessions Friday. The College of Southern Idaho's Arts on Tour program received $2,750. The commission's grants committee had recommended $3,300 for CSI.

The Sun Valley Center for the Arts and Humanities will receive $15,000. The group requested $20,000 but Director Julie M. Gorton said she was pleased the grant topped last year's allocation of $9,000.

The commission OK'd $8,750 for the Oakley Playhouse, which had sought $9,760. Jim Kempton, campus coordinator for

Officials: Waste repository isn't a solution

By N. S. NOKKENTVED

POCATELLO - Opening a federal radioactive waste repository Sept. 1 won't solve Idaho's waste problems, environmentalists and federal officials agree.

Plans for shipping waste to New Mexico do not include transuranic waste buried at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory. That waste is the subject of a separate environmental impact statement now being prepared by department officials, said Leo Duffy, Energy Secretary

James Watkins' special assistant for waste management.

The department has promised to deliver that statement to Gov. Cecil Andrus by the end of 1990, Duffy said in a phone interview.

But Pat Feuerborn of Pocatello cautioned officials at a public hearing Thursday not to consider New Mexico's Waste Isolation Pilot Plant the answer to all radioactive waste problems.

"Don't try to sell the public this takes care of the problem," she said. "This is just a drop in the bucket."

Moving the waste doesn't make it safe, she said. But, she added, referring to seismic activity in Idaho, "it would seem their salt mine would be safer than our fault lines."

Few of those who testified at Thursday's U.S. Energy Department hearing in Pocatello opposed the proposed opening of WIPP in New Mexico. Most critics said it was a good idea to move transuranic waste contaminated with uranium and plutonium - out of Idaho, though they worried that pressure to open the site would hamper its safe operation.

The Pocatello hearing was the second of six public meetings to receive testimony on

Jobless rate rises slightly

By The Times-News and Associated Press

TWIN FALLS - Although the Magic Valley's jobless rate rose 0.6 percent in May to 5.1 percent, there were 1,074 more people working here than a year ago.

Last month's local employment picture showed 427 fewer people unemployed and 447 more workers with jobs than May 1988 when the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate was 6.4 percent, said Lon McDonald, a labor analyst with the state Job Service in Twin Falls.

However, last month's unemployment rate rose from April because unusually cool temperatures and heavier-than-normal rains reduced the amount of agricultural work normally done in May.

In May, 35,532 people worked in the Magic Valley, which includes Twin Falls, Jerome and Goddard counties. There were 1,943 workers unemployed.

Buhl hosts 3rd Annual Junior Rodeo

The Times-News

BUHL — The littlest cowpokes will get a chance to compete at the Third Annual Buhl Junior Rodeo at 7:00 p.m. at the Buhl rodeo grounds.

The rodeo is open to youngsters ages 14 and under, and events will be split into two different age groups.

Children 9 and under can compete in steer riding, barrel racing, pole bending, goat tail tying and rubber head roping, added this year for those too young to rope from a horse. Coordinator Justine Wright said a rubber calf head is mounted in a bale of hay and the contestants rope it from the ground.

Children ages 10-14 can compete in breakaway roping, steer riding, barrel racing, pole bending and goat tying. Children ages 14-16 can participate in a sheep-riding contest.

Buckles, trophies and ribbons will be awarded to three places, and all-around jackets, donated by Green Giant, will be awarded each night to both all-around cowgirl and cowboy in both age groups.

Bucking stock will be donated by local residents.

A queen and junior princess competition will be at 1 p.m. Sunday at the rodeo grounds.

Junior princess contestants, ages 9 and under, will be required to ride a figure 8, stop and back up. Queen contestants, ages 10-14, will be required to perform two figure 8s, stop and back up.

All queen and princess contestants will be required to speak about themselves to the audience. Winners will be crowned during the rodeo.

Shoshone students win top awards

The Times-News

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone High School Publication's Program has received top awards in the Rick's College high school journalism contest, the Westminster College (Salt Lake City) high school journalism contest and the Idaho Presswomen's high school journalism contest.

Shoshone sophomore Monty Arrossa has been named the top news writer by both the Rick's College program and the Idaho Presswomen's contest.

Arrossa, the son of Pete and Linda Arrossa, also earned first-place honors in the essay division of the high school level Young Author's contest earlier this spring. He has served as inside page editor and ad manager for Shoshone's student newspaper this year.

Shoshone senior Bryan Solanga received third place honors for sports writing in the Presswomen's contest. He is the son of Jack and Lauralee Solanga and was a member of Shoshone's state championship basketball team.

Another member of the championship ball club, Robbie Owens, has earned a sports writing award, placing third in the sports feature division of the Westminster competition.

Owens is a sophomore, the son of Jack and Pam Williams, and has served as sports editor for the Shoshone student newspaper.

Shoshone's feature editor, Shane Brown, received honorable mention for general news feature writing in the Rick's College competition. Brown is a sophomore and the son of Richard and Lucinda Brown.

The Presswomen's contest is an all-Idaho competition to recognize excellence among Idaho's student journalists.

The Rick's College and Westminster competitions are regional and include schools from the intermountain west. Shoshone, with a 110 member student body, was the smallest school participating in either contest.

Lincoln County picks centennial flag

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

SHOSHONE — Lincoln County has selected a design for the county's state centennial flag.

Mae Adams of north Shoshone submitted the winning design in the county-wide contest earlier this month.

She received a $50 prize for her geometric design depicting a farm tractor and an Abraham Lincoln-style stovepipe hat.

The selection committee felt Adams' design focused on the agricultural base of the county and explains that the county, organized in 1826, was named for Lincoln.

The design will be made into a county flag for use during county events celebrating the 1990 Idaho Centennial.

Shoshone, established in 1882, is one of the few towns in Magic Valley that will have reached its century birthday by the time of the state Centennial. Lincoln County also shares that distinction. The flag will be part of the county's Centennial celebration, organizers say. It will also be part of Boise's Centennial project — to have all county flag designs made into shields and displayed along a street in downtown Boise.

Nearly a dozen designs were submitted by residents from around the county, and all designs are on display at the county courthouse.

Second place went to the Dietrich Computer Club, and Richard Clifford of Shoshone earned third place honors.

Court OKs multiple sentences

BOISE (AP) — A defendant can be convicted and sentenced for each death caused in a single traffic accident, the Idaho Court of Appeals says.

The court on Friday rejected an appeal from Richard Allen Lee. He was given a fixed term of seven years in prison for one death in a 1985 Twin Falls County traffic accident. Judge Daniel Meehl also ordered Lee to serve up to seven years for a second death in the same crash. He pleaded guilty to two counts of vehicular manslaughter.

Lee appealed a judge's refusal to modify his sentence.

The court noted that manslaughter is "the unlawful killing of a human being, without malice." Read as a whole, the statute clearly and unambiguously indicates the Legislature's intent to protect individual victims and to criminalize the killing of a human being. It necessarily follows that multiple deaths resulting from the same act of driving can be charged as separate offenses under the manslaughter statute," the court said.

Halt Utah to become public building

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Mormon Church, which closed the elegant Hotel Utah in 1987 amid a storm of protest, announced plans Friday to turn the landmark structure into a "beautiful public building."

Presiding Bishop Robert D. Hales said the 78-year-old building will undergo a multimillion dollar renovation that will create facilities for both church and public use while preserving the hotel's historic integrity.

The church closed the hotel on August 31, 1987, despite an outcry from the community. Church officials said at the time they could not justify subsidizing a money-losing operation, from funds granted by church members.

Hales said the church will spend up to $45 million to renovate the building.

Church spokesman Don LeFevre said the project will enable us to meet our growth needs... and protect the integrity of the downtown area by not having to build another high rise.

"If we didn't renovate, we'd spend a lot more money than we're spending," because the church otherwise would have to build new facilities for neurological services and offices.

Hales also said the renovated building, located across the street from the church's Temple Square, will attract tourists. Temple Square, the largest tourist attraction in the state, draws about 4 million people annually.

The renovation plans include a geological center for people seeking information on their ancestors. Hales said the decision to put more than 100 computer terminals in what was formerly the hotel's Bonneville Rooms was prompted by requests for easier access to the church's Family History Center.

The design will be made into a county flag for use during county events celebrating the 1990 Idaho Centennial.

the Albion State Normal — Southern Idaho College of Education Alumni Association, was pleased to hear of the Albion award, but not entirely surprised.

"We had a lot of support up there," Kempton said of the commission members.

Commission officials, in turn, praised the commitment shown by the alumni and the town of Albion.

Patricia Pace, the arts commission's executive director, visited the site earlier this year and Friday called it "exceptional. We're excited to be able to work with the folk arts." Idaho will be among a handful of states boasting folk-art museums, she added.

Arts commission grants require matching funds, and 100 alumni of Albion pledged their support in a drive earlier this year. Kempton said.

Plans now call for the alumni to meet June 24 and elect a financial board of directors to oversee the project, Kempton said. Bids will be solicited and renovations may begin in July, he added.

Total cost for the renovations should be somewhere between $50,000 and $60,000, Kempton estimated.

Mary Jane Kinney of Twin Falls, the area's representative on the commission, and C. Eugene Sullivan of Boise, who defended the Magic Valley interests before the panel.

"We've realized this is a cultural desert down here," said Sullivan, urging the panel continue to fund development of the arts in southeastern Idaho.

Kinney said she resented efforts to trim allocations to Magic Valley arts groups, and said area arts supporters would consider any cuts "a symbolic slap in the face."

"I don't think you realize the scope of things we do," Kinney said, noting that the arts commission in Twin Falls serves eight counties.

Jobs

Total employment statewide last month dropped below 460,000 for the first time in six months, pushing the state's jobless rate up three notches.

The job gains in May were not great enough to offset the dramatic seasonal increases in employment a month earlier, they said.

The impact was felt in every region of the nation except the Panhandle, the only area with a May jobless rate below 4.5 percent.

Statewide, civilian employment last month slipped below 459,000 to its lowest level since last October, and the total number of Idahoans in the work force dropped below 490,000 for the first time this year. Some 1,300 more Idahoans were off job than the month before, pushing the number of persons unemployed over 25,000.

Still, the state's May unemployment rate was a full percentage point below the rate in May 1988, marking the 25th straight month when current jobless rates have run below year-earlier levels.

Department analysts blamed the rise in unemployment and the decline in employment on statistical quirks brought about by mild spring weather that shifted employment gains normally experienced in May ahead into April.

Prosecutors in Pratt trial dispute brother's claim that authorities began fatal shootout

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — One of two brothers accused in the slaying of a U.S. Forest Service law-enforcement officer in north Idaho testified Friday that police fired first to start the fatal shooting.

But prosecutors challenged that contention, saying James Pratt was altering his story to fit the facts of the case.

The defense wrapped up its case by calling expert witnesses to refute ballistics and medical testimony. Closing arguments are to begin Monday in a Coeur d'Alene jail courtroom, where the trial was moved from Bonner County because of extensive pre-trial publicity.

Pratt, 28, of Indian Hills, Colo., and his brother, Joseph, 27, of Sandpoint, are charged with first-degree murder and 16 other felonies stemming from the robbery of a single household Jan. 11 and a shootout with police who had tracked them down nearly 22 hours later.

James Pratt told jurors he and his brother discussed what type of bullet riddled through his leg after the Jan. 12 shootout that fatally wounded Forest Service Officer Brent "Jack"

Jacobson, 41, a former resident of Twin Falls.

The older Pratt said he and his brother concluded he had been hit by a .22-caliber slug, the type fired by the rifle Jacobson carried. The Pratts say police who tracked them through deep snow were on a "search and destroy" mission, and that the brothers defused for their lives.

The defense agreed at the beginning of the trial that pellets from two shotgun blasts fired by James Pratt caused Jacobson to bleed to death. James Pratt told jurors Friday he heard a loud noise and fired off two rounds as he fell to the ground.

Bonner County Prosecutor Phillip Robinson said Pratt was altering his story to fit the facts of the case.

He noted that Pratt told a Spokane newspaper reporter in a Jan. 22 interview that he thought he had been shot by Jacobson's partner, Bonner County Sheriff's Deputy Steve Barberi, who carried a 12-gauge shotgun.

Pratt said Spokesman review reporter Kelly McBridge had "lumped all that stuff together" and gotten the facts out of order. He said he tried to correct the facts the next day during a telephone interview in which he reviewed her planned story.

Robinson asked, rhetorically, why James Pratt had given two versions of the shooting, especially after evidence suggested Pratt had shot himself while crawling away from the shooting scene. Pratt did not answer.

Pratt told the jury he and his brother, dressed in black and wearing masks, had intended to rob the residence of tavern owner Lee Turner, for whom Joe had once worked and felt he was owed money.

The robbery was botched when police arrived and the brothers took one of the occupants hostage briefly before fleeing, James Pratt testified.

The brothers tried several times to surrender, but pursuing police officers shot at them before they were able to do so, he told jurors.

Pratt denied threatening or pointing a gun at any of the nine people in the single house, or attempting to kill a deputy who pursued their car.

"I had no plans to kill a police man," he said, telling jurors he only meant to disable a deputy's car by firing gunshot blasts into its radiator.

The Pratts gained notoriety for their association with Christopher Boyce, who had escaped from a California prison in 1980 while serving a 40-year sentence for selling CIA satellite information to the Soviet Union.

Joe, James and a third brother, Brett Pratt, received immunity from prosecution for their testimony against Boyce at his 1982 trial in Boise on conspiracy and bank robbery charges.

They testified Boyce masterminded a series of bank robberies they helped carry out in Washington, Idaho and Montana.

Boyce, who fled to northern Idaho after his escape, was recaptured in August 1981 in Port Angeles, Wash.

Boyce has been chronicled in two books by Robert Lindale, "The Falcon" and "The Snowman," which was made into a movie, and its sequel, "The Flight of the Falcon."

Lawyers devour fusion monies

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Before year's end, nearly all of a $500,000 legislative grant will have been used by attorneys trying to protect the University of Utah's interests in nuclear fusion, officials said Friday.

Tease chief deputy for Attorney General Paul Van Dam said the governor may be asked to call another special legislative session to appropriate more money.

Meanwhile, firms already are working to protect the U of U against claims filed by others. Some groups claim to have added to or improved upon the experiments done at the school by chemist B. Stanley Pons and British colleague Martin Fleischman.

Other universities that publicly have been critical of the Utah experiments have been silently filing their own patent applications, said Richard Giauque, a partner in one of the firms hired by the state.

Giauque, Williams, Wilcox & Bendinger, a local firm specializing in patent law, submitted an estimate to members of a state fusion advisory council Friday that it will charge $34,000 per month between June and November. The firm also submitted a $20,000 bill for services in May.

"Things are taking place behind the scene," Giauque told council members. "It is critical the university and the state protect what has been filed."

BYU President Rex Lee enjoys more than a job

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — For former U.S. solicitor general Rex Lee, being the new president of Brigham Young University is not unlike his old job as the federal government's chief legal advocate.

But this time, his client is the Mormon Church, and Lee views the assignment more as a religious calling than a job.

"I would have accepted anyway, but the way it was put to me, a good Mormon boy would not say no," said Lee. "I regarded it as tantamount to a calling and not just an opportunity for employment."

Lee, 54, will succeed Jeffrey Holland July 1 as the 10th president of the university owned and operated by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

In accepting the post, Lee gave up a partnership in the Chicago-based law firm of Sidley and Austin, for whom he recently argued his 50th case before the U.S. Supreme Court.

He also accepted a job that is as much ecclesiastical as administrative.

Solicitor general from 1981 to 1985, Lee is a BYU alumnus and was the founding dean of the university's J. Reuben Clark Law School for nine years before moving to Washington with the Reagan administration.

For the past four years, Lee has divided his time between his work in Sidley and Austin's Washington D.C. office and teaching constitutional law classes as BYU's George Sutherland Professor of Law.

He has agreed to continue to make occasional oral arguments before the Supreme Court on the firm's behalf on the condition that other attorneys do most of the groundwork.

But Lee will spend by far the greatest portion of his time looking after the academic and spiritual welfare of more than 26,000 students.

Lee said that includes resisting any encroachment of secularism he believes might threaten BYU's mission of producing graduates who not only are well-educated, but faithful Mormons.

"There's no more important objective I have at BYU than to see that never happens at this university," Lee said.

A lifelong Mormon, Lee was reared in St. Johns, Ariz., a small town settled by Mormon pioneers at the direction of Brigham Young. Among his ancestors is John D. Lee, a pioneer leader executed for his role in the massacre of more than 100 Arkansas settlers at Mountain Meadows in southern Utah in 1857.

Rex Lee was a missionary for the church in Mexico and later directed several congregations as a stake president in the faith's lay clergy.

However, Lee said he had no inkling he was being considered as Holland's successor until he received a telephone call from the church's governing First Presidency.

It was at a later meeting with President Erast F. Benson and his counselors, Gordon B. Hinckley and Thomas S. Monson, that the job was offered to Lee.

Lee is a BYU religious orthodox and scholarship are pursued with equal energy, and both Holland and his predecessor, Dallin Oaks, have gone on to become general authorities — members of the church's hierarchy.

Oaks was appointed to the Council of the Twelve, which follows the First Presidency in line of authority, while Holland was named to the First Quorum of the Seventy, which works under the direction of the Twelve.

Lee said the attempt to blend the intellectual and spiritual is what makes directing BYU appealing.

"That's why I'm really quite excited about being president at BYU and would not be interested in any other university," Lee said. "This offers the one place where I can pursue truth any way I want to pursue truth."

Judge releases 'Earth First!' founder Foreman on bond

PHOENIX (AP) — A U.S. magistrate approved unsecured bond Friday for Earth First! founder David Foreman of Tucson but ordered three co-defendants held without bail in an alleged conspiracy to destroy nuclear facilities in Arizona, California and Colorado.

Attorney Richard Sherman of Jackson, Wyo., said he was gratified that Magistrate Morton Silver released Foreman, 42, but said all should have been released.

Apparently the magistrate felt they were a danger to society respectively disagree, Sherman said.

After a 2 1/2-hour detention hearing, Silver ordered Mark Leslie Davis, 39, Marc Baker, 37, and Margaret "Peggy" Millet, 35, all of Prescott, held for trial. Foreman is charged with conspiracy, while the other three face a count each of conspiracy and three types of property destruction.

Silver stipulated that Davis and Millet were flight risks and are dangers to the community and called Baker dangerous but not a risk to public.

Earlier, FBI Agent Luri Bailey testified that Davis, Baker and Mrs. Millet took an undercover agent who used the name "Michael Tait" to a spot near Wendon, Ariz., about 75 miles west of here, late Tuesday to practice knocking down metal powerline towers.

2 retired teachers die in rollover

MARSHAL (AP) — Two retired Spokane teachers have died in a near car rollover on U.S. 95 south of Homedale, the Idaho State Police say.

Marvin Eugene Mutchlik, 63, was driving northbound with his wife, Betty Anne Ohrt, 57, on the I-9-N Hill-24-miles-south-of-Homedale when they drifted off the road about 1:25 a.m. Friday, a police dispatcher said.

The car became airborne for nearly 100 feet, hit the ground and rolled. Both were killed on impact, the dispatcher said.

The couple were believed to be retired college professors.

Officials check booby trapped principal's car

OGDEN (AP) — Ogden police are investigating an incident involving a device apparently designed to fire three bullets at the principal of Mountain View Elementary School when he started his car.

The device was found Thursday after it failed to go off, but made the vehicle run poorly.

Principal Dave Hunter said Friday he doesn't have any enemies, he knows of and dismissed the incident as a practical joke.

However, Police Detective John Stubbs said the device was real and could have gone off, firing three .30-caliber bullets into the car.

Hunter told police he found the device wired into one of his car's spark plugs Thursday morning.

It consisted of a canister about the size and shape of a half-gallon canteen set onto the framework of his car under the driver's side. He disconnected the wires and took the device to police headquarters. It was then sent to the Weber State College crime laboratory for study.

5 unearned runs spur East victory

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It was hardly an all-state defensive display, but it definitely was one of those things that happen in high school baseball.

A pair of dropped outfield flies in the third inning opened the way for five unearned runs and hoisted the East to a 7-5 decision over the West Friday night in the kickoff of the Idaho State Baseball Coaches Association's annual all-star series.

The series concludes today at Frontier Field with a pair of seven-inning games slated to begin at 11 a.m.

The West was trailing 3-1 due to a couple of miscues at catcher and third base when the bottom-of-the-third came up — Pocatello's Mark Davie started with a single but was erased on a fielder's choice by Idaho Falls' Yo Murphy and Boomer walker drew a walk.

Ralph Obray then lofted a fly ball near the left-field fence when the outfield got a little fence shy and dropped it. Mimico's Ben Poulton picked up an RBI on a walk and Mimico's Scott Condie followed with a routine-looking fly to centerfield — where it was dropped as another run scored. Highland's Paul Echohawk then faced the first hit of the inning to send in a run and Eddie Seal followed with another that plated the final two.

That was enough to cement the win although the West picked up a pair off Buhl left-hander Mike Brady in the sixth to close to within a couple.

"We probably didn't play as well defensively as we should have," assessed Capital coach Gary Harvey of the loss. "That one inning was a little rough."

"The errors were the difference," agreed Pocatello coach Rick Parkin. "But our guys started hitting the ball about the third inning."

Both teams went straight platoon in Friday night's opener and both indicated there were equal play for today's first game.
In the third game we may make any adjustments we want individually, rather than wholesale," Parkin said.

Collegiate records drop at NCAA tournament

By BERT ROSENTHAL
The Associated Press

PROVO, Utah — Dawn Sowell, a possible successor to Florence Griffith Joyner as America's top women's sprinter, smashed the collegiate record in the women's 200-meter dash and led Louisiana State to a collegiate record in the 400-meter relay Friday night at the NCAA Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

Sowell's time of 22.04 seconds was far superior to Griffith Joyner's clocking of 23.39 when she won the NCAA title for UCLA in 1982 on the same track.

In the 400-meter relay, Sowell broke open the race with a brilliant second leg as the Lady Tigers clocked 42.50, shattering the collegiate record of 42.94 set by Florida State in 1983.

Tanajalyn Stanley led off for LSU and was followed by Sowell, Cinnamon Sheffield and Esther Jones, as the Lady Tigers beat Texas Southern by about eight meters. However, Texas Southern was disqualified, and Illinois, the third-place finisher in 44.03, was moved up to second.

Sowell, who earlier this season set the collegiate record in the 100-meter dash of 10.93, erased the 200-meter mark of 22.17 set by Merlene Ottey of Nebraska in 1982.

Sowell's time was the fastest in the world this year, but was far short of the world record of 21.34, set by the now Griffith Joyner, now retired, in last year's Olympics.

Although Sowell's time was far superior to her previous best of 22.46 and made her the No. 7 American all-time performer, she was disappointed.

"I wish it was under 21," she said. "It was a sloppy ending, but the turn was better than usual. I never felt tired, but I never felt in sync."

In the final, Sowell was out quickly and in command throughout, beating defending champion Mary Onyiah of Texas Southern by about three meters.

Onyiah was timed in 22.45, while Pauline Davis of Alabama, the runner-up last year, was third in 22.65.

Boise Hawks to join baseball's free agent draft

The Associated Press

BOISE — For nearly two decades, major league baseball's June free agent draft has been a private party.

Come Monday, the Boise Hawks will crash the party by diving headlong into major-league baseball's talent pool.

The Hawks, an independent club in the Class A Northwest League, will join the 26 major league teams in the free agent draft scheduled for June 5-7.

The last independent team to participate in the June free agent draft, was Bend, Ore., in 1970.

The Hawks own the first pick on the fourth round, which represents the 79th player overall.

"They will draft immediately after the Oakland A's and just ahead of the Baltimore Orioles, then take every first pick thereafter until they have selected all the players they want."

It is likely the splash will be felt far beyond Boise's city limits.

"It's somewhat of an historic event for baseball," said Bill Pereira, president of Diamond Sports, Inc., owner of the Hawks. "Of all the 166 minor league teams, we're the only one that's going to be drafting."

The Hawks will join the 26 major league clubs by conference call on Monday.

"This puts us in the baseball business," said Bill Fichman, vice president of baseball operations for Diamond Sports, Inc., and the Hawks field manager.

"We've signed free agents," Fichman said, "and now we're in the draft."

Fichman, clutching his Professional

Baseball Rule Book like a bible, has known about Sec. 15.16 (c) To Sec. 15.16 (e) for almost 10 years.

"All pokes around in the rule book like a lawyer pokes around his law books," Pereira said.

The rule, which allows the Hawks to draft, states: "Class A clubs without Major League affiliations shall have priority in the order of each selection (in the June draft) over Class A clubs with Major League affiliations."

Conley: Other states show depredation payment unwise

By QUANE KENYON
The Associated Press

BOISE — Experience in other states indicates that programs to compensate landowners for damage caused by wildlife doesn't solve problems and can create new ones, says the director of Idaho's Fish and Game Department.

"I believe we all to take a real cautious approach to payment of damages," Jerry Conley said Friday.

"We should try to find those which are very justifiable and compensate in those cases. I'd we should be very careful that that is no case.

"Otherwise, we are gonna be off and running a very expensive program that won't be doing any good by and large," he said.

Conley was interviewed Friday for a weekend publication on the formation of the Senate legislation appropriated $500,000 to compensate landowners for damage caused by

Retired players get chance to play in a seniors' league

By JOHN VALENTI
Newsday

NEW YORK — The hair, what little is left on some players, has begun to gray. Bells have been loosened a notch. No doubt, they've lost a step. Still, they believe they can play the game that once was their livelihood. With the formation of the Senior or Professional Baseball Association, they will get another chance.
It's a real-life "Field of Dreams."
Retired players back again. Graig Nettles at third. Jerry Grote behind the plate.

Bill Lee on the mound.
"Sure, you're asking, 'Can these guys still play baseball?'" said Curt Flood, who sued Major League Baseball over the reserve clause — it led to today's free-agency system — and who will serve as commissioner of the league. "Sure they can. These are world-class athletes. Taking a step or two away from them is not like taking a step or two away from guys you play with on the Wednesday." The league, announced Wednesday at a news conference in Manhattan, is the idea of James F. Morley, a commercial real estate specialist.

Pistons take series

By BILL BARNARD
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Isiah Thomas got the Detroit Pistons into the NBA Finals for the second straight year.

Now he says it's up to teammate and close friend Mark Aguirre to win the championship against the Los Angeles Lakers.

"I told Mark it was my job to get us to the Finals and now it was his win it for us," said Thomas, who scored 17 of his 33 points in the fourth quarter as the Pistons won the Eastern Conference finals 4-2 with a 103-94 victory over the Chicago Bulls Friday night.

The Pistons, who haven't allowed 100 points in 15 games, including 13 straight in the playoffs, won the final three games of the best-of-7 series. They fell behind 2-1 when Michael Jordan scored 46 points and led a fourth-quarter Bulls comeback in Game 3.

Jordan scored 32 in the finale after being held to 23 and 18 in the fourth and fifth games. But the Bulls had to play all but the first minute without starting forward Scottie Pippen, who was hospitalized after being knocked out when he was hit in the eye by Bill Laimbeer's elbow.

Graf, Becker enter French 4th round

Paris — Defending champion Steffi Graf, playing through a steady drizzle, cased her way to the fourth round of the French Open tennis championships today, beating Nicole Pietrangeli of the Netherlands 6-1, 6-2.

As the rain got heavier, Boris Becker's bid for a fourth-round spot in the men's event was delayed. But after a 5 1/2-hour wait, the second-seeded West German resumed his match against qualifier Jeremy Bates and crushed the Briton 7-5, 6-1, 6-2.

"It's terrible when you have to wait like that. It's almost like in England," Becker said. "But for me, I guess the rain was pretty good. Until then, it was too defensive."

The showman had a grass-court expert playing on his least favorite surface.

Mayotte's second-round match against Ronald Agassi of Haiti was suspended by darkness Thursday night at 3:30 in the fourth set, with the American leading two sets to one.

But it was Agassi, ranked 30th in the world, who proved the stronger when the match finally was resumed today. He rallied to beat the No. 7 seed 3-6, 7-5, 5-7, 6-2.

"Today he played almost picture perfect tennis," Mayotte said. "He made passing shots, lobs and serves that I didn't do yesterday. I'm obviously disappointed, but it's the best I've played on clay."

Unseeded Jay Berger of Plantation, Fla., became the American male to reach the fourth round as he whipped Jaime Yzaga of Peru 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

And Spain's Conchita Martinez, seeded eighth, joined Graf in the same state of the women's event by rolling over Sophie Amnicch of France 6-3, 6-3.

Graf, the defending women's title, took exactly one hour on Center Court to overpower Nicole Pietrangeli, and has now dropped only six games in three matches.

The 19-year-old Grand Slam champion had one or two rare lapses, such as when she was broken at love in the sixth game of the second set, but was generally a class above her opponent.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

Dear Mr. Wolff: I open one heart and partner makes a strong jump shift to three diamonds...

ANSWER: Many tournament players use this bid as minor-suit Stayman...

Dear Mr. Wolff: What odds should I look for in assessing whether to pass or bid on in close game decisions?

ANSWER: At rubber bridge (and IMPs) one should bid the game when expecting better than a 45 percent chance of success...

Dear Mr. Wolff: I open one heart and rebid two clubs after a one-no-trump response...

ANSWER: In the first case, partner's one-no-trump response denies a heart fit...

Dear Mr. Wolff: Using Jacoby transfer bids over one-no-trump, I know that two clubs is Stayman...

ANSWER: What is the meaning of two spades? It bid, Wichita Falls, Texas

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"How fortune brings to earth the overture!" - Petrarch.

"May have missed a slam, partner," crowed an overconfident South. "Then he proceeded to play the game as if he were blindfolded. Dummy's diamond ace won and South tried the trump finesse, losing to West's king. Back came a diamond to dummy's king, and South drew one more round of trumps and started the hearts. He cashed the king, finessed to the jack and lost to East's queen. East made the obvious club shift, and South lost two club tricks to go one down.

"Truly an unlucky hand," observed North. "With a couple of cards in the right spot, you might have made all 11 tricks. However, since only 10 tricks were needed to clinch the rubber, perhaps you shouldn't have been so bold."

"After losing the trump finesse, winning the second diamond and drawing a second round of trumps, South should have played overtricks and should develop a sure 10th winner. Instead of trying the heart suit, South should develop a club winner in dummy. He leads the club king from his hand, wins West's heart, should forget possible overtricks with his club jack to drive out the queen. Dummy's club 10 takes care of South's third heart, and South has his 10 winners without the risk of four losers.

Market reaches post-crash high

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 27.20 to 2,617.83, topping the 2,592.02 reading of May 22 that marked its previous peak since the collapse in 1987.

For the week the average posted a net gain of 23.06 points. Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 5 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 1,414 up, 438 down and 436 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 229.14 million shares, against 223.16 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 266.30 million shares.

The Labor Department reported that nonfarm payroll employment increased by 101,000 in May—only about half of the amount projected by economists at leading brokerage.

Soviet Congress attacks Sakharov

MOSCOW (AP) — Andrei D. Sakharov told a hostile Soviet Congress on Friday that his country's "criminal adventure" in Afghanistan was a shameful episode that cost 1 million lives.

His outraged colleagues denounced him as a liar.

"You have insulted our entire army, our entire nation, all our boys who gave their lives!" Tursan Kazakova of Uzbekistan shouted at the famous human rights activist, drawing a standing ovation from other members of the Congress of People's Deputies.

Sakharov defended his statements, saying he wears his seven years in exile for criticizing the war "like a medal."

For eight days, the 2,250-member Congress — the centerpiece of President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's political reforms — has met in the Kremlin to hear a litany of complaints about national economic and social woes.

But none of the unusually candid proceedings matched the scolding fury directed at Sakharov, a member of the new Congress and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize in 1978.

The Communist Party's more than seven decades of supremacy have come under fierce attack at the Congress, the Soviet Union's first parliament chosen in contested elections.

Alexander N. Yakovlev, a member of the ruling Politburo, said the party's policy-making Central Committee was to meet Friday night to evaluate the Congress's work.

The storm over Sakharov, 68, began when a veteran of the Afghan war demanded an explanation of comments the physicist has made about the Red Army's intervention in that country, which began in December 1979 and ended in February under a U.N.-mediated accord.

The Soviets were helping the Afghan government in its war with Moslem guerrillas.

To a loud ovation, former Soviet Army Maj.

Sergei Chernomyrsky, who lost his legs in the war, took the rostrum at the Congress to lambast Sakharov for "unprecedented badgering" of the Soviet Army.

Chernomyrsky, slowly rocking back and forth on his artificial legs, demanded an explanation for an interview Sakharov gave to the Ottawa Citizen, which quoted him as saying Soviet pilots were ordered to kill soldiers they could not see from being captured by Afghan guerrillas.

The former major's emotional speech on behalf of "the state, the motherland and communism" drew deafening applause, which Gorbachev joined. Vice President Anatoly I. Lukyanov, chairing the session, did not want to let Sakharov reply, but Gorbachev motioned with his hand to give the nuclear physicist the floor.

"The war in Afghanistan was a criminal adventure, and it's not known who bears the responsibility for this enormous crime" that cost 1 million lives, Sakharov said.

Even in the atmosphere of greater Soviet openness, such frank condemnation was astounding.

Visibly flustered at the angry response, Sakharov stammered, but continued: "We have to cleanse ourselves of this terrible shame. . . I spoke out against sending Soviet soldiers to Afghanistan, and for this, I was exiled to Gorky. I am proud of this exile in Gorky. I wear it like a medal."

The figure of 1 million killed is commonly known in the West but not used in the Soviet media, which often portray Soviet troops as the chief victims of the conflict.

Gorbachev allowed Sakharov to return to Moscow from Gorky in December 1986 after he spent nearly seven years in exile.

Sakharov denied he had intended to insult the Red Army but said no one could call his statements an insult until the truth is known.

He said he had questioned information in the interview he heard on "foreign radios."

Marshal Sergei P. Akhromyev, former Soviet chief of the armed forces general staff, swept up to the rostrum to tell the Congress that Sakharov's charges were "a blatant lie."

Outside the Kremlin Palace of Congresses, Col. Gen. Boris Gromov, the former Soviet commander in Afghanistan, also accused Sakharov of lying. "When our soldiers were killed there, we lost even more people trying to recover their bodies, but we got them," said Gromov.

The attacks on Sakharov and his response were broadcast live and later repeated in part on state-run television's evening news show "Vremya."

Sakharov was surrounded by reporters as he left the Kremlin hall, and said he was sorry he hadn't been more explicit. "I regret I did not speak about all the crimes of the Soviet Army — the napalm, the bombardment of schools and hospitals," Sakharov said. "There must be an investigation."

He called the attack on him a "stage-managed spectacle."

Yuri Karyakin, a writer once expelled from the party and now a deputy in Congress, proposed removing Lenin's body from the Red Square mausoleum where it is on daily display as one of the main icons of Soviet rule.

"I am sure I wanted to be buried next to the grave of his mother," Karyakin said, calling the mausoleum a monument built by dictator Josef V. Stalin's rule.

The deputy called for restoring citizenship to exiled Nobel Literature Prize winner Alexander Solzhenitsyn and writing the names of all the victims of the KGB on the headquarters building of the Soviet secret police.

Microfilm shows Nazi, Soviet deal

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A microfilm of secret protocols detailing how Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union colluded to seize Poland and the Baltic states has survived and is in West German archives, officials said Friday.

Information Minister Hans Klein told reporters the film has been inspected by two Soviet historians investigating the Soviet Union's 1940 annexation of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

Foreign Ministry officials said the Nazis destroyed documents deeding the Baltic nations to the Soviet Union but that an unidentified diplomat saved a copy that was sent to the Soviet Union.

One of the new Soviet Congress approved a Kremlin inquiry into the neo-aggression pact that paved the way for the takeover of the independent Baltic states and the Nazi invasion of Poland.

Independent groups challenging Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to prove the sincerity of his reforms are pressing the Kremlin to admit it has been lying for more than 40 years with its claims that Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania willingly joined the Soviet Union.

Gorbachev himself requested Bonn's help last fall when he met with Chancellor Helmut Kohl and asked if the West Germans had a copy of the secret protocols.

Klein told reporters Friday the original pact signed Aug. 23, 1939 by the wartime foreign ministers, Vyacheslav Molotov and Joachim von Ribbentrop, remains in Bonn's Foreign Ministry archives.

But the secret protocols detailing the Baltic takeover and Polish invasion were destroyed by Nazi officials in the last days of World War II, Klein said.

"However, a microfilm copy of this and other documents was preserved by a diplomat," Foreign Ministry spokesman Jurgen Chrobog said.

"The officials said they do not know who preserved the microfilm or why."

"It's not just presumable, we believe that it is authentic," Klein said. "I cannot imagine how or why anyone at that time would reproduce the documents and then make a microfilm of them."

Klein said two Soviet historians traveled to Bonn a few weeks ago to examine the documents, which include a map showing the territories divided between the two nations.

Chrobog declined to detail the statements included in the secret protocols.

Gemdaty I. Gerasimov, the Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman, said in Moscow in August that the Kremlin has no copy of the protocols.

The so-called Molotov-Ribbentrop agreement has come under close scrutiny over the past year as Soviet reforms have allowed open discussion.

It freed German troops to attack Poland in September 1939. The Germans agreed not to defend the Baltics, to which they were closely allied, leaving the Soviets to seize eastern Poland, attack Finland and then take the Baltic states in July 1940.

Polish elections pit union against party

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Eastern Europe's first somewhat democratic elections in more than 40 years pit Solidarity, reform and invigorated, against a Communist Party struggling to keep itself and the economy afloat.

About 80 percent of Poland's 27 million eligible voters are expected to enter "curtained booths" Sunday and choose from long lists of candidates for seats in the Sejm, the existing unicameral parliament, and a new Senate.

Campaigning went down to the wire Friday, with Solidarity leader Lech Walesa taping a television message and Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the Polish leader, delivering a rare television address.

Walesa urged restraint on both sides and said many people in the government were worried about the election's outcome.

"We are running very aggressively and proposing clear solutions," he said. "A lot of people with other political concepts have not seen such a thing before, and they are scared. A lot of people are scared."

He said Solidarity and the Communist Party face "hard work" in finding solutions to Poland's economic and social problems.

"We are all learning on both sides," Walesa said. "We shouldn't give way to emotions... because emotion could destroy us."

Party candidates and their allies are guaranteed 250 seats in the Sejm, or 65 percent. Solidarity candidates are contesting the other 161 seats and all 100 places in the Senate, which will be the first freely chosen legislative chamber in the communist world.

Walesa, who entered negotiations with authorities in February hoping to regain Solidarity's legal status, emerged two months later with a large step toward democracy in Poland. He is not a candidate, but he is directing the opposition campaign.

Jaruzelski also is not running, but the government majority in the Sejm is expected to elect him to the new office of president.

The election is a huge gamble for both sides. For the Communist Party, the results could reveal an embarrassing lack of popular support as it begins a four-year transition leading to democratic elections for the entire parliament. Solidarity could be hurt by spotty, particularly among the young, and may lose support when it enters the parliament and assumes some responsibility.

Canada AIDS cases high as conference begins

TORONTO (AP) — Canada's reported AIDS cases have passed 2,700 as it prepares to hold the fifth annual world conference on the fatal disease.

Although the number is a fraction of the 94,000 in the United States, the much smaller population of 26 million puts Canada in the upper tier of countries on a per capita basis.

Leaders of AIDS community groups in major cities contend that, years after spiced immune deficiency syndrome became known, the federal government still has not developed a coherent national strategy.

"We're now in 1989; we've known about AIDS since 1982," said Richard Burzynski, executive director of the Canadian AIDS Society. "We should have been planning years ago."

The Fifth International Conference on AIDS runs from Sunday through next Friday in Montreal and will bring together more than 10,000 scientists, government and community leaders. Last year's meeting was in Stockholm, Sweden.

Canada's federal policy for civil servants announced by Prime Minister Mulroney as an example of how the government can act effectively. It includes confidentiality and a statement that people with the disease are not health risks to others under normal working conditions.

The Toronto Globe and Mail called the policy "a triumph of common sense."

It said Health Minister Perrin Beatty acted not merely to soothe a lobby group, but "because to do nothing would amount to setting off a ticking bomb."

In Canada, the number of reported AIDS cases reached 2,736 at the end of May, and 1,564 of the victims had died, according to the Federal Center for AIDS. The center says the total of cases is doubling every 18 months, and unofficial estimates put the number of Canadians infected at 50,000.

Just five years ago, the number of cases was 331, and 283 had died.

Burzynski, whose organization lobbies in Ottawa for 39 AIDS community groups across the country, said much of the responsibility for health and education rests with provincial governments.

He said the efforts vary widely, and what is needed from the federal government is "the political will to galvanize" the diverse levels and groups into an effective campaign.

Margaret Duckett, an AIDS expert at McGill University's Center for Medicine, Ethics and the Law in Montreal, said providing information on how to prevent the disease is not enough. "You need a range of messages, and you need people talking one-to-one," she said. "In that, there's been relatively little occurring in Canada."

One of the activists was seen with blood running down his face. The roadside was littered with ruptured sacks of rice and broken boxes of milk after the confrontation.

Settlers began shouting "FLO get out!" and tearing apart signs that read "Food for the Children of Gaza."

The activists shouted to the settlers "Fascist go home!" before the army intervened to separate the groups.

The army refused to let the activists deliver the goods and also refused to keep the supplies until they could be picked up by Gazans, the army spokesman's office said.

The food was intended for four refugee camps with a total population of 140,000 people who are confined to their homes by army curfews.

An official at the United Nations Relief and Works Agency said people were being fed in the camps and that there were no food shortages. He asked that his name not be used.

At least 70,000 Jewish settlers live in 130 enclaves in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, which were seized by Israel from Jordan and Egypt during the 1967 Middle East war. An estimated 1.7 million Palestinians live in the territories.

Also Friday, six Arab teenagers were wounded by 100 Jewish settlers in a 14-year-old bus from Gaza City, which was shot in the night.

At least 600 Palestinians and 22 Israelis have been killed since the Arab uprising against Israeli rule began in December 1987.

A report issued by the Al Haq Law in the Service of Man human rights group said that at least 130 children age 15 and under have been killed in the 18-month uprising. The West Bank group said that 60 percent of the victims died from gunshot wounds, 30 percent of tear gas-related symptoms and 10 percent from beatings or other causes.

Israeli settlers attack, beat peace group

JERUSALEM (AP) — Jewish settlers on Friday attacked and beat a group of peace activists trying to deliver food and medicine to Palestinian children in Gaza Strip refugee camps.

Also Friday, Israel media reported that the army plans to restrict the movement of settlers in the Israeli-occupied West Bank who are suspected of taking part in vigilante raids in Palestinian communities.

The developments came after a raid Monday by Jewish settlers in a Palestinian refugee camp. A 13-year-old girl was shot to death in the rampage.

An Israeli court in Kirat Saba, near Tel Aviv, on Friday ordered five Jewish seminary students suspected of taking part in the rampage jailed for five more days pending further investigation.

The seminary's spiritual leader, Rabbi Yitzhak Ginsburg, justified the attacking and said the blood of Jews and non-Jews cannot be equated.

"We have to recognize that Jewish blood and the blood of a boy are not the same thing," he told Israeli radio. "Every law that is based on expiating Jews and Jews is completely unacceptable."

Sousuke Uno replaces Takeshita as Japanese prime minister

SOUSUKE UNO
New head of government

TOKYO (AP) — Sousuke Uno became Japan's new prime minister Friday and pledged to "make a clean start" after months of a bribery scandal that shook the establishment and soured the image of the governing Liberal Democratic Party.

Parliament approved Uno early in the day, ending the party's five-week search for someone unblemished by the scandal, in which Recruit Co. is accused of trying to buy influence with cut-price stock and huge campaign donations.

He had been foreign minister and replaces Noboru Takeshita, who resigned to take responsibility for the scandal.

In a suggestion of a tougher line on trade policy, Uno told reporters the American use of threats to gain trade concessions from Japan was "like negotiating with your fists up."

Foreign Ministry spokesman Taizo Watanabe said, however, that the new administration would practice "consistency and continuity" in foreign policy.

Uno, 66, said political reform would be his first priority.

His party, in power since it was formed in 1955, has sunk to an all-time low in opinion polls because of the scandal. It needs a boost before elections this summer for half the upper house, but Uno's initial appointments were unlikely to provide one.

Ryutaro Hashimoto, his choice for party secretary-general, told reporters Friday he had received 2.4 million yen ($17,000) in 1985-86 from Recruit Co., a data and publishing conglomerate.

His new chief cabinet secretary, Masajuro Shiokawa, said he had given a blank signed receipt to another Liberal Democrat, who divided a large donation from Recruit among several such receipts to get around reporting requirements.

Analysts said the appointments indicated a continuation of Takeshita's policies.

At least six ministers in the 20-member government that Uno installed Friday are carry-overs from Takeshita's Cabinet, and several others served in previous administrations.

The Cabinet appeared to be carefully balanced among the various Liberal Democratic factions, despite a reform committee's recommendation that the faction system be abolished.

Factional divisions within the party-based more on personal and "tribal" allegiances than political philosophy, are widely blamed for creating the competition for funds that led to the scandal.

"At a news conference, Uno rejected opposition demands for a general election and said: 'As head of the party, I'd like to devote myself entirely to the party and political reforms.'"

He said the scandal "has had a dramatic effect on our party. I would like to take this opportunity to reflect on this development so we can make a clean start in politics and regain the confidence of the people."

Money that party members improperly received from Recruit will be returned to the people, he said, but did not indicate how that would be done.

Of the 17 politicians or aides involved in purchases of future stock offered by Recruit, 13 were Liberal Democrats.

Uno is said to have avoided involvement in the scandal, in part because he was not an aggressive fundraiser.

Opposition leaders and some Liberal Democrats criticized the choice of Uno because he belongs to the party faction of former Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, during whose administration in 1982-87 the Recruit scandal developed.

Official newspaper describes 1962 massacre of Soviet strikers

MOSCOW (AP) — An official newspaper exposed Friday the 27-year secret of how soldiers killed a score of strikers in a blaze of gunfire, secretly buried them and hid their bloodstains under a thick coat of cement.

Recollections published by the youth newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda marked the anniversary of the 1962 strike over food shortages in the southern city of Novocheerkassk, and for the first time officially confirmed rumors circulating for decades.

"I heard the massive fire of sub-machine guns... as a result of the use of firearms, 22 or 24 people were killed, including a boy of school age," recalled the region's former assistant military commander, retired Lt. Gen. Matvey K. Shaposhnikov. "Thirty people were wounded."

"The next morning I found out that the dead were secretly buried," he said. Shaposhnikov said he opposed the action and was kicked out of the Communist Party in 1963 for trying to expose it.

A. Simonov, a teacher, told the paper that after the massacre, "they tried to wash the blood from the square for a long time, first with fire engines, then other ways, with brushes, and at last called in a steamroller and laid a thick layer of pavement."

Soviet officials long denied Soviet dissidents' and Western sources' reports of the massacre and their charges that at least 70 people were killed.

Komsomolskaya Pravda displayed the story over half its back page with commentary from three legislators saying it is fitting to report on the bloodshed as the newly elected Congress of People's Deputies meets.

The inaugural session of the first competitively elected Soviet Congress has included unprecedented criticism of the Communist Party and government and forced open discussion of such issues as the 1940 seizure of the Baltic republics and recent ethnic violence in the Caucasus republics.

In contrast to the secrecy surrounding the Novocheerkassk killings, a national outcry followed the military's violent dispersal of pro-independence protesters in Tbilisi, Georgia, in April, where 20 people were killed.

Long lines for food and protests of official mismanagement caused the Novocheerkassk strike, the paper said.

"Lines at the stores for meat and oil grew before your eyes," it said.

"But the more alarming the situation became, the louder sounded the fanfare, promises of rapid success and the rapid approach of communism."

Nikita S. Khrushchev, the Soviet leader at the time, denounced Stalinism and eased his pervasive repression while promising rapid economic progress.

Instead, workers were faced with poor living conditions, relatively high rents and nothing to buy in the stores.

"Finally, they struck at the Budeynoye locomotive factory. The regional Communist Party chief identified in the paper only as Basov, arrived to calm them but ended up complaining to a meeting about how difficult his life was, recalled factory engineer S. Yelkin.

"Hooligans began throwing bottles at him, and we decided to get Basov out of there. We helped him slip out of a window and into a car."

Strike organizers were arrested the next morning, but other factories went on strike, and the military was deployed with tanks and armored personnel carriers.

At the same time, Shaposhnikov recalled thousands of people waving red banners began marching in the city-center. They were halted and scattered by gunfire from soldiers.

Komsomolskaya Pravda said two senior Moscow officials — Anastas Mikoyan and F.R. Kozol, were dispatched to Novocheerkassk and organized the Aug. 14 trial of the most active strike organizers.

"Seven people were sentenced to be shot," the newspaper said.

A review of those criminal cases — a careful, impassionate and just analysis of them — is our obligation to the truth," it concluded.

Bulgarian Turks gain support

PARIS (AP) — Zeynep Ibrahimoglu was renamed Suzan because of the state of Bulgaria, then spent 17 months in prison and two years in internal exile for resisting the change.

Ismet Ismailoglu was renamed Ilika Ilzev Panov. His right leg and back are scarred — marks he says he suffered during a police attack for his resistance to the name change.

They, attending a human rights conference here, are among hundreds of ethnic Turks expelled last month by Bulgaria for resisting an assimilation campaign.

The campaign went into force in 1981. It reportedly includes banning the use of the Turkish language in public, closing mosques, and razing Turkish cemeteries — in short, wiping out any trace of the Muslim Turkish minority.

"Now everyone has an identity card with a Bulgarian name," said a Turkish delegate to the Paris conference, speaking on condition he not be named. Officially, the Turks no longer exist."

Bulgaria is becoming a prime target at the month-long Conference on the Human Dimension, the first of three such meetings mandated in January during the summit of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

The United States and other countries are expected to demand that Bulgaria account for what Turkish Foreign Minister Mesut Yilmaz has called "one of the gravest human rights violations of our time."

Bulgaria has repeatedly denied charges it oppresses its Turkish minority, estimated to number 800,000 to 1.5 million in a total population of 9 million. President Todor Zhivkov said such reports are a "campaign of slander" concocted by Turkey and Western groups.

The plight of ethnic Turks in Bulgaria has been gaining attention since early May, when unrest over the assimilation campaign broke out. Official Bulgarian reports say three people died last weekend in clashes. But reports from deported ethnic Turks put the death toll at about 30.

Amnesty International says about 10 ethnic Turks have died since the assimilation campaign began.

Six expelled Bulgarian Turks are attending the Paris conference. They are demanding that Bulgaria restore the rights of ethnic Turks to practice their cultural heritage or, at least, allow them to freely leave the country.

Habib-ibisoglu, a former member of Parliament from the port city of Varna, said he left Bulgaria as a tourist in 1986 and never returned.

"I wanted to speak of Turkish problems in Bulgaria... and they wouldn't let me," he said. "I left to speak on the outside."
