Volunteer shows his love for the desert

By MICHELLE COLE Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Since Francis Egbert retired eight years ago he's earned several college degrees — of sorts — in archaeology, geology, history, public relations and law enforcement.

His classroom is the Snake River Rim Recreation Area, where Egbert, 69, has so far logged more than 180 hours and 2,000 miles as a Bureau of Land Management volunteer.

"This summer he even earned a diploma — of sorts — when he was among a handful of BLM volunteers across the nation to receive a

"Volunteers For Public Lands Award."

"The whole desert fascinates me," the retired accountant said as he looked out over a seemingly endless stretch of sagebrush on the north

'The whole desert fascinates me,' says Francis Egbert, who keeps watch over BLM lands near the Snake River

If you want to serve

Would you like to become a volunteer?

The Bureau of Land Management and the Forest Service are always on the lookout for people to help manage and preserve public lands.

Contact Marty Sharp at the BLM in Shoshone at 886-2206, or call the Forest Service at 737-3200 and ask for Ed Waldapfel or Joe Barry.

side of the Snake River.

While others might see only dust, Egbert sees ruins left by Oregon-bound pioneers, a cave that once entombed an Indian maiden and rock formations that heaved skyward during ancient volcanic eruptions.

Egbert has made it his mission to show others these desert treasures. And at the same time he makes sure that the land remains free of trash or range fires.

"It's real important to us to have someone on site to manage the area," said Marty Sharp, a BLM official based in Shoshone.

The federal agency provides Egbert with a uniform, a two-way radio and a vehicle for weekend use.

"But that's about all the support we give him," Sharp said.

Egbert gives back his time — at least two weekends every month during the summer — during which he patrols the Snake River Rim

Hurricane Hugo slams across the Caribbean

The Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Hurricane Hugo plowed into the U.S. Virgin Islands on a collision course with Puerto Rico late Sunday after ripping through the northeastern Caribbean with 140 mph winds and leaving at least six people dead.

At least 80 people were injured on the French island of Guadeloupe and 4,000 were left homeless, French officials said.

The region's most powerful storm was in a decade was expected to roll into Puerto Rico early Monday. The government mobilized the National Guard, and residents rushed for last-minute supplies and taped and boarded windows.

At 7 p.m. MDT, Hugo's center was located near latitude 17.2 degrees north and longitude 64.3 west, about 140 miles east-southeast of San Juan, said the National Weather Service in Florida.

The storm slowed slightly from 12 mph to 10 mph, the Weather Service said. The Virgin Islands' population is 106,000, and Puerto Rico has 3.3 million people.

Hurricane-force winds were gusting to 97 mph at St. Croix and to 90 mph on St. Thomas late Sunday. These two islands have most of the Virgin Islands' population.

Jesse Moore, a meteorologist at the National Hurricane Center in Florida, said it was too early to tell if the storm "will even hit the United States. The closest we can forecast it is to be off the southeastern Bahamas by Wednesday. After that it's anybody's guess."

The storm caused widespread damage early Sunday as it passed near Guadeloupe. Damage also was reported on the islands of Martinique, Antigua and Dominica. Guadeloupe state radio said five people were killed on Guadeloupe. In Paris, French officials said up to five people had been killed there. Neither report gave further details.

Gabrielle Carabin, mayor of the village of Le Moule on the northwestern coast of Guadeloupe, said in an interview on the island's Radio Carabe Internationale that two village residents were killed. She did not elaborate.

World Bank: Debtor nations are suffering more than rich

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The pace at which developing countries have been transferring money back to the richer nations — accelerated dramatically last year, hitting a record $50.1 billion, up almost $12 billion from 1987, the World Bank revealed Sunday in its annual report.

The figure is $7 billion higher than the $43 billion preliminary estimate for 1988 published at the end of December in the World Bank's global debt tables. "So the situation in the Third World is getting worse, not better," observed a Bank official.

The figure is technically called the net "negative transfer," representing payments of interest and principal that are greater than net lending.

For the 17 most highly indebted nations, the net outflow rose to $32.8 billion from $21.6 billion in 1987. Of these, Mexico led the list with resource transfers of $9.4 billion, an increase of $6.5 billion over $2.9 billion in 1987. Brazil was next, with payments of $8.2 billion, up from $7.9 billion in 1987.

The report said the underlying deterioration in the poor nations' economic situation underscores the need for the intense application of the new over-all debt strategy emphasizing debt reduction, and reduction of interest payments that are swelling the outflows.

The new strategy, known as the Brady Plan — for its initiator, Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady — has begun to be applied by both the World Bank and International Monetary Fund. But its effects, if any, will not show up in the figures for at least a year or two, according to Bank external affairs director Francisco Aguirre-Sacasa.

'Rat court' stops polluters cold

The Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — It may not be the crime of the century when your neighbor fails to corral his 45 cats or stocks his yard with junked cars, but it's the kind of crime Judge Larry Potter understands.

Potter runs one of at least 12 local courts around the country that focus exclusively on "environmental" cases: violations of sanitation, building or fire codes.

"It's been called the 'rat court,' and a large number of our cases do involve rat infestations," Potter said.

He started his one-day-a-week environmental court in 1982 and spends a good bit of his time now telling other cities how to set up similar operations.

"These matters can be very important even though what we generally think of as environmental problems are toxic wastes," Potter said. "These are cases that affect us all on a day-to-day basis. Cities nationwide are contacting us. It's a concept whose time has come."

Potter, a city judge, uses his court to force reluctant landlords to maintain their property, make would-be trash dumpers shy away from vacant lots and even force lazy homeowners to mow their lawns.

It takes a bit of creative judicial work since municipal courts like Potter's have limited powers. He can put people in jail only in extreme cases and for short periods of time, and the fines he can impose for a single violation are small.

But Potter said he discovered early on that he can string those small fines into a big one if he decides a

Mother Teresa's condition remains serious but stable

The Associated Press

CALCUTTA, India — Mother Teresa developed mild chest pains again Sunday, but doctors treating the Nobel laureate said her overall — condition remained stable.

Doctors also said the 79-year-old Roman Catholic nun has contracted a malaria parasite, but insisted it is not the cause of a recurring fever. A statement Sunday evening from Woodlands Nursing Home, the hospital where Mother Teresa is recovering from a heart attack, said her condition did not change during the day.

"The mother has had mild chest pains but her temperature is showing signs of settling," the statement said. "She slept well in the afternoon after having a light meal." A nun at the Missionaries of Charity, the Calcutta-based order established nearly 40 years ago, said Mother Teresa was "very, very weak."

"It's difficult to say how serious (her condition) is. One day she seems fine and getting better and the next day she's not," the nun said on condition of anonymity.

Doctors had hoped Mother Teresa would recover faster since they diagnosed the cause of an infection they fear posed a new danger. They refused to disclose the nature of the infection.

Mother Teresa still is using a temporary pacemaker attached after she suffered a heart attack on Sept. 8. She first developed chest pains and high fever Thursday.

Andrus set for historic education summit

The Associated Press

BOISE — Gov. Cecil Andrus joins the nation's other chief executives for President Bush's education summit in two weeks, adamant that the federal government back up its rhetoric with cash — just as Idaho has.

"We're making an effort," the Democratic governor said. "But everytime we take two steps forward, they take some federal money away and we lose a step."

Since taking office in 1987, Andrus and the Republican-dominated state Legislature, buttressed by an economic resurgence, have cooperated to increase state aid to public schools by over 25 percent. At the same time the governor said the federal government has cut its support for Idaho education by over 14 percent.

"I would hope that they will give us the opportunity to candidly point out what the federal government is doing when it contributes to the decline in the quality of our schools," he said. "You've got to put your money where your mouth is, and in Idaho we're doing that."

Bush, who said during the campaign that he wanted to be put together the Sept. 27-28 meeting in Charlottesville, Va., to discuss the state of American education and find out what the governors think can be done to improve it. Andrus is skeptical about the value of the two-day session, but he is taking Republican State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans with him.

"These things don't always turn out to be productive; but in case this might be an exception to the rule," he said. "I can't afford to miss it."

Education has been a major issue for the state throughout the decade of the 1980s, and the level of state support has created bitter partisan confrontations that culminated in significant gains for Democrats during the 1988 election.

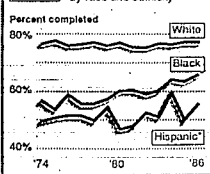

In the three budgets he has presented since taking office, Andrus has called for substantial increases in state support, and Republican legislative leaders responded two out of three times by allocating slightly more than the governor proposed. That third time — in 1988 — Republican leaders held the line on education aid and paid for it in the Bush to speak in Helena, Mont.

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Come rain or shine, President Bush plans to issue a centennial speech today in front of the banner-bedecked Montana Capitol... The president apparently has a policy that he will spend in the rain, or just about anything else...

On Sunday afternoon, a driving rain pelted the Capitol lawn for several hours as a handful of workers put the finishing touches on preparations for the president... Metal detectors were shrouded in plastic, and a few workers huddled under trees and the 10-foot-high platform constructed for the national media covering the president.

Scattered showers and temperatures in the high 50s were predicted for Monday, with a 50 percent chance of rain. Bush is scheduled to speak at 1:25 p.m. 'We'll just ignore it,' centennial official Brian Patrick said of the rain. 'We're prepared.' Ellingson worried that the rainy weather might cut into the expected crowd of 15,000, but said at least 6,000 school children were attending, rain or no rain.

The crowd will gather on the northwest lawn of the Capitol to listen to a 10-minute speech by the president who is visiting Montana to take part in its year-long centennial celebration.

He'll also plant a centennial tree before retiring inside where he's scheduled to address a meeting of legislators at 2 p.m. in the Montana House chambers. The president will depart at 2:45 p.m. for Spokane, Wash., after spending less than two hours in Helena.

A musical lineup that includes high school bands, a children's choir, fiddlers' group and singer-songwriter Rob Quist will entertain the crowd for about two hours before Bush's arrival.

The Dillon Junior Fiddlers, who earlier this year performed at Montana's centennial picnic in New York's Central Park, plan to give Bush a personal invitation to fish in Beaverhead County's rivers, centennial officials said.

The sprawling setup on the Capitol lawn Sunday offered a stark reminder of how television coverage has come to dominate presidential appearances.

Directly in front of the president's podium is the 10-foot-long, 50-foot-long, triple-tiered platform constructed especially for the national media. Audience members stuck behind it will have their view of Bush obscured, if not blocked entirely.

'We had no control over that, absolutely no control,' Ellingson said. 'The White House (press office) had very stringent requirements. We are pleased that at least you can see length it.' 'The upside of this is that it does give our state and our centennial worldwide exposure,' he continued. 'This is a great opportunity for us.'

Montana's state Capitol, decked with red-white-and-blue bunting and banners, provides a backdrop for Bush as he speaks. The Capitol will be shut down for 4 1/2 hours for security reasons during Bush's visit.

Portable bathrooms dotted the Capitol lawn and a nearby vacant lot Sunday, and an orange fence with six gates surrounded the crowd area. State legislators will enjoy a good view from a cordoned section just off the president's podium, and the lawn between Bush and the media platform is largely reserved for schoolchildren.

'It's a historic event,' Patrick said. 'They'll (the children) remember this as long as they live.'

Tennessee Program, said Potter's was one of the first two or three municipal courts in the country to put all environmental cases before the same judge.

'There are now at least a dozen and there may be 18 environmental courts or environmental dockets across the country,' said Ms. Beatty, also the state representative for Keep America Beautiful Inc., a national environmental-quality group.

Setting up an environmental court saves money, increases efficiency and helps assure that cases involving sewer-leaks or fire hazards are given adequate attention, she said.

'If I were a judge and I had somebody in front of me for rape or burglary and the next case was somebody with litter in his yard, which am I going to be concerned with?' Ms. Beatty said.

And city inspectors who look for fire, housing or sanitation code violations are more vigorous when they know there is a judge who will hear their cases, she said.

'In the old days,' she said, 'they used the courts as a bluff.' Since the Memphis court began its environmental docket, city inspectors have attended annual seminars on how to present their arguments to a judge, Potter said.

And his Friday afternoon sessions, he said, often attract groups of spectators — from citizens' organizations interested in neighborhood preservation.

'They don't always win but they like to see that something is being done,' he said. 'They felt for years that nothing was being done.'

'War, Remembrance' tops Emmys

LARRY DRAKE Wins 2nd Emmy in a row

LARRY DRAKE Wins 2nd Emmy in a row considered it 'truly an honor to play the man I consider a saint.' 'Joe vs. Wade' also was a co-winner as outstanding dramatic comedy special, sharing the Emmy with 'Day One', an account of the development of the first atomic bomb.

'Murphy Brown', a hard-driving TV reporter who can't get a handle on her personal life, on CBS' 'Murphy Brown'. The best actor in a comedy series went to Richard Mulligan, who plays a pediatrician trying to cope with the two unmarried daughters after the deaths of his wife in NBC's 'Empty Nest.'

Colleen Dewhurst won her second Emmy in two nights for a supporting performance and British actor Derek Jacobi was selected outstanding supporting actor in a miniseries or special.

'The television academy governor's special award went to the late Lucille Ball. Her frequent co-star Bob Hope entered to a standing ovation and introduced a string of film clips from Miss Ball's career, which included the television shows 'I Love Lucy,' 'The Lucy Show,' and 'Here Today.'

'Cheers' won best comedy series, and shy bartender Woody Harrelson and brassy barmaid Rhea Perlman, both laboring at the television tavern, won best supporting players in a comedy series.

Larry Drake, who portrays the mentally retarded office worker Benny Stulwicz of 'L.A. Law,' and Melanie Mayron, the unmarried man-hunter in 'thirtysomething,' won Emmys for best supporting actor and actress in a drama series.

For Drake it was the second Emmy in a row, and he remarked, 'I'd like to thank everyone I thanked last year.' He added the names of his agents, 'Because I promised them.' 'Oh, God, I hope my dress stays up,' remarked Miss Mayron.

If, for example, city inspectors show that the toilet in a rental apartment has been broken for a month, Potter can charge the landlord $50 for each day it did not work and each day it remains broken.

Then you really do get their attention," he said.

Potter lacks the authority to order a landlord to fix such a toilet but when he offers a dramatic cut in the cumulative fine, repairs are generally made in short order.

All environmental cases filed with the city court go before Potter and he deals each Friday afternoon with 10 to 15 cases.

'I'll become a BLM volunteer.' 'I was concerned about the area, a lot of trash was being dumped there,' Egbert said.

He called BLM offices to talk about the dumping problems a year and a half ago, but was told the federal agency lacked the manpower to monitor the illegal dumping.

'So I offered my help,' Egbert said. 'I asked them if there was anything I could do.'

While he is now vigilant for trash dumpers and knows all the hot-ten party spots, Egbert's role on the range encompasses much more than that.

'If I find anybody up on the desert I go visit them,' Egbert said.

'Most tourists want to see where Evel Knievel attempted his famous - but unsuccessful - jump over the river. Egbert is happy to show them the way.'

'He also happily to spend an entire day, if a tourist wants to, showing off his desert.'

'Most people look at the land and really don't know what they're looking at,' Egbert said.

Along with an area Eagle Scout, Egbert was instrumental in placing white markers along the Oregon Trail route north of the river this summer.

'And it's as happy to find a lava rock rubbed smooth by hundreds of pioneer wagons as he would be to find a chunk of gold.'

'It amazes me that most of the way the trail is just like this,' he said.

Egbert said he never gets lonely during his solo desert patrols. 'How could I? There's so much to see and do.'

'There's also much more to see and learn. One of these days, he said, he'll pack a lunch and head off to the Devil's Corral in search of Indian writings.'

'I love this old desert,' he repeated with a tug on his BLM hat. 'It's fascinating.'

Indian descendants show resilience

New Mexico's governor vows to block wastes from WIPP

NEW TOWN, N.D. (AP) — Long before Lewis and Clark, Marilyn Cross Hudson's ancestors had explored every bend of the upper Missouri and hunted buffalo on every broad plain.

They were prosperous enough to serve corn, pumpkins, wheat, beans, sunflowers, and even tobacco to French Canadian pathfinder Pierre La Verendrye when he "discovered" them in the 1740s in what is now western North Dakota.

Mrs. Hudson, 63, is a member of the Three Affiliated Tribes composed of Mandan, Hidatsa and Arikara — Indians, and — is an administrator with the Bureau of Indian Affairs on the Fort Berthold Reservation in New Town.

Her people were the native farmers who sheltered Lewis and Clark in 1804-05, and played host to every notable white man who traveled up the Missouri River in the two centuries prior to North Dakota's statehood.

In return, their visitors nearly wiped out the hospitable Indians with smallpox.

They lost their aboriginal existence to homesteaders and government agents who remanded them to a reservation.

Noting missionary attempts to convert the Indians to Christianity, artist George Catlin wrote of his native friends: "I love a people who keep the commandments without ever having read them or heard them preached from the pulpit."

Theodore Roosevelt fled to North Dakota following the deaths of his mother and wife within hours of each other on Feb. 14, 1884.

"If it had not been for what I learned during the years spent in North Dakota," he later wrote, "I would never have been President of the United States."

Among Roosevelt's teachers was the Hidatsa Chief Old Dog, remembered by his people as a great hunter and wise medicine man.

"Old Dog died two years before I was born, but I still remember his earth house being there," said his granddaughter, Phyllis Old Dog

Cross, Marilyn's sister. "My father kept his medicine bundle in the earth house and we kids were warned not to play there because it was too powerful a place," said Ms. Cross, 59.

Now head of an eight-state mental health program for the Indian Health Service Hospital in Rapid City, S.D., Ms. Cross is one of 10 children of Old Dog's son, Martin, who changed his name to Cross when he served in the Army in World War II. Their mother was born in 1906 to Norwegian immigrants.

Of the nine living Cross children, nearly all are college graduates, many with master's degrees, and work with American Indians from Alaska to the Great Plains.

But when they return to the reservation for a reunion, there is no longer an earth house, or even their town of Elbowoods, is come home to.

Everything from their childhood, everything on the riverbank from the time of Lewis and Clark, was flooded by the backwaters of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' Garrison Dam in the early 1950s. The Missouri River was dammed to prevent downstream flooding.

Panel hears Priest Lake subdivision plan

PRIEST LAKE (AP) — Spokane developer Don Barbieri will have to wait 11 more days before learning whether Bonner County will approve his plans to develop 1,666 acres on the east shore of Priest Lake, North Idaho's cleanest and wildest low country lake.

More than 160 people crowded into the Priest Lake Elementary School gymnasium for a public hearing Saturday on Barbieri's proposal.

The Bonner County Planning and Zoning Commission listened to testimony from more than 30 people, received petitions signed by about 1,300 people and heard a presentation on Barbieri's long-range plans.

The commission then adjourned until Sept. 28 without making a decision.

Dye said federal efforts to ban the probe have cost him and his wife, Marilyn, thousands of dollars in attorney's fees, lost accounts and trips to Washington to defend their product. "It wiped us out," Dye said.

The electric probe, sold under the trade name "Worm Gett'r", consists of a steel rod attached to a hardwood handle and an electrical cord attached to the probe.

Raymond Cross, 40, the youngest of Martin's children, is trying to get Congress to right the wrongs done to the 2,200 members of his tribe.

"We are still owed a hospital, irrigation water, cheaper electricity, and the resources to rebuild a cohesive social and economic tribe," said Cross, a graduate of Stanford University with a Yale law degree who recently completed a year at the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University, studying economics.

"Indian people themselves must be the source for their own internal change, not the so-called do-gooders from outside," he said.

Added Phyllis Cross, who was honored by Ladies Home Journal in 1983 as the outstanding woman in South Dakota:

"Now the hardest stereotype I run into is a backward putdown from a strange group of white liberals who want to keep Indians on the reservation as quaint and cute. They think that unless you're poor, uneducated, — rundown, alcoholic Indian you're not a real Indian."

"No one in my family fits that profile. All of us are trying to be of service to our people," said Ms. Cross. "I think Old Dog and my grandmother Many Dances would be proud of us."

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — If the Department of Energy wants to find temporary storage space for its radioactive waste, it won't be in New Mexico, says Gov. Garrey Carruthers.

"There's no way I'll accept any other waste than what is already in this state for temporary storage," said Carruthers.

Carruthers, responding to reports that the Energy Department will soon unveil a blueprint for handling radioactive waste until the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant opens, said he thinks Energy Secretary James Watkins is under a lot of pressure from the governors of Colorado and Idaho to relieve their states of plutonium-contaminated waste.

The blueprint, said a DOE spokeswoman in Washington, includes a list of potential sites for temporary storage of radioactive wastes in the event of an extended delay in the opening of WIPP, east of Carlsbad.

Watkins had told Carruthers, Colorado Gov. Roy Romer and Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus in Carlsbad in June that he would not set a new target date because so many timetables had been broken, Carruthers said.

"I'm astounded that after telling us in New Mexico that he was not going to deal with timetables, he's dealing with a timetable," said Carruthers.

Romer told reporters Wednesday that Watkins told him to expect a blueprint for opening WIPP.

Carruthers is going to Washington next week and said he hopes to talk with Watkins. DOE press officer Kathy Kaliniak said Thursday that the blueprint will be sent to interested parties, including governors and congressmen, in about three weeks. The blueprint will list a number of possible temporary storage sites, including DOE and Department of Defense installations.

Watkins then plans to meet with state officials by November and, she said, "the schedule for opening of WIPP will be part of those discussions."

Watkins announced in late June that he had set aside the October date for opening of WIPP. The DOE's original target date was October 1988.

Watkins said he would not be held to previous DOE timetables to open the waste repository and that he wanted a new base of scientific data in order to evaluate WIPP and determine a realistic opening date. A blue ribbon committee is scheduled to submit its recommendations to Watkins in October.

"The DOE is looking at February as the time when something will have to be decided," Ms. Kaliniak said Thursday.

Opening of WIPP is a key to resolving the problem of where to store nuclear waste generated at the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant near Denver.

Romer has decided the maximum capacity at Rocky Flats is 1,601 cubic yards, which the facility cannot exceed.

Opinion

Ranchers deserve a share of public lands, not all of them

In response to Gary Glenn, the so-called executive vice president of the Idaho Cattle Association, and his guest opinion article of Aug. 11 which concerned livestock grazing on public lands, I wish to refute some of those claims of being a little bit on the shady side of the truth.

Glenn's claim that the livestock industry is the number one cash commodity industry in Idaho isn't entirely true, much less accurate. According to all the records, agriculture — as a whole — number one — and the beef industry that grazes on public rangelands is only part of that industry.

Moreover, the concern of the Wilderness Society, Idaho Sportsmen's Coalition Inc., Committee for Idaho's High Desert and various sportsmen's organizations is not about dairy cows, cattle raised on private lands or the small amount of their raised backyards for the family's winter meat supply.

The main concern of these organizations is the overgrazing and overlocking of public lands, something Mr. Glenn tries to avoid at all costs!

Furthermore, Glenn intentionally left readers under the impression that Idaho's cattle graze on all 70 percent of the public lands. Idaho ranks 24th in the United States for cattle and calf production, which is only 1.5 percent of U.S. production. Cattle in Idaho graze on 2.1 million acres of private land and about 9.3 million acres of public rangelands.

Mr. Glenn states that most Idahoans wish less of Idaho's public lands were owned and controlled by the bureaucrats in Washington, which isn't true by a long shot!

If Glenn's claim is true, then I ask him outright, why was the so-called Sagebrush Rebellion in the early 1980s overwhelmingly defeated by the citizens of Idaho and still gets the dander up when it's even mentioned by some politician?

Perhaps Mr. Glenn would like to see Idaho and its public lands be taken over by ranchers and private parties so they could do like they do in Texas — where to hunt or trespass you pay a fee to the landowner.

Apparently, that is what Glenn and some of his malcontents would like to see when they suggest too much land in Idaho is government owned — and they have some of our stump-jumping politicians believing it, too.

Additionally, Glenn made a claim that it cost ranchers $17.64 per animal unit month to graze on public lands. Should that be the case, I doubt it very much if there is a livestock operator in Idaho that could make it and afford it, especially on some of the sparse desert and arid lands that compose most of Idaho's BLM lands.

That's a bunch of malarkey that ranchers pay for all the things he has listed.

The BLM and Forest Service furnish all material: build roads, dig wells and furnish seeds; and the rancher, according to his lease, furnishes the labor to install the material.

And in some instances, just like happened in the South Hills in May 1989, the labor to improve a riparian area was furnished free by volunteer workers who think more about the lands than just cattle.

In a recent bulletin furnished by the U.S.

Department of Agriculture's economist Marc Carey, his studies show that in 1983 it cost the Forest Service (FS) and Bureau of Land Management (BLM) an average of $2.87 per animal unit (AUM) to administer the grazing program, which is $1.47 more than they charged.

That year, the combined BLM and FS deficit from the grazing program was $41-million. So, at $1.86 per AUM, the livestock operators are certainly getting a bargain from our public lands.

Which is why these various organizations are condemning some operators on how they abuse the public lands and should polish up their acts.

Air Force failed to do its homework on the bombing range

Idaho politicians are running for cover as the Air Force's plan for a super-bombing range in the desert has run into a firestorm of public flak.

What started out to be good economic news for the state — the transfer of a fighter wing to the Mountain Home Air Force Base, under the nationwide base-closing program — may be a mixed blessing.

Larry Swisher

outspokenly critical of the Air Force. "They're asking for way too much and the impact of it would be unacceptable," he said.

Craig said the rest of the congressional delegation shares his concerns and could block the expansion. "It better be done right, or it won't get by us," he said, adding he supports some expansion.

Congress and the Defense Department already have approved the transfer of 94 F-4 Phantom jets from a California's George air base in 1991.

But further congressional approval would be needed to enlarge the bombing range, which might be used for training by forces from all over, including the stealth bomber.

However, the separate actions became linked in a single environmental impact study and that created suspicion the Air Force was trying to railroad Idahoans.

Craig has asked the Air Force to split the issues — to a prevent a lawsuit over the bombing range expansion from delaying the fighter-wing transfer.

While some political leaders and Main Street businessmen have taken issue with critics of the plan, it's obvious the Air Force bungled and must return to the drawing board.

In a state where the use of federal lands is an overriding economic, political and environmental issue, it failed to even consult beforehand any of the cattle and sheep ranchers, hunters and environmentalists concerned.

In a June 23 letter to Air Force Secretary Donald Rice, Sen. Jim McClure, R-Idaho, wrote, "It is clear to me that you have no real idea of the sensitivity of (your) proposal."

As evidence of the lack of homework, planners located one of two places where planes would drop live, instead of dummy, bombs on the spring pasture of a former president of the National Cattlemen's Association, Bill Swan. Bureau of Land Management Director Delos "Cy" Jamison, whose agency manages the land, flew over the area with Craig and also raised objections.

Idaho politicians have been slow to recognize the seriousness of the public opposition.

Pro-defense Sen. Steve Symms last month angered ranchers by seeming to lump them together with peace groups and environmentalists who oppose building Department of Energy nuclear projects in the state.

In a speech in Idaho, Symms defended the bombing-range expansion, saying although it might cause some disruption of grazing and recreation, the first obligation of the county was national defense.

Gov. Cecil Andrus boldly seized on the issue of sonic booms, saying he hadn't known until recently that planes would fly at supersonic speeds, and demanded such flights be ruled out.

The political storm is similar to the one that erupted over Watt's public land sales fiasco in the early 1980s.

At first endorsed by Sagebrush Rebellion supporters, the program was scrapped after it became clear it would result in the privatization of millions of acres of "unnecessary" federal forest and range land that was used by Western sportsmen and ranchers.

The Air Force last week finally seemed to have gotten the message, as more than 1,000 people showed up at recent hearings on the plan.

"The Air Force is concerned about the environment out there," said Capt. Sam Grizzle, a spokesman here. "It was never our intention to leave people out" of the planning.

Intentionally or not, the fly boys missed their target by a mile.

Unveiled in June, months after the transfer was announced, the proposal to enlarge the 102,000-acre Saylor Creek bombing range to 1.5 million acres would transform scenic wilderness and prized rangeland into a battle zone.

The prospect of dummy bombs and even live air to ground missiles creating a moosepile of killing wildlife and of supersonic booms possibly shattering the eggs of hawks and falcons, doesn't sit well with many Idahoans.

But the political tide really turned against the plan because of the wrath of ranching families who have used the federal grazing lands for more than 100 years. In addition, about 10,000 acres of private land would be bought.

Unlike environmentalists, these staunch supporters of the Sagebrush Rebellion and former Interior Secretary James Watt's anti-environment policies have influence with Idaho's conservative Republican members of Congress.

Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, a former rancher who took up their cause, has been the most concerned.

But further congressional approval would be needed to enlarge the bombing range, which might be used for training by forces from all over, including the stealth bomber.

However, the separate actions became linked in a single environmental impact study and that created suspicion the Air Force was trying to railroad Idahoans.

We should take a closer look at current immigration laws

In 1986, Congress passed the Immigration Reform and Control Act dealing with illegal immigration. Now it is closely examining legal immigration.

The ongoing debate has raised fundamental questions of our fairness, national interests and family values.

- Should job skills replace close family ties as the priority in our immigration policy?
- How should we develop a method to allow more Europeans, referred to

as our "seed" immigrants, to come to the United States?

Our system of giving preference to close relatives of U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents has worked well, both for these immigrant families and for the country as a whole. It would not be in our national interest or consistent with our family values to alter severely our system of family preference immigration.

Immigration policies based on family unification have not always been fairly applied. The passage of the Chinese Exclusion Act of 1882 and subsequent laws directed at diverse Asian groups halted Asian immigration to the United States until 1965.

With the increasing internationalization of the American economy, such diversity in population can only benefit the United States. Our addition of language abilities, skills and cultural understanding can be an invaluable contribution in global trade and commerce.

In July, the Senate passed a bill that takes some positive steps to address needed changes in U.S. immigration policies. Yet the measure would also have a negative impact for immigration based on family unification. For example, it does not provide for remedies to the already severe backlogs and waiting lists that potential immigrants seeking family unification must face. It also contains a provision setting new per-country ceilings for family preference immigration.

Over the next several years, this would reduce by about half the number of family-based visas for certain Asian and Latin American countries. That would mean, for example, that waiting times could double — from 10 years to 20 years — for brothers and sisters of U.S. citizens who have applied for legal entry.

The House has the opportunity to recognize the importance of family-based immigration and to address the important issues not adequately dealt with in the Senate bill. Its deliberations should be guided by the importance of the family in American values, the anchor for a system that has benefited all of our national interests.

Drugs, racing, Shoshone prompt comments by readers

Candidates must oppose drugs

It was with interest that I noticed the announcement by two of our city councilmen of their intent to run for re-election. Curiously enough, these announcements have been made at a time when President Bush is announcing a war on drugs.

It is perhaps an excellent time to pursue a war on drugs and crime at the local level — electing some city officials who are willing to show concern for something besides golf.

At this time, I would like to issue a challenge to any candidates for city council. Any individual who is an announced candidate for city council must declare his opposition to the drug and crime problems presently plaguing our community.

He or she must be willing to denounce the present policies of indifference, threats and harassment of citizens who expect assistance in combatting the drug problem.

Refusal to address these problems can be viewed as opposition to efforts to help with the problem. Just as our "planning department" and "preventing the problems don't exist is not good enough."

It is not enough to attack out-of-town narcotics traffickers. The problem has to be eliminated with local distributors as well. If council candidates are not willing to take an active role in combatting the drug problems, then it is time for the citizens of Twin Falls to say, "You're not going to represent me."

I strongly urge any concerned citizen who would like to become actively involved in the war on drugs to run for city council.

Drugs are really symptoms

Come one! Come all! I can see it all now. We'll get all our elected officials off to the Magic Valley Mall to pee in bottles for us. Given our obsession with economics and our hysteria over drugs, it would be the perfect event.

We could set it up just after the first of the year when business is slow and the marketing executives are hungry for something to celebrate — or should I say something to attract shoppers?

We could have the MC be Kent Just (who I'm convinced would be kept for Burnum & Binley because anyone who finds nuclear weapons production and tricycles attached to hot-air balloons exciting must have some circus connections).

Maybe we could even get the governor to come down and do his part. And Symms probably thinks of freedom when he hears people tinkling in bottles.

I don't care if Andrus and the whole Idaho

Legislature take drug tests. It wouldn't affect my opinion of them — or stop drug abuse.

The righteous anti-drug folks would do better to look at why our society has spawned so many individuals who can find no hope and have so little respect for themselves that they destroy themselves with excessive amounts of food, alcohol, caffeine, nicotine, sugar, marijuana, cocaine and heroin.

Our children need to be taught to say "yes" to life, to appreciate the blessedness of their little beings. They need to be taught that life is more than getting all you can get; be it money, things or drugs. Why not ban television because it pumps children and adults full of desires that can never be fulfilled — more, more, more?

Perhaps our energies would be better spent solving our very real problems and providing a hopeful future, not just distorted economic figures from the government.

We're burning ourselves out with consumption, pollution and stress; and whether we consciously acknowledge it or not, we all know it. It is no wonder so many say, "What the heck, it's all over anyway."

There's no doubt that we need to address the current state of affairs and do something about it, but let's not give up what little freedom we have left.

As for me, the sound of tinkling in bottles sounds like oppression. So, step right up — you and your drug may be next.

Racing is for the real fans

I'd like to give a little response to those few who don't know the Magic Valley Speedway's policy on rain-outs: First and foremost, it's you — the fan — that makes the Speedway what it is. So the policy is geared for you.

If you can't make it back the following Saturday, then ask someone who knows, not someone who is guessing, and you'll find the owners are very liberal about the use of your rain-out ticket.

It's good till you use it; yes, I asked for you. If you were from out of town and not coming back, they'll work with you to your satisfaction.

The "U-R-Stuck" policy doesn't exist, except in some minds. The only thing I've ever been stuck with is some big bills for mechanical work or parts. But thank God those were minimal, thanks to all the wonderful sponsors we have here in Buhl.

These people come from miles away, and even other states, to put on a show for you, and you think they should pay for the privilege?

Come on, let's get real here. I'd be very flattered if I thought the fans really came out to see the street stock drivers only. But alas, that's not true either. I think the people come out to watch all the classes race.

As for racing on two of the only three nights off during the season, you bet we did; because we wanted to. We were asked, then a vote was taken by us; and it was unanimous that yes, we wanted to race.

My view is "love it or leave it," we all have the choice.

Bennett tour sparks political jockeying

WASHINGTON (AP) — William Bennett's visit to Philadelphia this week kicks off a new phase of the Bush administration's war on drugs after an intense behind-the-scenes struggle by state politicians seeking more federal money and a share of the spotlight.

WILLIAM BENNETT

Pennsylvania lawmakers want the extra federal money that would come with designation of the city as a "high-intensity drug trafficking area," but they also worry about the effect such a declaration would have on the city's image.

At the same time, the state's two Republican senators are offering different advice to Bennett: Arlen Specter wants more emphasis on crime prevention while John Heinz puts the focus on punishment of offenders.

To qualify for the extra money under the 1988 federal drug law, an area must be a major drug distribution center that already has committed itself to solving the problem.

"It's difficult for the city, which I think is making heroic efforts to get not only drug abuse, but drug dealing, under control," Heinz said. "At the same time, we have to demonstrate to Bill Bennett not only that the city is making a 'good effort,' but that the problems are growing and that they are potentially worse in Philadelphia than in many other American cities."

Bennett, director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy, plans to visit Philadelphia on Monday, the New York City area Tuesday and Cleveland on Wednesday.

Details of his schedule were not immediately released for security reasons. The announcement of the trip set off immediate jockeying by Heinz, Specter and Philadelphia officials to define Bennett's itinerary.

Bennett is making the trip to promote the Bush administration's $7.9 billion plan calling for a crackdown on all levels of drug trafficking.

Law defines military role in drug battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — The idea of deploying America's military forces on the nation's streets to battle the scourge of drugs may be fodder for headlines and congressional demands, but Pentagon officials point out there are strict legal limitations on such a thing.

"It just makes hair stand on end here," said one senior Pentagon official. "Our primary mission is to prepare for any possible military threat... not to be a national police force... There's been a lot of very loose talk about expanding our role."

To counter assumptions that U.S. troops could be used to patrol the streets and nab drug dealers, Pentagon officials point to a little-known law that prevents active duty troops from acting as law enforcement officers within the nation's borders.

It is known as the Posse Comitatus Act and was passed by Congress in 1878 as a post-Civil War reaction to the use of federal troops in enforcing the Reconstruction Acts.

Because it deals with the enforcement of domestic law, the law does not affect U.S. forces overseas.

David Super, a Defense Department spokesman, said that while it may be enticing to think of the nation's military might as a machine to be turned against drug king pins, the ramifications have to be taken into account.

"It's really a rather profound idea when you think about it," he said. "Posse Comitatus is a reflection on our free society. There are a lot of countries where the military is used to police the streets, but they aren't much fun to live in."

According to a common legal definition, the term "posse comitatus" means the power of the county and refers to the authority of the sheriff to call to his aid the male population above the age of 15 to in capturing escaped felons and keeping the peace.

In effect, the law is interpreted to mean that military forces — the Army, Air Force, Navy and Marines and their respective reserves — may be used in a support role for the battle against drugs, such as aiding in surveillance or interdiction efforts.

But they are prevented from adopting the role of law enforcement officials, tasks assigned to the local police or other officials, such as the Drug Enforcement Agency.

For example, the military may provide boats to help interdict drug traffickers, or radar surveillance to spot a drug-transporting plane, but it is up to civilian law enforcement officials to seize evidence, make arrests, and testify in court.

"The law does not affect a state's National Guard when units are under the control of its governor, but the laws in each state vary," said Robert Dunlap, a spokesman for the National Guard Bureau.

The National Guard Bureau is the Defense Department agency that serves as a coordinating body for the Guard forces in the various states. It is National Guard Bureau policy that its members "not be tasked with enforcing civil law, officials point out.

"It's important, because we just don't have the training — we're not trained to do police work," Dunlap said.

Dunlap said, Guard units have been involved in helping local officials support drug interdiction efforts since 1977, and since 1983 has been involved on the federal level.

In fact, the role of the Guard has been expanded in 21 states to allow them to aid Customs officials in cargo inspections for illicit drugs, Super said.

"Guardsmen are happy to be involved... Guardsmen are all volunteers and part of the community they serve. But our proper role is in support of civilian law enforcement officials," Dunlap said.

Congress has been pressing the Pentagon to become more active on the home front in the war against drugs, despite concerns among the military brass about draining resources from their traditional defense mission.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney is slated to outline an expanded military role this week. The secretary's plan is not expected to call for an enforcement role for the military, but rather emphasize increased interdiction and radar surveillance methods, among other things.

Bush wants Americans to raise savings rate

The Baltimore Sun

WASHINGTON — The administration, establishing a dominant theme for the rest of its term, will be focusing on ways to encourage Americans to raise their extremely low savings rate, and to encourage businesses to concentrate on productivity and growth rather than quick profits, according to high-level officials.

Pressure by President Bush on Congress to reduce the capital gains tax rate is considered the opening round of a long-range effort, spearheaded by the Department of the Treasury, aimed at increasing the incentives to make long-term economic plans.

The first full-fledged budget that Bush sends to Congress early next year is to incorporate many of the new ideas being fashioned by Secretary of the Treasury Nicholas F. Brady and budget director Richard G. Darman, officials said.

Among the proposals being considered to spur savings will be one to revive, at least in modified form, the individual retirement accounts that were severely limited by the 1986 tax overhaul law.

To minimize the impact on the budget deficit, the plan being reviewed would not allow taxpayers to deduct contributions to IRAs. Before the 1986 tax law, taxpayers could deduct their IRA contributions. Currently, restrictions on IRAs prevent most people from deducting contributions to the accounts. Under the Treasury plan being studied more taxpayers could have IRAs but they would be allowed only to avoid taxes on the interest on the contributions.

'Top Gun' lobbying pays off

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's decision earlier this year to cancel the Navy's F-14D jet fighter, that achieved fame in the movie "Top Gun," touched off a major campaign in Congress to save the carrier aircraft.

The lobbying paid off last month when the House approved a bill that restored $1 billion for 24 planes over the next two years.

The Senate, in its defense bill, had endorsed the president's plan to kill the Tomcat fighter.

As members of the House and Senate get down to fashioning a final version of the defense bill during the coming week, congressional backers of the F-14D are taking heart in the woe of another aircraft — the Advanced Tactical Fighter.

The two prototypes of the plane — one for the Navy and one for the Air Force — will not share a common design, forcing the Defense Department to pay for two separate fighter plane programs, according to recent reports.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said at a hearing earlier this month that development of the next-generation aircraft, which is intended to succeed the Air Force's F-15 and the Navy's F-14D, has slipped six months.

SYDNEY OMARR

ASTROLOGICAL FORECASTS

IF SEPTEMBER IS YOUR BIRTHDAY many people insist you are too much of a puzzle. While analytical, you are also a person of action. Reading and writing, acting positions, will not do. You must get going to the core, to the heart of matters. You want to know why. Much of this surfaces before this month is finished. You'll make fresh starts in new direction in October. Arrog. Libra persons play important roles in your life. Surgery would prove you are rated as an excellent lover! Family reunion in November.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): By mid-afternoon, you receive "good news" concerning finances. Recent investment pays dividends. You'll be in a mood to be independent, pioneering, confident. You'll also be contemplating night of love.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Moon in your sign, plus other factors, points to improved dating, family get-together, improved relations with older woman, possibly mother or aunt. Focus on reunion, public appearances, and popularity.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone tries to "close in" on you. You'll be ready, you'll turn apparent defeat into victory. Emphasis on love and laughter, versatility, long-distance call. Legal trouble is amicably settled.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You might be saying, "I don't know what I did differently but my wishes are being fulfilled!" Emphasis on improved money situation, shilly to win friends in "high places." Scenario is reported.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Recent communication to one in authority brings favorable response. Scenario highlights writing, travel, excitement of discovery! Member of opposite sex wants to flirt. Sagittarian figures prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What had been "bothering you" at home will be removed. Yes, you achieve victory, but don't gloat. Means be diplomatic. Lunar aspect accents curiosity, communication, travel arrangements. Taurus involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You'll be involved in "delicate situation" concerning money belonging to another. Focus on balance, agreement, legal title. Individual behind scenes wants to dictate terms. Refuse to be intimidated.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Legal pressures exist. Emphasis on contracts, public relations, marriage. Lawsuit will be settled, you'll be in "cautious seat" as result. Scenario features physical attraction, intensified love relationship.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You might be declaring, "The line is drawn. I won't go any further!" Focus on universal appeal, creative imagery, basic chores involving employment. Longstanding task will be completed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Cycle excellent for speculation, especially if you stick with number 1. Emphasis on feelings, sensuality, personal magnetism. Adds up to an abundance of sex appeal. Success indicated with new project.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Dream involving mother, could prove prophetic. Focus on property, durable goods, negotiations involving sale or purchase of home. Family dispute settled while "breaking bread." Another Aquarian in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If too lenient, situation could "get out of hand." Means know when to draw line; Sagittarian message provides hint. Restless relative is sincere but could be misinformed.

Shoes of dog hide
Q. You hear oldtimers refer to their feet as their "dogs." Why?
A. That goes all the way back to colonial times. When a dog died, the barn-keeper skinned it, and the shearer or then known as the cordwainer cut shoes of the hide. Dog-shoe loyalists claimed those were the most comfortable kind.

To get some idea of President James Madison's height, look at actor Michael J. Fox - both 5-foot-4.

Former kidnap victim dies in traffic accident

MERCED, Calif. (AP) — Steven Stayner, kidnapped at the age of 7 and forced to live as the sexually abused foster son of his abductor until he escaped seven years later, has been killed in a hit-and-run traffic accident.

"He sure led a rough life," California Highway Patrol Sgt. Bill Balestra said of Stayner, who was returned to his parents less than 10 years ago and was the subject of an NBC miniseries in May, titled "I Know My First Name is Steven."

Balestra said Stayner, 24, married and the father of two children, was killed Saturday when a car pulled into the path of his motorcycle on a highway between Merced and Atwater, some 70 miles east of San Francisco.

Balestra said officers believe they knew the identity of the driver of the car. He said felony hit-run charges were planned.

The officer said the car had pulled out of a private driveway and crossed in front of Stayner, who then ran into it.

Balestra said Stayner, who the CHP reported had been riding without a helmet, "suffered massive head injuries" and was pronounced dead on arrival at Merced Community Medical Center.

In 1972, when he was 7, Stayner was grabbed off-a-street in Merced while walking home from school. Seven years later, his abductor snatched another boy, 8-year-old Timmy White, 16 days later, on March 1, 1980. Stayner walked into a Ukiah police station with Timmy, saying he didn't want the younger boy subjected to the same abuse he experienced.

Kenneth Parnell, arrested while working as a hotel clerk in Ukiah, 150 miles from Merced, was convicted of two counts of kidnapping. He was sentenced to eight years and eight months in prison in February 1982 after a sensational 18-day trial in Hayward.

Parnell served five years in prison, then was paroled for another two years. Released from parole, Parnell, now 57, is believed living somewhere in northern California.

White's sex charges were filed against Parnell. Stayner testified at Parnell's trial that he was ordered to call Parnell "dad" during his captivity and that he was regularly sexually abused. He said they lived in California motels.

Construction causes Waikiki Beach to sink; small buildings are tilted

HONOLULU (AP) — A six-block area of Waikiki Beach is sinking as splitting sidewalks, tilting small buildings and making streets uneven — but a building contractor has taken responsibility.

In order to excavate a block-sized area in the heart of the tourist mecca to a depth of 30 feet as part of a $60 million commercial project, Pacific Construction Co. has been pumping up to 7,000 gallons of groundwater out-of-the-hole every minute since May.

Officials of Pacific Construction accepted responsibility and have had crews scrambling around to fill and patch the newest pavement cracks — or gaps between sidewalks — sagging walls and buildings as soon as they are reported.

Engineers and consultants who planned the project and city officials who approved the plans assumed there would be some soil settlement, said the city's chief building inspector, Sadao Kaneshiro.

The water table in the area is just 6 feet below the surface.

"Whenever you take out groundwater, the surrounding areas will be affected," Kaneshiro said. "They knew that, but it's a matter of degree. They didn't know how much." Pumping — and, officials hope, the sinking — will stop when construction reaches the fourth-level in about six weeks, said Trude China, Pacific Construction's marketing manager.

New Miss America holds 1st news conference; sings rap

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Dobbie Turner, the new Miss America, is a born-again Christian who sang a religious rap song at her first public appearance, promising in rhyming patter to "sing his song ... everywhere I go."

Miss Turner, a veterinary student from Missouri, was crowned late Saturday as Miss America, besting runner-up Miss Maryland, Virginia Cha, 25, of Frederick, in the 68th edition of the popular pageant.

On a dare, the 23-year-old who became only the third black woman to wear the crown started clapping her hands and sharing the same song she gave the other 50 contestants backstage Saturday night before the pageant started.

"Well, I love the Lord ... with all I know ... going to sing his song ... everywhere I go. Going to sing about the love ... sing about the faith ... sing about seeing him face to face," Miss Turner sang, continuing on with seven more verses.

Even pageant officials clapped along, including 91-year-old Adrian Phillips, a retired pageant director who traditionally escorts the new Miss America to her first news conference.

Phillips has seen new Miss Americas giggle in response to reporters' questions. He has seen some winners touch on controversial subjects.

But a rap song is a first.

"This new Miss America is exactly what I anticipated," pageant director Leonard Horn said afterward.

Miss Turner now puts her education on hold for a year to serve as Miss America 1990. She said she will travel around the country "motivating the youth of this country to excellence."

"My mom taught us how to do things not because we're female or black or southern, but because we have what's on the inside to do it," she said. "I'd like to inspire young children to dream about being an aeronautical engineer ... and I don't care if you grew up in a

"Be bold enough to overcome the pressure and not try that drug. Be bold enough to stay in school and study. Be bold enough to be an individual and not a part of a group," she said.

Flood of refugees meets resistance

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — East German and Czechoslovak authorities have begun seizing passports to stop the flood of refugees fleeing to the West, East German emigres said Sunday.

Hungary's foreign minister, meanwhile, defended his country's decision to aid the immigrant exodus and said the Warsaw Pact should stick to military defense and not dictate ideology or foreign policy to its members.

In West Germany, officials said they registered 1,400 new East German refugees during the weekend, bringing to more than 16,000 the number of East Germans who have arrived since Hungary threw open its borders to the West one week ago.

Armenians appeal to Kremlin

MOSCOW (AP) — Lawmakers in Armenia, under virtual economic blockade from neighboring Azerbaijan, met in emergency session Sunday to ask the Kremlin for help in restoring deliveries of food and fuel, activists said.

On Saturday, the legislature of Azerbaijan again laid claim to Nagorno-Karabakh, a hilly region mostly populated by Armenians that has been the focus of a bloody territorial conflict between the two Soviet republics for the 18 months.

Speaking by telephone from Yerevan, Armenia's capital, an editor at the official Armenpress-news agency said that during the past 14 days, not a single freight car with cargo has arrived in Armenia over rail routes originating in Azerbaijan.

Peace proposal doesn't stop battles

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem leaders and Lebanon's Christian patriarch voiced support for a new Arab peace plan, but soldiers backing the warring sides continued to battle Sunday as mediators struggled to implement a truce.

Only Christian Gen. Michel Aoun has not commented on the plan, apparently undecided about provisions to halt his weapons supply and its failure to demand a Syrian troop withdrawal.

Police said one person was killed and 14 wounded in night-long artillery clashes in and around Beirut that subsided into intermittent machine-gun exchanges at dawn. That raised the toll to at least 915 killed and 2,699 wounded since the latest fighting erupted March 8.

De Klerk praised for his restraint

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — President-elect F.W. de Klerk has won praise for allowing huge anti-apartheid marches, but political analysts said Sunday the honeymoon will be brief unless he quickly brings reforms.

In a major policy shift, de Klerk said Tuesday that parties will not disrupt peaceful demonstrations, previously banned or forcefully dispersed.

A day later, 20,000 activists in Cape Town staged the country's largest legal demonstration, followed by similar protests Friday in Johannesburg and Pretoria.

"Nice going, F.W. — but what's next?" the Sunday Star of Johannesburg asked in an editorial. "A few protest marches do not alter the fundamental (apartheid) system which governs our lives. . . . The window of opportunity (for reform) is open but it will not remain so for long."

Drug war continues in Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Three bombs exploded Sunday in the drug-infested city of Cali, killing a security guard, and a newspaper that has crusaded against Colombia's cocaine barons said one of its reporters was slain by thugs.

Meanwhile, a top presidential contender reportedly urged that no more drug traffickers be extradited to the United States.

The bombings in Cali occurred shortly after midnight at two banks and a shopping center, said Col. Rojo Julio Navarro, chief of the national police force in Cali.

The city of 1 million people about 185 miles southwest of Bogota is the headquarters for one of Colombia's two cocaine cartels. The other is in the northwest city of Medellin.

Afghan guerrillas threaten the king

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Radical Afghan fundamentalist guerrillas warned Sunday they will assassinate their country's ousted king if he tries to head a postwar government in Kabul.

The threat comes after reports that an envoy of the United States, a major rebel backer, met with the exiled king in Rome.

Expansion may hinge on Idahoans in Congress

By ERIC ANDERSON
States News Service

WASHINGTON — Any legislative proposal to expand the Saylor Creek Bombing Range will likely require the backing of all four members of Idaho's congressional delegation, according to Capitol Hill aides.

Because any bill to enlarge the range is several years and many drafts in the future, it is impossible to know what stand Idaho Reps. Larry Craig and Richard Stallings and Sen. James McClure and Steve Symms will take on such a proposal.

"It is clear that the Air Force will have to convince the delegation of the merits of its finalized plan if the proposal is to have any chance of becoming law.

The Air Force has proposed expanding the bombing range from its current 102,000 acres to 1.5 million acres — a move that would require the transfer of 1.4 million acres of Bureau of Land Management property to the Defense Department.

Since the 1950s, any transfers of more than 5,000 acres of federal land have required congressional approval. That means the Defense Department must draft a bill for the swap, get its approval by both the House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs and the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, and then win support for it from the full Congress.

Committee staffers say that without the support of the Idaho delegation, a land swap bill would be unlikely even to get past either the House or Senate committees.

Jim O'Toole, a Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee staffer, said the committee rarely approves a federal land bill without the concurrence of both of the affected state senators. If the two senators split on the issue, a bill typically will die, he said.

H.D. Palmer, McClure's press secretary, agreed.

"Traditionally, in most public land type issues, the Senate looks to see what the members of the (affected state) delegation think of it," he said.

"As a matter of practice, the 98 other senators look very closely at what the two senators from (the affected state) say and do," said Dave Pearson, Symms' spokesman. "Anything out there will have to meet the approval of Sen. McClure and Sen. Symms or it won't happen."

And Idaho's hand in this deal would be particularly strong because of McClure's status as ranking minority member of the Energy and Natural Resources Committee. He wields considerable influence over the fate of bills that pass through the committee.

O'Toole said McClure's support would "certainly aid" any bill to expand the bombing range, while his opposition would create a considerable obstacle.

Craig, as senior member of the House Committee on Insular Affairs, could also have a strong effect on the proposal.

"Congressman Craig has a high profile in the House Interior Committee," notes the Midvale Republican's spokesman, David Fish. "Therefore, when something of this magnitude affecting his state comes before it, other members will listen to his wishes."

But any congressional proposal is still a long way off. Gary Vest, assistant deputy secretary of the Air Force for environmental issues, has told Symms that a bill for the land swap is two years and two environmental impact statements away. In a letter received by members of the delegation Friday, Vest said a final proposal was "several" years off.

Police close I-84 after 10-vehicle accident

SWEETZER — Eastbound and westbound lanes of I-84 were closed Sunday afternoon following a 10-vehicle accident.

Idaho State Police said the accident occurred at approximately 2:36 p.m. on the eastbound side of the interstate, 8 miles north of the Utah state line.

Three semi-trucks, one motor-home and six passenger cars were involved in the pile-up. Three people were hospitalized. There were no fatalities, police said.

Names of the injured were unavailable Sunday evening.

Westbound lanes were closed from 2:36 until 3:45. Eastbound lanes stayed closed from 2:36 until 6:45, police said.

Idaho State Police believe the accident was caused by blowing dust that created near-zero visibility.

Commissioners must appoint treasurer by early November

SHOSHONE — The county commissioners have until early November to appoint a new county treasurer to replace Treasurer Cathy Laudert, who is leaving her post Oct. 6 to get married and move with her husband to California.

Anyone interested should contact Mervyn Ridinger of Dietrich at 544-2097. Ridinger is chairman of the Republican Central Committee, which has until late October to recommend to the commissioners three candidates to the office. The commissioners then have 15 days to appoint someone to fill the remainder of Laudert's term, which expires November 1990.

The Republican committee makes the recommendation because Laudert was elected as a Republican.

County hospital public meeting tonight at CSI

TWIN FALLS — The county hospital is holding a public meeting tonight at 7:30 in Aspen Building room 106 at the College of Southern Idaho.

The Magic Valley Regional Medical Center is updating its long-range growth plans and is seeking community input.

Senators urge high school juniors to apply for program

WASHINGTON — Idaho senators Jim McClure and Steve Symms are urging Idaho high school juniors to apply for a scholarship to spend next summer studying in Japan.

The scholarship stipend is part of the 1990 U.S. Senate Scholarship Program. The exchange program allows two high school students from each state to spend the summer studying in Japan and living with a host family. Travel expenses are included in the scholarship.

All applications must be postmarked on or before Oct. 28. Write Youth for Understanding International Exchange, 3501 Newark St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20018, or call toll-free (800) 424-3691.

CSI Board of Trustees meet tonight in President's Room

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho is holding its monthly Board of Trustees meeting tonight.

Items to be discussed include bids on letting two parking lots, full enactment of the Code for New Directions and the 1990-91 budget.

The meeting will be in the CSI President's Board Room at 6:30.

Gem Community Program picks 2 Magic Valley cities

GOODING — Two Magic Valley cities and one county have been selected for the 1989-90 Idaho Gem Community Program.

Gooding, Glenn Ferry and Camas County have been selected by the Idaho Department of Commerce. The communities will receive training and technical assistance in developing a local economic development program. When that is completed, the communities will be certified as Gem Communities — and receive road signs and inclusion in promotions, along with $1,000 grants.

Forest Service will close 12 roads in Fairfield District

FAIRFIELD — The Forest Service will close 12 roads to motorized vehicles in the Fairfield Ranger District Wednesday.

The road closures help prevent overhunting of elk and deer in easily accessible areas of the forest, and helps keep the big game distributed throughout the area, providing a better quality hunt.

Roads will be closed in the same areas as last year: Horwich, Grindstone, Lower Elk, Smokey Miller, Boardman, Skunk, Abbot, Leg Chute, Abbot Gulch, Elk, Paradise, Marsh Creeks, and Warbis.

Research on elk and timber harvesting has shown that increased road access has a significant impact in elk herds. The Forest Service has been cooperating with the Idaho Department of Fish and Game to improve elk habitat.

A free map showing all closures is available at any Sawtooth National Forest office.

Shoshone Ice Caves: Ice block in an arid desert

The Associated Press

SHOSHONE — The dry wind rustles through the sagebrush as the sun bakes the lava fields along State Highway 75.

If not for the signs, few motorists traveling this high desert road would ever believe there was a nearby natural refrigerator underground, waiting to turn beads of perspiration into frozen droplets.

It's no mirage.

One of nature's curiosities, the Shoshone Ice Caves have long commanded attention: First from early Indians and settlers who sought refuge from the heat, and today, from tourists who come to eye the phenomenon that Sunset Magazine has called one of the major tourist attractions in the Northwest.

"It's definitely a lot more elaborate than other caves I have seen," says Jim Farmer, a vacationer from Oklahoma.

Caves open until end of month

The ice caves are open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. through the end of September.

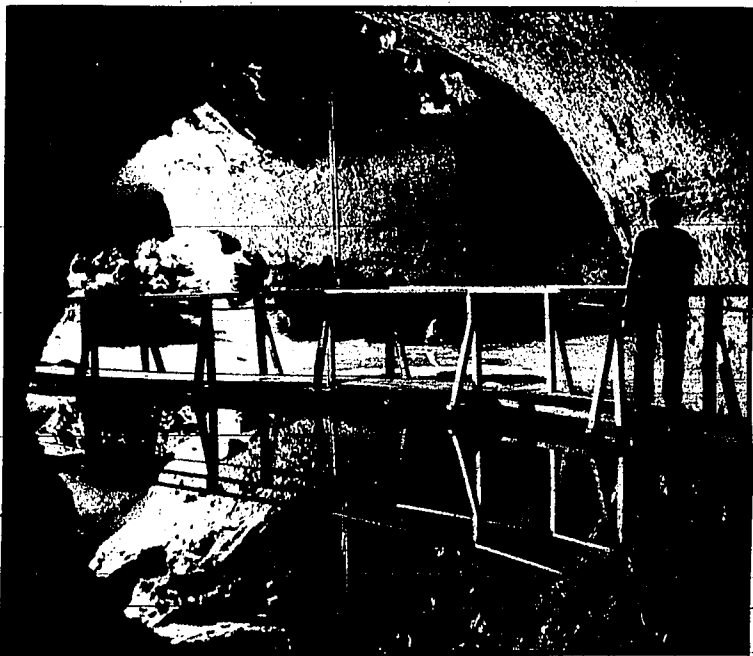

A natural freezer creates the ice block in an arid desert. It stretches through a cave that is 90 feet underground and three blocks long. Even when the temperatures rises above 100 degrees outside, it never inches above freezing in the lava cave.

Early Indians, puzzled by the chamber full of ice, called it the "cave of mystery" and performed ceremonies there on their annual migrations to the Camas Prairie.

While men first discovered it in 1897 when a 10-year-old farm boy stumbled across the 35,000-year-old lava tube, which was completely plugged to the ceiling with ice.

In no time, the cave became area kids' favorite birthday party site because they could

Gooding County landfill can still be used — for now

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — For the short-term, at least, the Gooding landfill can continue to be used, following test results showing the dump is not polluting Hagerman's drinking water.

But county officials say the facility, along with those in Lincoln and Jerome counties, may have to be closed in favor of a regional dump when new federal standards are imposed in 1991.

The new requirements, including plastic liners and monitoring systems, will be too expensive for one county to handle, officials say.

"We don't think there's any way in the world that we can comply with those regulations on our own," Lincoln County Commissioner Buck Ward said.

At the request of Gooding County Commissioner Bob Tupper, water flowing below the county landfill near Tuttle was tested recently by the South Central Health Department.

"I wanted to check and see if any chemicals, bacteria or pesticides were getting into it (Hagerman's water supply) from the landfill," Tupper said. "All those tests were good. There were no chemicals in it at all. It's high-quality water."

Tupper said he had concerns because the Gooding landfill has shallow soil and similar landfills nationwide have caused serious water pollution problems.

But the results give no indication of long-term effects. "Leaching is a real slow process," said Terry Schultz, environmental health director for the South Central Health District.

Schultz said five wells around the Gooding landfill were tested and state officials will continue to collect samples of this water as part of a 30-year monitoring program.

"It's going to need to be ongoing for the tests to be meaningful," he said.

A good landfill should have soil about 60 feet deep, Schultz said, but soil depth on the northside of the river is fairly shallow, ranging from 10 to 25 feet and much less in some places.

Other factors, such as the amount of rainfall and the type of soil determine the life span of a landfill, Schultz said. He declined to predict how much longer the Gooding landfill can safely be used, saying, "It's too early to tell on that particular site."

New federal disposal regulations, expected in July of 1991, will require deep soil, plastic liners in the bottoms and sides of pits, 6 inches of dirt added daily and a final cover of 2 feet of soil, Commissioner Ward said.

Also, he said, collection systems for leachates and for methane gas will be required. Monitoring requirements will include continuous sampling, testing and reporting work.

"And if any pollution is found, then four times the tests will have to be done," Ward said. "Then the county would have to clean it up... So the potential of expense is fabulous."

Ward, who termed the regulations as excessive, predicted that all the new regulations are going to be so expensive that one small county will not be able to meet the requirements. He said the Lincoln commissioners have met once with Gooding commissioners to talk about landfills, but no decisions or plans were made.

Tupper predicted Gooding, Lincoln and Jerome counties will have a single regional landfill within the next 14 months. "We don't know for sure yet where it will be," he said. "We're looking for an area."

Jerome Commissioner Carl Montgomery said the concept of a regional dump is good, although he and the other Jerome officials have not discussed the issue yet. "Sooner or later, it's going to come to something like that," he said.

Soil in Jerome County is deeper than in Gooding or Lincoln counties, Tupper said.

Physically, with its adequate soil depths, Jerome County will be able to meet the new federal standards, Montgomery said. "But financially, it's going to put a real strain on us," he said. "I think working together (with the other counties) is great."

A good recycling program could help cover the costs, he added.

Kids absorb more about sexuality if taught earlier

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Sixth-grade boys learn more from sexuality courses than do their high school counterparts.

But sixth-graders are not as ready as high schoolers to discuss the more complex issues of relationships and male roles, results of a recent study in the Twin Falls School District show.

"The earlier we teach it, the more they absorb," said Kim Kvale, a public health nurse with the South Central District Health Department.

Kvale presented the study to educators recently at a Northwest Institute for Community Health Educators seminar in Washington state.

The study also will be used by a state committee as it rewrites Idaho's health curriculum guidelines for kindergarten through sixth-graders.

The program's three, one-hour classes included information on reproductive anatomy

Trail enthusiasts came from every corner of the nation

After two years of work, it is all over. More than 400 historic trail enthusiasts visited Idaho the second week of August, making it the largest convention the Oregon California Trails Association has ever had.

Members came from every corner of the nation and even crossed the ocean to visit, learn about and enjoy our rich store of trail remnants and historic sites that document the great westward migration of the 19th Century.

More than 8,000 miles were logged during the week by buses transporting the partici-

2 fires blazing in Sawtooth National Forest Caves

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Two forest fires were started by people Saturday afternoon in the Sawtooth National Forest.

The fires, one at Hart Lake in the Fairfield Ranger District and the other in the Dry Flat Spring area in the South Hills, while relatively small, have Forest Service officials concerned that hunters and campers are not taking enough care.

"Both these fires were caused by people," said Ed Waldapfel, a Forest Service information officer in Twin Falls. "The point is the fire danger is still very high. We're asking people to be careful."

The Hart Lake fire near Iron Mountain Lookout was sighted at 3:10 p.m. Saturday. When eight smoke jumpers from McCall parachuted in, the fire was only two acres in size.

However 50 mile-per-hour winds soon whipped it into a 20-acre fire with sparks flying as far as a quarter mile and starting new fires.

The steep, wooded terrain is making containment difficult, Waldapfel said. He could not estimate when the fire would be controlled.

The other fire, at the top of Walstrom Hollow in the South Hills, also started Saturday afternoon, and burned 20 acres before being controlled Sunday afternoon.

Six firefighter, three fire engines, one helicopter and one large tanker responded to the blaze.

The Forest Service is investigating the specific causes of both fires.

crank homemade ice cream.

Nearly townspeople flocked to the cave to chip away ice cubes, which they wrapped in gunny sacks and hauled away in freight wagons insulated with sawdust.

The town of Shoshone, which supported 22 saloons, was the only place with a mill to make a thirsty farmer had access to an ice cold beer.

But the ice cave's popularity nearly led to its demise when a group of men, intent on making an easier access to the cave, dynamited a rock overhanging at its entrance.

It was like leaving the freezer door open. The blast destroyed the air flow that allowed the underground ice to grow even in the driest years.

The cave's chance of becoming a national park melted as the ice receded.

Waldapfel further damaged it. The new tunnel sucked hot air into the cave and the ice completely disappeared. "It would have been history if it had not been for a Godding dentist."

Not realizing that the ice cave had been destroyed through man's ignorance, E.S. Robinson encouraged his son Russell in 1954 to examine the feasibility of the cave as a tourist attraction.

They were dismayed with what they found. The cave was filled with broken bottles and cans. What little ice was left was covered with mud.

Following the lead of photographs taken by pioneers, Russell Robinson hauled in chunks of lava to close the man-made entrance in the back and rebuild a permanent wall across the face of the cave.

But the ice still failed to form. In 1960, at the suggestion of a physician who specialized in air pressure in wind tunnels, Russell Robinson began experimenting with the size of the cave entrance trying to restore original air flow. Within a year, the ice had expanded to 1,000 feet in length.

Today, the ice is 30 feet deep in places and could easily grow to fill the cave if allowed to. To prevent it from doing so, Fred Cheslik, a nephew of Russell Robinson, leaves the refrigerator door open and pumps out up to 2,000 gallons of water a week during mid-summer.

"Twenty thousand people each year take the 40-minute tour along wooden planks through the cave, which resembles a cavernous concert hall."

Olympic figure skater Sonja Henie once posed for publicity photos skating inside the cave.

For most, though, it's more of a visceral experience. As tour guides like Andy Oleske point out such features as the skeleton of a grizzly bear believed to have become lost and froze to death.

Although he has led tours through the caves for several years, Oleske has never lost his awe for it.

"Leading tours through this place is my golf game, so to speak," said the Hagerman ad salesman who often leads tours on his lunch break. "This place is amazing. It's mind-boggling to think how it can be 100 degrees outside and you can be freezing in here."

I just want to look at it and wonder, 'How does it do it?'" physiology, decision-making skills and male roles and stereotypes.

Study

Using a pre-test and a post-test, the pilot program's purpose was to discover which grade level benefited the most from the course. Sixth-graders scored the poorest on the pre-test, but they improved the most when the post-test was compared with the pre-test, Kvale said.

High schoolers, meanwhile, improved the least.

A total of 60 sixth graders, 60 eighth-graders and 60 high school students (mostly 10th- and 11th-graders) chosen randomly were studied for the pilot project, which was funded by a Family Planning National Priority grant.

All three age groups responded positively to the study, Kvale said. And all ages expressed support for introducing more male topics in sex education classes.

Kvale agrees that male sexuality should be a larger component in sexuality classes that have traditionally focused more on the female.

"They loved the class," Kvale said. "I made me realize what a disservice has been done over the years. Men have feelings too, but when we look at the classes, we rarely look at men."

Kvale is also an advocate of introducing sexuality in kindergarten.

"They need a basic shirt," she said. "We wouldn't be talking about contraceptives or AIDS."

Discussions about feelings and "where babies come from" might be a start. Teachers could build on the courses each year, Kvale said, instead of all of a sudden hitting the kids with sex education in the fifth grade.

In the lower grades, for instance, when anatomy is taught the reproductive system is not included.

"Instead of doing the whole body, they leave a large void in the pelvic area," Kvale said. "I think, personally, that by omitting the reproductive system, the kids will think it's something to be ashamed of."

"We have such problems with sexual abuse, teen pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases, that perhaps it would be better to be more open," she continued.

AIDS, for instance, should be discussed, she said. But you can't discuss AIDS without discussing sexuality, she said.

In Twin Falls schools, only fifth- and sixth-graders receive sexually education — a one-hour lesson given by the school nurse. Eighth-graders spend two to three weeks on human sexuality, and a semester health class is re-association members; Idaho State Parks and Recreation employees and Bureau of Land Management people — both active and retired — all combined forces to provide the expertise and care needed as hosts, tour guides and troubleshooters for the week. Many participants commended and complemented the various agencies for the way they worked together.

The pre-convention tour to the California Trail in the City of Rocks was one of the highlights of the week. Nearly 100 out-of-state visitors spent two nights in Twin Falls and caught the pre-convention tour bus there. Four other bus loads made the round trip from Boise for that tour, more than 300 miles. There were several highlights to the day; unfortunately, space only allowed a report on two or three.

The first opportunity to see the new markers on the trails came on the pre-convention trip. The project earned Wally Meyers of the Boise BLM office an award from the association. Two other awards were brought home to the Magic Valley. Mary and Herb Allen of Jerome and Leona Ambrose of Wendell were given the Rancher of the Year award for the State of Idaho for "outstanding service in the maintenance and preservation of the Oregon Trail."

The nice surprise to see the new directional signs from the Greenwood exit on Interstate 84 to the Milner Bicentennial Interpretive Center. The Burley District of the Bureau of Land Management installed the signs and has also placed excellent interpretive signs along the trail at the center.

The City of Rocks was spectacular and thanks to the combined efforts of the National Parks Service and the Idaho State Parks, the graffiti painted by juveniles on some of the most historic rocks the week before had been removed. Historic Granite Pass was a picture-perfect spectacle that will be long remembered. Clouds had moved across the valley, except that the pass was bathed in sunlight with a thin veil of rain in front of it. No stage effect could have achieved the same effect.

Then, as we left Oakley headed for the Creek Rock store and the Stricker Home, a severe rain and wind storm was our companion. The guides told me later that the buses were absolutely quiet, for many had never seen such a storm and couldn't believe it could rain so hard and yet blow so much dust at the same time.

The visit to Stricker was memorable. Those who had been there before were delighted with the work that has been done. The others were impressed by the site and its historic significance. Two markers were dedicated during the visit. One marker is the only association marker in the State of Idaho and the other lovely marker, donated by Bob Harney, commemorates Herman and Lucy Stricker.

From beginning to end, the visit to the Magic Valley was a success. Space has allowed me to tell you of only part of the day's highlights. There was also the Perrine Memorial Bridge, our irrigated farms, the great view of the Milner Dam, the meals that earned raves, the tasty lunch at the City of Rocks that was served so quickly, the fish, the potatoes and the beef. One association member who brings her fiddle to every convention was delighted to have the opportunity to play with the Old Time Fiddlers.

If you haven't visited the Milner Bicentennial Center, the City of Rocks, the Stricker Home and Rock Creek store this summer, do so before winter. You owe it to yourself to see what made such an impression on our visitors last month.

Virginia Ricketts' column on Magic Valley history appears every other Monday.

Packard, Duncan rally in best ball tourney

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Jim Packard and Gary Duncan smoked the front nine with a five-under par 31 during the rain and cold Sunday to rally for the championship in the Canyon Springs two-man best ball tournament.

Packard and Duncan ended the day with a six-under 66 and a two-day total of 134 that allowed them to topple first-day leading Kevin Packard and Carl Slavov by three strokes. Kade Wilson, Buhl, and Justin Astorquia, Twin Falls, were third.

In the first flight, Bob Skredervu and Dick Rees returned to the cashier's window with a 16-under 56 that took them to a two-day total of 114. A four-way jam developed for second, six shots away, among Sean Brown and Ed McLinn, Buhl, Durbin and Milo Pearson, Bruce Draper and Sam Yoshida, and Jason Hunkeler and Preston Hoffer.

Second flight champions were Jim Brennan and Dean Cross on 11 with Leroy Floener and Carroll Dowd and Doug Schwarz and Larry Huetting at 118. Gary Lee and Larry Bowles were fourth at 119. Sharing fifth at 120 were Barney Johnson and J.B. Schell, Stan Myers and Rick Bloxham and Jim Bull and Don Stevens.

CSI volleyball team takes consolation round at tourney

DAVIS, Calif. — College of Southern Idaho's volleyball team improved along with the tournament Saturday and wound up with consolation honors in the 27-team Cabrillo College invitational volleyball tournament.

The Eagles, going 1-1-1 in pod play Friday, came up with three straight wins Saturday, beating Community College of San Francisco 15-3, 15-13 in the consolation finals after beating Green River 15-6, 15-9 and West Valley 15-7, 15-8 in earlier bracket play.

In Friday's play, CSI split with Delta 11-15, 17-15 and then beat Laney 15-3, 15-2 before dropping a 2-15, 11-15 decision to DeAnza.

Ryan gets last laugh in Eagles' victory

By DAVID GINSBURG
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After they had rallied from a 20-0 deficit for a most improbable victory over the Redskins, the Eagles had the last laugh on all those Washington fans who jeered Philadelphia coach Buddy Ryan.

“Bud-dee! Bud-dee!” the players yelled in the dressing room after their 42-7 comeback victory over the Redskins on Sunday. The Eagles were imitating the mocking cheer that Washington supporters had shouted at each of Ryan's three losses at RPK Stadium.

“I heard them in the first quarter, so I was glad to get one under the belt,” Ryan said. “Maybe they'll cut that out, daw.”

Said linebacker Al Harris: “It's a situation where what goes around, comes around.”

The Philadelphia comeback was fueled by the last of six Washington turnovers and directed by Randall Cunningham, who completed 34 of 46 passes for 447 yards and five touchdowns, including three to Keith Jackson. Afterward, the Philadelphia quarterback announced that his multi-million dollar contract has just been extended.

“They gave me a five-year extension in my contract. Maybe that's the reason I played well today,” Cunningham said.

The Eagles' second touchdown in the final 1:48, a 4-yard pass from Cunningham to Jackson, enabled them to beat the Redskins in Washington for the first time since 1985.

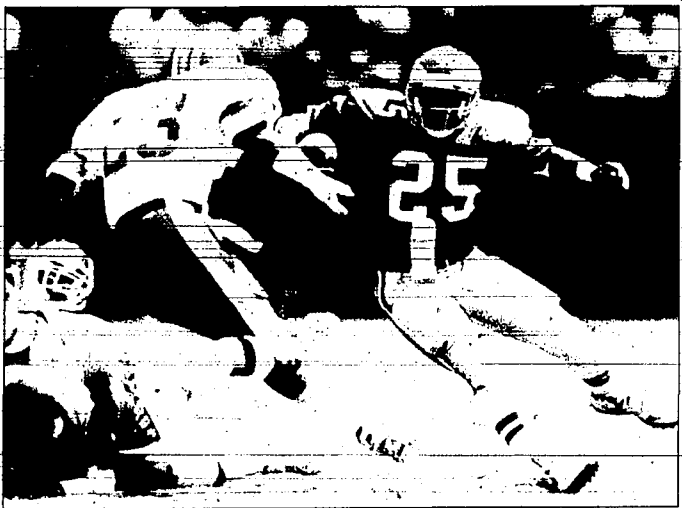

“I think this has been our biggest game because we were down and we won here in Washington,” Cunningham said. “We were down, we were out, but we didn't lose our heads.”

And Washington kept losing the football. Philadelphia safety Wes Hopkins ran 77 yards with a lateral from Harris, setting up Cunningham's final touchdown pass to Jackson with 52 seconds left.

The fumble occurred with the Redskins running out the clock. Gerald Riggs, who had a career-high 22 rushing yards, lost the ball and Harris recovered. As he was being tackled, Harris flipped the ball to Hopkins, who took it down the left sideline all the way to the Redskins' 40.

“They told me to give up the football, so I did,” said Harris, who later got a ball of his own as one of 45 Eagles to earn a game ball.

— Hopkins, who had a 42-yard fumble return against the Philadelphia's Anthony Toney (25) applies the brakes as Washington's Todd Bowles moves in Redskins in the Eagles' last win in Washington, said. “You always have to be ready for plays like that. I just grabbed it, and I knew we needed to get yards.”

From there, Cunningham gave Philadelphia its first lead of the day by hitting a wide-open Jackson in the middle of the end zone.

Washington, which scored on its first two offensive plays, led 27-7 early in the second quarter, but committed turnovers on three of its next five possessions to spark Philadelphia's rally.

Cunningham's 5-yard scoring pass to Chris Carter pulled the Eagles within 39-28 with 12:39 left. Moments later, following a Washington fumble, Philadelphia had a chance to take the lead, but Luis Zendejas was wide left on a 33-yard field goal attempt.

Washington scored what appeared to be the game-clinching touchdown on a 43-yard pass from Mark Rypien to Art Monk with 3:06 left.

Majkowski shocks Saints

By RICK GANO
The Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis. — They booed Don Majkowski in the first half on Sunday when the Green Bay Packers fell behind the New Orleans Saints 24-7. It stung. If that was a new experience for the third-year quarterback, so was the second half when he matched a club record with 18 straight completions and led the Packers to a 35-24 victory.

“The receivers all wanted the ball and I just said, ‘Get open and they did,’” said Majkowski, who threw three interceptions last week and another in Sunday's first half.

“When they were booing me, I kind of said, ‘I think that was the first time I've ever been booed.’ I told the guys in the huddle,

“They should never boo me. I knew I could come back and change things around.”

And Majowski did, wrapping up his best pro performance — 25 of 32 for 354 yards — by moving the Packers 80 yards in 65 seconds and hitting Sterling Sharpe with a 3-yard touchdown pass with 1:26 to go to make them 1-1.

— Sharpe's catch and Chris Jacke's extra point made it 35-34 but the big man in the drive was 5-foot-11, 165-pound rookie Jeff Query, who caught four passes, including three straight for 49 yards.

With the Packers facing a fourth-and-17 at their own 49 on the final drive, Query caught a controversial 23-yard sideline pass from Majkowski. Was he in bounds or not? One official said he was out, another

Rams spoil Dickerson's homecoming

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Eric Dickerson and Jim Everett both insisted that Dickerson's homecoming was no different than any other game.

“It wasn't for Dickerson, who got the 116 yards that is his norm.”

“But it sure was for Everett and Henry Ellard, whose record-setting aerial performance led the Los Angeles Rams to a 31-17 victory over Dickerson and the Indianapolis Colts.

Everett, described as “an organization pimp,” by Dickerson after his trade to the Colts on Oct. 31, 1987, completed 28 of 35 for 383 yards and three touchdowns, hitting a team-record 14 in a row at one point. Ellard caught 12 for 230 yards and all three scores — 29 and 17 yards in the first half and five yards in the third quarter that put the Rams ahead to stay.

Even Dickerson acknowledged that he was upstaged.

“I told the guys before the game that Henry Ellard was a great receiver,” said Dickerson, who carried 21 times. “I know because I practiced with him and played with him. To me he's the best in the NFL.”

Bears romp Vikings with late surge

By JOE MOOSHIL
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — In just 7 minutes and 69 seconds, Sunday's game turned into an impressive victory for the Chicago Bears and an embarrassing loss for the Minnesota Vikings.

Neal Anderson scored three touchdowns, two in Chicago's fourth-quarter explosion of four touchdowns, as the Bears romped over the Vikings 38-7.

The Bears were nursing a 10-7 lead going into the final period when Shaun Gayle intercepted a pass by Wade Wilson that triggered the quick, unexpected rout.

Wilson was intercepted three times in the fourth quarter and all three led to touchdowns.

“I wasn't very sharp throwing the ball,” Wilson said. “At first I thought I was throwing all right and then I went downhill.”

Vikings defensive lineman Henry Thomas put it simply: “We laid an egg in the fourth quarter, it was embarrassing.”

“They beat us in every respect of the game,” Minnesota coach Jerry Burns added. “I don't like the word humiliating, but it was embarrassing playing on national TV and not playing as well as we are capable.”

The Bears (2-0) were on a mission because they had lost to the Vikings (1-1) last year but they weren't gloating. Far from it.

“We did some good things, we did some poor things,” Bears coach Mike Ditka said. “We caught them at the right time. We got handled pretty good last year. We wanted to be respectable. Today was our day, they'll have their day.”

The teams traded touchdowns in the first half. Mike Tomczak put the Bears ahead with a 24-yard touchdown pass to Anderson and Wilson countered with a 4-yard touchdown pass to Jim Gustafson.

Late in the half, the Bears capitalized on a shanked punt by Bucky Scribner that traveled 49 yards and took a 10:17 halftime lead on a 40-yard field goal by Kevin Butler.

Bret Saberhagen beat Baltimore for his 20th win

KC's Saberhagen becomes AL's 1st 20-game winner this season

The Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Bret Saberhagen toasted his 20th victory with a few bottles of champagne in the clubhouse, but Manager John Wathan thinks that is not celebration enough for the Kansas City ace.

“He should be the frontrunner for the Cy Young. There's no doubt about it,” Wathan said after Saberhagen became the first 20-game winner in the American League, holding the Baltimore Orioles to one hit over seven innings in the Royals' 7-0 victory Sunday.

“I'm glad he's the first to win 20 games because I don't think people have talked about him enough this year.... He could have had 23 or 24 (victories) by now with a little luck early in the season. He was awesome, outstanding.”

George Brett drove in four runs with three hits as the

American League

Royals ended a three-game losing streak and pulled to within 2½ games of Oakland in the American League West. The Orioles fell 2½ games behind Toronto in the AL East.

“We came into Baltimore playing well and then lost two games and were 3½ games out,” Saberhagen said. “I think there was more pressure on me to pick the team up than to win 20.”

When asked about the Cy Young Award, Saberhagen said, “That's for the writers to decide. I'm not going to say if I'm the frontrunner or (Oakland's Dave) Stewart is.”

Stewart goes for his third straight 20-victory season on Monday night. He has never won the Cy Young.

Langston breaks out of pitching slump by 3-hitting Mets

The Associated Press

MONTREAL — Going into Sunday's game against the New York Mets, Mark Langston was 1-4 with a 5.17 earned-run average in his previous five starts.

Montreal didn't acquire him from Seattle to pitch like that. The Expos got him to pitch like he did on Sunday, when his three-hitter led the Expos past the Mets 4-0.

“Basically, I went with my harder stuff, more than the ### National League

offspeed, and I had good concentration,” Langston said.

Langston, 12-7, struck out nine and walked five in his fourth National League shutout and sixth complete game. He allowed one runner past second. Gregg Jefferies walked in the sixth, stole second and took third on catcher Nelson Santovenia's error. But Tim Lincecum struck out to end the inning. Langston has been criticized in Montreal for not pitching well under pressure.

“I don't pay attention to what's written,” he said. “I just go out and do the best I can but unfortunately that hasn't been good enough until today.”

Larry Beardsley, the Expos pitching coach, has heard the criticism. He has isn't think it's valid. Especially since

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"Reason deceives us more often than does nature." - Vauvenargues.

"He told me the Brooklyn Bridge in the way he played the heart suit," confessed an unhappy East-Aces...

West led his fourth-best heart, and dummy's heart queen went up to hold the trick. According to East, South's play of the queen seemed to be a "trick never play" to win a trick...

After winning his club queen, East should shift to his low diamonds. South wins his club cheaply, but when West wins his club ace, a diamond return traps dummy's king...

Chore wars sabotage couples

These days housework is becoming an increasingly explosive topic for many couples. If you and your partner are embroiled in chore wars, you are not alone. For many couples, deciding to buy a house or to have a baby is easier than deciding who will do the laundry and dirty dishes.

JoAnn Larsen

Couples in the '90s have disputes unknown to their grandparents, who were raised in an era when a clear division of labor between marital pairs was not only desirable, at times it was a necessity. Today's generation is in transition, living in an era of rapid social change in which the distinctions between men's and women's roles are blurred and couples are faced with reorganizing traditional job descriptions to meet new pressures on the family.

Probably the social change with the most impact on couples is the return of women to the workplace without a subsequent change in responsibility for domestic chores. Perhaps because of sex role conditioning, women are not easily giving up old roles as they take on new ones, nor are men eagerly sharing in traditional women's work. So, changes are slow.

But changes are occurring. Today's man is usually willing to help in maintaining a reasonable household. Although some women may be angered by the premise they need to get their husbands to help, the fact is that, socially and culturally, men as a group haven't reached a point of sharing responsibility for the management of the household. That's what women would really like, writes columnist Ellen Goodman — not just a man who is helpful, but a man who takes over. A wife "would like to take just half the details that clog her mind like grit in a pore, and hand them over to another manager."

With regard to housework arrangements, families generally break down into one of three structures, says Laura Lein, the author of "Families Without Villains."

- Add-to. Paid work is simply added to the woman's other responsibilities for home and family.

- Helping out. Housework remains the woman's responsibility, but her husband helps as much as possible.

- Specialist. Husband and wife share responsibility both for homemaking and generating income but tasks are actually allocated on a rather sex-segregated fashion according to ability, skills, training, and upbringing.

- Partners. Both husband and wife share work responsibilities inside and outside the home, with tasks determined not by traditional sex roles, but by arrangement that please both.

A structure that works for one couple may not work for another. The key to creating a successful arrangement, Lein says, is flexibility. "Flexibility reflects a willingness both to give up the original expectations of family life and to work very hard in an effort to sustain family life under new and difficult conditions."

Hard as it is, couples can find solutions to their own chore wars. Here are ideas for diplomatically divvying up housework.

- Decide to get "task-centered" about chores.

Stress from a packed schedule often causes headaches, but life-threatening illnesses can also be triggered by the daily pressures

Stress, illness often closely related

By JULIE FANSELOW SWETYE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — If you have a sneaking suspicion the headaches you've been battling are more than loosely related to the project you need to have on the boss' desk first thing this morning ... you're probably right.

The good news is, realizing the connection may be the first step toward making sure stress doesn't land you in the hospital.

Medical professionals and others interested in how the mind and body work together say it's true: Stress can, and does, often lead to illness. The ailments can range from fairly minor maladies such as headache or upset stomach all the way up to life-threatening stroke or heart attack.

According to Twin-Falls physician Dr. Allen J. Sinclair, stress itself doesn't usually create illness. But if a person is predisposed to an ailment, stress can bring on episodes of the disease. "Most illnesses probably increase in frequency under psychological stress," he notes.

Dr. James D. Lohmann of Jerome says stress may or may not bring on a disease, but it can exacerbate an existing condition.

Some diseases, however, are apparently caused by stress. Irritable bowel syndrome, also known as spastic colon disease, is one such ailment, Sinclair says.

In addition, there is some evidence that people who develop cancer have higher susceptibility to stress. "No one knows why," says Sinclair, "but there are theories that psychological stress decreases the body's immunity to infections and abnormal, or cancerous, cells."

Jamie Kelley-Kinyon, social services director at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, says the human body has been reacting to stress the same way since primitive times.

When faced with stress, she says, the body changes from its normal operating mode to gear up and deal with the stress. Via the fight-or-flight process, or general adaptation syndrome, many body processes are affected — circulation, heart rate, perception.

Commonly, under times of stress, blood is diverted from the brain and stomach to the arms and legs. That's great if you need to physically ward off an attacker or slay a saber-toothed tiger. But in modern society, stress more often is mental, not physical, and the body cannot differentiate. "One symptom you see is people can't think very clearly," says Kelley-Kinyon. In the extreme, if a person faces a strong of stressful events, stroke could result. Or, if blood is constantly being diverted from the stomach through stress, ulcers and colitis may be triggered.

In 1989 in the United States, everyone is susceptible to stress, says Sinclair. Doctors, lawyers, accountants and other professionals have usually been viewed as people who face high levels of stress. "But look at the farmers, they're under stress all the time," Sinclair adds.

Further, men and women face similar hurdles with stress. "The differences now are very small," says Sinclair. "A lot of our stress is programmed by the competitive nature of today's society," notes Kelley-Kinyon, "and men and women both are now as caught up as men in the drive to get ahead."

Stress is more likely to create medical problems if it continues unchecked over a

Head lice may spread easily at school

By JOAN BEAN
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — The chances of a child getting head lice sometime while in his or her school years are pretty good.

Although these blood sucking parasites are around all the time, big outbreaks of infestations occur in September, January and March.

And the lower grades in the schools are where it spreads with the greatest ease.

Mary Belle Anderson, public health nurse for Gooding and Camas counties, says the reason younger children are more susceptible is they try on each other's coats and hats, put their heads together to tell secrets and share barrettes and combs. This generally happens in school, but she says the same goes for anywhere children congregate; such as day care centers.

Anderson says although pediculosis often starts with the younger children, no one in the family is immune.

"Every member of the household should be treated," she says, "and any of the child's close friends should be at least examined, and that family told there is head lice in the neighborhood."

She describes head lice as elongated and about one to two millimeters long. Their color depends upon the host. On dark skinned people they tend to be darker, and in blond hair the lice and nits

Looking good

Jewelry goes animalistic

"Animal looks are very big this fall," says Steffan Aletti, president of the New York-based Jewelry Industry Council, "but I stress the phrase animal looks. There's a new and healthy consciousness about animal rights."

"Many who used to wear genuine furs without much thought of their coats' original owners are now conscientious objectors to the process of creating luxury furs. Instead, this fall they are wearing animal prints and fake furs, along with animal jewelry—the silhouettes, features, like forms and colors of animals crafted in precious metals and gems by jewelry artists. Animal jewelry, which offers the intrinsic value always inherent in fine jewelry, not only captures animals at their best—but it can be worn with the clearest of consciences," Aletti said.

"Animal jewelry this fall will range from the bold gold and silver looks of fashion jewelry, many with faux gems, to the timeless elegance of precious jewelry in glittering platinum, gold or silver, some founted with diamonds and colored stones or enamel accents.

Fashion jewelry offers various animal themes. Here are swans, pigs, dinosaurs, penguins, rams and cats.

Referral services rate docs

By the Los Angeles Times

DIALING FOR DOCTORS — As if moving to a new town wasn't difficult enough — along with everything else, you also have to find a new doctor. Now there's help. Over the past several years, physician referral services have come to the aid of mobile families nationwide, according to Parenting magazine.

Do you have a condition that requires special medical training?

Does it matter if the doctor's office is accessible by public transportation? Are you interested in how the doctor's bedside manner rated in patient surveys?

These are among the questions that referral services may use to match you with appropriate local doctors, says American Hospital Association spokeswoman Lori Turk. Approximately 90 percent of the 5,700 hospitals in the U.S. offer some form of physician referral service, according to the AHA, as do many city, county and state medical associations. Most hospitals recommend physicians who are active members of their staff, while medical associations' lists include all the practicing doctors in their membership.

Private firms, which are not associated with a medical facility (check the Yellow Pages under "Physicians" and "Surgeons Referrals"), charge physicians to be on their referral roster. Best of all, the services usually match patients and doctors without a fee to the consumer.

Even with the assistance of a referral service, you may want to interview several physicians before making a decision.

If you need help evaluating caregivers, Parenting suggests you get a copy of the brochure "How to Choose a Doctor," published by The People's Medical Society, a national consumer-advocacy organization.

To receive a copy, send $4.00 to the Society at 462 Walnut St., Allentown, Penn., 18102; (610) 623-5773.

The fee is $5 and participants must pre-register by calling the Women's Health and Education Center at 737-2900 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Lice

(eggs) are light; making it difficult to see them.

"It usually starts at the base of the neck and behind the ears," she says. "Someone with long hair could get a pretty good case started before it ever gets discovered."

She says children who have head lice for a long period of time can develop secondary symptoms like swollen lymph nodes. And, if there's a lot of intense itching going on and the child is scratching, he can come up with a scalp infection.

To treat head lice, she says the first step is to check with one's doctor or pharmacist about which pediculicide shampoo to use. After shampooing, the next step of treatment is to use a nit comb (these come with some of the pediculicides) or a baby's fine toothed comb. She says the best way to comb with it is to part off the hair into sections and "back comb" towards the scalp, through each strand of hair, until the nits are off.

Sometimes the nits are particularly stubborn, and in this case she says a warm vinegar rinse will help loosen the glue that holds the egg cases on the hair shaft.

Bedding, clothes, coats, hats, scarves and brushes of the infested person need to be cleaned in as hot water as the fabric can stand, and then put in a hot dryer for 20 minutes. Combs and brushes can be soaked in hot (not boiling) water for 10 minutes.

Anything that cannot be washed should be dry cleaned or sealed in a plastic bag for at least two weeks. Carpets, mattresses, upholstery and anything the child's head might have come in contact with, should be vacuumed.

Anderson advises against spraying an insecticide on these things, because it might harm upholstery, and also because some pest-killers could be toxic to humans if inhaled in sufficient quantity.

She says parents need to make it a habit once a week or so, to inspect the hair and scalp of each child, especially around the base of the neck and behind the ears. They should also remind their kids not to share combs or clothing.

She says all of the school nurses are working hard on this, but that it is not just the school's problem.

"It's the parent's and child's problem and the community as a whole," she says. "We all need to get together on it, and not point fingers - just do the best we can to get rid of it as quickly as possible."

Stress

 long period of time. "That's why teaching stress management is so popular now," says Kelley-Kinyon. "These things don't happen out of the blue."

The most important preventative step to combat stress is to recognize its physical manifestations, she says. The symptoms are different from person to person, but they could include any of the following: headaches, backaches, crying or feeling "wiped out," inability to sleep, rash, hyperactivity, nightmares, apathy, queasy stomach or excess eating, smoking or drinking.

Once the symptom is identified, it needs to be dealt with for what it is, adds Kelley-Kinyon. "To other people either take a pill or have a drink to combat the symptom. They then think the problem is gone, but it's really not. The body is still going through the reaction," she notes. "You're just not feeling the pain."

Better ways of handling stress abound. A big one is exercise, although it's important to choose the right kind. For example, a person who is rigid and inflexible might want to avoid competitive sports because the stress of competition could compound stress-related medical problems. On the other hand, notes Sinclair, "someone who doesn't always have to win is OK playing racquetball or tennis."

Sinclair suggests that, rather than "winning" about a problem that's causing you stress, make a list of the steps you can take to deal with that situation. List things that can be done today, next week, next month, he says.

Positive thinking is another powerful tool. Amy Thiebert, who leads a variety of classes at her Less Stress Center on Falls Avenue West says that people too often accept society's messages about certain ages or situations.

For example, people have been programmed to believe that once they hit some arbitrary age — say, 40 or 65 — they start to get "old" and "frail."

"These are just all ideas that have been accepted," says Thiebert. "They have no reality except the reality you give them."

In Thiebert's class on visualization and positive thinking, participants are told they can create health and beauty by telling themselves they are healthy and beautiful. Visualization is such a powerful tool, in fact, that some medical establishments — including the Cancer Support & Education Center in Menlo Park, Calif. — are using it to help patients with "terminal" diseases. They're using imagery techniques in addition to the well-proven medical techniques," says Thiebert. "It is being used by serious scientists and it's working."

Flexibility is the key to reducing sports injuries, doctor reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — After you've made the down, you still have to get back up — if you can.

This can be a problem for amateur, superslowers whose football dreams outshine their ability — those who tried broken-field running and wound up broken.

But, experts say, a lot of the agony and grunting can be avoided with maybe ten minutes of gentle contortions.

"Flexibility is paramount," says Paul D. Grace, coordinator of sports medicine at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Grace oversees sports injury care and management covering at least 37 varsity sports (MIT's athletics is "one of the nation's best-kept secrets," he says). Experience, says Grace, shows him that flexibility literally has to come first in preventing football injury. He says warmed-up limber muscle with good blood flow is less likely to be hurt.

"Think of muscle as meat coming out of a refrigerator," says Grace. "You want to get it to room temperature."

He says the warmup should be gentle — "the key is not to bounce; to perform a yoga type of stretch." This, he says, will avoid creating tiny muscle rips that can grow to big ones.

Ten minutes of pregame warmup and another ten of post-game cool-down "can greatly reduce the incidence of these weekend maladies," he says. Grace also recommends stretching during the week to control lingering soreness.

And, say experts, this means you. "People are not as flexible as they think they are," says Dan Quigley, head athletic trainer of Manheim Township High School, Lancaster, Pa. Even in healthy high schoolers, he says — "Most injuries I see, especially in the beginning parts of the season, are due to lack of flexibility."

Grace thinks you should concentrate on the Achilles tendon, and the major upper-leg muscles — the quadriceps in the front and the hamstrings in the back. This, he says, should help you avoid the ankle and knee problems that result from football's stops and starts, lateral moves and backpedaling.

He recommends starting with a brisk walk or light jog. Then, he says, stretch the Achilles tendon by standing flatfooted and leaning against a wall two feet away. Afterward, he says, stand on a stair-tread, so you can lower your heel below the level of the tread and raise it again.

For the hamstrings, he says, sit on the ground with your legs apart in a V. Then bend and try to touch your elbows to the ground on alternate sides.

In addition, say trainers, you have to be in good aerobic shape — able to run without wearing yourself out. When you're tired, they say, you're more likely to make the mistakes that gets you hurt. That's why coaches like to watch their players do laps.

"It's hard to beat both biking and swimming," says Bobby Barton, head athletic trainer of Eastern Kentucky University in Richmond.

And, he says, even simple spare-time exercises can strengthen the hamstrings — muscles in which, he says, most Americans lack strength. He says you can simply lie on your stomach and curl your leg behind you. "We encourage our guys to do it while watching the TV or reading the newspaper," he says.

Quigley recommends agility drills to enhance your ability to change direction fast. One, he says, is to run ten yards and cut quickly, making a Z as you go down the field. Another, he says, is simply running backward.

If nothing works, though, you may wind up seeing someone like John Lopez, director of the Towson Sports Medicine and Rehabilitation Center in Towson, Md.

If it hurts but isn't broken, he says, keep ice on it and use a non-steroidal anti-inflammatory preparation like ibuprofen. Aspirin, he says, encourages bleeding, which can just make the swelling worse.

Lopez, who had been head trainer with the NFL's Baltimore — and Indianapolis — Colts, advises you "not to go off the injured list straight back to the athletic field and play. Instead, he says, gradually recondition. — And, he says, remember to stretch before the game."

Studies show 20 percent of adult Americans are significantly overweight

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 20 percent of the adult population, some 33 million Americans, are significantly overweight, giving the United States one of the highest populations of fat people in the world, an obesity expert said.

"It's clear that significant obesity appears to be more prevalent in the United States than elsewhere," said Dr. George A. Bray, a professor of medicine at Louisiana State University and a leading researcher in obesity.

Significant obesity is a major health problem only in Europe, and North America, and Bray said the problem is more severe in the United States than in Europe.

Why so many American adults are fat isn't clear, he said, but the effects are showing up among the obese as more heart attacks, more high blood pressure, more diabetes and more gall bladder disease.

"I'm almost certain," said Bray, "that only slightly less of a health risk than smoking two packs of cigarettes a day."

Bray, president-elect of the North American Association for the Study of Obesity, said doctors consider significant obesity to be a weight about 30 percent above what would be ideal for a person's age, height and gender.

Thus, a man whose ideal weight should be 170 to 180 pounds would be "significantly" obese if his weight was 221 to 234. At that point, his weight would make him almost twice as likely to develop a life-shortening ailment, Bray said.

"The greater the excess weight, the greater excess risk," he said.

But the numbers on the weight scale don't tell the full story.

"It's not just how fat you are, but where the fat is located, that will determine your risk," said Bray.

It is now widely believed by researchers that fat located within the abdominal cavity, surrounding the viscera, poses a greater hazard to health than fat located in the extremities or just under the skin.

"The reasons for this are not clear," said Bray. "The most widely accepted explanation is that when you've got more fat in your belly around your organs, it is that fat that is released when you eat fatty acids."

Because of its proximity, such fat is thought to go directly to the liver, he said, where it sets up risk factors that we associate with heart disease, diabetes, hypertension and gall bladder disease."

Adult men, said Bray, seem to be most at risk of developing this unhealthy deposit of abdominal fat. Age also plays a factor, he said, because few children or young adults seem to develop this type of fat deposit.

"For women, the visceral fat doesn't seem to increase until there is a lot of total fat," he said. "Women are protected against visceral fat to some degree, for some reason."

Smoking affects visceral, or central, fat, said Bray, and stopping smoking tends to cause this fat to dissolve away, even though the former smoker may gain fat in other areas. Again, why this is so is not well understood; but he said, "this is another good reason to stop smoking."

Elsewhere, a decade-long study of American youth showed that they are becoming more muscular but that their overall — sedentary — lifestyles have also made them fatter and triggered an "ominous" loss of cardiovascular health.

The Chrysler-Fund-Amateur Athletic Union testing program, which studied samplings of 12,000 youths from 1980 to 1988, said that, with no perceptible increase in height for the various age groups studied, the weight gains can be attributed to poorer dietary and physical habits.

Dogs scar thousands, kill 18-20 a year

CHICAGO (AP) — Dogs cause more deaths and injuries in the United States than most people believe, claiming 18 to 20 lives a year and scarring hundreds of thousands of people, federal researchers say in a study.

Seventy percent of deaths occur among children less than 10 years old, including many less than a year old, who are sometimes attacked while sleeping or after wandering into fenced areas where dogs are kept, the study found.

working out allocation of household tasks. This means focusing on solving the problem and using the same kinds of problem solving behaviors at home as you would in the workplace. Give up "personality-centered" approaches when you talk about chores ("You're so irresponsible").

- Remember, whatever problems you're having with household chores probably aren't anyone's fault. Rather, disagreements may be occurring because of changing individual and family needs and tacit assumptions about who ought to do what.
- Articulate your assumptions about housework. Should tasks be split equally? On some type of pro-rata basis? Discussing Lein's four arrangements for structuring housework would be a good start toward developing a mutual philosophy.
- Opt for a fair arrangement. Look at the amount of time each person is spending on chores and other duties and make an effort to equalize that time so you both have time to relax and to pursue individual interests.
- Together make a list of all the household chores inside and out. Don't forget the chauffeuring and the errands — taking clothes to the cleaners, doing the grocery shopping, getting the foster fixed.
- Independently mark on a copy of the list whom you think completes each chore, using the symbols H, W, Hw, Wh, and HW (if husband does chore, W wife does chore; Hw husband and wife share chore; HW husband and wife share chore equally).
- Next, using the same symbols, mark down how you would prefer each chore to be carried out. Then share your perceptions with your partner and negotiate for any different arrangements you would like.
- Consider involving children in the solution to the chore problems?
- Take into consideration the attractiveness of each chore. Every chore, says Lein, has a "drudgery quotient" comprised of its flexibility, visibility and sociability potential. Washing floors may appear more attractive than washing dishes because that job can be accomplished at any time.

The occurrence of dog bite-related fatalities has been underestimated," the authors, from the national Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, said in their report in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Some of these bites and deaths are potentially preventable," they added.

Pit bull breeds were involved in 42 of the 101 deaths in which dog breed was reported, almost three times more than German shepherds, the next most commonly reported breed, the researchers said.

That finding was questioned by American Kennel Club Vice President Alan J. Stern, who said information on breeds was not meaningful. "We have legendary cases of misidentification of breeds," he said.

Twenty-seven breeds have been variously labeled as "bull" types, many erroneously, including Dalmatian mixes and Chesapeake Bay Retrievers, Stern said in a telephone interview from New York.

"People don't know what they are," he said. "The dogs attack, so they're pit bulls."

But Ann Joly, a research assistant with the Washington-based Humane Society of the United States, said pit bulls do represent a disproportionately high number of animals involved in dog-bite fatalities.

She said, however, that news accounts of pit bull attacks "helped fuel

'Please Call Police' banners really work, reader declares

DEAR ABBY: How can we get another "Please Call Police" banner? A few years ago you printed an address in your column for those banners for motorists to put on their cars in case they had car trouble and needed help on the road. We recently sold our car, forgetting that the banner was in the glove compartment, so now it's gone.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

Maybe other people would like to order one, so if you want to print this, it's OK to use my name.

—DOROTHY KNOSS,
PARAMOUNT, CALIF.

We are a couple of senior citizens, and last year we were on the freeway in Salt Lake City when our car suddenly broke down, so we attached the "Please Call Police" banner to the inside of our rear window and within 15 minutes the police were there to help us. When they arrived, one of them said, "We have had over 30 calls about you!" So you see, Abby, those banners really work. How do we get a replacement?

DEAR MRS. KNOSS: Write to: WCIL-Banners, P.O. Box 62955, Los Angeles, Calif. 90066.

The cost is $1 per banner, postage and handling included. (Many people buy two banners — one for the front window and another for the rear.) Make your tax-deductible check or money order payable to WCIL-Banners. The Westside Center for Independently Living exists to help disabled people live independently.

DEAR ABBY: Your reply to "Mom in Cocoa, Fla.," which read, "If you suspect you have an alcohol problem, you have one," was applauded by all of us who work at the Mercer Council on Alcoholism and Drug Addiction in Trenton, N.J. However, you omitted an important fact: the danger associated with drinking alcohol while pregnant or nursing. Alcohol can cause irreversible birth defects, known as fetal alcohol syndrome. In 1981, the surgeon general recommended that pregnant women and nursing mothers drink NO alcohol — beer, wine or liquor.

Since fetal alcohol syndrome is totally preventable, we encourage women who are considering pregnancy to abstain from alcohol. There is no known safe amount of alcohol that can be absorbed by the fetus. "Mom in Cocoa, Fla." said she began to drink after her first child was born, and increased the amount through a second pregnancy. She should count her blessings that her second child shows no visible birth defects.

We would like to remind your readers that "A Pregnant Woman Never Drinks Alone — Alcohol Can Cause Birth Defects."

—NANCY FAHERTY,
TRENTON, N.J.

DEAR NANCY: Thank you for the valuable input. A better motto might be, "A Pregnant Woman Never Drinks." Period.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter in your column regarding the man who went through his wife's purse. My husband used to do that to me: He would take the pictures out of my billfold to see if there was something hidden behind them.

One day while snooping in my billfold, he ran across a little piece of paper with "4-670124" written on it. He accused me of calling a certain man I used to date before we were married. He even told me that he had called that number and "this man" answered the phone.

I kept trying to remember what that number was for on that scrap of paper in my wallet; but I couldn't remember it to save my life. I told him, "One of these days, I'm going to remember what that number is for — AND YOU WILL HAVE TO EAT IT!"

Three months later, I bought some material to make our little girl a dress, and as I was going through my patterns, I ran across one that was marked "4-670124!" I screamed, laughed and cried for joy. When my hubby came home from work that night and asked, "What's for supper?" I said, "It's on your plate."

Judi Sheppard Missett demonstrates the lunge, which helps the upper leg and buttocks area

Lunge for firmer upper legs

One of the most commonly heard requests from women when they start to exercise is for firmer, smoother buttocks and thighs. This is a particular problem for some women, because their bodies were designed to carry fat in those areas.

The solution most often recommended is squats or deep knee bends. If you have been a skier, you probably remember all the books and fitness experts extolling the virtues of deep knee bends to strengthen your major leg muscles. You may have even tried to do the recommended number, only to find you were losing your balance, tipping over and your knees ached like crazy.

Well, there is another way to improve the shape and strength of the buttocks and hamstring area. The lunge is easier to perform and for many people it is easier to control and does not strain the knees the way a squat does.

The lunge helps to strengthen the hamstring group of muscles down the back of your upper leg, the gluteals (the muscles of the buttocks and hips) and the quadriceps (the muscles on the top of the thigh). That makes the lunge quite an efficient exercise. You are working, firming and strengthening three sets of muscles in the upper leg and buttocks area.

Here is the correct way to perform a lunge for maximum benefit and minimum stress on your knees. Holding weights in your hands next to your shoulders is an optional more advanced version.

- Stand with your feet together, toes pointing directly forward.
- Place your right foot forward and bend the right knee into a lunge. If you are not using weights, you may want to place your hands on your right thigh.
- Keep your left foot in place and return your right foot next to the left foot. The right knee straightens again.
- Reverse the movements and side for 10 sets.
- For a more advanced version, you can have both knees bend when the foot goes forward. Keep the movements very moderate, controlled and slow.

Judi Sheppard Missett is owner of Jazzercise Inc. Her column appears every Monday in Teach.

Centennial Volkswalk coming

Three Island Crossing State Park and Brunau State Park are sponsoring an Idaho Centennial Volkswalk Sept. 23 and Sept. 24.

Registration at Three Island Crossing State Park will be at the Glens Ferry school beginning at 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. each day. Brunau Dunes State Park will have registration at the park's information center beginning at 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. each day.

Volkswalks are designed to encourage people to get out, exercise and enjoy themselves. Volkswalks are not contests of speed or endurance. Participants may walk at their own pace, starting whenever they wish.

The event is free and everyone is welcome to participate. A walk medal/pin is available for a small fee. A 100 kilometer centennial pin will be awarded to participants reaching that distance by participating in any of the number of Idaho centennial walks sponsored by the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation.

the fire" by prompting "weird kinds of people who want a mean dog" to look for pit bulls to train into vicious animals.

To curb the dog-bite problem, the CDC researchers recommended stronger animal-control laws, better public education on dog bites and more responsible dog ownership.

Joly and Stern agreed with the recommendations. Stern stressed the need for animal-control laws that "go after the deed, not the breed."

Besides deaths, dog bites cause a "tremendous injury problem," said the researchers. Dr. Jeffrey J. Sacks, Dr. Richard W. Sattin and Sandra E. Bonzo. "More than 2 million persons are bitten yearly — half are left scarred, one-tenth require sutures (stitches) and one-third suffer lost school or work time," the researchers added, citing previous research.

The authors identified 157 dog bite-related fatalities that occurred in the United States from 1979 through 1988, based on data from the National Center for Health Statistics and a computer search of news stories during the period.

In addition, there were four dog bite-related deaths recorded by the Humane Society and 17 other deaths at least partly attributed to dog bites by data from the health statistics center, they said. Since center statistics were missing for two years, the researchers estimated that 26 deaths were unaccounted for, judging by data from previous years.

Taken together, the total for the period was 204 deaths, or about 20 a year, the authors said. Only one rabid-dog bite fatality was turned up, and it was not included in calculations, the researchers said.

"The main victims of fatal dog bites were the very young and very old, those least able to protect themselves," the researchers said.

The death rate for newborns, less than a month old, was 370 times higher than that for adults ages 30 to 49, they said, and the rate for infants, less than a year old, was 85 times higher than for adults in that group.

For people 70 or over, the rate was almost 11 times higher than for the 30-to-49 group.

The three states with the largest number of fatal attacks were Texas, with 17; California, with 16; and Ohio, with 10. Western states in general had higher death rates, said the researchers, who offered no explanation for the finding.
