Unveiling Neptune's mysteries

Voyager finds complete ring circling planet

Los Angeles Times

PASADENA, Calif. — The Voyager spacecraft has detected the first complete ring around Neptune, a camera-shy band of tiny, dark particles that is barely detectable by the spacecraft's sensitive instruments.

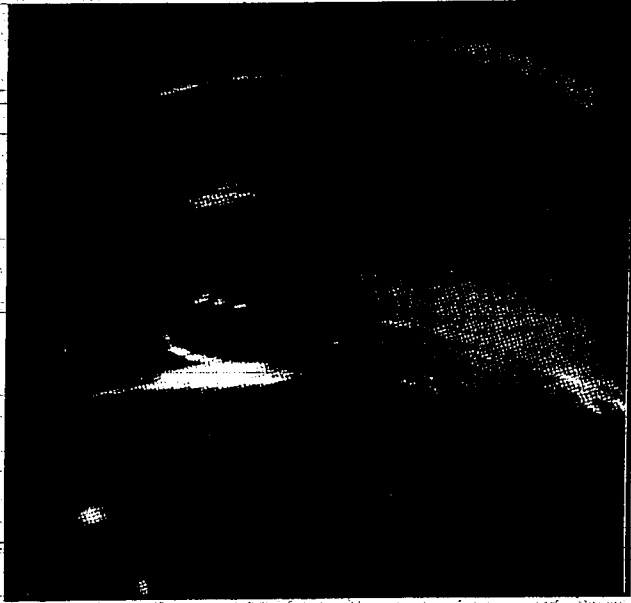

It is a "very tenuous ring with very little material" compared with the brilliant bands around Saturn, but "it is, indeed, a complete new ring," said Bradford Smith, head of the Voyager imaging team.

Ground-based observations had suggested that Neptune's rings were broken into pieces, called arcs, but an instrument aboard Voyager that measures light reflected by the ring detected its surprising presence early Tuesday morning.

The discovery came on a day when the mystery of the planet's partial rings, called ring arcs, deepened. Voyager scientists also learned from new photos Tuesday that they can successfully forecast the weather on Neptune from nearly 3 billion miles away, enabling them to learn more about the planet's giant dark spot.

There are no photos of the complete ring yet because the band is so faint that it can barely be detected in the dark sky.

Later this week, after Voyager zips over the north pole and around the backside of Neptune, the photo opportunity should improve significantly because the sun will highlight the ring's tiny particles.

Scientists gathered at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, hope that will allow them to say more about the newly discovered ring and the mysterious "ring arcs" that lie farther out from the planet. It is not clear why the arcs are incomplete.

The presence of the arcs has been suspected for more than a decade because of evidence collected by ground-based telescopes.

Police nab 5 in Colombian assassination

The Associated Press

BOGOTA, Colombia — Police said they arrested five suspects Tuesday night in the assassination of leading presidential candidate Luis Carlos Galan at a campaign rally.

Authorities have blamed cocaine traffickers for his death. The five were presented to local reporters at national police headquarters and shown on television. They were dressed in casual, well-worn clothing.

All five are Colombians, police said, and identified them as Armando Bernal Acosta, Norberto Morillo Charalca, Pedro Zambrano Delgado, Luis Gonzalez Chacon and Jesus Hazuumb.

Police said the five men were arrested at a downtown apartment. No other details were given.

Police also announced that proceedings began Tuesday to extradite a purported manager of drug money to the United States, where he faces conspiracy charges involving a billion-dollar money-laundering scheme.

Authorities reported more raids and seizures on the fourth day of their nationwide crackdown on the drug underworld. The country's judges planned to return to their duties, ending a strike called after a judge and police official were killed Thursday.

The extradition of Eduardo Martinez Romero, said to manage funds for the notorious Medellin cartel, was seen as a test of a government pledge to hand over cocaine traffickers wanted in the United States. The powerful cocaine cartels have cowed the courts in the past through a systematic campaign of terror.

Martinez escaped arrest last spring in Panama on the day U.S. officials announced his indictment in connection with the drug-laundering scheme. The indictment followed an investigation which resulted in charges against 127 people and two Latin American banks.

Attorney General — Dick Thornburgh said in Washington that the United States is moving to extradite Martinez, even though his name was not on a list of the "Dozen

Jerome County to keep Charboneau in its jail

By CRAIG LINCOLN Times-News writer

JEROME — Sagging under the expense of Jaimi Charboneau's death-sentence appeal, Jerome County on Tuesday won the right to keep him in its jail and get out from under his legal bills.

At a quick court hearing on a case that's become enormously complicated, 5th District Judge Phillip Becker ordered Charboneau, 29, into the Jerome County jail until a new sentencing hearing is held. It will be scheduled no earlier than April.

Becker, in a series of decisions at a hearing lasting less than 30 minutes, told Jerome County Prosecutor John Horgan he was in charge of pursuing the case, at least at the county level.

A special prosecutor from the attorney general's office handled the case when Charboneau was charged in 1984 with murdering his former wife, Marilyn Arbaugh, 36. Her body was found on her Jerome County ranch riddled with bullets.

"As far as I'm concerned the attorney general's out of it," Becker said. "So it's Mr. Horgan's problem."

But Becker also ordered Charboneau's court-appointed and county-financed attorney to ask the Idaho Supreme Court who will pay for Charboneau's legal bills in federal court.

Until now, Jerome County has been paying all legal bills for Charboneau's expenses — which have cleared $180,000 for prosecution and defense. The county refused to pay his attorney, Greg Fuller of Jerome, for $8,000 in two bills for work on federal court issues.

The county argued the federal courts should pick up Fuller's bills while the case is in that system. But Fuller countered that the county should continue to pay because the state has a liberal public-defender law that requires payment of indigent defense expenses in all courts.

Boyle takes Idaho Supreme Court seat

The Associated Press

BOISE — The 44th member of the Idaho Supreme Court is offering his new colleagues the experience and insight of three years as a trial judge without any plan to steer them in any special direction.

"I want you to know the great responsibility I feel, the great debt to the people," Larry Boyle told Gov. Andrus after Andrus administered the oath of office to his latest appointment to the high court.

"I have no agenda, I have no philosophical bent I bring with me," Boyle said. "I pledge to you to fairly interpret the law."

His wife of 20 years, Beverly, held the Bible as Boyle, 46, was sworn in before more than 150 people, including his six children, at Tuesday's ceremony.

Boyle took the seat vacated by Robert Huntley, who resigned

JUSTICE LARRY BOYLE Pledges fair interpretation

earlier this month to return to private practice. He brings the high court to four members, and it will return to full strength at month's end when Boise attorney Charles McDevitt is sworn as the successor to the late Justice Allan Shepard.

Boyle will face voters in next May's primary election for a 10½ six-year term. McDevitt will not have to stand for election until May 1992.

With their ascension to the court, Andrus now has named all five members, something he said no other governor in the nation has probably done since the individual states were formed.

Andrus named Chief Justice Robert Bakes, now the court's leading conservative, in 1971 during his first year of his first term as governor. He picked Justice Stephen Basline, the court's leading liberal, in 1976 just seven months before resigning as governor to become Interior Secretary in the Carter administration, and he picked Justice Byron Johnson in 1987 less than a year after he regained the governor's office.

"I suppose there are those who say, 'I'm responsible for this court,'" Andrus said. "But you must understand the moment they take the oath and receive the robe, they become very independent, as it should be."

Boyle and McDevitt emerged from a field of 22 candidates for the vacancies. They were selected from a list of five nominees the state Judicial Council submitted to Andrus after interviewing the entire field.

possibly the most intensely lobbied judicial selection the state has seen.

"The people of the state of Idaho will be well served," the governor said, maintaining any of the other three nominees — Appeals Court Judge Donald Burnett and Jesse Walters and Twin Falls attorney Lloyd Webb — would have provided the same quality on the high court.

Chinese, Soviet dancers defect

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Two Chinese dancers and a member of a Soviet troupe apparently defected to the United States after appearing in a Utah folk festival, police said Tuesday.

The three women, two from the People's Republic of China and one from the Ukraine, left their American host families' homes at separate times but later telephoned the families to inform them that they had defected and were safe, said Springville Police Sgt. Dave Caron, himself a host for two Soviet dancers.

Both cases were being handled by the FBI and the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, and the dancers' whereabouts were unknown, he said.

The Chinese women, identified as Chen Li, 24, and Zhe Qian, 21, both from China's Guizhou region, disappeared Friday, while the Soviet woman, Svetlana Kirenko, 32, of the Danesk region near the Black Sea, refused to join her troupe when it boarded a bus for Salt Lake International Airport at 3 a.m. Tuesday, Caron said.

The women were among several hundred dancers from various foreign countries appearing in the World Folk Fest in Springville, about 60 miles south of here, Aug. 12 through Monday.

Caron said Springville police were notified and turned the matter over to the federal agencies. FBI spokesman Tim Screen said he could not comment on the events, and administrators at the INS office, which was closed Tuesday night, could not be reached.

Caron said it wasn't immediately known how the women fled or if they were aided by others. Their reasons for leaving also weren't readily apparent.

"There is a possibility that one woman has an exchange-student husband in the Southwest and that she has maybe gone to where he is. That's what the word was.... We have nothing for sure on that," Caron said.

"There is also some speculation that the Russian lady had met a man while on tour here in the United States, that they had fallen in love with each other. How much of that is true and how much speculation we can't say. She was a very private person," he said.

KSL Radio in Salt Lake City quoted an unidentified Folk Fest source as saying that one of the Chinese dancers was married to a student in Texas and that he arrived in Utah over the weekend and vanished with his wife and the other dancer.

Black Panther founder shot fatally on street in Oakland

The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Huoy P. Newton was shot to death Tuesday in the same troubled neighborhood where he co-founded the militant Black Panther Party 23 years ago to protect blacks from police violence.

Newton was found lying in a pool of blood in a rundown section of Oakland where residents fear they are losing the war against drug dealing and poverty.

Newton, along with Bobby Seale, founded the Black Panthers to protect black neighborhoods against what they perceived as a pattern of police violence against blacks.

The group was itself frequently associated with violence, although it also helped organize daycare centers, free breakfast programs, health clinics and a school in Oakland.

Newton, the party's minister of defense, was recalled as "a person who rebelled against the status quo in all forms" by Chicago Alderman Bobby Rush, who once headed the Panther's Chicago chapter.

"The Huey that I remember was a student of the world and... made a contribution to the advancement of the ideals of freedom, justice and equality for all Americans," Rush said.

Newton was shot several times, including at least once in the head, according to Officer Torry Foley. The shooting was reported to police at 6:29 a.m. MDT, and Newton was pronounced dead at Highland Hospital at 7:12 a.m. MDT, said Sgt. Dan Mercado.

Bonneville teachers OK contract
IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Teachers in the Bonneville School District have overwhelmingly endorsed a new contract, ending the possibility of a strike when school reopens later this month.
 The agreement, calling for a 4 percent increase in starting pay to $16,000 and a top salary of nearly $31,000, was ratified by 92 percent of the districts' teachers.
 The contract, worked out with a federal mediator during a marathon bargaining session last week, also provides for paid preparation time for teachers and coverage of health insurance premium increases up to 30 percent now and 15 percent next year.
 Teachers had wanted full coverage of premium hikes while the school board had balked at paid preparation time.

Elderly couple jailed for trespassing
BLACKFOOT (AP) — An elderly couple is doing jail-time for reoccupying the eastern Idaho house they lost through foreclosure and a sheriff's sale last year.
 Bethen Parsons, 63, and her husband Robert, 68, were finishing the first week of their sentences in the Bingham County Jail on Thursday after last week's conviction on trespassing charges.

Magistrate Robert Brower sentenced Mrs. Parsons to the maximum six months in jail while giving her husband two weeks. He fined the couple a total of $400.
 "Her defense was that the property was never sold," Brower said in justifying the harsh sentence for Mrs. Parsons. "But it was sold, and the new owner was readying it for occupancy by his hired men when he came out and found the Parsons had moved back in."

Idaho-traffic deaths climb by 2
 By The Associated Press

Two more Idaho motorists have died in separate accidents, bringing to six the state's highway death toll since Friday.
 The Idaho State Police said Donald Youker, 19, of Boise, died early Tuesday when he apparently fell asleep at the wheel in the westbound lanes of Interstate 84 east of Boise and lost control of the car, which rolled several times in the median.
 Youker's wife of one week, Jennifer, 18, was hospitalized at St. Alphonsus in Boise.
 On Monday night just east of Post Falls, Mark Yager, 31, of Coeur d'Alene was killed when the pickup he was driving ran a stop sign and was hit broadside by another pickup, the Idaho State Police said. The police report said Yager's system did contain some alcohol. The driver of the other pickup was hospitalized.

Defense begins in kill-for-hire case
ASOTIN, Wash. (AP) — The defense has opened its bid to convince a jury that Susan Kroll did not pay two men $5,000 to kill her husband.
 Ms. Kroll, 31, Clarkston, is accused of hiring two young Lewiston men to kill her husband and dispose of his body. One of the men, Kyle Johnson, told friends he killed Victor Kroll for the money, the prosecution said Monday, as it wound up its case.
 Shelli Kidwill, Clarkston, testified she is a friend of Kyle Johnson and that two days after Victor Kroll's slaying in May, Johnson told her he had killed a person for $5,000.
 Kevin Acres, 17, a former Lewiston resident who moved to western Washington this summer, also is a good friend of Johnson's and he testified Johnson told him he murdered Victor Kroll.

Group opposes Priest Lake plans
COOLIN (AP) — An environmental group wants Huckleberry Bay Co. to abandon plans for a nine-hole golf course and other developments near Priest Lake and leave the land in its natural state.
 Bill Egolf, spokesman for the Selkirk-Priest Basin Association, spelled out the group's opposition to the Huckleberry Bay Co. proposal Monday at a meeting at Coolin, southeast of Priest Lake.
 The Huckleberry Bay Co. proposal includes a nine-hole golf course, 279 dwelling units, marina, fire station and a lodge. It is scheduled to go before the Bonner County Planning and Zoning Commission on Thursday.

Sherriff faces wiretap trial alone
MOSCOW (AP) — Idaho County Sheriff Randy Baldwin will be tried alone on federal wiretapping charges at Moscow.
 On Monday, U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan granted a defense motion to separate Baldwin's trial from that of his former deputy, Gerald Marko.
 "We're getting tired," said Alan Derr, Boise attorney representing Marko. "We've been ready for trial twice and turned away twice. They should either dismiss it or get on with trial."
 Marko's trial will be rescheduled later.
 A jury of eight women and four men was selected to hear U.S. Justice Department charges of illegal wiretapping. A federal grand jury indicted Baldwin and Marko on a charge that they wiretapped a December 1987 telephone conversation between former Idaho County Prosecutor Joy McClean and former deputy Travis Breckon on a phone in the sheriff department's Koooskii office.

Symms files financial statement

By ERIC ANDERSON
 States News Service
WASHINGTON — Sen. Steve Symms supplemented his 1988 federal salary by at least $11,012 in earnings from assets and $35,777 for speeches, according to a report filed with the Senate last week.
 The Caldwell Republican also made between $103,424 and $231,411 from selling financial assets in addition to his $83,500 Senate salary last year, according to his financial disclosure report.
 Senators must report annually their earnings and assets to the Secretary of the Senate. Because the forms only require figures to be listed in ranges, exact levels of income and earnings are not available. Symms received a 90-day extension for filing his report, which was due in May.

 Symms accepted a total of $4,500 in honoraria — or speaker's fees — in 1988 and kept $3 less than the maximum $35,800 allowed by law. In keeping with Senate regulations, Symms turned over the remaining $8,720 to charity.
 Critics charge that corporations often dole out honoraria in an effort to buy the favor of lawmakers. President Bush has proposed a ban on honoraria in a campaign reform package he released June 29.
 However, the 85 Senators who served last year kept over $2 million in honoraria, retaining an average of $23,708 for personal use, according to figures compiled by Common Cause, a congressional watchdog group.
 Symms was paid between $1,000 and $2,000 for each of 27 speeches he made around the nation plus travel, lodging and meal expenses in many cases.

Symms' honoraria receipts included $6,000 and travel expenses for three speeches to the defense contracting firms of Rockwell International, Lockheed Aeronautical Systems and McDonnell Douglas. Defense firms are traditionally generous with honoraria.
 The senator also received round trip air fare to Taiwan plus seven days of food and lodging expenses from the Chinese National Association of Industry and Commerce. The Taiwan trip was in November, after Symms had reached his personal honoraria income ceiling for the year.
 Symms declared from $458,021 to more than $905,001 in total assets, including more than $250,000 worth of stock in the Caldwell-based Symms Fruit Ranch, Inc. However, due to the accounting procedures, it is not possible to know precisely how much the stock is worth.
 Symms' second most valuable asset was $80 acres and a house in Caldwell — together worth between $100,001 and $250,000, according to his report.

Idahoans blast federal farm policy as failure

BLACKFOOT (AP) — The federal government's agricultural policy is failing in rural America because it has been too narrow in its scope, Idaho officials maintain.
 More than farmers are in trouble, a congressional subcommittee was advised Tuesday, and federal assistance programs must be broadened to include every segment of the rural economy.
 The hearing in Blackfoot before Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., chairman of the House Agriculture subcommittee on conservation, credit and rural development, is the last of four on rural issues throughout the nation.
 State Commerce Director Jim Hawkins, Agriculture Director Dick Rush and others told English that programs designed strictly for agriculture were not benefiting all of Idaho.
 Future federal aid must address problems in the tourism and recreation and the needs of small businessmen, they said.
 English agreed that what happens in rural America has a profound effect on the rest of the nation and that Congress is committed to reversing the economic demise of that area.

Containment nears on last Idaho inferno
 By The Associated Press

Firefighters carved the final quarter mile of break line Tuesday on the rugged northeastern flank of the 46,500-acre Lowman Fire as strategists remained optimistic that Idaho's most destructive wild fire of 1989 could finally be contained by nightfall.
 "It's real slow. It's really rough in places," said Boise National Forest information officer Gordon Reid. "But the cooler temperatures and higher humidity help."
 About 1,000 firefighters were still committed to the Lowman blaze 70 miles northeast of Boise, the last of the scores of wildfires spawned by a lightning storm 26 days ago.
 The main concern of fire bosses, who used explosive primer cord on Monday to blast containment line through steep, almost inaccessible terrain, has been the return of gusting winds that could send flaming embers back outside the lines to spawn new fires.
 "There's still a possibility of escape, but right now things look pretty good," Reid said.
 In the first five days of life, flames from the fire engulfed the small community of Lowman, destroying dozens of cabins, lodges and other buildings valued at over $10 million.
 Resource losses from the July 26 fire-blast have been estimated in excess of $100 million across western and central Idaho. Over $35 million has been spent to suppress the fires.

Huey Newton: An image of resistance

NEW YORK (AP) — He was the picture of revolutionary chic: a spear in one hand, a gun in the other, a black beret posed jauntily on his afro-blown hair and he on his throne — a wing-backed wicker patio chair. He was Huey P. Newton: Black Panther co-founder, Black Panther minister of defense; ex-con, expatriate.

He's dead now, like so many others who bought the credo he adopted — from Mao-Tse-tung: "Political power grows out of the barrel of a gun." Newton's bullet-ridden body was found in a pool of blood in a poor Oakland, Calif., neighborhood early Tuesday.

5 conservation groups file suit over shrimping

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five conservation groups have filed suit against Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher, alleging his actions on behalf of shrimp fishermen have virtually assured the drowning of thousands of threatened and endangered sea turtles.

In a lawsuit filed in federal court here Monday, the organizations claim Mosbacher acted unlawfully when he suspended regulations that require shrimpers to use devices that prevent sea turtles from becoming ensnared in their nets and drowning.

The lawsuit seeks to force Mosbacher to resume enforcement of the suspended regulations on turtle excluder devices, or TEDs.

Mosbacher suspended TEDs regulations after shrimpers, angry about having to use the devices, which they claim reduce their catch by as much as one-third, blockaded shipping channels along the Texas Gulf Coast.

Under a court order to protect endangered sea turtles in a separate lawsuit filed by the National Wildlife Federation, Mosbacher then ordered shrimpers who don't use TEDs to limit their trawling times to 105 minutes.

Filing the suit are the Environmental Defense Fund, National Audubon Society, Center for Marine Conservation, Greenpeace-U.S.A. and Defenders of Wildlife.

During the late 1960s and early '70s, the Black Panthers put "pig" in the national lexicon, and shocked a naive and non-violent generation into the chilling realities of racial warfare.

They prowled urban streets in shiny black shoes and black leather jackets, insolent berets and starched blue shirts tucked neatly into pressed black slacks. Their weapons were shotguns, law books and tape recorders.

They were out to protect the community. Only the Panthers went on the look-out for muggers, rapists and robbers — they were scoping cops. Their self-proclaimed mandate was to prevent police brutality against ghetto blacks, who were sometimes beaten during arrests and whose civil rights were at times violated.

"The Panthers created an image of defiance and organized resistance to police forces that did not take into consideration the rights and basic human dignities of the black community," Bobby Rush, one-time Panther deputy minister of defense and former leader of the Chicago chapter, said in a 1983 interview with The Associated Press.

"A lot of the reform in police departments across the country today is directly related to the heated controversy of Panthers vs. police."

Rush, now a Chicago alderman, called it a controversy. Others called it a war, including J. Edgar Hoover. Then director of the FBI, Hoover called the Panthers "the most violence-prone of all the extremist groups."

Hoover's secret war was devastating to the Panther organization. The FBI launched a secret campaign involving fake documents and letters, infiltrators and informants, which was disclosed by a Senate investigating committee in 1976. It was part of Hoover's COINTELPRO operation in the '60s and '70s to disrupt and discredit civil rights and anti-war organizations.

In 1969, Black Panthers Mark Clark and Fred Hampton were killed in a pre-dawn police raid at their Chicago headquarters. Police had ostensibly been searching for weapons.

Clark and Hampton's relatives, and other survivors of the raid, successfully sued city, state and federal officials and were awarded $187 million in 1982.

Bobby Seale, who helped Newton create the Panthers in 1966, once told the AP that law officers killed 26 Panthers and that the Panthers dispatched their share of police.

Postal Service to eliminate 1000 managerial positions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Postal Service said Tuesday it is eliminating 1,000 managerial and administrative positions at 39 facilities nationwide "in a consolidation move."

One of the managerial sectional centers to be eliminated is in Potomato.

The agency said the cuts will have no effect on mail service.

The consolidation, which takes effect Sept. 23, is expected to save $30 million to $35 million a year, the Postal Service said.

Jobs will be eliminated through early retirements and other forms of attrition, postal officials said.

Employees affected by the mergers will be reassigned within commuting distance of their present jobs when possible.

"No processing centers will be shut down, and no one will lose employment," Deputy Postmaster Michael S. Coughlin said. "The consolidation centralizes decision-making and saves money."

The moves continue a reorganization that began in March 1986. Since then the Postal Service has established 75 field divisions and eliminated 42 district offices and cut the number of management sectional centers from 212 to 131.

After the newest round, there will be 73 field divisions and 94 sectional centers.

Dozens hurt in USS Kennedy mishap

PORT EVERGLADES, Fla. (AP) — A giant elevator on the USS John F. Kennedy malfunctioned Tuesday, causing injuries to dozens of people visiting the aircraft carrier during an open house.

The elevator, capable of lifting fighter-bombers to the flight deck, apparently jerked to a sudden stop as it rose, knocking down as many as 60 riders, said an official at the administration office at this Port Lauderdale-area port.

"It was a pretty severe jar, and apparently everybody on the elevator got some bumps and scrapes," said the port official.

Hydraulic failure was a possible cause of the sudden stop, said the officials.

Ambulances and fire-rescue vehicles dashed to the scene and a hospital was placed on disaster alert, but there was no immediate word of serious injuries.

The ship docked Monday and planned to hold open house Tuesday and Wednesday.

The ship, the length of 3 1/2 football fields, carries a crew of about 3,000 sailors. The JFK is the world's largest steam-powered carrier.

BURGLAR TRAP
Writes a client: "I know a tough old boy in Queens, a welder, who lined an upstairs room of his house with sheet iron. Above the window inside, he rigged a frame of steel bars on a slide rack. Wrestler charged with assaulting TV cameraman

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — Police had a tall order when they had to arrest 7-foot-4, 540-pound professional wrestler Andre the Giant, on charges he clamped a headlock on a television cameraman and damaged his equipment.

"Thank God he was cooperative in the arrest," said Assistant Police Chief Jim Barnes. "A guy that big, he could cause some damage."

Roussimoff, 43, was charged with assault and criminal mischief and was released after his manager posted a $1,300 bond Monday.

Barnes said Roussimoff became upset when Ben Hildebrandt, a cameraman for Cedar Rapids station KCRG, filmed a match between Roussimoff and the Ultimate Warrior on Monday night. The Ultimate Warrior won in 30 seconds.

Roussimoff told Hildebrandt, described by his station as less than 6 feet tall and about 176 pounds; that it was illegal to film the match, Barnes said. He said the two exchanged words and then Roussimoff put the cameraman in a headlock.

KCRG assignment editor Cindy Will said Hildebrandt shot only pictures of the crowd.

MICKEY GILLEY

Gains control of properties
Hildebrandt was treated for bruises at a hospital. Will also said Roussimoff caused about $300 damage to Hildebrandt's camera.

Mickey Gilley allowed to claim 25 properties

HOUSTON (AP) — Country western singer Mickey Gilley can try to satisfy a nearly $20 million judgment against a former business partner by claiming about 25 properties in Texas and Tennessee, including the famous Gilley's nightclub in Pasadena, a judge ruled.

Former partner Sherwood Cryer sought a temporary injunction preventing Gilley from taking over the holdings, but State District Judge David West denied it Monday.

Gilley won the judgment last summer when a jury found that Cryer had siphoned off large amounts of cash from joint businesses.

"I feel a lot more secure about the judgment now that we have control of the properties," said Gilley's lawyer, Tom Alexander. But he said selling off all of the buildings and land will still not fulfill the judgment.

Rodney Dangerfield sues casino over burns

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Rodney Dangerfield's lawyer says a lawsuit the comedian filed against Caesars Palace is nothing to laugh about. Dangerfield claims his eyes were burned in a steam bath accident at the Las Vegas Strip resort in March 1988, causing him to cancel a series of shows. He seeks $25,000 in disputed contract money, medical and jo-bal bills and punitive damages. Caesars has filed a countersuit, calling the comedian a "malingerer" and a hypochondriac.

Both sides say they expect the case to go to a federal jury trial after attempts to settle failed.

"I think that when they hear the medical testimony on his injury, they'll have a straight face. They won't find anything funny about it," Dangerfield's lawyer, Barry Langberg, said last week.

Caesars lawyer Timothy Hanigan said Dangerfield "cracked a couple jokes during deposition" but appears to be taking it seriously, as is Caesars.

Carlin cancels shows due to strike at hotel

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Comedian George Carlin has canceled eight shows at Caesars Palace this week because of a musicians' strike there.

Even though he does not use music in his act, Carlin said crossing the musicians' picket line "would create a very funny feeling in me."

Musicians are picketing Caesars, Bally's and the Tropicana in a dispute over taped music and the hotels' attempt to eliminate minimum guaranteed employment for musicians in star showrooms.

Several other performers also canceled their engagements.

Hometown turns out to honor Dinah Shore

WINCHESTER, Tenn. (AP) — Dinah Shore, known by many in her home town as Frances Rose Shore, remembers some of her first performances in her father's store.

"Daddy would put me up on the counter where the twine was. He would say, 'Now sing, baby. Sing. Fanny Rose.' And the poor farmers would come in. I learned the value of applause," she said.

Winchester renamed one of its main streets Dinah Shore Boulevard and a high school band, drill team and baton twirlers entertained for her homecoming Monday.

"It's one of the greatest treats in the world when you dare to dream and have it come true and have it come home in your home town," she told a crowd of several thousand.

Sharks circled raft of couple who survived 66 days

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — A Florida man and his wife said that he and his wife who survived 66 days adrift on a life raft menaced by sharks tried to signal more than three dozen passing ships before one spotted them.

William Butler, 59, said he and his wife Simone, 66, of Miami, survived on raw fish and purified water until a Costa Rican coast guard boat picked them up in the Pacific Ocean, 12 miles off the coast, on Saturday.

"We were surrounded by sharks practically all the time and we felt a lot of panic but thanks to God they never attacked us," Butler, an electrical engineer, said by telephone from a hospital in the port of Golfito.

He said he and his wife set sail from Panama on May 24 for Hawaii in their 49-foot sloop, the Siboney. They had been drifting east in the life raft since June 15, when whales attacked their boat about 1,200 miles southwest of Costa Rica, he said.

"In no more than 15 minutes, our boat was destroyed," he said. "But God, always present in our prayers, helped us because we carried a life raft and we got in it immediately, taking all the things we would need."

They had eight cans of food, some cookies, a water purifier and a fishing hook, Butler said.

"After 20 days adrift all the food was gone," he said. "Then we started to fish. Thanks to God we always had food—and with the filter we drank fresh water."

Before they got in the raft, he said, he sent three distress messages over the radio but no one heard them.

"At least 40 ships passed and didn't see us and every night we thought we would die," he said. "But the next day, in the morning, we prayed again."

Egbert Valleillo, a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman, said Butler told him by telephone that the sharks punctured the raft several times and the couple sealed the holes with a repair kit.

Valleillo said he spoke to Butler from the U.S. Coast Guard's Pacific Command headquarters in Alameda, 10 miles east of San Francisco.

In San Jose, Butler said he and his wife were praying again Saturday afternoon when they saw the Costa Rican coast guard boat.

"But they saw us first," he said.

They were picked up 20 miles off Punta Burica, at the border with Panama and near Golfito, 200 miles southeast of San Jose.

Butler lost 49 of his 175 pounds and his wife dropped from 150 pounds to 82, he said.

"But we are in pretty good shape because we had food all the time and the doctor at the hospital in Golfito said we can return to Miami next Monday," he said.

Butler, a Cuban-American, came to the United States from Cuba in 1960. He has two children who live in Miami.

"It was a happy ending," he said. "I'm going home to Miami. I'll buy another boat and will sail again."

Ringo recording plays in court

ATLANTA (AP) — A recording by Ringo Starr debuted in court Tuesday, blaring from a boom box as a judge weighed whether the song would be a $3.5 million hit or an alcohol-related embarrassment, as the ex-Beatle claims.

Music industry executives have said the record would be a "guaranteed No. 1 hit," an attorney for Memphis, Tenn., producer Chips Moman said as he played the tape for Fulton County Superior Court Judge Clarence Cooper.

The song, "I Can Help," is one of 14 Starr recorded with Moman in 1987. Moman wants to release an album to coincide with Starr's current smash U.S. concert tour, but Starr says he is unhappy with his performance and the album would hurt his reputation.

Cooper did not rule immediately on whether to extend a 30-day order blocking the record's release. The restraining order expires Thursday.

The judge, after telling attorney Thomas Washburn to "turn it down," listened patiently to Starr's upbeat rendition of Billy Swan's 1975 hit.

Starr, who recently completed a much-publicized treatment for alcoholism, also objects to "Whiskey and Soda," a part of the collection, his attorney, Robert O. Fleming Jr., said Tuesday.

"That is not a song Mr. Starr is eager to have released on an album with his name and his picture on the cover," Fleming said.

Alcoholism "is an addiction he was suffering from when this music was recorded," Fleming said of his client.

Neither Starr nor Moman attended Tuesday's hearing.

Though Starr continued to enjoy high recognition, his recording career has stagnated when he came to Moman in 1987, Washburn said. Moman, whose work includes producing Elvis Presley in the late 1960s, has a reputation for reviving careers, he said.

"The point is this: Two people came together for the purpose of resurrecting a career," Washburn said. "This album would do this for Ringo Starr. Ringo Starr hasn't had a hit since 1975."

Washburn said the album, if released, now while Starr is on tour, could make $3.5 million.

Fleming claimed, however, that the album would hurt Starr at a time when his career has been boosted by his tour with his "All-Starr Band." Fleming said that while the record features Starr singing, he does not play drums on it.

"All an artist has is his style, his name, his professional reputation and his image," Fleming said. "Here, we've got an album with one of the most famous drummers in music history and he's not playing drums. He doesn't want that."

Moman has contended he invested

Martinez previously escaped arrest on drug charges in Panama

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eduardo Martinez Romero, seized in a week-end sweep by Colombian authorities, had escaped arrest last spring in Panama on the day U.S. officials announced his indictment in connection with a $1.2 billion money-laundering operation.

Martinez, described by Colombian officials as a 35-year-old economist, was indicted in March as part of "Operation Polar Cap," which resulted in charges against 127 people and two Latin American banks.

"He's one of the Medellin cartel's financial chiefs, not the biggest one, but certainly an important one," Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman Frank Shults said Tuesday. "His arrest is the arrest of a significant figure in that investigation."

Polar Cap uncovered a money-laundering operation that reached across the United States into South America and to England, with direct ties to the Medellin drug cartel in Colombia, Justice Department officials said. It laundered an estimated $1.2 billion over two years, they said.

Martinez was arrested during the weekend in the northern Department of Sucre, and Colombian national police said they started proceedings

MARTINEZ ROMERO

Tuesday to hand Martinez over to the United States in a test of a new emergency plan for extraditing people alleged to be top narcotics traffickers Justice Department officials would not comment on whether the United States was seeking Martinez's extradition.

Martinez was among the 11,000 people arrested in an emergency crackdown triggered by Friday's assassination of a leading presidential candidate who was an outspoken foe of drug traffickers.

The Bogota newspaper El Tiempo reported Monday that Martinez declared his innocence in statements made while jailed in Bogota. "At no time have I had links to the Medellin cartel and I don't know any of its members," he was quoted as saying.

The newspaper said that, when arrested, he had none of the heavily armed bodyguards who usually accompany drug lords.

On March 29, the day the Polar

Cap indictments were announced, Attorney General Dick Thornburgh told reporters that Martinez was held up in a bank in Panama, surrounded by Panamanian Defense Forces seeking to arrest him for U.S. authorities. Martinez had been scheduled to meet that day with undercover agents in Panama, he said.

However, later in the afternoon, Martinez somehow managed to escape from the bank, said Bruce Page, of the Justice Department.

EPA files suit over asbestos

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency accused demolition contractors in 11 states Tuesday of violating asbestos-removal safeguards in schools, restaurants and other buildings.

Civil lawsuits seeking unspecified damages were filed by the government against 33 companies and individuals plus the New York City Board of Education.

Officials said the cases represent only a small number of the hundreds of construction projects where asbestos is being removed without proper safeguards.

The agency estimated that as many as half the asbestos-connected demolitions and renovations conducted nationwide may not be in accordance with procedures required by federal air pollution laws.

Those laws require, for example, that asbestos be removed before demolition begins, that it be wetted and enclosed in bags and that it be transported in covered trucks to approved disposal areas so that microscopic fibers are not spread through the air.

The inhalation of asbestos fibers is known to cause lung cancer, asbestosis, a scarring of the lung, and mesothelioma, a cancer of the chest and abdomen. Asbestos was used before the mid-1970s as insulation in many buildings. Today more than 700,000 buildings still contain some of the cancer-causing material, according to the government.

At the request of the EPA, the Justice Department filed 13 civil suits Tuesday in U.S. district courts in 11 cities, accusing the defendants of violating asbestos-removal requirements, according to the agency.

Sentences not working for drunks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Special license plates and tough-drinks sentences by the only judge in a small Ohio town don't seem to deter tipsy drivers, concluded a study released Tuesday.

The study compared drunken driving statistics and interviewed drivers and law enforcement officials in Cambridge, Ohio, and near-by New Philadelphia, where no-nonsense Judge Edward O'Farrell has been handing out unusually strict sentences to intoxicated drivers.

Researchers said their surveys "failed to show less drinking and driving in New Philadelphia."

In drunken driving cases, O'Farrell since 1982 routinely has handed out 15-day jail sentences to first-time offenders; imposed a standard $750 fine; rejected plea bargains; and required the "vehicles of restricted drivers to be tagged with a distinctive red-on-yellow license plate."

In Cambridge, 40 miles south of New Philadelphia, drunken drivers usually get sentences of three days or less in special education camps.

The report funded by AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety showed motorists in the two towns had a good sense of their relative chances of going to jail if caught driving under the influence. The drivers were aware, that jails were overcrowded and that there were a relatively small number of police on patrol.

In the study, anonymous spot checks that included breath tests found a comparable number of drunken drivers in both communities.

The report said that before changing their driving habits, drinkers have to be convinced there's a strong likelihood of getting caught and going to jail.

Air Force schedules bomb range hearings

TWIN FALLS - The Air Force has set the time and place for public hearings on its proposal to expand the Saylor Creek Bombing Range.

The Twin Falls hearing has been scheduled at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 5 in the College of Southern Idaho's Aspen Building. Public comments will form the basis of an environmental impact statement on the 15-fold expansion of the bombing range.

Meetings also are scheduled on Sept. 7 in the Glenn Perry Rural Health Clinic, on Sept. 11 in Grandview's Rimrock High School Auditorium and on Sept. 5 in Boise City Hall.

The Air Force's plans will be the subject of two other meetings tonight.

U.S. Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, plans a town meeting from 7 to 9 at the Mountain Home High School Gym. The Air Force project is expected to be a big topic.

And the Committee for Idaho's High Desert has invited Grace Bukowsky of Nevada Citizens Alert to speak at 7 p.m. in the KMVT Community Room on Blue Lakes Boulevard.

The group plans another meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday in the Ketchum Old City Hall.

Deadline for rodeo entrants today at county fair grounds

FILER - Local cowboys interested in entering the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association rodeo in Filer must do so by 5 p.m. today at the Twin Falls County Fair office on the fairgrounds.

Local cowboys are allowed to enter only one PRCA-sanctioned rodeo each year unless they are card holders.

This year's rodeo will be held Sept. 6 through 9 and will include three nights of Wrangler bullfights.

Each contestant is required to sign a release form and pay entry fees and insurance. For more information, call 326-4366.

Agencies stage a disaster to test local preparedness

TWIN FALLS - Looks may have been deceiving Tuesday night, when a school bus carrying about 25 people seemed to have collided with a Simplot Soltbuilders truck carrying anhydrous ammonia.

The blood streaming down the faces of injured bus riders faces was fake. The catastrophe was only a test for law enforcement, health and environmental agencies.

The state Emergency Medical Services Bureau created such a surprise "county disaster drill" once a year to keep the agencies on their toes.

"Disasters don't happen that often and when they do, everyone needs to know what to do," said Dave Hadden, regional EMS director.

Jerome seeks comments on ambulance tax district

JEROME - County residents can comment on the proposed ambulance taxing district the county commissioners are forming at a public hearing Sept. 11.

"We have our budget set, and we are starting to advertise for EMTs," said Commissioner Carl Montgomery, noting that the commissioners have met with members of the East End Quick Response Team and with personnel from St. Benedict's Family Medical Center to form the district.

The hospital asked the county last year to take over the district because it was continuing to lose money on ambulance services. The commissioners hope to assure ambulance service to residents of Jerome County in a cost-effective way and have the district in place by Oct. 1.

The hearing is set for 10 a.m. in the courthouse commission room.

Craters of Moon presents program to mark anniversary

ARCO - The National Park Service turns 73 Friday. Craters of the Moon National Monument will present a special program on the history of the National Park Service at 5 p.m. Friday.

To celebrate its birthday, Park Service Director James M. Ridenour has named Aug. 25 "National Parks Day." The service was established on that day in 1916. National parks around the country will celebrate the day with special activities and suspension of entrance fees.

Some parks plan to mark the day with birthday cakes, cookies and celebrations including videos and campfire talks on Park Service history. At the Crater Lake National Park in Oregon, rangers will be handing out cookies shaped like the Park Service logo instead of collecting entrance fees.

Citizen blasts Ketchum plans for new budget

KETCHUM - The city is spending the taxpayer's money "like a drunken sailor," a local resident accused the City Council this week.

Resident Ed Scott told the council it proposed $4,243 million budget included unnecessary expenditures. He directed his criticism at three major issues: city support for the Chamber of Commerce's promotional budget, the city's parking lot at Second and Washington Street and what Scott described as "the least-used bus system in the world."

The council took no action on the budget but said the public could comment during the next council meeting, on Sept. 5, when a budget must be approved.

The $4,243 million proposed budget is about 11 percent higher than the current.

If 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt concurs, the Moyles will have to pay the Determined Citizens' legal fees, which Nielson estimates to be about $7,000.

But the Moyles' attorney, William Tway of Boise, had a different epilogue in mind when he asked the judge this week to reconsider his dismissal of the Moyles' case.

Hurlbutt took both requests under advisement - leaving unsettled whether either side will have to pay for the other side's lawyer.

The Determined Citizens went to court in late 1987 to close the adult book and video store, to confiscate its inventory so it could be destroyed, to prevent the building from being occupied for one year and to force the Moyles to forfeit all rent money. They sued the Front Page and the Moyles in December 1987.

But the Front Page closed down the next day.

Magic Valley drugs, alcohol concern officials

By MARTA CLEAVELAND Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The Magic Valley has a problem with alcohol and drugs, and every citizen must take part in creating a cure, local and state leaders said in a Twin Falls meeting.

"What we are facing is something that is eating us away from the inside," said Mike Black, executive director of the Idaho Commission on Alcohol and Drug Abuse.

"I would encourage you all to become whistle blowers," he said. "When you see something illegal, whether it's selling drugs on a street corner or selling alcohol to minors, call the police. Blow the whistle on your own kids."

The local Moose Lodge sponsored a gathering of community leaders Monday night including state legislators, county commissioners, and city officials for a "mobilization meeting" on Twin Falls' war on drugs.

Black rattled off some imposing statistics of drug-related problems in Idaho:

- Half the traffic deaths in Idaho are drug- or alcohol-related.
- Three-fourths of all child and sex abuse is substance related.
- Sixty percent to 80 percent of all welfare recipients are involved with or victims of substance abuse.
- Eighty-five percent of all crimes are directly related to alcohol or drug abuse.
- In our efforts to fight the sale of drugs in our community we are sadly unorganized. It's hit and miss," said Paul Du Fresnoe, Twin Falls public safety director. "People need to remember that selling drugs makes a lot of money for somebody, and they spend that money in ways to avoid getting caught."

The valley can't wait for things to get bad here before it starts applying resources to the problem, he said. Prevention is easier and cheaper than cures.

"We say to ourselves, 'It can't happen to me.'" Black said. "This is Idaho, this isn't New York City."

It's easy to blame someone else for the Mexican national victim of Jackpot shooting

By The Times-News and The Associated Press

JACKPOT, Nev. - A 22-year-old Mexican national was fatally shot Monday night outside a hotel-casino here in a gunfight with a man who later was wounded by Elko County sheriff's deputies, authorities said.

Elko County Sheriff Jim Miller said the killing, the second the county has suffered in less than four days, has slowed the investigation into the murder of two Twin Falls residents.

"It's just been hectic," Miller said. He is still waiting autopsy reports in the murder of Russell Boyd, 64, and Levirl Tolman, 65.

Miller today identified the man killed Monday as Jesus Gonzales and the man who allegedly shot him as Jose Gonzales, who apparently is in his 50s and also a Mexican national.

Miller said authorities don't know if the two are related and the investigation is being hampered because Gonzales doesn't speak English.

The gunfight occurred at about 9 p.m. in the parking lot of Cactus Pete's hotel-casino, Miller said.

Authorities said that after Jose Gonzales fatally wounded Jesus Gonzales, the gunman held off Elko County deputies for a short time, emptying his .22-caliber handgun before being wounded by deputies by a shot to his stomach.

Miller said the man is recovering Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, where he is in stable but serious condition.

In a lawsuit filed Monday with the 6th District Court, Bernadine Francis Davis accused May & May Law Offices of failing to protect her legal interests.

In court papers, Davis says she suffered serious injuries and even lost her job after she became an innocent victim in a head-on collision on Dec. 3, 1986.

Davis said the Twin Falls law firm agreed in the summer of 1987 to help her attempt to recover damages from the two drivers involved in the accident.

Spud market approaches record prices

By The Associated Press and The Times-News

BOISE — The Idaho potato market soared in July, closing in on a record price in a year producers are looking for another good crop.

Preliminary assessment of the market last month put the "all-price" for potatoes — which is the weighted average of fresh and processed prices — at $9.05 per hundred pounds, only the second time over the monthly average has exceeded $9 and just 15 cents short of the record price posted in July 1981.

"A lot of the fresh market prices have been way above that, but the processing prices were down around $5," said Doug Wong, statistician with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Statistics Reporting Service. Lately the processing prices have risen, bringing up the "all-price," he said.

The $1.60 hike in the "all-price" from June marked the 10th straight month prices for potatoes have risen. A year ago, the "all-price" stood at $3.50 a hundredweight.

The government will not release its estimate for potato production until November, but after Idaho growers cashed in on the rising market last year with the fourth largest crop on record, they basically held the line on acreage this year. The 1988 crop was valued at nearly $457 million.

That move coupled with continuing weather problems in other major potato producing areas has kept the market from crumbling. Land in the state's number one cash crop increased only fractionally to 351,000 acres, and with irrigation supplies adequate again industry officials are expecting another solid harvest.

The only drawback to this season's production could be some scattered frost damage and the replacement of key chemicals with less effective ones because of health concerns.

The markets on other fronts, however, began to weaken as the fall neared. The average price for dried beans slipped slightly from June, but it remained over $32 a hundredweight as growers looked toward harvesting their third largest crop ever. July was the sixth straight month the price has been over $30, nearly 50 percent higher than a year ago.

The alfalfa hay market continued its decline as this year's crop began filling the void left by a drought-affected 1988 season and a harsh winter that increased demand for supplemental feed. After hitting a record $59 a ton in April, the price has been dropping and lost another $7 last month to sink to $50 a ton.

With a near-record wheat harvest in the offing, the all-wheat price slipped below $4 a bushel for the first time in 10 months, dropping $3.88. But that was still a dime higher than the national average price last month.

Beef cattle prices also lost ground, falling below $60 a hundredweight for the first time this year. The 40-cent decline to $59.90 brought the market average to its lowest level since December as a slippage was reported in all cattle categories.

Buhl looks at cost of new fire station, equipment

By MIKEL BENTON Times-News correspondent

BUHL — A new fire station would cost the owner of a $25,000 home $40 a year, according to estimates.

William W. Jr. of West One Bank told the council about a bond issue to finance the fire department's proposed project and pitched his bank's proposal to be the city's financial advisor.

"One of the reasons you hire someone like me is to take the responsibility in marketing a municipal bond issue from your shareholders," W. said. Besides marketing the bonds, his department would also provide pre-election advice.

In other action, the council voted unanimously to adopt the tentative budget and set the budget hearing at 7 p.m. Sept. 7, including prospective grants and airport, library and local improvement district funds, the city's budget is $2,455 million.

The budget was boosted recently by the inclusion of $917,550 in grant funds — Fire Chief Mark Grimes last month proposed to the council building a new fire station and installing more equipment, all at costs estimated between $455,000 and $729,200, depending on the extent of the project. The council made no commitment and asked Grimes to return with more specific information.

"This so far is just tentative; just an examination of the possibility," Mayor Tom Tappen said.

The new building and equipment would improve the city's fire rating by one step, Grimes has said.

Grimes chose a preliminary site next to the city's public works shop on Ninth Avenue South. "It has good frontage on to a wide street," he said. "It has a centralized location. It gives us access to four major routes."

He also said his department has identified basic equipment needs, but that he hasn't been able to provide an estimate of what this would cost taxpayers.

Way recommended the city work with a bond not exceeding $700,000. At current rates of $1.59 per $1,000 of taxable value, that would mean the owner of a $25,000 home would pay $40 a year to repay the bond issue.

Administrative costs, such as legal counsel and printing, would be $100,000 — including $65,000 as the bank's fee. "Our fee is predicated on the fact that the election is successful," W. said. The bank will charge the city nothing if the election fails, he said.

Should the bond issue fail, however, the city would still incur costs. Way estimated that an unsuccessful election would cost $300-$600, including legal fees, publishing election notices and paying polling workers.

Burley includes handicapped access in new budget

By DONNA SCHORZMAN Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The City Council approved the proposed budget for the 1989-90 fiscal year for $10,574 million but only after some discussion from representatives from the Idaho Citizens Network.

Those chair-bound representatives wanted to be sure the council included money for a ramp and elevator to make Burley City Hall accessible to handicapped residents. The council did budget money for the ramp and elevator and members asked Public Works Director Leon Bedke to come up with specifications for the remodeling so they can ask for bids.

The fire department budget will jump about $50,000 for new equipment and uniforms. The street budget rises about $146,000, about $125,000 of that for a new street sweeper.

The total budget is about $65,520 more than last year.

City Attorney Bill Parsons will prepare a lease agreement between the city and Smith's Food King for a parcel of land near Hiland and Main Street. Bruce Nelson, of Price Poulton Co., representing Smith's, said the company has secured options on all the other parcels of ground. The company can begin to close on those as soon as the city signs the lease agreement, he said.

According to Nelson, Smith's would like to pour concrete for the new building this fall.

The new store will be built on the south side of Main Street.

The council also instructed Parsons to write ordinances to vacate two different alleys, one behind the property of Virginia Estes in the 1200 block between Burton and Shodde and one between two parcels of land owned by Larry and Phyllis Larson at 1550 Elba.

If the ordinances pass, the city will retain easement right-of-ways to repair utilities.

Bedke went on record opposing any more granting of easements. He said that many people put up fences and structures or plant trees or gardens on the property which makes it difficult to get to the utilities without tearing up yards. Even if the city does have the right to the property, property owners often become angry.

The council will vote on the ordinances at the next meeting.

In a related matter, the council granted permission for Tires West to build an addition over a city waterline easement, but only if no problems with the waterline occur.

In other business:

- The council instructed Parks and Recreation Director Ron Plogger to work out details for a contract with Burley resident John Hurst to allow him to operate a mobile concession stand at Burley parks.
- The council accepted a bid from Gordon Paving for $57,000 to repair the pavement on a portion of 16th Street.

- Attorney Kent Fletcher, sitting in for Bill Parsons, advised the council against accepting the donation of the old Romney Apartment building, which has been vacant for some time, unless the city can get a salvage company to demolish it for the salvage value. The council will consider letting bids out to see if it is feasible.
- The council suggested to Janet Filer, representing Cassia County Schools, that she ask the Fair Board for permission to park in the fairgrounds so children can attend a pre-Centennial function at the museum without having to cross the streets. She has asked the council to block off a portion of Hiland Avenue north of Main Street.
- The city passed a resolution to set city elections for Nov. 7.

Ranchers criticize Air Force flyovers

PARK VALLEY, Utah (AP) — Ranchers living and working on the western desert site of the proposed Utah Test and Training Range say low-flying jets have them feeling like they're the targets.

"You get to feeling like you're the enemy — out there," said Utah Cattlemen's Association President Gary Rose. "It gets a little bit ridiculous."

Air Force officials say they are making efforts to not disturb people on the range, and during hearings Monday night in Park Valley and Grouse Creek urged residents with complaints about flying to call the Air Force.

While such diplomacy may help soothe the ruffled feathers, conflict between two groups using the range for such different purposes is to be expected, others said.

dropped since the Air Force began holding meetings. He also said his cattle seem to adjust to the jet noise.

Webster said 27,000 sorties went over the range last year, about 10,500 flying north of Interstate 80 and more than 8,000 F-16 fighter flights venturing near the north edge of the range around Park Valley and Grouse Creek.

In that time, Hill Air Force Base, where UTR staff is based, received 16 complaints. "We think we're doing a pretty good job," Webster said.

Rose, of Park Valley, disagrees. "It hasn't changed," he said of the frequency with which he is swooped down upon by fighters that spook his horse. He said he used to report such incidents but gave up.

"What good does it do me to come and report it?" Rose said.

He said he believes the pilots are aware of ranchers and their herds but still make low passes, sometimes repeatedly. "They had to know that we were there," Rose said.

Park Valley's Colleen Wright said her husband has been buzzed while working on mountaintop microwave towers for Western Union. "Some of your planes have flown so close to him he can read the numbers," she said. "He feels like they're using him for target practice."

"He may fly over you," said Col. Glen Jepsen, deputy commander of operations for Hill's 419th Tactical Fighter Wing. "It's not intentional, but he may fly over you ... It does happen."

Jepsen said pilots sincerely want to avoid disturbing people on the ground. "We try to do that," he said. "We really, honestly do."

Webster said pilots making repeated passes likely are engaged in mock interception maneuvering or dogfighting. "It's almost impossible to know where everyone is going to be at all times," Webster said. "This is one of the busiest major test ranges in the United States."

Rose said he recognized the need for national defense testing and training, but argued against more flying expected with the Air Force's planned electronic combat test capability south of Interstate 80.

He said the UCA would "bitterly oppose any further increases. There's enough right now. We're very cooperative up to a point. We've reached the saturation point."

Kitchen workers prepare meals for firefighters in a warehouse basement

Fire cooks savor their work

SALMON (AP)— They don't see the firefighters they cook for, but the women of the Salmon National Forest fire kitchen fuss over every meal as if their favorite children were coming to dinner.

During fire season, two crews of local women work round the clock. Housed in the basement of the Bureau of Land Management Forest Service warehouse, the 20-by-30-foot kitchen can prepare meals for 700, and the cooks have pushed the limit to more than 1,000 when firefighters on lines in other parts of the state are still waiting for their caterers to arrive.

They cook in five-and ten-gallon pots and stir their concoctions with ax handles. The meals are airlifted to the fire camps.

Retired cook Evelyn Yakovac was on hand when the fire kitchen opened more than 40 years ago.

It was before the Forest Service used helicopters, so meals were packed in five-gallon tins and parachuted into the camps. Mrs.

Yakovac recalls one fire in which the T-Bone steaks they sent got hung up in a tree and spoiled before the crews could get them down.

The advent of helicopters and pickups helped improve things, she said. It even meant they could send pies to the crews. After the Corn Creek fire in 1961, Mrs. Yakovac went home and built enough pie boxes to feed 180 people. They've been sending out pies ever since.

Forest Service regulations now require a caterer for a fire camp of more than 250, but the fire kitchen still finds itself busy, serving smaller camps and picking up the caterers' slack.

"We do everything homemade here, everything from scratch," said Virginia Perry, Mrs. Yakovac's daughter and a 34-year veteran who serves as head cook for the five-person daytime crew.

Their menus include such entrees as steak, chops, chicken, asseroles, and sloppy joes, plus a variety of salads and baked goods. A meal of stew and fruit salad for 700 requires 100 gallons of stew, 50 gallons fruit salad, 90 gallons of coffee, 70 gallons of punch, and 18 gallons of milk.

The women turn out meals for less than $10 a day for each firefighter. Forest Service spokeswoman Eileen Havens said. In contrast, the Forest Service this year paid caterers more than $28 a day for each firefighter's meals.

But when the kitchen first began, there were no caterers. The fire kitchen served everyone.

"We've done it all," Mrs. Perry said. "We could still do it if we had more room."

And firefighters like the kitchen's fare.

"The thing I have to watch is that I don't gain weight," a Utah firefighter admitted.

Cooks remember one fire with a spike camp they were feeding kept coming up short of food.

Police believe Stevens' story

SEATTLE (AP)— The man who has been dubbed a "viable suspect" in the Green River killings was out of town when the series of murders of prostitutes began, authorities said.

An investigator said Monday that a task force had confirmed an alibi offered by William Jay Stevens II, apparently clearing the onetime law student of at least the first four of the 40 or more serial murders linked to the mysterious killer.

King County Police Capt. Robert Evans, head of the task force, said Stevens was apparently vacationing on the East Coast during July 1982, when the first victims were killed. His comments were reported in today's editions of The Seattle Times and were confirmed by his spokesman, Cecil Ray.

"He's still considered a person of interest. He is not being dropped," Ray said today.

Stevens' family called a news conference in Spokane last week and produced credit card receipts and photographs to document a family vacation they said proved Stevens was not in the Seattle area when the first murders occurred.

Police have attributed the killings of 40 young women in the Seattle and Portland, Ore., areas, to one or more killers. The women disappeared during 1982 through 1984.

The case takes its name from the south King County river where the first victims were found. Police say at least 40 and possibly as many as 48 murders are involved in the nation's worst unsolved serial murder case.

Evans said the investigation of Stevens would continue.

"This means we appear to have verified one piece of the equation," Evans said. "We will continue our work until we're satisfied he has no involvement in any unsolved crimes in King County."

Stevens, a former Gonzaga Law School student, is serving time in the King County Jail in Seattle for a 1981 escape from work release after a conviction for possessing stolen property. He is scheduled for release Sept. 25.

He was identified as a "viable suspect" in an affidavit used last month to obtain a search warrant of two Spokane residences where he lived. That search yielded 1,800 videotapes, police uniforms and extensive credit card records.

Since the search, investigators have referred to Stevens as a "person of interest."

Stevens has not been arrested or charged in connection with the Green River killings. He issued a statement through his attorney denying his involvement.

Programmer, businessman indicted

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)— A Hill Air Force Base computer programmer and a Cache County businessman have been indicted by a federal grand jury on 12 counts of bribery stemming from an alleged contract kickback scheme.

The indictment, handed up Monday in U.S. District Court, names Steven Larry Peterson, 32, of West Jordan, and Thomas Gary Anderson, 33, of Nibley.

Peterson and Anderson are charged with six counts each of entering into an agreement to kickback profits from a computer contract arranged by Peterson, a programmer and analyst at Hill's Directorate of Maintenance.

Peterson also is charged with one count of stealing a government computer.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Bruce C. Lubeck said Tuesday that the two men are to be arraigned before a federal magistrate. However, court officials said no arraignment date had been set.

The grand jury alleged Anderson was a sales representative and a member of the board of directors of the Intermountain Scientific Corp., headquartered in Bountiful.

Peterson, a base civilian employee, was assigned to maintain the Zenith computer system at Hill and his duties included generating purchase requests. Federal prosecutors said Peterson's job allowed him to recommend sources for purchasing computer materials.

The indictments charge that, between the summer of 1988 and the spring of 1989, Peterson contacted Anderson.

Corrections claims ACLU can't use contempt order

LEWISTON (AP)— The Department of Corrections says the American Civil Liberties Union cannot seek a contempt order in its legal action to improve conditions for women held at the state penitentiary at Orofino.

Director Richard Vornon says the state also has $12,000 available to improve facilities for women prisoners.

"They say the consent decree is not enforceable by contempt," said Howard Belodoff of Idaho Legal Aid which, together with ACLU, filed a class action suit in 1982 on behalf of women prisoners.

Belodoff, who said he received the Brief Monday, would not comment on it.

The suit alleged unequal treatment for women and resulted in a U.S. District Court-approved agreement in 1985. It was renewed in 1988 but expired in July this year.

A contempt motion was filed in July in U.S. District Court at Boise, asking that the court order the department to ensure equal treatment for women prisoners.

About 40 women are housed in the Idaho Correctional Institute-Orofino, the only maximum and medium-security prison for women in the state. It was alleged in the contempt motion that women prisoners live in "intolerable living conditions" and the housing is often "dirty, dark and unbearably hot."

The conditions are partly the result of construction of a new block for male prisoners, the motion claimed.

In a written response, Corrections listed improvements it has made in living conditions for women prisoners since the agreement was made, Belodoff said. He said Legal Aid does not necessarily agree with the assertions.

These include obtaining assistance of a recreation coordinator to help supervise and develop recreational opportunities.

Utah range fire over 1,700 acres

GRANTSVILLE, Utah (AP)— Gusty winds propelled an out-of-control range fire to more than 1,700 acres Tuesday in Box Elder Canyon about eight miles southwest of this western Utah desert community, authorities said.

The blaze, which began some time Monday night, was spreading fast through grass, sagebrush, piñon and juniper fuels, said Interagency Fire Center Director Pete Hansen.

"The real problem right now is with the winds," he said, noting that gusts of 25-30 mph out of the southwest were pushing the blaze north.

About 100 firefighters, unable to make a stand in front of the fast-moving flames, were attacking the fire's flanks Tuesday afternoon, Hansen said.

He said an air tanker also had been put on standby in Boise, Idaho, but there were no immediate plans to use it for fire-retardant bombardment missions.

"It's about two hours away, but at least we've got one if we need it," Hansen said.

Fire crews representing the state, Wasatch National Forest and Bureau of Land Management were assigned to the blaze.

Gorbachev: Party vital to Poland's future

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Poland's Communist Party chief conferred Tuesday and agreed that solving Poland's problems is impossible without the Communist Party, a party spokesman said.

The conversation came as Tadeusz Mazowiecki, the Solidarity prime minister-designate, held talks on forming the East bloc's first government led by non-communists.

Gorbachev, the head of the Soviet Union Communist Party, held a 40-minute telephone conversation with Mieczyslaw F. Rakowski, head of Poland's Communist Party, said party spokesman Jan Bizyga.

Gorbachev expressed confidence that the Polish party would successfully solve the social and economic problems in the interest of socialism and voice the conviction that solving these problems is impossible without the Communist Party, Bizyga said.

TADEUSZ MAZOWIECKI
Arrives for negotiations

Poland's Communist Party is pressing for maximum representation in the new Cabinet.

Mazowiecki met with leaders of Poland's political factions and said he hopes to form his government within a week.

The parliament vote to confirm his nomination as prime minister was postponed from today until Thursday to allow further consultations, said Sejm Speaker Mikolaj Kozakiewicz.

Although there are enough votes for Mazowiecki's election, even without support from the Communist Party, the prime minister-designate faces the delicate task of balancing competing interests in the new alliance.

Mazowiecki met Jan Janowski, the floor leader of the Democratic Party, outgoing Prime Minister Czeslaw Kiszczak and Minister Orzechowski, the parliamentary leader of the Communist Party.

The long, one-on-one meeting with Kiszczak at an undisclosed location was "serious and interesting," Mazowiecki said afterward at the offices of the Solidarity weekly he edits.

Later at the National Assembly, Mazowiecki said he had "a very intensive conversation about problems which interest us" with Orzechowski. He also met with the speakers of the Sejm and Senate, the two chambers of the National Assembly.

The distribution of portfolios and the name of future ministers are the capital's most sought-after secret.

Authorities blame Prague protests on foreign visitors

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — State-run media on Tuesday blamed foreigners visiting under the guise of tourists for stirring up protests by thousands on the 21st anniversary of the 1968 Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Authorities said 370 people, including 50 foreigners, were arrested.

By evening, there was still no word on the fate of Hungarians, Poles and Italians arrested when hundreds of helmeted riot police wielding truncheons broke up crowds demanding freedom and withdrawal of Soviet troops who crushed the "Prague Spring" reforms 21 years ago.

Hungarian consul Lajos Tabo said his embassy received telephone calls indicating nine Hungarians were detained. Polish press attache Krzysztof Opalski said he heard on state radio that three Poles were held, but that the Czechoslovak Foreign Ministry had given his embassy no official word on detentions.

Extra police remained on patrol Tuesday in Prague's central Wenceslas Square, checking the papers of bystanders and Western journalists. A folk group and brass band played on the spot where Monday's protests erupted.

Prague radio asserted that 1,000 Italians and 3,000 Polish Solidarity activists had come to the capital under what it termed "tourism in disguise" to stir up the demonstrations.

"The provocation was brought about by those who traveled under the guise of tourism," said a similar commentary on TV. "They came here to give us advice. Nobody likes this and we Czechoslovaks are no exception."

The commentaries were an apparent attempt by Czechoslovakia's entrenched leadership to ignore domestic pressure for reform and depict such pressure as the work of outsiders.

The authorities and media had campaigned for weeks prior to the anniversary against groups and warned several times that force would be used to break up protests.

Police have cracked down hard on independent activists in recent weeks, harassing several and cutting their telephones. Charter '77 spokeswoman Dana Nemcova said Tuesday that dozens of people were put in preventative detention over the weekend.

Some of those were free Tuesday, but others were still unaccounted for, said Nemcova, who with her activist son, David, was under-house arrest from early Sunday until late Monday night.

Many other leading activists warned to stay out of Prague and other big cities. Some, including prominent human rights campaigner Vaclav Havel, appealed against street protests, fearing bloodshed.

Several of the 370 people the Communist Party daily Rude Pravo said were detained Monday were beaten by police.

Baltic residents mourn loss of area independence

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Baltic residents Tuesday mourned the loss of their independence a half-century ago as an "international crime" that must be swept aside by a tide of reform and the effort of Hitler and Stalin as "monsters of the 20th century."

About 50,000 people gathered in Vilnius, the capital of Lithuania, on the eve of the 50th anniversary of a treaty between Adolf Hitler's Germany and Josef Stalin's Soviet Union that brought Soviet tanks rolling into Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.

Baltic residents plan to mark the anniversary of the 1939 agreement on Wednesday with a human chain stretching 370 miles from Tallinn, Estonia, on the Gulf of Finland, to the Polish-Lithuanian border. Activists predict 1.5 million people will join it.

A Lithuanian legislative commission in a report published Tuesday declared that "the realization of the illegal German-Soviet agreements of 1939-41 constitute an international crime."

Grassroots activists issued a statement in Riga, Latvia, demanding the absorption of the republics be recognized both inside the Soviet Union and internationally as an act of aggression.

Commemoration of the anniversary in the Baltics, as well as other regions such as the Western Ukraine and Moldavia, illustrated the Kremlin's dilemma dealing with ethnic minorities clamoring for greater freedom. Soviets now more than ever are free to criticize Stalin, but an official finding that annexation of the Baltics was illegal would raise the question of total independence.

Showing the power that independence movements have accumulated in the Baltic governments, the commission of the Lithuanian Supreme Soviet declared that approving annexation was beyond the powers of the Lithuanian parliament of the time and "absolutely against the will of the citizens of Lithuania."

The report will be forwarded to the full Supreme Soviet in Lithuania and a spokesman for Sjudis, the People's Front organization of Lithuania, said it may eventually form the basis for a republic-wide referendum on future relations with the Soviet Union.

Flight 103 kin visit the scene; confer with investigators

LOCKERBIE, Scotland (AP) — Relatives of those killed on Pan Am Flight 103 met Tuesday with police officers to investigate the bombing of the New York-bound flight and said they were confident the killers would soon be found.

Bert Ammerman, U.S. president of the Victims of Pan Am Flight 103, called it "the most positive meeting we have had so far."

"I am very, very confident after this meeting that the terrorists, the people who carried this out, are going to be identified and the next stage is to try to apprehend them," he said.

"The police are very confident it is going to take place and the terrorists are going to be identified, we hope in the very near future."

Asked why he thought police would soon identify the bombers, Ammerman replied: "You are not naive enough and I am not naive enough to think that they (the police) are going to give us information about the criminal investigation."

"There was a specific overview which makes us feel everything is being done and done most appropriately," he said.

Ammerman stayed Monday night with the Rev. Patrick Keegane, a Roman Catholic priest whose Lockerbie house was destroyed when parts of the jumbo jet crashed on the southern Scottish town on Dec. 21, 1988. All 259 people aboard were killed along with 11 people on the ground.

Ammerman and five other Americans were accompanied by Jim Squire, head of the British relatives' group.

"Eight months after Lockerbie it appears as if nothing has been done to increase security at Heathrow Airport," Squire said on the way into the meeting.

The relatives had a private meeting with Detective Chief Superintendent John Orr, the senior investigating officer; George Esson, Chief Constable of the Dumfries and Galloway regional police force; and Norman McFadyen, a senior Scottish law officer.

The relatives later visited a building where the Flight 103 victims' possessions, not yet returned to next of kin, were stored.

They saw rows of cardboard cartons and on top of one, a battered gray suitcase. Several police officers wearing overalls and protective gloves were sorting through shirts, shoes and other items of clothing.

Study says low-fat, skim-milk lacking in important vitamins

Los Angeles Times
Low-fat and skim milk is frequently deficient in two important vitamins, according to a recent study by University of California, Davis researchers.

The survey discovered that levels of vitamins A and D fluctuated significantly below and above the amounts set by federal regulations for fortified milk.

The study, requested by the dairy industry, was prompted by the advent of a more accurate technique for monitoring vitamin content in milk. The discovery that the nutritional content of milk fluctuated from one company to another was initially made by state and federal regulators, according to John C. Bruhn, director of the project and a food technologist with the UC Davis Cooperative Extension.

Milk is nutritionally fortified by machines that pump vitamins into the fluid. The enhancement can also be done manually. In these plants, however, the researchers say, the vitamin pumps were not operating correctly but the deficiency went undetected because of antiquated measuring devices.

Beef to get federal scrutiny for possible contamination

Los Angeles Times
Beef will receive federal scrutiny for possible contamination during the coming school year, according to a meat industry trade publication.

The Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Marketing Service has announced that it will survey microbial levels in ground beef served as part of the 1989-90 school lunch program, reports Leon Trimmings, published by the Western States Meat Association.

The study's objective is to determine how bacteria levels affect the quality and storage life of the meat while it is frozen.

1 out of 12 animals contain harmful bacteria, tests find

Los Angeles Times
A federal survey designed to detect the presence of salmonella in cattle herds found that one in 12 animals contains the harmful bacteria. The discovery that 8 percent of the animals leaving feedlots for slaughter are contaminated was made in tests conducted by U.S. Department of Agriculture scientists, according to Nutrition Week.

Although troublesome, the rate for salmonella in beef is far below that being found in the nation's poultry. As many as 40 percent of the chickens entering retail channels in this country are believed to be infected with salmonella bacteria. Poultry products are also suspected as one of the leading causes of food-related salmonellosis cases in this country.

Small steps make a healthy difference

"Lightening up" your meals isn't just about cutting calories or fat anymore. The latest word from health and nutrition experts tells us that it's really too much saturated fat that poses the greatest risk to your health. Here, traditional favorites, such as fried chicken, green beans amandine, rice pilaf and apple pie, are made over. All it takes is a few simple changes in your everyday meals and you can eat healthier without sacrificing the foods you love.

To make over your favorite recipes, it's smart to choose low-fat cooking methods such as broiling, grilling and stir-frying. In addition, look for ways to reduce saturated fat, which studies show to be the biggest elevator of blood cholesterol levels. One small step is to substitute oil for butter or lard when cooking or baking.

Lemon Basil Grilled Chicken is flavored with a tangy herb marinade, then grilled or broiled.

Accompaniments such as Brown Rice Primavera and Sesame Green Beans round out this healthy main dish. Hearty brown rice, speckled with brightly colored vegetables, provides more fiber and has less saturated fat than a traditional white rice pilaf.

In addition, Sesame Green Beans offer an appealing change of pace from the higher fat, old standby, Green Beans Amandine.

Just because you are streamlining your menu, doesn't mean you have to cut out dessert. Instead, opt for an elegant, open-faced fruit tart rather than a rich, mile-high apple pie. Pear-Raisin Tart, a low-fat update on everyone's favorite dessert, features a single crust flavored with cinnamon and nutmeg. The pear slices, which are tossed with orange juice, sugar and spices, are decoratively arranged in the pastry shell and topped with an apricot-raisin glaze. Pear-Raisin Tart is certainly the "just desserts" for streamlining your menu and trading higher saturated fats for lower ones.

Preparing lamb properly demands careful cooking

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — From the dozen or so of her favorite lamb recipes, Miriam Breckenridge chooses two or three to prepare each week. She says both she and her husband John, who were in the range sheep business for 37 years, enjoy the flavor of the meat very much.

Breckenridge says a lot of people have never eaten lamb that has been properly cooked, and therefore they don't like it. She says during World War II and the Korean War servicemen were given lots of improperly cooked old mutton, and decided they did not like lamb at all.

Eating lamb in a restaurant can turn people off to it, too, she says. "The poor thing has been cooked for hours, and they've added stuffing from someplace - it has nothing to do with the lamb. Most roast lamb served in restaurants is cooked to death, and is tasteless, flat and dry."

That would hardly describe the succulent lamb dishes that result from careful cooking. Breckenridge says the most important thing about lamb preparation is that it should not be cooked too long, and must be cooked slowly.

"And don't smother it with a lot of other food," she says. "In other words, you let the taste of the lamb be there. You just want the lamb moist and tasty, and not overcooked - which is a very common habit."

Here are a few of Breckenridge's lamb recipes, beginning with one that would be fun to try in the back yard on Labor Day.

OUTDOOR LAMB KEBABS
Serves six
2 pounds lamb shoulder or leg, cubed (about 1")
12 small whole onions, cooked
6 cherry tomatoes
12 large pimento stuffed olives
Salt and pepper
1/2 cup vinegar

Even kitchen novices can get rave reviews

Even a newcomer to the kitchen will receive rave reviews with this quick and elegant dinner of Stuffed Chicken Breasts with Veronique Sauce.

Simply roll the chicken breasts around the grape stuffing mixture and secure with toothpicks. To save a bit of time, blanch the onion ties in the microwave and wrap around each chicken bundle. Finish off with a square knot and clip the onion ends with kitchen shears. Sauté the chicken in oil until brown; gently remove the toothpicks before placing in the oven.

Use the 15-20 minute baking time to pull together the Veronique Sauce; tuck the dirty pans in the dishwasher and give the candlesticks a quick polish.

As the guests pull up to the table, rest each chicken breast on a bed of brown rice and serve with steamed vegetables.

- STUFFED CHICKEN BREASTS WITH VERONIQUE SAUCE
- 1/2 cup sliced celery
 - 1/2 cup chopped onion
 - 4 teaspoons butter or margarine
 - 2 cups dry whole wheat bread cubes
 - 1/2 cup grapes
 - 1/4 to 1/3 cup chicken broth
 - 1/2 teaspoon tarragon, crushed
 - pepper to taste
 - 3 whole chicken breasts, halved, skinned and boned
 - blanched green onions
 - 2 tablespoons vegetable oil

Veronique Sauce
Sauté celery and onion in butter until tender. Add bread cubes, grapes, broth, tarragon and pepper; mix thoroughly. Pound each chicken breast to 1/4-inch thickness; place 1/3 cup dressing mixture in center and wrap to enclose mixture. Secure with toothpicks. Tie with green onion. Repeat with remaining chicken and dressing. Sauté chicken rolls in oil over high heat until browned; carefully remove toothpicks. Place in oven-proof baking dish and bake at 350 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes or until chicken tests done and juices run clear. Serve with Veronique Sauce.

Breckenridge

- 1/2 teaspoon soy sauce
- 1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
- 3 tablespoons sugar

Alternate lamb cubes and vegetables on skewers. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Combine vinegar, soy sauce, mustard and sugar. Brush kebabs with half of the vinegar mixture. These may be cooked indoors under the broiler, 3-4 inches from the source of heat, if desired. Outdoors, cook on grill 3-4 inches from heat for 5-7 minutes, or to desired degree of doneness. Brush with remaining vinegar mixture. Turn kebabs frequently during cooking period.

"I cook them so they keep the really strong lamb flavor, but this also gives an Oriental flavor," she says.

Just the other day, a friend told Breckenridge her lamb and corn chowder was the best soup she had ever tasted. "People don't think about making soup out of lamb, but you can do it with stew meat," she says.

LAMB AND CORN CHOWDER
Serves 8
2 pounds of lamb stew meat, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
2 cups chopped onions
1 large clove garlic, crushed, or 1/2 teaspoon garlic salt, to taste
Salt and pepper, to taste
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1/2 teaspoon cayenne
2 cans (1 pound) whole kernel corn
2 large cans (3 and 1/2 cups) undiluted evaporated milk
2 teaspoons paprika

Cover meat with water. Bring to boil. Cook over low heat for one hour. Add onions, garlic, salt, pepper, mustard and cayenne. Cook five minutes. Add undrained corn and cook uncovered for 20 minutes over low heat. Add evaporated milk and cook 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Sprinkle with paprika before serving.

Serve with french bread, a green salad and wine, if desired.

Next, let's try...

LAMB STROGANOFF
Serves 8
2 pounds boneless lamb shoulder, cut into 1 and 1/2-inch strips
1 cup chopped onions
2 cups mushrooms, sliced
1 can (10 and 1/2 ounces) condensed cream of mushroom soup
1 can (10 and 1/2 ounces) condensed cream of celery soup
Salt, pepper and garlic salt, to taste
2 cups commercial sour cream
A pinch of chopped fresh dill
Cooked rice

Place lamb in oblong baking pan. Cover with onions, dill, salt, pepper, garlic salt and the 2 cans of soup. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 1 and 1/4 hours. Add mushrooms and sour cream, if desired. Serve with rice.

French bread or hard rolls, and a light salad are a good accompaniment to this; and if desired, some wine.

Next, here is how to correctly prepare a delicious...

ROAST LEG OF LAMB AND ROASTED POTATOES
Place lamb in a roasting pan. Rub flour into the side of the lamb that is up. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, dry mustard and garlic salt. Bake at 350 degrees for 1/2 hour. Place potatoes that have been peeled and cut in half, around the meat. Sprinkle with salt. Continue baking for 1 and 1/2 hours. Make gravy, if desired.

Expand your salad repertoire

Summertime means endless possibilities for delicious main-dish salads studded with bright and flavorful vegetables. But why not expand your salad repertoire with a few exotic vegetables now available in your area supermarket? You'll find the interesting shapes, colors, textures and flavors of these unusual vegetable selections add new excitement to any salad.

For example, the daikon, also known as the oriental radish, is crisp and peppery — sweeter than the red button radish. The vegetable, which looks like an oversized bleached carrot, adds zip to crudite platters, a stir fry and salads. In Oriental-Chicken Salad, the daikon is delicious tossed with snow peas, carrots and white chicken.

- 2 tablespoons rice vinegar
 - 1 tablespoon reduced-sodium soy sauce
 - 4 teaspoons honey
 - 2 teaspoons sesame oil
 - 1 cup halved snow peas, blanched
 - 1 1/2 cups diagonally sliced carrots, blanched
 - 1 cup Daikon (Oriental radish), peeled — and cut in — matchstick-thin strips
 - 1 can (6 ounces) chunk white chicken, drained

Toll-free spud number to open

TWIN FALLS — The National Potato Promotion Board has announced the addition of a toll-free number as part of its consumer relations program. By dialing 1-800-876-SPUD, consumers can obtain recipes for a main potato dish, a side dish, two quick-fix potato ideas and nutritional and calorie information.

According to Nancy McCarthy, Director of Consumer Relations for The Potato Board, the 800 number will go on line Sept. 1.

"We think our potato hotline will be a hit with consumers who are short on time and want a hot meal that can be prepared without backtracking to the store," she said. "We're also trying to appeal to a wide variety of tastes in our selection of recipes."

Over the next year, callers will be treated to recipes from Potato & Chicken Stir Fry, Potatoes Lorraine, and Potato Quesadillas.

The recipes will be changed about every 3 1/2 months.

By dialing 1-800-876-SPUD, callers will also hear potato tips such as:

- Recipes for microwaved baked potatoes Oriental-style, potato chip/cheddar cheese snacks, and french fries with zesty homemade dip.
- Time-saving tips in the kitchen such as using leftover baked potatoes for breakfast hash browns.
- Calorie tips: such as cut back the calories in mashed potatoes by whipping them with skim milk instead of whole milk or cream.

Callers also will hear that "potatoes are not only quick and easy to prepare, they are also a good food. Potatoes are low in calories - only 110 per medium sized potato will supply half the daily requirement of vitamin C.

Potatoes are also an excellent source of energy because they're a complex carbohydrate which burns more slowly than a simple carbohydrate such as candy.

Tips for more healthful barbecue

NEW YORK (AP) — Meals featuring outdoor cookery can be simple or elaborate, but on hot summer days, shouldn't take a lot of preparation time. Your featured barbecue can be accompanied by a simple tossed salad or raw vegetable, finger foods, crusty bread-or-rolls-and-plain-or-assorted fresh fruit for dessert.

For easy "just fruit" desserts, combine fresh pineapple chunks, diced melon and sliced bananas. Sprinkle with lime juice. Serve in melon halves. Or take a chilled ripe papaya, halved and seeded, and fill with 1/2 cup of your favorite berries. Or sprinkle peach quarters with lime juice. Combine with dark plum halves. Garnish with fresh mint.

TIPS FOR A SAFER BARBECUE — The Bureau of Nutrition for New York City's Department of Health has these suggestions for a more healthful barbecue:

- Use more fish and poultry — with skin and fat removed, instead of fatty meats. Select meats that are low in fat. Trim any excess fat before cooking.
- To reduce cooking time on grills and to reduce the amount of fat, many foods, including some meats, poultry and vegetables, can be boiled first or partially "precooked" in a microwave and then grilled briefly to add the cook-off flavor.

Turning pasta into low-cal alternative

Los Angeles Times

Eating plain, unadulterated pasta may be one of the best ways to meet the body's daily requirement for carbohydrates, but it is sure to be one of the duller.

It is true that carbohydrates, such as pasta, potatoes and breads and cereals, are the most efficiently used sources of energy for the body — providing about 4 calories for each gram taken in. But they have received a bad rap over the years as major contributors to fat to the diet, when in reality it is the rich cream sauces and toppings of mounds of butter and cheese that typically accompany them that add so many pounds.

The truth is, one cup of cooked macaroni or spaghetti contains only about a gram of fat, 155 to 190 calories, depending upon the cooked stage (firm is higher in calories than soft) and almost 40 grams of carbohydrate, according to Department of Agriculture's Home and Garden Bulletin No. 72, Nutritive Value of Foods. (Fifty-five grams is the suggested daily allowance. There is no Recommended Dietary Allowance.)

When accented with fresh, aromatic herbs and spices and served in the above proportion with skinless poultry or lean beef and fish, pasta dishes can be satisfying and low-calorie at the same time, meeting the recommendation quite nicely.

Canned salmon, which also is an excellent source of quality protein, is another way to experiment with pasta dishes — whether served warm, in a mushroom soup-yogurt sauce over fettuccine or tossed with spaghetti, tomatoes, celery and cucumber and chilled as suggested in the recipes that follow.

Substitute rich cream-based sauces with non-fat milk-based ones or top with unusual vegetable mixtures.

To further slash fat calories, sprinkle Parmesan cheese over just before serving, rather than stirring in high-fat cheeses during cooking time.

Any child's birth deserves love, best wishes

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is off on a two-week vacation, but she left behind some of her favorite letters taken from her best-selling book, "The Best of Dear Abby.")

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: Please tell me what to do when a friend has had an abnormal child (a Mongoloid). I certainly can't send a card or gift of "congratulations" to someone who has had such a tragedy. Would a message of "sympathy" be more in order? Or should something like this be acknowledged at all?

—OKLAHOMAN
DEAR OKLAHOMAN: A child, normal or otherwise, is a child to his mother. Don't differentiate. Send a little gift with your love and best wishes.

DEAR ABBY: You one said, "There are no cold women — only clumsy men." How right you were. I am a man in my middle 50s. I'm short, balding and slightly overweight, but I have been with plenty of women, and I have yet to find one that's frigid.

I am not saying this to brag, but once I make love to a woman I can't get rid of her. A woman needs to hear that she's desirable, lovable and terrific. It's not so much what I do, it's what I say. A woman needs to hear that she's needed, wanted and loved. If a woman is "frigid," it's because the man is selfish, impatient and doesn't know how to turn her on.

—DOING ALL RIGHT
DEAR DODG: You are living proof of what I have long contended. Words are a powerful aphrodisiac. If a woman hears the right things from her lover, he's got it (and her) made.

DEAR ABBY: My husband hates to spend money! I cut my own hair and make my own clothes, and I have to account for every nickel I spend. Meanwhile he has a stack of savings bonds put away that would choke a cow. How do I get some money out of him before we are both called to our final judgment? He says he's saving for a rainy day.

—FORTY YEARS HITCHED
DEAR HITCHED: Tell him it's raining!

DEAR ABBY: My husband has a terminal illness. The doctor said they don't know how long he'll last. Would it be proper for me to wear a large black picture hat with a wide brim and a black sheer veil over it for his funeral? My friend says veils are worn only with small hats, but I am a large woman and don't look good in small hats. Also, could I wear a black tailored gabardine suit with a green and blue flowered blouse? Or must I wear all black? If I wear all black, would it be all right to wear one large piece of costume jewelry? And if I wore black hose and black gloves, would people think I was overdressing?

—PREPARING AHEAD
DEAR PREPARING: Don't go overboard on getting an outfit together — he might live!
DEAR ABBY: I wanted to call my postmaster and tell him a thing or two because I knew he ate my pension check, but I couldn't find his telephone number in the book. I called information, and that's when I found out he had an unlisted number! That really made me mad, so since I knew where he lived, I drove to his house and told his wife off.

Abby, as a taxpayer, I would like to know why a public servant like a postmaster would have an unlisted telephone number?

—TAXPAYER
DEAR TAXPAYER: It is probably to protect him from people who "know" he ate their pension checks.

Is your social life in a slump? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. To order, send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 417, Mount Morris, Ill. 61051.

Letters of thanks

Thanks to those who helped with swim meet
 We would like to thank all those who helped with the Twin Falls Long Course Invitational swim meet which was held at the new city pool on July 8th and 9th. Without the support of all the businesses who advertised and donated products and the many hours of labor contributed by the pool and other volunteers, the meet would not have been possible. The people living in the neighborhood surrounding the pool were extremely gracious and cooperative. We sincerely hope they were not inconvenienced by the crowds and the use of the public address system.
 A very special thank you is extended to Chris and Randy Guiles, who operate the concession stand in the pool area and whose help and guidance were extremely helpful.
 Again, we would like to express our deep appreciation to each and every one of you for helping to make this a very successful swim meet.

Hazelton Alumni Reunion brought memories back
 Our Hazelton Alumni Reunion was held July 28, 29, and 30. We had former students who traveled from as far away as Louisiana and Pennsylvania. The class graduating class was represented by Erna Mendenhall who graduated in 1925. Carl Pool, a Twin Falls resident, was the oldest man present. Dale Christopherson reared the most children of those present, and Donna Burdick of Twin Falls had the honor of having the youngest number, eight grandchildren.

Fall probably most important time to fertilize lawns

Fall is probably the most important time to fertilize a lawn. Shorter days and cooler temperatures create ideal conditions for lawn growth. This is the time when root and rhizome growth are the strongest. Rhizomes are the underground stems which make lawns thick or dense. By fertilizing during September or early October, you encourage the development of a healthier lawn.

Lawns fertilized now will also stay green longer into the fall and green up earlier in the spring. I like to make a light application in late August or early September followed by another application in mid-October. The late application gives the best boost in the spring.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

Now is also the best time to kill lawn weeds. Perennial weeds such as dandelion are much more susceptible to weed killer now than in the spring. Lawn weed killers are absorbed by the leaves and translocated down to kill the root. At this time of year plants are translocating and storing food in the underground parts. The weed killer is also translocated more readily.

You can apply lawn fertilizers and weed killers yourself or have a professional apply them for you. Either lawn service companies or landscape maintenance companies can be employed in most urban areas. Combination products known as weed and feed are available if you want to fertilize and kill weeds at the same time.

Both granular and liquid formulations are available. I prefer granular fertilizers myself because they seem to last longer. However, liquids are also quite effective.

The most important ingredient in most lawn fertilizers is nitrogen. Most lawn fertilizers contain 15 to 25 percent nitrogen. Fall fertilizers should also contain phosphorus and potassium because they promote root and rhizome growth. In the intermountain area sulfur and iron are also very beneficial.

Whether applying yourself or contracting application, check to see if either one or both are included in the fertilizer.

Several different chemicals are available which kill broadleaf lawn weeds without harming the grass. Products which contain two or three different weed killers are more effective on hard-to-control weeds. It is very important to avoid trees, shrubs, flowers and vegetables with lawn weed killers. A small amount can damage or kill them as well as weeds. You may want to cover nearby desirable plants before application.

Allen Wilson teaches horticulture at Ricks College. His column appears every Wednesday in the Times-News.

Check clear finish labels closely to find right one

By The Associated Press

The days when you could walk into a hardware store, paint establishment or home center and buy a can of varnish that would perform exactly as it did for your father and grandfather are long since gone.

These days, varnish is a sweeping term used to describe a variety of clear finishes that range from glossy, semi-glossy, satin or flat. They can be applied several different ways. They may be natural or synthetic and come under any one of many names, some of which don't even hint they are some form of varnish.

One way to find your way through the labyrinth of terms is to read the brochures and other material put out by the manufacturer of a product you are interested in and see whether it is likely to fulfill your needs.

Doing that and checking the label will give you the information you require on what the product is designed to do. You then can make your decision based on brand names you are familiar with or alert to the degree of gloss the product promises and you want.

Not matter what kind of varnish you get, guard against the application of it in an area where dust is present or likely to be raised. For instance, while shellac has always been a good undercoat for regular varnish when it is diluted properly with denatured alcohol, it is not recommended by the polyurethane manufacturers who are in most cases the same manufacturers who produce the standard varnishes.

Most clear finishes don't require shaking or stirring and in many cases, you are warned against these actions. They are inclined to cause bubbles that affect the finish.

Satin finishes, however, should be stirred gently so the ingredients are blended well.

How do you know which kind you have? Read the label carefully. If neither movement is desirable, or if one is OK but the other isn't, the manufacturer is sure to say so. He wants you to get the best possible results with his product.

Another thing to be checked is whether your varnish is designed for the surface for which it is intended. Both natural and polyurethane varnishes are available for use indoors and out. Some are especially suitable for floors. And you must be alert to the degree of gloss the product promises and you want.

spotting a new finish.

A varnish brush (if should be just that, not one that has been used for anything else) should be dipped in the container about one-third the length of the bristles.

The wet brush should not be dragged across the inside of the can to remove the excess. Instead, remove the extra varnish by tapping the brush lightly against the inside of the container or merely letting it drip.

Varnish with long, light strokes in the direction of the grain, then immediately stroke against the grain. The final movement is with the tips of the bristles in the direction of the grain. It does not matter if, at this point, the bristle tips are almost dry. All three of these applications are done with light pressure.

You can buy what are called tack rags to pick up specks of dust from the newly applied finish. This also can be done with something like a toothpick. It is not written anywhere in concrete that the dust specks should be removed only one way. Whichever method works, including one of your own making, is the one you should use.

Turpentine and mineral spirits are the solvents for varnish, but here again you should follow the manufacturer's directions. The container label will specify what the mix proportion is if and when the varnish must be thinned. If it doesn't, you should use one part of thinner to four parts of varnish.

Borax makes good marble cleaner

By The Associated Press

Q. Some time ago you told someone about going to a marble dealer and getting material for the removal of stains. I have no doubt this was good advice, but I thought you would be interested in knowing how my grandfather removed stains from marble. He applied borax to the stain, then rubbed it with a wet cloth. It always seemed to work.

A. Thanks. This is an old solution, but usually only for cleaning the marble of dirt and grime rather than stains. Dry borax is applied to the marble and then rubbed with a damp rag. The marble is then rinsed and buffed. But we repeat: this will clean the marble, not necessarily have any effect on a stain.

Q. I am preparing to finish an attic. I intend to use prefinished hardboard. I was told the panels can be attached with a special wall adhesive if there is no mole-ture problem. There is no such problem in our attic. How is the adhesive applied? The panels will be attached to furring strips.

A. Apply the adhesive in 1/4 to 3/4 inch bands. Get the adhesive where you buy the hardboard panels and you will get the proper kind. If it is not available there, tell another dealer how it will be used and ask him if he has a brochure on the proper use of the adhesive.

Q. I have a project coming up where it will be necessary to use quite a bit of lumber. I presume I will save money if I use green or freshly cut lumber.

A. Yes, but be sure it is the kind of project where wood shrinkage will not cause problems. Green lumber shrinks and causes all kind of construction problems if you are not aware of exactly what you are doing. If you aren't, the possibility of shrinkage is minimized when you use air-dried or kiln-dried lumber.

Hot tips for keeping home cool

By The Associated Press

The onset of summer can also bring on concerns about cooling costs, but take heart.

Some warm weather savvy from Home Plan Ideas magazine will allow homeowners to minimize their home's heat buildup on hot summer days and will also help take the heat off their cooling budget.

Anything that stops the sun before it gets into the house reduces heat buildup dramatically. Here are a few additions that do the trick:

- Attach awnings. Buy either ready-made fabric awnings or aluminum, steel- or build-wood awnings that are architecturally with the house. Concentrate on east and west facing windows, where light strikes the house morning and evening.
- Mount outside sun screens. Block the sun by covering windows that receive direct sunlight with screening of bamboo, wood, fiberglass or polypropylene. These screens are effective and can be raised when not needed.
- Hang light-colored interior shades. Once the sun gets through windows, the object is to send it back out. Shades with shiny outer surfaces work best. Some roll-up fabric shades are backed by light-reflective material.
- Install heat-reflecting or low-emissivity windows. These windows contain a thin film sealed inside conventional double-pane glass to slow heat gain in summer and heat loss in winter.

- Insulate the attic. Proper insulation will help keep the heat that builds up in the attic (up to 150 degrees) from entering the house.
- It's easy to underestimate the importance of proper air movement in maintaining a comfortable indoor climate. The following suggestions are inexpensive, practical ways to combat the buildup of warm air.
- Cross ventilate: Exhaust air any time the temperature outside is cooler than it is inside. One open window won't do; make sure air can come in one opening and leave freely through another.
- Install a whole-house fan: If the humidity isn't too uncomfortable mount a whole-house fan in the ceiling just below the attic. These fans are designed to draw cool air in through open windows at night and push hot air out through attic vents.
- Install an attic ventilating fan: This type of fan does one of the two jobs of a whole-house fan: It pushes hot air out of the attic. (An attic ventilating fan can also be used to draw cooler nighttime air into living spaces if the entrance to the attic is kept open, but the best choice for this is a whole-house fan.)
- Add operable skylights: Add operable skylights out at the top of the room through a new skylight. Buy skylights with tinted glass to cut down on solar heat gain.

Improved virus fights gypsy moths

By The Associated Press

Will Abby prove to be a potent new weapon against the gypsy moths that devastate trees in many parts of the country?

Abby is an improved biochemical virus strain that kills gypsy moth caterpillars but doesn't harm anything else, according to U.S. Department of Agriculture entomologist Martin Shapiro.

Abby is an NPV — nuclear polyhedrosis virus — that Shapiro named after the town of its origin, Abington, Mass. It has been studied for seven years among 39 different virus strains from all over the world. NPV strains produce a systemic infection in gypsy caterpillars. With Abby, reports Shapiro, "there's a higher kill early in the game."

Once applied, the new Abby could run its own moth-control program from year to year, often with no need to reapply, claims Shapiro. Abby could serve as an alternative to Bacillus thuringiensis bacterin or to Dimilin, a chemical that keeps gypsy moth caterpillars from reaching adulthood. The virus, unlike chemicals, is transmitted from generation to generation and is capable of self-perpetuation within the gypsy moth population, says Shapiro.

The Agricultural Research Service and Forest Service will conduct a joint dose-and-mortality field test with Abby. They will count the number of dead moths for each dose and measure the amount of foliage protected by the virus. In field tests at the Beltsville, Md., lab, the new strain performed five times better than the lab's standard virus.

Gypsy moth populations have been exploding in recent years, and federal officials anticipate that this year and the next two years will be worse. All states east of Ohio and north of Virginia are infested with the moths, the officials reported. Pockets of infestation also have been found in California, Oregon, Wisconsin, Michigan, South Carolina and North Carolina.

The caterpillar eats the foliage of more than 500 species of trees, shrubs and ornamentals, but does most harm to American oaks and alders in forests and parks, along roadsides and in backyards.

The gypsy moth was brought to Massachusetts in 1869 by French biologist Louis Trouvelot as part of a silkworm-breeding experiment and escaped from the laboratory. The worst infestation was in 1982, when most caterpillars defoliated about 8 million acres.

Work at the Beltsville Insect Research Laboratory led to a way to rear moths to mass-produce the biochemical virus.

You can help fight gypsy moths by seeking out and destroying their eggs. Your Agricultural Extension Service office has educational information. Check for eggs on tree trunks, lawn furniture and stone walls, and under brush piles. Scrape egg masses into a can of kerosene, bleach or turpentine, paint and decapitate them.

Spray trees or shrubs with an insecticide, preferably a biological one that won't kill bees or other beneficial insects. Recommended is Bacil-

Ricky Berry free of drugs, alcohol on night of death

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Ricky Berry, the Sacramento Kings star who shot himself to death following a quarrel with his wife, did not take drugs or alcohol in the hours before his death, the Sacramento County coroner's office reported Tuesday.
Berry was "very clean, there was no evidence of drugs at all," said Chief Deputy Coroner Bob Bowers, who released the findings of an autopsy and toxicology report.

Police investigators said Berry, 24, shot himself in the head on Aug. 14 within an hour of quarreling with his wife, who left their suburban Sacramento home following their middle-of-the-night dispute and returned hours later to discover the body.

Berry reportedly left a suicide note in which he described marital problems. He and his wife, Valerio, had recently moved to their $360,000 home, and friends of the couple have said there was no hint that Berry contemplated suicide.

Johnson draws probation for pointing starter's pistol

TORONTO (AP) — Suspended sprinter Ben Johnson received a conditional discharge and 12 months probation Tuesday for pointing a starter's pistol at a motorist in a traffic dispute last fall.
Johnson was "living in a fish bowl" at the time and was constantly hounded by the media, his lawyer Martin Kerbel said, noting the sprinter had just returned from the Seoul Olympics where he was stripped of a gold medal for a positive steroid test.

He had pleaded not guilty to common assault and possession of a dangerous weapon, but changed his position when the Crown agreed to drop the weapon charge.

Ryan reaches 5,000 — and loses

Strikes out 13; allows 5 hits, 2 walks

The Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — On Nolan Ryan's night of glory, one game summed up his 22-year career of frustration.

Ryan became the first, and perhaps the last, ever to strike out 5,000 batters, but the Oakland Athletics took away some of the thrill Tuesday night by beating the Texas Rangers 2-0.

Ryan struck out 13, walked two and allowed only five hits. But despite his accomplishments, his team did not win.

"It's just one of those things," Ryan said. "My hope was to get 5,000 and as a team to have a good game."

Instead, he lost for the 261st time in his career.

Still, Ryan made history his way. He got the milestone by blowing a 96 mph fastball past Rickey Henderson to start the fifth inning and finished the evening with 5,007.

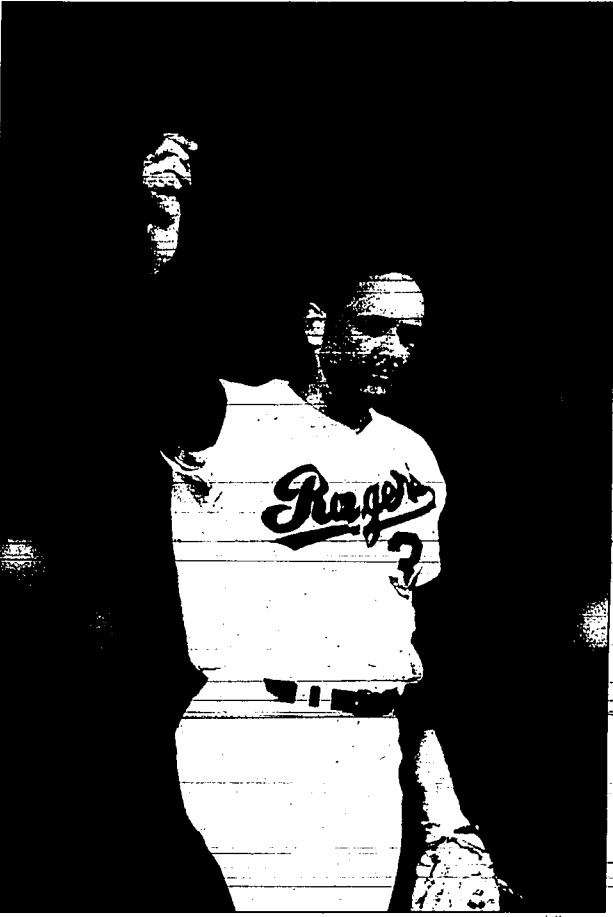

"If you had asked me before the game how I wanted to get it, I would have said swinging on a fastball," Henderson said.

Even the cocky Henderson did not seem to mind being the victim. "It was an honor to be the 5,000th," Henderson said. "As (Rangers coach) Davey Lopes says, 'If he ain't struck you out, you ain't nobody.'"

Ryan began the 101-degree night needing six strikeouts and quickly got them. He fanned Henderson on a 96 mph fastball leading off the fifth inning, matching his fastest pitch of the night, for No. 5,000.

A crowd of 42,869, the second-largest in Arlington Stadium history, gave Ryan a standing ovation, and he responded by doffing his cap. Rookie catcher Chad Kreuter rushed the historic ball to the mound and Ryan's teammates on the field surged toward their hero.

As per Ryan's request, the game was not stopped and the Rangers in the dugout stayed put. Commissioner Bart Giamatti and Rangers owner George Bush, son of the

Steinbrenner: Green wanted to lose his job

The Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — George Steinbrenner insisted Tuesday that Dallas Green fired himself as manager of the New York Yankees and the owner criticized General Manager Syd Thrift.

Steinbrenner said Green tried to provoke his own ouster and that he doesn't understand why Green would say the owner is impossible to work for.

"It's never Dallas' fault. Whenever something goes wrong, it's always someone else's fault. He's having this problem over and over again," Steinbrenner said in Tuesday's Tampa Tribune.

Green absolutely (tried to) provoke the firing because he couldn't win with this club. He didn't get any better from the All-Star break on," said Steinbrenner, who replaced Green with Bucky Dent last Friday. "You look at Milwaukee. They had a lot of injuries; but they're right there. Look at Toronto. They improved. We were dead in the water."

Steinbrenner had said during the season that it would be Thrift's decision whether to bring back Green and his coaching staff. When asked by the New York Post whether he was disappointed in Thrift, Steinbrenner answered, "Very."

"It's about time that good old boy stood up and was counted," he said of Thrift. "That lack-of-communication (with Green) was underlying the whole thing."

Green has said he responded to Steinbrenner's desire to fire the Yankees' coaching staff by telling the owner to fire him instead. Steinbrenner said that wasn't true. "That's absolutely a lie," the owner said. "I never, ever pitted his coaches against him in Detroit."

Ore-Ida will select a new champion

BURLEY — A new champion will be crowned in the Ore-Ida Ladies Golf Invitational at Burley Municipal Golf Course today and Thursday.

Jean Smith, Boise, state champion and defending champion here, is unable to attend this year's competition: However, 188 other women will be in attendance when competition opens this morning.

The field will include four-time state champion Karen Darrington of Boise and four-time state winner Virginia Undheim, although the Twin Falls woman is still having health problems.

Bibi's Tara Cantrell will join the Burley contingent of Terri Taylor, Sergene Sorenson and Doris Ellingham in seeking the title while Wilma Shockey, Ru-bert, who won the state seniors' title on this course over the weekend, is also in the field.

Along with Darrington, Boise is sending Sharon Faylor who won the Twin Falls medal play championship last week. Idaho Falls is sending Mary Ellen McFarlane.

The Ore-Ida is challenging the state amateur as the biggest single tournament on the Idaho women's golf schedule because of the largesse of the sponsors that includes some peripheral favors plus $3,000 added in merchandise awards to the winners.

Social highlight will be a steak fry and dinner, featuring Ore-Ida products, following completion of today's round.

New owners say Mariners won't forsake Seattle

The Associated Press

SEATTLE — The Seattle Mariners were sold Tuesday to two Indianapolis businessmen who promised a skittish city that they would not move the team to Indiana.

New owners Jeff Smulyan and Michael Browning bought the American League team from George Argyros, who appeared close to tears at a news conference to announce the transaction.

"I think these gentlemen have every intent of keeping the team here," Argyros said. "I've been assured of that. They will do everything possible to make it work here."

No sale price was announced, but it was believed to be $75 million.

"Our goal is to convince this community that we're what we are. We realize there's a lot of suspicion. All we ask people in Seattle to do is to give us a chance to prove ourselves. We want to show people that we will make baseball work in this town," Smulyan said.

But Browning drew laughter when he slipped and said:

"This town is not going to be the Seattle Mariners, it is staying here in Indianapolis."

Argyros said he did not know when Smulyan, a broadcast executive, and Browning, a real estate developer, would officially take over.

"Hopefully, it will be before the end of the season or at the end of the season," he said. "Though the new owners have the tentative approval of major league baseball, the sale would have to be approved at the next owners' meeting, Sept. 13-14 in Milwaukee."

Argyros, 52, bought the team from its original group of owners in 1981 for $13.1 million. The Mariners were appraised at $76.1 million in June.
One of the first casualties of the sale was Mariners president Chuck Armstrong, who was brought in by Argyros in 1983 from the owner's real estate empire in Southern California. Smulyan said he planned to move to Seattle and assume Armstrong's duties. Armstrong said he planned to remain in Seattle and not rejoin Argyros in Orange County.

Smulyan said he wasn't sure how many changes would be made in the Mariners' organization, but said he would retain General Manager Woody Woodward and Manager Jim Lefebvre.

Smulyan said he had no plans to take the Mariners to Indianapolis, which has been seeking a major league expansion team. Indianapolis does not have a suitable baseball stadium and there are no plans to build one. The Hoosier Dome, where the NFL Colts play, is too narrow to accommodate baseball.

"During the very first meeting we had with George, he said to us that this team was going to remain in Seattle and if we were going to acquire this team we were going to buy it as is, where is," Browning said. "I can tell you the phrase 'as is, where is' has been repeated no less than 4,000 times in the last six months."

"We committed to George if we bought the team we would keep it in Seattle. When we visited major-league baseball and went through their process, major league baseball wanted a very firm commitment from us that we were live up to the terms of the agreement and that we would stay in Seattle," he said.

Smulyan, 42, heads Emmis Broadcasting Corp., which owns 11 U.S. radio stations and is the largest privately held chain of radio stations.

Smulyan had said he and Browning would each own 10 percent of the club, Emmis would own just under 50 percent; Morgan Stanley & Co., Emmis' investment banker, would control about 25 percent and the remaining shares would be owned by some Emmis executives.

Among those on the Emmis board is talk-show host David Letterman. Browning said about 50 people have expressed a desire to have lesser shares since the group began negotiations with Argyros last October. Smulyan said he did not know if Letterman would be one of the Mariners owners, but said he had "indicated some interest" in doing so.
