Only the bare walls are left

By BRAD BOWLIN Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The old Sears building downtown got down to brass tacks and bare walls Thursday as an auctioneer hawked everything but the building itself.

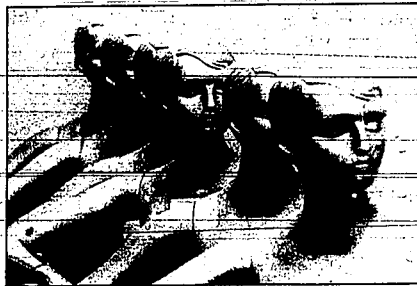

Glass shelves, chrome clothing racks and a pair of giant cheeseburgers used for displays were all sold to the highest bidder.

"There are pretty good prices for everything," said Judy Steward of Twin Falls.

Steward, who picked up a four-shelf storage unit for $19, was one of the few people buying home items.

Most buyers were looking for office equipment and display furnishings for their own shops.

Skimming by Neptune, Voyager finds 2 moons

The Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. - Voyager 2 capped a historic 12-year, 4.4 billion-mile grand tour of the four outer planets Thursday as it skimmed 3,048 miles above Neptune's blue cloud tops.

It was its closest approach to any object in the solar system.

"This is it! We are exploring new worlds!" said Rich Terrile, an astronomer at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory. Neptune's special effects movie. It's a real place.

Voyager's radio signals take four hours and six minutes to reach Earth. Engineers and scientists braced themselves for an overnight vigil awaiting confirmation of the close encounter 2.75 billion miles away.

The spacecraft made its closest pass at 9:56 p.m. MDT, swooping behind Neptune at a speed of 61,146 mph. The spacecraft was then on a course that would take it within 23,888 miles of Triton's surface at 3:10 a.m. MDT today.

"Every image coming back is very exciting," said Bradford Smith, head of Voyager's photographic imaging team.

Champagne flowed at the laboratory Thursday afternoon when Voyager crossed the supersonic shock wave where the solar wind meets Neptune's magnetic field, said Fritz Neubauer of Voyager's magnetic field team.

As it zoomed toward the solar system's fourth largest planet, Voyager discovered two more tiny moons: a 60-mile-wide moon designated 1989 N5, and the even smaller 1989 N6, which is a mere 30 miles wide, Smith announced Thursday.

The two new moons brought Neptune's total to eight, including the two moons observed from Earth - Triton and Nereid - and four previously found by Voyager.

Voyager also found a complete ring of debris encircling Neptune, although it was at first thought to be a partial ring or ring arc. New Voyager photos also show that a ring arc orbiting farther from Neptune extends 90 percent around the planet and almost certainly also is a complete ring, Smith said.

Voyager's pictures also show what some scientists believe are numerous meteorite impact craters on the icy pink-and-blue and possibly glacier-covered surface of backward-orbiting Triton.

NASA calculated Voyager's position during the Neptune flyby as nearly 2.75 billion miles from Earth. But the ship had traveled a curving path totaling 4.43 billion miles.

Poll shows education supported

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Americans, once resistant to the idea of paying for public school changes, now are willing to pay higher taxes to implement a variety of school reforms, including a national curriculum, a Gallup Poll said Thursday.

In fact, 70 percent of those questioned for the 21st Annual Gallup Poll of the Public's Attitudes Toward Public Schools, released by Phi Delta Kappa, a professional educational fraternity, favored requiring public schools to conform to national achievement standards and goals. Only 19 percent were opposed and 11 percent were undecided.

Ten years ago, a Gallup Poll showed a two-to-one opposition to federal curriculum standards.

"As for taxes, 64 percent of the respondents in the latest file said they would pay higher taxes to improve the quality of public schools in poorer communities. In 1983, 58 percent said they would pay higher taxes to raise the standards of public education.

"The public is more receptive to higher taxes than they have been in the past. This is a change that is quite a change, a major change," said Alec N. Gallup, coauthor of the report. "In the past, they almost invariably said 'no to higher taxes.' Americans rate the quality of public schools poorly, with only 8 percent giving an 'A,' 35 percent a 'B,' 33 percent a 'C,' 11 percent a 'D' and 4 percent an 'F.' Nine percent did not know or did not reply, according to the poll.

Key findings of the survey were: • Reducing class sizes in early

Los Angeles Times

A Canadian-American research team said Thursday that it has isolated and cloned the defective gene that causes cystic fibrosis, the most common lethal genetic defect in the United States.

The researchers have also identified the defective protein produced by the gene and believe that they know how it functions. The isolation of the gene and the protein was widely hailed by other scientists as a major step toward conducting prenatal screening for the disease and toward a potential cure. They hope to use their knowledge of the biochemical defect to design new drugs and ultimately to invent a genetic therapy to insert a healthy gene into victims.

"This is the most significant breakthrough in the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation's 35-year history," said President Robert K. Dressing. "It's the piece of the puzzle we had to get in place before we can focus our attention on why we are really in this business - developing new therapies and a cure for the disease."

One in every 20 Caucasians, or about 12 million Americans, carries the defective gene and one in every 1,800 children suffers from the disease, which is marked by a buildup of mucus in the lungs that impairs breathing and leaves the victims susceptible to respiratory infections. The disease also affects the pancreas in about 75 percent of victims, blocking secretion of enzymes necessary for digesting and absorbing fats in the diet.

Colombia drug lords retaliate

The Associated Press

BOGOTA, Colombia - Drug gangs bombed two political party offices Thursday, burned the homes of two politicians in Medellin and declared "total war" on the government for cracking down on them.

One person was killed. President Virgilio Barco on Thursday issued a series of new emergency decrees that heighten the nation's battle against drug traffickers.

The anti-narcotics sweep was spurred by the assassination last week of Luis Carlos Galan, a leading presidential candidate who promised to curb drug trafficking.

"The outpouring of public rage has made many Colombians hope the battle against the cocaine barons can be won this time.

Clara Obregon Lopez, a former Bogota city council member, said, "The indignation is so strong that it's not leaving room for fear," she said. In Washington, State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said the declaration of war on the Colombian government "certainly heightens the concern about security, both for the Colombian government and for ourselves."

Police said one person was killed in the bombing of a wing of Liberal Party offices in Medellin, an industrial city that serves as a base for a cartel believed to supply as much as 80 percent of the cocaine distributed in the United States. Also bombed was the Conservative Party headquarters, police said.

Solidarity activist heads government

The Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland - Senior Solidarity activist Tadeusz Mazowiecki was elected prime minister Thursday in a historic switch from Communist rule that he said should give the "green light" to Polish hope.

The once inconceivable change for Eastern Europe came about not through revolution but in an orderly parliamentary vote, with Communist Party members joining Solidarity deputies to elect the journalist and former political prisoner 378-4 with 41 abstentions. It was the first non-Communist government to be seated in Warsaw since 1944.

Among the first to celebrate was Solidarity chief Lech Walesa, who engineered the coalition that gave Mazowiecki a solid majority in parliament and then got Communist President Wojciech Jaruzelski to go along with the deal.

"I will do everything so that my premier, my child ... passes the test before society," pledged a jubilant Walesa in Gdansk after watching Mazowiecki's election on television. He wished Mazowiecki success in transforming our country from a totalitarian system to democracy.

Congratulations also arrived from President Bush and from the prime minister of Communist East Germany, one of the least reform-minded countries in the East bloc.

The Soviet Union, for whom Poland is the largest and most strategic Warsaw Pact ally, greeted the election with equanimity.

Indigent aid questions at Jerome wind up before district judge

By JENNIFER KAUTH Times-News writer

JEROME - Lenny Silvers has been coming to the Jerome County commissioners since at least 1983 for aid in one form or another and has asked for help with winter's utility bills the last two or three years.

But when Silvers, 36, came to the commissioners again this spring and asked for help with backed up bills, they told him they wouldn't help any more until he worked off the debts he still owed the county from receiving aid in 1987 and 1988, according to Commissioner George Andrus.

has appealed the commissioner's decision to District Judge Phillip Becker. Andrus says Silvers just plain doesn't want to work.

Silvers and his Idaho Legal Aid Services Inc. lawyer say the county can't put conditions on giving aid to indigents.

Then there's also the question of whether Silvers is indeed an "indigent" and whether the county has an obligation under state laws to even help people pay utility bills.

There are discrepancies in exactly how many hours Silvers still owes the county and an argument over the county's rate of pay for people working off debts. Judge Becker, meanwhile, said he's confused about the three separate appeals got that Silvers' lawyer, Mike McCarthy of Legal Aid, has filed.

State law allows someone seeking county aid to request a hearing in front of the county commissioners if the original request is denied. And the applicant can request judicial review of the commissioner's second decision.

Silvers lives with his wife, Debby, and two sons, Nathan, 6, and Jacob, 4, at 829 N. Fillmore. Jerome, according to court records, The records also show the Silvers do not pay rent.

Electricity to the Silvers' house has been disconnected, Silvers says. He said his family cooks on a fire in the backyard and goes to nearby relatives' homes for showers.

His wife said she doesn't work because she takes care of the children at home. The family receives $300 a month in food stamps, according to court records.

Silvers is self-employed and earned $175 during July, the court records say. Silvers said he does lawn maintenance and makes an average of $150 per month.

"That's not very much for an individual to make a month for mowing lawns," Andrus said. "I know people who are making good money at it!"

"It's just like anything else - you can make money if you want to work," he added.

"He (Silvers) doesn't want to work. There's nothing physically wrong with him. It's all mental. And if you don't want to work mentally, you can psyche yourself out."

"They can't get anything out of court," Andrus said in a telephone interview Thursday.

Andrus said that from what he understands, the state laws only require counties to help indigents with medical care.

But McCarthy said the definition of "indigent" - which reads "any person who is destitute of property and unable to provide for the necessities of life" - not only makes Silvers an indigent, but also calls for the

Judge blocks federal contract for building Nevada waste dump

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge on Thursday barred the Energy Department from awarding a $1 billion contract to a Bechtel Corp. unit to build and manage the proposed nuclear waste dump in Nevada.

The decision is a setback for attempts by Energy Secretary James D. Watkins to end years of delay and political squabbling over the waste dump project. Preliminary studies of whether the Yucca Mountain site is suitable to hold the nuclear waste had been scheduled to start earlier this year.

U.S. Claims Court Judge Reginald Gibson permanently enjoined the department from awarding the contract to anyone other than TRW Inc., which sued the department on grounds that the process of selecting Bechtel was tainted.

"The department said in a statement it was disappointed and will 'review' the department's options."

The department said it did not believe the ruling would significantly affect its ability to carry out preliminary studies of the area's geology to determine whether it would qualify for a required Nuclear Regulatory Commission license.

The Nevada state government, which strongly opposes the project, applauded the ruling.

"To the people of Nevada, this is a further indication of why the people of Nevada do not trust the Department of Energy when it says the selection of Yucca Mountain is based on science and not politics," said Larry Henry, press secretary to Gov. Rob Miller. "This case severely weakens the DOE's credibility."

The actual opinion issued by Gibson was not immediately made public but the gist of the decision, without explanation, was contained in a brief memorandum to the parties in the suit.

Gibson said the opinion would be kept secret at least until next Wednesday to allow the companies involved to determine whether the document contains any proprietary information or trade secrets that should not be made public.

Rock chunk zips past Earth on space trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — A mile-wide chunk of space rock zipped within about 2.5 million miles of Earth on Thursday, the second nearest approach of a large asteroid this year.

"People living on the Earth are in no danger from it," said Brian Marsden of the International Astronomical Union's Central Bureau in Cambridge, Mass. "It's just a nice close approach which makes it very convenient for astronomers who want to study it."

The asteroid, named 1989 PB, has been moving at many thousands of miles per hour within close observation range of the Earth for several days, Marsden said. The closest approach, about 2.5 million miles away, was estimated at about 9 p.m. MDT Thursday.

This is a little more than 10 times the average distance of the Moon from Earth, about 239,000 miles.

Joint effort needed to cool down planet

SUNDANCE, Utah (AP) — Soviet and American scientists said Thursday a new kind of Cold War is needed, this time joining the two superpowers in a fight to cool down global warming.

Soviet scientist Ronald Sagdeev recalled a warning he gave a Russian audience: "I suggested that the issue of environmental survival should be elevated to the level of nuclear survival."

Sagdeev was among 11 Soviets and more than 80 Americans participating in a four-day symposium dubbed "Greenhouse Glasnost" by its co-sponsors, the Soviet Academy of Sciences and the Institute for Resource Management founded by actor-filmmaker Robert Redford.

Scientists agree, Redford said, that man-made pollutants are raising global temperatures. "We have to get past this business of hearing the phrase: 'We need more study,'" Redford said. "We must act."

The United States and Soviet Union are the world's biggest producers of carbon dioxide and chlorofluorocarbons, gases that trap solar heat in a process called the "greenhouse effect."

Redford said the two nations must take the lead in reversing the warming trend, which researchers say could alter worldwide weather patterns, melt the polar ice caps, and flood coastal regions.

A rise of three feet in the next century, predicted by some studies, would force tens of millions of people to flee the lowlands of Bangladesh and other Third World nations, creating a new kind of "environmental refugees," said astronomer Carl Sagan.

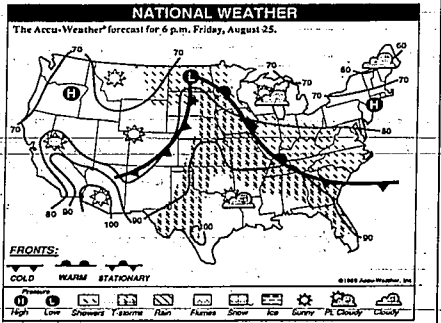

The next wars probably won't be between capitalists and communists, but between the North and the South, or the rich and the poor, he said.

Developing nations are fast catching up with the superpowers in producing pollutants. "You can't tell these Third World countries, 'Please don't do what we did,'" Sagan said.

grades was supported 75 percent to 18 percent while 68 percent said they would be willing to pay higher taxes to make that possible.

60 percent favored allowing pupils and their parents to choose which public schools in their communities youngsters will attend. Thirty-one percent were opposed and 9 percent were undecided.

65 percent favored reducing class size in the early grades, now often in the range of 20 to 35 pupils, to as few as 15 pupils, while 18 percent were opposed.

With those who favored requiring public schools to conform to national achievement standards and goals, 61 percent wanted the standards to be set by professional educators, 20 percent wanted a panel of parents and other lay people to set the standards and fewer than 10 percent wanted the standards set by the president, Congress or governors.

69 percent favored requiring public schools to use a standardized national curriculum, while 21 percent were opposed and 10 percent were undecided.

disease was uniformly fatal, killing most affected children during their first year of life. The development of new antibiotics during World War II extended their life spans to the mid-teens by fighting the respiratory infections that usually cause death.

Researchers around the world have been searching intensively for the cystic fibrosis gene for most of the last decade. A crucial advance came in October 1985, when a team headed by molecular geneticist Lap-Chee Tsui of the Hospital for Sick Children found that the gene was located on a small region of chromosome 7, one of the 23 pairs of chromosomes in the human cell.

Two years ago, British researchers announced that they had identified a candidate for the cystic fibrosis gene, but that gene was subsequently shown to be unrelated to the disease.

Researchers are confident now that the gene newly discovered is the correct one. As a result, researchers have a "wealth of experiments" to carry out now.

"Silvers claims that electricity is a 'necessity of life,'" his attorney believes that the county has an obligation to pay Silvers' bill without requiring him to reimburse it.

Andrus, however, said he doesn't think Silvers is indigent.

"I don't think he is indigent," he said. "There isn't any reason for him to be, because there's plenty of work out there for anybody."

Nobody said he is indigent except his lawyer, Andrus said.

While McCarthy said counties must provide energy assistance, he also said the laws require people to pay back only medical aid given by the county.

Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce President J. Kent Just said he had his eye on a display case for the tourist information center.

Meanwhile, City Councilman Art Frantz and his wife, Betty, were shopping for clothing racks for costumes used by the children at Wednesday's auction was a little different than most folks around here are used to, said Cary Moser, who was looking for some automotive equipment for his machine shop.

"But there's more stuff here than at most other auctions," Moser said.

Auctioneer Vaughn Baker moved through the department store selling everything in his path — clothing racks in the children's department, bed frames and garbage cans in housewares, mannequins from menswear and soap dispensers from the restrooms. He even sold the carpet buyers were standing on.

A crowd of 30-40 people followed the fast-talking Baker around the store; alternately bidding on items they were interested in and inspecting things further down the line.

"Well, we gotta sell it," Baker said, as buyers balked at a particular item. "All the bidding went lower."

It took Baker more than seven hours to wend his way through the 62,680-square-foot store, left vacant Aug. 2 when Sears moved to the Magic Valley Mall.

Baker works for Coastal Liquidators, a Chicago-based firm under contract with Sears to sell off all the company's excess fixtures.

There are many Sears stores across the country that have either closed or moved into new locations recently, keeping the auctioneers busy, said Tony Bland, auction manager.

Last week, Bland and company were in Albany, Ore., and next week they will travel to Clovis, N.M., for similar Sears sales.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration is weighing the possibility of tightening existing sanctions against Panama now that efforts by the Organization of American States to achieve a "democratic transfer of power" is at an apparent dead end, officials said Thursday.

The reevaluation of administration policy toward Panama followed what officials regarded as a disappointing outcome of a three-month effort by OAS mediators to promote a restoration of democratic rule in Panama.

The officials declined to specify what economic measures against Panama are under consideration. Last year, the Reagan administration froze Panama's assets in the United States, withheld fees owed to Panama for Panama Canal operations and suspended certain trade benefits.

The measures have contributed to a substantial economic decline in Panama.

After OAS foreign ministers approved a blandly worded resolution early Thursday following all night discussions, the U.S. and Panamanian delegations engaged in unusually heated verbal sparring, with each side blaming the other for the impasse.

Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger compared Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega to Adolf Hitler and derided Panama as an "outlaw regime" that deserves the censure of all OAS member states. Eagleburger's remarks prompted a walkout by Panamanian Foreign Minister Jorge Ritter.

In a vitriolic two-hour rebuttal, Panamanian delegate Romulo Escobar Betancourt blamed the United States for the lack of progress toward a political solution in Panama, citing both the U.S. economic sanctions and what he described as the unsettling impact of U.S. military maneuvers in Panama.

"If you have any evidence to show Gen. Noriega is involved in drug trafficking, bring it here to the OAS," Escobar said. Noriega was indicted last year on drug smuggling charges by two Florida grand juries.

The OAS resolution expressed "deep concern" over the inability of the mediators to lay the groundwork for a political settlement in Panama. It also "resolutely exhorts" Panamanians to settle their differences by the time a new president is scheduled to be sworn in.

Under Panama's constitution, an "elected president" is due to take office on Sept. 1, but Ritter said it is unclear what will happen on that date because there is no officially recognized successor to President Manuel Solis Palma.

Bank holding companies may buy healthy thrifts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board voted Thursday to permit bank holding companies to buy healthy thrift institutions, a decision expected to accelerate the shrinkage of the savings industry and the expansion of interstate banking.

The 5-0 vote culminated a bitter, two-year struggle among financial industry groups seeking to influence the central bank's ruling.

But it is also something of an anticlimax because S&L bailout legislation signed into law two weeks ago authorized the Fed to make the decision and members of Congress clearly expected it would.

Under the federal regulatory scheme, banks and savings associations were kept strictly separate until 1987, when Congress decided to allow bank holding companies to purchase ailing thrift institutions.

In September 1987, the Fed proposed opening up all thrifts to purchase by banks but delayed its decision after it ran into a barrage of criticism from S&Ls, small banks and members of Congress.

"I support" the change, said board member Martha R. Seger. "I'm just sorry it took us two years to do it."

Earlier this week, James R. Barth, chief economist of the Office of Thrift Supervision, said solvent S&Ls will have to raise $30 billion to meet new capital requirements going into effect by the end of the year.

He estimated that half of the approximately 2,500 solvent S&Ls in the nation, representing 65 percent of the industry's assets, fall short of the new standard.

No evacuations for now, U.S. says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department said Thursday it has no immediate plans to evacuate U.S. government — personnel from Colombia in the aftermath of bombings by drug traffickers, but acknowledged "a very concrete threat" exists against the Bogota government.

The drug traffickers' declaration of war on the Colombian government "certainly heightens the concern about security, both for the Colombian government and for ourselves," State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said.

"I dramatize; I would say what we're long known, and that's that these drug traffickers represent a very concrete threat to the institutions of the government of Colombia," he said.

"However, there are no plans to withdraw any U.S. personnel in Colombia, and, without such a plan the government would not even necessarily pay for travel of those U.S. dependents who want to leave," he said.

"The embassy is on heightened alert, but that embassy always is," said another State Department official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

There are some 100 U.S. officials with the embassy in Bogota and about two dozen Drug Enforcement Administration agents in the country, according to officials.

No Americans were hurt in the attacks early Thursday in Medellin — home to the world's largest cocaine cartel — and the embassy in Bogota "was not aware of any bombings" until diplomats heard reports on Colombian radio, another State Department official said.

Meanwhile, it was unclear exactly what kind of aid the United States might send to the Colombian government, which imposed a state of siege last weekend following a string of killings that culminated in the assassination of Luis Carlos Galan, a leading presidential candidate and an outspoken foe of drug traffickers.

The state of siege allows for quick extraditions of alleged drug traffickers wanted on U.S. charges, extraditions that ended abruptly in 1987 when the Colombian Supreme Court, under pressure from traffickers, overturned the extradition agreement. The traffickers have indicated that extradition is one of their major concerns due to their fears that they would not be able to escape as they have in Colombia.

Contra tribunal upholds conviction

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Contra rebel appeals tribunal upheld the conviction of one Contra leader, exonerated another officer and reduced charges against four others in a three-murder case, a rebel spokesman said Thursday.

Five of the six Contras were given dishonorable discharges — the stiffest penalty that can be handed out by a Contra internal court system that was set up in 1987. Leniency was recommended for one and another was freed of the charges, according to a document obtained by The Associated Press.

In another house-cleaning move, the rebels fired their chief representative in Washington, Ernesto Palazio, charging him with abuses of Contra funds. Contra spokesman Bosco Matamoros said, "This money is supposed to be used for the combatants, for the resistance, to cover the expenses of this office," the spokesman said.

Forum fails to address future energy realities

Although it may not have been intended that way, the deck looked stacked Wednesday in favor of the oil, gas and nuclear industries at a federal Energy Department hearing on a national energy strategy.

What came out mostly at the Boise meeting was a plea for more help for domestic nuclear and petroleum producers than an attempt to develop a long-range energy policy, both freed from a heavy dependence on fossil fuels and nuclear quagmire in which the commercial nuclear industry has left us.

For example, Wyoming Governor Mike Sullivan asked the government to allow increased oil exploration, reduce taxes and to remove federal controls on natural gas prices.

Sullivan's plan also wants the government to pay more attention to oil and gas research, encourage consumer conservation of fossil fuels and establish an import fee on imported crude oil. Such a fee, as Sullivan recognized, would amount-to-price support for domestic oil.

Despite the dismal environmental record of oil companies, Sullivan urged the government to allow oil exploration in ecologically sensitive areas such as the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge and along Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

The Energy Department has been called upon by President George Bush to develop a national energy strategy to provide the country with adequate supplies of clean, competitively priced energy sources. How would subsidized domestic oil meet that goal?

Instead of trying to protect the already-inflated profits of the country's richest corporations, we think the energy strategy ought to prepare a mix of fuels neither pollute our air nor leave us with radioactive wastes for which there is now no acceptable disposal.

But is the answer to be found in nuclear energy? Deputy Energy Secretary Henson Moore, who led the hearing, said the government needs to improve public confidence in nuclear energy through standardization of plants, better educated operators and safe disposal of waste.

But that day, it seems to us, is not just around the corner. The Idaho National Engineering Laboratory would be a good location for development of safer nuclear prototypes, but at the moment, the prototypes are tied to INEL's military roles.

In the meantime, the bottom line is that further nuclear development is stalled over the industry's failure to deal with both safety and waste issues.

Until those are met, public resistance to nuclear energy is likely to remain high. That leaves nuclear fuel as a non-viable option.

A world-wide greenhouse effect, brought on by fossil fuels, is now apparent to many. Surely a national energy policy should steer away from options which make the situation worse.

A wide array of alternative sources, including conservation, hydroelectric, geothermal, gas and solar are all likely to be part of the energy mix of the future.

Neither heavy reliance on fossil fuels nor traditional nuclear power is going to be the answer.

Robert E. Hunter

The mounting of a Solidarity-led government in Poland is by no means the beginning of the end of Soviet power in Eastern Europe; indeed, a difficult and potentially dangerous period lies ahead.

Following a host of most pleasant surprises from Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, it is tempting to see human progress as inevitable in rejecting four decades of rigid communist domination of Eastern Europe.

Today, beyond Solidarity's new role in governing Poland, Hungary is throwing open its border with Austria and embracing Western economics, and even the Soviet Union is giving the Baltic republics enormous latitude for independent action.

If anything is certain, however, it is that East European politics will not lead, steadily and unimpeded, from a rigid glacially dominated by Soviet security paranoia and the primacy of communist regimes to an "Austrian solution" of neutral states firmly tied to the Western economic system and political practices.

For this to happen, Gorbachev and his colleagues would have to reject a millennium of Russian history, and this they will not do.

Lech Walesa, the leader of Solidarity and the most potent challenge to Moscow, paid tribute to this point when he declined to assume office as prime minister.

Nor is Solidarity firmly in charge, despite Tadeusz Mazowiecki's accepting the position that his colleague Walesa declined. Poland's Communist president remains commander-in-chief of the armed forces; government portfolios for defense and interior (police) remain in Communist hands. And Solidarity has affirmed Poland's loyalty to the Warsaw Pact.

Most striking as Poland begins what is nevertheless a remarkable experiment, is that there is no basis in East-West relations for dealing with this or other emerging phenomena. At the moment, leaders are talking past one another.

Gorbachev makes his bid to be a major arbiter of Europe's future — both East and West — by proclaiming a "common European home," while President George Bush calls for a "Europe whole and free."

The visions are not compatible. One asserts Moscow's prerogatives in any process of change. The other asserts that realignment of European security must be on the basis of Western victory.

There is, of course, merit in the Western view. There will be no unification of Europe until the East European states can be stable without the presence of occupying troops, foreign or domestic.

That implies politics with popular roots, economics that provide hope and social peace based on an open compact between leaders and those led. In a word, each of the states that lie between the Soviet border and the West must undergo a revolution to make possible such stable politics.

The Soviet Union's tolerance is the key. At the moment, it can accept Western investment in Eastern Europe that eases the burden on the Kremlin treasury. It can even let Solidarity become responsible for trying — and likely failing — to sort out the Polish economy.

Far less clear is whether Moscow would permit the expulsion of Communists from government or uncontrolled expressions of a contagion, nationalism, that inevitably comes with relaxed rules. No one outside the Soviet Union can predict the limits of its tolerance. Most important, Gorbachev himself probably does not know them, and that fact increases the danger.

Given a chance, people will indeed vote with their feet; and the regimes in Czechoslovakia and especially East Germany, which lack Poland's political blend of Communists and Catholics or Hungary's decade of experimenting with economic reform, may break because they will not bend before new winds blowing elsewhere in the Communist world.

Excuse not adequate, convincing

How could an excuse such as was made by Paula Ryvens be accepted by the courts?

"She consulted a check from the United States Forest Service made payable to United Way as belonging to her husband and put a label on it."

I would think that in itself was a federal offense (altering a government check). How far will these embezzlers go?

Who lets an 18-month-old and a 4-year-old answer the phone? How glibly does she want people to be?

She should have thought about the publicity and consequences when she first decided this was an easy way to rip off the public.

Mr. Surtsevant, her minister, can't believe a mother of two and a first-time offender can go to prison. Did he not read the articles written and the television coverage three years ago about a former sheriff's deputy who was also a mother of two and a first-time offender?

She received a prison sentence and is still serving a probation term for a $500 conviction and to this day denies any wrong doing, while Mrs. Ryvens admits her guilt.

I for one will not give a donation to United Way ever again until they can prove to me that this incident will not be repeated.

The courts must stop this inexcusable carelessness being allowed by local public fund holders. Punishment should be equal and severe enough to make people realize that crime does not pay.

Speedway ticket rule questioned

There is a certain meaning to the word "policy" that the promoters at the Magic Valley Speedway must find very fitting. It is any system of management based on self-interest as opposed to equity.

Such is their rain-out policy. Does everyone who buys their $7 ticket realize that if the scheduled event is rained out, you can use it for the next scheduled event only? So if you can't make it to the next race, you are simply out your money.

It's the "use-it-or-lose-it" policy. Oh, it's printed in the programs, sometimes; but it will cost you a dollar to see it.

Notice what the already-paid hand stamp says — "Thank You." Somehow the words "Ha, ha, we got you" would seem more appropriate. (And to anyone who thought they had to buy a program to get a "raceco" card, the cards do say "Free — it costs nothing to play" on them.)

There also seems to be a set of policies for the people that the track knows, likes and gets sponsorship money from and a set for those they don't.

This is the Our policies are subject to change at whim policy. This is the one where the promoters can make any rule, change any rule or break any rule at their option.

There is the U-R-Stuck policy. The promoters know that they have the only track in town.

Most of the racers come out every week because they just enjoy racing and because it is close to home. They put a lot of time and money into these cars; believe me, I know.

The local drivers are charged an entry fee on the cars, the drivers who are not regulars or who come in from out of town are not. The out-of-town drivers can negotiate a purse; the track will not negotiate anything with the local drivers.

We all know who draws the largest crowds — the street stock drivers do. The promoters even wanted them to drive on two of only three nights that they were scheduled to be off.

The track is on city property; it is not a separate kingdom. The local drivers and fans should get the same considerations as those that come from out of town.

Voyager mission mixes poetry, mathematical purity

Amy E. Schwartz

Can a poem written in 1923 — a simple poem about walking through snowy woods at night — turn out in 1989 to be an exact description of an interstellar space voyage the poet never dreamed possible?

I thought so when one of the most familiar and seemingly old-fashioned of Robert Frost poems — that recitation-class favorite "Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening" — came to mind the other day as the perfect accompaniment for the coming intergalactic wanderings of Voyagers 1 and 2.

The woods are lovely, dark and deep. But I have promises to keep. And miles to go before I sleep. And miles to go before I sleep.

Like the poem, it strikes a melancholy note, that future voyage through empty landscapes. After Voyager 3's swing within 3,000 miles of Neptune, there will be no more major signposts on the trip out. Oh, 25 years from now, Voyager may, just may, still be transmitting data as it crosses the outer edge of the sun's magnetic field.

A few thousand years more, and it will probably encounter another "edge," the limit of a vast envelope of comets and other material known as the Oort Cloud.

After that, not a thing, until maybe the Andromeda galaxy in a few million years. Somewhere along the way Voyager will lose the use of its exhausted cameras, close its eyes and "sleep."

I didn't think up the image of Voyager sleeping. It comes from mission navigation expert Tony Taylor of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., who wrote in the Los Angeles Times about Voyager's long future in the space between galaxies. Even though Voyager will go blind and die after a few tens of years," Taylor writes, "even though it will die an electronic death, it will still have the germ of human creativity and daring incorporated into its very structure."

And even asleep, it will still be aimed for its target — still keeping promises.

This disappearance of a human-made object into infinity affords much, perhaps most, of the fascination Voyager holds for us.

The germ Taylor speaks of, the germ of the human, is not just the ship itself but the odd "message" it carries: when Voyager was launched, a group of scientists led by Carl Sagan insisted on compiling a golden disk, a sort of phonograph record, with tapes of human and animal sounds and messages about Earth.

The whole idea of sending a recording is faintly odd, won't the recipients have to build a hi-fi? Maybe, as one mission scientist laughed off my question, they'll be so advanced that whipping up a little hi-fi will be child's play.

Actually, there is a sort of hi-fi included with the gear on board. But that's just the start of the problem; who says they'll have ears?

In general, the episode of the message is not treated with the logic one expects of scientists, let alone scientists operating so precise a mission. The necessity of putting a message aboard Voyager seems to belong to a higher system of logic, less austere than celestial navigation but just as unanswerable in its way.

How peculiar that the scientists piloting Voyager can point it with such precision at a galaxy it might not reach during the lifetime of this planet, but don't mind the randomness of sending a message in a language sure to prove undecipherable.

Or is it so peculiar? If there are two systems of logic at work, then it's not just the small-scale "human" one that taps our emotions.

The celestial watchwords that make Voyager's trip possible, the calculations in its computers and the larger patterns they echo, strike yet another note.

It's necessary to plunder another old poem to figure out why: George Meredith in the late Victorian era.

In that poem, Prince Stefan, "bored of his dark dominion," creeps out one starry night to fly in orbit around the Earth. Angry and envious, he broods as he whizzes past the continents, his shadow crossing "Africa's sand" and "Arctic snows." And then he makes the mistake of going farther out, to where he can see the big picture:

Soaring through wider zones that pricked his scars With memory of the old revolt from Awe,

He reached a middle height, and at the stars, Which are the brain of heaven, he looked, and sank.

Around the ancient track marched, rank on rank. The army of unalterable law.

Maybe that's it, the tension that keeps spaceflight the most fascinating thing in the world.

On the one hand, the spidery machine carrying an illogically unreadable message, in all its moxie and human weirdness, a lonely little poet moving forward reflectively through dark snowy woods.

On the other hand, the brain of heaven, the beautiful, navigable absolutes of the sky's mathematical purity.

And us, the two of them, feeling the tug of each,

Hotel maids fold amid bed-lam

NEW YORK (AP) — They made their beds, again and again.

But there was no time to lie in them during Thursday's antics for 50 housekeepers from the city's top hotels that — dare we say? — sheer bedlam.

People have been killed by flying percale," cautioned comedian Joe Mauro, the master of ceremonies, before the "Fastest Hands in the East" contest for the coveted Brass Bed award started.

Twenty beds were lined up in the New York Hilton ballroom. The sheets, blankets and pillows were piled on tables three feet away. Unconfirmed reports surfaced about training that involved aerobics, high carbohydrate diets and good luck charms.

Energy levels were raised a notch by an announcement that spending money — $50, $100 and $200, respectively — had been added to the top three prizes: a trip to the Fontainebleau Hilton hotel in Miami Beach, a weekend at the Arrowood resort in By Brook, N.Y., and a pair of his-and-hers watches.

It was clear that Josephine Ahlenkora of the Drake Hotel was a favorite to be crowned. She bounced in her chair, smiled confidently and cheered at just about everything.

The housekeepers — all women — lined up at the head of their beds, hands poised above the linens. Judges with stopwatch watches stood at the foot of the beds; silence blanketed the room.

Nervous contestants had a couple of false starts before Mauro blew the starting whistle. Then the sound of snapping sheets filled the ballroom as the contestants sprinted around the beds, deftly, smoothing and stuffing. Ahlenkora doubled her pillow with a karate chop, swiftly dispatching it into its case.

The crowd — filled with rooting sections of friends and coworkers — went wild.

The contestants were divided into two groups for the preliminaries. Ten semifinalists went onto the three final heats.

To signal the judge that they were finished, they perched or crumpled on the end of their beds.

After a 30-second breather, Mauro announced the winners and handed out the trophies — miniature replicas of brass beds.

Hazel Meyers of the Helmsley Windsor Hotel took the top prize, clocking her last three beds in a total time of 3 minutes, 37 seconds. Her friends joyfully tackled her to mark her Super Bowl of Beds victory.

In a post-contest interview she revealed her winning strategy: "Before I came here I made 10 beds in less than an hour."

FDA procedures gave preferred treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food and Drug Administration procedures permitted preferential treatment to be given to some drug firms over others in reviewing generic drugs, according to a federal report obtained Thursday.

The report by the inspector general of the Department of Health and Human Services is scheduled for release on Monday. It was requested by the commissioner of food and drugs, Dr. Frank Young, and Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on oversight and investigations.

A spokesman for the FDA did not return two phone calls, but the report said the agency "is in general agreement and has taken or planned a number of corrective actions." Dingell, whose subcommittee has been investigating the generic drug industry, also could not immediately be reached.

Rep. Thomas J. Bliley Jr. of Virginia, the senior Republican on the subcommittee, said the report "confirms that there are serious weaknesses in FDA's generic drug review process."

"The problems are not isolated, as some in the agency originally contended," Bliley said. "The report indicates that the approval process itself needs to be changed. We will pursue corrective legislation on a bipartisan basis at the conclusion of the subcommittee's investigation."

The report said that irregularities had occurred at FDA "because there is a material internal control weakness in the generic drug review process that allowed preferential treatment to drug firms."

"Favoritism was provided to certain generic drug firms" in violation of federal regulations, the report said.

Among other things, the report said, the procedures allow a branch chief to favor a particular company by assigning that company's applications to chemists who work rapidly, while penalizing other companies by assigning their applications to slow reviewers.

Inspector General Richard P. Kussnerow said his investigators were told by a chemist that one branch chief "expedited applications by reassigning them from certain chemists to others who could complete the review in a shorter period of time."

Kussnerow also said the investigation found three cases in which the same drug product from competing companies had been assigned to the same chemist for review, making it possible for the chemist to "deliberately identify fewer deficiencies in one application while identifying numerous deficiencies in a competitor's application." He said it had not been proven or disproven that such favoritism had occurred.

The report also said that the FDA has established few standard operating procedures for chemists to use, a situation that it said "may indirectly favor one company's application for which a chemist may do a minimal review and adversely affect another company's application for which a chemist may do an exhaustive review."

Demery sought top HUD job during investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thomas T. Demery lobbied to be governor of Housing and Urban Development while knowing he was under investigation for allegedly mishandling a federal housing program, records released Thursday show.

As assistant secretary for housing at HUD for two years, "I have become greatly challenged and sensitized to the public policy questions surrounding the homeless, the availability of low-income housing, and the difficulty the elderly and first-time homebuyers face in finding affordable housing," Demery said in a form letter to congressmen dated Dec. 7, 1988.

The position went to former Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., and Demery has gone into private consulting. But Demery's conduct at HUD is being examined as part of the probe of alleged fraud, abuse and mismanagement at the agency during the Reagan administration.

The letter was sent to Sens. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., Donald Riegle, D-Mich., Arlen Specter, R-Pa., Rep. Carl Pursell, R-Mich., and Robert Teeter, then co-director of the office of President-elect Bush.

The letters were contained in files opened to the press Thursday under the Freedom of Information Act.

Demery could not immediately be reached Thursday. A woman answering his telephone said Demery was on vacation.

Demery is a former Michigan real estate agent and mortgage broker who worked in Ronald Reagan's successful 1980 campaign. As assistant housing secretary, he administered several of HUD's biggest programs, including $225 million in moderate-rehabilitation funds awarded annually and the massive Federal Housing Administration's mortgage insurance program.

The rehabilitation program has been revealed to be governed by influence peddling while the FHA has been losing millions of dollars annually through loan defaults and mismanagement.

In particular, HUD's inspector general was investigating in 1988 whether Demery had misused his position to induce contractors seeking HUD business to contribute to his pet charity, F.O.O.D. for Africa. The inspector general concluded that Demery may have traded on his position, but last month the Justice Department said it saw no evidence of criminal wrongdoing.

Soviet dancer leaves Utah; Chinese dancers disappear

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A love-struck Soviet dancer seeking asylum has left Utah for another part of the country, an immigration official said Thursday, and the whereabouts of two Chinese dancers remained unknown.

The three women were among 350 dancers and musicians from 12 countries invited to perform in the annual World Folkfest festival in Springville, about 60 miles south of Salt Lake City, Aug. 12 through Monday.

Chen Li, 24, and Zhu Qian, 27, both from Quizhou, Peoples Republic of China, left their host family's home Friday and never returned, officials said. There was speculation they may have gone with an exchange student who is married to one of the women.

The Soviet dancer, Svetlana Kirenko, 32, told Immigration and Naturalization Service officials during interviews Wednesday that she was afraid to return home after refusing Tuesday to board a flight with other Soviet performers.

"She indicated a fear of returning to the Soviet Union. It was a generalized fear, nothing specific. If she does decide to go ahead and apply for asylum, she'd have to provide some specifics," said Meryl Rogers, in charge of the local INS office.

By expressing fear of retribution if she returns to her home in the Donetsk region of the Ukraine north of the Black Sea, Kirenko qualifies for political asylum consideration, he said.

Kirenko, a member of the Ukrainian Donbass troupe that performed last week, was escorted by a federal official from her host family's home Tuesday while her group was preparing to go to Salt Lake International Airport.

After preliminary discussions with the FBI, she was turned over to the INS late Tuesday. Rogers said she left the state for "another part of the country" after INS agents completed questioning her Wednesday.

Rogers would not specify where Kirenko had gone. He said he understood any further INS proceedings would take place wherever Kirenko had moved.

Authorities have said they understood Kirenko fell in love with Robert Retallick, 22, of Rexburg, Idaho, during Donbass' appearance earlier this month at a folk festival in the southeastern Idaho community.

Lakers' Earvin 'Magic' Johnson receives honorary doctorate

HOLLY SPRINGS, Miss. (AP) — Move over Dr. J., here comes Dr. Magic. Rust College will honor Los Angeles Lakers basketball star Earvin "Magic" Johnson with an honorary doctorate Sept. 7. The 928-student private school will bestow a doctor of philosophy in humanities on Johnson for his work for the United Negro College Fund, which gives about $500,000 a year to Rust, college spokeswoman Sharon Luvene said Wednesday. Johnson, 30, has raised $2.5 million for the fund with his gala black-tie dinner and star-studded exhibition basketball game called "A Misunderstanding Night 'Magic' in Los Angeles," said Vincent Bryson, the fund's development director. "He's been able to influence a lot of new support for the United Negro College Fund. Earvin doesn't hesitate to use that influence he has for something he believes in. He believes deeply in education," Bryson said.

Ringo Starr's 1987 album with held until trials over ATLANTA (AP) — A judge Thursday extended a ban on distributing an album except Ringo Starr recorded in 1987 but now wants kept off the shelves. Starr says his drinking problem marred the album. Record producer Chips Moman and CHR Records, based in College Park, Ga., say the record could make $3.5 million if released while Starr is on his current U.S. concert tour. Superior Court Judge Clarence Cooper, who earlier banned distributing the album for 30 days, extended the restraining order until Starr's lawsuit to kill the album is tried, possibly in October. Starr recently underwent treatment for alcoholism and said in a deposition filed this week that during the recording sessions in Moman's studio in Memphis, Tenn., he and the other musicians often drank. "We would send out for wine, or there would be tequila there or cognac or whatever, you know, anybody felt like drinking, vodka. There was always plenty of alcohol on the premises," Starr said. Moman says he did not allow liquor in his studio. Starr also is unhappy he didn't play the drums on the album.

Hoffman's children to unite different rights groups
WEYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — As a tribute to their late father, Abbie Hoffman's son and daughter are starting a group to unite environmental, human and animal rights groups. "We were sitting around trying to figure out what would be in Abbie's spirit, and the sort of mushy memorial gobbledygook," said Andrew Hoffman, 28. Hoffman, a jeweler and carpenter, and his sister, Ilya, a state social services caseworker, are calling the group Organizers International. It was to debut Thursday night at a benefit featuring Richie Havens at a Boston nightclub.

Bill Murray tells about his first movie direction job
NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Bill Murray, in the process of directing his first film, says every aspiring director should have a little bit of ballplayer in him. "Directing is where the action is. It's like being the catcher in baseball," said Murray, who also stars in the movie "Quick Change." "I was the catcher when I played, and you were in every play. You called every play," Murray, a Chicago Cubs fan, said during a break in filming. Filming began in June in New York City, and Murray recruited a crew familiar with shooting in the Big Apple. "This is Woody Allen's crew. They've got the steadiest jobs in New York," said Murray. "We sort of inherited this very affable group that gets along with each other already and knows each other's habits." Bardot denounces French medical-research institute

PARIS (AP) — Brigitte Bardot on Thursday denounced France's national medical research institute for refusing to sell her 29 animals stolen from its laboratories and later recovered. "Human survival is very important, but not at the price of sacrifices and martyrdom done legally with good conscience by researchers on animals which endure tortures worse than the SS made men endure during the war," the former actress said on French radio. The National Institute for Health and Medical Research, in a statement, said the offer to buy 28 monkeys and one cat was pointless, because other animals would have to be purchased in their place for experiments. Miss Bardot, who in recent years has devoted her life to animal protection, said she was "disappointed but not surprised."

Study shows teens use condoms for all of the wrong reasons

CHICAGO (AP) — Teen-agers who choose condoms over other forms of contraception do so primarily because they are convenient to use and allow spontaneous sex, a study has found. Researchers say they are concerned that although sexually transmitted diseases are rampant among teens, most youths think they are immune, and that when they do use condoms they are more concerned with comfort and ease of use than they are with the possibility of disease. The findings come amid a push by health professionals to curb the disease rate as well as teen pregnancies by encouraging condom use, and indicate the approach should be geared more toward concerns expressed by youths in the study, Susan Kegelles, the leading researcher, said Wednesday. She said health professionals are concerned that the same type of sexual behavior that leads to diseases like gonorrhea and syphilis — frequent sex with multiple partners — is putting teens at risk for developing AIDS. "We know right now that 20 percent of people who have AIDS are in their 20s," and since the disease usually isn't diagnosed until years after exposure, "most of those people in their 20s probably contracted it when they were teen-agers," said Ms. Kegelles, a research psychologist at the Center for AIDS Prevention Studies at the University of California's San Francisco campus. Health factors are the most emphasized issue in trying to get teens to use condoms, Ms. Kegelles said. "But what we found was that although they knew that condoms prevent disease, that wasn't connected with their intent to use them," she said. To further encourage condom use, Ms. Kegelles said health professionals should emphasize factors like spontaneity, how easy they are to use and shared responsibility for contraception, as well as making youths — feel vulnerable to health risks. Though other forms of birth control were not addressed in the condom survey, the comfort and ease cited by teens would relate to a choice of condoms over three other forms of contraception — the diaphragm, birth-control pills or withdrawal. "Among male adolescents as was found with female adolescents the intention to use condoms in the next year was not associated with believing that condoms prevent STDs (sexually transmitted diseases) or that condoms are effective in preventing pregnancy," the authors wrote. Condoms being easy to use and enabling one to have spontaneous sex contributed to the intention to use them among both sexes, the study said. "Likewise, for both sexes, believing that condom use is popular with peers encouraged their use," the study said. The study, published in the August issue of Chicago-based American Journal of Diseases of Children, is based on surveys of 506 young men and women who attended two health clinics in the San Francisco area. The mean age of the girls was 16.7 years and of the boys was 16.2 years. Thirty-two percent of the girls and 43 percent of the boys were virgins. Of those who were sexually active, 59 percent of the girls and 63 percent of the boys had used condoms. "Teens do not identify themselves as risk groups," either for contracting STDs, AIDS or becoming pregnant, said Dr. Charles Wibleman, chief of the teen-age clinic at Kaiser Permanente Medical Center in San Francisco, one of the clinics in the study. "Their attitude is 'It's not going to happen to me,'" he said in a telephone interview. That attitude has contributed to the high rate of sexually transmitted diseases among teen-agers, Wibleman said. The latest statistics from the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta show that, among those ages 15 to 19, 185,312 cases of gonorrhea were reported in 1988, or 1,075.3 cases per 100,000. In addition, at least 1 million adolescent pregnancies are reported each year, most of them unplanned.

Woman gives birth after mate's funeral

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The widow of an Army paratrooper gave birth to a daughter three hours after the paratrooper's funeral Monday, family members say. The burial of Karl J. Reese in Mount Carmel, Utah, has been postponed until today because of the birth. The burial was to have been conducted Wednesday. "She left the chapel and went straight to the hospital and had the baby," said Neil Reese of his change-listed stocks, with 1,180 up, 359 down and 443 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 226.52 million shares, up from 159.64 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in blue-chip stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 272.30 million shares.

Point-plus gainers among the blue chips included General Motors, up 2 1/2% at 46 1/2; International Business Machines, up 2 at 116; American Telephone & Telegraph, up 1 1/2 at 40 1/4; General Electric, up 1 1/4 at 58 1/4; and Procter & Gamble, up 1/2 at 131.

Rumors and conjecture about possible takeovers or other deals benefited such diverse stocks as K mart, up 2 1/4 at 43 1/4; Maytag, up 1 1/2 at 26 1/4; and Phillips Petroleum, up 2 1/2 at 29 1/4.

Among the day's few losers, La-Z-Boy Chair fell 1 1/2 to 20 1/2. The company reported lower quarterly earnings.

As measured by Wilshire Associates' index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market increased $57.18 billion, or 1.69 percent, in value.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained 3.45 to 196.29.

Standard & Poor's industrial index rose 6.07 to 402.71; and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up 6.82 at 351.52.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market picked up 4.20 to 465.88. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 381.45, up 3.76.

FTC changes ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Grocery stores may offer rain checks or substitutes when they run out of advertised specials or may specify beforehand that availability is limited, the Federal Trade Commission said Thursday.

A final rule, to be published Monday in the Federal Register and take effect four days later, amends one adopted in 1971 that required grocers to stock enough advertised items to meet anticipated demand.

That rule had rarely been enforced and the commission had voted in April 1988 to approve making the rule change, meaning the new action is largely a formality.

The FTC began reviewing its earlier rule in 1984 and determined that the cost of compliance outweighed the benefits. According to the review, the 1971 rule imposed an estimated $132 million to $370 million in costs on retail food stores, with those costs passed on to consumers.

Fixed-rate mortgages up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fixed-rate mortgage rates rose to a national average of 9.85 percent this month after dropping in July to their lowest level in more than two years, according to a survey released Thursday by the Federal National Mortgage Association.

Fannie Mae said the new average for 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages rose from 9.73 last month, the lowest level since fixed-rate mortgages averaged 9.25 percent in March 1987.

The rates for one-year adjustable mortgages, meanwhile, fell to 8.51 percent from 8.66 percent in July.

Because of generally declining rates, homebuyers have flocked to fixed-rate mortgages recently. In July, the percentage of adjustable-rate mortgage applications fell to 19 percent, the lowest level since April 1987, Fannie Mae said.

Twin Falls County 5th in lottery tickets

TWIN FALLS—Twin Falls County has accounted for 5.5 percent of the Idaho Lottery's $8.5 million sales through Aug. 18, according to figures released by Wally Hedrick, lottery director.

Those figures put Twin Falls County fifth on the list of counties sales.

Top retailers in the Magic Valley included the Travelers Oasis near Hansen, which had sold 63,250 tickets, fourth-highest in the state.

The 7-11 stores on Overland Road in Burley and on Filer Avenue in Twin Falls both reported sales of 40,000 tickets, 15th-highest in Idaho.

Average weekly sales have topped $2 per capita, making Idaho one of the top two or three states in instant ticket sales, Hedrick reported.

GOP plans 'listening post' booth at Twin Falls fair

TWIN FALLS—The voters rather than the politicians will do the talking at the county Republican Central Committee's fair booth this year.

The committee voted Wednesday to eliminate their usual stumping booth from the fair in favor of a "listening post" where fairgoers can tell elected officials which issues deserve their attention, Chairman Mark Stubbs said.

The booth will be across from Merchants Building No. 1, and the committee will schedule as many Republican county officials and state legislators as possible, Stubbs said.

Wendell plans Ag Day in honor of its farmers

WENDELL—In honor of farmers, ranchers and dairymen, the city is having a celebration called Ag Day on Saturday.

The annual event begins at 10:30 a.m. with a children's parade. Youngsters will gather for the parade by the office of Dr. Richard Hagerman at the M & W/Bunns True Value parking lot.

The grand parade begins at 11 from the same parking lot at the south end of Wendell. It will travel north past the May Valley Manor and then circle east to the city park. Grand marshal this year is Bob Burke, voted by the Chamber of Commerce as Wendell Citizen of the Year.

One highlight, Parade Chairman Jack Hyder said, will be the "Wendell Centennial Queen," Elsie Robinson. Born in Freedom, Wyo., in 1890, the 99-year-old Robinson will ride the parade route in a horse drawn carriage.

After the parade, activities will continue in the city park throughout the afternoon. Arts and crafts booths will be set up, local civic groups will sell food and live music will be performed.

Diaz-Granados will chair professional association

MURTAUGH—Superintendent Frederick Diaz-Granados has been named chairman of the Professional Committee of the Idaho Association of School Administrators.

Nominated by IASA President Dennis Seaton, principal at Twin Falls' Morningside Elementary School, Diaz-Granados will be in charge of monitoring and reviewing all activities related to membership in the association.

During the past two years, the committee has worked on topics such as certification guidelines for middle school teachers and administrators, the shortage of communications disorder specialists, strategies for improving the image of administrators and a mentor program for new administrators.

Water Resources mails out Snake River claims forms

TWIN FALLS—The state Department of Water Resources has mailed out notices to file water claims in the Snake River Basin Adjudication to about 1,900 Camas County property owners.

Only those water rights that existed on or before Nov. 19, 1987 need to have claims filed. Though claims are not required on small domestic and stockwater rights, the department recommends that all water rights holders file a claim to protect their rights.

Camas County rights holders will have 90 days to file their claims. Help in filling out the forms is available at the department office in Boise at 1301 N. Orchard, Boise or by calling 1-800-451-4129.

Blaine vote will decide district for hospital tax

By BARBARA NEIWEIT
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY—The residents of southern Blaine County will go to the polls Oct. 3 to decide whether to create a taxing district to help fund the Blaine County Medical Center.

The county commissioners decided Wednesday after testimony during a public hearing from 25 people and reviewing written comments that enough people supported the idea to call an election.

The creation of the South Blaine County Medical Center Hospital District would mean taking the hospital away from the county's control. While the facility has been running at a slight profit, the hospital receives county support of up to $50,000 annually.

The hospital district would provide up to $200,000 annually on a 4 mill levy for capital expenditures and new equipment to keep up with medical technologies. For the owner of a $75,000 home with a homeowner's exemption, this would mean an additional tax of $36 a year.

Most of those who commented on the idea—21 people—said they supported the idea.

Five people opposed the idea and six letters were against it as well. The primary concern seemed to be disagreement over separating the county into two portions for taxing purposes.

As it is proposed, the taxing district will include only the southern portion of Blaine County south of East Fork, but not including East Fork Canyon itself. The nearby Greenhorn Gulch will be included in the district, however.

Hospital supporters said most of the patients come from southern Blaine County, with 55 percent of its patients living in Hailey, Bellevue and other Blaine County areas. Another 13 percent live in Ketchum and Sun Valley where the majority of those residents use the city-owned Moritz Community Hospital in Sun Valley.

"This does not preclude in the future a county-wide hospital district," said John Flanagan, secretary of the hospital board.

City officials see the area from south Blaine County as the only ones that benefit," said Hailey City Councilman Rick Davis. He said he favors creating a taxing district but felt the boundary line would once again polarize the county with ill feelings developing between north and south residents.

County Commissioner Tom Blanchard said.

Jerome teachers stage rally

100 gather hoping negotiations with school district can be drawn to close

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

JEROME—About 100 teachers rallied Thursday night outside the school districts' administrative offices after neither the School Board nor its negotiators showed up to talk their pay.

"We've given it the college try," Jerome Education President Judy Enos said at 7:10. "Why they aren't here, I don't know, but we are here and that's proof we've tried to get a settlement."

The teachers union dropped invitations to board members and their professional negotiators, Jerry Gates and Randy Bohannon, at the district's office with Superintendent Richard Kugler's secretary for mailing, Enos said. It is unknown, however, whether board members or the negotiators received the invitations.

Kugler could not be reached at his home Thursday evening to confirm the mailings or comment on the settlement-session-turned-rally.

Earlier this week, Enos said Kugler had told her Gates and Bohannon had refused to attend the meeting because

Gates and Bohannon, and told teachers they earn more at their hobby than you do at your job."

A loud "it stinks" was yelled from somewhere in the crowd. And the crowd gave Gilbert a rousing "yes" when he asked them if they agreed negotiations would be settled if the board negotiated.

"We ran them out of East-Bonneville. We ran them out of Moscow. And we'll run them out of Jerome," Gilbert told the teachers, referring to Gates and Bohannon.

Union officials finally settled into money matters and it appears the union's

Heyburn OKs big budget; taxes won't rise

By DONNA SCHORZMAN
Times-News correspondent

HEYBURN—The City Council has approved a budget nearly $1 million higher than the current year's but taxes shouldn't rise.

Most of the increase in the $6.66 million budget is due to grants the city hopes to receive for a new sewer system. The city is not committed to the project if the funds do not come in during the coming year. The city has budgeted about $250,000 to use as matching funds, Mayor Harold Hurst said.

The budget also includes about $100,000 to install curbs and gutters and sidewalks next year.

In other matters, public hearings have been set for 7 p.m. Sept. 23 and Oct. 11 to consider Keith Couch's request to rezone property near Interstate 84 for a truckstop.

Couch plans to build a truckstop near the Interstate on what is commonly known as the Midway subdivision. The property is currently zoned for agricultural use, and Couch has asked to change that classification to commercial and industrial.

Couch's old business, Couch Equipment Co., destroyed by fire in late May, is on part of the 60-acre site.

The truck stop would have fuel pumps, an RV park and restaurant, Couch has said. Future plans include a truck repair shop, truck washing facilities and a fast-food

Officials offer testimony at engineering ethics hearing

By MICHELLE COLE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS—A cadre of Bellevue city officials testified Thursday before Idaho's engineering licensing board in a hearing to determine whether a Pocatello firm violated ethical standards in wooing the city for a sewage treatment contract.

But the two-day hearings in Twin Falls won't mean a delay for the city's sewer project, Mayor Wayne Douthit said.

"I feel good about the project," Douthit said. "I honestly don't believe anything wrong was ever intended."

After listening to presentations from three Idaho engineering firms this spring, Bellevue's City Council awarded the design contract for the city's new $3 million sewer system to Forgren Associates.

A citizens' advisory committee ranked Forgren third on its list of recommended firms, but Douthit and Bellevue City Councilman Dennis Wright told the Board of Professional Engineers and Land Surveyors that the council voted 4-2 to contract with Forgren because members were impressed by the firm's presentation and approach to the project.

"There was something fishy" about the selection process, former City Councilman Ron Reese told the board.

Reese, who failed in his attempt to unseat Douthit in May elections, and Councilman Dale Ewerson cast dissenting votes against the engineering firm during the March vote.

Reese's testimony Thursday centered on news reports that quoted the mayor as saying Forgren was selected because of the firm's willingness to underwrite engineering costs prior to the June bond

Jones plans to reintroduce ethics measures

The Associated Press

BURLEY—Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones says he will introduce ethics in government legislation once again after this year's attempt failed in the House of Representatives.

This year, the legislation will take the form of two bills: one called the Corrupt Practices Bill and the other the Conflict of Interest Reporting Bill, Jones said.

The proposals prohibit such things as accepting gifts from someone in the official's jurisdiction and not revealing conflicts of interest. They were introduced last year as one measure; but the House separated them into two bills and the Senate refused to go along.

One of the biggest problems Jones has seen in the various levels of state government is officials negotiating agreements that profit themselves. A person may own a company and negotiate a contract between their concern and the state or city.

"Actually, they negotiate both sides of the contract," he said. Currently, it is a felony to do so on the state level, but legal for city officials.

It is important for all levels to operate under one road map, said Deputy Attorney General Pat Kole.

The Corrupt Practices Bill would prohibit government servants from accepting gratuities. And officials would not be able to use inside information learned during their tenure for a full year after leaving office.

"The number of possible violations is as endless as human greed," Kole said.

The practices bill would make into account rural realities: If a city has less than two suppliers of a needed item within a 25-mile radius, the government could contract with a public servant as long as that person did not negotiate the deal.

John Greene, executive director of the Mountain Home Chamber of Commerce, said only about one-tenth of the 15 million acres would be completely off-limits to civilians, with the rest open to recreation and ranching.

As for the ranchers, he said, "To say the Air Force is going to destroy their livelihood, I don't see that."

If the bombing range does not expand, it may close, he said.

"We don't want to see any ranchers hurt," said Harry Light, chairman of the chamber's military affairs committee. "We don't want to see anyone hurt."

Expert: Bombing range would hurt animals

The Associated Press

MOUNTAIN HOME—A veterinarian says any study on the proposed expansion of a gunnery range for Mountain Home Air Force Base should include an assessment of the impact on animals.

A plane flying at 500 feet altitude at supersonic speeds would "blow all the windows out of a truck (and) blow the eardrums out of animals," said Ted Hoffman, Mountain Home.

Hoffman was among about 100 people who attended a town meeting with U.S. Rep. Richard Stallings at Mountain Home High School Wednesday.

The chief topic was an Air Force plan to expand the Saylor Creek Bombing Range from its current 102,000 acres to about 1.5 million acres. The plan has come under fire from ranchers and environmentalists.

Stallings supports the expansion, although he said that he was surprised by the scale. "At this point, I have no criticism of the Air Force," he said.

Congressional counterpart, Rep. Steve Coats, said he felt the expansion was largely after touring the area by helicopter last week.

Hoffman told Stallings the Air Force seemed to be in a hurry to expand the range, a training ground for bombers based at Mountain Home and other air bases. "I am asking you to ask the Air Force to slow down and think about this," he said. The effects of the expansion on ranchers and on

Wendell schools auditor gives passing mark

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL—The school district is doing a good job of budgeting and keeping books, but it needs to have a written policy on handling student body accounts, says auditor Tom Jones of Gooding.

Jones gave Wendell trustees his annual audit report this week, saying the district's total revenue in the general fund for the 1988-89 school year was $2,040 million, about $50,000 more than the previous year. The increase is due to a rise in funds from the state, he said.

Jones recommended the district establish policy manuals, mainly for the benefit of new employees. "They should have it written down," he said. "It's kind of a job description."

While in student body accounts are being handled very well now, he added, but a written policy could help prevent problems with missing funds that other school districts have experienced.

Reading figures from his report, Jones said the Wendell district is due $196,000 in back taxes that are yet to be paid. Monthly operation cost is about $180,000, he said, and last year's budget was "right on the money" with minimal variances.

The school lunch program lost $3,666, Jones reported, and this year's 10 cent price increase "was probably a good idea," he said.

In the near future, Jones predicted, the state is likely to start requiring complete school property inventories in annual audit reports. Most school districts in Idaho, including Wendell, do not bother with inventories, he said.

Jones also noted that the bond passed in 1974 to build a new gymnasium will be paid off in 1993.

In other business: David Farnes requested that school bus service be provided for his children and some neighbor children. Farnes, who lives east of McGinnis Park, said at least seven children on his gravel road need a ride from their homes.

Trustees said they would talk with bus contractor Dick Eaton and look into the situation further before making a decision.

Keith Metzner of Buhl was hired as an eighth-grade math teacher and as the head coach for varsity football. He replaced Shawn Corrigan, who resigned to move to Newview, Wash. Trustees also approved the out-of-district enrollment request for Metzner's two children to attend the elementary school in Wendell.

Phyllis Bunn was hired as a special education teacher for the district. Superintendent Larry Manly said applications will be taken until the end of the month to hire a Chapter I Aide. This is a new half-time position being added to the staff, he said.

A training session for School Board members will be presented Sept. 26 for Wendell trustees by Alan Smith, executive director of the Idaho School Boards Association. Clarence Sparks, Graham Solomon and Fred Prins are beginning their first terms as trustees in Wendell.

Principal Gary Thomasson said new enrollment of the elementary school is 552 students, 17 than a year ago. Principal David Skinner said junior high and high school enrollment will total about 300, about 10-15 more than a year ago.

Court asks for briefs on Andrews' stay

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal appellate court said Thursday it will consider legal technicalities as well as the merits of arguments raised in the latest in 14 years of appeals by Utah death row inmate William Andrews.

The 10th Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver, which last week stayed Andrews' execution for three 1974-1976 killings, on Thursday issued detailed instructions to attorneys and said it would hold expedited hearings.

Andrews, at nearly 15 years the nation's longest-standing resident of death row, had been scheduled to die by lethal injection Tuesday for his role in the murders during a robbery, at Ogden's Hi-Fi Shop.

Five victims were forced to drink liquid drain cleaner and all were shot, but two women survived. Andrews' co-defendant, Pierre Dale Selby, admitted before his 1987 execution that he shot the victims after Andrews left the store.

The three-judge appellate panel directed attorneys to submit briefs on defense allegations that a mistrial should have been declared when a juror saw a note during a lunch break; that Andrews' trial attorney lacked the experience to represent him adequately; and that a judge failed to tell the jury it could reach a verdict of second-degree murder. The jury was all-white; the defendants were black.

The judges also ordered briefs on the state's contention that Andrews had abused the appeals process by raising issues that should have been or were considered earlier in federal and state courts.

Special state prosecutor Robert Wallace said the appellate panel would consider "a number of different aspects" in the appeal. He said he also was pleased by the court's decision to hear oral arguments once the briefs are submitted.

Minico High band to get uniforms; immunization policy strengthened

By BARBARA WARD
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — The Minico High School band and flag team will get new uniforms later this fall and the school's immunization policy has been strengthened.

The 40 new band and eight new flag team uniforms would cost $9,155, band director Roger Turner told the School Board Monday. The high school's band and fund-raising efforts would pay for about one-third of the cost, he said, and asked the board pay the remainder through district funds. The board agreed.

Turner plans to organize a Band Parents Organization to help with fund-raising ideas this fall.

Turner said the red-and-white uniforms should arrive in 70 to 90 days if ordered now, perhaps not soon enough for the football season, but definitely in time for spring activities.

In an effort to boost immunization against disease, the trustees also formally adopted an amendment to the district's student immunization policy which states students in kindergarten through fifth grade will be suspended if parents or guardians don't provide proof they've been immunized or that they have official exemptions.

Proof of immunization needs to be provided within 60 days of the student's first admission. A parent may sign an exemption because of religious beliefs, personal reasons or medical reasons, if they prefer.

"I think it's the way to go," Trustee Harold Short said. "We're going to have to get on top of this thing."

Many older students in the district have missed some of their shots but are getting them now, Superintendent Gene Snapp said.

Trustee Bob Harmon wondered if the amendment will increase the school nurse's workload.

Snapp said it shouldn't but that the addition of the kindergarten program last year did. School Nurse Nancy Kauka must oversee the health of more than 5,000 students in Minidoka County, he said. "We need to prioritize parts of her job description . . . and we're looking at the possibility of adding another half-time, perhaps full-time, position."

In other matters, the high school advanced psychology class will do a voluntary and anonymous survey of grades six through 12 in October concerning students' attitudes toward drugs. Assistant Superintendent Darwin Andersen told the board. The results due by Christmas, will be used to determine the extent of a need for intervention and/or treatment programs.

The school recently instituted two programs, both based on making assertive decisions regarding drug use.

Andersen also said that Minidoka teachers will receive in-service training in drug awareness. Tom Hamilton, a drug education counselor with the Walker Center in Gooding, will provide the training.

In other business, the board: "We told the school has received a grant from Northwest Educational Lab to train district staff members to work more effectively with students who don't use the English language well."

"Hired Thomas Veltkamp Jr. to teach math at East Minico, Kevin Farnsworth to teach ESL/Spanish at Minico and West Minico, Lisa Whitcott to teach second grade at Acequia, Loretta Crockett to teach third grade at Acequia, Annalee Darrington to teach fifth grade at Acequia and Mary Null to teach gifted and talented students."

"Approved letters of intent for Mary Shane to teach earth science at East Minico, JoAnn Deromedia to teach sixth grade at Big Valley, Michelle Stoor to teach first grade at Fershing, and Nancy Kempton to be educational specialist in the first through third grades at Pershing."

"Approved the bus routes to be the same as the 1988-89 school year."

"Discussed new requirements for bus driver licenses to be effective April, 1990."

"Accepted a bid of $16,600 for the heating system replacement in the bus garage from Magic Valley Refrigeration of Twin Falls."

"Accepted bids from Al's Truck and Auto Salvage, Delles Andrus and MacKenzie Auto Equipment Inc. for surplus buses."

already offered as far as salaries. "The union also plans to go door-to-door Saturday to deliver flyers about negotiations. Teacher Paul Brown said the flyers will tell people what is really going on instead of what Mr. Kugler is saying in the newspapers."

The teachers ended their rally with songs with lines such as "There's no coins in our pockets," "We ain't got a barrel of money," and "We don't know what's coming tomorrow. Maybe it's trouble and sorrow."

members, 74 of the district's teachers, say the bottom line is 7 percent.

Previously, teachers were holding out for a 5.5 percent increase, which would raise the base pay to $14,576. The board has offered a 3.7 percent raise, which would boost the base to $14,326.

And while School Board Chairman Alvin Chojnacky and Kugler say the teachers enjoy one of the best fringe benefits pool in the Magic Valley, teachers say that shouldn't be lumped with salaries.

Although "withholding services" was mentioned, union officials say a strike is planned at this time, but say such a decision will be up to the teachers.

The union does plan, however, to hold a secret-ballot vote on teachers' confidence in Kugler. Kugler called the vote "union tactics" and standard procedure for the IEA.

Kugler has repeatedly said that the school district cannot afford to give teachers any more than said an attempt several years ago to create a county-wide taxing district was defeated when Sun Valley residents balked at the double taxation of paying for two hospitals — Moritz Community Hospital is funded through the city of Sun Valley, tax dollars and private contributions — and Ketchum residents wanted to use the closer hospital.

Hailey resident Gertrude Twyman objected because she said the hospital would still accept indigents from throughout the county, not just the southern portion.

Supporters of the hospital district applauded the quality of care given at the facility and the need to support a hospital in the community.

When an emergency hits your family, you don't want to drive 14 miles get to Jerome or the 40 miles to get to Moritz," one Bellevue resident said.

Kendall Kinghorn said the hospital now has a wish list totalling $700,000 for capital expenditures and equipment. By the time the hospital would receive any funds in 1991, it would take 10 years to meet those requests, let alone any new needs.

The county commissioners did amend the hospital district boundaries by adding the southern portions of Blinnie County, near Rupert and Minidoka. Blanchard said there is not a direct road between the hospital and the 28 families in that area, so there seemed to be no need for them to contribute to the district.

restaurant. Still to be determined is whether the city's deteriorated sewer system could handle the facility's load. A study of the system is due out in November. The city likely has an adequate water system.

In other business, the council:

• Will raise the monthly garbage pickup fee for residential to $4 from $3.60 beginning with the new budget in October. The fee is being raised to offset increased charges from PSI for garbage pickup.

• Agreed to look at a ditch running by the property of Heyburn resident Vaudis Burke. She said the ditch makes mowing difficult and wanted to know if it was her responsibility to take care of that property. The council will consider filling in the ditch if it is serving no purpose.

Approved the purchase of liability insurance from Thyne Parker of Hamilton Agency in the amount of $28,499. The coverage is down about $3,000 from last year. The council decided against buying additional pollution coverage for weed and insect spraying.

election, J-U-B Engineers, another contender for the city's new sewer contract, asked for $30,000 up front in order to begin design work.

The five-member board also questioned Bellevue city officials about reports that Forsgren was willing to forgive the up-front design costs should voters reject the bond bids.

Times-News correspondent Robert Doyle, who covered the issue, was subpoenaed to testify Thursday. He told the board that it was his understanding from interviews that the city had made such up-front arrangements with the engineering firm. Two Wood River Valley reporters are scheduled to testify today.

Douthit and Wright said those reports misinterpreted the truth.

In a letter to the board, Leslie M. Walker, president of Consulting Engineers of Idaho, asked the examiners to look into what appeared to be a "contingent fee" — a direct violation of the Rules of Professional Responsibility code that governs the state's engineers and land surveyors.

"Your ruling on this matter will be of landmark significance," Walker wrote. "It will provide a needed clarification of acceptable business and professional engineering practice in Idaho."

The board will not rule on whether there was a violation until next month. After that time, board member Wendell Higgins said another hearing would be held to determine what sanctions against the firm, if any, are appropriate.

Bellevue voters approved the $1 million bond issue in June. The remainder of the $2 million balance will come from state and federal grants. Douthit said he doesn't think the government grants will be jeopardized by the selection controversy or by the hearing's outcome.

11-car derailment stops rail traffic

RAWLINS, Wyo. (AP) — An 11-car derailment forced Union Pacific Railroad to halt traffic along its southern Wyoming line for about 15 hours, according to spokesman John Bromley. The cars derailed about 32 miles east of Rawlins shortly after 5 p.m. Wednesday when wheel bearings on one of the cars overheated, said Bromley. No one was injured in the accident, and no hazardous materials were involved, he said. The 104-car train was running east from Seattle to North Platte, Neb., and the cars that derailed were carrying lumber and wood chips, Bromley said Thursday. The tracks were reopened at 12:05 p.m. Thursday, said Bromley.

Timber cutting plan gets 2nd appeal

ST. ANTHONY (AP) — Six conservation groups have filed a second appeal of a Forest Service decision to salvage timber cutting in prime grizzly bear habitat in eastern Idaho's Targhee National Forest. Former Ashton District Ranger Bruce Fox refilled the decision on Management Unit 12 near Ashton on July 5. Fox withdrew a February ruling because of confusion over the appeals process. The same conservationist groups appealed that decision. The proposed timber sale area is on the Idaho-Wyoming border adjacent to Yellowstone National Park and Jeddah-Smith Wilderness area. The American Wilderness Alliance, headquartered in Bozeman, Mont., is the lead organization in the appeal, said Maureen McBrien, Targhee assistant forest planner. It was co-signed by the Greater Yellowstone Coalition, Idaho Conservation League, Idaho Environmental Council, Sierra Club Northern Rockies Chapter and The Wilderness Society.

Andrus is vice-chairman of panel

BOISE (AP) — Gov. Cecil Andrus has been appointed as vice chairman of the Agriculture and Rural Development Committee of the National Governors' Association. Chairman is South Dakota Gov. George Mickelson. "Certainly the status of agriculture in our nation's economy is vital to the interests of Idaho and I am hopeful my involvement in this committee will give me an opportunity to further represent those interests," Andrus said.

Idaho gets week to file on violation

BOISE (AP) — The state of Idaho, cited for violating federal wastewater discharge laws at its Ada County prison complex, has been given an additional week to file a report documenting corrective actions. "They needed more time to do a more complete job," said U.S. Environmental Protection Agency spokesman Don Dossett in Seattle. "It won't be extended any further than this." Dossett, a water-quality compliance officer, said the state now has until Wednesday to file its report. The previous deadline was Thursday.

Last week, the EPA put the state on notice that fines of up to $25,000 a day may be imposed for additional illegal discharges. According to the EPA, the Department of Corrections violated its waste-discharge permit by failing to monitor and report effluent releases into Tenmile Creek south of Boise during late March and early April, and again on July 26. The EPA order was issued shortly after Ada County rancher Richard Mooney went to court with his claim that the prison was dumping illegal waste into Tenmile Creek, which passes through his 475-acre cattle ranch.

Officials correct error to LCSC

LEWISTON (AP) — Federal officials acknowledge they incorrectly listed Lewis-Clark State College as having one of the nation's worst default rates of federal student loans, LCSC administrators say. The college's actual default rate was 17 percent in 1987-88 for fiscal years 1986 and 1987 and 15.5 percent for the college earlier this year. While the figures are for different years, LCSC administrators say federal officials recently admitted the information about LCSC appears to be inaccurate, according to a news release. The government also will not use the suspect higher figure to require the college to create a default reduction plan. But damage to the college's reputation already may have been done and may not be easy to correct, President Lee Vickers said Wednesday.

Waste drums found in Snake River

BLACKFOOT (AP) — A Blackfoot man has discovered two 55-gallon drums that have apparently floated down the Snake River, one severely weathered and leaking hazardous waste. Steve Christian, 42, recovered a drum of perchloroethylene in the river bottom six miles north of Blackfoot in early April, and just recently took a picture of a similar barrel lying in the river. The drum he recovered from the river bottoms contained about 40 gallons of material and was slowly leaking, he said. Scott Lund, waste compliance officer for the state Division of Environmental Quality's hazardous materials bureau, said perchloroethylene is a dry cleaning and degreasing solvent and is toxic. In June, his office placed the 55-gallon drum in an overpack drum to contain the leak's leaking materials.

Idahoans get restitution from fraud

BOISE (AP) — A New York company has been ordered by the state to make restitution to any Idahoans who lost money due to its securities and mail fraud, state Finance Department Director Bolton Patty said. The order was filed Wednesday against Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. and the Drexel Burnham Lambert Group Inc. It stems from Drexel's guilty pleas to six felony counts of securities and mail fraud, and a permanent injunction entered by U.S. District Court in New York on July 20. The violations by Drexel affected the prices of numerous securities which, in turn, caused losses for buyers and sellers. Idaho residents could be among the investors who lost money, Patty said. The order calls for creation of a $500 million fund to compensate all investors, an independent oversight committee, bans any unsolicited calls to investors and forms a securities foundation independent of Drexel to inform the public.

Boise becomes more popular

BOISE (AP) — Boise took a quantum leap in popularity this week, at least by one standard of measurement. The city ranked 101st in Money magazine's 1989 reader survey of the 300 best cities to live, released Wednesday. The jump from 188th a year ago was one of the biggest of any city on the list. The listing, in the September issue, "affirms to Boiseans that we do have a tremendous city that we call home," said Mayor Dirk Kempthorne. "It helps with our national image and reputation for others to now acknowledge what we have known for a long time."

Andrus accused of mismanaging Idaho

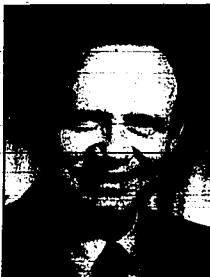

BOISE (AP) — A Republican state House member is accusing Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus of mismanaging state government in ways that are "clearly incompetent and even illegal or unethical." But Andrus spokesman Marc Johnson labeled the charges leveled Thursday by Rep. Boyd Hill of Boise as "politics as usual from this particular individual." Hill, who said his allegations were not the first shot in a campaign to challenge Andrus for governor next year, blamed the Democratic chief executive for problems at the Idaho State School and Hospital in Nampa, including the threatened loss of federal funds; the claims of environmental pollution lodged against the state prison, theft of cattle from the state prison farm, and the state Lands Department's request for a 25 percent increase in its budget. He said Andrus was responsible for the people with direct authority over those areas. "The results of Andrus' questionable judgment threaten to leave Idahoans paying the bill for millions upon millions of dollars worth of mismanagement and incompetence in state government," Hill declared.

The focus of his attack was the problem at the Nampa facility for the severely mentally and physically disabled. The federal government earlier this week threatened to halt $12.5 million in aid to the school because of inadequate active treatment programs to assure the 209 patients develop to their full potential. State officials are appealing that citation, removing any immediate threat the federal money will be withdrawn, and top Republican lawmakers, including the Senate chairman of the budget committee, have said they believe the state will never be able to satisfy the federal government. They said the government appears intent on shutting down the school, no matter what the state does. But Hill disagreed with his political colleagues, saying, "They don't want to shut that place down." He also blamed the governor for significant financial shortages found in the operation of the school's canteen. But the report by Legislative Auditor Bruce Balderston, that detected those shortages said the problems began months before Andrus took office and were finally halted by his appointees. On the prison sewage system, the Corrections Department, which is under the direct control of a three-member Board of Corrections, is contesting the accuracy of the allegations filed against it and maintains no environmental damage has occurred at the facility. Until last spring, the members of the board had been holdovers from the previous administration, and Andrus' two replacement appointees last winter were confirmed by the Republican-controlled state Senate. Corrections Director Richard Vernon, who also took office earlier this year, immediately fired the employee involved in the alleged cattle theft. —Johnson countered Hill's charges that the Lands Department budget request was an insult to taxpayers by pointing out that Lands Director Stanley Hamilton was hired not by the governor but by the five-member Land Board; whose majority has been in Republican hands for the past decade. In addition, when Hamilton presented his budget request to the board earlier this month, Andrus greeted it by calling it ridiculous and the likely target of significant cutbacks.

Senior senator still mum on political future

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Idaho's senior Republican senator, James McClure, is still keeping the politicians guessing about whether he will seek a fourth six-year term. Although he has set the re-election campaign machinery in motion and is raising money, there has been constant speculation about whether McClure will run again. Some of his closest associates have said he has yet to make up his mind. "Still no announcements," McClure told party faithful Wednesday night at the annual GOP picnic in eastern Idaho although he has said people should assume he is running unless he says otherwise. The senator offered no further clues about his 1990 plans in his brief pep talk, speaking mainly about the importance of maintaining "the kind of government that the kind of people we hope to be deserve."

SEN. JAMES MCCLURE
Will he seek fourth term?
It was 18 years ago Thursday that the late Republican Sen. Len Jordan announced he would retire, clearing the way for McClure's first victorious senate campaign. Before he spoke, former Louisiana Republican Congressman Henson Morre, now deputy secretary of energy, issued a ringing endorsement for McClure's re-election. "McClure is Mr. Energy," Moore said. "His is everything you can want as a senator." Moore also called for the ouster of three-term Congressman Richard Stallings, the only Democrat in the state's delegation to the nation's Capitol, and conservative Sen. Steve Symms said the GOP cannot ease up just because it has held the White House since 1981. "The liberal Democrats have control of the House and the Senate," he said. "We need help in the House and Senate."

John Scoreby of Idaho Falls, who is considering a challenge to Stallings next year, claimed said it was only through the efforts of Symms and McClure that the controversial laser-driven plutonium refinery called the Special Isotope Separation project has been kept on track for construction at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, the region's largest employer. "Under Stallings' program, it would be studied for another year," Scoreby said. "It's time for us to retire Stallings." Should McClure decide to step down, Stallings has said he would have to take a look at the possibility of running for the Senate, and Republican Congressman Larry Craig, who could not make the event Wednesday night, has also said he would be interested in a race for an open senate seat.

Firth man testifies that he did not confess a killing to a deputy BLACKFOOT (AP) — A Firth man — a sheriff's deputy — said he confessed to murdering one of the victims Paul Ezra Rhoades was convicted of killing but he denied committing that murder. Kevin Buchholz testified Thursday before 7th District Judge James Herndon that he did engage in some loose, drunken talk when he was jailed two weeks after Blackfoot convenience store clerk Stacy Baldwin was murdered on Feb. 28, 1987. But he testified that he never told police he shot the 24-year-old woman twice in the back. A week ago, during the first part of the post-conviction relief hearing before Herndon, Bingham County Sheriff's deputy Larry Christian quoted Buchholz as saying, "I killed the girl. I've been in trouble most of my life. I need to be put away." But Christian also said it was his experience that people as intoxicated as Buchholz was could provide unreliable information. Rhoades, 32, is fighting execution on the first-degree murder conviction in the death of Mrs. Baldwin. He has also been condemned for the death a month later of Idaho Falls schoolteacher Susan Michelbacher, 34, and he was sentenced to two life sentences after pleading guilty to killing convenience store clerk Nolan Haddon, 21, of Blackfoot several days earlier. Buchholz told Herndon he got belligerent with police in mid-March 1987 when they jailed him on charges of battery, resisting arrest and obstructing a police officer.

Breckon says he was warned of tap

MOSCOW (AP) — Former Idaho County sheriff's deputy Travis Breckon testified Thursday that defendant Sheriff Thaddeus Baldwin never warned him a department telephone might be tapped. Breckon took the stand in U.S. District Court in Moscow in Baldwin's trial over two federal wiretapping charges involving a telephone at the sheriff's substation in Kootenai. Defense attorney Klaus Weibe said the wiretap was intended to catch Breckon making long-distance calls and lying up office telephones. He claims Baldwin warned Breckon to stop such calls and told him the phones might be monitored. But Assistant U.S. Attorney Ron Howen contends Baldwin was trying to find out who had complained to federal labor investigators about the department's overtime policy. He also holds Baldwin used the taped conversations to discredit the deputy with labor negotiators and eventually fire him. The jury Wednesday heard the last of Breckon's five conversations taped on Dec. 28, 1987. Breckon spoke once with his wife and three times with a girlfriend, complaining about a reprimand he had been given that day and talking about looking for a job outside the department. While talking to his paramour, department dispatcher Gay Taylor, Breckon mentioned wiretapping.

Refugee flood from East Germany filling pool of blue-collar openings

SCHOEPFINGEN, West Germany (AP) — Young, healthy and hungry for a new start in the West, thousands of newly arrived East German refugees are snapping up blue-collar jobs spurned by West Germans.

"They won't have any trouble integrating themselves here," said Olaf Sand, head of the North Rhine-Westphalia labor office, as he surveyed hundreds of escapees filling out applications or scanning job notices at the refugee reception center here.

"They are young, eager and in many cases well-trained," Sand said. "They were the future of East Germany."

More than 65,000 East Germans have fled to West Germany this year, emigrating legally in record numbers and escaping through Hungary's recently relaxed borders at a rate unequaled since 1961, when the Berlin Wall stanchoned the last rush to the West.

West Germany's main reception center in Giessen became so crowded last week that officials opened a new post outside this village near Muenster to handle the overflow.

The Schoepfingen center opened less than a week ago, but word of the willing workforce has spread fast.

Hand-lettered signs offering manual-labor jobs are posted by the dozens on the chain-link fences surrounding the barracks that on Thursday housed 900 East Germans, nearly all of whom had escaped illegally through Hungary.

The more aggressive employers cruise by the camp in luxury cars to offer a ride as well as a workplace. One woman in a Mercedes with Cologne license plates said she was searching for a live-in maid.

In Building No. 7 of the crowded but orderly encampment is a makeshift branch of the state employment office. Near rows of job notices offer immediate work for plumbers, cooks, roofers, painters and other tradesmen.

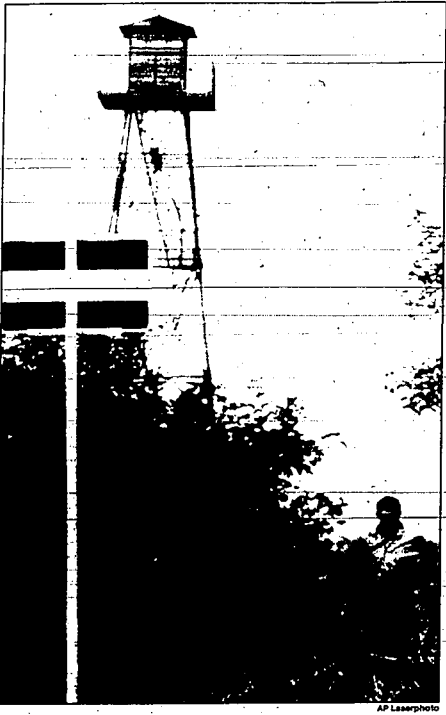

"It makes no difference to me where I go to work," said Burkhard Schmidt, a printer from Dresden based here two days ago after a harrowing escape with his family that twice landed him in Hungarian jails. "I just want to get a place to live and get my family settled."

Wolfgang Handschuch of the regional employment office in nearby Coesfeld said nearly 200 jobs had been called in to the camp during each of the past few days.

The eager offerings from employers who have long sought manual laborers, as well as the urgency felt by escapees who want to get started in new jobs, has resulted in a chaotic match-making system.

Handschuch said the handful of government labor advisers at the camp can do little to verify either the prospective employer's qualifications or the employee's working conditions.

"There are some people who come with high expectations of the Golden West, where everyone immediately has a job, a car and a beautiful home," Handschuch said. "But I would say most are realistic about their chances."

Ingrid Meyer, a 44-year-old Magdeburg resident who ran a restaurant until she applied to emigrate four years ago, said she was confident she and her husband would be settled soon.

"There are so many jobs for food service people here. We hadn't expected such a wealth of choice," she said.

East Germans are more easily assimilated in West Germany than their East bloc neighbors because of the common language and relative familiarity with Western lifestyles. West German TV can be seen in most parts of East Germany.

The transition is tougher for ethnic Germans emigrating from the Soviet Union and Poland. Harry Meisel, head of the labor department in Baden-Wuerttemberg state, said his office placed a Soviet chef who couldn't adjust to the restaurant's supplies. Language problems aside, he had seldom worked with more than salt and pepper for seasonings.

Many East German immigrants have insufficient education or experience to go directly into their fields, especially in computer-related work, said Andreas Mausch, spokesman for the federal Labor Ministry in Bonn.

"But in the long term, with some additional training, the outlook is very good," he said. "These people want to stay here and build careers." Mausch said there were more than 255,000 jobs open in blue-collar fields that employers had called in to state employment offices.

"Obviously there are a great many others that we don't even know about," he said. Signs offering waitress or janitorial work can be seen in the windows of shops in virtually every West German city, as even young West-German-resist-jobs that are menial or low-paying.

The nation's 2 million jobless — more than 8 percent — are mostly skilled workers in depressed fields such as steel-making, shipbuilding and coal mining, and the generous social-welfare system discourages them from switching to other trades.

Mausch said East Germans with experience in electrical work, engineering and personal services such as hairdressing were in high demand in West Germany.

Japan's governing party holds crisis meetings on sex scandal

TOKYO (AP) — The governing party held crisis meetings Thursday over a new case of extramarital sex in high places, this one involving a minister of the "clean government" named to rescue the party image from scandal and defeat.

Tokuo Yamashita, the 69-year-old chief Cabinet secretary, apologized to the nation for his affair with a part-time bar hostess nearly 45 years his junior, but said he had not decided whether to resign.

His past makes him the main government spokesman and top Cabinet aide to Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu.

"The task of the Kaifu Cabinet is to promote clean government, and as I must follow that and support the prime minister... I can offer only my deepest apologies to the people of Japan," Yamashita told a televised news conference.

Yamashita was appointed two weeks ago, when Kaifu formed a government after Souseke Uno, his predecessor, stepped down because of an election defeat that cost the Liberal Democrats their majority in the upper house of Parliament.

Uno was in office only two months, hounded by allegations that he had kept paid mistresses.

Noboru Takeshita, the man Uno succeeded, resigned to accept

Passenger train crashes into freight

DARMSTADT, West Germany (AP) — A passenger train rammed into a stationary freight train near a depot outside Darmstadt on Thursday, injuring 19 people, officials said.

The accident occurred about 200 yards from the train station in the town of Ober-Ramstadt, a Darmstadt suburb.

Five of the freight train's 16 cars were jolted off the tracks, and several cars of both trains were damaged, a police statement said. None of the 19 people injured were seriously hurt, police said.

The passenger train had slowed down just before the crash as it approached the Ober-Ramstadt station, police said.

A track-switching error apparently caused the accident, the police statement said.

responsibility for the Recruit Co. influence-buying scandal, which reached the top ranks of government, bureaucracy and business. Uno was chosen because it had not touched him.

The latest scandal was considered likely to erode public support for the Kaifu administration, which has said its priority is restoration of political ethics.

Kaifu told reporters before meeting with party leaders that the question of Yamashita's resignation "should be decided by the politician himself." He refused further comment.

Yamashita said he wished to consult with senior party leaders and the prime minister.

"I have heard many opinions," he told the news conference. "I want to hear more and decide for myself what I want to do. One way or the other, the decision has to come before long."

Japanese society has been tolerant of rich and powerful men having affairs and mistresses, and only recently have such matters been reported.

Prime Minister Mazowiecki favors conciliatory negotiation

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki, a symbol of the astounding change in the Communist world, has emerged as a cautious, conciliatory negotiator who admits he is frightened by the challenge ahead.

"A lot of things terrify me," he said as he paused after his nomination last week to contemplate his momentous mission.

The first non-Communist prime minister to head an East bloc government, Mazowiecki faces awesome responsibility.

He must negotiate the competing demands of factions long at ideological odds while confronting economic disaster and inspiring a populace that has exhausted its faith in government of any stripe.

"At first I felt as if someone had put 100 kilos of stones on my head," Mazowiecki said. "But I calmed down and started looking with a certain optimism. Otherwise, I could not take on this role."

Mazowiecki was proposed as the head of a governing coalition by Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, for whom Mazowiecki has been a close adviser since the founding of the independent union during shipyard strikes in 1980.

The 62-year-old lawyer and journalist, a lifelong anti-Communist with close ties to the Roman Catholic church, was not among the most public Solidarity leaders. Nothing could have prepared him for the hopes now centered on him.

He has responded with remarkable calm. There have been no fiery speeches, no radical announcements. His diplomacy may smooth the delicate transition, or it may disappoint those waiting to be ignited.

Although his demeanor has been mild, those who know him say he can be tough.

Mazowiecki's Solidarity activism earned him a year in prison after the martial law crackdown imposed in 1981 by Wojciech Jaruzelski, the Communist president who nominated him as prime minister Saturday.

To the Polish people, he has offered a mix of hope and realism, asking them to "believe that it can be better in this country" while acknowledging "Society has no concept how difficult it will be to reform this economy."

Graying and dignified, Mazowiecki appears solemn, serious and even cool. But he has shown humor and a human side during the tense week, joking about running out of gas while driving — "not fitting for a premier" — and craving a cigarette away from the cameras.

The widowed father of three sons who has four grandchildren, Mazowiecki was editing Solidarity's weekly newspaper when history turned to him. He had founded the newspaper during the union's first legal months in 1980 and resurrected it when Solidarity was legalized again in April.

Walesa had entrusted him with a major role in the negotiations between the opposition and the Communist authorities that led to restoration of Solidarity's legal status and the freest parliament elections in post-war Poland. He was in charge of the talks on trade union issues.

This spring, Mazowiecki chose to remain in parliament rather than run for the National Assembly.

relations that link our two countries."

The Council of Ministers, or Soviet cabinet, sent Mazowiecki a cable of "friendly congratulations," and added:

"We express the certainty that the traditional relations of friendship and all-round cooperation between the Soviet Union and Poland will continue developing on the basis of sovereign equality and respect, mutual benefit and mutual responsibility."

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl sent "heartfelt best wishes" to Mazowiecki, saying: "I wish God's blessing on the tasks ... lying ahead of you."

He said added his government would "do all in its power to support you on the chosen path."

Kohl hoped for closer relations with Poland, especially since 1989 is the 50th anniversary of Nazi Germany's invasion of Poland and the start of World War II.

"I am convinced that our two countries in this year ... should move closer together ... to smooth the way for a lasting reconciliation between our two peoples," he wrote.

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's message recalled "with much pleasure" her meeting with Mazowiecki in November, when she visited Walesa and his colleagues in Gdansk.

Her office said she reaffirmed "Britain's readiness to help Poland to achieve democracy and economic recovery," but listed what she saw as the three main challenges facing Poland: "The need to form a government that truly reflects the will of the Polish people; to take Poland along the path of democracy; to implement the difficult decisions necessary to restore Poland's economic health."

Swedish Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson welcomed the latest "development in the democratic process in Poland" but indicated that Sweden preferred to help Warsaw with its economic troubles through international rather than bilateral frameworks.

"The new Polish government, it is true, has no easy task," he said. "It faces great and difficult problems, especially in the economic sphere."

His government hoped for "increased and deeper cooperation with the new government in Warsaw, not the least concerning problems that can be solved best through international cooperation."

West hails Mazowiecki's election; Soviets hope for a partnership

LONDON (AP) — The United States and Western Europe hailed the election of Poland's Tadeusz Mazowiecki as the East bloc's first non-Communist prime minister Thursday, while the Soviet Union sent "friendly congratulations."

"We wish him well, of course," President Bush told reporters in Kennebunkport, Maine. "It's a fascinating period in Eastern Europe."

In a written statement later, Bush promised "our strong support as (Mazowiecki) seeks to lead his country toward economic recovery and democratic change."

He hailed President Wojciech Jaruzelski's "political wisdom in endorsing a government reflecting the genuine will of the Polish people and Solidarity, under the leadership of Lech Walesa, for its constructive role in helping bring about a new beginning in Poland." — Bush's statement added.

Danish Prime Minister Poul Schluter, who was visiting Bush, said: "You are seeing right now very positive and exciting international developments."

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Yuri A. Gromitskiikh said: "We shall regard Comrade Mazowiecki as our partner in the Rival militias unite against French forces

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Rival Shiite Moslem militias said Thursday they had united against a French flotilla off Lebanon, and the radical Hezbollah faction said its response will "terrify everybody" if the warships approach.

Hezbollah did not say what it would do, but has threatened suicide attacks on Western targets and is believed to sponsor Shiite gangs that hold most of the 16 Western hostages in Lebanon.

Police said one person was killed and three were wounded in shelling along the sea that divided the capital into Moslem west Beirut and the Christian eastern sector.

A senior Soviet official drove from Damascus, Syria, for talks with Moslem and Christian on deadlocked efforts to end the fighting and ease tension over the French naval buildup in the eastern Mediterranean.

Lebanese military sources said some French vessels were cruising 40 miles off Lebanon, "distant from commercial shipping lanes."

The aircraft carrier Foch, with 2,000 marines aboard, leads the task force. The French say it is on "humanitarian mission," to evacuate the 7,000 French citizens in Lebanon if necessary.

Syria and its allies claim France, which governed Lebanon from the end of World War I until 1943, is allying itself with the Christians.

Atlanta Braves trade Acker, Assenmacher

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves traded relief pitchers Jim Acker to Toronto for reliever Tony Castillo, and Paul Assenmacher to the Chicago Cubs Thursday.
The Braves will get another player to be named later from the Blue Jays, and two players to be named later from the Cubs.
Atlanta called up reliever Mike Stanton and third baseman Ed Whited from their Richmond farm club to replace Acker and Assenmacher on the roster.
The Cubs said that pitcher Joe Kratmer, brought up this week, was being returned to their Iowa farm club to make room for Assenmacher.
Acker, second in the National League with 59 appearances this year, was 0-6 with two saves and a 2.67 earned-run average with Atlanta. Acker originally was drafted by Atlanta in 1980 before being drafted by Toronto and signing with the Jays in 1982. He then was traded to Atlanta in 1986.
The right-hander saved 10 games and won seven with Toronto in 1986.
Castillo, a left-hander, began the season with Toronto, was demoted in May and was recalled this month. He has a 1-1 record with Toronto, with one save and a 6.11 ERA.
Assenmacher, a left-hander, was 1-3 with a 3.59 ERA in 49 appearances with Atlanta this season. He tied a major league record Tuesday night, striking out four batters in one inning — thanks to a wild pitch which allowed one strikeout victim to reach first.

O'Leary 9th-grade football players to get equipment

TWIN FALLS — O'Leary Junior High School ninth-grade football players will check out equipment today.
The gear will be issued at 3:30 p.m. at the school.

BURLEY — On the first day Karen Parsons "played with the big girls," she surprised herself and beat them.
Parsons, admitting "I was scared to death all day," moved away from a tie with former champion Karen Darrington, Boise, on the 18th hole and went on to claim the Ore-Idaho Women's Invitational by two strokes Thursday.
The Burley native ended the two-day tournament with a 160 total, having identical 80s. That gave her a two-shot advantage on Darrington, who could trace her

Boise State to host Crenshaw takes lead 2 playoffs in a row in golf's World Series

The Associated Press
BOISE — Boise State University will host the Big Sky Conference basketball championship tournament for the second straight year in 1990, league Commissioner Ron Stephenson has announced.
The March 8-10 tournament was agreed upon in a "straw vote" by the Big Sky athletic directors at their July 25 meeting in Sun Valley, and later by the nine schools' presidents. Boise State guarantees net receipts of $225,000 to be distributed evenly between the colleges and the Big Sky, Stephenson said.
"It's certainly been a mixed bag," he said of the selection process, although he declined to disclose the voting of the schools. "It certainly was not unanimous."
Meanwhile, the conference has entered into a 2-year agreement with the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network, or ESPN, to air the Big Sky championships next year and in 1991. The network has televised the second half of the Big Sky tournament since 1986.
The tournament to determine the automatic berth in the NCAA championships will consist of the top six teams out of the nine in the league. This year's format has the No. 6 and No. 3 seeded teams playing the first night on Thursday March 8, along with the No. 5 school taking on No. 4.

Boise State to host King, Jones ahead at women's tourney

The Associated Press
BUFORD, Ga. — Betsy King, the leading player on the LPGA Tour this year, birdied the final hole with a 26-foot putt for a 6-under-par 66 Thursday and a share of the first-round lead with defending champion Rosie Jones in the World Championship of Women's Golf.
King, winner of five events this season, and Jones, winless in 1989, were the first two to complete play in this select international field of 16 golfers chasing a first prize of $83,500 from the $265,000 purse.
"I think I've learned to score, even when I'm not hitting the ball well," King said. "I didn't know what I'd shoot. I thought it might be 75."
King, who already has won a single-season record $525,967, complained of playing poorly coming into this event, finishing 10th and 13th in her last two starts.
Jones, mired in a season-long slump, said her game began to show some improvement in the last month, getting top ten finishes in her last two starts.
"You don't play terrible for 20 tournaments and then win," Jones said. "I was glad to see a progression the last few weeks."
Neither King nor Jones had a bogey in the hot, humid trip around the hilly, 6,107-yard, par-72 PineIsle Resort course that hugs Lake Lanier.

NEW YORK — The odds finally caught up with Pete Rose.

After six months of denial, defiance and delay, Rose was kicked out of baseball Thursday and may never be back.

Rose, who symbolized the sport for a generation, was banned for betting on his own team. Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti imposed the penalty, ending baseball's biggest gambling scandal since the 1919 Black Sox.

"The matter of Mr. Rose is now closed," Giamatti said. "Let it be clear that no individual is superior to the game."

On the field, Rose won more than anyone else. And he beat Giamatti in a hometown court, too. But when baseball appealed and got the case moved out of Cincinnati, Rose was in trouble.

"I was confident we would win," Giamatti said. Baseball commissioners have always won in federal court.

So Rose settled. He signed a five-page agreement with Giamatti in which he agreed to a lifetime penalty but did not admit gambling on baseball.

"There is no deal for reinstatement," Giamatti said emphatically at a news conference in New York. "He has been fired by me."

Rose says he will return — maybe next season. But none of the 14 others who got permanent bans ever did.

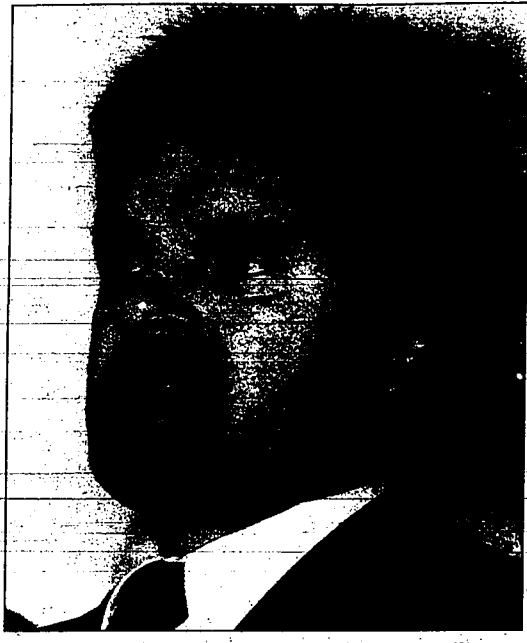

Rose can apply for reinstatement after one year under the game's rules. Even if he's turned down, the game's most prolific hitter will still be eligible for election to the Hall of Fame in 1992.

"I did my part. It's up to you people who do the voting," Rose said. "I got all the hits and scored all the runs and won all the games."

But for now, Rose may not appear at old-timers' games, cannot wear a major league uniform or work in any capacity for a big league club. He can't even step on a field.

"My life is baseball. I hope to get back into baseball as soon as I possibly can," Rose said in Cincinnati, where he was born and where he

Of the 14 banned from baseball, none reinstated

By JIM DONAGHY
The Associated Press

Of the 14 persons banned from baseball before Pete Rose, none has been reinstated.

In 1919, eight members of the Chicago White Sox were banned for conspiring to fix the World Series against Cincinnati, giving rise to the "Black Sox Scandal."

Joe Jackson, Buck Weaver, Ed Cicotte, Fred McMullen, Hupp Felach, Lefty Williams, Chick Gandil, and Swede Risberg were never returned to baseball's good graces.

If not reinstated, Rose would be the first person permanently barred from baseball since 1943, when Philadelphia Phillies president William D. Cox was banished, like Rose, for betting on his own team.

Section 21(d) of the Major League Rules specifies the penalties for gambling on baseball. It reads, in part: "Any player, umpire, or club or league official or employee who shall bet—any sum—whatsoever upon any baseball game in connection with the better has a duty to perform, shall be declared permanently ineligible."

On March 24, 1921, Philadelphia Phillies infielder Gene Paulette was banned indefinitely by Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis for alleged betting on a loan from Elmer Farrar of St. Louis that was tied to gambling scheme. Paulette never was reinstated.

Others banned from baseball for life were New York Giants pitcher "Shufflin'" Phil Douglas, outfielders Benny Kauff and Jimmy O'Connell and coach Cozy Dolan.

Kauff was banned following his indictment on charges of auto theft and possession of a stolen car. A lawsuit filed by Kauff against the commissioner for reinstatement was dismissed.

Douglas wrote a letter to St. Louis outfielder Leslie Mann asking him to throw a game. Mann gave the letter to Branch Rickey, who sent it to Landis. The commissioner backed the ban, saying Douglas' letter was "tragic and deplorable."

O'Connell and Dolan offered a $500 bribe to Philadelphia Phillies shortstop Heinie Sand to throw a game on Sept. 27, 1924. Sand told Phillies manager Art Fletcher, who told Landis.

Baseball has never been shy about moving against stars who might hurt the game's image. In 1979, then-commissioner Bowie Kuhn suspended Willie Mays after he was hired in a public relations role by an Atlantic City casino. Four years later, when another casino hired Mickey Mantle in a similar capacity, Kuhn barred him, too.

However, unlike Rose, Mantle and Mays were never placed on the ineligible list.

"The main job of the commissioner is to uphold the integrity of the game," Kuhn said.

BURLEY — On the first day Karen Parsons "played with the big girls," she surprised herself and beat them.

Parsons, admitting "I was scared to death all day," moved away from a tie with former champion Karen Darrington, Boise, on the 18th hole and went on to claim the Ore-Idaho Women's Invitational by two strokes Thursday.

The Burley native ended the two-day tournament with a 160 total, having identical 80s. That gave her a two-shot advantage on Darrington, who could trace her weeps to a couple of three-putts and sandtraps on the closing nine.

Meanwhile, Janet Cummins, Twin Falls, playing in the fifth final, won the overall tournament net title with a 135.

Actually, Parsons started her comeback just when it appeared Darrington might be taking control. First-day leader Corinne Markle of Eagle had five out-bounds penalty strokes on the front nine to fall behind although she entered the second day with a three-stroke edge on Darrington and two on Parsons.

Meanwhile, Darrington and Parsons finished the front nine tied and Darrington took the lead on the long 10th when Parsons' approach shot skidded well past the cup and she had to come up with a sharp two-putt to hold to within a stroke as Darrington had a tap-in four.

Parsons saw a little putt lip out on the 11th while Darrington got it up and down from the fringe and that opened a two-stroke lead.

But the first three-putt hit Darrington on the par three 12th hole and allowed Parsons to cut to within a stroke again. On the 12th, Darrington trapped her second shot and had to settle for a bogey five while Parsons had a four.

The two grappled evenly over the next three holes another trap cost Darrington another bogey but she stayed within the cup and Parsons watched an eight-foot birdie putt stay out. Darrington's second three-putt from long range on the 17th moved Parsons out of reach.

"I was scared to death the whole day," said Parsons with a nervous smile. "I haven't played with the big girls over."

With a chuckle she noted "last year I had to play with people in the second flight the second day I played so badly the first round," referring to the method of evening up foursomes for pairings. "And I had a seven handicap."

Better conditions greeted the 170-women.

Houston falls to Pittsburgh, 3-2

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Gary Redus doubled and scored on Jose Lind's sacrifice fly in the 14th inning and four Pittsburgh pitchers combined on a three-hitter as the Pirates beat the skidding Houston Astros 3-2 Thursday night.

Houston scored only four runs in 32 innings against the Pirates while being swept in their three-game series. The last dropped the Astros four games behind National League West leading San Francisco, which was idle.

Redus doubled to center to start the 14th against Juan Agosto, 3-5, the Astros' fourth pitcher. Redus, who had three hits, went to third on Mike LaValliere's sacrifice and scored when Lind — who hadn't gotten a ball out of the infield in five previous at bats — lofted a fly to ball to medium left field. Kevin Bass' throw was on target.

Doug Bair, 2-2, the Pirates' fourth pitcher, pitched two scoreless innings for the win.

Pirates starter Doug Drabek allowed two hits and two runs in nine innings before Neal Heaton pitched a scoreless 10th and Bill Landrum went two scoreless innings.

The extra-inning game with the 19th of the year for the Pirates, most in the majors. They're 8-11. Houston is now 10-8 in extra innings.

Houston advanced only one runner as far as third base in the final eight innings. Bass singled with one out in the ninth and moved to third on Drabek's throwing error, but was stranded when Glenn Wilson flied out.

The Astros didn't manage a hit off Drabek until Craig Biggio singled over the glove of third baseman Bob Bonilla to start the sixth. Biggio moved to second when first baseman Redus mishandled Drabek's pickoff throw. Bill Doran bunted Biggio to center, and Bass hit a sacrifice fly to third.

The Pirates tied the game at 2-2 against Mark Portugal in their half of the sixth on one-out singles by Barry Bonds and Rodas and Jurgen grounded.

Houston scored in the second without a hit. Terry Puhl walked, stole second and scored on Bonilla's two-base throwing error, his 29th of the season but his first in 18 games.

St. Louis 4 Atlanta 1

ATLANTA (AP) — Joe Magrane pitched a three-hitter for his sixth straight victory and Pedro Guerrero drove in three runs to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a 4-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves on Thursday.

Magrane, 17-7, tied Mike Scott of the Houston Astros and Dave Stewart of Oakland for the major league lead in victories. Magrane, the first St. Louis pitcher to win 17 games since John Tudor and Joaquin Andujar each won 21 in 1985, struck out six and walked none in pitching his eighth complete game. He has won 14 of his last 16 decisions.

The victory moved the fourth-place Cardinals within 2½ games of the division-leading Chicago Cubs in the NL East.

Jays now within 1 1/2 of Orioles

TORONTO (AP) — Mookie Wilson doesn't consider himself a catalyst, although one would be hard-pressed to think otherwise following his latest performance.

Wilson hit three singles, drove in two runs, stole two bases and scored twice as the Toronto Blue Jays crushed the Detroit Tigers 11-3 Thursday night to sweep a three-game series and move within 1½ games of Baltimore in the American League East.

"I've never considered myself a catalyst," Wilson said. "I just go out and try to play my game. If it happens to rub off on the other guys, that's great. But I never consider myself to do that and try to lead by example."

After the Tigers took a 1-0 lead in the top of the second on Chet Lemon's double and Mike Heath's triple, Wilson went to work.

Junior Felix tripped to open the American League

Blue Jays third and Wilson hit a one-out sacrifice fly, tying the score.

George Bell followed with his 14th home run, giving the Blue Jays a 2-1 lead.

"I think I'm starting to feel at home here," said Wilson, who was acquired July 31 from the New York Mets. "That may sound strange to some people, but playing in a dome takes getting used to."

New York Yankees 5 Baltimore 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Mattingly drove in two runs, including the tiebreaker in the eighth inning, and the New York Yankees beat Baltimore 5-1 Thursday in the opener of two-night doubleheader, ending the Orioles' four-game winning streak.

Baltimore 9 New York Yankees 2

NEW YORK (AP) — Larry Sheets hit a two-run homer and Tim Lincecum had a two-run single, helping the Baltimore Orioles to a 9-2 victory over New York and a split of Thursday's two-night doubleheader.

Sheets hit his seventh homer, and first since June 23th, following Joe Orsulak's leadoff double in the second inning off Eric Plunk, 3-3, who yielded four runs and five hits in five innings in his first start of the season.

Winner Dave Schmidt, 10-12, who came into the game with a 5.34 ERA, held the Yankees to one run and three hits in five innings.

The split reduced the Orioles' lead over Toronto in the American League East to 1½ games.

Redskins look to atone for loss

By The Associated Press

Will the real Washington Redskins please stand up?

Are they the team that won its first two exhibition games by a total of 32 points? Or are they the bunch that was outraged 509-216 by Minnesota in a nationally televised 24-13 waffling Monday night?

The answer may come Friday night, when the Redskins meet Miami in their next-to-last preseason contest.

Though it's unusual for teams to play twice in five days, starting quarterback Mark Rypien is glad to have a quick chance to atone for his team's showing in the Viking game.

"It's good that we're playing so soon so we can get rid of the misery of last week quickly," Rypien said. "Hopefully we can bounce back and get some things going offensively."

While the Redskins are looking to rebound, the Dolphins are just looking for a win, period. Miami lost to Houston last week after opening the exhibition season with a 28-20 loss to Chicago.

"We have to search for some of the good things that happened in those (losses) and then keep working on all of the other things," Dolphins coach Don Shula.

One thing that needs work is the rushing attack, which has gained only 98 yards in the two losses.

"A lot of our problems so far this year have been from a lack of blocking, mistakes on our offensive line," Shula said. "A couple of glaring errors, a couple of holding penalties, missed assignments."

Rodney Peete will get his chance to run the Lions' "Silver Stretch" offense against Seattle.

Lions coach Wayne Fontes is still looking for his first win of the exhibition season and hopes Peete, a Heisman Trophy candidate from Southern Cal and sixth-round draft pick, has the answer. If he does, he may also have the starting job.

broke Ty Cobb's all-time hits record of 4,191 in 1985. "I've been in baseball three decades and to think I'm gonna be out of baseball for a very short period of time hurts."

"What do I say to the fans? The only thing I can really say to the fans is to obviously thank them for their support for 28 or 29 years," he said.

Many still adore him as an American.

"I didn't think it was right," said Blackie Trues, standing along Pete Rose Way near Riverfront Stadium. "After all he's done or baseball? How many fans has Giannitti drawn into the stands?"

The Reds named coach Tommy Helms as interim manager and said they would begin a search for Rose's permanent successor. In his last game, Rose guided the Reds past Chicago 6-5 in 10 innings on Monday.

Rose's contract runs through Oct. 30, 1990, and calls for him to get an additional $604,166.67. The Reds, however, are not obligated to pay a player on the ineligible list and general manager Murray Cook indicated that Rose will get no more money.

"One of the game's greatest players has engaged in a variety of acts which have stained the game and he must now live with the consequences of those acts," Giannitti said.

Rose and Giannitti signed the agreement on Wednesday, saying the punishment was "fair" and stopping two months of legal wrangling.

Rose's lawyers first approached baseball in April and expressed a desire to talk to deputy commissioner Francis T. Vincent said. The two sides met again in late July and made a tentative settlement last Friday.

THUMBS DOWN

Improper fan-belt tension can lead to an overloaded engine. A battery that will not charge properly. For these reasons (and others), it is a good idea to check belt tension with the thumb. This leaves little room for error when gauging belt tension. For this reason, the technician uses an automatic belt tensioner to get an accurate reading. The car owner can no longer rely on a rule of thumb.

The best way to make sure your car functions at its optimum level is to follow a regular maintenance schedule. Our service department at RANDY HANSEN CHEVROLET will be happy to help you set one up. Our technicians have the best diagnostic equipment available anywhere. If you are in the market for a new car, be sure to see our terrific selection at RANDY HANSEN CHEVROLET, 733-3033. Pain reliever monkeys to lose interest in cocaine

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Laboratory monkeys who habitually dose themselves with cocaine lost interest in the drug after shots of buprenorphine, a pain reliever that may be used to help wean humans from cocaine and heroin, researchers say.

Dr. Jack H. Mendelson, a physician at a Belmont, Mass., drug abuse center associated with Harvard Medical School, said that in experiments with five Rhesus monkeys the animals chose to stop their self-administration of cocaine after they were given injections of buprenorphine.

A report on the research is to be published today in the journal Science.

Mendelson said as a result of the animals' response to buprenorphine, clinical studies are now proposed to determine if the analgesic will help people overcome dependence on cocaine and heroin.

"We felt that it (buprenorphine) may provide an opportunity for some persons to stop using cocaine and not feel the adverse effects of cessation," Mendelson said Wednesday in a telephone interview. "This would provide a window in time for someone who might be able to stop using the drug and ultimately become drug free."

In the laboratory studies, five Rhesus monkeys were fitted with intravenous catheters connected to pumps operated by levers. Each monkey, if it chose to, could press the lever and receive a small dose of cocaine.

"The monkeys self-administered cocaine, but are under no compulsion to do so," said Mendelson. "It is completely elective activity."

When given this choice, he said, 90 percent of the monkeys will press the lever for cocaine, though they will chose not to self-administer some other types of pharmaceuticals.

Mendelson said that when the monkeys received injections of buprenorphine, their cocaine use rapidly declined, and approached zero use at some doses of the buprenorphine.

When a saline solution, a placebo, was injected, the monkeys chose to press the cocaine lever repeatedly.

"The placebo didn't do anything," said Mendelson. "But the buprenorphine suppressed the cocaine self-administration."

At the same time, he said, the monkeys continued to press another lever to receive banana pellets, and otherwise behaved normally while taking the buprenorphine.

"It doesn't produce the behavior changes and its safety is enormous," the researcher said of the pain reliever.

Internment sparks California debate

Los Angeles Times

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Igniting acrimonious debate, Republican Assemblyman Gil Ferguson of Newport Beach on Thursday attacked a resolution calling for California school children to be taught that the Japanese internment during World War II was a violation of human rights, not an act of military necessity.

Ferguson, a retired Marine lieutenant colonel and veteran of three wars, touched an angry nerve among his colleagues when he stood during a full Assembly session and shouted his objections to a resolution that blamed the internment on "race prejudice, war hysteria and a failure of political leadership."

"I don't mind you saying that it was a failure of political leadership for Franklin Roosevelt," he said in a slap at the Democrats, "but what you're saying is that the brave men and women of this country — youth fathers and mothers and your grandfathers — were a bunch of racists. And that's why they did this."

"Of course they made a bad decision," Ferguson said. "It was a terrible thing to do. But 50 years (later) sitting in this chamber, with the biggest risk in your lives is getting reelected or safe sex, what right do you have to question the motives of your fathers and mothers and your grandfathers and uncles?"

Ferguson is perhaps best known for his attempts to have Democratic Assemblyman Tom Hayden of Santa Monica, a former anti-Viet Nam war demonstrator, declared a traitor and ousted from the Assembly.

Ferguson's diatribe touched off an unusually emotional verbal skirmish, during which fellow lawmakers ganged up on the Orange County conservative and accused him of trying to white-wash history.

The strongest condemnation came from Democratic Assemblyman Phillip Isenberg of Sacramento, whose wife was placed in a Japanese internment camp when she was 4 years old.

"I hesitate to say that your opinion is contemptible, and I will not," Isenberg said in a tight voice. "I will say this: It is deeply offensive to every single piece of what this country is about and you should be ashamed."

The fight was over a non-binding resolution that calls on school officials and textbook manufacturers to revise accounts of the internment and describe it as a mass violation of human rights. Such an "accurate and objective" account of how the government "imprisoned 110,000 Japanese would omit the traditional excuse of national security, the resolution says.

The Assembly gave final approval to the resolution by a bare 41-10 vote in the 80-member body, with many Democrats voting for it and many Republicans abstaining.

Before the vote, Ferguson asked for a one-week postponement so he could rally veterans groups against the resolution.

Claiming he was "sick of this liberal trashing of America," Ferguson fumed at what he said was the ungrateful second-guessing of his younger peers.

"Perhaps all of the 17- and 18-year-old kids who joined and fought for you, that was the dumbest decision we ever made, maybe," said Ferguson, a veteran of World War II, Korea and Vietnam. "Maybe by now you'd all be speaking Japanese or maybe you'd all be speaking German by now."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"Get your facts first, and then you can distort them as much as you please."

— Mark Twain.

Which suit should South develop first? An intelligent answer is not possible unless South first examines some facts.

South refuses the first spade, and dummy's ace wins the continuation. Should he first knock out the heart ace, or should he take the first of two finesses in clubs?

For a logical answer one must consider several factors. Assuming West has a five-card suit (if only four, priorities are immaterial), South will not succeed if West has two or three of the key cards (heart ace and K-Q of clubs). If West does, the defenders will win three spades and two other tricks.

Therefore, South must play West for only one of these cards. The probability that West holds the heart ace is 50 percent, but the odds are 2 to 1 in favor of his holding one of two club honors. So it's that entry that must be attacked.

At trick three, South passes a club to West's queen, and South's last spade is discarded. South then attacks in hearts to knock out East's ace, and a repeated club finesse lands a well-deserved overtrick.

Briefly

Custer Museum hosts Old Time Fiddlers

CUSTER — The Old Time Fiddlers will play Sept. 2 at the Custer Museum, 12 miles from Sunbeam up the Yankee Fork of the Salmon River. Sunbeam is about 15 miles east of Stanley on Route 75.

Visitors are invited to bring musical instruments, dancing shoes, grandma and the kids. Admission will be by donations, with proceeds benefiting the Custer Museum. The event is sponsored by Friends of Custer Museum.

ISU Astronomy Club holds star-gazing party Saturday

POCATELLO — In conjunction with Voyager 2's encounter with Neptune, the Astronomy Club at Idaho State University will hold a star-gazing party at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at Crystal Summit near Scout Mountain south of Pocatello.

Participants will view Neptune and constellations. Astronomy Club members will help explain the planets and stars seen. All are welcome. For more information, call 233-2638.

Civic Symphony presents Pops in the Park at ISU

POCATELLO — Art and music will combine when the Idaho State Civic Symphony presents Pops in the Park Sept. 9 on the ISU campus.

Artists are invited to show works at the festival starting at 10 a.m. on the Quad, center campus. Entrance fee is $20; exhibitors must provide tables. Call 236-3479 for an application.

The festival will also feature free live entertainment beginning at 10:30 a.m. The day will conclude with the Pops in the Park concert at 7 p.m. on Davis Field. Cost for the evening concert is $6 for adults, $4 for students and children and $20 per family.

Boise Philharmonic offers free 'Sun Valley Pops' show

SUN VALLEY — The Boise Philharmonic will conduct a free "Sun Valley Pops" concert on the Sun Valley Lodge Terrace Aug. 27 at 4:30 p.m. This special performance is sponsored by First Interstate Bank and Sun Valley Co.

The Boise Philharmonic is comprised of 78 professional musicians. Their program of 12 selections can be enjoyed by the entire family and includes "The Great American Bicycle Race," variations on "The Saints," MGM's "That's Entertainment," "Under the Double Eagle March," and "Stars and Stripes."

Dick Tracy hits conventions

HOLLYWOOD — Like Batman before him, Dick Tracy is hitting the comics conventions — via a slide show produced by Walt Disney Pictures to generate interest in next summer's "Dick Tracy."

Warren Beatty directs and stars in the project, which filmed under such hush-hush conditions that, to date, no one's seen what Beatty looks like as the tough copper.

Arts groups schedule local fall events

By JULIE FANSELOW SWETYE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Just as summer's end marks the start of a new school year, so it brings the beginning of a new season in the arts community.

Although many of the coming season's shows and performances are still months away, some series organizers have completed schedules and — in many cases — are offering tickets for the events.

The following is a list of Magic Valley fine and performing arts groups and what they have on tap for the upcoming 1989-1990 season:

ARTS ON TOUR

The Arts on Tour series will begin its second season Oct. 30 with Chenticleer, a male a cappella vocal ensemble performing works from the 15th century through modern times.

Other performances on tap include a production of Dyan Thomas' "A Child's Christmas in Wales." Dec. 16, the Ririe-Woodbury dancers Jan. 19, Montana Repertory offering "Stories from the Big Sky" Feb. 28, the Brigham Young International Dancers March 31 and Spokane Falls Brass Band May 24.

The series also includes Music Fest '90 on June 30 and the Annual Summer Dance Workshop Aug. 4. All regular season performances are at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Auditorium at the College of Southern Idaho. The Ririe-Woodbury company will also serve a residency in the area schools.

CSI, in conjunction with the Magic Valley Arts Council and KMVT, has begun the Arts on Tour season-ticket campaign. The general price for seats to all events is $38, and a season ticket for senior citizens and students is $30. Ticket prices for the six individual performances are $7.50 ($5 for seniors and students) for all but "A Child's Christmas," which will be $8, or $6.60 for seniors and students.

For tickets or more information, contact CSI, or send your orders to Arts on Tour, P.O. Box 1238, Twin Falls, ID 83303-1238.

MAGIC VALLEY SYMPHONY

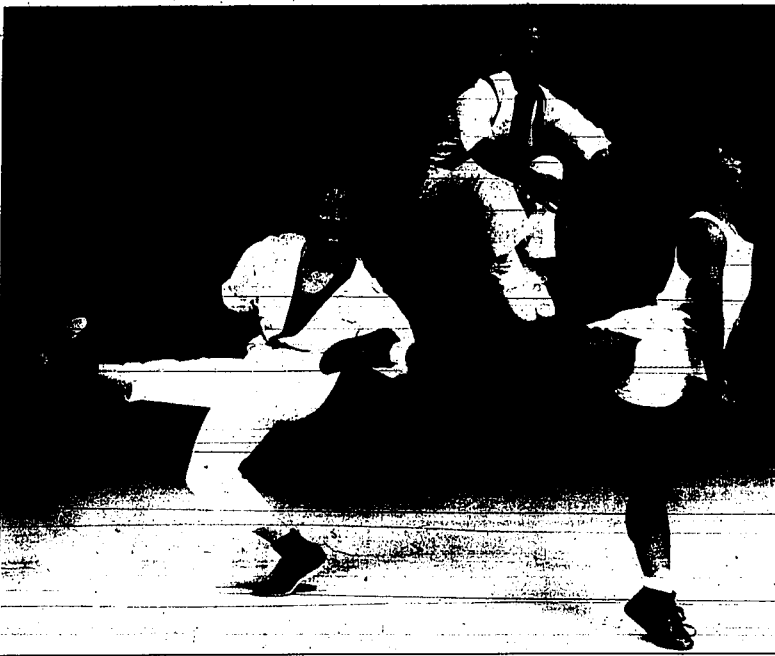

The Magic Valley Symphony will kick off its season Nov. 11 with Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, Copland's "Lincoln Portrait" and works by Idaho composers. Ted Hadley will conduct.

The Feb. 27 program will feature conductor Balhuasar Bushdian. On May 4, the season will conclude with an all-Gershwin pops concert featuring conductor Bruce Whitehead and local artists. The concerts take place at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Auditorium at CSI.

Season ticket sales begin Sept. 8. Patrons receive two season passes for $25. Tickets will be available at all Magic Valley Arts Council ticket outlets including Warner Music and Ann's Hallmark in the Blue Lakes Mall, The Music Center at 221 Main Ave. E., the CSI Bookstore and Andrew's Hallmark at Magic Valley Mall.

The all-volunteer symphony will have its first rehearsal Sept. 12 at 7:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Auditorium. The ensemble is seeking string players for the coming season; violinists, violas, cellists and bass players should call Ernie Moss at 734-3846 for details.

Top rockers of the '60s cope with mid-life crises

By ROBERT HILBURN
Los Angeles Times

Paul McCartney doesn't appear to have gone through a mid-life crisis in rock. Even in the Beatles days, he wrote songs — from "Eleanor Rigby" and "Penny Lane" to "Yesterday" — that seemed to speak as easily to adults as to teens.

His post-Beatles work, too, often seemed to reflect the gentler and more intimate concerns of a family man than the sexy aggression of the Stones or the social commentary of the Who. But key members of the Stones and the Who did go through a mid-career crisis. Keith Richards, in fact, believes the issue of "age" led to the temporary break-up of the Stones after the group's 1986 album, "Dirty Work."

"My feeling is that Mick (Jagger, who recorded two solo albums and did a few live shows with other musicians) thought the Stones were becoming old-fashioned and he wanted to go out on his own and show he could compete with whoever was in the Top 10 today," Richards said late last year during an interview in Los Angeles.

"So, what does he end up doing? He just does four songs or whatever from his two solo albums, and spends the rest of the time doing Stones songs with this (substitute) Stones band with some chicks dancing around.

"To me, that's a step backward. That's old-fashioned. The thing I said to him at the time was, 'You're Mick Jagger. You are diminishing yourself by doing that.' ... I felt he had let the band down and himself. It was like 25 years of integrity going down the drain."

And, sure enough, Jagger, who once said he didn't want still to be singing "Satisfaction" at 30, ended up last year on his solo tour singing that 1965 hit at age 44.

Still, he seemed like a man who had been liberated — from what may have been his own insecurities about his role in contemporary rock and, quite possibly, what he may have come to view as his Stones shackles.

For Richards, there is plenty of life in the Stones as long as they keep coming up with new music, not just playing the old hits. "Rock 'n' roll is still only about 32 years old and it is still getting over its (preoccupation) with teen-age themes. The Stones are in a good position to help it grow up."

Like Richards, the Who's John Entwistle also claims never to have worried about being too old to rock.

"We weren't, after the screaming girls, like the Beatles and the Stones," Entwistle said. "We wanted to be famous for our music, not our clothes or our faces. So, we didn't present ourselves as teenage heartthrobs."

"Our audience always kept expanding, too. Every time we went on tour, there would be a new, young audience waiting, so there never seemed to be a gap or a rejection. The only time I think about how old I am is when I look in the papers in England because they always seem to mention your age and how much your house costs every time they mention your name."

For Pete Townshend, the architect of the Who sound's, however, the mid-life rock crisis was nearly fatal.

Herrett features 4 art shows showcasing 16 Idaho artists

By JULIE FANSELOW SWETYE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Anyone seeking the state of art in Idaho as the state approaches its centennial can begin and possibly end — at the Herrett Museum Gallery of Art.

Four shows on the Herrett's 1989-1990 calendar will feature works by 16 prominent Idaho artists. "Centennial Edition I," the first, includes works by John Herrett of Burley, Roy Mason of Wendell, Michael J. Miller of Boise and Lyn Skallard of Ketchikan.

The "Centennial Edition I" exhibit begins Tuesday and will continue through Oct. 5. A reception for the artists is slated from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday at the gallery. The public is welcome to attend.

In selecting artists for the shows, a committee made up of people from the College of Southern Idaho art department and the Herrett staff started with some very long lists, according to Mike Green, an associate art professor at CSI and curator of the Herrett's art exhibits.

They sought to get a good cross-section of "the dunes or veterans of Idaho art, the mid-career people and the young Turks," Green says. The committee looked for men and women from all areas of the state, and for artists working in a wide variety of mediums.

They also endeavored to put an emphasis not on academic artists — although some of those who will exhibit are teachers — but on those whose art is their primary means.

The bottom line, however, was quality. "That was most important," Green says. The shows include several artists who have not previously been available for Herrett exhibitions but who were eager to be involved this time because of the centennial theme and the company they'd keep, Green says.

The first show centers on painters whose works focus on what Green calls representation. Some viewers may label the works realism, but Green says realism's meaning has been obscured over the years.

Before the advent of photography, realistic painters used to record events, Green notes. After the camera's invention, painters — finding themselves in competition with photographers — started to shift their focus to taking subject matter and making it their own, often being less preoccupied with precise images.

The paintings in the exhibit all reflect Idaho scenery, but the approaches taken and results achieved by the four artists are vastly different.

Miller's work is the most realistic, to the point his paintings could serve as historical documentation of Boise. But he says the artwork is more personal than that. "It's me orienting myself to my environment, analyzing my relationship to my

NEC hopes sharper graphics will dazzle Nintendo fanatics

By ROBERT DVORCHAK The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Look out, Nintendo.

The newest player in home video games is out to zap and blast your Super Mario Brothers with special effects so dazzling that its electronic athletes dance home-run shuffles and its space battles display arcade-quality flash.

"Dad, I got to get this system. This is the greatest game ever seen. We'll win the Nintendo," said Joey Silverman, 9, after a trial run on the TurboGrafx-16 system made by NEC Home Electronics (U.S.A.) Inc.

Ditching Nintendo—some like herey—it is the hottest-selling toy in America and Super Mario Brothers, named for its mustachioed heroes, the most popular game.

Yet the 20 people who played the systems in a week-long, side-by-side trial by The Associated Press unanimously praised NEC's sharper graphics, blazing color and better sound.

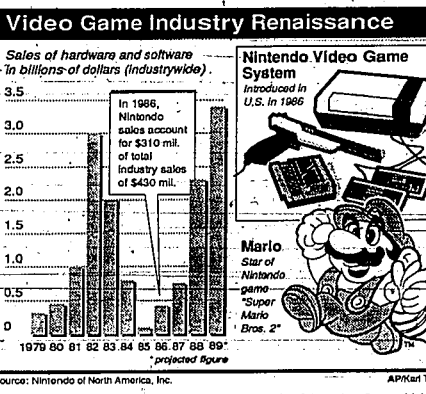

NEC's system, due in stores in November, has twice the computing power and at least twice the price tag. The basic unit lists at $199, with compact disc optics for an extra $399. Game cartridges the size of a credit card will set for $45, and about 20 games will be available.

A Nintendo unit costs about $80. Its 120 games sell for $25 to $40 each.

But even a telecomunications giant like NEC is going to need more than heavy-weight wizardry to challenge Nintendo, which monopolizes 90 percent of the video game market.

Like Nintendo, the NEC system is a game kids; and some adults, can't stop playing. In a space battle, white-knuckled players race to see who can get the farthest and blast the most aliens—in pinball, getting the high score earned bragging rights.

Some Herman, 9, was particularly awestruck by one NEC game in which a karate-chopping warrior battles bullies. The hero's eyes blink, his side bruises and his Nintendo of America Inc. sold $1.7 billion worth of games last year and sales should reach $2.6 billion this year. Since it introduced its boxy, gray 1985 Nintendo, has sold 19 million in the United States and expects to have 19 million sold by year's end.

More than 50 million game cartridges will be bought this year. The hottest game, Super Mario Brothers, is a morality play that weaves a mustachioed Mario or his brother, Luigi, and a blipping Everyman-through-an-electronic labyrinth of waterfalls and secret passages.

One of the newest games, Wheel of Fortune, has an electronic hand-clapping, letter-turning Vanna White.

In one symptom of video madness, stores that rent movies now boost profits by renting Nintendo games. A toll-free Nintendo hotline handles 50,000 calls a week from players desperate for tips on how to overcome villains and obstacles.

Nintendo also offers a gadget that allows the handicapped to play by using puffs of air instead of hands.

But experts say marketing and game appeal may mean more than raw computing power.

"The 16-bit guys are looking for a small niche of the market. I can't believe they're going to upend Nintendo," said Larry Carlat, editor of Toy & Hobby World Magazine.

"After all those kids and parents have invested in Nintendo, now you're telling them to pull it away in a closet and start all over again with more money for better graphics."

The battle for the hearts and minds of video game players is far from child's play because of the megabucks at stake.

Many challenge Nintendo's supremacy

By MARYBETH NIBLEY The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Nintendo's success story sounds almost as improbable as the plots of some of its video games.

In 1965, a year in which U.S. video game sales slid to $100 million from more than $3 billion three years earlier, Nintendo chose to test its home computer game machine in the New York market.

Those tests told the Japanese toy company it could score big in the United States with its Nintendo Entertainment System that turns a television into a game screen.

Thanks to the popularity of its games, Nintendo revived a moribund U.S. market to become undisputed champ of home computer games in this country. Only recently have serious rivals emerged, particularly NEC Corp., another Japanese company.

While Nintendo thrived, American companies, such as Atari Corp. and its predecessor that pioneered the home video game concept, were nursing wounds they suffered from mismanaging the boom of the 1980s.

One reason why the initial phenomenon faded in the United States was that companies failed to adequately control the creation and marketing of games, allowing a proliferation of dull games.

NEC's TurboGrafx-16, to be available in toy and electronics stores this autumn, contains a 16-bit graphics processor, double the capacity of Nintendo's. The 16-bit processor allows TurboGrafx to deliver clearer, more detailed images, faster action sequences and a wider range of colors.

TurboGrafx, which will retail for about $200, or about twice the price of the basic Nintendo system, has been designed to accommodate optional equipment, such as a compact disc player and an audio-video enhancer.

Another contender for market share is Sega of America Inc., subsidiary of Japan's Sega Enterprises Ltd., veteran of video arcades. Al Nilsen, director of marketing, says the company's Genesis 16-bit system, which also will retail for around $200, has gotten glowing reviews and orders from retailers are surpassing expectations.

The Garrettsons

Ear and Roberta Garrettson

JEROME — Mr. and Mrs. Earl A. (Quil) Garrettson of Jerome, will be honored at an open house Sunday in observance of their 60th wedding anniversary.

Friends and relatives are invited to call from noon to 6 p.m. at 542 Doe Drive in Jerome.

Game dominance gives Nintendo a useful presence in computer biz

NEW YORK (AP) — Nintendo users of the future may be able to trade stocks, or shop from home.

The fact remains that the good old Nintendo Entertainment System is a full-blown 8-bit computer system that can do a lot more than play Super Mario Brothers 2, says Peter T. Main, vice president of marketing at Nintendo in Redmond, Wash.

Although he wouldn't disclose details of the company's plans, he said the popularity of the video game system presents significant opportunities for a home information system.

Nintendo previously has disclosed talks with American Telephone & Telegraph Co., but both indicate the negotiations are in preliminary stages.

Presumably, the companies are talking about creating an interactive communications network that would involve hooking Nintendo machines to phone lines to receive and send information. Nintendo Co. Ltd. of Japan, parent of the U.S. subsidiary, laid out its goals for financial services in its 1988 information report.

In it, President Hiroshi Yamuchi said: "We firmly believe that the development of an information system that is easily accessible to virtually anybody, easy-to-use, and provides even minimal amounts of valuable data will be successful."

Nintendo officials delivered the same pitch to Wall Street securities analysts earlier this summer.

Townshend has been such a symbol of strength in rock that it was shocking to long-time Who fans to see him almost end up a casualty of the rock lifestyle, a fate suffered by Who drummer Keith Moon, a classic live-hard, die-young figure who succumbed to a drug overdose in 1978.

The Who leader has objected to the Moon analogy, saying that his problems (including alcoholism) were personal rather than tied to an excessive rock lifestyle.

Sill, he felt enough of a strain touring to declare on the 1982 "farewell" tour, "I know it would be reassuring to a lot of people my age for me to say, 'I can keep going,' but I can't. This (lifestyle) has messed me up. I nearly died. I had to pull myself together. ... (Quitting touring) is an admission of weakness (in rock are) all part of the real world."

"I was very uneasy about going on the road again," Townshend said in an interview in London, referring not only to his health problems but also to questions of whether he would still be accepted on stage.

"There is this awful dichotomy that happens in the '80s world of rock 'n' roll, he said. "Performers are like women who give birth and our bodies go and their husbands don't want them any more. It's a kind of a perverse analogy, I know, but that's how I began to feel in 1974, 1975. ... A lot of us had given birth to this music, but I know I felt ugly. In fact, I think that's one of the reasons I might have drank so much at one time. I wanted to hide ... crawl away."

"Part of coming back is to combat the terrible ageism I see happening ... just to say, 'Listen, just because someone is middle-aged is not to say they can't recover.' I am not talking about being able to do the things we did as teenagers. I wouldn't trade places with the guys in (a prominent young hard rock band) for all the tea in China. It would be fun to be able to play (guitar) that fast, but I just couldn't do the booze and the crack and the women."

Townshend, who wrote a novel and worked as an editor at a London publishing house during his time away from the Who, said that he had long thought about doing something in connection with the Who's 25th anniversary this year, but he rejected as late as December the idea of a formal tour.

"I felt that my hearing problem made it impractical and the length of a tour that would be required to make the whole thing economical was untenable for me."

The turning point was the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame dinner in January in New York.

"I just thought I was going to New York to induct the Stones, meet a few people and then go home, but it turned into an astonishing kind of event for me. I guess the (key) thing for me was Little Richard. I've never really been a big fan of Little Richard, but I was just an instant convert. He reminded me a lot of Keith (Moon), larger than life and he did it with such class and style."

"Then the Soul Stirrers and the Temptations got on stage and were so proud of what they had done in music. Some of those guys were in their 60s or older and they were up there boogieing around. They weren't worried about how old they were. They were just about to have a good time. Seeing that simplified things for me."

Labels turn to vaults for CD series

By ROBERT HILBURN
Los Angeles Times

Record companies have been concentrating on rock, jazz and soul when it comes to CD retrospectives, but Capitol and Columbia are now turning some of their attention to their prized country vaults.

Columbia has just released the first eight discs in a country-oriented "American Originals" series, which is also available in cassette. Each disc is devoted to a particular artist: Charlie Rich, Ray Price, David Houston, Johnny Horton, Jimmy Dean, Sonny James, Stonewall Jackson and Bob Luman.

The company follows this fall with albums saluting Lefty Frizzell, Marty Robbins, Carl Perkins, Claude King, George Morgan and Mel Tillis.

Capitol, meanwhile, unveiled a "Capitol Collectors Series" line Aug. 1. While the new series is not exclusively country, country singers Ferlin Husky and Hank Thompson will be among the first five artists highlighted, while Merle Haggard and Sonny James will be among the artists featured in the group of eight titles due in mid-September.

Non-country artists released Aug. 1 in "Capitol Collectors Series" are Frank Sinatra, Bobby Darin and Johnny Mercer, while discs by the Five Keys, the Four Preps, Stan Freberg, Dean Martin, the Kingston Trio and Wayne Newton will be the second batch.

While all these albums carry mid-line prices (about $16-$12 in most stores), the Capitol series will offer 20 selections per disc as opposed to just 10 in the Columbia line. The Capitol retrospectives will also include extensive liner notes, including release dates and chart positions of all the songs involved.

Though most of the artists in the "American Originals" series have not previously been available in CD, Columbia already has Rich and Price packages available as part of its extensive "Collector's Choice" series.

The result is some interesting buying decisions because the "Collector's Choice" series is a budget line (less than $10 in most stores) and features some of the same songs contained in the new "American Originals" packages.

"With Price, for instance, the 'Collector's Choice' entry (titled simply "Ray-Price's 'Greatest Hits') contains two more songs than the new 'American Originals' package and concentrates on Price's '60s recordings, which were in a raw, honky-tonk style, where 'Original' disc offers a little from all areas of his career, include his '70s emphasis on a more lush pop-country approach."

Though Sonny James appears on both the Columbia and Capitol lists, there is no duplication.

COMMUNITY CONCERTS

Magic Valley Community Concerts plans four evenings of musical entertainment for its subscribers this year. The calendar includes Broadway Celebration, Oct. 22; Baritone Christopher Robertson, Oct. 31; the Atlantic Brass Quintet, Feb. 15; and Harpist DeWayne Fuller, April 25. All concerts are at 8:15 p.m. in the Fine Arts Auditorium at CSI.

Admission to the concerts is by season ticket only. Season pass prices are $20 for adults, $10 for students and $45 per family. The organization had its ticket campaign in the spring, but season tickets are still available and may be purchased by calling Edna Thorson at 733-2291.

HERRETT ART GALLERY

Idaho's Centennial has shaped the coming calendar of exhibits at the Herrett Art Gallery on the CSI campus. Four shows featuring Idaho artists are slated, with the first, "Centennial Edition I," opening Aug. 29. (See separate story.)

The gallery will also feature its annual Magic Mud Invitational holiday ceramic exhibition and sale in December, a show featuring the works of CSI students in April and May and "Facets of the Gem State," a fine crafts show slated for May and June.

The Herrett's hours are 9:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday, 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday. The gallery is closed on CSI holidays.

MAGIC VALLEY LITTLE THEATRE

The theater plans a November dinner theater presentation of "Mary, Mary ..." by Jean Kerr. Auditions are slated Sept. 10 and 11 at 7:30 p.m. at Weston Plaza.

Evening performances are slated Nov. 9 through Nov. 11, with the 8 p.m. curtain time preceded by cocktails at 6:30 p.m. and dinner at 7 p.m. Cost is $16 per person. A Sunday matinee is set for 3 p.m. Nov. 12, with the doors opening at 1:30 p.m. and a buffet at 2 p.m. Cost is $12 per person. For information, call 733-0084 or 324-4014.

JUMP CO. INC.

JUMP-Co., a youth theater organization that stages a musical each summer, will remain active throughout the year with membership meetings and workshops involving different aspects of the theater arts. Students in kindergarten through high school are welcome to take part. For more information, contact Bonnie Parsons at 733-5335 or Vera Redman at 734-6311.

FOREIGN FILM FESTIVAL

This first season's success, the Foreign Film Festival will return to the Mall Cinema in February for a four-week run. Details of films and screening times will be announced later.

MAGIC VALLEY CHORALE

The Chorale plans two shows this year, with its winter concert slated Dec. 9 and Dec. 10 and its spring show slated April 7 and April 8 in the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium. Tickets will be $3 for all ages.

Chorale membership is open to the community, and the group will have its first meeting of the season Sept. 14 in the Fine Arts Building at CSI, with registration at 7 p.m. and rehearsal at 7:30 p.m. Rehearsals will follow each Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

For the first time, the Chorale is inviting singers from the Burley-Rupert area to take part. If enough people are interested, Director Carson Wong will stage weekly rehearsals at the CSI Mini-Cassia Center, and the singers will combine with the full choir for performances. For more information, call the Mini-Cassia Center at 678-1400.

DILETTANTES

"Damn-Yankeese" has been selected as the 1990 production for the Dilettante Group of Magic Valley. Tryouts are scheduled Dec. 4-5 and Dec. 11-12, and the musical will be presented March 16, 17 and 18 and March 22, 23 and 24. For more information, contact Art Frantz at 733-0084.

TWIN FALLS MUSIC CLUB

The Twin Falls Music Club will present a solo recital by classical guitarist Bill O'Brien Sept. 15 in a program at the Leatherman. The event—possibly the first of a series—will be catered by the Double Decker with hors d'oeuvres at 8 p.m. and the concert at 8:30 p.m.

In October, the Music Club will present Basque dancers from Gooding in a free program at 7:30 p.m. at First Baptist Church. On Oct. 15, the club will sponsor its home concert tour featuring different styles of music from country fiddle to classical opera. The club also is involved in making a centennial quilt with all musical motifs for Idaho's 100th birthday.

ART GUILD OF MAGIC VALLEY

The Art Guild plans three meetings this fall at the CSI senior annex, 998 Washington St. N. All meetings are at 7:30 p.m.

On Sept. 21, scrimshaw artist Fred Brodin will demonstrate and explain his work. On Oct. 19, Joyce DeFord will exhibit and discuss her linoleum block printing. On Nov. 16, members will discuss watercolor techniques and conduct a painting workshop.

For more information on the Guild, contact Ingrid Strobe at 733-4547.

NORTHSIDE PLAYHOUSE

The Northside Playhouse, which presents a show each June at Jerome High School, will be selecting next year's production in the coming months. Auditions will be the first week of April, with rehearsals starting the following week. Anyone interested in becoming active with the group can call Mike and Cindy Winterholler at 324-5774, 733-0132 or 734-9001.

THE MAGICHORDS

The Magichords, a group of barberhop quartet singers, plans its annual fall show Nov. 17 and 18 at 8 p.m. in the CSI Fine Arts Auditorium. Tickets will be on sale at the end of September.

The group is officially the Twin Falls Chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America. About 30 men are involved.

New singers wishing to join The Magichords may want to attend the group's "Guest Night" at 8 p.m. Sept. 17 in the basement of First Baptist Church, 910 Shoshone St. E. For more information, call Burt Huish at 733-5855.

OLDTIME FIDDLERS

The Idaho Oldtime Fiddlers Association performs at many community events each year. The group began in 1963 when fiddlers gathered to provide music for the Idaho territory's centennial. The group is sure to be part of many events during the statewide centennial year, too, such as its Sept. 2 appearance at the Custer Museum.

This list of arts and entertainment events was compiled from currently available information. Any community arts groups not listed may contact The Times-News with schedules and plans for the coming environment," he says. He works from panoramic photo collages, projecting the image on paper in order to capture the city's structural lines of Boise's streets and buildings. Architecture is a fascination for Miller, he says. He likes to just do old elements of the city's architecture to create tension.

Miller's portion of the exhibit includes the large "5th and Main," incorporating the nuances of color, shape and shadow he says are integral to his approach to painting. He normally works in watercolors but is currently working on a "commission depicting Boise in the 1930s and '40s; doing it in oils."

For Mason, water is an inspiration. "Water is my thing," he says. The reflective, pastoral beauty of "Lily Pond II," which took first place in the 1986 Idaho Watercolor Society Show, demonstrates his talent for capturing the natural world.

Mason was a welder and school custodian, among other things, before becoming a full-time painter two years ago. He started painting in oils as early as his childhood, but switched to watercolors after taking a class with LaVar Steel of Twin Falls in 1966. He now leads workshops himself.

Sometimes, Mason will be driving down the road and see a scene he'd like to paint. He'll sketch it as soon as he gets home, he says. Another technique involves taking photographic slides of locations he hopes to paint. In the winter, he'll take out the transparencies, project one just long enough to get a feel for the scene, then turn off the projector and get to work.

Horjcs, a Twin Falls native, is a self-taught artist who works primarily in oils. His largest work in the show is a four-panel view of the Sawtooth Mountains.

The painting has impressionistic qualities, but Horjcs frames it with a thin white stripe not unlike a snapshot border, effectively tying together the traditional theme with a contemporary touch. Like Horjcs, Stallard's paintings depict the West, but in an entirely different way. She renders horses, cows and cowboys with bold, thick strokes and bright colors thickly layered on the canvas.

Stallard moved to Idaho five years ago from Atlanta, where she had designed billboards for the outdoor advertising business on which media mogul Ted Turner founded his empire.

Two years ago, she went on a cattle drive with state Sen. John Peavoy. Photos taken on that trip "the most Western thing I've ever done," she says—served as guides for the paintings that will be seen at the Herrett and in a show opening Sept. 1 at the Kneeland Gallery in Ketchum.

The other centennial shows set at the Herrett include: "Centennial Edition II," Oct. 17 through Nov. 22, featuring David Airhart and Cheryl K. Shurtleff of Boise; Julie Scott of Ketchum and Cathy Sher of Lava Hot Springs.

"Centennial Edition III," Jan. 16 through Feb. 22, showcasing George Wray of Moscow, Max Peter of Florence, Ore. (a former longtime Idahoan), and Boiseans John Killmaster and John Takahara.

"Centennial Edition IV," March 9 through April 12, featuring LaVar Steel of Twin Falls, Howard Huff and Al Kuber, both of Boise, and Geneva Sloan of Moscow. Two additional shows on the 1990-1991 calendar will showcase another eight artists.

Green says that, in conjunction with the centennial project, the Herrett obtained partial funding through the Idaho Commission on the Arts to make a videotape about the artists involved in the shows.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Abby is off on a two-week vacation, but she left behind some of her favorite letters taken from her best-selling book, "The Best of Dear Abby."

DEAR ABBY: Shortly after I married Mark, I discovered that he snored. When I told him he snored, he denied it. Abby, his snoring sounded like a chicken bone in a garbage disposal!

Finally I decided I had had enough of his denials, so I bought a tape recorder and learned how to use it.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

One night after Mark fell asleep, I held the microphone under his nose and got about 10 minutes of snoring. Then I reversed the tape, turned up the volume and nearly blasted him out of bed. (Thank heavens he didn't hit me.)

Only after I threatened him with a nightly rerun did he agree to see an ear, nose and throat specialist for an examination. The doctor discovered several polyps (small growths) in Mark's nose, which he said could be the cause of his snoring. The polyps were removed in a simple surgical procedure, and now my dating snores no more! Pass this on.

— PEACE AT LAST
DEAR PEACE: Not all snoring is due to growths in the nose, but it's well worth a trip to a doctor to find out.

DEAR ABBY: On our honeymoon I was horrified to discover that I had married the world's champion snorer. I used elbows and feet for temporary relief. Now we sleep in twin beds and I keep a yardstick under my bed. When Michael starts snoring, I get the yardstick and whack him with it. Now, as soon as he hears me reaching for the yardstick, he shuts up.

— MICHAEL'S WIFE

DEAR ABBY: I hope you will print this. There must be other executives who have this problem and don't know how to handle it tactfully.

Take a letter, Mrs. Brown: You are an excellent secretary, but I wish you would leave your personal problems at home. I am not a marriage counselor or a financial adviser, and I have neither the time nor energy to listen to problems concerning your children.

When you confide your personal problems in me, although I may appear interested and sympathetic, the truth is, I am very uncomfortable and I resent using my time (and yours) on such matters. I value your services and don't want to seem unkind, but I prefer to keep our relationship strictly impersonal and professional.

— YOUR BOSS
DEAR BOSS: I don't know how many bosses share your view, but I'm sure many of their wives do. When a secretary starts crying on her boss's shoulder, she frequently ends up in his arms. The only way to discourage personal conversations (in the office and out) is to abort them at the onset.

DEAR ABBY: I've been sleeping with a piece of wedding cake under my pillow every night since June 17 because I heard it would get me a man. Is this true?

— ALWAYS A BRIDESMAID
DEAR ALWAYS: I can't guarantee you a man, but you'll get plenty of ants.

Nashville sound: The joy of Desert Rose

By MARY CAMPBELL
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Chris Hillman considers the Desert Rose Band the best band in which he has ever been. In fact, he'd just as soon not even talk about the others, including the most famous one, the Byrds — which he and Roger McGuinn founded just 25 years ago — and the Flying Burrito Brothers.

Country music fans like the Desert Rose Band, too. They've made five straight singles go No. 1 on the best-selling country chart. And "Hello Trouble" is climbing toward the top. The band also is nominated as vocal group of the year in the upcoming Country Music Association awards, for song of the year for "I Still Believe in You" and for the Horizon Award, the association's highest honor.

Hillman and McGuinn are nominated for country event of the year, for a performance at Red Rocks in Colorado. Their duet, "You Ain't Going Nowhere," also is on the current country singles chart.

"This band feels the best," Hillman says. "The others never felt right. The Byrds felt OK. It was such a diverse group of individuals it self-destructed. This feels like the chemistry is right."

"The six of us are trying to think alike, trying to focus everybody's vision into one vision."

"This has got the best players and singers. It has proven itself with the chart singles. We're right on the track. A man would be a fool to wreck this train — give me a pen, I've got a song title."

Guitarist John Jorgenson says, "In Nashville, everyone is a songwriter. Every third or fourth line of conversation, somebody says, 'That would be a good song.'"

In January, Hillman, McGuinn and David Crosby performed as the Byrds in Los Angeles, trying to trademark the name, countering an attempt by the group's original drummer, Michel Clarke, to use it.

"They talk about re-forming the Byrds," Hillman says. "I don't think that is going to happen. The Byrds would be wonderful to do if it didn't interfere with the Desert Rose Band.

"I love the other guys but I don't want to look over my shoulder. This is something that's challenging right now. It takes enough of my time just to keep abreast of the business and try and come up with something unique each time we jump into the studio."

After the Byrds, the Flying Burrito Brothers, Stephen Stills' Manassas, Souther-Hillman-Furay, McGuinn Clark & Hillman and time out for spiritual stocktaking, Hillman cut two solo country albums for Sugar Hill Records: "Morning Sky" and "Desert Rose."

In his teens in San Diego County, he played in country bands before, he and McGuinn created folk-rock with the Byrds and he and Gram Parsons pushed on into country-rock with the Burritos.

The Smothers Brothers fight for laughs still

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dick and Tom Smothers have been carrying on the world's most famous brotherly quarrel since Cain and Abel locked horns to those many years ago.

And although most of America is by now wise to the fact that the Smothers Brothers really don't hate each other, Dick Smothers says that he and his brother are actually getting the last laugh.

"When we get off a good show, Tommy and I look at each other and say, 'Well, fooled them again,'" Dick said recently. "If we had material, we'd be dangerous."

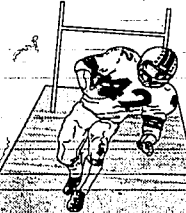

Yep, if the Brothers Smothers had material, they might actually make us laugh even harder than we have since they broke onto the nation's consciousness with a mid-season replacement variety show on CBS in 1967, one that knocked long-time Sunday night ratings champ "Bonanza" off its horse and made the establishment reel.

Actually, in the 20 years since Tommy and Dickie were abruptly yanked from the airwaves following a dispute with the network over their decidedly liberal leanings, they've gotten remarkably conventional, acting in Broadway plays, making TV commercials and producing game shows, an indication that the Woodstock generation has indeed grown up.

In fact, the boys have become so mainstream that CBS, the network that originally spurned them, has welcomed them back — sort of.

You see, the former "Tiffany Network" has seen the tarnish on the good silver that used to be its lofty ratings and has consequently given the Smothers Brothers another chance.

Where were you in '52?

Or '62, or '22, or '72?
Maybe you remember going to barn dances. Or maybe you remember sock hops.

Maybe your family rode in a covered wagon. Or maybe a station wagon.

Whether you're young or old, The Times-News would like to share your memories of life in the Magic Valley.

In honor of Idaho's Centennial, we're putting readers' reminiscences in a new weekly column, "Looking Back." And we'll fill a special section with them next July.

You don't need a long story — just a few sentences about something you remember. And we'd love to see the special pictures in your family album.

You can bring your stories and photographs to our office, or mail them to CENTENNIAL, The Times-News, P.O. Box 548, Twin Falls, 83303.

Chip of 'My Three Sons' acts on stage nowadays

By WINIFRED WALSH
The Baltimore Evening Sun

BALTIMORE — As the youngest member of the Douglas family on television's long-running "My Three Sons," Stanley Livingston as Chip passed from blissful childhood into restless adolescence. He went to college, acquired a girlfriend, and even got married during the 12 years the show was on the air.

Chip's round baby face and dazzling smile can still be seen weeknights on the Nickelodeon cable channel, along with Robbie, Mike, Ernie and father Steve. (Fred MacMurray), working through various sit-com dilemmas with the cantankerous but well-meaning help of Bub (William Frawley) or Uncle Charley (William Demarest). The series has been in syndication since 1972.

Livingston is alive and well and appearing in the late Larry Shue's hilarious comedy, "The Nerd," playing in Baltimore at the Olney Theatre.

At 36, he still has the same endearing grin and boyish manner. And as inconceivable as it seems, he also has a 20-year-old daughter.

"She is an art student. Her name is Samantha," he says from the Olney actors' residence after a recent performance of "The Nerd." "She was born a few days short of Halloween but we couldn't resist the name."

In "The Nerd," directed by Livingston's friend Sue Lawless, Livingston plays Willum, a passive architect whose life was saved by a Vietnam War buddy. The buddy (Jonathan Bustle), an obnoxious creep, shows up unexpectedly on the grateful architect's doorstep for a permanent visit.

"The play is a bit of fluff good for belly laugh," says Livingston. "My character doesn't do anything. He is the original wimp. As Willum, I have to react to this jerk who is ruining my life. Reacting is not easy," he adds, grinning. "It uses up a lot of energy."

Livingston credits his parents for giving him and brother Barry (Ernie on "My Three Sons") a normal childhood despite their star status. "Today's star is yesterday's news," he says. "We went to public school, took out the garbage and did a lot of chores. Other child actors I knew gave up or turned to drugs."

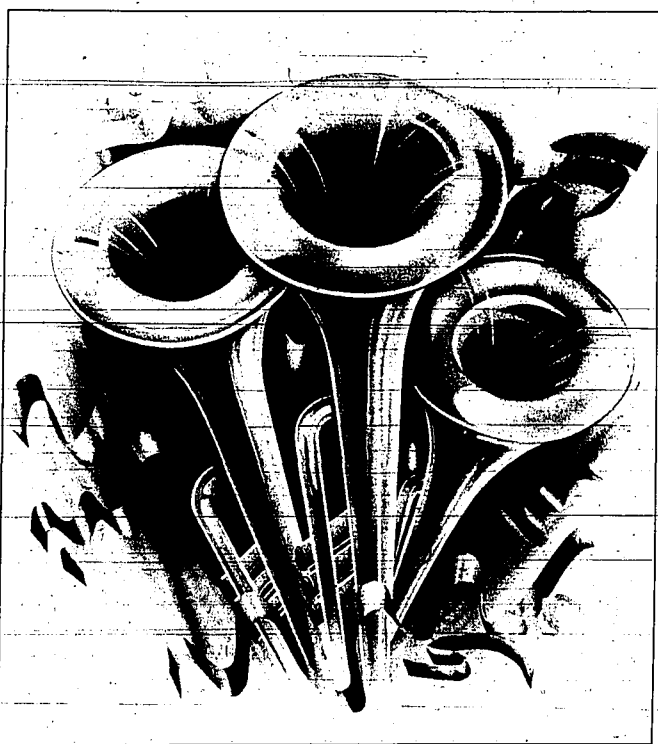

"Kids get big heads in the spotlight," he adds. "The point is not to give up. Persevere. Forget about your ego. Life changes and life goes on. You have to step down and pass the torch to the next guy."

Livingston smiles as he launches into an update on the "My Three Sons" cast.

"Barry is writing and acting. He and his wife just had a baby boy. Don Grady (Robbie) is a musician and composer, and Tim Considine (Mike) is producing feature films. On a sad note, Fred MacMurray, the nicest guy in the world, is 81 and in ill health. William Frawley and William Demarest are both deceased."

Divorced for many years, Livingston (who only does stage performances once a year) spends much of his time at his Laurel Canyon home high in the hills of Los Angeles where he writes feature films for his own production company and scripts for pay TV. He also is an artist and actively pursues his lucrative hobby of painting unique images on glass panels.

After the final shooting of "My Three Sons" in 1972, Livingston did a number of guest spots for TV and stage until 1978. He also attended University of California, Los Angeles, at night to craft his writing skills.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECASTS

IF AUGUST 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are on brink regarding residence, marital status, financial speculation. You are romantic, idealistic, intense and work extremely well under pressure. You also are spiritual, a perfectionist, sensitive and psychic. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. In September you'll be paid full amount owed since beginning of year. Major domestic adjustment is "in the works." Life style will be transformed. November will be most memorable.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Original plans subject to sudden change. Be aware, own life. A "romantically inclined" individual could lack sense of reality. Pisces represented.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Finally you get the money! Scenario features intensity, responsibility, deadline. Older individual "takes charge" of funding. Love relationship is strong, slightly frightening. Capricorn involved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Judgment, intuition ring true. Circumstances favor efforts, especially with regard to communication, travel, long-term relationship. Some say, "Being with you is like reading a romantic novel."

CANCER (June 21-July 21): Stress independence, style, creativity, ability to "make your own mark." You'll get to heart of matters by discovering secret. This might not be too pleasant, but you'll be "in the know."

LEO (July 22-Aug. 22): You'll roll "evens and evens." Individual close to you declares, "You came out of it smelling like a rose!" Focus on speculation, romance, favorable publicity. Powerful individual joins forces.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Orders that come from top contain confusing language. Do your own deciphering. Focus also on accelerated social activity, attention to wardrobe, invitation relating to travel. Career gets boost.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It's necessary to renovate, rebuild, reinforce structure. Money paid now will save much re-investment. Emphasis on negotiations, communications, flirtation that could lead to "something meaningful."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Obtain hint from Libra message. You'll get what you want by "throwing out" hints, clues. Those who hold purse strings look upon you with favor. Your charm will pay dividends. Gemini involved.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): High-light consideration of family-member who wants to "come back." Focus on moderation, diplomacy, kindness of spirit. You'll be concerned with legal ties that include marriage, Taurus involved.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Not easy for others to fool you, but you could fall victim to self-deception. Get promises in writing, also definition of terms. Emphasis continues on pets, employment, general health.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Inner-dweller might take over from logic. Be aware, alert, sensitive, refuse to be driven by non-rational ambitions. Means be practical enough to protect security, reputation. Cancer native involved.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Long-term relationship "tested." Emphasis also on basic issues, values, property, communication with older individual. Elucidate theme of universality. Means communicate ideas, concepts concerning love.

What's what

Cost of valdies
 It was Dr. Joseph Peck who said, "It costs a lot less if you learn early that all is vanity, and that most folks spend money they haven't got on things they don't need to impress people they don't like."

"Colonel" comes from the Italian for "colonus."

An estimated 18 percent of the 130,000 male sheep in the United States, it's reported, have no interest whatsoever in female sheep.

Q. How and when did Hungry Mother State Park in Virginia get its name?
 A. Searching settlers there found a small child they said escaped from Indians. Way back then. Only words the child could say were "hungry mother."

LONGEVITY
 At age 96, Timothy Hearnahan of Miami explained his longevity to reporters: "Late to bed, later to rise, nap after lunch, no exercise."

MODERN WAR
 You think modern warfare started with gunpowder? So did I. But evidently not according to those renowned historians Will and Ariel Durant: In 399 B.C. in the Greek City-State of Syracuse, Dionysius the Elder wanted a better weapon than a sword. So his engineers invented the catapult.

The lobster's big claw is the "crusher," his little claw, the "pincer." Which grows bigger, the pincers now say, doesn't depend on genes, but on early exercise.

'Casualties of War' explores our national conscience

By BOB THOMAS
The Associated Press

The national conscience about the Vietnam War is explored once more in Brian DePalma's shocking new film, "Casualties of War." Again, American soldiers are the villains of the piece, and the tragedy is heightened by the realization that the events actually happened.

The film is based on 1969 reportage for New Yorker magazine by Daniel Lang. He wrote about a detail of soldiers who were sent on a routine reconnoitering mission. The veteran sergeant in command, Meserve (all of the actual names were changed), decided they would take along some "portable sex." He led the group to a native village, where they abducted a young woman. The soldiers and their captive established a camp at a native hut, where they raped her. All participated, some with reluctance. At least one was a Vietnam newcomer, Eriksson. He was appalled by what he saw and tried unsuccessfully to help the girl escape. Meserve led the soldiers and the girl into combat and decided she had to be killed to destroy any evidence. The deed was willingly performed by the radio man, Clark. After a fierce battle, the detail returned to camp, where Eriksson decided to tell what happened. To his astonishment, the brass seemed willing to let the rapemurder be forgotten. Finally Eriksson reached high enough authority to bring action. The resulting court martial convicted the four major participants in the crime, and Eriksson's testimony made him a pariah among his fellow soldiers. David Rabe's script faithfully follows the ever of Lang's article (notable exception: the four were tried individually). DePalma is expert at intense, stomach-churning action, and he deftly contrasts the brutality of war with the lush beauty of the jungle landscapes (actually Thailand). The film is told in retrospect as the civilian Eriksson's nightmare returns while he studies an Oriental girl in a Thai village. Apparently Rabe and DePalma found that such a framing was necessary, but it doesn't work. The conclusion is a puzzling letdown. "Casualties of War" stars Michael J. Fox as Eriksson and Sean Penn as Meserve. Fox is ideal as the innocent of the squad; his growing toughness and his moral indignation add credibility to the plot. Oddly, Penn is a disappointment. The war-hardened sergeant would seem tailor-made for an actor of his intensity, but Penn never gets a firm handle on Meserve, and much of his dialogue is garbled by his constant tobacco chewing.

'Lock Up' proves height of silliness for Stallone

The following are capsule reviews and a rating guide for some of the movies now playing in the Magic Valley.

LOCK UP (R). Yet another Sylvester Stallone macho fantasy in which he plays an underdog of superhuman endurance. This time he's a decent con at the mercy of a crazed, sadistic warden (Donald Sutherland). Credibility-defying to the point of silliness.

PARENTHOOD (PG-13). Those with "impossible" non-hardcore teenagers, whose every sentence is punctuated by a slammed door, might swear that "Parenthood" was the group portrait. Director Ron Howard, who also created the film's original story with Lowell Ganz and Babaloo Mandel ("Splash," "Night Shift"), uses these bittersweet elements like smelling salts, to bring us around after the laughing gas effect of the jokes. Robards and a valet put-upon Eileen Ryan are parents of two sons. Steve Martin and young black sheep Tom Hulce, as well as two daughters: Dianne Wiest, whose husband has left her, and newcomer Harley Kozak, whose husband (Rick Moran) alas, has not.

PETER PAN (G). Disney's upbeat, animated adaptation of Sir James Barrie's play remains one of the studio's most colorful and entertaining features. Captain Hook's battles with the Crocodile represent a near-perfect marriage of slapstick animation and a deliciously overstated vocal performance by the late Hans Conried, while the flying sequences offer the special, magic-fantasy that can only be realized in animation.

TURNER AND HOOD (PG). A dog-meets-a-cop version of "The Odd Couple" with Tom Hanks as a picky Felix type and a jowly, drooling, pugnaeous Dogue de Bordeaux named Beasley as a slob Oscar. The co-stars generate some chemistry, but three teams of screenwriters have come up with a mystery story that could only bamboozle 12-year-olds who weren't paying attention, a love story that should put anyone over or under 12 to sleep, and a dog story that dogs themselves might actually enjoy—if the pages were edible.

UNCLE BUCK (PG). Writer-director John Hughes has managed to fuse his two genres of choice, the clashing-family comedy and the tortured-tween pic, with mixed results. As the blue-collar relative from hell stammered by all-but-the

DePalma struggled to make 'War'

By FRANK RIZZO
The Hartford Courant

NEW YORK — Brian DePalma looks every inch the serious cinematic artist. He broods, he glowers, he challenges interviewers — and he has just made his own Vietnam movie. After 17 films over 20 years, the 48-year-old DePalma finally achieved critical raves two years ago with his commercial smash "The Untouchables." Propelled by a riveting David Mamet screenplay, the movie made Kevin Costner a star, got Sean Connery an Oscar and put DePalma in the directing big league.

Even on the heels of an unqualified hit, a sullen DePalma said at a lunch recently at the Plaza Hotel here that getting this picture made was no easy task.

"I explained to (the studio heads) that as difficult as it had been to get the other Vietnam movies made, when they came out — if they were good — they were commercially successful," he says.

Despite the bottom-line logic, Paramount did not act on its option for the film, even with Fox and Penn in the leading roles. DePalma did not get the green light until last year, when Dawn Steel, the new president of Columbia Pictures, gave him the go.

"There's room for another story (set in Vietnam) if it's a good one," said the foreboding DePalma, whose size, girth and beard have earned him the nickname "Bear" (as in "grizzly," not "laddy").

"I liked its compact story line," he said. "And I liked the fact that it was real." The $22.5 million film is based on a true story published in 1969 in Daniel Lang's book of the same name. Unlike such films as Francis Coppola's "Apocalypse Now," Stanley Kubrick's "Full Metal Jacket," Michael Cimino's "The Deer Hunter" or Oliver Stone's "Platoon," DePalma's stylistic approach in the new film is neither surrealistic, impressionistic, metaphoric nor documentary style.

"It's basically the story of that little squad and what happened to it. I thought it sort of encapsulated our experience in Vietnam in one terse story," DePalma said.

"We tried to set the circumstances of ... what the world was like over there so you understand how they got into the trouble they did. The fact that if you put these kids in a situation they don't quite understand, if you put them into (a situation of) psychological and physical pressure, they react in a very bad way. But there's one guy who basically tries to hold his sense of what he feels is right or wrong, even in a morally ambiguous world."

Despite the truth of the story, DePalma felt free to make it work in a cinematic context.

DePalma said that he never talked to the real-life hero of the piece, Eriqson, named Daniel Erikson in the movie, but said that screenwriter Rabe had communicated with the former soldier "a little bit. Basically, he is disinterested in the whole project."

Still, DePalma said, he did his research. "I read a lot of books," said DePalma, who was a draft dodger.

Reviews

youngest relations in his stuffed-shirt family, John Candy has never been more likable, but to get to the chuckles you have to wade through Hughes' favorite anti-adult stereotypes and then endure the patet of warm resolutions.

WHEN HARRY MET SALLY ... (R). Genuinely witty dialogue is not exactly a staple of summer movies, but Rob Reiner's newest from Nora Ephron's screenplay bristles with it as broody Billy Crystal and sunny Meg Ryan meet, attract, then worry a lot whether lovers can be friends, and the reverse. Lovely ensemble work with Carrie Fisher and Bruno Kirby are just right as a couple the audience is pushing together. Yes, with its Manhattan setting and real married couple interviews interlarding the action, it has an aura of Woody Allen.

THE ABYSS (PG-13). It's perfectly possible to have a mindlessly pleasant time in this intense "Jidy-Bow" bluesness. You just relax and let go. You may just wonder when you come out if you haven't pruned a little. Writer-director James Cameron's vision (carried with him not surprisingly since he was 17) is complete with men who say "Steady, big fella," each other without a trace of irony. Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio and ice-blue-eyed Ed Harris do manage to bring fire to all this damp tinder, but it can't have been easy.

Instrument maker caters to rich, famous with his superior sounds

By ELISABETH DUNHAM
The Associated Press

Danny Ransom, 36, with custom guitar in his San Francisco shop.

SAN FRANCISCO — Danny Ransom spent the first six months of his career tediously making deformed electric guitars for $10 each.

Today, he creates near-perfect instruments, veritable works of art, that sell for as much as $4,000 to a list of clients that includes some of the world's best-known musicians.

The average large-scale guitar manufacturer can produce one guitar body and a dozen guitar necks in about seven minutes. But a craftsman such as Ransom spends several days, sometimes weeks, on a single instrument.

"These huge companies pour out these glossy ads that say, 'We build the most perfect machine in the world,' and most of their stuff is junk," he says. "I've had to make sure every instrument is right."

Ransom, 36, has been in the guitar-building business 13 years. He has built guitars for members of the Grateful Dead, Santana and Alabama. Laurie Anderson and Joan Luc Ponty play $4,000 synthesizer violins he made for a company called Zeta.

Experimental guitarist Henry Kaiser bought one of Ransom's Stratocaster-style guitars last year from a friend. He says Ransom understands the complexities of the instrument and how the different parts interact.

"He's very sensitive to all those things that go beyond most guitar makers," Kaiser said. "It's just a versatile, expressive instrument."

An independent contractor, Ransom works out of a sawdust-filled studio adjacent to "Real Guitars," a collector's guitar store.

There was a time when he was low man on the guitar-maker totem pole. He first worked for a huge custom guitar manufacturer, now defunct, initially building what he calls "the worst garbage."

"Then I was hired because one of the staff builders had a habit of taking LSD (lysergic acid diethylamide) on the job and 'talking to the tools.'"

"The day the bandsaw turned into a serpent was the day I was brought in," Ransom recalls. "They stuck me in a room with a bunch of tools, handed me a guitar and said, 'Make these.'"

His first guitars took weeks to build and earned him a whopping $10 each. They were stacked up and sold as seconds or thrown out.

One particular guitar stands out in his memory. It was the first time he'd completed a carved top for a Les Paul-style guitar. The final touches required a butane torch; and one of his bosses decided to show him how it was done.

"At first, I got these little red embers, like little coals burning on it," Ransom recalls. "I said, 'Do you know what you're doing?' He said, 'Shut up, of course I do.' Then the guitar started to lift off and the thing burst into flames right in front of us."

"If you can imagine putting out a fire with coffee cups... This is like watching your child burn."

"Things started to pick-up after other builders began touching him. Ransom says the difference between a good guitar and a bad guitar lies in the details, such as the curves of the wood and placement of the finger board and joints.

"There's a real learning that goes on with figuring out detail. The better you can adapt your eye to detail, the better you will get at whatever you do in terms of craft. That's really what I got from some of the people who helped me early on."

His guitars, usually Stratocaster and Telecaster styles, are made mostly from alder, ash and maple.

50 years of Hanna-Barbera cartoons and still drawing

By KATHERINE REINHARD
The Allentown Morning Call

Their toughest critics say they have cheapened animation with bland characters who are little more than bobbing heads and moving mouths. Yet it is hard to find a child — or adult for that matter — who has not laughed at that prehistoric loud mouth Fred Flintstone, Yogi, the smarter-than-the-average Bear or space age George Jetson.

Love them or hate them, William Hanna and Joseph Barbera, better known to the public as Hanna-Barbera — are celebrating their 50th anniversary as an animation team.

After producing more than 300 different series, specials, television movies and theatrical films, the animation duo is still going strong.

"It's a fascinating business. We're as busy as ever," said Barbera, 78, during a recent telephone interview from Los Angeles where Hanna-Barbera Studios is located.

For Hanna and Barbera, it all started in 1937 when they were hired within weeks of each other to work in the animation department at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios.

But the two did not team up until two years later when they were asked to develop a new cartoon. The idea they came up with was simple: a cat named Tom chasing, but never capturing, a clever mouse called Jerry.

"Instinctively, I lean toward basic characters. There is nothing more basic than a cat chasing a mouse," said Barbera, who is the creative part of the team, the one who comes up with characters and plot lines (Hanna, vice president, handles the production end of the business).

"Tom & Jerry" was an instant hit in the theaters and MGM ordered Hanna and Barbera to create more. They continued to turn out "Tom & Jerry" cartoons for 20 years, winning seven Academy Awards for their efforts.

Despite the awards and audience appeal, Hanna and Barbera found themselves jobless in 1957 when MGM, hurtling financially by the growing competition from television, eliminated its animation department.

Seeing no future in movie studios, they turned to the medium that had helped put them out work.

"It was a very simple decision. Either you come up with some intelligent thinking or you starve to death. So you went to television," said Barbera, who as a child growing up in New York always had a pencil and pad in hand, copying pictures out of storybooks.

The problem was that in 1957, original cartoons for television did not exist. Instead, stations showed old and dated cartoons mostly as fillers on adult-hosted children shows.

At first, Hanna and Barbera had trouble convincing the networks to hire them to create new cartoons. "You were immediately thrown out of every door because they had no money," said Barbera, who worked as a bank accountant before selling cartoons to magazines such as Collier's.

Hanna and Barbera broke ground in 1960 when they introduced the "Flintstones," a prehistoric situation comedy featuring Fred Flintstone and his buddy Barney Rubble in their never-ending pursuit of a better life.

At first, sponsors were afraid to back the show because, at 30 minutes, it was the first animated show to air in prime time and feature a plot that went beyond the traditional six-minute format. The show was a hit, however, with original episodes airing for six years.

"To this day, many people insist that the 'Flintstones' was modeled after Jackie Gleason's 'Honeymooners' TV show. But Barbera said that there is more urban myth than truth to that claim. "I can honestly say it wasn't done to be that. As far as I'm concerned the 'Honeymooners' is one of the best shows ever made. If they want to say that they can," Barbera said.

Two years later, Hanna-Barbera came out with a futuristic cartoon, "The Jetsons." The show lasted only one year in prime time. After that, the original 24 episodes were played over and over again in syndication. Throughout the years, though, the popularity of the show grew so greatly that in 1985 Hanna-Barbera produced another 42 episodes for syndication. A full-length-Jetsons movie, featuring pop star Tiffany as the voice of daughter Judy, is set for release next summer.

ALF may be a wisecracking alien, but his show has proven itself a solid hit

By LYNN HOOGENBOOM

Three years ago, ALF was an unknown alien, looking forward to the debut of his new NBC Monday-night show with trepidation and bristling when he was mistakenly identified as a Muppet or a talking dog.

"That was bad press in the beginning," he says. "When CBS was talking about the show, they said, 'It's about a talking dog from outer space. That sort of stunk.'"

Today, his show's a hit. No one's mistaking him for a dog anymore. But rumors that he's really a Muppet ("That's a Jim Hensen thing," ALF protests), and that his voice is done by "ALF" executive producer Paul Fusco, persist. Maybe they're true. Maybe it is Fusco at the other end of the telephone line. But whoever he is, he's playing it straight — as straight as an alien looking for an opportunity to allop in a wisecrack can play it.

"I just found out I've got the wrong kind of agent," he confides. "He's a fight promoter. Three years I've been doing the show, and I'm working with a guy who's booking fights."

How could a national TV star make a mistake like that?

"He was thrown upon me," wails ALF. "You know how Hollywood is. These sharks come out of the water. So I figured I'd go with this guy. He had the same color of hair I did. Bad move."

Stardom is supposed to do wonders for an actor's social life, but ALF claims that it hasn't quite worked out that way for him. "I can't date out of my species," he complains. "It's tough. The closest I can come is Charo."

And even now, as the unquestionable star of an unquestionable hit, he has trouble getting NBC's top honchos on the phone. "Once a year they send me a Christmas card, and that's about it," he says. "I'm still waiting for Brandon (Tartikoff) to return my call—I have some great ideas for him, but he won't take them from me. I want to see more high-concept shows on the air. And he's afraid to answer the phone. He wants to do those bikini bingo movies."

When a television actor emerges from a series as a media lion, his co-stars frequently have trouble coping. But ALF claims that his own co-stars, the Tanners (who are played by Max Wright, Anne Schedeen, Andrea Elson and Benji Gregory), have been great. "I think they've adapted to it pretty well," he says complacently.

Is there a member of the Tanner family with whom he feels most compatible? "Well, Willie (Max Wright), sort of," says ALF. "He's sympathetic to my problems. He's a good guy."

Does he look upon him as a substitute father?

"Nah. I'm older than he is, for gosh sake," sputters ALF. For the record, ALF is 232, but by Melmacian standards, that's late adolescence.

Does he ever think the Tanners don't take him seriously enough?

"Yeah," he says, then pauses to reconsider. "Well, actually, sometimes they take things too seriously. That's the problem with that family. I tell them to lighten up constantly. They're too neurotic. What's a little kitchen fire now and then?"

ON THE COVER A wisecracking alien wreaks havoc on the household of Kate Tanner (Anne Schedeen) in 'ALF.' It airs Monday on NBC.

HBO will air final chapter of 'Vietnam War Story'

By HOWARD ROSENBERG
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — More evidence that "Vietnam War Story" was unfairly ignored in the Emmy nominations is available when this irregularly scheduled dramatic anthology series returns with an intriguing trilogy Saturday night on cable's HBO.

The return is short-lived. "Vietnam War Story" began in 1967, and HBO says that the series will likely end with Saturday night's program, which is coincidentally titled "The Last Days." All three stories take place in 1975, after the

Ken Wahl's wife posed in the nude

Q: Didn't "Wiseguy's" Ken Wahl, TV's sexiest hunk in my opinion, marry someone who once posed in the raw for a slick men's magazine? — J.T.

A: Ken Wahl some time ago got hitched to wife Corinne, who is gorgeous. When I ran into Ken — who is super-shy away from the set — and Corinne at a Hollywood party recently, she appeared to be outgoing, intelligent and rather sophisticated. And, yes, she did once pose in the nude for a big-time men's magazine — before she met Ken.

Q: What's this about Joan Rivers' new TV show being very serious, with no comedy or entertainment? — F.D.

delivered in typical Joan style —

Q: We loved the new movie "Parenthood" with Steve Martin. An article said the two teen-agers in the lead, Leaf Phoenix and Martha Plimpton, are children of other stars. Who would the parents be? —

A: That's not exactly correct. Martha Plimpton's father is actor Keith Carradine, the son of the late John Carradine and actress Shelley Plimpton. As for Leaf, his father isn't an actor, but Leaf is a sibling of River Phoenix, his more famous brother.

Q: We were shocked to hear that actress Victoria Principal is in a California institution for the blind. When did her eyesight begin to go? — A.C.

A: Hold on a minute — Victoria can see perfectly well. You're very observant, though. Principal recently spent a month at the Los Angeles Braille Institute. But only as an observer. It seems that Victoria will soon star in a TV movie called "Blind Rage," about a sightless woman who "witnesses" her husband's murder. When confronted with a juicy part, Victoria abides by the principle of preparing fully for the role.

Q: Isn't it true that Ed McMahon's wife is leaving him because she had an affair with the man who provided her daily message? — B.L.

A: That's one of the more creative rumors making the Hollywood rounds. Fact is that the whole town was stunned by the news that the announcer-host is filing for divorce from his wife, Victoria. Up until recently, the two were often seen on the Hollywood social circuit, but Ed says that there's "no hope" of reconciliation: Victoria McMahon has countersued for custody of the couple's 12-year-old adopted daughter. The suddenness of it all — even Ed's "The Tonight Show" friends weren't aware of the McMahons' marital woes — is generating interesting scuttlebutt.

Beatle John Lennon's psychedelically painted Rolls Royce that was sold at auction a few years ago. Any idea what the show was? — E.R.

A: The film, which was found in the car purchased by Vancouver millionaire Jim Pattison for $2.3 million, was discovered when the Rolls was donated to the province and became a top attraction at the Transportation Museum of British Columbia. Exhaustive research has failed to clear up the mystery of this 8mm home movie shot in Boston, which shows several young people who look to be in their early 20s smoking a water pipe, followed by surrealistic images of a church, a television cartoon show and shots of numerous wine bottles. Another segment shows a total eclipse of the sun as seen in New England on March 7, 1970. So far, nobody knows who did it or why it was done.

Q: How is former first lady Nancy Reagan doing now that she no longer has the enormous White House staff at her beck and call? Has she laid on a lot of helpers in her Bel Air home? — T.P.

A: Friends report that Mrs. Reagan has made a remarkable adjustment to a somewhat simpler life. At last reports she was doing just fine with a staff of only two maids.

Divorce proves a surprise

A: Pretty well as far as I can see. Jane concedes, without much elaboration, that she's dating: "I'm having a good time." No steady escorts have yet emerged; Jane is playing the field — cautiously. She's also planning a whirlwind world promotion tour on behalf of her latest movie "Old Gringo."

Q: Hasn't Rob Reiner, who played Archie Bunker's "meathead" son-in-law on "All in the Family," turned into a manic-depressive? What's wrong? — H.J.

A: Rob, the son of director-producer Carl Reiner, has emerged as one of Hollywood's hottest movie directors since the "All in the Family" days. Rob's latest flick — "When Harry Met Sally ..." — is a big hit. Rob says he was unprepared for quick professional success. A marriage to sitcom star Penny Marshall didn't pan out and, as a result, he had his psychological ups and downs. But, while making "Harry/Sally," he met photographer Michele Singer. They got married in May. Now, says Rob, success is a lot sweeter.

Q: Isn't it true that the arduous production of "Batman" so exhausted Jack Nicholson that he's taken a year off to rest up? — J.C.

Debbi Morgan makes show biz history

By JOHN N. GOUDAS

When Debbi Morgan picked up her Outstanding Supporting Actress Emmy recently for her role as Dr. Angie Hubbard in "All My Children," she had no idea that she was also creating show business history. Debbi is the first black actress ever to win a Daytime Emmy Award.

This event was just one of many firsts in Debbi's life. To begin with, she is the first member of her family to go into show business. This fact may not seem so extraordinary in itself, but it is when you consider that Debbi grew up in New York's South Bronx, where graduating high school is considered an achievement. Debbi's mom was a single parent whose husband died of cancer when her two girls were young. She worked hard and sent them to parochial school.

It was there that Debbi met Jim Mendenhall, a director-actor who cast her as Puck in a musical production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Mendenhall saw something in Debbi way back then and encouraged her to pursue an acting career.

In her emotionally felt acceptance speech, Debbi thanked Jim Mendenhall for pointing the way and allowing a young black girl to dare to aim higher.

"The neighborhood I grew up in was tough. My mother held her breath everytime we left the house. My mother and I had a good relationship, one built on trust and that sustained me. I remember one girlfriend of mine, easily the most beautiful girl in the neighborhood, who ended up a junkie. The last time I saw her, she was sitting in a stupor on a bench in a park, nodding out."

Debbi recalls that she was surprised when she was approached by Mr. Mendenhall to appear as Puck in the high school production. Debbi noted that the school she attended was 95 percent white and the few blacks generally were in the chorus. To play a leading role was another first in Debbi's life.

After high school, Debbi was committed to launching her acting career and she attended workshops

Debbi Morgan holds her historic supporting actress Emmy at the Negro Ensemble Company and the Henry Street Settlement. She got a part in a Lincoln Center production of "What the Wine Sellers Buy," and was encouraged to try her luck in Los Angeles. She won roles in such TV series as "Good Times," "What's Happening!" and "The White Shadow." Debbi's biggest break came when she was cast in "Roots: The Next Generation."

Debbi has been playing Angie on "All My Children" since 1982. She was a bit reluctant to talk about the current plotline which has her about to be married to her white lover, played by Peter Bergman. Until recently, it looked as if the mixed couple would actually get married, thus creating another first for daytime drama. However, insiders say the storyline didn't please many viewers and ABC has decided to put an end to the upcoming nuptials. Debbi says that's the decision and she had no other comments, but her eyes spoke volumes. Maybe the day

Q: You read a lot about how dangerous crack is but you never see an explanation of the drug or where it got its name other than it's derived from cocaine. — G.G.

A: Crack is the rock form of cocaine and is sold in tiny pellets.

The name comes from the sound the drug makes when burning in a pipe. It is considered the most menacing form of cocaine: As the smoke is inhaled, the drug reaches the brain in as little time as five seconds and becomes addictive within a matter of weeks.

Q: It was surprising to find out that Earle Hyman, who plays Bill Cosby's father on "The Cosby Show," is extremely popular in Scandinavia. Why is this so? I mean, why Scandinavia? — P.B.

A: Earle Hyman is currently starring as the chauffeur in the acclaimed off-Broadway play "Driving Miss Daisy." The versatile actor owns a second home in Denmark where he is a great favorite. Hyman is fluent in Danish, as well as Swedish and Finnish. He has frequently appeared on the Scandinavian stage in classics from Shakespeare to Shaw to O'Neill, speaking those languages flawlessly.

Q: We heard that Frank Sinatra is an excellent cook, with real know-how around a kitchen. Anything to it? — G.H.

A: Like his old pal Dodger manager Tommy Lasorda, Sinatra is pretty good in the kitchen. "I've received some nice compliments about my cooking," says the singer. It's Italian, of course. Sinatra recently decided to put his money where his mouth is — by marketing Italian-style food items. First to be launched is the pasta sauce that has long had guests exclaiming "mamma mia" during holiday hoedowns at the Sinatra mansion.

Q: It's frequently been printed that Greta Garbo employs aliases to preserve her anonymity (fat chance!) when traveling or checking into hotels. What are the tags she most likes to assume? — J.N.

A: Greta Garbo has a list of favorites, the most well-known of which is Harriet Brown. Some other favorites: Phyllis Smith, Miss Hansen, Caren Lundhi, Mariu Svenson, Beatrice Willis, Greta Blake, Leone Dwyer, J. Clark and J. Emerson ("J" apparently being a pet initial for Garbo pseudonyms).

CHANNEL CHATTER

Steve Fletcher has played many roles in various soaps and he was usually cast as a guy who liked the ladies very much. This often translated into parts that found him a bit of a roue. He was the unscrupulous Matthew Crane in "Ryan's Hope," the kidnapper Alan Howard in "Loving," and the well-heeled heel Brad Vernon in "One Life to Live."

He is now playing Nina Cortlandt-Connolly's husband Matt in "All My Children," and will continue in the role until the end of the month.

Multi-award winning stage and film actress Dana Ivey will take the role of Ms. Bancroft, a psychiatric nurse who is in Adam's employ to watch over Dixie in "All My Children." Ms. Ivey's role will continue into the fall and perhaps beyond.

PLOT PORTENTS

After the judge dismisses the case during the divorce hearing between Nico and Cecily, they take off for Hawaii to renew their vows on "All My Children." Erica calls Jackson but little does she realize that he's playing around while she's away searching for a clown. Adam, who is supposed to be in Singapore, actually is lurking about the house spying on Dixie, continuing to drive her mad. Melanie moves to the college dorm against Palmer's protests.

Ursula declares that she has finally killed Tina on "One Life to Live." However, Bo and the police find Tina and Cord. Art tells Megan the story of Liana Flagg, the woman for whom Llanview is named. There is a movie being made about Liana and the producer wants Megan for the lead. Max thinks Megan should take the Liana Flagg film. As Gabrielle tries on her wedding dress, she fantasizes about Max and tells Michael she wants to elope.

Dale follows Trucker and learns where he lives on "Loving." Jolie and Dale conspire against Trisha. Gwyn tells Clay that Rick is on the verge of a nervous breakdown. Jolie spies on Trisha and Trucker. Alex is going to Maine to find evidence which could destroy Clay. Clay receives a mysterious phone call and learns that Alex is in Maine. He loads his gun and heads for Maine.

Clarke has trouble accepting Kristen's explanation of her meeting Mick in the park on "The Bold and the Beautiful." Donna hopes to entice Thorne. Margo realizes Clarke will not go back to her because of Mark. Bill is certain he can make Margo happy.

Henry admits Adam needs a shocker like the drug bust on "Generations." Sam worries about Rob's drinking; Jessica doesn't trust Sam but keeps her mouth shut.

Jealous Jack takes it out on Emilio on "Days of Our Lives." Saul's power days are ebbing.

Networks look forward to time when cable channels will make programs

By MICHAEL HILL
The Baltimore Evening Sun

There is a feeling around the big three networks that eventually the playing field will be level and they will once again have no trouble making plenty of money. That day will come when all the channels begging for a piece of your TV time have to make their own programs.

Currently, many of the channels ride others' coattails into profitability. The pay cable channels are hitched to the feature film industry, the music channels are tied in with the music industry, and many of the more popular basic cable channels — those that you don't have to pay extra for — actually live off the networks.

That is, their most popular offerings are old network shows sold in syndication. The same is true for most independent stations around the country, which are responsible for more erosion of the network audience than cable. These channels and stations show the programs that the networks paid to develop and produce, and in doing so the independents cut into the networks' profits.

So, once everybody is watching movies on rented videocassettes, and the syndicators start demanding prohibitively big bucks from cable operators who want to put their reruns on nationwide — thus damaging the lucrative market-by-market sales to stations — the cable channels will have to get around to making their own programs.

Then they will be playing the networks' game. After all, the networks have been doing this for years. And, say what you will about them, no one else has as much experience figuring out what the bulk of the American public wants to watch on television.

If you want to get an idea of why the networks are looking forward to the day when the cable channels must match them production for production, check out what the USA Network has Wednesday night. USA, normally a rerun-filled channel, has recently announced a big move into original programming with a bunch of made-for-cable movies. Wednesday's movie,

"Nightlife," is the latest offering.

The cable channels usually have a few more bucks to spend and, for "Nightlife," they were spent getting Maryam d'Abo ("Living Daylights") and Ben Cross ("Chariots of Fire") into the cast. Beyond that, though, "Nightlife" isn't any better than a run-of-the-mill made-for-TV movie on the networks.

Ann Beatts came up with the story idea for this one and co-wrote the script. Beatts used to write for "Saturday Night Live" in its classic years, and this idea would have been a great skit on that show. It gets stretched a bit thin over two hours.

Beatts must have seen the news stories a few years back that reported a theory about a disease that could account for some of the characteristics associated by legend with vampires and werewolves, because the germ of "Nightlife" is what would happen if a medical scientist confronted a vampire.

D'Abo plays Angeliq, a vampire who is disinterred in Mexico, where much of this was filmed, after a peaceful century of slumber. Famished, she goes to a blood bank to make a withdrawal, only to learn that things don't work that way. When she faints, local doctors take over.

One of them, Dr. David Zuckerman, played by stage veteran Keith Szarabyn, is fascinated by the case of a woman who needs blood. Must be a mysterious virus, he surmises, as he studies the white cells and falls in love with the woman.

Meanwhile, Angeliq's long-ago husband, Vlad, hears of her re-emergence and shows up from over the seas to claim his bride. To play Vlad, Cross combed his hair and dressed exactly like L.A. Lakers coach Pat Riley.

The plot is really a B-movie standard — the criminal who wants to go straight, usually because he's fallen in love with a good woman, but his former buddies won't let him. In this case Angeliq is trying to go straight — to take the transfusions instead of bite people — but Vlad keeps pursuing her to get her back in the old gang of blood-suckers.

'Most Dangerous Band' has its own following on late-night TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Nationwide, late at night, about four million people keep company with four men before turning off the television.

Faithful viewers of "Late Night With David Letterman" know these men as "The World's Most Dangerous Band."

"Dave started it," explained the kinetic bass guitarist Will Lee, referring to the origin of the band's name. The sardonic host tossed out a number of nicknames on air — The Party Boys of Rock 'n' Roll, The NBC Orchestra and, repeatedly, The World's Most Dangerous Band. That one stuck.

Rounding out the band are Sid McGinnis on guitar, Anton Fig playing drums, and Paul Shaffer as keyboardist and frontman.

Together and individually they have developed a devoted following, almost cult-like.

"We get quite a lot of mail," said the drummer in the band's dressing room, which is just large enough for a small couch and water cooler.

"Especially this guy," interjected Lee, indicating Fig. "He gets mail, he gets clothes, he gets trailer houses. Some woman sent him a casino one time. He's doing great."

Letterman himself is also a genuine fan: "He loves musicians. And airline pilots. And professional sportsmen," said Fig.

"They're the most entertaining and best part of the show each night," Letterman said in a telephone interview. "The band is always a constant source of energy regardless of whatever else goes tumbling down."

The band is an integral element of the one-hour talk show. Although they play music for a total of four to five minutes, the band creates a mood.

War

Written by supervising producer Patrick S. Duncan, the first two stories are especially fascinating because each shows a single incident of war from a different perspective.

First, in a segment directed by Luis Soto, we see a lonely, downtrodden, fearful outpost of suffering South Vietnamese (Dr. Haing S. Ngor is featured) and U.S. troops (Steve Antin and Wil Gotay) being decimated by a faceless sniper as the Americans await evacuation. Sandy Smolan directs the second segment, in which the outpost targets are the faceless ones, and the Viet Cong sniper (Jade Hong) and his dwindling comrades — an elderly officer (Doan Chau Mau) and his 11-year-old nephew (California Xuan Tran), who is hardly bigger than the rifle he is itching to shoot — are the ones who gain our sympathy as living, breathing victims of this conflict without winners.

"We had no politics until the Americans arrived," the old man, a farmer who understands futility, tells the boy. "They burned our villages in front of our eyes...."

Grimly, but appropriately, this little slice of tragedy ends badly for all involved. The third segment is especially dark, taking place in the American Embassy in Saigon, where the CIA chief (Daniel Benzali), his chief operative (Chris Mulkey) and his secretaries (Sydney Walsh and Elizabeth Ruscio) frantically destroy sensitive documents in preparation for being airlifted home.

NBC's 'FM' in Top 10 of Niensens

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A preview of "FM," NBC's summer series about life in a Washington public radio station, beamed its way to the laugh-packed Top 10 of the Nielsen ratings for the week ended Aug. 20.

It was the second week in a row that NBC and ABC situation comedies dominated the television ratings. NBC's "Cheers" was first, closely followed by ABC's "Roseanne." In all, NBC had six comedies in the Top 10 and ABC had four.

The "FM" preview was Thursday. This week, the show has its premiere in its regular Wednesday time slot.

Once again, CBS was left out to scream "Murder, She Wrote" for "60 Minutes" and wonder "If Tomorrow Comes."

Those were its three highest-rated shows, placing 13th, tying for 15th and placing 20th, respectively. The latter was the concluding part of a two-part miniseries. They were the only CBS shows to make the first 30.

NBC, which has taken all the suspense out of the ratings race, won the week with an average of 12.0 in the A.C. Nielsen Co. survey. ABC and CBS tied at 9.6 each. It was NBC's 61st straight win.

For the season to date, since Sept. 19, 1988, NBC leads with an average of 14.6. ABC is second with 11.7 and CBS is third with 11.8. The rating is the percentage of the estimated 90.4 million homes with television in the United States. The share is the percentage of sets in use.

One note of cheer for the three networks was that more people were watching last week. Their share of the audience was 59 this past week, up from 56 the week before. It's the best three-network share since the week of June 19.

Here are the Top 10: NBC's "Cheers," ABC's "Roseanne," NBC's "The Golden Girls" special, ABC's "The Wonder Years," NBC's "FM" preview, NBC's "A Different World," NBC's "The Cosby Show," ABC's "Who's the Boss?," NBC's "Empty Nest" and ABC's "Anything But Love."

The regular "Golden Girls" tied for 11th and an "Empty Nest" special was 18th. Even a special showing of "Knight & Days," another NBC summer show that has made a dismal showing in the ratings, was 13th.

NBC also previewed a fall Saturday morning show, "Saved by the Bell." The live-action show was 47th.

CBS had the highest-rated evening news show with 8.7. ABC and NBC tied for second at 8.4 each.

The lowest-rated show of the week was ABC's "Trans-Antarctica International Expedition."

TV moviemakers try to avoid charges of greed

By KATHRYN BAKER
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — There are certainly enough crass, venal motivations at the networks to go around. But to hear some of the makers of TV movies talk, there are some loftier goals as well.

Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward are allowing a made-for-TV production for ABC of their book "The Final Days," in hopes of reminding people about the constitutional crisis and the personal drama behind Watergate. So maybe they'll make a few bucks, too.

Prosecutor Joe Hynes, who repudiated a lovely free ticket to Los Angeles to sit in a hot room with a lot of TV critics, is cooperating on NBC's "Howard Beach: Making the Case for Murder." He, hopes it will enlighten the public about the much-publicized case of a vicious New York racial attack.

Elaine Shannon is cooperating with the NBC movie "Drug Wars: The Kiki Camarena Story," based on her book, "Desperados: Latin Drug Lords, U.S. Lawmen, and the War America Can't Win," in hopes it will inspire the public to demand that the government get serious about the drug problem.

ABC is also making a movie about the Challenger disaster, Rock Hudson's battle against AIDS, a Florida child molestation case and the so-called "preppy murder," a New York sex-and-death case that made headlines for months.

"There's no question these ripped-from-the-news stories make it a lot easier for television programmers to go out and market a film. The audience has heard about them."

Greed

said Allen Sabinson, Page's vice president for motion pictures for television and miniseries. "And there's no question we have some predilection to do them and do a lot of them. The question that we're sitting and asking is, is there a reason to do it that goes beyond simply getting a (rating) number?"

Some of the movies are made without the permission of the real-life participants, but are based on material in the public domain, such as news accounts or trial transcripts.

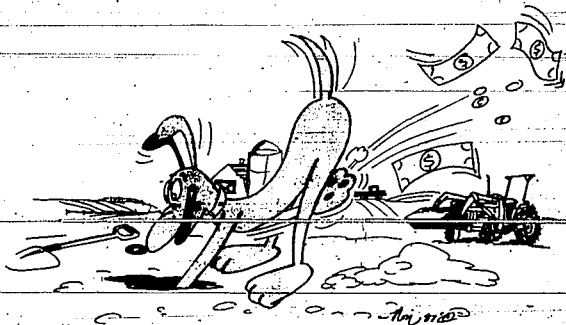

Sabinson said "Unspeakeable Acts," about the molestation of tots at a Florida day-care center, will serve the purpose of teaching the public the warning signs of child abuse. "Challenger," about the space shuttle explosion, aims to educate audiences on the risks of technological achievement. "The Preppy Murder" will try to reveal the anguish of the victim's family, not just because of the crime, but because of the ensuing publicity. Whether the family will welcome even more publicity in the form of the TV movie remains to be seen.

Ken Kaufman, the producer of "Howard Beach," said he hopes the film will present the facts of the case accurately and let the public draw from it what they will.

Daniel J. Travanti portrays Hynes in the movie about the successful prosecution of a group of white youths charged with attacking a group of blacks.

"If it saves the life, or if it saves the trauma of one single family," Hynes said, "it's worth it."
