Russell Boyd, Levirl Tolman found slain Nevada officers probing deaths

By CRAIG LINCOLN and MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writers

JACKPOT — Sheriff's deputies here are investigating the shooting deaths of two hobby prospectors from Twin Falls late last week.

A two-day search ended Sunday when the bodies of Russell Boyd, 64, and Levirl Tolman, 65, both of Twin Falls, were discovered about 15 miles south of Jackpot, said Elko County Sheriff James Miller.

The bodies were found, face up, within 100 yards of U.S. Highway 93, said Jim Solomon, a friend and mining partner of the two men. "We don't know who did it or what," Solomon said. "Neither one of them had enough money on them to matter."

"It's one of those strange things where nobody knows anything," said Solomon, a Twin Falls naturaph.

Miller pieced the story together like this: Tolman and Boyd left Twin Falls early Friday morning on what family members called a prospecting outing. They failed to return Friday, and the sheriff's Jackpot substation was contacted.

Sgt. Dale Lotspeich of the sheriff's department led a ground search on Saturday, but because of stormy weather, no air search was mounted. Helicopters and airplanes were sent up Sunday. That day the 1961 International short-bed pickup the men had been driving was spotted from a helicopter. When the helicopter landed, both men were found dead, apparently due to gunshot wounds.

Investigators haven't determined a motive for the killing of the two men, Miller said. They are calling the deaths a double murder, he said.

The pair was looking for new mining property near Salmon Falls Creek, Solomon said, near where the three partners have several mining claims. They have made "some" money off their claims, he said.

Voyager searches for lost arc

The Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. — Voyager 2 fired its thrusters Monday in a delicate maneuver to bring it closer to Neptune's mysterious moon Triton. Then it searched for northern lights over Neptune and snapped pictures of its turbulent storms.

One of two partial rings — called ring arcs — discovered earlier this month by Voyager has not been seen in subsequent photographs, leading scientists on a "search for the lost arc," said Bradford Smith, the head of the Voyager imaging team, which analyzes the spacecraft's photographs. Scientists expect to find many ring arcs as they get closer to the planet, and to obtain detailed photographs of them, Smith said in a press briefing at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

Scientists issued their first weather forecast for Neptune, predicting fairly accurately on Aug. 13 where Neptune's Great Dark Spot — an Earth-sized cyclone — would be found Sunday. "It's not perfect, but weather-forecasting isn't a perfect science, Smith said.

The length of a day on Neptune — the time the planet takes to spin on its axis — was estimated to be 16 hours, based on observations of intense bursts of radio waves from the planet's magnetic field, which varies with its rotation. Previous estimates had put the day length at 17 or 18 hours. Voyager has so far discovered four new moons around Neptune, bringing the total to six.

The course correction executed Monday didn't use Voyager's main thrusters, but two tiny thrusters that kept the spacecraft pointed in the right direction to remain in communication with Earth. It was the first time such a maneuver had ever been performed, the researchers said.

Use of the main engine could have put mission controllers out of touch with the spacecraft for up to two days, said Norman Haynes, Voyager project manager. The controllers couldn't risk that with the spacecraft's closest encounter with Neptune set for Thursday at 5:55 p.m. MDT. The spaceship will pass 3,000 miles from Neptune, and about 24,000 miles from Triton five hours later.

Prosecution seeks trial in embezzlement case

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The prosecution in a United Way embezzlement case — saying it had doubts about its plea bargain with the defendant — asked a judge Monday to "consider throwing out the woman's guilty plea and ordering her to trial."

Prosecutors agreed in June to recommend probation for 31-year-old Paula Bivens of Filer. But statements by Bivens that contradicted witnesses' testimony raised doubts about recommending probation instead of a harsher penalty, Chief Deputy Prosecutor Rockne Lammers said.

"I find it extremely troublesome that what they say is 180 degrees from what she says in open court," Lammers said.

Fifth District Judge Daniel Meehl delayed until Sept. 1 a decision on whether to order Bivens guilty plea withdrawn. If he finds that no facts support the guilty plea and refuses it, Bivens will go to trial.

If convicted, she could face prison, rather than the probation agreed to in her plea bargain.

Bivens, who had pleaded guilty to embezzling more than $3,000 from the United Way of Magic Valley, apparently was within minutes of the end of her sentencing hearing when Lammers made the request.

In front of a courtroom packed with United Way board members and supporters on one side and Bivens' family and church friends on the other, Lammers said doubts about the plea bargain first arose when a pre-sentence report arrived at Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter's desk.

Lammers said Baxter was "deeply troubled" by the report. The pre-sentence investigator said Bivens showed no remorse and didn't admit doing anything wrong, Lammers said.

In Idaho, before a defendant is sentenced, a state investigator interviews the defendant and examines the defendant's background to prepare a report for the judge to use while fashioning a sentence. The reports are confidential under Idaho law, but attorneys can discuss them in court, if they choose.

Baxter "wrote a letter saying we may very well disregard plea negotiations and try this case," said Lammers, who was out of town when the report arrived.

But prosecutors decided instead to proceed to sentencing and abide by their agreement to recommend probation, Lammers said.

Monday, however, Lammers started grilling Bivens on contradictions between her story

Insurance PACs assisting Symms

By ERIC ANDERSON
States News Service

WASHINGTON — Sen. Steve Symms, who serves on a committee that deals with insurance taxation issues, received $17,750 from insurance-related political action committees during the first half of 1989, federal reports show.

The Idaho Republican received nearly half of his total contributions from PACs representing insurance companies or their employees, according to reports filed recently with the Federal Election Commission.

As a member of the Senate Finance Committee, Symms helps draft all federal tax bills, many of which have provisions concerning the taxation of insurance companies or policies.

Lawmakers
Contributions	Cash on hand	From PACs
(1st. 6 mos. 1989)	(as of 6-30)	(Jan. 1-June 30)
Stallins	$41,117	$23,300
Craig	$17,044	$5,425
McClure	$175,225	$143,225
Symms	$37,550	$36,250

In all, the second-term senator, who is up for re-election in 1992, received all but $1,900 of his $37,550 in campaign gifts from special-interest groups, or PACs.

Because corporations and labor groups cannot make contributions to federal campaigns, they often create PACs to be their political funding arms. Although critics say PACs are often used to win lawmakers' influence, the vast majority of House and Senate members accept the contributions. Many receive money from groups that have an interest in legislation that passes through the lawmakers' particular committees.

Sen. James McClure, ranking minority member on the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, received $32,750 — more than one-fifth of his total PAC contributions — from oil, coal and natural gas-related political action committees during the six-month period ending June 30.

McClure, a Republican who also serves on the agriculture and rural development subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, took in $10,000 from agriculture-related PACs in May and April — most of which came from sugar interests.

In addition, McClure's finance report lists $4,000 in contributions from three executives — of

No troops to Colombia but $7.5 billion for U.S. war on drugs

The Associated Press

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine — President Bush will propose that the United States spend $7.5 billion to $8 billion to fight drugs but is not prepared to send U.S. troops to aid Colombia's battle against drug lords, his chief of staff said Monday.

John Sumnu, for the first time putting a price tag on the president's anti-drug blueprint, said it would include more financial aid for other nations in the international war on drugs.

Bush will unveil his proposal in a speech to the nation Sept. 5, the day after he returns to Washington from a nearly three-week vacation at the family compound here, then will send implementing legislation to Congress.

On another subject, Sumnu, taking note of renewed threats against two American BOGOTA, Colombia — Security forces raided the luxurious estates of major drug traffickers Monday, seizing scores of aircraft, confiscating cash and raising the number of detentions to more than 11,000 people in the third day of a nationwide crackdown on the cocaine trade.

money for law enforcement efforts, interdiction and rehabilitation.

The chief of staff declined to say which federal programs the president would cut to help finance his anti-drug effort.

Sumnu said Bush made most of the final decisions on the package Monday, sending orders back to Budget Director Richard Darman telling him where to siphon funds to pay for part of the effort.

Sunnu appeared to temper Sunday's remark by Attorney General Dick Thornburgh that the United States should consider a request, if one were made, by Colombian President Virgilio Barco Vargas for U.S. troops to aid in the South American nation's battle against drug bosses.

Attention on Colombia heightened after the assassination Friday of a leading presidential candidate, Sen. Luis Carlos Galan, allegedly by drug lords. Virgilio Barco ordered a national sweep to search for the killers; police rounded up about 10,000 people.

Bush called Virgilio Barco Monday night to express his condolences over the assassination of Galan, according to a White House statement.

President Barco indicated he had read press speculation about the U.S. troops in Colombia. He affirmed to the president that U.S. troops would not be necessary, the statement said.

Officials of the Drug Enforcement Administration said Monday they were scrutinizing a list of 50 to 100 names among

A member of the House Agriculture Committee, Stallings received $9,650 from 17 agriculture-related PACs in the first half of 1989, according to the reports. That funding accounted for more than one-third of his total campaign gifts from PACs between January and June.

Stallings received a total of $41,117 in campaign contributions during the first half of the year, with $25,300 coming from PACs. Rep. Larry Craig, a Republican from Midvale, reported $17,045 in total contributions, with just $6,425 coming from PACs, including $925 from the American Telephone and Telegraph PAC.

Boat tragedy may lead to charges

LONDON (AP) — Police said Monday they are considering filing criminal charges over the late-night sinking of a pleasure boat by a dredger on the River Thames in which 25 people perished and 38 are still unaccounted for. Divers, aided by more than two dozen police launches, continued to search the tidal river and salvaged hull of the Marchioness for more bodies from the accident early Sunday — the worst on the Thames this century. Police reported 87 people survived. Investigators said they have a list of 38 names "who we have strong reason to believe were on board but are as yet unaccounted for." The 90-ton Marchioness had been chartered for a birthday party with guests from the modeling, photography and banking worlds. It collided with the Bowbelle, a 1,475-ton sand-and-gravel dredger, and sank in minutes.

lower court judge in a bitter child custody dispute, will remain behind bars pending the full court's decision. Oral argument is set for Sept. 20. Morgan's case, which long ago became the most voluminous in the history of the Superior Court's family division, has centered on her allegation that Eric A. Foretich, her former husband, sexually abused their daughter, Hilary. Those allegations, first made in early 1985 when Hilary was not yet 3, have been vigorously denied by Foretich, and Judge Herbert B. Dixon Jr., the trial judge, ruled that Morgan had not proved her case.

Wales sends Communists warning

Los Angeles Times WARSAW — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa warned Poland's Communist Party on Monday to back off from a strategy of "threats and blackmail" in an effort to increase its role in a Solidarity-led government. Walesa spoke out as Solidarity and the Communist Party fired the first exchange in what is likely to become several days of sharp debate over the extent of Communist participation in the new government. Countering demands issued at the close of a weekend meeting of the party's Central Committee, Walesa warned that the Communists could be shut out if they try to hang on to power by force. "Poland needs reform," Walesa declared in a statement issued by his office in Gdanek. "Only work on a concrete shape of these reforms gives credibility to the political forces active in our country. No one will achieve that through a policy of threats and blackmail."

and what other people told the pre-sentence investigator. Bivens said one of the four checks she admitted embezzling was deposited to her husband's quarter-house business by mistake. Several United Way checks were piled on her desk two days before Christmas 1988, and a United Way volunteer bumped into the desk and scattered the checks, she testified. She confused the United Way check — from the U.S. Forest Service — with one of her checks she intended to deposit in her husband's account, she said. "I was in a hurry; it was late and two days before Christmas," she said. "I was in a hurry." According to court records, the check was deposited with an opaque label bearing Bivens' husband's name pasted over the name of the United Way. With short, clipped answers, Bivens also contradicted several statements made to the pre-sentence investigator by officers of a company whose check she had admitted embezzling. When Bivens said she hadn't intended to do this, the Forest Service check she may have raised an issue that Meehl could use to force the guilty plea withdrawal. "With that," Meehl told Bivens in court, "I would have to advise under the law that you are not guilty." Intent to commit a crime is an important element of guilt. Heated, emotional testimony filled the crowded courtroom before Lammers asked Meehl to reconsider Bivens' guilty plea. Bivens and her family insisted she had been punished enough by news coverage of her case. Her family and minister said she was a loving and happy person before the embezzlement case. Bivens said she destroyed by the press and the TV," said her father, Thane Lancaster of Filer. "We've suffered all kinds of humiliation." "As a pastor, I couldn't believe that a court could send a mother of two and a first-time offender to prison," said her minister, Robert Sturtevant. "I'm sorry it happened," Bivens said on the stand, minutes before she cried at the thought of being taken from her children. "It's totally turned myself and my family into upheaval." She doesn't allow her two children, 18 months and 4 years old, answer the phone because of "vulgar" calls she's received.

Her attorney, Jay Sudweeks, compared the news coverage her case has received to the practice of locking criminals in stocks in public squares. "It's atrocious, it's humiliating," Sudweeks said. Bivens was charged with six felonies in March, but in June she pleaded guilty to one consolidated count involving $3,241. She worked for the United Way as a bookkeeper for five months in 1988. United Way has claimed a loss of $9,600 in court filings, and Sudweeks said the organization has claimed a total loss of $13,000 to its insurance company. He criticized statements from United Way officials asking for a tough sentence. "They were embarrassed and they wanted the court to extract a pound of flesh from Paula Bivens to make them feel better," Sudweeks said.

Firefighters make steady, slow progress on final Idaho blaze

By The Associated Press

Firefighters survived another weekend weather system without any major new fire activity to continue making steady but slow progress Monday toward closing the line on Idaho's last remaining wildfire.

The crews were still more than 2,000 firefighters in the backcountry of the central and western parts of the state, but 1,000 were mopping up on the 16,000-acre Foothill Complex 30 miles north of Boise after containing the final fire in that system of blazes late Sunday.

Attempts to rein in that blaze earlier were hampered by the outbreak of a new fire just off the north flank and the diversion of crews to fight it. That blaze, believed to be started when a helicopter had to make an emergency landing in the area, was contained earlier in the weekend.

Fire bosses were still directing over 1,000 more firefighters on the state's most destructive wildfire, the 46,500-acre Lowman Fire 70 miles northeast of the Capitol, but the cooler, moister weather that came with the weekend storm system bolstered optimism that blaze would be contained Tuesday night.

"The fire is not being very active, and things are looking very good," Boise National Forest spokesman Gordon Reid said. "But it's just very steep, rough terrain. It's going very slow."

Crews used explosive primer cord to blast containment line in the most rugged, least accessible areas on the fire's northeast flank.

The weather system that included some rainfall did spawn three minor fires in the western part of the state, but Payette National Forest spokeswoman Marcia Nelson said all three were being controlled.

That left the Lowman Fire as the only major wildfire burning in the state from July 26 lightning storm that at one point had more than 120,000 acres of Idaho timber and range aflame. A number of relatively small blazes in wilderness areas were the target of limited attack and were expected to burn themselves out in another month. At the height of the fire bust manpower exceeded 10,000, including nearly 1,600 military troops, and the cost for suppression ran into millions of dollars a day. Resource losses have been estimated in excess of $100 million, including the destruction of dozens of cabins, lodges and other buildings by the Lowman Fire three weekends ago.

But a break in the weather two weeks ago finally let crews gain the upper hand on fires throughout the West.

Some lawmakers favor spending at least part of surplus on bridges

LEWISTON (AP) — Nearly 500 bridges across the state of Idaho are in critical condition, and replacing all of them would cost $117.5 million.

The problem is serious enough that some Idaho lawmakers think at least part of the state's $63 million budget surplus should be spent on bridge repair and replacement.

They admit spending on bridges is nowhere near as glamorous as new buildings. But by trying without them, they add, "Even so, the state has nowhere near the amount of money needed to do the job."

Of the 1,693 bridges along the state highway system, 96 are considered critically deficient by the federal government. Replacing those bridges would cost $92.3 million.

The problem is more severe at the local level: Of the 2,090 bridges operated by counties, cities and highway districts, 401 are far below the threshold needed to qualify for federal assistance. Replacement would cost $85.2 million.

"I think it's likely to happen because there's a large constituency out there," said Senate Democratic Leader Bruce L. Sweeney of Lewiston, who sits on the Senate Transportation Committee. "You know, there are bad bridges out there."

The chairman of the Senate Transportation Committee Chairman C.S. (Skip) Smyser, R-Parma, has begun drafting three bills to address the situation.

"If we do not take action soon, it's only a matter of time until we either have limits placed on many more of these bridges or we'll have some catastrophic accident," Smyser said.

"It's time to start generating an awareness because bridges really are not a glamorous issue," he said. "It's important and the infrastructure is necessary and we all take it for granted."

Although he recognizes the problem, House Speaker Tom Boyd, R-Genesee, is reluctant to use general fund tax dollars for transportation needs, which are funded by fuel taxes.

"I have a concern that bridges ought to be paid by users, gasoline, licenses and those sorts of things," Boyd said. But that would mean increasing gasoline taxes, something that is never easy or popular.

"I think they're going to have to get a heck of a lot better story out to the public of what those particular roads are before people would buy off on that," Boyd said.

State and local highway officials say the prospect of a bridge failure is remote because federal law requires inspections of bridges with at least 20-foot spans every two years. Those bridges are rated and, if necessary, load limits are put into effect.

But as the condition of these bridges deteriorates, load limits are reduced more. The situation has become so acute in portions of Ada County that some bridges are now off limits to school buses.

Elsewhere, load limits are causing added expense and frustration for loggers, farmers and tourists.

"Every year, we get a little further behind and every year we add a little more to it," said Ray Oliver of Coeur d'Alene, executive secretary-treasurer of the Idaho Association of Highway Districts. "The problem we have is those bridges that were built back then in the 1930s and 1940s. If you might recall how big trucks were then, we didn't have 80,000-pound trucks or 127,000-pound trucks like we do today and we didn't have the traffic like we do today."

Smyser is drafting bills for the 1990 Idaho Legislature, which would seek the following:

- Transfer funding of the Idaho State Police totally to the general fund. State law enforcement receives about 6 percent of the transportation account. The transfer would free up about $6 million to $9 million for bridges and other highway projects. Oliver will ask his association to endorse the idea at its convention later this year.
- Allow the Transportation Department to spend money earned on the investment of its idle funds.

3 die in crashes over weekend, 2 others drown

By The Associated Press

Three Idaho residents are dead following a series of weekend highway accidents after a Friday night crash claimed another life.

Authorities said two other people drowned.

The Idaho State Police said Lana Lee Vincina, 38, of Boise was killed late Sunday when the motorcycle she was riding crashed on Idaho 56 south of Horsehoe Bend. The driver of the motorcycle was hospitalized.

Earlier Sunday, Daniel Watson, 17, of Twin Falls died when the car he was riding in went out of control as it tried to pass another vehicle just west of the Idaho border on Washington 290, the Washington State Patrol reported. The other three people in the car were injured, one critically.

On Saturday, an Arco man was killed when the pickup truck he was in rolled. The Butte County Sheriff's department said Neil Ralph Parkinson, 21, was in the southbound truck when it went out of control and rolled sideways 1 1/2 times on a rural road three miles south of Arco.

Near American Falls the night before, a head-on collision claimed the life of Michael Bloxham, 16, of American Falls. The Idaho State Police said Bloxham was driving westbound on a local road when an on-coming car crossed the center line and crashed into his vehicle.

The two victims of drowning died Sunday. Authorities said Richard Hoffman, 47, of Post Falls died 14 hours after a diver pulled him from the bottom of the Spokane River.

Officials said Hoffman had apparently tried to swim across the river to the Washington side.

Many tricky factors involved with Poland's reforms

The events currently taking place in Poland are, in my opinion, the most important upheaval in the communist world since the death of Stalin.

At stake are two fundamentally important prospects. One is the future character of communism, including ultimately the fate of Soviet perestroika itself. The other is the stability of the East-West détente, and particularly of Gorbachev's own commitment to it.

If the events in Poland do in fact involve a peaceful and eventually successful transition from communism to democracy, they will have involved the first known case of the evolutionary termination of communist totalitarianism.

Nevertheless, one has to be cognizant of certain dangers — both for the short and the long run — that the present experiment in Poland faces.

In the short run, there is still the possibility of a coup in Poland designed to prevent the emergence of a democratically based and Solidarity-led government.

The newly elected first secretary of the party, Mieczyslaw Rakowski, seems to be agitating for Soviet political intervention, deliberately exaggerating the alleged dangers of this development to the Soviet world.

Tuesday is the 21st anniversary of the Soviet-led occupation of Prague.

Wednesday is the 50th anniversary of the Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact, which led to the incorporation of the Baltic states into the Soviet Union. These developments could strengthen the hand of the right-wingers in Moscow.

Zbigniew Brzezinski

As for the long-run dangers, there is the possibility that the Solidarity government in Poland will not be effective in dealing with the economic problem.

It could be sabotaged by Communist hardliners, and thus the Solidarity-led coalition could break down, and the Communists could try to impose one-party rule again.

In this regard, much depends on whether the present arrangement involves the Communists' retaining control over only the army and the police. Also important is whether the Communists will succeed in limiting Solidarity's ability to replace Communist Party apparatchiks in key economic areas, and to deprive Communists of their control over the mass media.

If Solidarity does not have power to remove incompetent officials, and if the mass media are not immediately fully democratized, the danger of restoration of one-party rule remains.

But one should also note that Solidarity now can unleash the most creative forces in Poland, to generate again a great deal of public enthusiasm, and to mobilize the best brains in the country; those people in the academic world and elsewhere who have previously been excluded from power but will now be able to participate freely in it.

That gives Solidarity a chance to set the country on a course of recovery. Important managerial positions in the Polish economy were assigned to Communist functionaries exclusively on the basis of political preference. This has meant the gradual lowering of standards and the loss of professionalism.

The most talented, ambitious and innovative Poles have been excluded from the economy. Solidarity has mobilized those people.

One of the reasons Solidarity has been successful is that it has represented this counter-élite to the Communist rulers, who for years excluded this group from genuine social and political participation.

Solidarity therefore has a manpower pool from which to draw and time to create a new political and economic system in Poland.

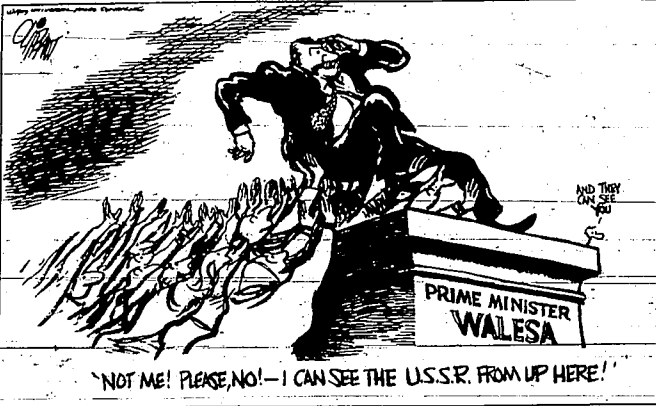

Moreover, Polish nationalism, for years suppressed, now has an opportunity to express itself through creative and positive work. Much depends, therefore, on how rapidly and effectively Solidarity can crystallize a program of economic renewal.

With Western assistance, the Polish economy could indeed be a truly prosperous one.

The degree to which the West can help can be of central importance. President Bush now faces an opportunity no smaller in its historical implications than the one President Harry Truman faced when he committed the United States to helping Europe recover from World War II.

The United States and the West can now do the same vis-a-vis not only Poland, but through the Polish example, Hungary and Czechoslovakia, where the Stalinist regime is on its last legs; and ultimately even the Soviet Union itself.

All of that brings us to foreign-policy implications. The West must realize, and quietly convey to Gorbachev, that at stake here is the future of détente. It must be clear that the West is not attempting to inject itself geopolitically into Poland, and that it recognizes the necessity for Poland to remain in the Warsaw Pact, an arrangement of which Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski is himself the guarantor.

But the West must also make clear that it is prepared to support peaceful change in Poland now, and in Hungary in the near future. Moreover, if political and economic change continue within the Soviet Union itself, then in effect what Poland is experiencing might eventually lead to a wider system of all-European co-operation that will work to the benefit of all Europeans, East and West. The stakes, therefore, are enormous. It behooves the United States, Western Europe and Japan to move now on a much more ambitious and in a much more energetic basis with a program of economic and technical assistance to Poland.

This program should be designed to ensure that the peaceful revolution in that country is successful, and that it works to the ultimate benefit not only of the Poles, but of all Europeans, the Russians included.

Senator's letter off the mark; credit shouldn't go to GOP

On Friday, Aug. 18, there was an editorial by Sen. Racheal Gilbert claiming credit for the booming economy goes to the GOP measures.

This article was so full of half-truths and designed basically to create doubt for the upcoming election, that I feel as a private citizen, must be answered. So in the words of one good newspaper, Paul Harvey, newscaster, "Now for the rest of the story!"

The first thing she speaks of is the Carter administration, and then praises the Reagan administration. Point in fact, the Reagan administration turns out to be the most corrupt in the history of the United States.

One only has to remember the

Donald McMurrian

Iran-Contra scandal, the HUD scandal, the S and L scandal, the national debt running the highest in the history of the United States.

Only the Nixon administration could even compare with the Reagan administration. Reagan's policies will prove to be: starve the poor and feed the rich.

Now then, Sen. Gilbert praised five points of local Republican programs.

1. The first being the right to work law being passed in 1986. Fact: the right to work law created part-time jobs at minimum wage, with few or no benefits to the worker. With over 200,000 people within the state of Idaho who can't afford health insurance, the biggest portion of that blame must be laid at the doorstep of the right to work law.

No. 2. Sen. Gilbert claims Republicans lowered unemployment insurance by about $100 million since 1985. Fact: Since the lowering of unemployment insurance only about 1/3 of the unemployed are drawing unemployment. Leaving 2/3 of the unemployed without any means of support for themselves and their families. Also, this creates an untruth about how many unemployed we have in the state of Idaho.

No. 3. Retained the investment tax credit. Fact: The investment tax credit benefits very few Idaho citizens.

No. 4. The senator claims to have adequately funded education needs without a general tax increase, and have insisted upon accountability and performance indicators in the process.

Fact: For many, many years Idaho remained at the bottom of the scale across the nation in education, due largely through the efforts of the republican officials. Only through public awareness and public pressure and the leadership of Gov. Andrus was there a change in the present policies of education, beginning to take place.

Our elected officials began to see the writing on the wall. As for accountability, there were democrats who campaigned on this issue, including myself. But, the voting public desired the credit for the change in the education policies.

No. 5: The good Sen. Racheal Gilbert points with great pride to the economical situation in Boise. Fact: Most of the credit for this goes to the group known as the Boise Gang. They see it to that Boise gets all of the extra funds and special projects that Boise needs. The new prison in Boise, which should have gone to Burley, is just one prime example.

Sen. Gilbert points with great pride to the passing of the tort reform. Fact: The tort reform, promised lower insurance rates with more availability; this just hasn't happened. The only thing tort reform accomplished was to put more power and control in the hands of the insurance companies over the lives of the average citizen.

—However, there was one thing in her article on which I agreed with her: That was the phrase, voter beware. Because, should Sen. Gilbert run for governor and be elected (by some miracle), then God help us all.

And now you know the rest of the story!

Expect a more respectable crop of Republican candidates

Gregory Hyatt liked to wander around his office nude while talking (animately) into a telephone with no one at the other end.

This could be a problem in any walk of life, but for the winner of the Republican gubernatorial primary in Massachusetts it was a major detriment.

Eventually the Massachusetts Republican Party got rid of Hyatt and replaced him with a respectable businessman — but they lost big anyway.

In the annals of the Republican Party, stories like that are not unusual. In some parts of the country, the party has been so weak for so long that its side of the ballot was either blank or, worse, occupied by the town drunk or the village idiot.

Although Republicans have done well at the presidential level for many years now, their failure to recruit good candidates has severely hampered their ability to win local offices.

All that is changing. Republicans have been going after Democratic candidates with a vengeance — a leg up that they can supplement their own talent with some recent converts. And they are succeeding.

In Washington, D.C., Police Chief Maurice Turner became a Republican to test the waters. Marion Barry, in Arkansas, Rep. Tommy Robinson became a Republican to pursue a run against incumbent Democratic Gov. Bill Clinton, and in Louisiana, Secretary of State Fox McKeithen switched amid rumors that he would challenge Democratic Sen. J. Bennett Johnston.

Republican officials at all levels are engaged in the recruitment effort. For some recruits there is the lure of Republican fat cats willing to help with old campaign debts or new campaign cash. For others there is a leg up on getting scarce federal aid. And for still others there is an invitation to the White House or a phone call from the president.

In the eight months since George Bush's inauguration, 130 Democratic elected officials have switched to the Republican Party.

Democrats have tried to downplay the importance of the switchers, attributing the moves to pure political expediency.

One Democratic Party official referred to them as "political prostitutes," and another called "gathering of switchers at the White House "The Benedict Arnold Society," after the famous Revolutionary War traitor.

But political expediency does not apply across the board. For every young hot politician eager to climb the Republican money tree to higher office, there are politicians like 60-year-old Virgil Kilby, congressman of Clayton County, Ga., who believes purely and simply that he had no other option but to choose the party more in line with his conservative ideology.

Switching parties is not an easy thing to do; most people are born into a political party just as they are born into a religion.

When McKeithen told his father, a former two-term Democratic governor of Louisiana, that he was switching, his father told him, "You must be crazy," but McKeithen responded by reminding his father that he hadn't voted for a Democrat for president in 20 years.

And that sort of sums it up. In the South they've been calling them self-swingers Democrats but behaving like Republicans for some time now.

A common refrain among party switchers is that the national Democratic Party has become too liberal; most of them agree with Kilby: "The national Democratic Party left me — I didn't leave it."

Florida State Rep. Charles Canady said that he switched because after waiting for the Democratic Party to move back to the center: "They blew it again in 1986."

After Michael Dukakis, he concluded that a move to the center "is not going to happen in my political lifetime."

For Annette Skinner — tax collector in Shelby County, Ala. — and other switchers, the national Democratic Party is not the party of Sen. Sam Nunn, the conservative from Georgia; it's the party of Sen. Edward Kennedy and Jesse Jackson.

In the midst of a long and breathless recap of a recent disastrous Democratic gubernatorial primary, Skinner paused to say, "and of course you had Kennedy and Chappaquiddick," as if the famous accident had occurred the other day instead of 20 years ago.

But ideological discomfort between Southern conservative Democrats and Northern liberal Democrats is nothing new.

What is new is the fact that Southern voters; long accustomed to pulling the Republican lever in presidential races, have begun pulling the Republican lever in local races as well.

In Okaloosa County, Fla., Newman Brackin, clerk of the circuit court, recalls that a decade ago 15 of the 16 county officers were Democrats. Today there are five, excluding Brackin, who along with nearly 500 formerly Democratic voters in Okaloosa joined the Republican Party.

The same story is told in Clayton County, Ga., in Tarrant County, Texas, in Meridan, Miss. and throughout the South.

The decision to switch parties is not confirmed by a talk with the president. For many of these local political leaders, the decision to switch is confirmed at the grass roots.

Party switching is still a phenomenon for places where there aren't many home-grown Republicans.

But we can expect to see a better crop of Republican candidates all across the country. Back north in Massachusetts the Republican Party, buoyed by Dukakis's national triumph, thinks it might be able to field a full slate of candidates for the legislature and a respectable — and fully clothed — candidate for governor in 1990.

Letters/ Bombing range, smelly town prompt feedback

Bombing range: get the facts

I have been following, with great interest, Janet O'Crowley's campaign against the increase in the size of the bombing range at Mountain Home Air Force Base. She may have a point, but she may not have all the facts — I don't really know. What I do know is that the current bombing range is still open to all forms of recreation and grazing. In other words, it is a multiple-use area. In Janet's letter Aug. 17 in The Times-News, she stated that the Air Force was wanting to take our public land away from us and lock it up for their own use. What most people don't realize is that

Janet O'Crowley's motives are exactly the same as what she is accusing the Air Force of. Janet wants to restrict the land to only one group and deny access to all others. —Janet and the Anti-Multiple-Use group she is involved with want our desert to be designated as wilderness. What this would mean is that the only people to ever see the desert again would be on foot. No longer would cattlemen be able to drive the many roads in the area to check on their cattle. No longer would hunters be able to drive to their favorite hunting spots. No longer would fishermen be able to drive to their favorite fishing spots. No longer would you be able to take your family for a drive in the desert. Before you jump on the Janet O'Crowley bandwagon, I think it would be wise to wait and gather some facts as to exactly what the Air Force's plans are for the area. Maybe they aren't going to lock it up after all. Even Janet doesn't know. This we do know — if Janet has her way, the land will be locked up in wilderness. SIAM MAI FIAN

Your state is beautiful and I would have recommended it to anyone, from the beautiful north to the vast, high deserts — until I went from Carey to Shoshone. The early morning air of the moist desert was delightful until I got to Richfield, then my trip was ruined. Nausea? Diarrhea? No, Richfield! A sleepy little town? I think not. No one could sleep in that town. The stench hit me inside my car with the air conditioner going. I turned around to see what the smell was — Ward's Cheese. I told my wife: I've lived there we would have to move.

Why do the people of Richfield put up with it? Why hasn't the EPA shut them down? Are there no laws? Come on, Ward's Cheese, clean this mess up. Of all the smells in the whole country — from the steel mills to paper factories — Richfield, you've got them all beat. Please put up some signs that warn people: Entering Richfield, the Rectum of Idaho! Restrooms Needed! Man says doctors gave wife AIDS-tainted blood BOSTON (AP) — A Marine officer infected with the same AIDS virus that killed his wife and son testified Monday that government doctors botched his wife's pregnancy and gave her an AIDS-tainted transfusion that ravaged his family.

Chief Warrant Officer Martin Gaffney, 40, testified on the opening day of the non-jury trial in his $65 million lawsuit against the federal government in U.S. District Court.

"It's a relief just to finally be here," Gaffney said.

Gaffney has said he filed the lawsuit primarily to provide for his 6-year-old daughter, Maurene, the only member of the family to escape the infection, since she will likely become an orphan.

Gaffney charges that doctors at the Navy Regional Medical Center in Long Beach, Calif., were negligent in the handling of his wife's 1981 pregnancy. The couple's son was stillborn, and Gaffney's wife, Mutako, had to be given a blood transfusion, which was tainted with the deadly virus, the suit alleged.

A later pregnancy produced a son, John, who died in 1986 at 13 months. Tests determined he and the parents all had the AIDS virus. Mrs. Gaffney, 38, a Japanese national, died in May 1987. Gaffney so far shows no symptoms of the disease.

"Had Mrs. Gaffney received appropriate treatment, the Gaffney family today would be intact and happy," Gaffney's lawyer, Jaclyn McKenney, said Monday before U.S. District Judge Rya Zobel.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Marianne Bowler countered that Navy doctors maintained an adequate and "professional standard of care" during Mrs. Gaffney's pregnancy.

"An unfortunate if not tragic event has befallen on the family but it is not due to U.S. medical personnel," Bowler said.

Space shuttles on the move Monday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Two space shuttles were on the move Monday, with Columbia returning from California where it ended a mission and Atlantis joining with rockets that will boost it toward orbit in October.

Columbia came back to its launch base bolted atop a Boeing 747 jettison that was forced to make an overnight stop in Georgia because of thunderstorms.

The 747 left Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., early Sunday and made a refueling stop in Texas before being diverted to Robins Air Base, Ga., late in the day. Bad weather in the Southwest had delayed by 24 hours a planned Saturday departure from Edwards.

Columbia landed in California's Mojave Desert on Aug. 13 after a five-day secret military mission, which reportedly included deployment of a spy satellite and experiments related to the Star Wars anti-missile program.

Atlantis, which completed a flight in May, was towed out of a processing hangar into an assembly building Monday to be mated with an external fuel tank and two solid fuel rockets for an Oct. 12 launch.

Atlantis' five-member crew is to start the Galileo spacecraft on a six-year journey to orbit the planet Jupiter and drop a probe into its atmosphere.

Columbia, the oldest space shuttle, now will be readied for a 30-day December mission during which the crew of five is to release a communications satellite and attempt to retrieve a science satellite the size of a school bus.

JFK Jr. arrives for first day of work

JOHN KENNEDY JR. Arriving for first day of work

NEW YORK (AP) — John F. Kennedy Jr. began work Monday as a Manhattan prosecutor, but only after striding through a gauntlet of photographers and politely answering reporters' questions.

Kennedy, who took the subway to work, rolled his eyes when he saw more than 40 reporters, photographers and TV crew members waiting for him at the Manhattan district attorney's office.

"I felt more relaxed until I saw you guys," said Kennedy, the 28-year-old son of the late President Kennedy and Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis. He was one of 69 new assistant district attorneys sworn in today.

Security at District Attorney Robert Morgenthau's office was tightened. Reporters were not allowed into the day's activities—the swearing-in, a welcoming speech, lunch and an orientation session.

Asked about his goal for the day, Kennedy said, "To get through the day, I guess." His preparation: "I had breakfast." His reaction to the media horde: "I think I'll pass."

Kennedy, who graduated from the New York University Law School in May, took the bar exam last month. Results are due in November. Kennedy was assigned to the Special Prosecutions Bureau, which handles low-level civic corruption.

First lady returning to Washington for checkup

KENNEBUNKPORT, Maine (AP) — First lady Barbara Bush, still experiencing eye problems from a thyroid condition, will return to Washington today for a checkup, the White House said Monday.

Mrs. Bush, vacationing here with the president through Labor Day, was to fly to Washington for a midday appointment at Walter Reed Army Hospital.

tal, said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

The first lady suffers from Graves disease, a thyroid imbalance diagnosed earlier this year. A side effect of the disorder is eye irritation.

Although she has undergone treatment for the problem, including radioactive iodine to shrink the thyroid, she continues to be troubled by the affliction.

In an interview last week with the Boston Globe, Mrs. Bush said that she suffers from some double vision.

"I've been putting off treatment for it, but I'm going to do something about it this fall," she told the Globe.

Eitzwiler said "her eyes have been giving her trouble" during the Maine vacation.

Governor seeking tanker-free zones along Florida coast

OPA-LOCKA, Fla. (AP) — After flying over busy shipping lanes off southern Florida on Monday, Gov. Bob Martinez called for a tanker-free zone along his state's environmentally sensitive coastlines.

Martinez, accompanied on the air tour by Coast Guard Commandant Adm. Paul A. Yost, urged that major shipping lanes be moved to 10 nautical miles from the coastal reefs to protect the coast from oil spills.

"Establishing tanker-free zones creates a buffer between Florida's coast and tanker traffic," the governor said. He added that such a buffer would give authorities more time to respond to oil spills before the oil reached shore.

Yost said the Coast Guard would seek federal and international backing for the plan, and agreed to study Coast Guard participation in a major oil-spill drill with Florida authorities within the next 12 months.

Shipping lanes now pass as close as two miles from shore at some points along Florida's coast, although both Martinez and Yost noted that fully laden tankers heading north usually take advantage of strong Gulf Stream currents farther out to sea.

More than 5,000 ships pass in and out of the Gulf of Mexico through the Florida Straits yearly, carrying tens of billions of gallons of petroleum products, according to the governor's office.

Yost said it could take years to enact the proposed new shipping lanes because the plan requires international agreement and is expected to be opposed by the shipping industry.

SYDNEY OMARR

ASTROLOGICAL FORECASTS

If August 22 is your birthday, it's an ideal time to start planning surprise events. Some things may throw you off, but you can manage nicely anyway. Make this an unusually productive day and evening. More quickly important matters may be hanging in the balance.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Out of town situations or activities are different from your usual routines. You may want to take advantage of this situation. Listen to the advice of a new contact. Be happy at home.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Be prepared for any unusual situations which may arise in the business world. There will be an opportunity for you if you take the time to look carefully. You can clear up any romantic problems tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Situations arise that can help you to improve relations with those in the outside world, so make productive use of them. Don't be afraid to take a personal or business chance in the next few days.

CANCER (June 22 to July 21): As the new weeks begin, get into activities which can make you much more successful in the future. You must take an active role if you're to profit from any adventures. Use your own eyes first.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Your creative abilities may come under question now if you do not have them in mentally correct order. Take the time to get things right the first time. Get into recreations you enjoy.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): It's not the right day to make any really dramatic changes where your home is concerned. A low-intensity-profile will serve your best interests. Await a better day for entertaining.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Communications can be very important in the days ahead, so handle them intelligently. Be most careful in matters of all kind. Take special care in driving for the next few days to avoid a serious accident.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Be alert to whatever may come up which concerns your business or property, and be sure to handle it quickly and wisely. Someone may be trying to steal a march on you while you're not looking. Be calm to everyone and approach frustrations with a pleasant attitude.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You can put across a personal plan now, but improve it somewhat if you expect others to react enthusiastically to your ideas. When dealing with friends be wise, not glib. Someone may try to take advantage of your good grace.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Keep pretty much to yourself, but don't neglect to observe what is going on around you. Now is the time to remain especially alert if you're to profit fully. Avoid a possible big loss.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Try to combine your past experience with whatever you feel is right now and get good results. But you must not wait for others to take the lead either in business or socially. The evening is best for making friends, but don't look for any relationships yet.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20): Study those who have power over your affairs and learn to take their direction without resentment. Do nothing to annoy them at this time. Don't invite criticism from your public today. Make plans for a more successful future.

Jim Bakker enters the Charlotte, N.C. federal building with daughter Tammy Sue Chapman

Bakker fraud trial opens while Tammy Faye pleads for money

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Television evangelist Jim Bakker went to court Monday to defend himself against charges that he cheated followers out of $4 million so he could afford the trappings of stardom. "Our faith is in God," Bakker proclaimed as he strode into the U.S. District Courthouse with his attorneys and daughter.

While jury selection was getting under way in the courtroom, Bakker's wife, Tammy Faye Bakker, went on television to tearfully ask viewers to send money and pray for her husband.

Bakker, who has pleaded innocent, is charged with eight counts of mail fraud, 15 counts of wire fraud, and conspiracy to commit mail and wire fraud. If convicted on all counts, he could be sentenced to 120 years in prison and fined more than $5 million.

Bakker this month, former PTL Executive Vice President Richard Dortch, who was indicted with Bakker, pleaded guilty to charges of fraud and conspiracy. Last month, former Bakker aides James and David Taggart were convicted of tax evasion. All three are potential government witnesses.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert Potter questioned potential jurors, telling them "to put yourself in the place of the defendant, who has had a lot of publicity in this case."

Potter said the publicity "makes our job very difficult to find a jury."

By mid-day, Potter had dismissed six members of the regular jury pool and one potential alternate. At least two of those who were dismissed said they had opinions about the case that they couldn't overcome.

Besides the Taggarts and Dortch, Potter said the potential witnesses at the trial included several former PTL board members, including actor Eftem Zimbalist Jr.

Jessica Hahn, whom PTL paid money to stay quiet about a sexual encounter with Bakker, and Virginia evangelist Jerry Falwell, who took over the PTL empire after Bakker quit in March 1987, weren't mentioned as possible witnesses. A list of potential witnesses has not been made public.

Tammy Faye Bakker, who has been mentioned as a possible defense witness, stayed in Orlando, Fla., where Bakker has transplanted his ministry, to carry on their daily live broadcast.

Analysts expect deficit increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government posted a smaller-than-expected deficit in July, the Treasury Department said Monday, but analysts are still expecting 1989's red ink to top last year's total because of a late surge of spending on the savings and loan bailout.

The July deficit of $18.2 billion, down 20.4 percent from the same month a year ago, followed a $7.8 billion surplus in June. Revenue last month totaled $66.3 billion, up 9.2 percent from a year ago, while spending was up only 1.1 percent to $84.5 billion.

For the first 10 months of the fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30, the deficit totals $123.8 billion, 13 percent lower than the same period for fiscal 1988.

However, both government and private analysts expect the deficit for all of fiscal 1989 will be $5 billion to $15 billion greater than the $155.2 billion budget gap in 1988.

Earlier this month, Congress voted to add $20 billion in borrowing for S&L rescues. So far this month, the Treasury has expanded its borrowing by $5 billion to accommodate the S&L bailout and officials say they intend to borrow the remaining $15 billion in the next six weeks. The added spending will be somewhat offset by $2.4 billion collected from the thrift industry.

The Bush administration had been forecasting a 1989 deficit of $18.3 billion, but Budget Director Richard Darman said Monday the administration now expects just under $170 billion in red ink. The Congressional Budget Office forecasts a $161 billion deficit this year.

According to the Treasury, July spending was held down by a shift in payments for military pay, veterans' benefits and Supplemental Security Income. Those benefits are normally paid July 1, but because the long holiday weekend would have delayed payment until July 5, they were paid June 30.

The government's largest spending category last month, as usual, was military spending, which totaled $20.5 billion in July and $21.8 billion so far this year, up 2.0 percent from 1988.

Other large spending categories were:

- Interest on the national debt, the fastest growing item: $16.0 billion last month and $20.7 billion so far in fiscal 1989, up 12.9 percent from the previous year.
- Social Security: $18.6 billion in July and $188.7 billion so far this year, up 6.0 percent from 1988.

Other programs in the Department of Health and Human Services: $13.1 billion last month and $141.6 billion so far in 1989, up 8.3 percent from a year earlier.

Growth signs may delay lowering of interest rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recent signs of resurgent economic growth likely will cause Federal Reserve policymakers, meeting privately this week, to pause in their summertime push toward lower interest rates, economists said Monday.

"I don't think they're going to do much of anything right now," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch Capital Markets. "They can say their policies are working pretty much as desired. The economy is still moving up and the inflation numbers have been fairly good."

The central bank, which attempts to regulate the nation's economy by manipulating interest rates, has been engaged in a delicate balancing act over the past 18 months. From March 1988 to March 1989, the Fed pushed short-term interest rates up by 3 percentage points in an effort to curb the economy and bring inflationary pressures under control.

It paused for several months and then in early June, as signs of sluggish growth emerged, reversed course and began to push rates lower in an attempt to stimulate the economy and avoid what would be the first recession since 1982.

In three steps, the central bank nudged the federal funds rate — the rate banks charge each other for overnight loans — from 9.75 percent to 9 percent. That has since rippled through to other rates, including mortgage rates and the prime rate charged banks' best commercial customers.

Now, as economic reports come in for July, it appears the Fed has exactly what it wants: The most recent data suggests the economy has rebounded a bit from sluggishness in the April-June quarter.

The Fed's index of industrial production rose in July after falling the two previous months. And, in a sign that the recent drop in interest rates was working, new-home construction rebounded in June and July from four consecutive monthly declines.

Meanwhile, inflation, which from January through May soared at the worst rate in seven years, fell back.

2 men accused of plotting to molest, kill boy for pornographic videotape

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Two Virginia men are under arrest, accused of plotting to kidnap a boy to be tortured and killed in a pornographic videotape, officials said Monday.

U.S. Attorney Henry Hudson identified the two as Dean Ashley Lambey, 34, of Richmond, and Daniel Depew, 28, of Alexandria.

The child through a group of people," Hudson said.

Authorities said the boy was to be held for up to two weeks — while being videotaped — and then killed.

Lambey was arrested in Richmond while Depew was arrested in the Washington, D.C., area, Hudson said.

He said police put the pair under 24-hour surveillance immediately upon learning of the plan to make sure that a kidnapping could not be accomplished.

Hudson said the California officers traveled to Virginia as part of their investigation.

Both were charged with conspiracy to kidnap, according to Wil Garrett, an FBI spokesman for the agency's Richmond field office. They were being held without bail pending indictment by a grand jury, Hudson said.

Authorities said no kidnapping took place.

Hudson and FBI Special Agent W. Douglas Gow said the investigation leading up to the Aug. 14 arrests was begun by the San Jose, Calif., police department.

Depew is alleged to have told undercover officers that he intended to use his house in Richmond to make the video, officials said. Hudson said federal officials are filing a court request to seize the house.

Hudson said over 100 FBI agents from California, Virginia and the District of Columbia eventually took part in the investigation, as well as officers from the Chesterfield County, Va., police department.

Czechoslovakian police arrest protestors

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Riot police arrested dozens of people from a crowd of about 3,000 who defied a ban on demonstrations marking Monday's 21st anniversary of the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Police beat some of those marching through the center of old Prague and chanting demands for freedom and the withdrawal of Soviet troops who in 1968 crushed the kind of reform the protesters are seeking.

The two-hour rally started about 5 p.m. when a group of Hungarian youths unfurled a banner saying, "The Bolsheviks came with tanks, we come with flowers." "Gorbachev sees this!" the crowd shouted mockingly as riot police moved in on a crowd that rallied around a member of Hungary's youth opposition group, FIDESZ.

"You must know that Hungarian youth never agreed with the invasion!" he shouted to applause and chants of "Long live Hungary!"

Burly plainclothes police barged through the crowd and detained the Hungarian, identified by Czechoslovak activists as Gyogyery Kenery.

As they moved from central Wenceslas Square to Old Town Square and the federal government headquarters, where they were turned back by police, the demonstrators chanted "Long live Poland!" and "Russians go home!"

They also shouted support for Alexander Dubcek, the leader of the "Prague Spring" reforms crushed by the 1968 invasion.

Last year, 10,000 people marched for Prague for hours with similar chants. This year, authorities had warned against demonstrations, harassing and detaining leading dissidents and mounting a tight security operation for the past two days in Prague.

Bandits kill conservationist

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Bandits killed conservationist George Adamson near his bush camp, the government said Monday, nine years after the violent death of his wife, Joy, who wrote the touching story of Elsa the lioness in "Born-Free".

Adamson, 83, was slain when Somali bandits who attacked three of his assistants opened fire on his vehicle with automatic weapons as he tried to run them down, said Richard Leakey, Kenya's director of wildlife. Two of his assistants also were killed.

The Adamsons helped popularize wildlife conservation. Joy Adamson propelled them to fame with the books "Born-Free," "Living-Free" and "Forever Free," describing their practice of taking lions born in captivity, teaching them to survive and releasing them into the wild.

Aoun offers talks but gets no response

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gen. Michel Aoun offered Monday to talk peace, but there was no response from the Syrians, with whom his Christian army units are locked in a 5-month-old artillery war that has killed hundreds of civilians.

Moslems responded angrily to French naval movements in the eastern Mediterranean, and the Shiite Muslim captors of two American hostages threatened to kill them if France took military action.

"I am ready anytime to discuss Lebanon's future at a round table with leaders of the other side," the Christian general said in an interview published by the Arabic magazine Koll el-Arab, based in Paris. His press office confirmed its accuracy.

Aoun did not mention his previous condition that Christian-Muslim negotiations on political reforms, after 14 years of civil war could not be held until Syria withdrew its 40,000 soldiers.

Walid Jumblatt, the Druze chief-tain allied with Syria, rejected the offer as a "trick to allow Aoun a breathing spell to rearm and marshal his forces."

Jumblatt accused the French of seeking "to kindle a new Crusaders' war in Lebanon. France ruled Lebanon by mandate until 1943."

Israeli army denies killing Palestinian

JERUSALEM (AP) — The army said Monday its troops were not involved in the death of a 14-year-old Palestinian-American, whose body was found last week near the West Bank town of Ramallah.

The family of the youth, Amjad Jibril-Tawil, alleged he was in a rmy custody after a stone-throwing incident Wednesday and that his body was found Friday with bruises, burn marks and a fatal bullet wound in the chest.

Bethlehem Mayor Elias Freij said he has filed a complaint with Israeli authorities over the death of another Palestinian youth, who allegedly was shot and killed Saturday in his town by security forces masquerading as tourists.

Also Monday, Arab reports said one Palestinian was killed in a clash with soldiers and another died after being shot from a passing car.

Concrete wedge crushes worker

CALAIS, France (AP) — A young worker died of injuries suffered when he was crushed by a giant wedge of concrete during construction of the English Channel tunnel, officials said Monday.

Guy Joly died at Calais Hospital during surgery Sunday after being pulled from the worksite 2½ miles below the surface of the English Channel.

Rescue workers had reached Joly, 29, about 15 minutes after the accident, according to the tunnel contractor, TransmancheLink.

Sunday night scuffle leaves two injured

TWIN FALLS - Police are investigating a running gun battle that left two men injured Sunday night.

According to police reports, some men who had been drinking for about an hour drove their Bronco into a driveway at 217 Washington St. S. The driver, whose name isn't known, yelled at the house's occupants to fight.

Several men came out of the house and one man in the Bronco started firing a shotgun, according to police reports. Another man began shooting a pistol at the Bronco.

Benji Jasso, 19, of Twin Falls was shot in the chest with a shotgun. Eleazar Ruiz, 23, of Twin Falls, was shot in the foot, according to reports.

Twin Falls council to seek money for new bridge

TWIN FALLS - The City Council voted unanimously Monday to seek a $800,000 Idaho Community Development Block Grant to help build a bridge across Rock Creek Canyon.

The $1.4 million bridge would connect Sixth Avenue West and Victory Avenue. The city has also applied to the Economic Development Agency for a $700,000 grant.

Several truckers, worried that threatened lower weight limits on the Singing Bridge would require costly detours to reach the city's industrial park, spoke in favor of the new bridge as an alternate route.

"That bridge is very, very vital," said Cotton Crumbliss, president of Twin Falls Truck & Equipment Inc., which sends 15-18 trucks across the Singing Bridge every day.

City pool, Dierkes Lake final schedules released

TWIN FALLS - The Twin Falls Department of Parks and Recreation has announced its end-of-season schedule for the city pool and Dierkes Lake.

The pool is now open from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. on weekdays and 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays.

Starting Aug. 31, the pool will be open from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. weekdays and 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. weekends and Labor Day. No closing day has been set for the pool. Parks Director Chad Browning said it will be determined by the weather and how many swimmers continue to use the pool.

At Dierkes Lake, the lifeguards' last duty on duty will be Sunday. The park will remain open for picnics and other uses.

Coroner decides to go ahead with inquest

BURLEY - A coroner's inquest will be held on the July 7 shooting of a Burley man by law officers.

Chasica County Coroner Paul Young announced the decision to hold the inquest after meeting with Prosecutor Stephen Bywater and Sheriff Billy Crystal.

Modesto Gonzalez, 59, died when three sheriff's deputies and a state policeman shot him. Sheriff's deputies went to Gonzalez' home after a neighbor called about a domestic dispute.

During the 15-minute siege, Gonzalez had fired at officers several times, Crystal said.

Dairy caps off 20-year-old injection well in Jerome

JEROME - The state Department of Water Resources has announced that John and Susan Reitsma have temporarily closed an injection well on their property.

The 20-year-old well had aroused concern among neighbors of John and Susan Reitsma's new dairy near Interstate Highway 84 in Jerome County. Neighbors had worried that dairy wastes might go down the well.

But the Reitsmas insisted they intended to use it only to drain runoff that occasionally entered their property from a neighbor's land.

Jerome teachers, administration deadlocked

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

JEROME - Teachers in Jerome don't want to start school next week without salaries resolved, and their negotiating team is willing to stay up day and night to reach an agreement, union leaders said Monday.

But negotiators must overcome a big hurdle: With the two sides already $50 apart on annual base pay, teachers say they may boost their demand, while school officials say they don't have any more to give.

The Jerome Education Association mailed letters to the board and left a copy at the superintendent's office Monday, inviting the board's professional negotiators, to a meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday in the board room, said Judy Enos, JEA president and fourth-grade Central Intermediate School teacher.

All bargaining sessions are open to the public, she said.

Current teacher contracts expire Sept. 1 and are written to continue until a new contract is settled. So barring a strike - which teachers say they don't intend - school will open as scheduled, regardless of whether negotiations are settled.

The School Board has offered teachers a 3.7 percent raise, which would boost the base to $14,326. But teachers want a 5.5 percent increase, which would bring the base to $14,576.

"The district cannot afford to pay any more... than's... already... offered," Superintendent Richard Kugler said.

"We're no longer in a deficit situation," said Leon Madsen, the union's negotiations spokesman. "It's time to pay the teachers."

Although Madsen complimented Kugler for bringing the district back into the black after being in deficit since 1983, Madsen, * See DEADLOCK on Page B2

People for Pets fill the commissioners' chambers asking the county to help pay for an animal shelter

Humane Society wants county's help

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - County commissioners cocked their ears to a Humane Society request for $30,000 to take care of the county's stray animals, but were skeptical about contributing this year.

"I don't think we'll come up with the kind of dollars they're talking about," said Commissioner Marvin Hempleman.

About 30 people packed the County Commissioner's tiny chambers Monday as the People for Pets Humane Society asked for funds for a county-wide animal control program.

They asked commissioners to consider the city's animal shelter and $13,000 for an estimated 1,000 county animals brought to the city building.

The organization also asked the county to pay one-half of the animal control officer's salary, or $8,892.

The city would pay the other half of the animal shelter remodeling, said City Manager Tom Courtney.

Instead of the county's practice of shooting stray dogs on the spot, the Humane Society wants dogs and cats held long enough for animals to be adopted, retrieved by owners or humanely destroyed.

The Humane Society estimates the shelter should hold the animals about five days, said Laurie Simonds, Humane Society president.

But Hempleman said if the county does contribute anything this year, it will likely be on a per-dog basis and only for the state-mandated three-day holding period.

The Humane Society has proposed taking over operation of the city's animal pound and administering it with city and county funds. But the county may have a problem with giving money to the Humane Society, Hempleman said.

It is unlikely that the commissioners would contribute money directly to the Humane Society, which is a charitable organization, he said.

He said the county has a policy of not giving money to charitable groups.

Before, the county makes a funding commitment to the Humane Society, it would like to have a concrete figure of

Air Force in town, hearing dates set

By N. S. NOKKENTVED

TWIN FALLS - Military developments are "threatening to envelop the Magic Valley," state Sen. Laird Noh said Monday.

"We're caught in the middle," the Kimberly Republican said at a meeting between the Twin Falls county commissioners and Lt. Col. Jim Cooper.

To the west the Air Force is proposing to expand its Saylor Creek Bombing Range, and to the east the federal Energy Department is gearing up to produce nuclear weapons material at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

The Magic Valley derives little of the economic benefit from either installation yet would bear a portion of the cost if things should go wrong, Noh explained after the meeting.

The expansion would insure a military presence in Idaho for many years to come, said Noh, chairman of the Senate Resources and Environment Committee. Any ill effects may not be immediate, but they may follow future developments or current activities the government isn't talking about, he said.

The expansion would mean a financial boon to the Mountain Home area, as the Air Force plans to spend more than $100 million over the next few years, Cooper told county commissioners.

Public hearings on the Air Force bombing range proposal are scheduled in early September. A Twin Falls hearing has been set for 7:30 p.m. Sept. 6, but the location has not yet been decided.

The expansion plans would increase the bombing range 15-fold to about 1.4 million acres, and parts of the range would be used for live bombs and missiles.

The Air Force's intent is to accomplish that expansion with "minimum impact" on the people who now use the area, Cooper said.

But Chet Brackett, a Three Creek rancher, said at the meeting, "they're asking for more than they need."

The area of the proposed expansion is Idahoans air views on highway system's future

By MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Shifting focus from east-west routes to north-south ones should be the new direction of the federal highway system, said witnesses at a U.S. Senate transportation hearing here Monday.

Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, presided over a hearing of the Senate Subcommittee on Water Resources, Transportation and Infrastructure to hear how Westerners want to spend federal tax money that was previously spent on interstate highway construction.

The interstate highway system is almost complete, and in 1991 Congress will adjust funding priorities.

Maintaining the existing interstate system should be the top priority, all the witnesses agreed.

"Everyone pretty well agrees on maintenance of the current system," Symms said. But Idahoans said they also want attention directed to north-south systems.

Interstate 84, which runs east-west across Southern Idaho, has greatly improved mobility along its route, said Kent Just, executive vice president of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce.

"However, our most important markets are those in California, which means our truckers must travel Highway 93 to Wells, Nev., to catch I-80."

"Highway 93 cannot adequately handle the current traffic demand and will see even greater pressure in the future," Just said.

"Better roads between here and Wells, Nev., are critical," Symms agreed.

An improved north-south route would also make getting farm commodities to Lewiston, Idaho's only port, easier and cheaper, said David Bivens, Idaho Farm Bureau Federation public affairs director.

Expanded support for primary and rural state roads was also cited as an important priority.

"The railroads in our country are being removed and are scheduled for abandonment," said Ralph Peters of Jerome, president of the Association of Idaho Cities and a state legislator.

Three-fourths of Idaho's communities depend exclusively on trucks for shipping,

No more waste

Andrus says borders are closed for good

By N. S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Idaho isn't going to take it anymore.

The state has accepted its last shipment of radioactive waste for "temporary" storage at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, Gov. Cecil D. Andrus said in a Monday telephone press conference.

"We've done our share, and now the borders are closed," Andrus said.

INEL has received 12 boxes of long-lived radioactive waste, two a month, since Andrus relaxed his October 1988 ban on further waste shipments into the state.

"The ban won't affect INEL operations, he said. "But Idaho is through being the repository for waste from other sites."

The governor focused national attention on the country's mounting defense waste problem when he closed the state's borders to the transuranic waste shipments that have been coming in a steady stream from federal nuclear weapons plants since 1954.

300 line up for 10 job openings

By MARTA CLEAVELAND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - In spite of a rock-bottom Magic Valley unemployment rate, about 300 people showed up Monday to apply for 10 jobs at Longview Fibre Co.'s Twin Falls plant.

At 8 a.m., a line of applicants stretched out the door of the Twin Falls Job Service and halfway down the block, said Mary Joe Cahill, Job Service employment supervisor.

"When an ad offers $8.21 an hour for a full-time, permanent job, this is a normal occurrence," Cahill said.

"The Job Service turned away about 200 people who didn't even get to fill out applications.

"I was looking for only 40 to 50 applications," said Duane Laird, Longview's personnel manager. "They gave us 100 and we cut it off there."

Laird ran an ad for people to work in the company's box plant because, after reading about tightening local labor market, he didn't think the Job Service and word of mouth would be able to supply him with enough good applicants.

The area's unemployment rate was 4.5 percent in July, and Cahill said a labor shortage does exist for part-time, minimum-wage jobs.

"Folks just are not taking those jobs," she said.

Laird thinks he will need only 10 new workers when the box plant's peak season begins with the potato harvest in a few weeks. The factory currently has 116 employees.

CSI may get extra state money

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — With an enrollment increase expected this fall and a record number of summer students, the College of Southern Idaho may be entitled to some extra state money this year.

The college will be applying for about $65,000 in "work-load adjustment" money along with increased funding for maintenance and educational equipment, faculty salaries and for help with "outcome assessment" — the tracking of graduates.

President Gerald Meyerhoeffer told the board the college will present its case for the funds to the State Board of Education in mid-September.

The same kind of requests recently netted the school new library books and paid for paving costs of some of the campus streets.

Enrollment this summer was up 18.6 percent over last summer, for a total of 770 students. And Meyerhoeffer said all signs point to a jump in enrollment for fall courses as well.

"It's very difficult to tell you what to expect as far as enrollment, but there have been a lot more requests for admission and for financial aid," he said.

Meyerhoeffer said he'd like to see enrollment hold because "things are tight right now." Five new faculty members have been hired to help with the expected crunch.

The board also voted to ask Jerome and Twin Falls counties for about $100,000 more than last year, in case market values increase and

Connie pays off last debt; George still in the red from '84 campaign

BOISE (AP) — Connie Hansen, the wife of the former seven-term southern Idaho congressman, has finally closed the books on her unsuccessful 1986 congressional bid, but her husband George still has a huge debt from his losing race two years earlier.

But George Hansen, who fell less than 200 votes short of winning an eighth term despite his conviction on four felony counts of falsifying financial disclosure statements, continued reporting a debt from that 1984 loss to Stallings of nearly $33,000.

The report, covering financial transactions through June 30, showed Hansen raising no money during the first half of the year and spending only $55 to cover bank account charges.

His outstanding debts were still to a Pocatello advertising company and accounting firm, the state Republican Party and Joyce Ward of Almo.

Also filed with the secretary of state on Monday was the annual financial disclosure statement of Republican Sen. Steve Symms.

The statement, covering the Republican's financial status at the end of 1988, again put Symms' assets at between $450,000 and more than $745,000 and his debts at between $80,000 and $200,000.

He reported additional assets in the name of his estranged wife Frances of between $16,000 and $60,000. The statement does not require members of Congress to provide specific values but only categorize financial holdings within broad ranges. The highest range is above $250,000, where Symms ranked his interest in the family fruit ranch in Canyon County.

Waste

Transuranic waste is waste contaminated with plutonium or other man-made radioactive heavy metals.

The federal government has been telling Idaho officials since 1970 it would move the nearly 5 million cubic feet of waste, buried and stored above-ground, to a permanent disposal site.

When the Energy Department failed to meet the most recent in a long string of opening dates the Waste Isolation—Pilot Project, Andrus closed the border out of frustration with broken promises, he said.

In February, Andrus relented. Swayed by an argument that waste piling up at Colorado's Rocky Flats site threatened closure of the vital defense plant, he agreed to accept 12 more railroad boxcars of waste, which the department tried to solve the problems blocking the opening of WIPP.

The 12th boxcar arrived at INEL Friday. But WIPP, the transuranic repository carved out of salt deposits more than 2,000 feet below the desert, still has not opened. The earliest possible opening is March, Andrus said.

"Idaho is through being the repository for such waste," the governor said. "We have done more than our share. It's somebody else's turn."

In fact, the government is looking for someplace else to store its nuclear debris.

Andrus said federal officials have repeatedly assured him the government will seek locations other than Idaho if Rocky Flats runs out of storage space and WIPP remains unopened.

Energy Secretary James Watkins "has given his assurance that we will not be pressed to take anymore," he said.

Even if the government revives its national security argument and threatens to force Idaho to resume taking waste, Andrus said, the state would resort to the courts to tie that move for years.

who teaches high school math, said teachers have carried the burden of the deficit by agreeing to take less pay and to work with fewer classroom materials.

Madsen said the union only recently discovered the district was out of the red when it looked at the district's audit from last November.

"If we were still in a deficit, we'd be more sympathetic to the cause," he said.

Madsen said teachers are upset about the way the negotiators have been treating the union at the bargaining table and may ask for even more money from the district because of the hostility surrounding talks.

Teachers wore black arm bands to work Monday in protest.

The union would much rather negotiate with the School Board directly, Madsen said, than with the professional negotiators, Jerry Gates and Randy Bohannon.

The union also contends that the district should have about $85,000 of unspent money that should go for salaries.

Madsen said the district enrolled more students than it had budgeted for, thus receiving an extra $41,000 in state funding. But Kugler said the district used those funds to hire more teacher aides for the crowded classroom.

Madsen also said the state deposited about $44,000 in the district's bank account July 1 from surplus education funds.

Kugler confirmed that Jerome's share of the surplus funds came to about $44,000. He said, however, that since the state doesn't always have a surplus each year for schools, he cannot safely allocate it for salaries.

Kugler said the district has about $28,000 in unappropriated funds. But he said the district is a long way from meeting a recommendation that all districts have enough money on hand to operate for 45 days.

While Enos and Madsen point out that Jerome teachers have the lowest wages in the Magic Valley — the next highest is Gooding with a $15,136 base — Kugler and board Chairman Alvin Chojnacky counter that Jerome teachers also enjoy a fringe benefits pool that adds about $1,800 a year to each teacher's pocket.

"If we compare apples to apples, very few districts are above us in insurance plans and the pool," Chojnacky said.

"We can't complain about our fringe benefits pool," Enos said. "It's one thing that will keep teachers here. But that's in addition to our salary."

used by ranchers to graze 14 million cows and 11,000 sheep, and millions of dollars have been spent on range improvements, said Randall Morris, another Three Creek rancher.

Ranchers are going to be reluctant to spend money on improvements in the future if those improvements can be wiped out by the stroke of a pen, he said.

Cooper said current plans are only proposed, and "nothing is set in concrete yet." Though officials have met with ranchers, no changes will be made in Air Force plans until all interested parties have had a chance to speak, he said.

Brackett said he doesn't trust the Air Force to listen to public opinion. After meeting with cattlemen, the Air Force drew a map of the proposal that placed a high-explosive area directly over a well and other improvements, he said.

Cooper said those improvements would be considered when the final plans for the bombing range are made.

The expansion in Owyhee County would increase the number of aircraft to 117 from the 58 F-111 fighter-bombers currently with the 366th Fighter Wing stationed at Mountain Home Air Force Base, and it would double the activity over the Snake Creek Range.

The base now has 35 F-111As and 23 EF-111A electronic countermeasure planes. Under the Air Force proposal, the 35 F-111As would move to New Mexico, and 94 F-4 Phantom II fighter-bombers would arrive from George Air Force Base in California.

All the planes are capable of supersonic flight, and the Air Force wants to include supersonic air combat training in its new plans. The military airspace currently attached to the Mountain Home base does not allow supersonic flight, Cooper said.

The Air Force seeks to change the Owyhee Military Operations Area to allow supersonic flight from the ground surface to 10,000 feet. Military operations in the area are currently limited to altitudes between 100 feet to 10,000 feet, and only at sub-sonic speeds.

The present range can accommodate 6,500 30-minute training periods a year. But that number is not enough to accommodate all the planes stationed at Mountain Home.

With the 94 F-4s and the 23 EF-111s, training needs would increase to more than 13,000 30-minute periods a year, Cooper said. Range expansion is vital to meet those needs, he said.

county animals that end up in the city's animal shelter, said County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter.

City Public Safety Director Paul DuRene said that would be nearly impossible, because even if a stray dog is brought in from the county it may have wandered out from the city.

"That's why it needs to be a joint project that everyone has to participate in," he said.

Commissioner Jim Fraley said the county would seriously consider the proposals, decide whether it can find any funds for this year and let the Humane Society know later.

"Let us do what we can," he said.

Jack Sherrill, who lives outside city limits on Blue Lakes Boulevard South, said the humane society's proposal is a golden opportunity for the county to begin taking care of its stray animal problem.

"I would like to see you not lose the inertia that the Humane Society has built up," he said.

Former ISU prexy headed south

POCATELLO (AP) — Former Idaho State University President and one-time U.S. Senate candidate William Davis is headed south to become chancellor of Louisiana State University.

Davis, who resigned as head of Oregon's higher education system last year and came up short in his bid to head the University of Idaho this year, will take over at LSU Sept. 1, and he says he already feels like a native son.

"At one time all of the places I lived belonged to Louisiana, and they filtered us away," he said.

LSU has an enrollment of over 25,000 with a strong emphasis on agriculture, forestry and engineering, and challenges lie ahead. The state is under a federal court order to desegregate all of its schools.

Candidates' financial status varies

By ERIC ANDERSON
States News Service

WASHINGTON — Rep. Richard Stallings is the only Idaho lawmaker who faces certain competition in next year's election, had just $16,421 in his campaign war chest as of June 30, federal reports released this month show.

Stallings received $41,117 in contributions during the first half of 1989, but he spent more than $27,000 on advertising, mailing lists, polling and other campaign-related expenses.

Stallings, whose 2nd District is predominantly Republican, faces competition from at least one certain GOP candidate and two possible contenders.

Janet Reid, the only Republican who has announced she will run for the 2nd District, listed a total of $13 in contributions during the first six months of 1989 — the cost of "quilt material," according to her financial disclosure form.

Larry Eastland, a financial consultant from Boise, has "done everything except declare" his intention to run, according to Bill Powers, executive director of the Idaho Republican Central Committee.

Powers said John Scoresby, a political consultant and former Republican regional chairman, is another possible candidate for Stallings' 2nd District seat.

Sen. James McClure, whose third term expires next year, reported $299,491 in his war chest as of June 30, making his one of the poorest campaign funds of the 32 U.S. senators up for re-election in 1990. The Republican senior senator's $182,506 in total campaign receipts for the first half of 1989 was the fourth lowest of any Senate incumbent who faces a race next year.

Although McClure has not revealed whether he will seek re-election, he has set up a campaign office in Boise and begun limited fund raising.

"The groundwork for the campaign is being put in place," said H.D. Palmer, McClure's press secretary, noting that McClure made his last campaign announcement relatively late, in spring 1984.

Powers said it is rumored that McClure will make an announcement next month, adding that there is speculation that he might not run again.

Powers said McClure has put "handcuffs" on his campaign workers, prohibiting high-dollar fund-raising events. "My guess is he probably doesn't want to raise too much money" in the event that he decides to retire, Powers said. Nevertheless, Palmer said the campaign was doing better financially this year than at the same point in the last election.

The senator's early start in fund-raising has been noticed by state Democrats.

"Anybody who would think of running against him would look at the money situation," said Myrna Sasser, executive secretary of the Idaho Democratic Party. Sasser added that any move to challenge McClure is "rather nebulous at this point."

In the event that McClure did not run for re-election, Rep. Larry Craig, R-Midvale, would be a likely candidate for his office, Powers said.

Craig reported just $11,221 cash on hand as of June 30 — a poor campaign coffers even for a House member, who generally needs much less to campaign than a senator. In the first half of this year, the Midvale Republican raised $17,044.

Watkins asks governors to negotiate over nuclear monitoring of facilities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary James D. Watkins on Monday offered to negotiate with 11 governors over state environmental monitoring of federal nuclear facilities within their borders.

The states are California, Florida, Idaho, Missouri, Nevada, New Mexico, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Washington. They are hosts to a variety of Energy Department defense nuclear facilities, including nuclear reactors, processing plants, weapons assembly facilities, and waste treatment and storage operations.

The department said it wanted to reach agreements that would allow the states to independently validate the department's own environmental monitoring data, and to involve the states in setting priorities and schedules for nuclear waste cleanup.

"This further reiterates the commitment of Admiral Watkins ... to achieve full compliance in the area of environment, safety and health and to restore the public's confidence in DOE's ability to operate its facilities safely," said Henson Moore, the deputy energy secretary.

The issue of state monitoring was raised by the governors last spring when they submitted a wide-ranging proposal for handling the federal nuclear facilities within their state.

Idaho officials have already begun their negotiations on the monitoring question with Deputy Health and Welfare Director Dave Humphrey handling talks, Gov. Cecil Andrus' spokesman Marc Johnson said. Humphrey is the governor's point man under state legislation passed last winter initiating an independent monitoring system for the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

"We're entering discussions, and have been discussing, an agreement that spells out just what everybody will do," Johnson said.

Moore said the proposed agreements would be "unprecedented in the history of the federal government's access to DOE facilities that will be provided to the states."

He said the records would be similar to a model agreement signed June 28 by Watkins and Colorado Gov. Roy Romer over state access to the Rocky Flats nuclear plant near Denver.

Washington state also has a formal agreement with the Energy Department on participation on cleanup at the federal Hanford Nuclear Reservation, near Richland.

Moore said the proposed new agreements would supplement any existing agreements, "so that each state is afforded an adequate level of on-site, hands-on monitoring capability."

The Reagan administration had vigorously opposed actions by states to enforce hazardous waste laws at defense nuclear facilities, but President Bush has taken a more accommodating approach in the wake of disclosures about mismanagement and possible criminal violations of environmental laws at some of the plants.

Two arrested on high-tech conspiracy allegations

PHOENIX (AP) — The U.S. Customs Service arrested a West German and an Afghan here Monday for allegedly conspiring to export a sophisticated military computer to the Soviet Union.

The arrests of German national Egbert Parteusis, 46, and Abdul Aziz Ahmad, 40, capped an eight-month investigation into what Thomas McDermott, special agent in charge, said was a "significant case."

He said the investigation would continue.

"The technology is such that it's being sought by the Soviet bloc and there are people attempting to obtain it in this country for them," McDermott said.

Parteusis was in the United States on a visitor's visa, while Ahmad was a resident alien living in Alexandria, Va.

Authorities said they did not have the whereabouts of the two.

Customs spokesman Charles Conroy said agents believe that Parteusis, Ahmad and Hady Azimi, who remained in West Germany, conspired to purchase and export a digital equipment VAX 8820 mainframe computer, which requires a validated export license from the U.S. Department of Commerce.

The VAX 8820 has military capabilities and is not eligible for licensed export to Soviet bloc countries.

Ultralight crash injures pilot

SPOKANE (AP) — An ultralight aircraft crashed into a house north of Spokane, seriously injuring the pilot who apparently was trying to make an emergency landing.

Rd Haynes, 29, of Spokane, was listed in serious condition Monday at Deaconess Medical Center with chest, hip and spinal injuries.

Haynes' ultralight crashed into the home of Alan Peterson and Lois Kieffaber early Sunday, said Lt. Norm Nickerson of the Spokane County sheriff's department.

Peterson said he and his wife were awakened by the crash when the ultralight hit the eave of their house, and they found the injured pilot lying in the aircraft wreckage on their patio.

"He was pretty banged up, and appeared to be in a lot of pain," Peterson said.

tries, Conroy said. McDermott said the men initially paid $28,000 to agents working undercover for an IBM computer with military applications and shipped it to West Germany.

"At that purchase they came forward with the deposit to purchase the VAX 882 and gave an initial deposit. Then last Thursday they came forward with the balance of the $696,000," McDermott said.

Parteusis and Ahmad were arrested at an export company called East-West Supply, which agents had set up about nine months ago as a storefront for undercover operations, he said.

McDermott said the transactions were conducted in Phoenix because the city is becoming a hub for the electronics industry. He said all transactions were recorded on audio and visual tape.

CSI may get extra state money

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - With an enrollment increase expected this fall and a record number of summer students, the College of Southern Idaho may be entitled to some extra state money this year.

The college will be applying for about $85,000 in "work-load adjustment" money along with increased funding for maintenance and educational equipment, faculty salaries and for help with "outcome assessment" - the tracking of graduates.

President Gerald Meyerhoeffer told the board the college will present its case for the funds to the State Board of Education in mid-September.

"The same kind of requests recently netted the school new library books, and paid for paying costs of some of the campus streets.

Enrollment this summer was up 18.6 percent over last summer, for a total of 770 students. And Meyerhoeffer said all signs point to a jump in enrollment for fall courses as well.

"It's very difficult to tell you what to expect as far as enrollment, but there have been a lot more requests for admission and for financial aid," he said.

Meyerhoeffer said he'd like to see enrollment hold because "things are right right now." Five new faculty members have been hired to help with the expected crunch.

The board also voted to ask Jerome and Twin Falls counties for about $100,000 more than last year, in case market values increase and the counties collect more tax money than last year. CSI is entitled to 18 of all Twin Falls and Jerome county property tax money. Last year the college received $2.6 million from the two counties, which make up the college's taxing district.

In other business, the board:

- Approved a lease-payment plan with IBM for 25 computers and other hardware to expand present computer or lab facilities. CSI will pay $2,000 now and a balance of about $15,550 in July 1991.
- Heard a report that all 25 registered nursing students passed the state test.
- Heard a report from Meyerhoeffer that the school's new automated phone system was unbooked last week because of problems that are being fixed.

Connie pays off last debt; George still in the red from '84 campaign

BOISE (AP) - Connie Hanson, the wife of the former seven-term southern Idaho congressman, has finally closed the books on her unsuccessful 1986 congressional bid, but her husband George still has a huge debt from his losing race two years earlier.

Federal campaign finance disclosure statements, filed Monday with the secretary of state, showed Mrs. Hansen paid off the last $5,700 in debt rolled up during the 1986 primary in January and February. She finished a surprising, but distant, second to Republican nominee Mel Richardson, who went on to be defeated by incumbent Democrat Richard Stallings.

Mrs. Hansen, who spent about $55,000 on the campaign to reclaim the seat her husband lost two years earlier, paid the final bills from her own pocket.

But George Hanson, who fell less than 200 votes short of winning an eighth term despite his conviction on four felony counts of falsifying financial disclosure statements, continued reporting a debt from that 1984 loss to Stallings of nearly $33,000.

The report, covering financial transactions through June 30, showed Hansen raising no money during the first half of the year and spending only $56 to cover bank account charges.

His outstanding debts were still to a Focattello advertising company and accounting firm, the state Republican Party and Joyce Ward of Almo.

Also filed with the secretary of state on Monday was the annual financial disclosure statement of Republican Sen. Steve Symms.

The statement, covering the Republican's financial status at the end of 1988, again put Symms' assets at between $450,000 and more than $745,000 and his debts at between $89,000 and $200,000.

He reported additional assets in the name of his estranged wife Frances of between $16,000 and $60,000. The statement does not require members of Congress to provide specific values but only categorize financial holdings within broad ranges. The highest range is above $250,000, where Symms ranked his interest in the family fruit ranch in Canyon County.

Waste

Transuranic waste is waste contaminated with plutonium or other man-made radioactive heavy metals.

The federal government has been telling Idaho officials since 1970 it would move the nearly 5 million cubic feet of waste buried and stored above-ground, to a permanent disposal site.

When the Energy Department failed to meet the most recent in a long string of opening dates the Waste Isolation Pilot Project, Andrus closed the border out of frustration with broken promises, he said.

In February, Andrus related: Swayed by an argument that waste piling up at Colorado's Rocky Flats site threatened closure of the vital defense plant, he agreed to accept 12 more railroad box-cars of waste, while the department tried to solve the problems blocking the opening of WIPP.

The 12th boxcar arrived at INEL Friday, but WIPP, the transuranic repository carved out of salt deposits more than 2,000 feet below the desert, still has not opened. The earliest possible opening is March, Andrus said.

"Idaho is through being the repository for such waste," the governor said. "We have done more than our share. It's somebody else's turn."

In fact, the government is looking for someplace else to store its nuclear debris.

Andrus said federal officials have repeatedly assured him the government will seek locations other than Idaho if Rocky Flats runs out of storage space and, WIPP remains unopened.

Energy Secretary James Watkins has given his assurance that we will not be pressed to take anymore," he said.

"Even if the government revives its national security argument and threatens to force Idaho to resume taking waste, Andrus said, the state would resort to the courts to tie up that move for years.

who teaches high school math, said teachers have carried the burden of the deficit by agreeing to take less pay and to work with fewer classroom materials.

Madsen said the union only recently discovered the district was out of the red when it looked at the district's audit for last November.

"If we were still in a deficit, we'd be more sympathetic to the cause," he said.

Madsen said teachers are upset about the way the negotiators have been treating the union at the bargaining table and may ask for even more money from the district because of the hostility surrounding talks.

Teachers work black arm bands to work Monday in protest.

The union would much rather negotiate with the School Board directly, Madsen said, than with the professional negotiators, Jerry Gates and Randy Bohannon.

The union also contends that the district should have about $55,000 of unspent money that should go for salaries.

Madsen said the district enrolled more students than it had budgeted for, thus receiving an extra $41,000 in state funding. But Kugler said the district used those funds to hire more teacher aides for the crowded classrooms.

Madsen also said the state deposited about $44,000 in the district's bank account July 1 from surplus education funds.

Kugler confirmed that Jerome's share of the surplus funds came to about $44,000. He said, however, that since the state doesn't always have a surplus each year for schools, he cannot safely allocate it for salaries.

Kugler said the district has about $28,000 in unappropriated funds. But he said the district is a long way from meeting a recommendation that all districts have enough money on hand to operate for 45 days.

While Enos and Madsen point out that Jerome teachers have the lowest wages in the Magic Valley - the next highest is Gooding with a $15,136 base - Kugler and board Chairman Alvin Chojnacky counter that Jerome teachers also enjoy a fringe benefits pool that adds about $1,800 a year to each teacher's pocket.

"If we compare apples to apples, very few districts are above us in insurance plans and the pool," Chojnacky said.

"We can't complain about our fringe benefits pool," Enos said. "It's one thing that will keep teachers here. But that's in addition to our salary."

used by ranchers to graze 1,500 cows and 11,000 sheep, a million of dollars have been spent on range improvements, said Randall Morris, another Three Creek rancher.

Ranchers are going to be reluctant to spend money on improvements in the future if those improvements can be wiped out by the stroke of a pen, he said.

Cooper said current plans are only proposed, and "nothing is set in concrete yet." Though officials have met with ranchers, no changes will be made in Air Force plans until all interested parties have had a chance to speak, he said.

Brackett said he doesn't trust the Air Force to listen to public opinion. After meeting with cattlemen, the Air Force drew a map of the proposal that placed a high-explosive area directly next to a well and other improvements, he said.

Cooper said those improvements would be considered when the final plans for the bombing range are made.

The expansion in Owyhee County would increase the number of aircraft to 117 from the 63 F-111 fighter-bombers currently with the 355th Fighter Wing stationed at Mountain Home Air Force Base, and it would double the activity over the Saylor Creek Range.

The base now has 35 F-111As and 23 F-117A electronic countermeasure planes. Under the Air Force proposal, the 35 F-111As would move to New Mexico, and 94 F-4 Phantom II fighter-bombers would arrive from George Air Force Base in California.

All the planes are capable of supersonic flight, and the Air Force wants to include supersonic air combat training in its new plans. The military airspace currently attached to the Mountain Home base does not allow supersonic flight, Cooper said.

The Air Force seeks to change the Owyhee Military Operations Area to allow supersonic flight from the ground surface to 10,000 feet. Military operations in the area are currently limited to altitudes between 100 feet to 6,000 feet, and only at sub-sonic speeds.

The present range can accommodate 6,240 30-minute training periods a year. But that number is not enough to accommodate all the planes stationed at Mountain Home.

With the 94 F-4s and the 23 F-117s, training needs would increase to more than 12,000 30-minute periods a year, Cooper said. Range expansion is vital to meet those needs, he said.

county animals that end up in the city's animal shelter, said County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter.

City Public Safety Director Paul Dufresne said there would be nearly any dogs in the county if a stray dog is brought in from the county. It may have wandered out from the city.

That's why it needs to be a joint project that everyone has to participate in," he said.

Commissioner Jim Freley said the county would seriously consider the proposals, decide whether it can find any funds for this year and let the Humane Society know later.

"Let us do what we can," he said.

Jack Sherrill, who lives outside city limits on Blue Lakes Boulevard South, said the humane society's proposal is a golden opportunity for the county to begin taking care of its stray animal problem.

"I would like to see you not lose the inertia that the Humane Society has built up," he said.

That's why it needs to be a joint project that everyone has to participate in," he said.

Former ISU prexy headed south

POCATELLO (AP) - Former Idaho State University President and one-time U.S. Senate candidate William Davis is headed south to become chancellor of Louisiana State University.

Davis, who resigned as head of Oregon's higher education system last year and came up short in his bid to head the University of Idaho this year, will take over at LSU Sept. 1, and he says he already feels like a native son.

"At one time all of the places I lived belonged to Louisiana, and they littered us away," he said.

LSU has an enrollment of over 25,000 with a strong emphasis on agriculture, forestry and engineering, and challenges lie ahead. The state is under a federal court order to desegregate all of its schools.

Candidates' financial status varies

By ERIC ANDERSON
States News Service

WASHINGTON - Rep. Richard Stallings, the only Idaho lawmaker who faces certain competition in next year's election, had just $16,421 in his campaign war chest as of June 30, federal reports released this month show.

Stallings received $41,117 in contributions during the first half of 1989, but he spent more than $27,000 on advertising, mailing lists, polling and other campaign-related expenses.

Stallings, whose 2nd District is predominantly Republican, faces competition from at least one certain GOP candidate and two possible contenders.

Janet Reid, the only Republican who has announced she will run for the 2nd District, listed a total of $13 in contributions during the first six months of 1989 - the cost of "quilt material," according to her financial disclosure form.

Larry Eastland, a financial consultant from Boise, has "done everything except declare" his intention to run, according to Bill Powers, executive director of the Idaho Republican Central Committee.

Powers said John Scoresby, a political consultant and former Republican regional chairman, is another possible candidate for Stallings' 2nd District seat.

Sen. James McClure, whose third term expires next year, reported $298,491 in his war chest as of June 30, making his one of the poorest campaign funds of the 32 U.S. senators up for re-election in 1990. The Republican senior senator's $182,606 in total campaign receipts for the first half of 1989 was the fourth lowest of any Senate incumbent who faces a race next year.

Although McClure, who has not revealed whether he will seek re-election, he has set up a campaign office in Boise and begun limited fund raising.

"The groundwork for the campaign is being put in place," said H.D. Palmer, McClure's press secretary, noting that McClure made his last campaign announcement relatively late, in spring 1984.

Powers said it is rumored that McClure will make an announcement next month, adding that there is speculation that he might not run again.

Powers said McClure has put "handcuffs" on his campaign workers, prohibiting high-dollar fund-raising events. "My guess is he probably doesn't want to raise too much money in the event that he decides to retire," Powers said.

Nevertheless, Palmer said the campaign was doing better financially this year than at the same point in the last election.

"The senator's early start in fund-raising has been noticed" by state Democrats.

"Anybody who would think of running against him would look at the money situation," said Myron Sasser, executive secretary of the Idaho Democratic Party. Sasser added that any move to challenge McClure is "rather nebulous at this point."

In the event that McClure did not run for re-election, Rep. Larry Craig, R-Midvale, would be a likely candidate for his office, Powers said.

Craig reported just $11,221 cash on hand as of June 30 - a poor campaign coffers even for a House member, who generally needs much less to campaign than a senator. In the first half of this year, the Midvale Republican raised $17,044.

Watkins asks governors to negotiate over nuclear monitoring of facilities

WASHINGTON (AP) - Energy Secretary James D. Watkins on Monday offered to negotiate with 11 governors over state environmental monitoring of federal nuclear facilities within their borders.

The states are California, Florida, Idaho, Missouri, Nevada, New Mexico, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Washington. They are hosts to a variety of Energy Department defense nuclear facilities, including nuclear reactors, processing plants, weapons assembly facilities, and waste treatment and storage operations.

The department said it wanted to reach agreements that would allow the states to independently validate the department's own environmental monitoring data, and to involve the states in setting priorities and schedules for nuclear waste cleanup.

This further reiterates the commitment of Admiral Watkins... to achieve full accountability in the areas of environment, safety and health and to restore the public's confidence in DOE's ability to operate its facilities safely," said Henson Moore, the deputy energy secretary.

The issue of state monitoring was raised by the governors last spring when they submitted a wide-ranging proposal for handling the federal nuclear facilities within their states. Idaho officials have already begun their negotiations on the monitoring question with Deputy Health and Welfare Director Dave Humphrey handling talks, Gov. Cecil Andrus' spokesman Marc Johnson said. Humphrey is the governor's point man under state legislation passed last winter initiating an independent monitoring system for the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

"We're entering discussions, and have been discussing, an agreement that spells out just what everybody will do," Johnson said.

Moore said the proposed agreements would be "unprecedented in their scope and in the degree of access to DOE facilities that will be provided to the states."

He said the accords would be similar to a model agreement signed June 28 by Watkins and Colorado Gov. Roy Romer over state access to the Rocky Flats nuclear plant near Denver.

Washington state also has a formal agreement with the Energy Department on participation on cleanup at the federal Hanford Nuclear Reservation, near Richland.

Moore said the proposed new agreements would supplement any existing accords, "so that each state is afforded an adequate level of on-site, hands-on monitoring capability."

The Reagan administration had vigorously opposed actions by states to enforce hazardous waste laws at defense nuclear facilities, but President Bush has taken a more accommodating approach in the wake of disclosures about mismanagement and possible criminal violations of environmental laws at some of the plants.

Two arrested on high tech conspiracy allegations

PHOENIX (AP) - The U.S. Customs Service arrested a West German and an Afghan here Monday for allegedly conspiring to export a sophisticated military computer to the Soviet Union.

The arrests of German national Egbert Parteusis, 46, and Abdul Aziz Ahmad, 40, capped an eight-month investigation into what Thomas McDermott, special agent in charge, said was a "significant case."

He said the investigation would continue.

"The technology is such that it's being sought by the Soviet Bloc and there are people attempting to obtain it in this country for them," McDermott said.

Parteusis was in the United States on a visitor's visa, while Ahmad was a resident alien living in Alexandria, Va.

Authorities said they did not have the home towns of the two.

Customs spokesman Charles Conroy said agents believe that Parteusis, Ahmad and Hady Asimi, who remained in West Germany, conspired to purchase and export a digital equipment VAX 8820 mainframe computer, which requires a validated export license from the U.S. Department of Commerce.

The VAX 8820 has military capabilities and is not eligible for licensed export to Soviet bloc countries.

Ultralight crash injures pilot

SPOKANE (AP) - An ultralight aircraft crashed into a house north of Spokane, seriously injuring the pilot who apparently was trying to make an emergency landing.

Ed Haynes, 29, of Spokane, was held in serious condition Monday at Deaconess Medical Center with chest, hip and spinal injuries.

Haynes' ultralight crashed into the home of Alan Peterson and Lois Kitchener early Sunday, said Lt. Norri Nickerson of the Spokane County sheriff's department.

Peterson said he and his wife were awakened by the crash when the ultralight hit the eave of their house, and they found the injured pilot lying in the aircraft wreckage on their patio.

He was pretty banged up, and appeared to be in a lot of pain," Peterson said.

McDermott said the men initially paid $28,000 to agents working undercover for an IBM computer with military applications and shipped it to West Germany.

"At that purchase they came forward with the deposit to purchase the VAX 882 and gave an initial deposit. Then last Thursday they came forward with the balance of the $696,000," McDermott said.

Parteusis and Ahmad were arrested at an export company called East-West Supply, which agents had set up about nine months ago as a storefront for undercover operations, he said.

McDermott said the transactions were conducted in Phoenix because the city is becoming a hub for the electronics industry. He said all transactions were recorded on audio and visual tape.

West Forensic office gets new home

POCATELLO (AP) — The state Bureau of Forensic Services' Pocatello office is open for business despite the extra work of settling into a new home.

Donald Wyckoff, head of the bureau's Pocatello crime laboratory, said the lab is fully operational four weeks after its cross-town move.

To show off the new lab at 209 E. Lewis St., the Department of Law Enforcement scheduled an open house through today from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Pocatello lab handles 800 to 700 cases each year, primarily analyzing hairs and fibers, body fluids and drugs.

The lab is one of three in Idaho, the other two being in Boise and Coeur d'Alene. Each has a primary coverage area, but all staffers are available statewide. The Pocatello lab mainly serves the 18-county area east of Twin Falls and Ketchikan.

He and Susan Williamson are the Pocatello lab's criminalists, the scientific experts who do the tests and interpret the results. A secretary-evidence technician completes the staff. The state employs three criminalists in the northern Idaho lab and six in Boise.

The move to the former Pocatello City Hall doubled the lab's space and gave it something hard to find in an existing building — two walk-in vaults for evidence storage.

Silver Valley group wants federal help

KELLOGG (AP) — Residents have questions about the effects of lead contamination on northern Idaho's Silver Valley, so a citizens' group has applied for a federal grant to hire someone to answer them.

"We need information that will help people day-to-day on how to live in a toxic dump," Lauren Wiley, organizer of the Silver Valley Community Coalition, said in a recent interview.

The silver mining valley is contaminated by lead and other heavy metals spewed during years of smelting operations.

Wiley's group has applied to the federal Environmental Protection Agency for a technical assistance grant of as much as $50,000 to hire an adviser to answer residents' concerns about living in the 21-square-mile Superfund cleanup site.

As part of its lead mitigation project, the EPA is removing the lead-contaminated soil and topsoil of about 70 residential yards this summer and replacing it with "clean" dirt and grass.

Archaeologists dig up campsite

ROCK SPRINGS, Wyo. (AP) — Archaeologists from Western Wyoming College are excavating a campsite believed to have been used up to 1,900 years ago by prehistoric Wyoming residents.

Excavation at the "Mayfly Site" about 10 miles south of Fontenelle Dam, named for the mayflies swarming the area, has resulted in the discovery of arrowpoints, obsidian flakes and a number of stones that may have been used to line fire pits or to heat soups.

In addition, nine hearths have been found at the site, which is being examined in an effort to determine how the people who used the site may have lived.

The work is being conducted by archaeologists from Western Wyoming College Archaeological Services for Western Gas Processors.

Search continues for Pocatello man

AMERICAN FALLS (AP) — Power County authorities resumed their search Monday for a Pocatello man who failed to surface after jumping into the Snake River to retrieve his fishing rod near the American Falls Dam.

The Sheriff's Department said Craig Honas, 21, was with a group on Sunday when a bird became tangled in his fishing line, pulling the rod into the water. Honas dived in to retrieve his gear and did not come back up.

Rescue crews, including divers, searched the river throughout the day on Sunday with no success.

Legal advice is a bunch of bull

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is off on a two-week vacation, but she left behind some of her favorite letters taken from her best-selling book, "The Best of Dear Abby.")

DEAR ABBY: Our 15-year-old, 3-foot, 200-pound son got a girl from a neighboring farm into trouble. She is also 15. We gave him strict orders to stay away from her, but it seems he didn't. Her people claim it's our fault.

I talked with a judge in the city, and he said there is a law that says if a man owns a bull, he is responsible for keeping the bull locked up. And if the bull gets loose and goes into a neighbor's pasture and breeds his dairy heifers, the owners of the heifers can't sue for damages because they should have kept their heifers locked up. My friend, the judge, says the same law applies to people. Do we have a case?

—OHIO FARMER

DEAR FARMER: A man's son is not a bull; neither is his neighbor's daughter a heifer. I can't practice law, but I think your friend, the judge, gave you a bum steer. DEAR ABBY: I am employed at a very large convalescent home. One of the elderly residents here lost her dentures, so with a pillow case in hand, she crept into the rooms of the other occupants while they were sleeping and picked up every pair of false teeth from the water glasses. She then returned to her room and tried each set until she found one that fit her. Then she anxiously returned the sets of teeth to any water glass.

The next morning, everyone was walking around the place with overblies and underling jaws, complaining bitterly that their dentures didn't fit! How do we straighten out this mess? Or must we buy new dentures for 100 residents?

DENTURE DILEMMA

DEAR DILEMMA: Call in a dentist and ask him to examine the mouth of the patients and the dentures, in order to return them to their rightful owners. (P.S. Denture-marking kits are available. Get one and use it, before another tooth thief gums up the works again.)

DEAR ABBY: I am 22 and Mike is 26. We've been married a little over a year, and I have a problem I can't ask anyone else about.

Mike has a big appetite for sex, but I'm not complaining. It's his timing that bothers me. He always wants to make love on Sunday morning before Mass. Abby, I know that married love is not a sin, but for some silly reason I just hate to go to Mass right after having sex. Lately I have been putting my husband off. But I feel guilty about that.

Do you think I should postpone the lovemaking until after Mass? Or keep telling myself I have no reason to feel guilty about it, and just try to get over that feeling? What's wrong with me?

—MAGGIE IN MANHATTAN

DEAR MAGGIE: Your problem is rooted in the notion that sex is sinful. You grew up believing it, and even though you're married and there is nothing to feel guilty about, you're still programmed to equate sex with sin. Talk to a priest, or a psychiatrist. (Try a priest first, it's cheaper.)

DEAR ABBY: I've been going steady with this man for six years. We see each other every night. He says he loves me, and I know I love him, but he never mentions marriage. Do you think he's going out with me just for what he can get?

—GERTIE
What's he getting?

Children, parents need to be emotionally set for kindergarten

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Parents who are having trouble coping emotionally with a child going off to kindergarten should share their anxiety and take an active role in the school to become more familiar with the child's surroundings.

Jennifer Birkmayer, a Cornell University professor, says grieving parents faced with remarks that it must be a relief to have the child in school should offer a serious response such as "I'm finding it more difficult than I expected," or "I feel pretty sad about letting her go."

Brief, honest statements like these may elicit sympathetic responses.

While your feelings should not be a burden to your child, it's probably better to share some of them than to have the child worry about you, says Birkmayer, of Cornell's department of human development and family studies. A short, simple statement will suffice: "I know you're going to have a great time at school, but I'll miss you," or "Just a little while ago you were a baby and now you're old enough for kindergarten — I have to work hard, on reminding myself of how grown-up you are."

Parents can also volunteer to help in the classrooms or join committees. As they become more familiar with the school and the people in it the separation of parent and child may not seem so traumatic.

Local director named for 1989 MDA benefit

TWIN FALLS—Shannon Burley has been selected to head local efforts for the 1989 Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA).

The 24th annual Labor Day Telethon will be broadcast by KTVB-TV starting at 8 p.m. Sept. 3, and continuing to 5 p.m., Sept. 4. The 2½ hour extravaganza will originate live from the Cashman Field Center in Las Vegas, and will be carried throughout the country by some 200 "Love Network" stations.

The Labor Day Telethon is MDA's most important annual fund-raising event.

MDA currently sponsors over 600 individual research projects worldwide.

It also supports some 240 outpatient clinics nationwide, where people with any of the 40 neuromuscular disorders covered by MDA programs receive medical care, orthopedic aids and related services.

The MDA clinic serving the local area is located at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise.

Gooden's arm better but not healed yet

NEW YORK (AP) — Tests on right-hander Dwight Gooden's shoulder muscle tears show improvement, but the injury is not completely healed, New York Mets general manager Frank Cashen said Monday.

Cashen said the pitcher will continue to throw on the sidelines and in the bullpen. Gooden will undergo additional testing in two to three weeks to determine if there has been any improvement.

While not expressing any disappointment over the results, the Mets were hoping the tear would be 100 percent healed. Gooden, 34, has been on the disabled list since July 3 after sustaining a torn subscapularis muscle in his right shoulder directly above his arm pit.

"There is progress," Cashen said. "Is it completely healed?"

Not at this point.

Gooden threw in the bullpen on Sunday, including some fastballs, and said he was pain-free.

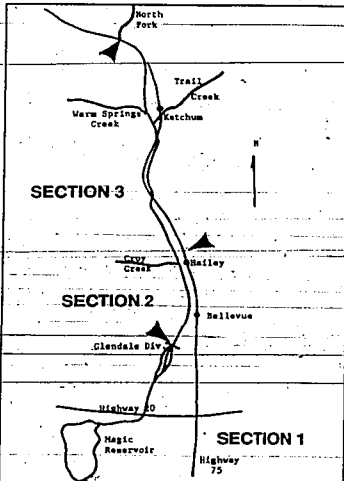

"I feel good," Gooden said. "The toughest part is not being in a game."

Gooden, 100-39 lifetime, had a magnetic resonance imaging test on Friday and the Mets got a second opinion over the weekend.

"We're hopeful," Cashen said. "The signs are good, but we're not out of the woods."

Commission changes Big Wood's regulations

By DAN GALLAGHER
Associated Press Writer

MONTPELIER — The Fish and Game Commission has changed the angling regulations on the Big Wood River for a second time this year, but its decision apparently satisfied neither side in the running battle over the popular central Idaho fishery.

The commission voted on Monday to modify court-blocked regulations it passed last April by adding more than three miles of "slot limit" bait fishing with bait on the river.

Anglers have been sparring over what restrictions should be imposed on the river. Critics of the commission's actions claim outfitters are trying to impose extensive catch-and-release areas to build up the fishery for out-of-state sportsmen at the expense of local bait fishermen.

"The original regulations were never implemented because 8th District Judge Phillip Becker approved a temporary restraining order against them before the Memorial Day weekend opener after a lawsuit was filed by the Big Wood and Silver Creek Sportmen's Association.

The ruling returned the fishing to the pre-April guidelines, mostly general regulations with limited catch-and-release fishing north of Ketchum.

"Nobody's happy," said Commissioner Lou Racine of Pocatello, whose own support for 14 miles of slot limit fishing and 15 miles of catch-and-release.

Under a slot limit, an angler can keep two trout, either under 12 inches or over 16 inches. All trout between 12 and 16 inches must be released.

"The new plan leaves general regulations in effect from Magic Reservoir upstream to the 'Diversion' area near the junction of Idaho 75 and U.S. 20 that runs from Carey to Fairfield.

Upstream from Diversion to the Idaho 75 bridge just north of Hatley would be covered by the slot limit, and from that bridge to North Fork near the beginning of Galeena Summit would be catch-and-release.

The disputed April plan put about 17 miles of the river under catch-and-release regulation.

Monday's decision left the April limits on nearby Silver Creek unchanged. Catch-and-release was extended by five miles from the boundary of the Nature Conservancy land to the "Point of Rocks" landmark south of U.S. 20.

"Silver Creek is a very rare stream of considerable renown," Racine said. "It deserves protection of this kind."

Gary Peak of the Idaho Sportfishing Association, the successor to the Big Wood and Silver Creek Sportmen's Association, said neither the regulations for the Big Wood nor Silver Creek adopted Monday were satisfactory.

"We're not at all happy," he said. The commission has "taken public land and specified it to one special interest group. We feel it should be open to all segments of the public and biological research backs that up."

Peak was unsure whether the latest commission ruling rendered the lawsuit that Becker ruled on moot. A hearing was set for early this fall to consider making the May injunction permanent.

Commissioner Dick Meiers from Ada County had proposed a more complicated set of regulations for the Big Wood River, but his plan died without a vote. The latest regulations become effective Oct. 1 this year. But they could be altered by further court developments through the winter before fishing kicks off once more next spring.

Ryan looks for win before 5,000th strikeout

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

ARLINGTON, Texas — Don't look for Nolan Ryan to go into any wild celebration if he gets his 5,000th strikeout victim Tuesday night against the Oakland A's.

"I'd do nothing," Ryan said Monday. "My idea is we have a game to win and I don't want it to be a distraction. I'll just take the ball home and put it with the rest of 'em."

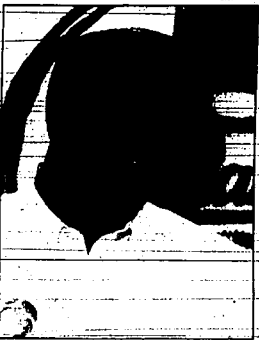

Ryan, who left Houston for the Texas Rangers last December when the Astros tried to cut his salary, has kept all the baseballs from his five no-hitters and strikeouts in increments of 500.

"I just give them to Ruth (his wife) and she marks on them what happened," Ryan said. "I keep them in a case behind my knee trophies."

None of Ryan's milestone baseballs are in the sport's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y.

"I give them my hats, shoes and gloves but not my baseballs," Ryan said.

Ryan, 42, needs six strikeouts against the power-hitting A's to reach a career plateau many, including Ryan, at one time believed unreachable.

NOLAN RYAN
Six strikeouts away from 5,000

With modern technology like it is, we might just be seeing the start of 40-year-old pitching in the majors," Ryan said. "When I got my 4,000th strikeout somebody asked me about 5,000, and I said, 'Lord help me, there's no chance for 6,000.'"

What about 6,000?
Ryan quipped: "Maybe by then they'll have a 35-year-old and older league. I can pitch in."

Ryan said he would be a little nervous going into the game because many friends are coming 200 miles from his hometown of Alvin to watch.

"I feel a little uneasy about it with all my relatives coming to the game and a sellout crowd assured," he said. "The anticipation is like waiting for a playoff game to start. I just want to get it over with."

Ryan said he never expected to pitch 23 years in the major leagues.

"I've exceeded all my expectations by 10 years," he said. "Most power pitchers usually lose their stuff and are out of the game by now."

Ryan recently was clocked at 99 mph while pitching a one-hitter at Seattle.

He said he will feel sorry for his 5,000th strikeout victim.

"I don't envy the person, but somebody has got to be it," Ryan said.

Some of Ryan's milestone strikeout victims include:

- Lord help me, there's no chance for 6,000. — 4,000, on July 11, 1965.
- Cesar Geronimo of Cincinnati, 3,000, July 4, 1960.
- Ron LeFlore of Detroit, 2,000, Aug. 31, 1976.
- Sal Bando of Oakland, 1,000, July 3, 1973.
- Pat Jarvis of Atlanta, the first, Sept. 11, 1966.
- Claude Washington has the most strikeouts against Ryan, 36.
- Ryan has struck out 17 members of baseball's Hall of Fame.
- Ryan tore a tendon in his right arm that threatened his career in 1966 with the Astros.
- Surgery was recommended but I decided to let nature take its course and I guess it healed with a lot of scar tissue around it," he said. "I don't know the reason it healed but my career could have ended right there."
- Ryan said the toughest hitter he ever faced was Pete Rose.
- He was extremely hard to strike out," Ryan said. "He would always foul off my good pitches."
- Still, Ryan struck out Rose 13 times.
- Which will put victim No. 5,000 in pretty good company.

Argyros, M's deal will work this week

BEATING THE ODDS — A deal to sell the Seattle Mariners to Gary B. Bettman, the NBA's vice president and general counsel. The two negotiated by phone with Portland president Harry Glickman and Real Madrid vice president Mariano Jaqueto.

THE ASSOCIATION — really appreciates Gary Bettman's efforts in this," Bertomeu said. "It took a lot of work on his part last weekend."

ACCORDING TO Walter Szezerbiak, a U.S. consultant for the ACB, whenever impasses were reached in the talks, Bertomeu and Bettman would prod their sides.

BERTOMEU SAID that the paperwork was being finalized and he hoped that the deal would be announced shortly. Nicholas Gouak, Petrovic's Portland lawyer, and Warren Legarie, the guard's agent, also confirmed that a tentative settlement had been reached. Bettman and Glickman did not return telephone messages left at their offices.

THE ASSOCIATION — really appreciates Gary Bettman's efforts in this," Bertomeu said. "It took a lot of work on his part this past weekend."

DOCUMENTS PROVIDED by Petrovic indicate he was making about $250,000 a year in U.S. money from Real Madrid. The documents also show a buyout clause under which Petrovic would be freed if any club paid Real the remaining salary due the Yugoslav.

REAL MADRID, one of the largest sports clubs in Europe, says it has documents showing no buyout clause. The NBA, citing the team's documents, prohibited Portland from negotiating with Petrovic but Judge Philip T. Abraham of Multnomah County Circuit Court, in Oregon granted the Trail Blazers a temporary restraining order against the league.

ALL SIDES ARE DUE TO appear before Abraham on Thursday for a hearing on Petrovic's request for a preliminary injunction.

"WE SEE IT AS very positive," Juan Gerda, a spokesman for the ACB, said in Barcelona, Spain. "This was a suit that ended the good relations between the ACB and the NBA."

UNDER PETROVIC'S agreement with Portland, Real would have the first chance to sign the guard if he ever chooses to leave the NBA. However Lolo Sober, Real's manager and former coach, said in Madrid that "in my judgement, it would be difficult" for Petrovic to return.

Trail Blazers pay $1.15 million for rights to Yugoslavian

NEW YORK — Drazen Petrovic's move to Portland was cleared Monday when the Trail Blazers reached a verbal agreement to pay Real Madrid $1.15 million for rights to the Yugoslav guard.

Under the deal, Portland would play two exhibitions in Spain, according to Jordi Bertomeu, general counsel for the Spanish Association of Basketball Clubs (ACB). Bertomeu said that part of the deal needs approval from the NBA.

The 6-foot 3-inch Petrovic, considered one of the best players in Europe, agreed last Wednesday with Portland on a three-year contract worth a guaranteed $3.84 million. However, Petrovic's contract with Real Madrid has three years remaining, and all

Bertomeu met Monday in New York with Gary B. Bettman, the NBA's vice president and general counsel. The two negotiated by phone with Portland president Harry Glickman and Real Madrid vice president Mariano Jaqueto.

"The Association really appreciates Gary Bettman's efforts in this," Bertomeu said. "It took a lot of work on his part last weekend."

According to Walter Szezerbiak, a U.S. consultant for the ACB, whenever impasses were reached in the talks, Bertomeu and Bettman would prod their sides.

Bertomeu said that the paperwork was being finalized and he hoped that the deal would be announced shortly. Nicholas Gouak, Petrovic's Portland lawyer, and Warren Legarie, the guard's agent, also confirmed that a tentative settlement had been reached. Bettman and Glickman did not return telephone messages left at their offices.

McGwire helps Oakland beat Detroit before only 6,197 fans

Mark McGwire popped out on this swing but in the first inning he hit a two-run home run as Oakland beat Detroit 6-1.

DETROIT (AP) — Mark McGwire hit a two-run homer during Oakland's four-run first-inning Monday and the Athletics beat the Detroit Tigers 6-1 for their eighth victory in 11 games.

Curly Young, 4-8, allowed four hits in six innings, struck out six and walked five as he snapped Detroit's three-game winning streak.

Frank Yarnano, 9-11, gave up six hits and four runs in four innings. In 26 starts, he has allowed 27 first-inning runs.

Only 6,197 fans attended the game, the lowest turnout at Tiger Stadium since 5,883 were at a game against Texas on May 19, 1983.

Baltimore 5, Milwaukee 0

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore held onto first-place in a head-to-head confrontation for the second straight day as Stan Jefferson and Cal Ripken homered to support Jeff Ballard's seven-hit pitching.

Ballard hit a tie-breaking two-run double off Roger Clemens in the sixth inning and New York won for the first time in four games under Manager Bucky Dent. Clemens suffered his first defeat in six career decisions at Yankee Stadium while the Red Sox lost for the eighth time in their last nine games.

Winner Walt Terrell gave up all the Boston runs and five hits in six innings plus two batters in the seventh. The Yankees used three relievers, including newly acquired Rich Gossage, who struck out Ellis Burks with a walk or strike out a batter in pitching his first shutout of the season and second of his career, both against Milwaukee.

Milwaukee starter Jerry Reuss faced only five batters before leaving with a sore left hamstring. Reuss strained the muscle Aug. 9 in Detroit and hadn't pitched since. He threw 22 pitches, issuing two walks and a two-out RBI single to Keith Moreland.

The victory stretched Baltimore's lead in the American League East to 1 1/2 games over Milwaukee and two over the idle Toronto Blue Jays, whom the Orioles beat Sunday.

The Brewers had at least one runner on base in eight innings against Ballard, 13-6, but only two advanced beyond first base. Ballard did not issue a walk or strike out a batter in pitching his first shutout of the season and second of his career, both against Milwaukee.

Milwaukee starter Jerry Reuss faced only five batters before leaving with a sore left hamstring. Reuss strained the muscle Aug. 9 in Detroit and hadn't pitched since. He threw 22 pitches, issuing two walks and a two-out RBI single to Keith Moreland.

Kansas City 4, California 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — George Brett drove in two runs and Bret Saberhagen won his sixth straight decision as the Kansas City Royals won their seventh straight game, beating California 4-2 Monday night and dropping the Angels out of first place in the American League West.

Saberhagen, 15-5, yielded two runs and six hits in eight innings and won 12 of his last 13 decisions. Rick Lueken pitched the ninth for his first major-league save.

The Angels, who had won five straight, trail Oakland by one game. The teams are even in the loss column but the Athletics have played two more games and won them. The third-place Royals remained 4 1/2 games out.

Darling's 4th straight victory gives hot Mets win over Giants

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Darling struck out a season-high 10 batters for his fourth straight victory as the New York Mets won for the 11th time in 14 games, 4-1 Monday night over the San Francisco Giants.

The loss reduced the Giants' lead over idle second-place Houston to 1 1/2 games in the National League West.

Darling, who has struck out 12 batters on two occasions, pitched 8 1/3 innings, allowed seven hits, Randy Myers tied the last two Giants for his 22nd save.

Darling, 12-9, has allowed only five earned runs in his last 33 2/3 innings. Pat Sheridan, who entered the game in the sixth inning, accounted for the only San Francisco run when he homered in the eighth.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dennis Rasmussen pitched a six-hitter for his first complete game this season, and hot-hitting Big Roberto had a two-run homer as the San Diego Padres beat the Philadelphia Phillies 8-2 Monday night.

Rasmussen, 6-9, who had seven complete games last season, struck out four and didn't walk a batter. His last complete game was Oct. 2, 1982, against Houston.

The only Philadelphia run came on pinch-hitter Wayne Murphy's two-run homer in Chicago Cubs 6, Cincinnati 5

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie Jerome Walton's 30-game-hitting streak ended Monday night and the Cincinnati Reds scored the tie-breaking run in the 10th inning on a throwing error by third baseman Domingo Ramos for a 6-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Walton walked in the first inning and went hitless in his next four at-bats, grounding out to the pitcher to lead off the 10th.

The loss was the fourth straight for Chicago, whose lead in the National League East fell to 1/2 games.

With two outs in the 10th, Todd Benzinger, who homered earlier, doubled to right. Joe Oliver grounded to third, and when Ramos threw wild past first, Benzinger scored from second.

Los Angeles 6, Montreal 1

MONTREAL (AP) — Tim Lincecum snapped a personal three-game losing streak and handed Montreal's Mark Langston only his second loss in 10 of 10 decisions as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the sagging Expos 6-1 Monday night.

Both Kirk Dempsey and Alfredo Griffin singled home two runs in the Dodgers' fourth inning, and Belcher, 9-12, combined with Jay Howell on a six-hit bid to send Montreal to its 13th loss in 18 games. The Expos, third in the National League East, trail the front-running Chicago Cubs by three games.

Browns' top draft pick Metcalf ends holdout

By The Associated Press

Eric Metcalf, Cleveland's first-round draft pick, ended his holdout and held his first workout with the Browns. The running back from Texas was the 13th-player chosen overall in this year's draft. He attended three days of meetings at the Browns' minicamp in May but did not practice with the team.

"I've been waiting for this all year," he said after practice. "If they had audited me, I'd have been in trouble. I'm sure after a couple of practices, I should be all right."

Cowach Bud Carson is hoping to use Metcalf in Saturday's exhibition game at Phoenix.

San Diego scored five runs off Don Clark, 4-13, in the second inning. Jack Clark opened with a double and Chris James walked. Garry Templeton tripled in both runners, then scored one out later on Luis Salazar's single. After another out, Roberts homered to left, his second of the year, and third of his career.

Roberts is hitting .347 (42-for-121) in his last 36 games.

N.C. State chancellor Poulton resigns

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The chancellor of North Carolina State resigned Monday, the first official to "step down" since allegations were raised against the school's basketball program in the book "Personal Foul."

Ernest Poulton, who in the 1986-87 academic year intervened on behalf of three Wolfpack players — Charles Shackelford, Tevin Binns and Kelsey Weems — to keep them from leaving, resigned after seven years as chancellor.

In a prepared statement released Monday, the 62-year-old Poulton did not mention "Personal Foul."

"This summer, in the tranquil embrace of the coast of Maine, my wife and I reflected on our personal situation and concluded in part that the time had come for us to 'step down' from the chancellorship of N.C. State University," Poulton said.

In February, after Simon & Schuster decided not to publish "Personal Foul," Poulton stood before reporters in his Wolfpack-red blazer to say that the decision was a vindication of N.C. State.

He threatened to sue the publisher and The News and Observer of Raleigh, which had printed allegations from the book's jacket. Since the book's publication, last month, Poulton has been unavailable for comment.

The resignation comes before the release of a six-month investigation into Wolfpack athletics. University of North Carolina system president C.D. Spangler will present the report Friday to the 32-member UNC Board of Governors, who will decide whether to take action against basketball coach and athletic director Jim Valvano.

'89 O's, '69 Mets: No comparison

The Baltimore Evening Sun

There's an old, self-effacing saying in newspapering to the effect you never let the facts get in the way of a good story. It pretty well fits a series of tales appearing in USA Today and other publications lately.

The headline stated, "'89 Orioles mimic N.Y.'s '69 miracle.' It's at least the fourth time parallels have been drawn between what is going on in Baltimore and the American League East this summer and in the Big Apple and the National League East 20 years ago.

Actually, next to nothing is the same except for the teams coming from well in the back of the pack. And their route to the front was in no way similar.

To begin with, the Birds began the season as a nameless, faceless bunch, which boded well for program sales at the ballpark if nothing else. For the most part, they were young, unknown and with no past performance chart, good or bad.

Heck, most of them hadn't even been fingerprinted. The so-called Miracle Mets were not that young a team, overall, except in the right place, pitching. Their bullpen wasn't even very good as Manager Gil Hodges' bench was too long of tooth and, in many cases, on its last legs.

But, oh that pitching! The lead three of Tom Seaver, Jerry Koosman and Gary Gentry won 55, lost 28. The fourth starters were Don Cardwell and Jim McAndrew, who combined for 14 wins. Young Nolan Ryan (6-3) was learning how to pitch and, in the bullpen, Tug McGraw and Ron Taylor went 17-7 with 25 saves.

The way the staff came together that year, especially in the second half, stirred memories of the famed Cleveland Indians staff of 1954: Bob Lemon, Early Wynn and Mike Garcia during the week; Hal Newhouser and Bob Feller in the Sunday doubleheader; Ray Marleski and Don Mossi out of the pen. Chalk up 111 victories, please.

Compare that to the lads wandering to the mound these evenings for the Yale Law School nine. Seaver won 26, a couple more than Mickey Weston, Dave Johnson, Kevin Hickey, Mark Thurmond, Brian Holton, Pete Harnisch, Jose Bautista and Mike Smith combined.

The Mets' regular batting order was fairly skimpy, Clasen Jones and Tommy Agee being the only guys who produced consistently. Don Clendenon off the bench and Art Shamsky, sharing right field with Ron Swoboda, popped one every so often, but the team mark of .242 trailed many in the Senior Circuit.

Most of the Mets were completing three years playing together and the likes of Clendenon, Al Weis, Ed Charles and J.C. Martin had been around for an age. For one loss of the dice, the combination was perfect for a team that played decently the year before (73 wins).

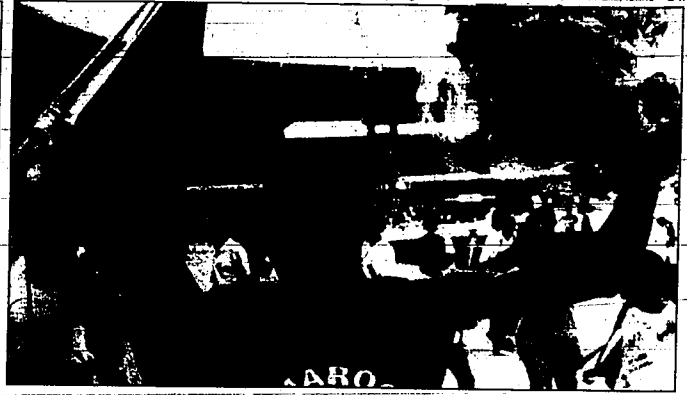

In addition, the Mets hung close to the front until August when they found themselves just 4 1/2 games behind the Chicago Cubs, which was like not being headed at all. The Mets won 100 games and the division by eight games in a breeze.

Conversely, the Orioles have been in the lead since late May and, with four American League East teams within six games of each other in the A.L.C. (All Important Loss Column), it's far from likely the final six weeks are going to be a stroll in the park for anyone.

And another thing: Remember, 1969 was the first year of expansion and the unbalanced schedule. In their own lodge, New York had a very bad 52-110 Montreal Expos team to beat up on in an amusement park called Jerry, and the 63-99 Philadelphia Phillies were nearly as inept.

Frank Robinson has seen the Orioles-Mets stories and, being a stickler for detail, has politely referred to the circumstances as being distinctly dissimilar.

Let's see, how about a parallel between the O's and the Miracle Boston Braves of 1914?

Aouita closer to Mobil track title

NEW YORK (AP)—Said Aouita of Morocco, who won the Mobil Grand Prix men's overall title in 1986 and 1988, has moved closer to a third championship with a world record for 3,000 meters.

Aouita, timed in 7 minutes, 29.45 seconds, at Sunday's Walkkassen track and field meet in Cologne, West Germany, is tied for the men's lead at 51 points with Roger King, da Silva of Brazil are tied third with 45 points apiece.

da Silva of Brazil are tied third with 45 points apiece. Aouita now holds world records in the 1,500, 2,000, 3,000 and 5,000 meters, and the world best in the rarely-run two miles.

World mile record-holder Paula Ivan of Romania retained the women's overall lead with 49 points.

OXNARD, Calif. (AP)—Keep a lid on those Cleveland jokes around Bob Golic. He grew up there, he loves the place. And he loves the Browns.

So what's Golic doing in Southern California playing for the Los Angeles Raiders instead of getting ready for his eighth season with the Browns?

The operative words are "play" and "Plan B."

Golic was left unprotected by the Browns as part of the NFL's new Plan B free agency rule. After much tribulation, he signed with the Raiders in March.

"When the Browns left me unprotected, they explained it to me in person," Golic said. "I was a 31-year-old nose-tackle whose pay was commensurate with that many years in the league."

"Emotionally at first, I reacted a little badly and was down. I think they weren't sure whether they wanted me to stay or not. As time went on, it seemed like they knew they were going to a four-man (defensive line).

And that would have meant decreased playing time for Golic, who was exceptional in anchoring the Browns' three-man line in recent years.

"I give them credit," Golic said of the Browns. "The hard thing was convincing the people of Cleveland I wasn't boiling out. The decision was very difficult."

"The one thing that kept coming back was that if I stayed in Cleveland, the possibility was strong that I would spend a lot of time on the sidelines watching. That would kill me."

"I told people that the bottom line is I would not be the same person if I had to watch. I'm still a Cleveland Browns fan. Some day, I'm going to go back. That's my home. Some day, I'll have season tickets."

But not for a while, he hopes. Golic said he hopes to play another four years.

"It's all health," he said. "More than half of it (playing in the NFL) is luck."

"I can still play. I am still an extremely competitive player, more critical of myself than anyone else. I work and condition myself as good as I can. In the first preseason game, I actually felt quicker and more mobile and under control than I have in a long time."

"I can still play."

Golic came to a team with an accomplished nose-tackle, Bill Pickel. "I'm not opposed to competition," Golic said. "Bill Pickel has been playing great nose-tackle here for a long time."

1st time for Soviet boxers on international pro card

MOSCOW (AP)—Ten strikes on a boxing marked a new era in the professional fight business.

Robert W. Lee, president of the International Boxing Federation, struck the symbolic sounds Sunday in the Dynamo indoor sports arena, site of the first professional boxing card to include Soviet fighters.

"With dedicated training, they can go far on the world map in professional boxing," Lee said. "This is only the beginning. I hope we can provide really good professional boxers for Moscow, but already be able to begin here is like a dream come true."

In the headline bout, junior lightweight Calvin Grove of Coatesville, Pa., won the U.S. Boxing Association championship belt with a convincing decision over Anthony English of Camden, N.J., in a 12-rounder for the vacant title.

Earlier, the crowd of 3,000 was treated to all the ballistics with the "fight" business speeches by Lee and Edmund Lipinski, president of the newly founded Soviet Professional Boxing Federation; the national anthems of the United States and the Soviet Union, with a spotlight pointed at the Stars and Stripes, and scantily clad numbers girls.

The crowd loudly cheered the Soviet pro rookies making boxing history. Featherweight Yuri Alexandrov, middleweight Viktor Yegorov and heavyweight Anatoly Drenshkin — former top amateurs — all won their matches against American opposition. But when Grove and English entered the ring, there was an almost eerie silence, as if the spectators were showing respect for world-class boxing.

Grove didn't let down the experts. He showed a whole range of boxing skills, and the better combinations brought applause.

"I thought I had the fight in my grip. I haven't had a fight in five months, and I wanted to box and go through everything we have changed after looking at videos from earlier fights," Grove said, explaining why he did not go all out to stop his opponent after knockdowns in the third and ninth rounds.

"I knew that he hits hard, and I had to keep away," he said.

'Truth' wants justice for early exit against Tyson

NEW YORK (AP)—Mike Tyson's first-round knockout of Carl "The Truth" Williams should be declared "no contest" and a rematch should be held because the bout was stopped prematurely, according to Williams' manager.

Ira Leibowitz requested the ruling in a letter to boxing's three main sanctioning bodies and the New Jersey State Athletic Commission, which had jurisdiction over the July 21 fight at Atlantic City.

In another letter last week, Leibowitz asked Tyson promoter Don King to give Williams a rematch with the heavyweight champion.

Williams got up at the count of seven after being knocked down by a left hook midway through the first round, but referee Randy Neumann stopped the fight despite protests from the challenger.

Leibowitz claims that Williams went down not from the hook, but from a head butt that clearly changed Carl's direction and caused him to fall.

In his letter to the boxing organizations, Leibowitz also said Neumann did not follow proper procedures before stopping the bout.

"The referee made a determination that because Carl did not respond appropriately to a question he asked, he was in danger of further harm," Leibowitz wrote.

"He did not wipe Carl's gloves to give him a moment more to respond.

He did not separate the fighters and allow them to come towards each other to see if Carl could defend himself. It was a bout being fought by experienced boxers for the heavyweight championship and should have proceeded."

Leibowitz asked for a joint hearing before the heads of the three sanctioning bodies — the World Boxing Association, World Boxing Council and International Boxing Federation.

WBC president Jose Sulaiman said he was willing to hear the protest even though he felt the referee made the right decision.

"I was at ringside, and I believe Williams was hurt," Sulaiman said. "I think his health would have been in danger if the fight had continued."

"We've got to be concerned with safety in boxing, and not allow legal assassinations," James Binns, attorney for the WBA, also backed the referee's decision.

"He did exactly what he should have done," Binns said. "When he asked Williams those questions, all he got was a blank stare."

Lawrence Wallace, deputy commissioner of the New Jersey State Athletic Commission, said he couldn't comment on Leibowitz's letter because he had not seen it. IBF officials and King could be not reached.

Eagles, White agree on contract

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles and All-Pro defensive end Reggie White reached agreement in principle on a new contract Monday, leaving a $1.5 million federal lawsuit in limbo.

Eagles President Harry Gamble announced the agreement at the federal courthouse, where White was scheduled Monday to open a civil suit against his former agent, Patrick Forte, now an Eagles executive.

White alleges Forte neglected to inform him about an option year on his contract and that the agent was pursuing a job with the Eagles while simultaneously negotiating with them.

"Pursuant to the direction of the court, the Eagles and Reggie White are permitted to state they have reached agreement in principle," Gamble said. "Terms of the agreement are confidential and they are to be reduced to writing."

Gamble also said that the defensive-end-suit-against-Forte was still to be resolved. White said he was happy with the agreement.

The contract was subject to approval of Eagles owner Norman Braman, according to White's agent, Jimmy Sexton. Braman is vacationing in France.

Sources told The Associated Press that the deal is for four years at more than $1.5 million a year plus bonuses. That would compare with a five-year, $1.5 million-per-year contract for Buffalo Bills defensive lineman Bruce Smith.

White, 28, in four NFL seasons has 477 tackles and 70 sacks, compared with 245 tackles and 44 sacks for Smith.

White's previous contract, negotiated for him by Forte, would have paid $440,000 in an option year this season.

White, a unanimous pick for the Pro Bowl last year, is considered the key to the Eagles' defense. He has missed three preseason games during his holdout.

Jury selection for his trial against Forte was to begin at 9:30 a.m. EDT in U.S. District Judge Charles Weiner's courtroom, but was delayed all day while the lawyers worked on the settlement.

Sexton said the meeting involved Gamble; White's lawyer, John Langel; and the Eagles' attorney, Michael Richmond.

Last week, Sexton said the opening of White's lawsuit against Forte would be "the point of no return" in his contract dispute with the Eagles.

White had been reported to want about $1.7 million per year over three or four years. The Eagles initially responded with a five-year, $7.56 million offer.

Gamble turned up the public pressure on White, telling reporters Thursday that the defensive end's agent had turned down a six-year, $10 million deal. Sexton said that his client did not want a six-year deal, regardless of the dollar amount.

Although White's lawsuit mentions other grievances, including a dispute over Forte's fee and White's insurance policy, the trial is expected to become moot, Forte's attorney, Michael Ossip, said Friday that he expected the suit to be dropped if the two sides reach agreement.

McMahon's problems don't bother Henning

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Jim McMahon's history of friction with his past head coach doesn't concern his new one.

"I like Mike Ditka. I like Jim McMahon," San Diego Chargers coach Dan Henning said.

"I think there's some things there that nobody knows about, and I don't think it's that important to this situation. We start out fresh. I'm going to deal with him straight up and I expect him to deal with me straight up."

McMahon's soured relationship with Ditka likely contributed to Chicago's willingness to deal the winning but injury-prone quarterback to the Chargers, who surrendered a conditional 1990 draft pick in Friday's trade.

He is the first of 14 quarterbacks who have won the Super Bowl to be traded before his 30th birthday, which he celebrated Monday by sleeping late.

Because of the extra sleep, McMahon missed a scheduled interview on a network morning program but made it to the mandatory weightlifting session with teammates later.

Henning said the benefits McMahon brings to the club outweighed any injury-related risks. He added that McMahon was sound now and the Chargers intend to do everything they can to keep him that way.

In seven years in Chicago, McMahon was 49-17 as a starter. But he has missed 23 games due to injuries since leading the Bears to a 46-10 victory over New England in the 1986 Super Bowl.

"I don't have any concerns," said McMahon, who is coming off a knee sprain that required minor off-season surgery. "I can throw the ball just as well as ... before. I might JIM MCMAHON History of friction with Ditka have lost a little zip, but I can throw it probably just as far."

As for McMahon's "wild thing" image, Henning said he can live with that.

"He'll kid around, so what?" Henning said. "I do a lot of kidding myself. Sometimes, he says what other people would like to say. In that respect, he's a lot like Mike Ditka."

McMahon said his free-spirited ways often are misunderstood, but he's all business on the field.

"I don't think I did anything out of the ordinary," McMahon said. "I have fun at my job and with the people around me. And sometimes people take that wrong."

Henning said McMahon's acquisition "gives us a better chance to win than five days ago or five months ago, but what that level is going to be, I don't know."

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — San Diego's acquisition of quarterback Jim McMahon from the Chicago Bears on Friday left the Dallas Cowboys still shopping for holdout Steve Pelluer.

The Cowboys were unwilling to meet the Cowboys' price of a high draft pick plus a starting defensive lineman for Pelluer, Dallas starter last season, Cowboys officials said.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said that the Cowboys expect interest in Pelluer to rise as the exhibition season continues.

"We've had people in the league, people who we respect, advise us to wait," Johnson said. "We've said all along that our priority is a draft pick, which we would not get until next year anyway, so we can afford to wait.

"It's wide-open. Whoever wants to trade for him can come to us."

For Pelluer, the Cowboys want a second-round pick that would escalate to a No. 1 depending on Pelluer's contribution to his new team, plus defensive help.

"Maybe we're asking too much, but I don't think so," said Bob Ackles, Cowboys director of player personnel. Ackles said he does not anticipate any trade talk over the weekend while teams are involved with exhibition games.

"It will be Monday at the earliest," Ackles said. Atlanta, Kansas City, Miami, Phoenix and Tampa Bay reportedly are still interested in Pelluer.

The Chargers gave up a conditional high draft choice in 1990 for McMahon, who led the Bears to a Super Bowl victory after the 1985 season. McMahon had a 49-17 overall record as a starter and was 35-3 in his last 38 regular-season games since 1984.

New coach optimistic about Nets' young team

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Bill Fitch became the seventh man to enter the New Jersey Nets' revolving coaching door this decade and said Monday he saw no reason why his young team can't turn things around this season.

Fitch, the fifth winningest coach in NBA history, joins the Nets just 10 days after Willis Reed was kicked upstairs to a vice president's job with the team that has won just 45 games over the past two seasons.

"I'm certainly smart enough not to go into a situation where we don't have a chance to win," said Fitch, 762-714 in 18 years as an NBA coach. "I like the youth of this team. It's like a green apple getting red."

Fitch was the top choice of Nets general manager Harry Weltman from the start, and his desire to return to the coaching ranks after being away for a year made the contract negotiations go smoothly.

Neither Fitch nor Weltman would discuss the deal, which Fitch said was "multiday."

Fitch, 55, was just what Weltman wanted, a coach with previous NBA experience who had proved he could develop young talent. The two-time NBA coach of the year did that with young teams at Cleveland and Houston, while the highlight of his career was winning a title with the Boston Celtics in 1981.

The lowpoint came two years ago when Fitch was fired by the Houston Rockets following a disagreement with the front office on which direction the team should be taking. Fitch had two years left on that contract and could have sat around and collected paycheck after paycheck.

"I spent the last year on the golf course," Fitch said. "I spent a year in the desert, the water and the forest and I know God didn't mean for me to be a golfer."

Fitch said that this past spring he began watching three NBA games a night on television and kept charts on every team.

Butting heads with smokers

The new bill before Congress that would allow non-smokers to slap smokers who light up in public is gathering momentum.

As I understand it, this is a watered-down version of the original measure, which called for fire hoses and attack dogs to be used against anyone smoking in public.

Surveys showed that 70 percent of non-smokers either supported the proposal or felt it did not go far enough.

But then the bleeding-heart liberals got cold feet at the last minute.

They wondered: What if the fire hoses shoot water so violently that it causes the smoker to fall and strike his or her head on the pavement?

What if the attack dogs chew off a leg or cause permanent facial disfigurement?

Oh, brother, what a bunch of sissies you are, said the conservatives.

What are you going to do, they said, sit around and worry about every little thing that can happen?

So what if these smokers bang their heads or get a limb or two torn off by a particularly zealous Doberman? They're killing themselves anyway with all that tar in their lungs.

Still, the so-called "Slap-Em-If-They-Smoke" bill has plenty of muscle to it.

For instance, suppose you are dining in a fine restaurant and someone at the next table lights a cigarette.

Granted, you don't see that much anymore.

Not with, what — maybe 2,000 smokers left in the whole country?

Lunchtime

Some rodents in Everett, Wash. will do anything to assure their survival, as evidenced by this squirrel in Legion Park. With fewer people stopping by the park for lunch to throw a few crumbs to the residents, this resourceful critter investigated a nearby trash can and came up with a snack.

Perspectives

Kevin Cowherd

But suppose someone — whacked out on nicotine, whatever — has the nerve to light up while you're eating.

It used to be that all you could do was stare daggers at this person, shake your head in disgust and cough in a loud and exaggerated manner.

But if this bill passes, you would be allowed to stand up, approach the offending smoker, and slap that person silly.

There is still some ongoing debate as to how many slaps you'll be allowed.

The Senate seems to feel that 10 slaps is about right, or until the punishment, in their words, "shall cause a trickle of blood to form about the chin."

The House, on the other hand, is still wrestling with the idea of what exactly constitutes a slap.

Does it have to be a blow struck with the open hand?

Or can it occasionally be a baited fist, especially in severe cases, such as when the offending party is smoking a Raleigh just for the coupons on the back?

And just how crisp a blow need it be?

Can you wind up from somewhere around Indiana and give the smoker the back of your hand, sending him or her head-over-ten-kettles into the next county?

Or is it required to be a short, flick-of-the-wrist slap, such as was regularly administered in the court of Louis XIV when challenging a rival to a duel?

As one congressman noted for the record: "We can kick this around until the cows come home. But the bottom line is: Are we willing to hurt these smokers?"

If the current mood of the country is any indication, the answer is a resounding: Hell, yes.

As a moderate in this whole issue, I was originally in favor of the Parker-Mann proposal, whereby a non-smoker could kick a smoker in the shins any time he felt like it.

But I drew the line when they tried to tuck on the "steel-toe" amendment.

Hey, I said, they might be smokers, but for God's sake, they're still human beings. You can't go around kicking people in the shins with steel-toed boots just for firing up a Marlboro or what have you.

They'll be so black and blue, they won't

Courtroom cantina

Approach the bench and have a beer.

The Associated Press

PALITO BLANCO, Texas — Justice of the Peace Agapito Gonzalez keeps the gold docket book on a chair near the pool table and heaves cases between posters of bikini-clad women and bags of potato and corn chips.

The courtroom philosophy hangs on a sign: "A man's got to believe in something. I believe I'll have another beer."

It's cantina justice at the G & G bar, where Gonzalez has been holding court at the family-owned business since 1966. Defendants are free to stick around for a cold one.

"They stick around, they drink beer and all that," said the 76-year-old JP. "Sometimes they phone me. They want to come and get married here and I married them here."

"They want to give me a tip, but it is not acceptable. You cannot give any tip to justices. It is against the law, not even a gift."

Near trophies and antlers and an old eight-track tape deck, cowboys drink and listen to Mexican music on a juke-box. The aroma of burning mesquite and sizzling meat blows in from the back porch. The G & G offers free barbecue and sells its beer and chips.

Gonzalez calls his son from behind the bar to bring the docket to his bench, an aging chrome dinnette set.

"He's the law west of Highway 281," joked County Clerk Arnoldo Gonzalez, leaning on the bar. He's a regular at the G & G and a nephew of the JP. "It used to be pretty bad around here, knifings. The last 10 years it has mellowed."

Constable Bartolo Guajardo says he can't remember the last murder in Jim Wells County Precinct 6, in deep south Texas about 50 miles from the Gulf of Mexico.

"People are friendly here because we are all related," Agapito Gonzalez said.

The G & G is one of a few buildings at the center of Palito Blanco, named after the native hackberry trees with bumpy, whitish bark. The town of 300 is surrounded by ranches, farms and miles of barbed-wire.

Gonzalez deals mostly with speeding tickets, poaching and tenant-landlord disputes. A Texas justice of the peace is a locally elected court officer. A JP can perform marriages, issue death certificates, and, especially in rural areas, issue criminal warrants and conduct bond hearings.

Gonzalez's last jury case was two years ago. The JP, known for light fines and mercy, still worries the jury was too harsh.

"It was a speeding case, a fellow driving 100 miles an hour," Gonzalez recalled. "He lost the case. They charge him a little over $100, the jury ... It wasn't fair, because I asked them to give him a break, because he was a young boy, he looked like being a very nice boy."

Iowa to D.C. on pizza and Chutzpah

Two young runaways are finally corralled in Washington, D.C. after a 1,119-mile, 10-day jaunt

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The two boys, 10 and 12, were fed up with their father, so they gathered a few belongings and ran away. That was in Ames, Iowa, July 30.

Wednesday, after 10 days, 1,119 miles, a night in the woods, and a frightening arrest last Tuesday in the District of Columbia, the boys found themselves in D.C. Superior Court. They faced petitions for return to their father, who was given custody of the children after a 1986 divorce.

By the end of the day, they had achieved what they had set out for: a change of residence, for now, to their mother's house in North Carolina.

Only in Iowa, perhaps, could "two little munchkins" — as Kenneth H. Rosenau, the attorney for the younger one, described them — jump off their bicycles at a Greyhound station and finance their getaway by persuading a bank and a pizza shop to let them write checks on their father's account.

"I just went to the bank and told the guy I wanted $300 and he told me what to write on it," said Paul, the 12-year-old. Their parents insisted, as a condition of interviews about the pair, that the boys be identified only by their middle names. This hearing, like most in juvenile court, was closed to the public.

Suspect coughs up diamond rings... literally

The Associated Press

WILKINSBURG, Pa. — A burglary suspect coughed up the evidence after X-rays showed two stolen diamond rings in his stomach, police said.

R.C. Wright, 29, of Pittsburgh decided to regurgitate the rings Sunday night rather than face options such as having his stomach pumped or waiting for the rings to pass through his system, police said.

"As it turned out, he knew that things weren't going to be all that comfortable for him anyway, so he decided to cough them up," said Sgt. Dan Reacock.

Wright was arrested after a resident of this Pittsburgh suburb reported seeing a man break into a neighbor's home Sunday morning.

The homeowner said a revolver and two rings were missing, police said. Officers found the pistol but concluded Wright must have swallowed a half-carat diamond ring worth about $600 and a smaller diamond ring worth about $300.

Police got a search warrant to have him X-rayed.

Wright was charged with burglary and other crimes and jailed on $25,000 bail.

Woman appears dead, nearly embalmed alive

The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio — An 87-year-old blind woman who was mistaken for dead and nearly embalmed was released from a hospital, giving no indication that she recalled the experience.

As Carrie Stringfellow was transferred to a nursing home, the Ohio Department of Health, in conjunction with other state and local agencies, said it had started legal action against the operator of two unlicensed nursing homes in Springfield, including the one where Ms. Stringfellow lived.

Ms. Stringfellow emerged from Mercy Medical Center on a stretcher carried by two paramedics. She was quickly transported to the IOOF Odd Fellow-Rebecca Home of Ohio, where she was helped into a bed at the nursing home.

Ms. Stringfellow indicated she was unhappy at being moved.

"I just don't appreciate going nowhere where I don't know where I'm going," she said. "I don't feel good about where I'm going. Nobody told me nothing about it."

Hospital spokeswoman Regina Eatop said the arrangements had been made and agreed to by family members, and that Ms. Stringfellow had been told.

Armored car spills money on highway

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Bags of money fell out of an armored car on a busy highway during rush hour Wednesday and traffic backed up almost a half-mile when motorists stopped and scrambled for the cash, police said.

"This is an education in greed in people," police Officer Roberto Campos said. "People were just stopping their cars and getting out and grabbing money."

Police caught at least two people who allegedly took money from the Loomis Armored Inc. truck, and have license numbers of others.

Loomis officials did not take phone calls Wednesday, and it was not known how much money was in the truck and how much was lost.

The money spilled out of the back of a Loomis truck on Interstate 10 just east of downtown, said Campos, who was first on the scene.

Police said some drivers tossed bags of money into their cars, while others scooped up loose bills that littered the four-lane highway.

"With the turbulence of the traffic, the money was flying in the air like a Toyota commercial," police shift supervisor Hank DiMatteo said, who added that at least 20 motorists stopped to grab some cash.

Campos and his partner, Ed Porterfield, were working undercover in an unmarked car when they happened upon the accident and saw two men get out of a pickup and stuff bags of money in their pockets and pants.

Runaway

Continued from Page D1 nightmares, nutritional and otherwise. Their first meal on the road was $15 worth of pizza from Little Caesar's. "We had it for breakfast," said John, the younger brother.

Thus began a zigzag jaunt across the Midwest, full of missed connections and new adventures.

"They were probably just jumping the bus from one station to another, trying to figure it out as they went along," said John Wick, a Greyhound sales agent who spent nearly 30 minutes Wednesday trying to trace their route through Chicago, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Washington.

Why they left, exactly, did not emerge in court Wednesday, because their father dropped his request for their return.

"It's like trying to force somebody to love you," he said. "It doesn't work."

When the boys came to the courthouse Wednesday, they were expecting a fight. Beverly G. Stone, who represented the older boy, and Rogenau planned to contest their father's request to send them back, and they hinted of a home life that was "right on the borderline between excessive discipline and abuse."

The boys had timed their departure, waiting until their father, a pilot, had left for a long Sunday service in church. They then stole two shirts, underwear, a Sony Walkman, and four of their father's blank checks into a gym bag, then pedaled 10 miles to town.

At the Greyhound station, they hit their first hitch: a sign that said no

Mistake

Continued from Page D1 "I think this is the shock of having to change and be moved," said Ms. Estep.

Ms. Stringfellow was brought to the hospital Aug. 5 after her murmurings startled a mortician who had been preparing to embalm her at the funeral home.

The mortician, Dennis L. Porter, said he had been called to pick up Ms. Stringfellow at a boarding home where she had been living at the time. When he arrived, Porter said, the woman was slumped in a chair and appeared to be dead.

He said he placed Ms. Stringfellow in a body pouch, zipped it up, and took her to his funeral home. As he was preparing to move her to the embalming table, he said, she uttered a sound and he immediately called an ambulance.

Dr. Sajjad Siddiqi said Ms. Stringfellow was stable and fully alert when she was brought to the hospital. "She really did not know exactly what happened and how she was brought in," he said.

Siddiqi said medical tests failed to pinpoint what led to the condition that made Ms. Stringfellow appear to be dead. He said he believes she may have suffered a temporary heart blockage that caused her to lose consciousness for several minutes.

The two men hopped back in their pickup and drove off, but the two plainclothes officers were in pursuit. When the men were pulled over, police found $3,840 on them. The pair had not been formally charged as of Wednesday afternoon.

"They didn't know they were being followed," Campos said. "It kind of ruined their day — from the happiness to 'I'm going to jail.'"

Other people were thought to have gotten away with money bags, Campos said, adding that police had license numbers of some. He said anyone caught taking money would be charged with felony theft if they did not return the cash.

The half-mile traffic jam dispersed quickly after police arrived, he said.

For the next hour or so, police and fire officials collected $8,800 in stray currency — mostly $20 bills — from the roadside. They found a bag containing $800 in $20 bills in a storm drain.

Last October, people estimated that about 200 people converged on Interstate 71 near downtown Columbus, Ohio, after the rear door of a Metropolitan Armored Car Inc. truck swung open. Bags of cash fell onto the highway and at least one ripped open.

The Columbus Dispatch quoted sources as saying more than $1 million was lost. But one man told in nearly $27,000, saying he considered keeping the money but could not in good conscience.

checks and no exceptions. Stymied, they decided to wait for business hours the next morning. They spent the night, Paul said, "the forest" behind a shopping center.

By morning, they were ravenous. After their pizza breakfast and a successful foray to the bank — where they ducked behind a wall to dodge their stepmother — the boys caught the 11:40 to Chicago.

No one remembered to tell them that there is more than one station in Chicago. Climbing down from the bus at Northlake, they found themselves stranded two stations away from their downtown destination.

No problem. The plucky pair flagged down a taxi and dipped again into the diminishing treasury in their gym bag. "Twenty-one dollars!" Paul recalled.

Meanwhile, their father and the Story County sheriff were closing in, having turned to Greyhound for help when the bicycles were found at the bus station.

Greyhound traced the boys to Washington an hour before their bus arrived Aug. 1. A D.C. police youth division officer was waiting for them.

The officer never said a word. He jabbed two fingers toward the boys, then one finger toward his car, and waited for the youths to clamber in. That night they slept at the Receiving Home, a facility for youths accused of delinquent crimes.

It was a long way from Ames and Little Caesar's.

"It's just like a jail," Paul said.

Stolen baseball card is not the real thing

PITTSBURG, Calif. (AP) — A supposedly rare baseball card stolen from a 14-year-old boy who hoped to use it for his college education turned out to be a fake worth $10 at the most, investigators said Wednesday.

The stolen card, thought to be a 1910-Honus-Wagner-tobacco-card worth about $100,000, lacked the tobacco stamp that would have shown it was an original, said Detective Phil White of the Contra Costa County Sheriff's Department.

"We determined the stolen card was not an original," White said. Rene Montoya, who still hasn't recovered his stolen card, was shown a replica Tuesday and said it was "exactly the same" card stolen from him, White said.

Police think plant is pot

UNDERHILL, Vt. (AP) — High on a living-room window sill in a second-floor apartment sits a house plant with a mistaken identity.

A week ago, Anthony Scilipoti, 26, awoke to loud banging at his door about 8:20 a.m. He opened the door and found three state police officers who asked if they could come in. "They sort of cleared their throats and said they were there because 'You have a marijuana plant growing in your window,'" Scilipoti recalled.

Scilipoti was actually relieved at first, because his wife was traveling and he thought when he first saw the officers that she had been in an accident.

"At that point I started to laugh," Scilipoti said. "It was like a comic "Up until yesterday we had no way of determining if the card was authentic or a replica," White said. "We didn't even know a replica existed, not being specialists in that field. We had nothing to compare it with."

The boy's grandfather gave him the card six years ago, and he put it in the family bible for safekeeping after seeing a television program that discussed the value of authentic cards, the family said.

The family never had the card appraised but assumed it was one of only 10-to-20 authentic-Wagner-cards that experts believe exist today. On May 24, an acquaintance of Montoya asked the boy whether he could photograph the card, then grabbed it and fled.

opera. It was really silly." "I just laughed, and said, 'Go in and look,'" he said. "All three of them stood around the plant and stared at it."

As far as Scilipoti can remember, he bought his "dwarf Hawaiian" plant in a garden or grocery store about a year ago. It is about 18 inches tall, he said, and does not have serrated leaves like a marijuana plant.

Trooper Christopher Reinfurt had spotted the plant as he was driving by one day and believed it was marijuana, said Sgt. William H. Merritt. "Chris is very experienced in this and has had a lot of prior experience in marijuana eradication," Merritt said. "From the view that they had of the plant, I don't think anyone would be able to differentiate it."

City: Ice cream truck music is noise

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — The city has imposed decibel limits on amplified music-makers used by ice cream trucks to advertise their wares, saying noise is noise no matter what its cause, tune and purpose.

City council members voted 7-2 Tuesday that ice cream trucks must keep their music below 55 decibels, a limit also applied to such things as parties and dirt bikes. The jingles have registered 70 to 90 decibels.

"Without music, we're not going to get any business," said Ice Cream Truck Inc. owner Joe Saurini, 52, who has three trucks playing amplified jingles. The tunes "have got to be so loud that people can hear you at least a block away, so that people can get ready to buy," he said.

Comedian sues companies over weight-loss claims

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Weight-loss advocate Dick Gregory is suing two companies for $60 million, saying they falsely took credit for helping a man shed nearly a half-ton of fat.

The former comedian's lawsuit, filed Thursday in federal District Court here, said the companies ran a television commercial in which Walter Hudson credited their product for helping him lose over 900 pounds.

Hudson attracted Gregory's attention in September 1987 when his estimated 1,200-pound bulk became wedged in a door frame. He had not left the confines of his bedroom and bathroom for more than 15 years and had not worn clothes in a decade.

At the time, he weighed several hundred pounds more than the person listed by the Guinness Book of World Records as the heaviest living man.

Gregory, who markets "Dick Gregory's Slim-Safe Bahamian Diet Nutritional Drink Mix," put Hudson on a rigorous diet, substituting liquid for his breakfast of a dozen eggs and his dinner of two chickens.

Gregory set a target weight of 190 pounds, and Hudson lost 600 in five months under constant supervision of Gregory's staff, the lawsuit contends.

"After several months, Hudson went on his own diet after talking when Gregory asked him to go to his clinic in the Bahamas."

The suit does not name Hudson. "I think those two companies just took advantage of him," Gregory said from Shreveport, La., where he was arrested Thursday for picketing shops that sell drug paraphernalia. "You have to understand that hadn't been out of his house in 19 years."

The suit, filed by Dick Gregory Health Enterprises Inc. of Chicago, names Media Arts International Ltd. of Arizona and Twin Star Production Inc. of Delaware. It focuses on a 40-second commercial titled, "The minute commercial titled, 'The minute Hudson lost 600 pounds, he promotes the 'Optatrym Diet System' that the companies market and distribute."

The commercial features a talk-show format with Hudson saying that "once I started with this system, then a complete turnaround" occurred. An announcer calls

"Was not!" "Don't LIE to me! I HATE when vermin like you come on this show and LIE THROUGH THEIR TEETH!"

It was a pretty interesting debate, and I came away with a better sense of where things stand — at least until Geraldo lost his cool and horse-whipped the poor sucker.

True, the studio audience had given the "thumbs-down" signal. But they could have waited for a commercial.

Geraldo had a particularly informative show the other day entitled "Smokers: Is Hanging Too Good for Them?"

For the record, his interview with one guest went something like this:

Geraldo: "You were SMOKING!"
Smoker: "I was not!"
"Were too!"

Thief of turtle eggs gets two-year sentence

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A man who repeatedly stole eggs from the nests of endangered sea turtles was sentenced Tuesday to two years in prison.

It is believed to be the longest prison sentence imposed under the Endangered Species Act, U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen said in a statement.

James Bivins, 37, of West Palm Beach, pleaded guilty in June to taking 818 green and loggerhead sea turtle eggs from 17 nests on Jupiter Island Beach in August 1988.

Six weeks earlier, wildlife officers had caught him poaching 1,088 eggs from a state park in Riviera Beach, the U.S. attorney's office said. He also had a 1973 turtle egg theft case in which adjudication was withheld. "By destroying these nests, James Bivins has punished the endangered green sea turtles one step closer to extinction," Lehtinen said in his sentencing recommendation.

After Bivins' second arrest, he had agreed to cooperate with Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission officers.

Justice O'Connor halts Lucky, Alpha Beta merger until October

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $2.6 billion merger of the Lucky and Alpha Beta supermarket chains in California was blocked Monday by Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, apparently at least until early October.

New YORK (AP) — Stock prices tumbled in a sluggish late-summer session Monday amid uncertainty over the course of interest rates.

Market falls amid slow trading
The closing high of 2,722.42 it reached two years ago this week. However, brokers noted that it had been stalled in that area for the past several years.

Justice O'Connor halts Lucky, Alpha Beta merger until October

O'Connor issued an order halting the merger at the request of state Attorney General John Van de Kamp, who contends the reduced competition would cost California shoppers $400 million a year.

The Federal Trade Commission approved the merger. But Van de Kamp, in a suit claiming violation of federal antitrust law, contended the merged chain would dominate the marketplace in many areas and lead to higher prices.

Deltona, traded on the NYSE, climbed 1/4 to $75. The company, which has a pending offer for a takeover proposal from Sycamore Acquisitions Corp., said Sycamore made a new offer valued at about $7.1 a share.

Justice O'Connor halts Lucky, Alpha Beta merger until October

O'Connor's order, which was not accompanied by a written opinion, forbids the merger until the full Supreme Court decides whether to grant a hearing on Van de Kamp's appeal.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said this March that there was no evidence to support Kenyon's finding that the merger would reduce efficiency from the consolidation.

Standard & Poor's industry index fell 6.29 to 389.56, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 5.36 at 340.67.

The chains, which have a total of 550 stores, were to have combined their operations under the Lucky banner. An appeals court order blocking the merger was to have expired Monday, though the process of consolidation would have taken several months.

Interest rates fell in early trading in the stock market but then reversed course and headed higher as the day progressed.

The NASDAQ composite index for the week over-the-counter market slumped 3.64 to 458.33. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index ended at 376.58 down 2.60.
