Soviets accept Bush call for chemical arms cut

The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze on Tuesday accepted President Bush's call for deep U.S.-Soviet chemical arms cuts and challenged the United States to go further and faster. Shevardnadze said the Soviet Union will "radically reduce or completely destroy" its chemical weapons, halt nuclear tests and stop making weapons-grade plutonium and uranium — all if Washington reciprocates. Shevardnadze, speaking to the U.N. General Assembly, said the two governments have narrowed their differences and he predicted that by the U.S.-Soviet summit next spring or summer. "We may have passed the last turn on the road" toward a treaty reducing strategic arms by 50 percent. There was a quick response from the White House. Bush said, "I am very pleased with the way things are going. The reaction from the Soviets to our proposals yesterday has been positive so now the goal is to get moving and try to work out these agreements." White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater called Shevardnadze's statements "a very constructive response. Our ultimate objective is total elimination of chemical weapons. And it appears that both nations are now ready to act." Shevardnadze also said that if NATO countries agree to start talks on tactical nuclear weapons, the Soviet Union will respond by further unilateral cuts in its tactical nuclear missiles in Europe. He repeated his government's call for a nuclear test ban and said Moscow was considering extending a 1963 treaty to cover underground nuclear explosions. Secretary of State James A. Baker III later praised Shevardnadze's nearly hour-long address as "a good speech, an interesting speech." He called it "very responsive to the President's statement" on chemical weapons. But Viktor P. Karpov, the Soviet Union's chief arms control expert, told reporters, "Our proposal is a wider one" and does not wait to destroy all weapons or halt production until all nations capable of producing them have signed a ban. Bush told the General Assembly on Monday that the United States will destroy more than 80 percent of its chemical weapons, before an international treaty banning use of the weapons is signed, if the Soviet Union will reduce its arms to a similar level. That would mean greater cuts by the Soviet Union, which has a larger stockpile.

Shevardnadze said: "The Soviet Union is ready, together with the United States, to go further and assume mutual obligations prior to the conclusion of a multilateral convention." The Soviet Union offered to: • Cease production of chemical weapons, as it says it already has done, including more sophisticated binary weapons. • Renounce the use of "those barbaric weapons" under any circumstances. • Institute rigorous verification of the cessation of production. Shevardnadze praised the U.S.-Soviet dialogue and said progress had been made in recent talks.

Bivens files appeal notice

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Paula Bivens, sentenced Monday to a four months imprisonment, appealed her case Tuesday. Jay Sudweeks, Bivens' attorney, filed the notice of appeal at 3:21 p.m. The notice announces Bivens' intention to appeal her judgment and sentence but isn't required to specify the grounds. The Times-News was unable to reach Sudweeks Tuesday. Bivens was scheduled to report to the sheriff's office Oct. 4, said Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter. Fifth District Judge Daniel Meehl sentenced Bivens to four months in a state incarceration program designed to evaluate whether she could succeed on probationary period. After the four-month period, Meehl could decide to alter his underlying three-to-seven-year prison sentence and grant probation to Bivens. Bivens pleaded guilty in June to embezzling $3,241 from the United Way of Magic Valley. She had worked there as a part-time bookkeeper from August to December 1988. Under Idaho court rules, Bivens' sentence may be postponed until the appeal is completed.

Bush hopes summit sparks changes in education

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush said Tuesday he hopes his two-day education summit with the nation's governors this week will produce ways to "dramatically change things" in America's troubled schools. "We've got to see what it is we're doing wrong, how we can be more accountable," Bush told reporters after hearing business leaders complain about the problems that poorly educated students cause in the workplace. Bush will travel by helicopter to Charlottesville, Va., this afternoon for an education summit with the governors on the University of Virginia campus. It will be only the third such presidential convocation of governors in history, and the first since President Franklin D. Roosevelt summoned governors more than half a century ago for their advice on coping with the Great Depression. Even before the governors gathered at Thomas Jefferson's "academical village," educators and politicians were expressing hope that the summit would give new impetus to a school reform movement that has shown signs of floundering. White House officials and leaders of the National Governors' Association have said the meeting's top priority will be to lay the groundwork for the first set of national performance goals for the schools. Bush, who promised in last year's election campaign to become "the education president," said, "I think we're going to come together with the governors on major objectives for this country in terms of education; something that's never been done before." He said he has his ideas for changes but was keeping them private. "I'm going down there to listen and work with the governors, not try to impose an agenda from here," he said. "I want to see us come up with some suggestions that will dramatically change things," Bush said. "I was just reminded by a group of business leaders that, on a per capita basis, we spent far more than Germany, far more than Japan, and yet we're not achieving the way they are."

Fewer students doing drugs but cocaine users get higher

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A survey of almost 400,000 junior high and high school students nationwide found that the percentage using drugs has dropped in the past two years, but those who use cocaine are getting higher. "I'm discouraged that the levels of intoxication are increasing," Thomas J. Gleaton, Jr., president of National Parents' Resource Institute for Drug Education, said Tuesday in announcing the survey results. The percentage of students in grades 9-12 who said they use cocaine dropped from 6.4 percent in 1986-87 to 4.6 percent in the 1988-89 school year. However, those users who reported getting "very high" or "bombedstoned" from the drug rose from 71.4 percent to 74.5 percent over the two-year period, according to the PRIDE survey. In the junior high grades of 6-8, 1.7 percent of the students said they had used cocaine in the past year, a drop from 2.3 percent in 1986-87. But 68.2 percent of those users said they got "very high" or "bombedstoned," compared with 65.2 percent in the earlier survey. The drop in the percentage of students who said they used cocaine "means the casual user is more careful, more frightened of the drug," Gleaton said. Outlining a profile of the student cocaine user, Gleaton described a "venturesome" and "sociable" youth who "wants to be first... He's got a wonderful little ego." Although the use of beer, liquor, marijuana and cocaine, showed declines from the 1986-87 survey for students in grades 6-12, levels of junior high students' use of liquor and cocaine remained higher than they were in the 1984-85 survey.

Couples seal lips over prize split in kissing contest

The Associated Press

RENO, Nev. — Three couples have been declared winners in the first annual Great American Kiss-Off, but their lips are sealed about what they'll take home for their efforts. The six contestants agreed to divvy up the $10,000 prize awarded 11 days ago, then hiring a lawyer to legally unlock their lips. "I'm just glad it's over," Fernando Gonzales said Tuesday, one day after all parties embraced the pact. He and his wife, Karen, were declared the official first-place finishers after they and two other couples outlasted 11 other pairs who entered the contest sponsored by a furniture company. The company agreed to let the three top couples split the $10,000 as they pleased and without revealing how. "We thought it was going to be a two-week thing, but it turned into a marathon," said Gonzales. "I'm recovered now. But it still feels like I'm kissing... It's like when you've been wearing a hat for four or five weeks and then take it off. The hat still feels like it's on." But Gonzales, 39, said he still kissed his 36-year-old wife and mother of their five children good night. "I'm not tired of kissing her," he said. "I think everyone decides we should be the winners because they realized we could go on the longest."

Compromise Idaho wilderness bill before Senate panel today

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — About 20 months after it was first introduced, the U.S. Senate planned to resume its consideration of the controversial Idaho wilderness bill today. The Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee scheduled a "mark-up" session to consider possible changes to the 1.5-million-acre plan, crafted by Democrat Gov. Cecil Andrus and Republican Sen. James McClure in 1987. The committee's chairman, Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., and nine other

Democrats will join McClure and eight other Republicans in debate on the compromise bill, which has drawn broad criticism since even before its introduction early last year. That opposition prevented any action on the proposal in 1988. Environmentalists, the forest and mining industries and off-road vehicle groups have criticized the measure since it was made public in December 1987. "Maybe there's something to be learned about drafting a bill without any constituency," said Joe Hinson, a timber industry spokesman. But McClure and Andrus have steadfastly argued that the bill is the best compromise possible. The measure also includes 600,000 acres of "special management areas," which attempt to settle longstanding disputes by stipulating future management. "The fact that very few individuals and none of the interest groups embrace all of this proposal is, in my opinion, testimony to the fact that we have crafted a true compromise," Andrus said recently. "For my part, I issue the invitation, once again today, to any and all to come forward with a better compromise, if there are better solutions, they should be advanced." Mike Melberry, public lands coordinator for the Idaho Conservation League, said several Idaho conservationists are in Washington, D.C., trying to convince Democratic committee members to amend the bill. Prime objections include mandated timber harvest levels for several national forest districts, water rights language that preempts federal reserved rights, legislated forest management activities and more. "We still think that no bill is better than this bill," said Craig Gehrke, Wilderness Society regional director. "Trying to save this bill is like trying to save a terminally ill patient." "The outlook isn't very good." But Melberry said he expects the bill to pass the committee and the full Senate. "We want to see it as pro-conservation as possible by the time it reaches the House," he said. Hinson said the timber industry seeks to obtain at least two amendments: boundary

South Carolina begins to recover in hurricane Hugo's aftermath

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Tap water became safe, some stores reopened Tuesday and a ton of catfish was on its way to ease the plight of this city's hurricane survivors, but 80 percent remained without power and 50 percent of the city's 174 Apache helicopters.

Generators and other necessities poured in to this historic port from around the nation. The Mississippi Agriculture Department arranged to send a ton of donated catfish along with cooks to fry it and serve it with mushy potatoes, the region's beloved comfort side dish.

While Charleston regained some services, the picture was bleaker in isolated areas. "We have no ice, no lights and we're low on batteries," St. Stephen Mayor Bobby Hoffman said. "Everything is funneled to Charleston but we had a hurricane, too. People are desperate. They're going to panic."

He said roads were still blocked by downed trees, making it impossible to reach some people in the town of about 2,000 bordering the Francis Marion National Forest north of Charleston.

"We can't get to their houses to see even if they're still alive or not,"

Hoffman said. Some other towns and the barrier islands had similar problems, officials said.

Hugo and its remnants killed at least 33 people in the Caribbean and 28 on the U.S. mainland, including 17 in South Carolina.

Charleston schools remained closed for at least another week; some colleges in the area plan to open Monday. Charleston Harbor reopened to limited ship traffic Tuesday, and some traffic lights in Charleston and in nearby Mount Pleasant were working.

Residents climbed onto roofs to repair shingles under a sunny sky, while others shopped in grocery stores opened for the first time. Rain that was predicted held off.

"They're cleaning the trees out of the streets. We're going to get along with help of the Lord," said John Gale, whose house collapsed when Hurricane Hugo swept through South Carolina on Thursday night and Friday morning.

Power was restored to about 80,000 people in the Carolinas, but at least 480,000 remained without service—it could be a month before full service is restored.

In Charlotte, N.C., Duke Power Co. said it had restored power to about 75,000 customers out of 230,000 who lost it. The others, including Duke Power Chairman Bill Lee and his family, may have to wait up to two weeks, she said.

Disaster assistance centers should be operating by Saturday in four counties around Charlotte, said Joe Dean, North Carolina's public safety secretary.

Power and phone outages led the PTE bankruptcy trustee to speed up plans to close Heritage USA, a 2,200-acre Christian theme park in Fort Mill, S.C., that has been on the decline since the downfall of evangelist Jim Bakker.

In Charleston, lines for water and ice were shorter as more stores opened and the city's water supply became potable.

"They're settling down today, yesterday, they were kind of nutsy," said Walt Gilstrap at a Winn-Dixie supermarket in North Charleston where workers distributed water and ice from trailer-trucks to a steady line of people.

One arrest was reported for price gouging. A tree-clearing company told a homeowner it would cost $22,000 to clear a yard, of some trees, Mayor Joseph P. Riley Jr. said.

About 650 Department of Defense personnel were being sent to assist in the relief effort, while the Mormon Church shipped water, food, cooking stoves, power generators, propane fuel and tools.

Senate votes overwhelmingly to shut down 86 military bases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Tuesday overwhelmingly endorsed shutting down 86 military bases and scaling down five more, approving the cost-saving plan as part of a $288.2 billion military spending bill.

By a vote of 86-14, the Senate approved an amendment that effectively eliminates a provision that would have held up $300 million for the base closings until the General Accounting Office certified that the savings exceeded the cost.

Voting against the base closings amendment were Sens. Bill Bradley, D-N.J.; Dan Coats, R-Ind.; Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.; Alan Dixon, D-Ill.; Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii; Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J.; Robert Byrd, D-W.Va.; Richard Lugar, R-Ind.; Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii; John McCain, R-Ariz.; Mitch McConnell, R-Ky.; Paul Simon, D-Ill.; Ted Stevens, R-Alaska; and Pete Wilson, R-Calif.

A federal commission, in making its recommendation last December, estimated a savings of $5.6 billion over 20 years. Then Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci accepted the panel's plan and the House last spring upheld the proposal. The Senate action on the measure sponsored by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, came despite appeals from a handful of members petitioning on behalf of their home-state bases.

Prior to the Senate action, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said further cuts in the defense budget by the Democratic-controlled Congress may force him to close more bases. "Given all the demands to redirect dollars from the defense budget to other areas, I've got no choice but to find ways to close additional bases," Cheney told reporters the day after Senate Democrats and the administration reached a tentative agreement to boost President Bush's anti-drug effort by $900 million. The plan requires a cut of about $1.3 billion in the Pentagon budget.

In other work on the spending bill, the Senate:

—Considered a Republican-backed amendment increasing the funds for Star Wars by $298 million. The spending bill cuts President Bush's $4.9 billion request for Star Wars to about $3.7 billion, which when added to the $355 million in Energy Department money and military construction funds leaves a total of about $4.1 billion. That amount falls short of the $4.5 billion total approved by the Senate in the authorization bill.

Budget cuts won't help Mars mission

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA Administrator Richard H. Truly resisted a House subcommittee's efforts Tuesday to get him to estimate how much it will cost to go to Mars, but complained that congressional cuts in the agency's 1990 budget won't help.

Noting that the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's budget is no more than 1 percent of total federal spending, Truly told the panel that ratio will have to increase if the nation is serious about moving out to the moon again, and beyond to Mars.

Already, he said, House and Senate appropriations committee moves to slash NASA's $2.05 billion budget request by as much as $400 million is forcing the agency to consider slowing its construction schedule for the space station that is planned as a forerunner to moon and Mars missions.

However, Truly stoutly denied news reports that the pending budget cuts are forcing the agency to redesign the station.

Final agreement near to boost war on drugs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration and Senate negotiators pushed Tuesday to cement plans for a $900 million boost in the war on drugs, but Republicans held out for a Democratic guarantee of action on the president's anti-crime package.

"We do expect to accept this arrangement and hopefully we can get on with implementing the drug plan," a presidential press secretary Marlin Fitzwater told reporters. He said details remained to be resolved but the broad outline of the spending increase "does appear consistent with our objectives."

Agreement on the issue also could release money bills for connected programs in the Senate where Republicans have set up a blockade as a way of bringing pressure on Democrats to compromise on the drug strategy.

Negotiations began a week ago when Democrats sought to add $2.2 billion to the administration's $7.9 billion battle plan for fighting illegal drugs. Key senators on Monday announced a tentative agreement to add $900 million, most of it for prevention, education and treatment.

Democrats have called the administration's program inadequate, saying too little money is designated for fighting demand for drugs in this country, as opposed to fighting the supply of cocaine flowing from Colombia.

The compromise figure represented less than half of the $2.2 billion increase originally proposed by Appropriations Committee Chairman

Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., leader of the Democratic negotiators. But most of the increase — $800 million — would be devoted to drug treatment, education and prevention programs that Democrats said were most seriously underfunded in President Bush's outline.

As the parties neared agreement, Republicans said that before signing off they would need more certainty on such issues as which programs would get the money and when arrestees and people on probation might be tested. But the key question appeared to be the crime package.

Some provisions of the long-stalled packages already are contained in the administration's drug strategy.

But some provisions not in the drug plan are controversial, such as death sentences for a broader range of crimes.

IRAs touted to spur economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — IRAs, curtailed three years ago on grounds they were an ineffective incentive for saving, are being touted anew by Democrats as a way to spur the economy without further enriching the wealthy.

The liberalized Individual Retirement Account is being offered as a substitute for the capital-gains tax reduction recommended by President Bush.

Most of the tax benefit from either party's proposal would go to the rich and near-rich, affecting the wallets of the richest one-tenth of U.S. taxpayers.

The House is expected to do battle on the issue this week, with the Senate taking it up next month. The options will be presented as part of a massive bill whose main purpose is to reduce the budget deficit.

"The choices could not be more stark or compelling," House Majority Leader Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., says about the plan offered by the Democrats.

White House budget director Richard G. Darman is equally as sure about the administration proposal.

"The choice is clear," he said.

The administration wants to cut the maximum tax rate on capital gains — profits from the sale of stocks and other investments — to 19.6 percent until 1992. The top rate would then be raised to 28 percent permanently and gains caused solely by inflation would be exempted from taxation. The top rate now is 33 percent.

The Democrats propose allowing all workers not permitted a full IRA deduction to write off half a contribution up to $2,000 a year. The money would not be taxed until withdrawn for retirement, as the down payment on a first home or for college.

Although the administration generally favors expanded IRAs, House Democrats added an angle that makes the proposal unacceptable to the White House: financing IRAs by raising taxes on the richest 600,000 couples and individuals.

Cutting capital gains or liberalizing IRAs would represent a major backing away from the 1986 landmark tax overhaul that curtailed IRA deductions and eliminated the special rate for capital gains.

The staff of the Joint Committee on Taxation estimates that 85.3 percent of the benefit from the capital-gains reduction, as approved by the House Ways and Means Committee, would go to those with incomes over $75,000 a year. Those people file less than 10 percent of all tax returns.

Just over 49 percent of the new IRA benefit would be collected by those earning more than $75,000, although the withdrawal features would help lower- and middle-income taxpayers.

Backers of the capital-gains cut contend it will pay for itself by spurring economic activity. Democrats say it will worsen the deficit after a three-year burst of higher revenues.

There is no agreement among economists that either plan would have a lasting effect on the economy.

Both plans are being promoted as ways to increase the nation's lagging rate of saving, making more money available for business expansion and job creation so less will have to be borrowed from foreigners.

Although the capital-gains issue was debated at length in the 1988 presidential campaign and has been the subject of congressional hearings, the notion of expanding IRAs has drawn little attention since they were curtailed, to the chagrin of middle-income workers, in 1986.

In writing its landmark tax overhaul, Congress concluded that the ultimate goal was the lowest possible individual tax rates. That meant elimination or reduction of various exclusions and deductions, and two of the most important were the capital-gains break and the IRA deduction.

Rolling back the IRA deduction was made easier when Congress concluded that the deduction apparently had produced little new saving, that it had simply encouraged taxpayers to transfer money from a non-taxable account into a tax-deferred IRA.

"I had testified for IRAs, and it was a big disappointment when evidence indicated they did little to encourage new saving," said Washington economist Michael Evans.

However, the Institute for Research on the Economics of Taxation, headed by former Reagan administration official Norman Ture, now says the early evidence was wrong.

"The weight of the evidence is that IRAs have had a substantial positive net effect on personal saving," the institute said in a report commissioned by Merrill Lynch Consumer Markets.

At the height of IRA popularity, in 1986, deductions for $37.8 billion in contributions were claimed by 15.5 million taxpayers. A year later, with the deduction curtailed, contributions of $14.1 billion were deducted on 7.3 million returns.

Before 1986, any worker could contribute up to $2,000 a year to a tax-deferred IRA. The overhaul law restricted deductible IRAs to workers not covered by a company pension and to covered single workers with incomes $25,000 or less and couples earning $40,000 or less.

Single taxpayers with incomes up to $35,000 and couples up to $50,000 are allowed a partial deduction.

WASHINGTON (AP) — James Meredith, the black man who cracked the color barrier at the University of Mississippi 27 years ago, has been hired to what some see as an unlikely post: adviser to conservative Sen. Jesse Helms.

Meredith said in an interview Tuesday that he had been hired officially on Sept. 5 to advise the senator on questions of race, education, drugs and urban problems, after providing informal advice for the last year.

Better treatment for lung cancer may be possible

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers have identified precise abnormalities in an anti-cancer gene linked to lung cancer, raising the possibility of early diagnosis and better treatment for the 150,000 people who get lung cancer each year.

During the last several years, researchers have found indirect evidence that defects in that six genes can contribute to the formation of lung cancer.

A new study has pinpointed precise chemical changes that should be useful for identifying people at high risk of getting lung cancer, or for predicting how deadly a particular case of lung cancer will be, said the author of the study's findings, Dr. John Minna of the National Cancer Institute-Navy Medical Oncology Branch in Bethesda, Md.

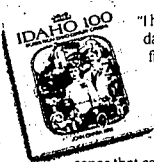

One thing you could do would be to take people's tumors, see how many (genetic) lesions they have, and determine how virulent they are," Minna said Tuesday in a telephone interview from Toronto, where he presented his findings at the Bristol-Myers Cancer Research Symposium.

The identification of the genetic lesions could lead to better decisions on treatment, he said.

Minna also said screening for genetic abnormalities in people who don't have lung cancer could reveal those who are about to get cancer — that is, people who have some, but not all, of the genetic changes needed to produce a tumor. Such people could be followed closely for the appearance of tumors, he said.

Pierce takes 5th before House panel investigating HUD scandal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former HUD Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr. refused to answer questions Tuesday from a House panel investigating housing scandals, citing his constitutional right against self-incrimination.

He contended he had been "prejudged by this body."

Pierce, compelled to appear by a subpoena, accused the subcommittee of trying to rush him into testifying without adequate preparation and said he hoped to tell his story later.

His refusal to testify came at a dramatic meeting of a panel that has been investigating allegations of billions of dollars worth of fraud, mismanagement, influence peddling and political favoritism at the Department of Housing and Urban Development, which Pierce headed throughout the Reagan administration.

Disagreements between the subcommittee and Pierce even extended to news coverage of the hearing. Pierce invoked House rules that forced subcommittee chairman Tom Lantos, D-Calif., to bar television, radio and photographic coverage, despite the chairman's complaint that the move was unwarranted.

Pierce read a brief statement saying he had not had time to prepare, did not have the HUD documents he negated and would invoke his constitutional right not to testify.

Lantos then posed eight questions to Pierce, some raising new suggestions of political influence involving HUD and the Reagan White House.

Each time Pierce refused to answer.

"The subcommittee's desire to rush me through this process, together with various statements made by members... leads me to the painful conclusion that I have been prejudged by this body," Pierce said.

"Under these circumstances, my counsel has advised me and I have agreed to assert my constitutional rights under the Fifth and Sixth Amendments by refusing to answer questions before this subcommittee," he said.

"I trust this subcommittee will remember that these rights are intended as shields for the innocent and that they do not create any inference or presumption of wrongdoing."

Paul L. Perito, his attorney, said he hoped Pierce would be ready to testify on Oct. 27, the next date he has been ordered before the employment and housing subcommittee of the House Government Operations Committee.

But Perito told reporters the subcommittee wanted wouldn't give Pierce a fair hearing and wanted to "rush him to judgment."

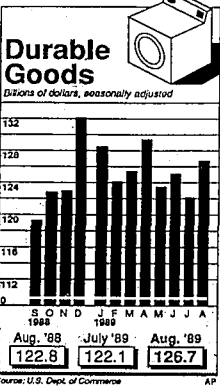

"They want to try, convict and sentence him, and we will not let that occur," Perito said. "This man is an innocent man... This man wants very much to tell his story."

Perito and Lantos engaged in a heated exchange after the lawyer attempted to challenge the presence of three lawmakers who are not members of the subcommittee.

Lantos said that under House rules, Pierce's attorneys had no right to speak but only to advise their client.

"In this hearing, you are in fact a potted plant," Lantos told Perito — a remark that recalled the Iran-Contra hearings when Oliver North's attorney told a committee, "I am not a potted plant."

Durable goods orders post biggest gain in 6 months

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to U.S. factories for "big ticket" durable goods accelerated 3.8 percent last month, riding brisk automobile sales to the biggest gain since December, the government said Tuesday.

But some economists questioned whether that volatile manufacturing sector could keep up the pace in the face of a slowing economy and said the first decline in unfilled orders since February 1987 was a sign of weakness.

The Commerce Department said demand for durable goods, items expected to last more than three years, totaled a seasonally adjusted $126.7 billion after declining 2.5 percent in July. The July figure was revised from a 1.9 percent drop reported earlier.

After rising 7.4 percent in December, durable goods orders have seen-sawed this year, rising in March, April, June and August and falling in January, February, May and July.

Orders in the transportation sector last month rose 6.3 percent to $36.3 billion as a big increase for motor vehicles offset a decline in aircraft. Transportation orders had risen 1.8 percent in July.

Even without the transportation sector, durable goods orders were up 2.7 percent after falling 4 percent the previous month.

"I doubt that the automobile pace will continue," said Cynthia Latta, an economist with DRIMcGraw-Hill, a Lexington, Mass., business forecasting organization.

She noted that some automakers are reducing their production schedules and offering rebates and subsidized financing to spur sales of 1990 models even before they get to the showroom.

Both Ms. Latta and Robert Brusca, chief financial economist for Nikko Securities Co. International Inc. in New York, pointed to the 0.3 percent decline in unfilled orders as evidence of weakness.

"The backlog of orders declined everywhere except transportation and that's only because of autos," Brusca said. "That decline says demand is slackening."

The Federal Reserve, which raised interest rates for 14 months to slow the economy and control inflation, began in June to nudge rates down. Durable goods orders are particularly sensitive to interest rates because consumers and businesses often have to borrow to finance such purchases.

Nevertheless, analysts said

Tuesday's report would not spur the Fed to further action.

"For now, it probably tends to keep the Fed on hold," Brusca said.

Ms. Latta agreed, saying, "It can't tune policy to bail out the durable goods manufacturers; it has to look at the whole economy."

Orders for non-electrical machinery, which includes computers and a wide variety of industrial equipment, increased 9.2 percent to $22.8 billion, but was a rebound from a 10.4 percent decline in July.

No agreement on preventing catastrophic insurance repeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee found no agreement Tuesday on a new plan to prevent repeal of catastrophic medical insurance for retirees.

"There obviously is not bipartisan support for any proposal at this point," committee chairman Sen. Lloyd Benetsen, D-Texas, told reporters after a closed session.

"The administration says it is for (the new) package but I don't see any Republican members for the package," he said.

Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., said he saw signs members might be drawing closer to a compromise.

Benetsen, he said, "is swimming uphill and he ought to have Republicans, he ought to have the president in the boat with him."

The year-old program, designed to prevent a serious illness from financially ruining retirees, is under attack from many older Americans.

Some object because they already have catastrophic coverage and some higher-income retirees are upset because they must pay a large share of the program's cost.

The House Ways and Means Committee has agreed to shift more of the cost to those with lower incomes, allow retirees to drop coverage if they also give up Medicare Part B (physicians' fees), and to scale back reimbursement for prescriptions.

There are indications the House may vote instead to repeal the program.

The latest proposal considered by the Finance Committee would cut the $800 maximum annual surtax paid by higher-income retirees to $400; slow scheduled increases in the $4-a-month flat fee for catastrophic coverage that most retirees pay; permit beneficiaries to drop catastrophic protection if they also give up Medicare Part B; require retirees to pay more of physicians' fees before the new protection kicks in; and eliminate coverage for most prescription drugs.

Another element being considered by the panel would pay some costs of the program by requiring that all state and local government employees pay the share of Social Security taxes that finances Medicare.

Damage won't affect shuttle launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Water damage to Columbia is less than originally thought, and the shuttle has a good chance to meet its December launch target, the director of the Kennedy Space Center said Tuesday.

"It certainly does not have the dimensions of doom we were concerned about" after fire protection water drenched Columbia on Sunday, Forrest McCartney said in an interview.

"We've not really assessed what the impact will be on the launch date, but my personal assessment on it right now is that it will be minimal, if any," he said.

"Sunday we had a very bad day, and we had a very gloomy outlook but it's Tuesday morning, and, while we see some additional work to be done, we feel that work can be accomplished," he said.

The accident occurred as three workers were performing routine maintenance on the fire sprinkler system in the hangar where Columbia is being readied.

Iranian forces seize 10 tons of gold

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian security forces seized 10 tons of gold worth $115 million Tuesday near the southeastern border with Pakistan, the official Islamic Republic News Agency reported. The agency, monitored in Moscow, said several members of a smuggling ring who planned to drive the gold into Pakistan were arrested. IRNA said the gold was hidden under piles of scrap iron.

8-year-old kills maid with pistol

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — An 8-year-old boy who wanted to play a trick on the family's 16-year-old maid shot and killed the girl with his father's pistol, police said Tuesday. Police said the boy, his brother and sister found the pistol hidden under a mattress Monday and decided to scare the maid, Ailene Eleuterio, who was resting after doing the family laundry. The boy then scampered up to the maid, who was sitting in a chair, pointed the weapon and fired, striking her in the forehead, police said. She died a few hours later. Police said no charges had been filed against the three children because of their ages but they were considering charging the father with illegal weapons possession.

Hotel fire injures 7 in Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (AP) — Fire spread through several floors of a luxury beachfront hotel Tuesday and injured seven workers and two tourists, fire officials said. Guests at the Dan Caesarea Hotel, on the Mediterranean south of Haifa, were forced to flee the eight-story building. The blaze damaged 50 rooms, said Fire Chief Yossi Levy. Levy said the fire started on the second floor and quickly spread through the building to the fifth story. He said the cause was under investigation. The injuries were described as light. The Dan Caesarea Hotel has a five-star rating and is next to the Roman ruins of Caesarea, the Romans' capital in Palestine for about 500 years.

75 poisoned who ate hospital meal

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — More than 75 hospital workers suffered food poisoning after eating a meal at the hospital cafeteria, an official said Tuesday. Jordan University Hospital's deputy director, Hussam Al-Muhtaseb, said the cases were reported Monday, 12 hours after the staff ate lunch. "We don't know if the food was poisoned and we can't determine that until after laboratory results," Muhtaseb told The Associated Press in a telephone interview. Muhtaseb said more than 75 people suffered symptoms of food poisoning but that none was in serious condition. No patients were affected.

Farmer gets time for killing pigs

POINTE-A-PITRE, Guadeloupe (AP) — A court has sentenced a farmer to one month in jail for taking advantage of the confusion created by Hurricane Hugo to kill his neighbor's pigs as part of a running dispute. The court found Monday that Monclerc Croix, 61, shot the four pigs belonging to Annoncia Cloek, a restaurateur, while this island was in the eye of Hurricane Hugo on Sept. 17.

Bomb explodes near U. S. Embassy

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A bomb exploded early Tuesday across the street from the U.S. Embassy, shattering windows in the compound and several other downtown buildings and slightly injuring an embassy security guard, authorities said. The bomb was planted in a sidewalk garbage can in front of the U.S. Embassy and 150 yards from the presidential palace, a police officer said. The narrow downtown street is lined by shops and offices. No one immediately claimed responsibility for the explosion. A Chilean security guard for the embassy who was at the building entrance suffered minor injuries in the blast, said a spokeswoman for the embassy, Sonja Sweek. The man was taken to a hospital, treated and released, she said.

Gunmen kill 2 shortly before Quayle visit

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Gunmen believed to be Communist rebels ambushed and killed two American civilians working at a U.S. military base Tuesday, shortly before Vice President Dan Quayle arrived to discuss the future of U.S. military installations there.

The victims were employees of Ford Aerospace Corp., which contracts to maintain an electronic warfare training range at Camp O'Donnell. The camp is a U.S.-run facility about 50 miles north of Manila and 12 miles from the U.S. Clark Air Base. Ford Aerospace spokesman Norman Black identified the victims as William H. Thompson, 45, and Donald G. Buchner, 44. He said both were retired from the U.S. Air Force. Their hometowns were not known.

Also Tuesday, gunmen killed a member of President Corazon Aquino's presidential guard, about a mile from where the president will meet with Quayle on Wednesday. The attacks followed a series of bombings this month and came amid growing opposition to U.S. military installations in the Philippines. The Americans slowed their car as they approached a dump truck and a jeep blocking a highway near Capas, 60 miles north of Manila, police said. Six men sprang from the jeep and riddled their car with gunfire, according to police Lt. Pepito Pimentel. The assailants then opened the car door and pumped bullets into the victims, Pimentel said. The attack occurred about 5 p.m. "We deplore this senseless and cowardly act of terrorism," State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said in Washington. "Acts like this will not deter us in our resolve to support the democratic government in the Philippines."

Col. Florentino Amoraban, a spokesman for the Philippine Constabulary in central Luzon island, said the victims were believed to be members of the New Peoples Army, which operates in the area. In April, rebels killed U.S. Army Col. James Rowe as he was driving the headquarters of the U.S. Joint Military Assistance Group in Quezon City, near Manila. In October 1987, rebels killed three Americans in simultaneous attacks outside Clark Air Base. The United States operates Clark Air Base, the Subic Bay naval base and four smaller installations in the Philippines, but there are increased calls for an end to the U.S. military presence. As Quayle arrived, hundreds of leftists burned his effigy and an American flag while chanting "Bases out, Quayle go home!" Quayle arrived in Manila about 7:30 p.m. from Japan for a visit expected to focus on the future of the bases, which operate under a lease that expires in September 1991.

Acting Foreign Secretary Manuel Yan said Quayle was bringing a letter from President Bush believed to include a proposal to begin talks on extending the lease. Two hours before Quayle's arrival, about 150 members of the League of Filipino Students and the Youth for Nationalism and Democracy reached the airport terminal and began a noisy demonstration against the visit. Protesters shouted "Quayle go home, bases out!" and "Yankes go home!" They carried banners reading "Quayle visit — a curse."

After negotiations with police, the group agreed to pull back about a half mile away along the main road into Manila. Police estimated the crowd grew to nearly 1,000 by the time Quayle arrived. Earlier, nine policemen were injured and nine students were arrested when security forces broke up a rally at Manila's Adamson University, officials said.

Also Tuesday, suspected rebels killed Capt. Carlos Danleg, a staff officer of the Presidential Security Group, in an ambush in the city's Pandacan district. He was the fourth member of the presidential guard

Colombian judge drops charges against drug kings; tourists flee

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Citing a lack of evidence, a judge dropped charges against two reputed leaders of the Medellín drug cartel accused in the assassination of Oscar Galeano, a Colombian general, a newspaper reported Tuesday.

Elsewhere, hundreds of tourists boarded planes, buses and taxis out of the port city of Cartagena after a bomb exploded at the Hilton Hotel there and killed two people.

The M-19 leftist guerrilla group urged the government to pardon drug traffickers and stop extraditing them to the United States. The statement appeared in a full page ad published in the country's biggest newspaper, El Tiempo.

El Tiempo also reported that in Medellín, a judge Monday dropped charges against Pablo Emilio Escobar Gaviria and Jose Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha, alleged leaders of the Medellín-based drug operation that supplies most of the cocaine in the United States.

The men are on the U.S. Justice Department list of 12 key drug figures wanted for prosecution in the United States. The judge's action would not prevent their extraditions.

A prosecutor told the newspaper he would appeal federal judge Francisco Cardenas' decision. The Associated Press could not get through by telephone to the judge's office in Medellín.

Escobar and Rodriguez, who have offered to negotiate with the government, had been charged with complicity in last year's kidnapping of Andres Pastrana, who was a candidate for mayor of Bogota.

Pastrana was freed in an army raid and went on to be elected mayor of the capital.

Escobar and Rodriguez were charged with planning the Jan. 25 assassination of Colombia's attorney general, Carlos Hoyos.

The Cartagena bomb was one of 110 that have gone off in Colombia's major cities since drug traffickers and the government went to war Aug. 18. No one claimed responsibility for the bomb, which went off Monday night.

The explosion killed two doctors and wounded a third, said the chief of the national police in Cartagena, Col. Luis Herrera.

Another bomb exploded in front of a Cartagena bank Monday night, injuring one person, Herrera said.

An American businessman with a store in Cartagena told The Associated Press tourists were desperate to get out of the city.

The few outbound flights were booked, and tourists were jamming the airport on a stand-by basis, he said by telephone, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Tourists unable to find space on flights were snapping up tickets at bus stations and hiring taxis to take them to other cities, he said.

U.S. rules to reduce emigration

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. Embassy officials trying to curtail a constant flow of Soviet emigrants Tuesday announced new rules on emigration procedures aimed at lightening the work load in Moscow and limiting the number of would-be emigrants.

The announcement was made to an agitated crowd of several hundred Soviets, who were gathered around the embassy seeking permission to emigrate or visit the United States. Dozens pushed and grabbed for the one-sheet explanation of the rules, which take effect Oct. 1.

According to the document, applications for emigration now will have to be sent to Washington instead of being dealt with in Moscow because of the flood of requests pouring into the embassy here.

Lines of hundreds of people have been forming around the embassy every day since Soviet officials began liberalizing emigration policies last year. There have been reports recently that spaces in line are going for hundreds of dollars.

"The United States will continue to receive applications from all interested Soviet citizens, but priority in scheduling interviews will be given to those with close relatives... who are citizens or legal residents of the United States, as well as those of special concern to the United States," according to the document, handed out Tuesday.

"Many who have no close family ties in the United States will face long delays and may wish to explore alternative destinations. Not all those who apply will be given appointments," it warned.

Soviets will be notified by mail from Washington if they are to be interviewed in the embassy in Moscow.

Soviets using Israeli visas — mostly Jews — will not be able to apply for entrance to the United States in Rome or Vienna if their Soviet exit visa is dated after Oct. 1, the document said. Many Soviet Jews are waiting in those cities for admission to the United States instead of going to Israel.

The Geneva-based International Commission for Migration said more than 30,000 Soviet Jews had arrived at its transit point in Vienna from January through August.

Experts find Semtex traces in Niger crash

PARIS (AP) — Experts probing the explosion that destroyed a French DC-10 over Niger and killed all 171 people aboard believe they have found traces of the powerful explosive Semtex in the wreckage, two French dailies said Tuesday.

The newspapers Liberation and Le Parisien said the find strengthened the connection between the UTA airline crash and the Dec. 21, 1988, bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland.

The UTA flight originated in Brazzaville, Congo, and blew up over a desert less than an hour after it took off for Paris on Sept. 19 following a stopover in N'Djamena, Chad.

Both newspaper accounts cited unidentified sources involved in the investigation and said laboratory tests in Paris still had to confirm the presence of Semtex, a malleable, hard-to-detect explosive made in Czechoslovakia.

Liberation said the charge may have been concealed in a shipment of farm chemicals loaded aboard the DC-10 in Brazzaville.

French investigators said earlier it appears certain an "explosive substance" in a front cargo compartment caused the crash, but gave few details.

It is believed that a radio-cassette player containing Semtex was smuggled onto the Pan Am flight that exploded over Lockerbie, killing 270 people.

Party leader calls Chinese protesters criminal, takes hard line

BEIJING (AP) — Communist Party leader Jiang Zemin took a hard line Tuesday at his first news conference, insisting that those arrested in the spring democracy movement were criminals and refusing to rule out more executions.

Asked by a reporter if the "Tiananmen tragedy" could have been avoided, Jiang said: "We believe it was not a tragedy."

"Tiananmen was a counter-revolutionary rebellion opposing the Communist Party leaders and seeking to overthrow the socialist system," he said.

Premier Li Peng, who also took part in the news conference, reaffirmed the party's determination to end rampant corruption and said new limits on official perks would be announced in a few days.

The 62-year-old Jiang, whose highest previous post was head of the Shanghai party committee, was catapulted into the national leadership in June after soldiers retook Beijing's Tiananmen Square by force from student-led pro-democracy protesters, killing hundreds and possibly thousands of people en route to the square.

His predecessor, Zhao Ziyang, was accused of supporting the protests and ousted.

Jiang took a mild tone toward Zhao on Tuesday, saying he was leading a "comfortable life" and receiving full salary. He said Zhao was still under investigation but did not suggest he might face further punishment or be put on trial.

The unusual news conference, for both local and foreign reporters, appeared intended to demonstrate the solidity of the new party leadership in time for the 40th anniversary of the founding of Communist China on Oct. 1.

When Zhao took office in 1987, he was the first party leader to hold a news conference with foreign reporters in more than a decade.

But while Zhao shook hands and joked with the reporters, Jiang sat behind a table in the Great Hall of the People and answered most questions with well-worn phrases from official speeches and editorials.

He appeared relaxed; however, and ventured a few personal remarks, complimenting two young Taiwanese reporters on their Mandarin Chinese. Mandarin is the official language of both the mainland and Taiwan, but many older Chinese speak regional dialects.

In an apparent effort to emphasize a collective leadership, Jiang was joined by Li and the four other members of the Politburo Standing Committee, the party's top body.

Each answered at least one question.

Song Ping, in charge of party organization, and Yao Yilin, in charge of economic planning, read their answers, indicating the questions they were asked were arranged in advance.

The leaders' comments held no surprises, reiterating the party emphasis since June on opposing Western "bourgeois" influences.

Viets offer welcome to their troops

MOC BAI, Vietnam (AP) — Relatives rushed across the border from Cambodia on Tuesday to greet their sons, fathers and husbands returning from Vietnam's nearly 11-year-old war in the neighboring country.

Vietnam said the withdrawal marked the end of its military involvement in Cambodia, but guerrillas claim thousands of Vietnamese soldiers remain, wearing Cambodian uniforms.

Schoolchildren, peasants and city dwellers lined Highway 1, waving flags and tree branches at the thousands of passing troops in a government-orchestrated welcoming ceremony.

"My wife is more beautiful now than ever," one soldier said as he held hands with his spouse, who dashed the last few yards to embrace her husband.

Vietnam had promised it would have all of its 26,000 troops out of Cambodia by Sept. 26, and the withdrawal sparked fears that Cambodia will slide into protracted civil war as government troops try to fight the three-party guerrilla coalition without Vietnamese help.

Vietnam's invasion in December 1978 ousted the Khmer Rouge regime, which had ruled Cambodia since 1975. During that time, the Khmer Rouge killed hundreds of thousands, practicing a radical brand of agrarian communism. Now the Khmer Rouge is the strongest of the three-party guerrilla front.

Guerrilla radio reports monitored in Bangkok on Tuesday claimed resistance forces had seized two more areas in a gem-rich region in western Cambodia, killing some Vietnamese troops in the fighting.

Cambodian Defense Minister Tea Banh recently confirmed that guerrillas held some areas near Pailin.

At Moc Bai, a Vietnamese cultural troop serenaded hundreds of soldiers with popular tunes as they sat in a football-field size buffer zone between the two countries.

Several military officials gave patriotic speeches, praising the "solidarity of the Vietnamese and Cambodian peoples."

Then, with the whine of a motorcycle siren, the convoy began.

Led by an American-made jeep and Soviet-made armored personnel carriers, the soldiers scurried into trucks and roared home, followed by trucks of their comrades.

"I am so happy to be leaving Cambodia," a soldier from Can Tho province said as his 3-year-old daughter tugged at his hair.

Many men said they were worried that after receiving a hero's welcome, they will have trouble finding jobs. Hanoi has demobilized more than a half-million soldiers.

Canadian plane crash claims 7

TERRACE, British Columbia (AP) — A twin-engine commuter plane trying to land in heavy fog crashed and burned Tuesday, killing all seven people aboard.

The Skylink Airlines plane en route from Vancouver went down in the woods near the airport here with five passengers and two crew members, authorities said.

"What we know at this stage is the weather conditions were very bad and that the airport was covered with fog," said Christiane Cote, a spokesman for Canada's transportation department.

"Therefore visibility was minimal."

"The pilot attempted to land one time and decided to abort his attempt and was presumably on his way to try a second attempt to land when the plane crashed."

Terrace is about 435 miles northwest of Vancouver. The plane was capable of carrying 18 passengers.

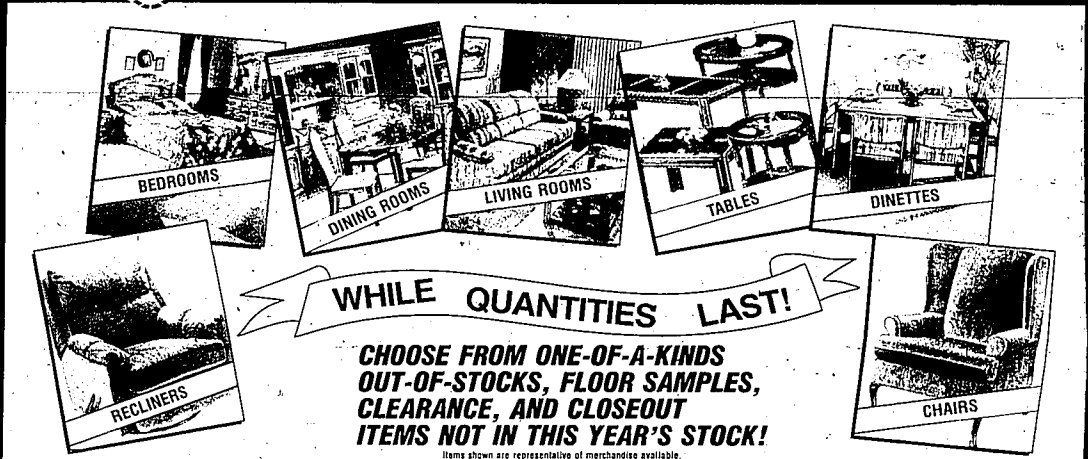

"We got a call from air radio requesting us to help locate the crash scene," said Ian Swan, who piloted the helicopter that pinpointed the wreck.

"It was patchy cloud over the area so I couldn't see much. I saw the smoke, though. I directed the ground crews to it."

New St. Louis paper gets warm welcome

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The premier edition of St. Louis' new morning newspaper, the St. Louis Sun, was snatched up around the city Monday by curious and enthusiastic readers.

"The customers were in the competition," said Ann Pointer at World News Ltd., newstand at Clayton where 700 copies were sold in about 2 1/2 hours. "They like another viewpoint."

Sales were brisk around town, and many of the Sun's shiny red street corner boxes, dubbed "facts machines" by the Sun, were empty by mid-morning.

The Sun, whose debut featured a color picture of a sun rising behind the Gateway Arch, is the first major newspaper to start from scratch in a big U.S. city since the Washington Times in 1982.

The Sun published 200,000 copies of its premier edition.

The colorful tabloid is competing with the 110-year-old St. Louis Post-Dispatch, also a morning paper. The Post-Dispatch has been the city's only daily newspaper since the St. Louis Globe-Democrat folded in October 1986.

At a sidewalk reception outside the Sun's downtown offices Monday morning, Sun employees started into traffic to hand out free copies of the paper. A Dixieland band played in the background, and employees offered coffee and donuts to passers-by.

Ralph Ingersoll II, chairman and chief executive officer of New Jersey-based Ingersoll Publication Co., which owns the Sun, is moving to St. Louis from Connecticut to become editor in chief.

"I think it's pretty clear that print has a good future. I haven't the least doubt the St. Louis Sun will be profitable. It's one of the lower risk ventures we've undertaken," he said.

Already, the Sun has attracted 55,000 subscribers — nearly twice the level company officials had been aiming for after a month of publication. Advertising space in the inaugural edition was sold out.

Last week's paid circulation at the Post-Dispatch stood at 564,000 on Sunday and 384,000 on weekdays.

Editor-in-chief Ralph Ingersoll shows off the new St. Louis newspaper Monday morning.

Ozbourne's wife drops death threat claims

BEACONSFIELD, England (AP) — The wife of Ozy Osbourne has dropped her allegations that the rock musician threatened to kill her, prosecutor Nigel Osbourne told Beaconsfield Magistrates Court on Monday.

Osbourne, 41, has been charged with making threats to kill his wife Sharon, 37, after allegedly trying to choke her when they returned home from a restaurant.

But prosecutor Osbourne told the court 25 miles west of London: "The prosecution case lies in the evidence of the aggrieved. She has made a statement but she wishes to withdraw the allegation."

Monday's hearing, however, concerned only the conditions of Osbourne's bail and the charge against him of making threats to kill her remain formally in force.

Osbourne added: "The police are considering other evidence to see whether there is a case for Mr. Osbourne to answer." Osbourne did not elaborate on this aspect of the case.

Osbourne, who as lead singer with the heavy metal band Black Sabbath established a wild-man image with heavy drinking and brawling, is a resident at nearby Huntercombe Manor, an expensive clinic for people with alcohol problems.

Celebrities marvel at Billy Wilder's artworks

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Cesar Romero, Walter Matthau and other celebrities marveled at director Billy Wilder's art collection — and at the multimillion-dollar prices the works are expected to bring at auction.

"Marvelous!" enthused artist and art connoisseur Vincent Price on Monday. "I just wish I could afford them."

The paintings, which have been hung in Wilder's Wilshire Boulevard apartment, are to be auctioned by Christie's in New York on Nov. 13.

Bidders are expected to pay from $5 million to $7 million for a work by Picasso, $1.5 million to $2 million for a Miro painting and between $1.5 million to $2 million for a Balhaus nude.

Why sell art works he has lovingly assembled over more than half a century?

"Because I can no longer add to them," said Wilder, 83, the winner of six Academy awards whose movies include such classics as "The Lost Weekend" and "The Apartment."

"All of a sudden the prices of the art I like have a number of zeros added to them," he said. "The museum gets too high," added the director's wife, Audrey. "I don't worry about theft, but I was concerned about fire. We lost a lot of good things in a fire in Billy's office at Goldwyn Studios."

Mad Dads' tackling L.A. gangs, drugs

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Los Angeles gangs have found a new market for their drugs in the Midwest, and the resulting violence has stirred a group of fathers calling themselves "Mad Dads" to fight back.

The Mad Dads, armed only with radios, patrol gang-infested areas of north Omaha to break up drug deals and reclaim neighborhoods marked as gang turf.

Earlier this month, they announced plans to use a helicopter, but a spokesman said Monday the group was grounding that idea because it caused too much controversy.

Formed by fathers angry about gangs known as the Bloods and Crips dealing drugs in their neighborhood, Mad Dads has expanded throughout the city.

Edie Adams loves, hates her biography

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Edie Adams, whose sultry cigar-hawking line, "Why don't you pick one up and smoke it sometime?" became a household phrase in the 1960s, is embroiled in a love-hate relationship with a planned autobiography.

Adams, the 60-year-old widow of pioneering TV comedian Ernie Kovacs, says she is a millionaire thanks to royalties from her 20-year stint as the Muriel, cigar model and profits from her cosmetics line, a chain of beauty salons and a line of designer clothing.

She plans to share the secrets to her successes and failures, which include a 160-acre almond orchard she bought by selling her Beverly Hills home, in the autobiography. But first, she said, she must master a word processor, so she can finish "this damned ... this wonderful book" by her deadline next spring.

"That machine and I are mortal enemies," she said.

Adams started in business in 1962 when her husband died in a car crash and left $500,000 in debts.

She also has continued to perform. This summer, she did "The Odd Couple" in Montclair, N.J.

Japan's most eligible bachelor will marry

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's Prince Aya, who left Tuesday to resume graduate studies in zoology at Oxford University in England, will marry his fiancée next June, the Imperial Household Agency announced.

The 23-year-old prince, second son of Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko, will wed Kiko Kawashima, also 23, in late June but the exact date has not been set, an agency official said.

Prince Aya is second in line to the throne after his elder brother, Crown Prince Naruhito. He is to resume his second year of study at Oxford's St. John's College in mid-October.

On Sept. 12, the 10-member Imperial Household Council, led by Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, unanimously approved the engagement of Prince Aya and Miss Kawashima, who first met four years ago on the campus of the private Gakushuin University in Tokyo.

Miss Kawashima, the daughter of a Gakushuin professor, is in a graduate course in psychology at the university.

The wedding had to wait at least until after January, the end of a one-year mourning period for Aya's grandfather, Emperor Hirohito, who died at age 87 after a 62-year reign.

"If we do dope and kill one another, we don't have a reason to be mad at anybody but ourselves," said Gossett, who won an Academy Award as best supporting actor in the 1982 movie "An Officer and a Gentleman."

The Rev. Martin Grizzell, who helped organize the event, said: "What we have here today is a group of religious people who are saying, 'We're tired.'"

Grizzell, a minister with the San Francisco Christian Center, is one of 60 religious and community leaders who formed the Committee for Community Healing, a group he called the first all-city effort by influential black leaders to fight crack.

Idaho Rockwell to remain at INEL

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Rockwell International Corp. will honor the remaining two years of its contract to operate a top secret project at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, a Rockwell INEL official said.

Rockwell last week was dropped as the primary contractor at the U.S. Department of Energy's Rocky Flats nuclear plant near Denver.

Initial reports indicated Rockwell and DOE agreed on the change, although Deputy Energy Secretary W. Henson Moore has said Rockwell essentially was fired from Rocky Flats.

But Rockwell has no intentions of pulling out of its five-year contract at INEL. Rex Catalano, Rockwell-INEL's director of administrative support, said Monday.

"We're satisfied with our performance here. Our customer is satisfied with our performance here," he said.

Rockwell operates only one INEL project, and it may be the most secretive work at the site.

The Specific Manufacturing Capability project is located in an idled aircraft hangar at Test Area North. Officials have never divulged what is manufactured in the hangar, but they have said the project involves nuclear weapons or fissionable materials.

Specific Manufacturing Capability employment figures once were classified since they indicate how much production is going on at the site, Catalano said.

But he said this week that about 500 employees now work on the project, and that employment should remain stable through the end of Rockwell's five-year contract in 1991.

When the INEL was awarded the so-called "Project X" contract in 1983, Troy Wade, then the site manager for the Department of Energy, said he expected the project to employ 200 to 300 people. There were 335 people working on the project when Rockwell began negotiating to take it over in September 1986.

Rockwell's Rocky Flats operations have been plagued with questions over safety and compliance with environmental laws. The company filed a lawsuit against the government last Thursday, contending it could not comply with conflicting waste disposal requirements for Rocky Flats.

But Catalano said that problem has not occurred at INEL.

"I'm not aware of any concern that the corporation has" over Specific Manufacturing Capability operations, he said.

In fact, Catalano said, the Energy Department has listed the project as its safest production site over the past 18 months in semi-annual safety reviews.

Rockwell reported a nitric acid spill at the hangar site in December 1987. Twenty-one workers were transported to Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center as a precaution, but all were released within two days.

Rockwell's Rocketdyne division took over Specific Manufacturing Capability operations on Dec. 29, 1986, replacing Exxon Nuclear Idaho Co. The contract was estimated at nearly $300 million.

Cats playing with rabid bat may be killed

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — An Idaho Falls woman is deciding whether to have her two cats destroyed after she found them playing with a dead bat that had rabies.

It's the first confirmed case of rabies in eastern Idaho this year and emphasizes the need to vaccinate dogs and cats against the fatal disease, says Idaho Falls veterinarian Dr. Kathleen Baidorf.

The cats' owner brought the dead bat to Baidorf last week after she found the cats playing with it in her garage.

If the cats killed the bat, there's a strong possibility that the bat and the cats bit each other, Baidorf said.

Jed Finlanson of the local health department said the rabid bat from Idaho Falls is the first confirmed case of rabies in eastern Idaho since a rabid bat was found last year in Blackfoot.

But Dr. Tom Thompson, emergency room physician at Eastern Idaho Regional Medical Center, said rabies is so common in bats that it would be rare to find one without it.

AROUND THE VALLEY

Jones counts himself out of gubernatorial race

By MIKEL BENTON
 Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Drug education and consumer fraud are the next targets for the Idaho Attorney General's office, said Jim Jones, who also said a run for the 1990 governor's seat "probably" won't happen.

The attorney general said the state is making some progress to control the sale and use of drugs, including the reinstatement of a tax on illegal drugs he pushed last year and which the Legislature made law earlier this year.

Jones said the state needs more money for drug enforcement efforts at the local level. "We need to make more money available at the local police departments, where really most of the work gets done," he told the Jerome Rotary Club. The last two years, Idaho has received $80,000 in federal drug funds, but over $2.5 million in requests for those funds.

Jones said he also plans to present a bill to the Legislature to create a drug treatment program for prisoners. About 70 percent of inmates abuse drugs, Jones said, but the State Penitentiary has no program to deal with the problem. Statistics indicate that treatment is effective with at least half of those who receive it, even among unwilling participants, he said.

The program would reduce the incidence of certain types of crime, he said. "You could cut down on the repeat offender at least half the time," he said.

JIM JONES
 Will not run

Education is the key to conquering the drug problem, he said. "We've got to do a better job of education," he said. "That's where the real returns are going to be."

Education must extend beyond young people, as potential users, to their parents. "We shouldn't just tell the kids how to resist drugs," he continued. "We should tell the parents how to recognize drug use, how to deal with it and how to prevent it."

According to Jones, "the strongest, best weapon" is parental involvement.

Jones, the occasional subject of speculation that he will run in the 1990 gubernatorial race, refused the idea.

"I've decided that governor is probably not for me this time," he said. "I would probably run for re-election. I don't feel like I've worn out my welcome in most places."

Jones also told the group about the office's four-person consumer fraud division, which, among other investigations, prosecuted Santa Rosa Marketing, recovering $200,000 for investors in the silver coin pyramid scheme.

He said this is a good return on the $135,000 used to fund the consumer fraud division. "I think we're making good here," he said.

Jones said gas prices in the valley are not far out of line with prices in other areas of the state. "The biggest part of the problem I see is the pricing practices on a national level by the major oil companies," he said.

"If some action isn't taken, I think we're going to continue to see gas prices go up."

Jones is a member of a multi-state committee to study the issue and bring it before the U.S. Congress.

Kimberly man faces cocaine, other counts

TWIN FALLS - A Kimberly man was arrested Tuesday on charges of possession of cocaine with intent to deliver, according to the Idaho Bureau of Narcotics.

David Homolka, 29, of rural Kimberly, was in the Twin Falls County Jail Tuesday awaiting arraignment. Additional charges are pending, said bureau agent Merrill Kelley.

Six law enforcement agencies in addition to the bureau were involved in the arrest: State Tax Commission, U.S. Border Patrol, and the Twin Falls prosecutor and police and sheriff's department, Kelley said.

Cassia County officials get call about footloose llama

BURLEY - It wasn't a barking dog or even a cow standing in the road.

Tuesday morning, the Cassia County Sheriff's Department and the Burley animal control office got calls about a loose llama that needed to be caught.

An Ontario, Ore., couple were headed back from Denver where they had shown the 18-month-old male llama, worth $8,000, according to animal control officer Tim Berkeley.

They spent Monday night at the Budget Motel on Overland, said a sheriff's deputy, and Tuesday morning the animal got loose in a grain field just north of the motel when the couple tried to groom it.

Eight or nine people, including curious bystanders, helped corner and catch the animal in about 10 minutes, the deputy said, but it took him and Berkeley a little longer to get the thistles out of their clothes.

Anti-drug group meeting Thursday at courthouse

TWIN FALLS - People Against Drugs, a citizens committee, will meet Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Twin Falls County Courthouse.

A panel of local criminal justice system officials will take the committee through the criminal justice process, providing an opportunity to gather a factual picture of what happens to those charge with a drug related crime. The public is invited to attend.

Jerome woman announces she'll seek council position

JEROME - Judy Schierman, a former school district bookkeeper, will run for a City Council seat in Jerome's Nov. 7 elections.

Schierman, who has lived in Jerome for 25 years, says she has not yet formulated specific goals and plans for her candidacy. "I have the time for the job, and I have the interest," she said. Schierman added that she is not running for council because she has any axes to grind.

The mother of three, Schierman attended Boise Junior College and was the Jerome School District bookkeeper for 19 years.

Two seats on the council, previously belonging to Gerald Ostler and Nathan Brooks, are being vacated this year. Ostler has announced plans to run for mayor.

Open house set tonight for Perrine Elementary

TWIN FALLS - An open house is set for 7 tonight for all I.B. Perrine Elementary School parents. The school's Parent-Teacher Organization is sponsoring the evening.

US West makes donation of truck to Salvation Army

TWIN FALLS - US West Communications has donated a truck to the Salvation Army and Working Partners, a private sector project dedicated to finding a solution to the problem of hunger in Idaho.

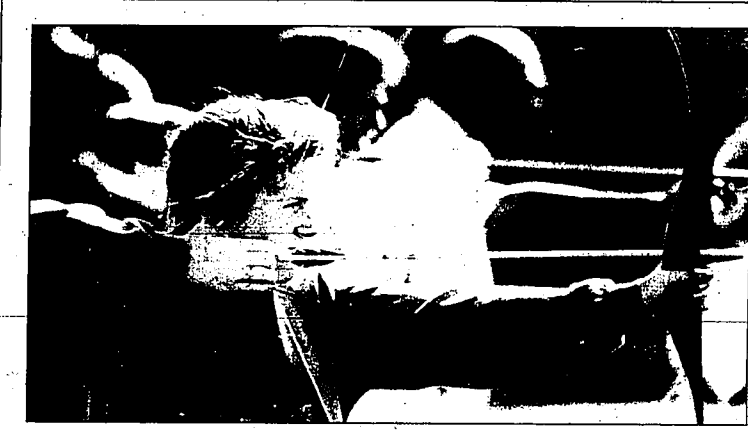

The truck will be used by the two groups to transport the many food barrels and boxes of donated canned goods.

Order of Eastern Star makes $1,000 donation

TWIN FALLS - The Order of the Eastern Star of Idaho has donated $1,000 to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center to go towards construction of the cancer treatment center.

According to past Worthy Grand Matron Donita Lancaster, the donation was a result of the order's "Sharing and Caring" Christmas project, in which members contribute money to the fund in lieu of sending traditional greeting cards.

The Idaho organization makes philanthropic gifts to organizations throughout the state.

Bull's eye

Mindy Strader, a Twin Falls High School senior, takes careful aim, top, and then reacts to a bull's eye during an archery lesson in a physical education class. Strader said hitting the target was becoming a frequent occurrence on her second day of archery class. Jerry Kleinhopf, instructor, said the students in his class try about a dozen sports, all told.

Kimberly students must have shots: Board

By LYNDA BOODY
 Times-News correspondent

KIMBERLY - Elementary school students here have about 60 days to comply with Idaho law and school policy regarding immunizations or face possible suspension.

The School Board adopted the policy to improve the district's immunization compliance rate, which was about 70 percent last year, according to the South Central District Health Department.

The policy requires parents to provide school authorities with a statement regarding the child's immunization to certain childhood diseases, Superintendent Richard Bauscher said.

Exemptions, such as for medical, religious or personal reasons, must be submitted to school officials and signed by the parent or a physician, Bauscher said.

Last year's compliance rate left 168 children susceptible to such diseases as whopping cough, rubella, mumps and measles.

The policy allows for the suspension of students who don't comply with the law and policy. Suspended students can be referred to the board for expulsion until the requirements are met through compliance or exemption, the policy states.

In other matters, enrollment is up by 23 students this school year, to 1,032 students, Bauscher said. The school has turned down more than 20 requests for enrollment from outside the district's boundaries, he said.

The board approved the enforcement of the state's 90 percent attendance rule, which allows for suspension or advancement for students in grades 9-12 who have missed more than nine days in any class during a semester. The school has had the rule the past five years. Parents who believe their child might qualify for a hardship situation may request a waiver from the building principal. Requests must be made within 10 days following the end of the semester, the policy states.

Neighbors help injured Burley man harvest his crops

The Associated Press

BURLEY - When Burley-area farmer Mike Blauer was seriously injured in a farming accident a few days ago, it couldn't have happened at a worse time.

His potatoes, sugar beets and beans were ready for harvest. Besides losing an arm in the accident, he faced the loss of most of his crops for the year.

But as he lay recovering in a Salt Lake

City hospital, his neighbors moved in. By last weekend, his 60 acres of potatoes were harvested. Neighbors also pitched in to harvest 55 acres of beets. And Blauer's father, Cecil, said another neighbor, Jack Warren, planned to thresh Mike's remaining 20 acres of beans.

Blauer was cleaning and adjusting the unloading belt on a truck when the wrench he was using became entangled and dragged him into the equipment.

Warren, who was threshing beans nearby, and a fieldman heard Blauer's cries and shut off the machinery, but it was nearly an hour before he could be extricated.

Cecil Blauer said Mike's right arm was amputated below the elbow and his left arm was broken, but the father said the left arm and hand are expected to recover.

By noon last Friday, 10-wheeler loads of potatoes were rolling out of the field every few minutes. Diggers, windrowers, trucks and people, all volunteers, swarmed over the fields.

Cecil Blauer said earlier, there were three 6-row lifter-loaders in the bean field, up to 24 trucks and many individuals helping out.

Harold Stutz, bishop of the Starby Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints View Ward, said the family was deeply grateful for the community's quick response.

Blaine studies road question

By BARBARA NEIWERT
 Times-News correspondent

HAILEY - To go private or remain public is the question under consideration for a road south of Ketchum near the old Union Pacific Railroad Co. bridge.

The Blaine County commissioners are considering a request by homeowners in the small Lane Ranch subdivision to vacate the county-owned and maintained River Ranch Road, which parallels Highway 75 on the west side.

The homeowners association wants control of the property to deter trespassing, vandalism and drug racing.

Fishermen did not appear to be the brunt of the problem, but rather others using the dead-end road for drug racing, snooping around and "from time to time, (participating in) isolated nocturnal events in parked cars," said Mitchell Drake, a subdivision homeowner.

Fishermen have access to the Big Wood River through a 15-foot easement along the river and two walking easements on the north and south ends of the subdivision, Drake said.

The road lies north of the old railroad bridge and south of the Sun Valley Sewer Treatment Plant and runs parallel to Highway 75 to the west. It ends at the subdivision, which borders the river.

Program aids reforestation

By BARBARA NEIWERT
 Times-News correspondent

STANLEY - Now you can do your part to restore to nature the trees you cut down to decorate your home at Christmas time.

The Plant A Tree for Christmas program, started last year by Stanley resident Max Casebau, provides a means for the public to conduct a simple reforestation program by planting seedlings on national forest grounds to replace those trees taken for Christmas trees or lost from logging or natural causes.

After doing research on the "greenhouse effect," Casebau said the problem is not caused only by cutting down the rain forests of South America, but by the people of the United States cutting down their own rain forests here.

Because trees take in carbon dioxide from the air and release oxygen, they have an integral link in the earth's life system.

"It's absolutely vital if we don't do it," Casebau said about the need to reforest the nation's diminishing resources.

In June Casebau handed out 200 six-inch bare-root lodgepole seedlings to Stanley residents who had signed River Ranch program. Their only task was to plant the seedlings within the U.S. Forest Service boundaries and watch their trees take root and grow.

Authorities make large drug arrest

GRAND VIEW (AP) — Authorities have arrested eight people on charges of possession or distribution of illegal drugs in what they call one of the largest drug-related arrests in Owyhee County history.

Police swept through Grand View on Sunday, arresting eight suspects on charges of possessing or distributing marijuana and methamphetamines, said Sheriff Tim Nettleton. He said the sweep netted more arrests than any other Owyhee County drug bust.

"I feel real good about what we've accomplished on this," Nettleton said, "and I have high hopes we can accomplish more."

The arrests, which took about three hours, were the result of five months of investigation by a city-county narcotics unit consisting of officers from Canyon and Owyhee counties, as well as Caldwell and Nampa.

Some charges were connected to illegal use of prescription medication, Nettleton said.

"Only small amounts of drugs were confiscated," Nettleton said. "That's the way the people deal up there," he said.

One vehicle was impounded. Most of the eight were arrested at their homes.

An investigation continues, Nettleton said. "There's a lot of activity we have not really touched yet."

One warrant and one summons remain to be served, according to a news release from the Nampa Police Department. Drug investigations in small towns such as Grand View are tough, Nettleton said. "It's hard to get to them. A stranger stands out in that community."

Those arrested and charged include: Douglas and Gail Rheeby, both about 32, possession of drug paraphernalia; Marvin Schumacher, 37, three counts of delivery of a controlled substance; Ed Ramsey Jr., 26, delivery of a controlled substance; Tim Hedges, 29, delivery of a controlled substance; Debra Carlson, 31, delivery of a controlled substance; Donald Jones, 33, delivery of a controlled substance, and Rick King, 36, delivery of a controlled substance, aiding and abetting in delivery of a controlled substance.

Crew, warning system blamed for 1988 crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators Tuesday blamed the captain and first officer and failure of a takeoff warning system for the crash of a Delta Airlines 727 that plunged into the ground at the end of a Dallas-Fort Worth airport runway a year ago, killing 14 people.

The National Transportation Safety Board, voting 4 to 1, said the airline and the Federal Aviation Administration contributed to the cause of the accident.

Delta, it said, was lax in failing to modify operating procedures, pilots' manuals, checklists, training and crew-checking programs during a period of rapid growth and merger. The board said the FAA showed a "lack of sufficiently aggressive action" in correcting Delta's known deficiencies and a lack of accountability in its air carrier inspection process.

Delta in July conceded that errors by its flight crew, in failing to set the aircraft's flaps and slats in the proper takeoff configuration, led to the crash. A Delta official attending the board meeting declined to comment on the board's decision.

The airliner, taking off with more than 100 people on a flight for Salt Lake City, was piloted by Captain Larry L. Davis, 48, with First Officer Cary W. Kirkland, 37, and Second Officer Steven Mark Judd, 30, in the cockpit.

The assessment of probable cause did not include actions by Judd, who board members said was the only pilot to perform professionally during the takeoff.

All three were fired by Delta when the airline accepted blame for the crash.

Attorney to seek release of Stevens pending trial

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A lawyer for a man authorities have called "a viable suspect" in the Green River serial slayings said Tuesday he will seek his client's release from jail pending trial on a federal weapons charge.

William Jay Stevens II finished a sentence for burglary and escape in Seattle on Monday and was brought here Tuesday afternoon by federal marshals, said Deputy U.S. Marshall Marvin Lutes.

Stevens talked with Green River Task Force investigators for the first time last week in Seattle, but officers said he failed to clear up a number of their questions.

The task force is investigating the slayings of as many as 48 young women in the nation's worst unsolved serial murder case.

Stevens has not been charged in any of the Green River killings and has denied he is the killer.

On Thursday, two Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers plan to meet with Green River investigators in Seattle to find out what they know about Stevens, says RCMP Staff Sgt. Ray Kielan. He is part of a homicide panel investigating the slaying of 15 women in British Columbia.

U.S. Magistrate James Hovis advised Stevens of his rights during a five-minute initial court appearance here Tuesday and entered a plea of innocent for him to the charge of being a felon and fugitive in possession of a firearm.

Roger Peven, appointed to represent Stevens, told reporters he would move Wednesday for a bail hearing to win his client's release.

In a separate development, authorities Tuesday confirmed the death of a public defender who provided the task force with information about Stevens and described the investigation into Dale Wells' death as "sensitive."

No official cause of death for Wells was released pending completion of an autopsy, Spokane County Coroner Dr. Graham McConnell said.

But official sources who refused to be identified said Wells apparently shot himself in the head with a shotgun last weekend and may have been distraught over the possibility of being subpoenaed to testify against Stevens.

"We agreed because this is so sensitive that the police department would release any information," McConnell said. Police handling the case could not be reached for comment Tuesday night.

Green River Task Force commander Capt. Bob Evans said Tuesday in Seattle he was aware of Wells' death but had no idea whether it was connected to Wells' conversations with Green River investigators. He refused to say if the task force would have subpoenaed Wells.

Stevens was in his fourth year at Gonzaga University School of Law when Green River investigators began receiving tips on his whereabouts after the Green River case was profiled in a nationally televised program in December.

A .45-caliber Colt handgun found in a house where Stevens was arrested in January is the basis for the federal charge. He was arrested for a 1981 escape from a work release center where he was serving a burglary sentence.

In a search warrant affidavit filed in July, the task force characterized Stevens as a "viable suspect" in its investigation into the deaths or disappearances of at least 48 women in the Pacific Northwest in 1982-1984.

Evans told the Spokesman-Review newspaper that detectives have cleared Stevens of involvement in six to eight of the Green River deaths and disappearances, and that unsubstantiated evidence might clear him of another four or five homicides.

Searchers find plane's wreckage on Mt. Borah

MAULKAY (AP) — The wreckage of an airplane was spotted Tuesday on a slope of Idaho's highest mountain, Mt. Borah, and Custer County deputies later confirmed that both Idaho Falls men aboard were dead.

The airplane had been missing since Sunday, when the men left on an airplane trip to scout an area in a central Idaho mountain area where they held hunting permits.

Ray Glidden of the state Bureau of Aeronautics said wreckage was sighted about 10 a.m. Tuesday, and the dozen search planes ended a two-day search.

Custer County deputies then went to the area by ground vehicle, and the sheriff's office confirmed later in the day that both men were dead.

Pilot Lee Reeves Jr. and passenger Doug Loper, both Idaho Falls, left Idaho Falls about 8 a.m. Sunday. The air search began at sunrise Monday.

Seven airplanes and helicopters from the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory searched Monday without success, including several Civil Air Patrol craft.

The search centered in the Borah Peak-Mahogany Creek area.

Deforestation bothers officials

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Deforestation of South American rain forests is a cause for great concern and a sensitive issue that has no parallel in this country, an official of the Society of American Foresters said Tuesday.

"The forestry profession is very concerned about deforestation," said William Banzhaf, executive vice president of the group meeting this week.

Scientists worry that large-scale clearing of the tropical rain forests for agriculture and other developments is depleting a major source of the world's oxygen supply.

"I think this profession, with its scientific management principles, can make a difference in the sound management of the rain forest," said Banzhaf. "But we feel the best approach is to attempt to provide support. The issue is a sensitive one. They rightfully have sovereignty over their resources."

The United States could provide assistance through an international forestry unit of the U.S. Forest Service, but the Brazilian government and others must first ask for help, he said.

"Those trying to solve the problem of rain forest destruction must keep people in mind, he said. The forests are being cleared by people who are looking for more space to feed themselves and improve their lives, he said.

Solons consider cable TV legislation

KELOGG (AP) — The dispute over an increase in cable television rates in the Silver Valley has prompted two northern Idaho lawmakers to consider introducing legislation to regulate the state's cable operators.

Democrat Reps. Gino White of Cataldo and Lou Horvath of Pinedhurst said the issue was brought to a head recently by WestStar Cable TV's decision to increase its basic monthly rate to $17.95.

Opponents galvanized over 2,500 signatures on petitions protesting the increase. The petitions were presented to WestStar on Sept. 15, but the company has indicated it will not reverse its position.

"The amount we've invested in the system to date requires that we charge $17.95 for a basic package. That's not a negotiable item," said Kevin Shurrai, WestStar's area manager.

Empty state truck plunges into river

BOISE (AP) — An empty state Transportation Department truck plunged into the Payette River near Banks after being struck by a cattle truck, state officials say.

Transportation technician Connie Perkins was northbound on Idaho 55 at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday and attempted to turn left into "Bee Hive" bend on the main Payette River near Banks, when she was hit on the side by a northbound cattle truck headed for Cascade. Transportation spokeswoman Julie Stuts said.

Ms. Perkins' truck was driven over a 10-foot embankment and landed nose-down in the river. Neither driver was reportedly injured. Ms. Stuts said. The state truck was used to carry gravel fill material for building a kayak and raft takeout ramp at the Bee Hive turn, but was empty at that time.

Judge to rule on change of venue

POCATELLO (AP) — Sixth District Judge William Woodland said he will rule soon on a request to move the trial of a Pocatello woman accused of abandoning her newborn baby.

Public Defender Dennis Olley argued Tuesday on motion for change of venue that media coverage and publicity in the case of Susan Aljehelle McFarland will make it impossible to find an impartial jury in the Pocatello area.

They said there has been a lot of misinformation about the case, and "everyone in the community has an opinion" about it.

Bannock County Deputy Prosecutor Joe Oddo said the abandonment of a newborn baby would prompt an emotional reaction anywhere, but a fair trial is possible in Pocatello.

BOISE (AP) — Having a witness pick a suspect out of six photographs does not taint later in-person identification by the witness, the Idaho Court of Appeals says.

The court on Tuesday unanimously upheld the conviction of Douglas Morris in an Elmore County robbery. He was charged with the April 7, 1988, robbery of the Foothills Motor Inn in Mountain Home.

Court records said Morris was identified by a clerk at the motel out of six photographs, on three different occasions and in person during his trial.

Two named to Hispanic commission

BOISE (AP) — Natalie Camacho of Pocatello and Lydia Reyes of Idaho Falls are new members of the Idaho Commission on Hispanic Affairs.

Gov. Cecil Andrus announced the appointments on Tuesday. Rudy Pena, Boise, was reappointed.

Camacho succeeds Celia Longoria, Pocatello, and Reyes replaces Gavino Cavazos, Wendell. Reyes is information processing services manager for Westinghouse Idaho Nuclear Co. and Camacho is paralegal outreach worker for the Idaho Legal Aid Society.

Paul Rogers, Nampa, was reappointed to the state Board of Social Work Examiners and Scott Adamson was reappointed to the Uniform Building Code Advisory Board.

Richard Shotwell, Twin Falls and Dale Williams, Boise, were reappointed to the state Electrical Board.

Jury chosen in deputy's wiretap trial

MOSCOW (AP) — A jury of two men and 10 women has been selected to hear the case of Gerald Marko, the former Idaho County deputy who faces two federal felonies for wiretapping phones at the sheriff's substation at Kookkia.

U.S. District Judge Harold L. Ryan and attorneys on both sides spent three hours Monday morning interviewing and selecting jurors. Once seated, however, the jury was dismissed for the rest of the day while attorneys on both sides worked on untangling some legal knots. The trial will resume Tuesday.

Alan Derr, a Boise lawyer representing Marko, had until noon Tuesday to respond to a writ of mandamus from the Solicitor General's office at Washington, D.C., to the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals. That writ is a formal request to the appeals court to order Ryan to give specific instruction to the jury in the Marko trial and also includes a request to postpone the trial.

Idaho Power says consumption rises

BOISE (AP) — Through the first eight months of the year, Idaho Power Co. says electricity consumption was up nearly 6 percent from the year before.

Through the end of August, the utility said overall consumption was up 5.9 percent, with all classes of use up from 1988.

The largest increase, 29.5 percent, was in firm reserves, a reflection of improved water conditions after two years of drought cut the amount of surplus power available for resale outside the system.

The category reflects new contracts Idaho Power has signed with other utilities to provide power for a fixed period.

Idaho Power said it plans to shut off power to irrigation pumps starting Oct. 17.

Agents seek Nevada felons in Idaho

Federal marshals are searching the Caldwell and Homedale areas for two escaped felons from Nevada who are considered armed and dangerous.

Steven George, 40, and his brother, John, 34, escapes from a federal halfway house in Las Vegas, apparently returned a car to a relative's home in Caldwell about 7 p.m. Sunday. Marshal Ron Evans said.

14 Idaho school districts lack contracts; salary disagreements among main causes

BOISE (AP) — Boise teachers have turned down a contract offer from their district in a roundly advisory vote that sets the stage for a fact-finding investigation of the schools' budget.

"It is an overwhelming sign of the teachers' dissatisfaction," said Jody Clark, president of the Boise Education Association. The vote was on the district's entire package, including salary and class size.

Fourteen Idaho school districts, including some of the state's largest, remained without teacher contracts Tuesday as disagreements over what priority higher salaries should receive in funding increases authorized by the 1989 Legislature.

Gayle Moore, spokeswoman for the Idaho Education Association, said teachers are working without contracts in Worley, St. Maries, the Clearwater School District at Orofino, the Central Idaho School District at Grangeville, Lapwai, Caldwell, Mountain Home, Shoshone, Clark County, Mackay, Leadore, Nampa and Boise.

"Most (districts) have had long, extensive negotiations that haven't produced anything yet.

I think the cause is the way the Legislature structured the appropriations. They didn't give the districts any flexibility in how to spend the money.

—IEA spokeswoman Gayle Moore

It's unusual to have this many this far into the year," Ms. Moore said. "I think the cause is the way the Legislature structured the appropriations. They didn't give the districts any flexibility in how to spend the money. They pretty much obligated all of it."

In a Tuesday advisory vote over the Boise School District's one-year contract recommendation, 87 percent or 864 teachers rejected it, compared to 13 percent, or 124, in agreement. The district offered a 3.5 percent salary increase, while the instructors wanted a 5 percent hike.

"We're disappointed with the results," Boise

School Board President Quinten Homer said. "We wish they would have been more affirmative."

"We'd like to be able to offer more than we're now capable of paying," Homer said. School officials announced last week that auditors had found a $420,000 shortfall in the district budget, making the chance of a salary increase agreeable to the teachers even more difficult.

District spokeswoman Pat Wayland said, initially, the entire free-fund balance of $2.3 million was offered to the teachers, but with the shortfall, that will amount to less. Both sides now may opt for a fact-finder, a third party to investigate the district's finances.

Teachers and administrators in the Pocatello School District have tentatively agreed on a new contract, but it had yet to be ratified Tuesday.

Meanwhile, nearly 300 of the Nampa School District's 384 teachers turned out Monday for an informational picket, and demonstration organizers called it "a good showing" of unity.

State education board divisions could threaten new state classroom, lab project at Idaho Falls

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Divisions of the state Board of Education could jeopardize legislative approval of a new state classroom and laboratory project at Idaho Falls, says state Sen. John Hansen, R-Idaho Falls.

Hansen, speaking at a Board of Education committee meeting Tuesday, also questioned whether the building, which would cost an estimated $7.5 million, would eliminate the planned expansion of University Place in Idaho Falls.

"I'm concerned there is some division on the board, and I'm concerned about what we (state legislators) can deliver," said Hansen. "I hope we haven't chilled the opportunity to expand University Place."

Idaho State University wants an $8 million building of its own to meet the growing demands for undergraduate education at Idaho Falls. However, the Board of Education voted earlier this month to build a "generic" facility available to all state-owned institutions.

Some board members objected. They urged a delay until a special board committee studying the higher education needs of the Idaho Falls area makes its report at the end of this year.

Meanwhile, the University of Idaho Foundation plans to raise $6 million to expand University Place, where many higher education courses are offered.

But Fred Tingley, director of University Place, said, "It would be silly" to proceed with expansion if the Legislature funds a state-owned facility.

Gary Fay, Twin Falls, chairman of the committee and a member of the state board, said a decision to seek a state-owned building should not preclude expansion of University Place.

Fay said there is similar concern that the committee's work will chill growth at Eastern Idaho Technical College, but he said the committee's goal is to stimulate higher education in the area, not impede it.

Fay also disputed committee member Anne Voilleague's charge that the board's decision to seek a new building was premature. No matter what the committee proposes, Fay said, the need for a new classroom facility has been evident for three or four years.

Board Executive Director Rayburn Barton said construction on the proposed building probably could not start for two years. By waiting until the committee made its recommendations, construction would be delayed by another year, Fay pointed out.

The 65,000-square-foot building would be about 75 percent classroom space and 25 percent lab space. Idaho State originally wanted a building of 50 percent laboratory and 50 percent classroom space.

The U of I Foundation plans to double University Place's 45,000-square-foot capacity. The Foundation planned to raise private money for the expansion and then lease the building to state institutions.

Philadelphia proves a gastronomic surprise

It was truly a serendipitous experience. We were asked to Myrtle Beach, S.C. to enjoy a post-conference weekend. But Hurricane Hugo sent us scurrying to our hosts' hometown of Philadelphia.

Now Philadelphia was a blank in my mind. Oh, I knew the famous sights I wanted to see — the Liberty Bell, Independence Hall and those steps Rocky ran up in his movie, but what else was there?

Nancy Joy Jones
Valley cooking

Well, a brief weekend of the taste and sights was enough to make me want to go back and linger.

We started out with dinner at The Old Original Bookbinders restaurant. This place was a restaurant 25 years before Idaho became a state! And you know the only way that could happen is to consistently and nicely serve good food.

We met John Taxin, the venerable host of Bookbinders who proudly introduced us to his grandson, making three generations of that family in active management.

Yes, the lobsters were enormous. I think the largest ordered at our table was 2½ pounds. And that was sort of middle-of-the-road size.

What caught my eye were the desserts. The cheesecake I could sort of be blasé about (after all, we get Philadelphia Cream Cheese here) but a shortcake that came in at 5½ inches tall was exceptional. Ah, don't forget the peanut butter pie, either. We made ourselves take an after dinner walk!

The next morning we headed for the downtown again. Our first stop was the Reading Railroad (remember that name from Monopoly?) Terminal building. It's now a large farmer's-style market.

This is one place not to shop hungry, because you can eat and eat and eat and still not be to lunch time. There were fresh and dazzling clean oriental produce markets with raw-made salads, restaurants with cut-on-the-spot steak and cheese sandwiches, Pennsylvania Dutch ice cream and fresh, made-in-front-of-your-eyes soft pretzels.

Some booths were operated by the Amish folk, others by hardy farmers who featured corn-fed chicken and other poultry. I lingered over the fresh fish display and counted 36 different varieties available. Oh, the makings for a feast were right there under that roof.

Finally filled to the brim from tastes, nibbles and aromas we moved on to the historical area.

Did I get goosebumps looking at the Liberty Bell and standing in Independence Hall? You bet I did! It was worth standing in line to see them both and hear our Park Service people tell what had happened and when. In fact, I did it again the next day with youngest son.

I almost forgot the stairs. You know the ones that marked Rocky's decision to become best? Well, they are for the Art Building where the Annenberg collection of Impressionist paintings were on display.

There was a long, long line here too, so we enjoyed watching people on the steps. It's gratifying to know that people are still standing in line to see our historical and artistic treasures.

Okay, now for some recipes. I can't find directions for the soft pretzels. Would love to try them. Can any of you readers help and share?

This recipe was sent in by a reader. It comes very close to the Bookbinders cheesecake (they NEVER give out their recipe for this).

CHEESECAKE THAT TASTES LIKE BOOKBINDERS

5 (8-ounce size) packages of cream cheese
1½ cups sugar
4 teaspoons flour juice of 1 fresh lemon
8 ounces (1 cube) butter
7 eggs, beaten
2 teaspoons vanilla
2 cups heavy (whipping) cream
½ cup evaporated milk

Make a graham cracker crust ahead. (An easy combination is 1¾ cups of graham cracker crumbs, 1/3 cup softened butter or margarine and ¼ cup sugar, mixed thoroughly and pressed into the bottom and up the sides for at least 1 inch, of a 9-inch springform pan).

What happens to all those new wonder products

By Caroline E. Mayer
The Washington Post

'Abracadabra, poof! Now you see it, now you don't!

Almost as fast as magic, products come and go at the supermarket. In fact, it seems like a simple fact of shopping: Grow attached to a product and before you know it, it will vanish from the shelves.

Take the case of Marjorie Levine. The Laurel, Md., special education teacher discovered Ocean Spray's new carbonated fruit drink "Splash" last March and instantly became one of its loyal buyers.

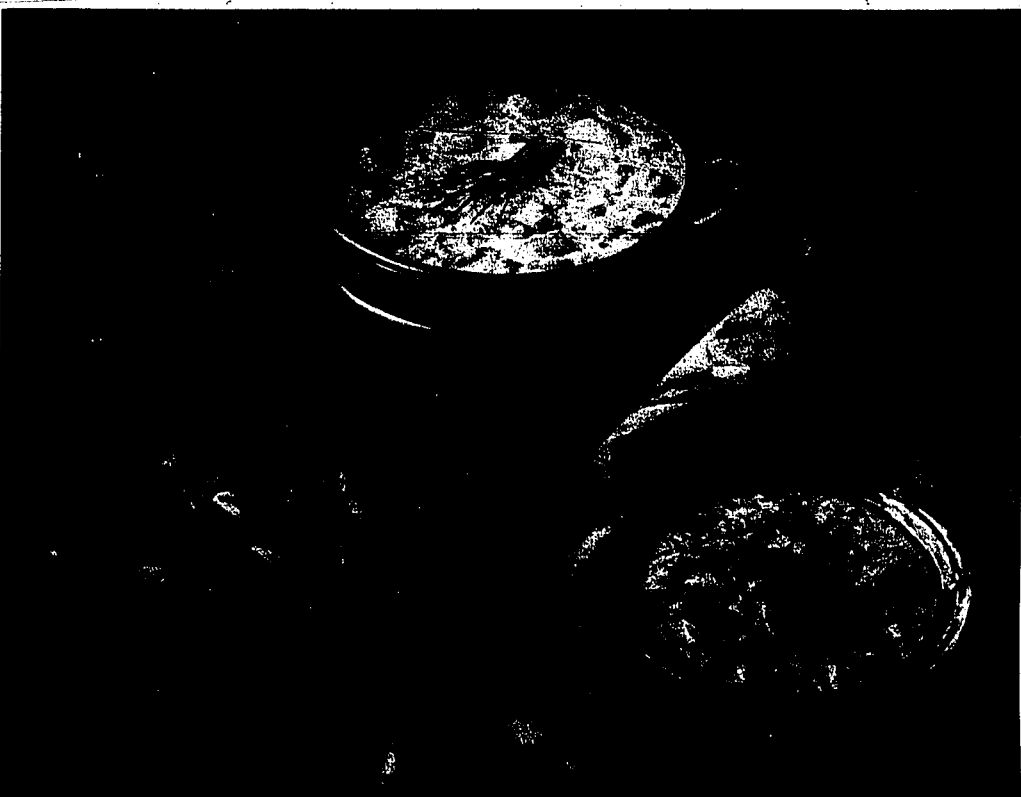

Two months later she noticed it was on sale — a clearance sale, she ultimately learned. In June, she no longer could find it on her supermarket's shelves. "I was annoyed. I kept going to various grocery stores to see if they carried it. I couldn't believe such a great product had disappeared," she says.

There are a host of reasons why products become extinct — ranging from low shopper acceptance to changing consumer tastes to new technology. Even the recent rash of corporate acquisitions has led to the demise of many popular products.

And frequently, as was the case with Splash, the product is merely a test to see

Cream Chicken-corn Chowder, Beef and Broccoli Soup Almondine and Creamy Shrimp and Mushroom Soup taste like they simmered all day

The soup season calls for quick, nutritious recipes

Usher in soup season with homemade, whole-meal soups and chowders. Check-full of chunky vegetables and fragrant with savory seasonings, these steaming soups will make appetites spring to life.

Serve these hearty soups and chowders with a loaf of crusty bread or corn bread and a simple salad for fabulous, fuss-free meals in minutes.

CREAMY CHICKEN-CORN CHOWDER

1 whole chicken breast, boned, skinned and cut into 1-inch pieces
1 small onion, chopped
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 can (about 14 ounces) chicken broth
1 package (5.1 ounces) Uncle Ben's Country Inn Brand Rice Dishes Creamy Chicken and Mushroom 1½ cups milk
1 can (8 ounces) cream style corn chopped chives or sliced green onion tops

BEEF AND BROCCOLI SOUP ALMONDINE

½ pound boneless beef sirloin, cut 1-inch thick
2 teaspoons finely shredded fresh ginger
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon peanut or vegetable oil
1 package (4.6 ounces) Uncle Ben's Country-Inn Brand Rice Dishes Broccoli Almondine
1 can (about 14 ounces) beef broth
2½ cups water

Use those garden vegetables

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — It's harvest time for millions of Americans who tend backyard gardens. What do you do with all that zucchini, cauliflower, peppers and corn? One of the best ways to feature jewels from your backyard garden is in a warming soup.

If you don't have a garden, you can use produce from the local market. Make extra batches of this warming soup to share.

BACKYARD GARDEN VEGETABLE SOUP

2 medium onions, thinly sliced (2 cups)
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 teaspoons all-purpose flour
One 10½-ounce can condensed chicken broth

1 cup of water.
1 cup sliced cauliflower broken into florets
½ cup whole kernel corn
½ cup chopped sweet red or green pepper
½ cup zucchini, cut in thin strips
Dash ground red pepper

In a 2-quart saucepan over medium heat cook onion in hot butter until golden and tender, about 15 minutes, stirring occasionally.

Sir in flour. Cook 1 minute, stirring constantly.

Gradually stir in chicken broth and water. Add remaining ingredients. Heat to boiling. Reduce heat to low. Simmer 10 minutes. Makes about 4 cups.

1½ tablespoons cornstarch
1 cup fresh or thawed frozen pea pods, cut into thin strips
½ cup diced red bell pepper
Cut beef into ½-inch strips; cut each strip into 1-inch pieces. Toss with ginger and garlic. Heat oil in large saucepan over medium-high heat. Stir-fry beef in two batches just until no longer pink, about 2 minutes.

Ice cream from spuds proves Idaho success

By JULIE FANSELOW SWETYE
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — I scream, you scream, we all scream for... "spudcream"?

Taking a casual look at the container for Al & Reed's Ice Cream, sitting there in the freezer case next to the other "premium" brands, you'd hardly notice there is anything unusual about it.

Silhouetted sophisticates hold up cones piled high with the frozen treat. The brown-mint green packaging is oh-so-chic. But wait! There, in very tiny print, are these words: "Made with potatoes?" That's outrageous!

That's right. Al & Reed's all-natural, upscale ice cream is made, in part, from potatoes. And — surprise, surprise — it's made right here in Idaho.

In fact, Idaho Falls dairyman Alan Reed has been making potato ice cream since 1987 and he's now up to 15 flavors, including chocolate peanut butter, Southern black cherry, apple pie, cherry pecan, cherry vanilla, bubble gum and the three standbys, chocolate, vanilla and strawberry.

The ice cream is now available in eight states, and Al & Reed's gross sales for the first six months of this year matched sales for all of 1988. The company is branching out, now making soft-serve ice cream, frozen yogurt and fruit sorbet — all with potatoes.

Needless to say, Idaho spud farmers are pretty excited about the possibilities of these new markets. Reed has said that if his company captures 10 percent of the U.S. ice cream market, he could use all the potatoes the state produces.

How did all of this get started? Reed's father, LeRoy, used to be president of the National Potato Board. He jokingly asked his son, who was already making a traditional ice cream, "Why don't you put potatoes in that ice cream of yours?"

But Reed liked the idea and started experimenting with formulas. On his first try, the mixer exploded, shooting globs of the concoction all over the ceiling — and Reed. But after a year of trying, the product was ready for market.

Al & Reed's has gotten some national attention. People and Business Week magazines have done articles, and it was mentioned on National Public Radio. It's even the official dessert of the U.S. women's

Chicken Skillet Italiano is a quick-to-fix meal with Italian seasonings ideal for family dinners

Families will love Chicken Skillet Italiano

Chicken Skillet Italiano is a recipe that is a quick-to-fix, family-pleasing meal that's ready to serve in short order.

The basic recipe, Chicken Skillet Italiano, makes a delicious addition to any menu. To prepare, saute chicken-flavored rice, add seasonings and top with boneless skinned chicken breasts, broccoli flowerets and chunks of tomato. Just before serving, sprinkle with mozzarella cheese. The recipe, prepared and served in a range to table skillet, is ready in minutes, thanks to convenience products such as seasoned, flavored rice and pre-shredded cheese.

2 whole chicken breasts, split, boned, skinned (approx. 1 lb.)
 2 cups broccoli flowerets
 1 cup chopped tomato
 1 cup (4 ounces) shredded mozzarella cheese

Combine rice-vermicelli mix in large skillet. Sauté over medium heat, stirring frequently until vermicelli is lightly browned. Stir in water, contents of seasoning packet and basil. Top with chicken; bring to a boil. Cover, reduce heat. Simmer 15 minutes. Top with broccoli and tomato. Cover; continue cooking 5 minutes or until most of liquid is absorbed. Sprinkle with cheese.

Consumers are becoming interested in safer, more organic food products

NEW YORK (AP) — Soon after Clark Wolf moved to New York from California, he asked at brunch for a screwdriver, but only if the orange juice was fresh. What do you mean, asked the waiter, who then explained, "We just opened it."

Americans' ideas of what constitutes fresh, high-quality food have changed in the last decade, but many growers say there is a long way yet to go.

produce food first for taste rather than appearance, several participants said.

"Most growers are still trading off the qualities we're interested in," said Robert L. Bildner of RLB Food Distributors, which brings organic and specialty produce into supermarkets and restaurants in New York and New Jersey.

grown produce can often be more expensive and harder to find than that grown with the help of chemicals. Only 16 states define organic foods, and proponents of alternative farming methods charge that not only have they received little government support but also that most government programs encourage farming with synthetic

'Fifteen years ago, people said, oh yes, organic gardening. Isn't that amusing.'
 — Clark Wolf, restaurant consultant

"Fifteen years ago, people said, oh yes, organic gardening. Isn't that amusing," Wolf, a food and restaurant consultant, said in a panel discussion at the American Institute of Wine and Food's Fourth Annual Marketplace Tasting.

"I find this to be a very exciting time because I grew up in a family that's been in organics since the '40s, and I'm used to living on the fringe," said Shepard Ogden, a seed supplier from Vermont who specializes in lettuce. "I'm very happy that we may not always be on the fringe."

"Growers in Washington will admit to me that the beautiful red delicious apple tastes mealy, but they believe the consumer prefers it," he said.

Organically grown apples won't have the "perfect" colors of those grown with chemicals, but Bildner noted that with a bit of cleverness, the lack of uniformity can be overcome. He noted an advertising campaign for organic McIntosh apples that plays on the greening of these apples.

chemicals.

Ogden said the scare is not necessarily bad because it draws public and government attention to the quality of the food supply. "We needed a catalyst, we needed a triggering event," he said.

Several speakers cited a National Research Council report on farming and called for programs that encourage fewer chemicals and more alternative farming methods.

Next year, Congress is to draft a farm bill to replace the 1985 law, and the report recommended an increase from $4.45 million to at least $40 million a year to support what the Agriculture Department calls low-input, sustainable agriculture.

The Marketplace Tasting celebrated the variety and quality of food and wine from the Northeast — from purple potatoes to deer sausage. Among the foods exhibited were pates, fishes, cheeses, tomatoes of many varieties, melons and lettuce, chickens and eggs. Even a 1,250-pound Angus steer from New Jersey.

As more organic produce is available, taste will improve, he said, but "you'll see a lot more bruised, misshapen produce."

A joint program by Cornell University and the New York state Department of Agriculture uses a system called integrated pest management to help farmers learn to use less pesticides. It resulted last year in 20 tons fewer pesticides being used on the state's apple crop, said Gerald Moore, the agriculture department spokesman.

But organic farming still is outside the mainstream, and organically

Help your child eat nutritious school lunch

NEW YORK (AP) — You can get your child to take his lunch to school, but can you make him eat what's inside?

Your concept of a healthful lunch may appeal to another adult, but it may not be appetizing to your youngster. (Those celery and carrot sticks you faithfully pack may go uneaten.)

Here are some tips for healthy, well-balanced lunches that your child will eat — instead of throwing away:

- Hide the veggies: Add finely chopped celery, carrots, or green pepper to tuna or chicken salad. Stuff celery sticks with peanut butter or low-fat cream cheese.
- Try new sandwich fillings: Choose chicken, turkey or lean roast beef, instead of the same old tuna or peanut butter sandwich. Avoid cured meats such as bologna or salami.
- Try variations on the theme: If only peanut butter will do, how about peanut butter with banana? (Slice the banana lengthwise for a more secure sandwich.) Peanut butter and cheese? Or try peanut butter with any of the following: raisins, dates, shredded coconut, chopped nuts, diced apples or sliced almonds.
- Use different breads: Add variety to your child's favorite peanut butter or tuna sandwich with different breads. Try wheat, honey bran, rye, or raisin; bagels, pita pockets, English muffins; croissants, onion or sourdough rolls.

- A wide-mouth Thermos adds variety: In warm weather, fill the Thermos with cold pasta salad, coleslaw, grated carrot and raisin salad, fruit salad, baked beans or low-fat cottage cheese. In cold weather, fill the thermos with vegetable soup, chili, stew or spaghetti.
- Vary the beverage: Low-fat milk is important, but for variety, you can pack fruit juices or low-fat cocoa. Keep single-serve cartons of fruit juice cold by freezing them the night before, then wrapping them in plastic wrap. The juice will thaw in time for lunch and help keep other items cool.
- Fruit: Many children prefer fruit that is cut up to a whole piece. Cut an orange into "smiles" for easy eating. Just cut the orange in half crosswise; place cut side up. Cut three to four wedges from each half and place in a plastic bag. Other fruits that won't discolor when sliced and cut: melon, pineapple and strawberries. Pack in a plastic container.
- Other desserts: If you include cookies, make them small ones. Choose fig bars, oatmeal or peanut butter cookies.

Be sure to give children a good variety of foods by selecting one item from each food group — meat and alternatives; bread and cereals; fruits and vegetables; milk and dairy products.

The French dish Veal Marengo has been updated to Turkey Saute Marengo

Classic recipe now simpler and healthier

Here is a delicious classic that has been simplified and made healthier, but hasn't lost its taste appeal. The secret is that fragrant herb, thyme. As French chefs have long known, thyme must be used with discretion, but few herbs can do as much for a dish.

The recipe is a shortened, simplified version of the traditional French Provençal stew, Veal Marengo. Turkey strips used instead of veal, sauteing them quickly in a small amount of vegetable oil with mushrooms, green peppers and canned tomatoes. Thyme is original in this classic, along with garlic, black pepper and a touch of orange peel. White wine provides another authentic touch. Calories? 272 per portion.

To release the flavors quickly be sure to crush the thyme leaves between your palms before adding them.

TURKEY SAUTE MARENGO

- 1/4 cup dry white wine
- 2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 cup sweet green bell pepper cut in strips
- 1 pound boneless turkey breast (cutlets) cut in 1/2-inch

- strips
- 3 ounces fresh mushrooms, halved or quartered (about 1/2-inch strips)
- 2 cans (14 1/2 ounces each) stewed tomatoes, undrained
- 1 teaspoon thyme leaves, crushed
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1/2 teaspoon grated orange peel
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon ground black pepper

In a custard cup combine wine and cornstarch until smooth; set aside. In a large skillet heat oil until hot. Add green pepper; cook and stir until almost crisp-tender, about 2 minutes. Stir in turkey and mushrooms; cook and stir until turkey is no longer pink, 2 to 3 minutes. Stir in tomatoes, thyme, garlic powder, orange peel, salt and black pepper; heat, stirring occasionally until hot, about 2 minutes. Add reserved wine mixture; cook and stir until mixture boils and thickens. Serve over steamed rice, garnished with orange slices, if desired.

Cooking in college should be easy, healthful and speedy

By SUJATA BANERJEE
The Baltimore Evening Sun

College is a time to experiment and savor life. That is why the monotonous diet of the cafeteria makes some students unhappy.

The solution: to cook for oneself. Having emerged from the ivory tower only recently, I can tell you that students will take the time to cook if they have good recipes that take a short time to cook. Living in a dormitory, my cooking experience was sadly limited to a hot pot and Oodles of Noodles.

When I moved into an off-campus apartment, my roommates and I were inspired by the "Silver-Palette Cookbook," serving spinach and feta triangles at parties and making delicious sauteed chicken dishes for a relaxed dinner before heading to the library. Maybe we liked cooking more than studying. But that's another story.

"The College Cookbook," by Gori Harrington, (Storry Publishing; $7.95) is a fine collection of student recipes from colleges around the country. The recipes are easy, healthy and ethnically diverse, including Mexican, Indian and Chinese recipes. I was amazed at the number of unusual casseroles—from a spinach-mushroom hot dish to an orange-yam combination and a Brazilian beef casserole including both coffee and wine.

"The Vegetarian Student," by Jonny Baker (Faber & Faber; $6.95) is a very British cookbook bound to appeal to students who have spent a year away and wish they were still there. The book also could be a lifesaver for the vegetarian who is sick of cheese sandwiches.

But unless you know that "cavergette" means zucchini and "pudding" is a generic term for dessert, you will have some language problems. The recipes are more international (and interesting) than strictly British, such as a chickpea, tomato and leek soup that sounded heavenly, grilled cornmeal (we know it as polenta) and fruit crumble for dessert.

"The Campus Survival Cookbook 2," by Jacqueline Wood and Joelyn Scott Gilchrist (Quill; $6.95) is the sequel to a college cookbook originally published in 1973. This book offers repeats on some of the favorite recipes in the early book, and basics such as peeling and chopping onions and boiling eggs and spaghetti.

The format of the book is four weeks of balanced dinner menus, which may be a bit too rigid for the student cook who feels like pasta one night and chicken the next. Another negative is the layout of the book—inexpensively typeset, the recipes are hard to spot at a glance and make reading the book a tenuous process.

The recipes are very easy, though, and the "most graduate" and "party sections" of the book offer especially nice recipes such as Chinese beef and peppers and coq au vin.

Finally, "On Campus Cookbook," by Mollie Fitzgerald (Workman Publishing; $4.95) should be mailed to every college freshman.

Fitzgerald, who wrote the book as an undergraduate at Duke University, offers recipes that require only a hot pot, blender or toaster oven, allowed in most dormitory rooms. The emphasis is not on fixing square meals, but fun snacks and party foods to share with friends.

Frozen and pre-packaged foods are often in play, doctored with seasonings in amazing ways.

Here are some recipes from cookbooks aimed at students.

ZUCCHINI DINNER IN A DISH
1 cup onion, chopped
2 pounds ground beef
3 medium-sized zucchini, sliced.
2 cans whole tomato sauce
2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese, grated

1 clove garlic, minced
Brown onions and meat together. Drain fat. Add remaining ingredients. Cook at medium-low heat for 45 minutes on top of stove. Salt and pepper to taste. Serve sprinkled with grated Parmesan cheese. Serves 6-8. From "The College Cookbook."

SHRIMP 'N' RICE
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 tablespoon safflower oil
1 garlic clove, minced
1 bay leaf, crushed
1 teaspoon minced parsley
1 1/2 pounds shrimp (the frozen light ones do quite well)
1 cup sauterne wine (optional)
Salt and pepper to taste
1 teaspoon cornstarch
Saute onion in oil until onion starts to color. Add garlic, bay leaf, parsley and shrimp. Saute 3 minutes. Add sauterne, salt and pepper. Cover and simmer gently for 20 minutes. Thicken sauce with cornstarch which has been mixed into a paste with a little water. Simmer until sauce thickens. Serve over rice. Serves 6. The same recipe works for sole, haddock, or whatever fish you have. From "The College Cookbook."

CHOCOLATE FONDUE.
1 pound milk chocolate bars: Hershey, Cadbury, or your favorite brand

4-ounce dark chocolate bar
3/4 cup light cream or evaporated milk

1 tablespoon vanilla extract or 3 to 4 tablespoons Kahlua or other liqueur

Break the candy bars into pieces and place the pieces in your hot pot on a low temperature setting.

Add the cream or milk. Stir constantly until the chocolate is melted and the mixture is smooth.

Add the vanilla or liqueur just before serving. Serve the fondue right from the hot pot, which should still be plugged in so you can keep the chocolate warm.

Never too late for abused child to seek out counseling

DEAR ABBY: When I was 4 or 5 years old, I was sexually abused by my stepfather. I told my mother, but she wouldn't believe me. This went on until I was 9 years old. After that, he went to some kind of sanitarium. I never really knew what kind of place it was, but I do remember that he was locked up.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR NIGHTMARES: It's NEVER too late to get counseling and join a support group. Write to: Survivors of Incest Anonymous Inc., P.O. Box 2187, Baltimore, Md. 21222-6817. Be sure to enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for the address of the nearest support group. Please go. You have nothing to lose but your nightmares. Good luck and God bless.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is that I have absolutely no sense of direction. Every time I drive to a new place, I allow myself 30 minutes to get lost because I know I'll need it. I am so accustomed to getting lost, I no longer find it distressing. I just go back and try again.

I have been lost within a few blocks of where I'm going so I keep driving around until I find my way.

Usually when I'm absolutely sure I'm going the right way, I'm wrong. My husband insists that I get lost all the time because I'm just too lazy to make the effort to remember. This is the only thing we ever argue about. I told him that a sense of direction is something a person is born with — like the ability to sing or compose music. Some people have it and others don't. If I'm wrong, please tell me.

— WRONG-WAY HOUSEWIFE
DEAR WRONG WAY: No one is born with a "sense of direction." Your husband is right — it's simply a matter of paying attention to where you are and deciding how to get where you're going. But first you must care enough to chart your course, and then concentrate on staying on it.

By allowing yourself time to get lost, you are setting yourself up to get lost. Obviously, getting lost is not a problem to you, but it can be an inconvenience to others. Try harder.

DEAR ABBY: A reader wanted to know whether to include her deceased children when a stranger asked, "How many children do you have?" She said if she didn't mention them, it would be as though she felt their lives had no meaning — and they never existed. Many years ago, I met a woman who handled the question this way: "I have four, but I only got to keep two." (Two had died in infancy.) I thought that was a very nice way to handle it.

— MRS. H.L. WHITING, N.J.

DEAR MRS. H.L.: So do I. But I was stumped when a St. Paul reader asked, "How should I respond when I'm asked how many children I have?"

I had a baby out of wedlock when I was 16. I can never forget my first-born, whom I gave up for adoption to be raised by another. Should I not count her as one of my children? Readers?

Letters of thanks

Development center

thanks Dairymans group

The Adult and Child Development Center wants to thank the Idaho Dairymans Association for sending 52 developmentally delayed and handicapped children to the Twin Falls County Fair.

DARREL BOURNER
Adult and Child Development Center

Mike Stocks deserves

thanks for helping out

Just a brief note of thanks to Mike Stocks and a gentleman who helped push my stalled car out of traffic Friday morning at the intersection of Filor and Harrison.

Mike did not need to stop, but he did. He not only got my car started, but made several suggestions as to the problem.

I have lived in areas that the only help one could get was to wait for a policeman to call for help, so I really appreciate people like Mike and others who see a need and follow through.

MRS. NETTIE L. JENNINGS
Twin Falls

Ohio visitors appreciate

a neighborly attitude

My family and I want to thank one of your employees, Maxine Kulhanek, for helping us get speedy help for our disabled car when we were traveling through your beautiful state this summer. Whether you want to call it a good neighbor attitude or Christian charity, Maxine is an example to our daughters (ages 14 and 11) that we greatly appreciated.

You can be especially proud to have her represent the women of Idaho and your newspaper.

Respectfully,
TOM AND JOANN GRANDE
Stow, Ohio

Use of wheelchairs was #### appreciated by many

We would like to thank Dan Peters and Cindy DeMoney of the Twin Falls County Fair for being so helpful and allowing us to have wheelchairs available for the handicapped at the fair.

We also want to express our deepest appreciation to Linda Ballentine, Norco Medical Supply, Wayne Stienscker, Whitmore Oxygen Co., Debbie Nelson, Twin Falls Clinic and Dick's Pharmacy for loaning the chairs for this event.

Also we want to thank The Rental Place and The Rock Creek for letting us use their canopy.

This service was greatly appreciated by many people who, otherwise, would not have been able to attend this event.

BOB AND PEGGY OSUND
Twin Falls

Lady golfers appreciate

donation of door prizes

Dear Southern Idaho Distributing: The women of the Canyon Springs Ladies Golf Association would like to thank you for the wonderful door and tee prizes you furnished for our Club Championship. They were greatly appreciated and a real bonus for our tournament.

We would also like to thank Leonard Anderson for coordinating everything to meet our deadline.

Thanks again,
KAREN POE
Canyon Springs Ladies Golf Association

Lucky Boots, Spurs Club

thanks Barry's, Ernst

Lucky Boots & Spurs 4-H Club of Filor would like to thank Barry's Market for letting us use its panels on our horse stalls during the fair.

We'd also like to thank Ernst Nursery for letting us use their shrubs and trees for decorating our barn.

Time to plan storage of fruits, vegetables for the winter

Allen Wilson
Iptermountain gardening

In a previous column, it was mentioned that mature green tomatoes can be stored and ripened over a period of a month or two at temperatures of 50 to 65 degrees.

There are a number of other vegetables and one fruit which can be stored at home for much longer periods. Some of the best are apples, onions, potatoes, carrots and other root vegetables, cabbage and winter squash.

Apples, carrots, rutabagas (storage turnips), pumpkins and beets store best at temperatures near freezing (32 degrees) and high humidity. They can be stored at slightly warmer temperatures, but will not last as long.

To maintain humidity, line boxes with plastic or place inside plastic bags with holes. Late cabbage stores best at similar temperatures but does not like as high humidity.

Potatoes store best at temperatures near 40 degrees with high humidity. Apples, cabbage, potatoes, and the other root vegetables can all be stored in outdoor pits or trenches.

Dig a one-half to one foot pit in your garden. Place several inches of straw in the bottom. Pile a cone shaped mound of vegetables on top of the straw and then cover the mound with a four-inch layer of straw. Place three or four inches of soil on top of the straw.

Leave a straw chimney at the top of the mound for ventilation. This also makes it easier to open up the pit when the soil is frozen. It is also a good idea to dig a trench around the mound so that water does not accumulate in the pit.

Since it is difficult to reclose a pit during freezing weather, it is better to make several pits with a two-to-four week supply of vegetables in each. A small quantity of vegetables can be stored in the refrigerator or a cool room for short periods.

Carrots and parsnips can be stored in the ground where they have been grown if covered with a foot of insulating material like straw, grass clippings or leaves. This will prevent the ground from freezing and they can even be dug in mid-winter.

Onions must be well dried and cured for two or more weeks until the roots are all dried and skins are papery. There are large differences between varieties in storage length. Walla Walla and onions grown from sets do not store very long.

Onions prefer dry conditions and temperatures as near 32 degrees as possible. They will store for shorter periods at temperatures in the high 30's and 40's. They are best stored in mesh bags or similar ways so there is plenty of air circulation. Darkness reduces their tendency to sprout.

Winter squash and pumpkins need to be cured in a warm, dry place for a week or two before storage. They often get natural curing in the garden if harvested after the vines have been killed by frost. Leave an inch or more of stem on to reduce decay around the stem scar. They should be stored in a dry place with a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees.

Owner Builder Summer Camp teaches rudiments of building

By DAVID W. MYERS
Los Angeles Times

NEVADA CITY, Calif. — Amy West sat with her feet up on the weathered table, nursing a diet soda and a throbbing left hand.

It had been a rough three weeks for her and her husband, Brian. They had known virtually nothing about how to build a house when they left their home in Santa Monica, Calif., and arrived at this rustic camp in the foothills of the Sierra.

But within days, the Wests were pouring cement, laying tile, installing electrical wiring and walking atop 25-foot-high rafters as they and about 20 others built a custom home in a pine-clad forest about 60 miles northeast of Sacramento.

"It's been hard work sometimes, but it's been a blast," said Amy West, rubbing the finger she had accidentally whacked earlier with a 2-pound hammer. "Where else can you go on vacation and learn to build a home at the same time?"

Welcome to the Owner Builder Summer Camp, the only place in the West where anyone willing to swing a hammer and wield a saw can learn how to build a house from the ground up or remodel one they already own.

The camp was started in 1980 by

Foyer should be thoughtful place of welcoming

By The Associated Press

A foyer should be a welcoming space that introduces visitors to the house and simplifies the logistics of entering, exiting, greeting visitors and receiving packages and mail.

To do all these tasks well, it takes practical surfaces, functional furniture and decoration in harmony with the rooms to which it connects.

No foyer is complete without a mirror and surface for placing objects, and the next logical addition is a place to sit down, says Beverly Elieley, a designer in Westport, Conn.

"It would definitely make sense to have also something welcoming like a vase of flowers," adds Elieley.

If your house does not have a foyer and you want one, there are several possibilities, says Thomas Hills Cook, senior interior designer at Armstrong World Industries in Lancaster, Pa. You could build a small one-story vestibule onto the front of the house. The new space will conserve heat as well as provide a place to greet people.

Another way to get a foyer without adding on is to screen off the area around the door by building a full or half wall or by placing a piece of furniture — finished on both sides — between the door and the rest of the room. Faux or real architectural columns and tall bookcases are also useful as a means of screening off the entryway, while also providing storage.

the Owner Builder Center, a Berkeley, Calif.-based non-profit group that offers building and remodeling classes. Although the center runs one-day seminars and ongoing night classes in the San Francisco Bay Area year-round, its mountain camp runs from mid-June through late August — prime home building season in the Sierra.

The camp is held at the John Woolman School, a pine-covered, 300-acre Quaker boarding school about eight miles west of Nevada City. The Owner Builder Center rents the facility during the summer months when the Quaker students are on vacation.

Each student home builder signs up for one, two or three weeks at the camp. At a recent session, ages of the students ranged from 14 to 70.

"We get students from all walks of life," said Richard Drace, the camp's low-key director who also runs his own residential-design business in Nevada City.

"Some people who come don't know how to hold a hammer, while others are skilled in one or two particular trades. Most of the students fall somewhere in-between."

The students also have different reasons for attending.

The Wests came hoping to learn enough about remodeling so they could save money by buying a fixer-upper. Mari Kitahara of San Diego figured what she learned about building would improve her skills in the construction-litigation business.

Joe Bert of Fremont, recently retired from a high-technology company, dreams of one day building his own retirement home in the mountains. A few younger students hope to build their own homes and beat the high cost of housing in urban areas.

Then there's Tim Harrold, who came all the way from Indiana. "I figure I'll learn enough here so I can get a job in the construction business," he said.

The types of structures that are built by the students can vary from one year to the next. Although the primary project each year is usually a single-family home, past years' students have built everything from garages to barns.

Through a series of lectures, workshops and on-site job experience, students have a chance to learn all the tasks involved in more than a dozen different building trades — all the various skills needed to build a home from the ground up.

Students worked on two projects at this year's camp, which ended late last month. The main project was a handsome, three-bedroom new home; the second was a major remodel of a tiny mountain retreat, which included the addition of a recreation room and outside deck.

The week-long courses cost about $600 each, a price that students like to joke includes "tuition, room, board and blisters." Discounts are provided to couples, people who stay for more than one week and those willing to camp or prepare their own meals.

Most of the instructors are local tradespeople who make a modest living the rest of the year by taking on home building and remodeling jobs. Most also seem like aging hippies: bearded, laid back, friendly, both appreciative and respectful of the natural surroundings.

Life at the school is part home building college, part Scout camp, part commune and part boot camp.

Most of the students are assigned one or two roommates to share a Spartan cabin — instructors jokingly refer to them as "rustic lodging facilities" — with little more than an overhead light, a few cots or bunk beds, a tiny dresser and a wood-burning stove.

There are no in-room televisions, refrigerators or phones. There is no running water in the cabins, either, so students must use communal showers and bathrooms.

"The toughest thing to do up here isn't the sawing, hammering, lifting or tiling," Kitahara said. "The toughest thing is getting used to all the frogs that live in the showers."

The students put in a six-day week.

Police double patrols after Rangers, drug suspects swap fire

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Two days after a shootout between off-duty soldiers and neighbors suspected of selling drugs, officials moved to ease tension by holding a community meeting, doubling patrols and calling in a Justice Department specialist.

Sgt. Bill Fouk, whose neighborhood barbecue turned from an anti-racism gathering into a 30-minute gunfight Saturday night, maintained Monday that he and fellow members of an elite Rangers unit acted in self-defense.

"They shot at us, and we fired back," he said, pointing at a reputed crack house across the street.

Police arrested two suspected gang members on assault and weapons charges, confiscated guns including two semi-automatic rifles from the Rangers and doubled patrols in the working-class Hilltop neighborhood.

No one was injured, but scuffles and brick-throwing followed on Sunday between Rangers supporters and neighbors who said they were being falsely accused of drug dealing.

"The hill is feeling such intensity right now," the Rev. David Alger said Monday.

"These people up here need to be protected. I'm surprised it escalated the way it did — that's not what's meant by community mobilization — but on the other hand people are really frightened."

"What we do now is the question."

Police Chief Ray Fjetland said the incident could have been avoided had residents called police.

Fouk said the gang members were upset that he was videotaping their activities. He said he called additional Rangers to his party when he felt threatened because police are too slow and equipped to act only after violence begins.

"When somebody starts shooting at me and my family, I'm going to shoot back," he said.

A neighbor complained that racism was involved, prompting police to call in a U.S. Justice Department community relations investigator.

"The gang members are mostly black, and of course they want to turn this into something racial," said Fouk, who is white. He said the neighborhood anti-drug coalition is multiracial and no racism was involved.

Fellow Ranger Sgt. Russell Nolte, who is black, said four of the Rangers involved in the shooting were black.

Fjetland attended a Monday night community meeting organized by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"We're seriously concerned about the way blacks are treated by the police," said the Rev. Oscar Tillman, Tacoma chapter president. He also criticized residents.

"You do not get trained soldiers using weapons of death in a neighborhood that small and believe you're going to come out a winner," he said.

AFT wants growth from teacher strike

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — The American Federation of Teachers, long in the shadow of the Utah Education Association in the battle over which group represents educators, expects to gain some ground as a result of statewide teacher walkout.

In the early hours of a wildcat walkout Friday, many Davis County teachers repudiated UEA President Jim Campbell's call for patience and headed for the doors.

As the walkout spread to several other districts, UEA leadership scrambled to schedule a meeting of local district presidents on Saturday, which led to a UEA-sanctioned one-day walkout on Monday.

But Kenneth Zenger, director of AFT's Utah Project, said the brief breaking of the UEA's ranks has given his union a break, and the chance to attack UEA officials for lack of leadership.

"We've had about 25 teachers who have walked in off the street and asked to join," Zenger said Tuesday.

"We've been getting many phone calls from teachers who say they're willing to switch now because of the leadership fiasco," he said. "I think we're going to get a large fallout from the Davis district."

Zenger said his union strongly supported the teacher walkout and noted that AFT members at Davis High actually helped bring about the wildcat protest last Friday.

"Teachers say they're frustrated to the point now of going to the AFT because they didn't get support from the UEA or the Davis Education Association and had to go it on their own," he added.

The AFT followed its vocal criticism with a UEA-bashing news release claiming that teachers have "lost faith in the present leadership of Utah teachers."

An affiliate of the AFL-CIO, a relationship that is usually down played in Utah, the AFT has been waiting for a chance to represent teachers in any of the major school districts along the Wasatch Front.

While the union has strong enclaves of membership in some school districts, it has not received the 70 percent support necessary to represent any district's full complement of teachers in contract negotiations.

Zenger said he figures the AFT now represents 10 percent of all Utah teachers affiliated with a teacher union.

The AFT has been designated to represent the Ogden-Weber Area Vocational Center faculty and the Salt Lake School District office personnel, however.

But UEA Executive Director Lowell Baum countered that AFT's reports of UEA's demise "are very much premature."

On the contrary, he said, the crisis of the last weekend has helped solidify the UEA members.

Family seeking blood donations

PAYSON, Utah (AP) — The family of a Utah Valley Community College coed whose recently had a tumor removed is asking for help in replacing the 70 pints of blood used during her hospital stay.

Casey Bowler, 20, recently underwent surgery at the University of Utah Health Sciences Center. Removal of the pelvic tumor, which was connected to an artery, resulted in massive internal bleeding, doctors said.

Surgeons, unable to tie off the bleeding, were forced to pack those surgical area with gauze and wait for the flow of blood to stop on its own.

The 19th Ward of Mormon Church has held a blood drive to help the family defray the costs of the transfusions, but more donors are needed. For more information, call Beverly Bowler at 801-465-2946.

Bowler was in good condition Tuesday and upon release plans to continue her education at UVCC in Early Childhood Education. She hopes to complete her degree this year and wants to work in a preschool.

Drought conditions force BLM to slash winter grazing permits

MOAB, Utah (AP) — Due to drought conditions, the federal Bureau of Land Management plans to curtail sharply winter-grazing permits in San Rafael Swell and Price River areas.

BLM Moab District Manager Gene Nodine said ranchers who graze cattle those two desert allotments are being told range lands cannot sustain traditional grazing this winter.

"The ranges are in pretty bad shape," he said. "There's been no regrowth, leaving the ranges in the same shape as when the cattle came off them this spring."

Anyway, Nodine added, there probably is not enough feed nor water on the desert to sustain livestock.

In some areas, however, the grass is good enough to keep some livestock. Therefore, grazing allotments will be monitored case by case, he said.

"For example, some ranchers may be granted grazing rights if they are willing to truck in their own water," Nodine explained.

Restrictions will be imposed until drought conditions diminish and ranges can support grazing.

"We want to get ranchers back on the ranges as soon possible," he said. "But until conditions improve, there's going to be very little grazing allowed on San Rafael and Price River ranges."

Nodine said that grazing in the San Juan and Grand allotments also will be curtailed, but not as extensively.

D.L. Taylor, whose ranching operations are among the state's largest, said he will give up all his BLM grazing permits this winter and sell his 1,000-head herd.

Taylor, chairman of the Grazing Advisory Board, current runs his cattle along the Colorado River, between Arches National Park and LaSal Mountains.

He was informed by letter his grazing permits will be reduced 30 percent this winter, and possibly 100 percent after March 1.

"The BLM wouldn't say what would happen in March," he said.

He believes grazing permit reductions are in line with the drought, but many permit holders will sell their herds.

"There's a drought provision that allows ranchers to deter the income from cattle sales for a year or two," Taylor said. "This will make getting a large herd a little more palatable."

He said he decided to give up ranching because he's approaching retirement and the conditions are good.

Ranchers faced with feeding cattle all winter will be looking to buy feed and to be supplemented by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service's emergency livestock feed assistance program, Nodine said.

Due to declaration of a drought emergency, by Gov. Norm Bangerter, livestock producers are eligible for feed assistance program through the ASCS. To qualify, a permittee must have a 40 percent loss in feed, including BLM permits. Forest Service permits, private pastures and farm crops.

In addition, to maintain range vegetation and to keep wildlife from starving, the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources has approved a record number of antlerless hunting permits for deer and elk, said Wes Shields, big game program coordinator.

In 61 separate post season hunts, 16,300 antlerless permits will be offered to protect winter ranges and areas of agriculture deprivation this year, he said.

Mormons aid Hugo victims

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Mormon Church has shipped food and other supplies to areas hardest hit by Hurricane Hugo.

Church emergency response officials said Tuesday that relief shipments have included water, food, cooking stoves, power generators, propane fuel, and tools to aid in cleanup efforts.

Areas receiving church aid include Charleston and neighboring South Carolina communities, and the Caribbean island of St. Croix. The island of St. Thomas also is scheduled to receive assistance, the church said in a news release.

Most of the supplies are being shipped from church storehouses in Columbia, S.C., Atlanta, and Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Gas station operator says tank insurance rose $31,570 this year

MIDVALE, Utah (AP) — Gas station operator Dick Dal Soglio says he paid $2,430 to buy insurance for the first six months this year for coverage on potential damage from leaks in his six underground tanks here.

But he was shocked when he saw the price tag for insuring his Phillips 66 station during the second half of 1989 — $34,000.

"I can't afford it. Now, I'm violating the law, because it says I have to have $1 million in insurance," Dal Soglio said.

Dal Soglio is among many state gasoline station owners being caught in a financial and legal squeeze because of changing state and federal rules about underground storage tanks.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, is co-sponsoring legislation that could ease the situation by making rules less tough and requiring a federal study on how to help station owners meet new financial requirements.

The problems started for tank owners when the federal Solid Waste Disposal Act required them to buy $1 million worth of insurance by Oct. 1 to cover problems from leaking tanks, including the cleanup of contaminated soil.

Problems were compounded, tank owners say, when the Legislature tried this year to help them — essentially deciding to take over required insurance of the tanks. Lawmakers created a new state insurance fund where owners will pay just $250 per tank per year in premiums and have a $25,000 deductible for claims.

But the state also is requiring tank owners to first fix problems from leaky tanks and to perform tests to determine whether tanks leak before they can join the state program, Dal Soglio said.

That's why his insurance company told him it raised its rates so high.

"It has to fix all the problems it knows about before the state takes over, and then it won't have premiums in the future to make up the loss," Dal Soglio explained.

"The insurance companies are in a bad spot, but I don't think it's as bad as they say," he said.

Meanwhile, Garn has co-sponsored legislation introduced by Sen. Conrad Burns, R-Mont., that would extend the insurance deadline for tank owners by a year to October 1990 and would lower the amount of insurance coverage they would have to buy from $1 million to $500,000.

Garn said present requirements impose "an unjustified economic burden on all owners of underground tanks."

"Extending the deadline will give the tank owners time to fully comply with the law, without placing them in financial jeopardy. The reduction in the financial responsibility requirement also will help make the law more reasonable," the senator added.

Coalition fears mandatory N. Idaho timber sale goals won't work

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — New evidence suggests mandatory timber sale targets in pending federal legislation are far higher than northern Idaho forests can sustain, a coalition of environmental groups and sportsmen said Tuesday.

The groups on Monday filed a response in the latest round of an appeal of the U.S. Forest Service's long-range plans for the Idaho Panhandle, said John Osborn of the Inland Empire Public Lands Council.

Osborn, who is coordinating the administrative appeal by 18 environmental and sportsmen's groups, held a press conference here this morning.

"It's ironic that on the 25th anniversary of the Wilderness Act, the U.S. Senate is considering legislation that could change that act significantly through precedent-setting language," Osborn said.

"The legislation, SB371, is scheduled for markup Wednesday in the Public Lands subcommittee of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, of which Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, is the ranking minority member, Osborn said.

The Idaho Forest Management Act calls for the mandatory sale of 283.5 million board feet of timber, over Forest Service objections on economic and environmental grounds, Osborn said.

"The language turns wilderness bills into micro-management from Capitol Hill," said Osborn. "It strips the Forest Service of flexibility. This sort of legislation becomes a 'tar baby' from which it would be very difficult for Congress to extricate itself."

The McClure language has been nicknamed "Tongass II" for similar provisions contained in a management law for Alaska's Tongass National Forest.

Environmentalists contend the congressionally mandated sale levels in the Tongass have resulted in artificially high harvest levels, destructive roads, and destruction of salmon-spawning streams.

"We're asking the United States Senate please don't repeat the mistakes of Tongass in northern Idaho," Osborn said.

Osborn said that Forest Service rangers in Panhandle districts estimated forests could sustain no more than 198.3 million board feet, but their advice was ignored by regional planners.

In some areas, rangers found far less mature timber than had been estimated.

"The McClure language fails to take into account economic considerations, reduced water quality, reduced fish and elk habitat, and opens up roadless areas to development, Osborn said.

The McClure language has been opposed by the Forest Service and the regional chapter of the Society of American Foresters, Osborn said.

Olsen sparks CSI in Region 18 victory

By The Times-News
ONTARIO, Ore. — Sophomore Angie Olsen returned her home territory and sparked College of Southern Idaho to a Region 18 victory over Treasure Valley. Olsen, a Vale, Ore., product and also a basketball player for Coach Ben Stroud, had a big hitting night, particularly in the middle games, as the 20-8 Eagles posted a 15-11, 13-5, 15-12 victory.
"That second game was pretty much Angie," said Stroud. "We finally got smart and just went to her for a while."
CSI's 20-5 record has been amassed without benefit of a home match "and we'll probably get in another eight or 10 this week," said Stroud of the team's visit to the Northwestern Community College of Powell, Wyo., invitational this weekend.
CSI is slated to make its first home appearance in another week.

Indian Championship Final rodeo coming to Shoshone

SHOSHONE — The Rocky Mountain Regional Indian Championship Final Rodeo is coming to Shoshone.
The rodeo competition, open to contestants of American Indian heritage only, will be Friday and Saturday, beginning at 7 p.m., at the Shoshone arena.
Livestock for the event is being supplied by Shoshone's Slab-T Rodeo Co. The event, is sanctioned by the Rocky Mountain Indian Rodeo Association and will feature top Indian contestants from around the West.
Pre-rodeo entertainment will be authentic American dancing and promoters say part of the reason for the pow-wow is to teach people of all backgrounds about Indian history, culture and heritage.
Admission is $4 for adults, $3 for students and seniors. Those under 6 will be admitted free.

Federal judge prevents Radja from playing for Celtics

The Hartford Courant
BOSTON — First Larry Bird took a fall. Then Brian Shaw took a walk. Now Dino Radja might have to take a back seat.
The Celtics were hit with another off-season slump Tuesday when a federal judge issued an injunction preventing Radja from playing for Boston this season. U.S. District Court Judge Douglas Woodlock ruled that Radja's year-old contract with his club team in Yugoslavia is valid and that it, and not the $425,000 contract Radja signed with the Celtics Aug. 1, should be honored.
Woodlock delayed implementation of his order until Oct. 5 to give both parties a chance to review it. However, the injunction would not be applicable until that date since the Celtics don't open training camp until Oct. 6.

Cubs overcome odds to clinch NL East

By BEN WALKER
The Associated Press

MONTREAL — The magic number for the Chicago Cubs is 1989.
The Cubs, given hardly a chance at the start of the year, overcame injuries and a strong field and capped their season of surprises by clinching the National League East championship Tuesday night.
Chicago won its second division title in six seasons, beating Montreal 3-2 soon after second-place St. Louis. And the Cubs celebrated in style, toasting themselves with one of the wildest and wettest clubhouse parties.
"You can't beat this. Nothing is better than the present," said Ryno Sandberg, the only everyday starter left from Chicago's last division championship in 1984.
"The Cubs became the first team to guarantee a spot in the playoffs. An amazing turnaround for a club that went 77-85 last year and then stumbled to a 9-23 spring-training record. "I thought we had a lot of holes at the beginning of the year," Andre Dawson admitted. "I knew we had a lot of things to get behind us."
The Cubs did it and made Don Zimmer a champion for the first time as a manager in 11 seasons.
"This is my 41st year in baseball and a lot of good things and a lot of bad things have happened to me," the champagne-soaked Zimmer said. "But this tops everything that I've ever done in the game."
Chicago will open the playoffs Wednesday night at Wrigley Field, all but certainly against San Francisco. The Cubs and Giants split 12 games this year.
After Mike Fitzgerald made the final out of the game, the Cubs danced out of the dugout and met in celebration at the mound.
Sandberg scored the go-ahead run with the kind of aggressive play that transformed into winners.
Sandberg singled with two outs and was running when Dwight Smith followed with a single to right field. When Hubie Brooks bobbled the ball for a split second, Sandberg kept going and beat second baseman Tom Foley's relay to the plate.
Zimmer, Chicago's eighth manager in the 1980s, was among the first to greet Sandberg as the Cubs spilled on to the field. Smith, who had never played in the big leagues before this season — think about all the years Ernie Banks and Billy Williams played for the Cubs and never won anything — also did a little celebration dance on the bases.
Greg Maddux, 19-12, allowed seven hits in 8 1-3 innings

AP Leaphorn

St. Louis' Ozzie Smith sits dejected on the bench as he watches his Cardinals lose to Pittsburgh and Mitch Williams got two outs for his 36th save. Maddux is second in the league in victories, one behind Houston's Mike Scott.
It was the second time this season Maddux and Sandberg had teamed up to win a big game. On Aug. 7, the Cubs took sole possession of first place for good when they beat co-leader Montreal behind Sandberg's home run and Maddux' seven-hitter.
Dennis Martinez, 16-7, took the loss.
The Cubs, who have not been in the World Series since 1945 and not won it since 1908, earned another chance to get there by winning for the fifth time in six games. All of the first-run playoff games are sold out as 27 million telephone calls were received the first day 84,000 tickets went on sale.
At the exact moment the Cardinals lost, there was no cheering in the Cubs' dugout because they were in trouble, too.
The Expos, shut out on three hits for five innings, tied it with two runs in the sixth. Rival Marquis Gristum, Andres Galarraga and Hubie Brooks opened with singles for the first run and, with the Cardinals' final out, Nelson Santovenia's one-out sacrifice fly with the bases loaded made it 2-2.

Hardly anyone thought Cubs could win

By JOE MOOSHIL
The Associated Press
CHICAGO — Few gave the Chicago Cubs even an outside chance to win the National League East this season; not manager Don Zimmer, not general manager Jim Frey, not even the most optimistic of players.
Expected to finish fifth by most and last by some, the Cubs pulled off one of the bigger upsets in baseball history with their second divisional title in five years.
"The greatest year in my life," said

Zimmer, who has never managed a championship team before although he came close in 1978 when the Boston Red Sox lost in a one-game playoff to the New York Yankees.
"This is special," her said. "In 1978, you knew the year in baseball and you came out. But with this team this year, nobody gave us a chance and a lot of people said we'd be last."
"In spring training I knew we had a better team than we had last year," said Zimmer, whose club finished fourth a year ago, 24 games behind the champion New-York Mets. "Sure, we were shooting for .500, which would have been acceptable. Especially after going 9-23 in spring games."

Since 1977, the only Cubs team to finish .500 or better was the 1984 team that won the divisional title when Frey was the manager. That team lost to San Diego in the playoffs.
"Absolutely, I would have settled for .500," said Frey, whose only major winter trade was a multi-player deal in which he sent Rafael Palmeiro to Texas for reliever Mitch Williams.
Williams, nicknamed "The Wild Thing," provided the excitement that was to prevail throughout the season with his first appearance on opening day. He gave up three singles to load the bases in the ninth inning and then struck out the side to preserve a 5-4 victory over Philadelphia.
That was the beginning of an unforgettable season that climaxed with winning the divisional title.
After a so-so April, the Cubs were hit by a series of injuries. In a span of five

Baysball: Will it be the Giants vs. the Athletics?

By ELLEN UZELAC
The Baltimore Sun
SAN FRANCISCO — When people around here talk about "The City By The Bay," you just know they are not talking about Oakland.
Just 10 miles separate Oakland and San Francisco, but their worlds could not be more different. Oakland is, after all, a city whose only television station carries San Francisco Giants games, which can't be real good for a city's self-esteem. It's probably fortunate there is a very long bridge between Oakland and San Francisco.
In so many ways, San Francisco beats Oakland every day, so the very idea of a Bay Bridge World Series — "Baysball," they're calling it here — is exciting to a guy like me, an Oakland Athletics fan Jimmy Calderon, a 38-year-old machinist who ponders the possibilities with almost religious reverence.

"Dead meat," Calderon says about the Giants. "We're going to kill them. It's unthinkable that the A's won't make it. It's their destiny."
With both the Giants and the A's leading their divisions, talk in the Bay area is all about Baysball. Nothing quite like it has happened since the last "Subway Series" in 1956, when the New York Yankees defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Both the A's and Giants, as they say in California, are carrying some emotional baggage: The A's, World Series champs in 1972, 1973 and 1974, lost in the Series last year against the Los Angeles Dodgers. The Giants, meanwhile, have not won a World Series since they moved to San Francisco from New York in 1958. In that time, the Giants have been in only one World Series, which they lost to their old nemesis, the Yankees, in 1962.
Officials of both clubs don't say much about the notion of a Bay Bridge Series, focusing instead on the pennant race and the playoffs. Giants spokesman Matt Fischer says

Sacks becoming rare phenomenon in NFL

By GREG GARBER
The Hartford Courant
The quarterback deftly drops back in the pocket, sees the strong safety cheating toward the line of scrimmage and automatically scans the right side for his tight end. Just as the arm is cocked to throw, the powerful outside linebacker breaks into the clear, closes quickly and ...
... The quarterback flips the ball easy side to the tight end, who has only one defender to beat. It's a 14-yard gain and the outside linebacker, two steps from glory glory, can only tap the quarterback on the shoulder pads in frustration.
The sack of the quarterback, perhaps the single most exciting play in football that doesn't involve the end zone, is becoming an increasingly rare phenomenon. It isn't in danger of becoming extinct, but if the recent trend continues, the sack may be headed for the endangered species list.
"In the old days," says New York Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor, referring to the early 1980s, "I could do anything I wanted. Now, they've got a million things that get in the way. They're blocking with bigger guys and getting rid of the ball quicker. Now, it's (difficult) getting to the quarterback."
And it's not just because Taylor has turned 30.
Sacks have dropped steadily since 1985. In the Year of the Bear, quarterbacks were decked 1,306 times. In 1986, the total was 1,198 and it dropped to 1,106 in 1987; even if the one game lost to the strike had been played, there would have been a substantial decline in sacks. Last season, quarterbacks were sacked 1,035 times.
This season, the total is 112 through two games, which projects to 896 sacks, or 32 per team. For comparison purposes, the Giants recorded 59 sacks in their championship season. The great sack artists, like Taylor, Buffalo's Bruce Smith and Philadelphia's Reggie White, will continue to reach the quarterback. Less talented athletes will encounter more resistance.

The common misconception, even among some of the league's coaches, is that defenses aren't blitzing as much. This doesn't seem to be the case.
"I don't think we're blitzing any less," says Tim Shurmur, in his eighth season as the Los Angeles Rams' defensive coordinator. "Actually, we've been in a more aggressive mode than in the last five years. We're coming after people, but the sacks aren't there. I think you have to look at the other side. Offenses are better prepared to handle the blitz."
Let us count the ways:
When Taylor, an unprecedented 6-foot-3, 245-pound combination of size and speed, arrived in 1981, offenses didn't know how to block him. Running backs, long the accepted solution to blitzing linebackers, weren't enough. Tight ends didn't work, either. Teams gradually learned to slide their offensive tackles toward Taylor.
"LT. Otis Wilson, Andre Tippett ... those guys were murdering the running backs who were trying to block them," Giants defensive coordinator Bill Belichick says. "For a while there, quarterbacks were getting hit and coughing up the ball all the time. Now everybody's got a big outside linebacker and everybody has bigger people to block them."
In the 1960s and '70s, most quarterbacks took a conventional seven-step drop

Vissers wins age division at marathon

By The Times-News
TWIN FALLS — Cor Vissers, Twin Falls' 79-year-old distance runner, won his age division Sunday in the Portland Marathon.
Vissers, who began running just five years ago, finished in 4 hours, 31 minutes to win the men's 75-79 division. His time was better than the time that won the men's 70-74.
"My goal was to finish in less than five hours and to average less than 11 minutes a mile," said Vissers, who was running in his first marathon. "I averaged 10:20, so I felt good about it. The course was wonderful. The first 12 miles was uphill, but coming back was downhill."
About 10,000 runners participated in the event, which included races of various distances in different classifications in addition to the classic 26-mile, 385-yard marathon.
"The race was much more enjoyable than the course (U.S. Highway 93 between Twin Falls and Jerome) I used to train on, with trucks coming within a foot or two of me," said Vissers. "There was a little wind, but the weather was good."
Vissers will take a trip to England before deciding whether to run in another marathon.
"I'd like to run in Boston, but the qualifying time is 3 hours, 50 minutes," he said. "I want to take it easy, take a bit off my best time to make that."

Kevin Mack undergoes knee surgery; out a month

CLEVELAND (AP) — Fullback Kevin Mack, who becomes eligible to return from a drug suspension on Oct. 1, underwent surgery on his left knee Monday at the Cleveland Clinic and is expected to remain out of action until the Browns meet Pittsburgh on Oct. 15.

KEVIN MACK
Not back yet

Mack missed the first three regular-season games because of an NFL suspension imposed after he pleaded guilty to a cocaine charge this summer. He has been working out with the team and was due to return after Monday night's game at Cincinnati.

Team spokesman Kevin Byrne said Dr. John Bergfeld removed a loose particle above Mack's left kneecap. The particle was caused by a small tear in the meniscus cartilage within the knee joint.

But during a workout last Wednesday, Mack, noticing swelling and heard a clicking in his left knee. Bergfeld examined Mack's knee and said he needed the surgery.

NFL reinstates 11 players

NEW YORK (AP) — The NFL on Tuesday reinstated 11 players who were suspended during the preseason after testing positive for steroid use and suspended Phoenix linebacker Freddie Joe Nunn for 30 days for violating the league's substance abuse policy.

The 11 players reinstated were: Sean Docter, Tom Docter and Matt Jaworski of Buffalo; Maurice Douglas of Chicago; Keith Uecker of Green Bay; Mark Mraz of the Los Angeles Raiders; Vince Amoia and Bobby Riley of the New York Jets; Ron Solt of Philadelphia and Keith Henderson and Rollin Putzier of San Francisco.

A decision was pending on another Green Bay player, Mike Arley, who was the last player to be tested.

The Jets waived both Amoia and Riley following their reinstatement.

Nunn was placed on the Cardinals' non-football injury list and instructed to remain out of the team's training facility. He is not expected to return until at least Oct. 25.

Economist blasts funding inequities in the Olympics

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States finances much of the Olympic movement and in return both American athletes and fans are cheated, a U.S. economist said.

"The funding setup for the Olympics is a travesty," said Robert Lawrence, a senior scholar at the Brookings Institution, an independent research organization normally dealing with economic, social and foreign policy issues far removed from sports.

When it comes to paying costs of the Olympic summer and winter games, "Americans get bilked in three ways," he said, while the rest of the world pays much less than a fair share.

Adding insult to financial injury, he said, Americans "have to put up with an excessive number of (television) commercials to see the Games, and our athletes receive little of the money we do pay."

Lawrence and co-author Jeffrey Pellegrom, a Brookings researcher, advocated wholesale restructuring of the broadcast charges that now finance much of the Games. Their recommendations appeared in an unusual cover story in the new fall issue of The Brookings Review, titled, "Fool's Gold: How America Pays to Lose in the Olympics."

For last year's winter games at Calgary, ABC paid a record $309 million for U.S. television rights — compared to $5.7 million paid by all of Western Europe and $1.2 million by the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe combined, they said.

"Canada, the host country, with an economy one-tenth the size of ours, paid about one-hundredth of what the United States did — $3.65 million."

For the 1988 summer games at Seoul, "outbidding the other two U.S. (TV) networks, NBC paid the Olympic organizers $300 million for the rights to broadcast ... Western Europe, with a population 25 percent larger than that of the United States and an economy about as large, paid just $28 million, or 9 percent of the U.S. payment," The Brookings Review said.

"To meet the huge cost, unfortunately, the U.S. networks must run an enormous number of commercials to recover their investment, (and) the ads clutter the broadcasts."

Lawrence and Pellegrom said the International Olympic Committee "exploits the intense rivalry among the (U.S.) networks to its own benefit" to drive up the U.S. bids, but "when it comes to the rest of the world, the IOC extends its hand with a kid glove rather than a tight fist ..."

"One explanation for treating the United States differently is that it is so much richer ... that was once true, but not any more. In 1987, average incomes in West Germany and the United States were equal, while those in Japan were 6.4 percent higher."

Also, the IOC "has not taken account of ... the rise of European commercial TV and the United States has never forced it to," the article said, noting that Britain was charged only $3.7 million for airing the Seoul Games.

TNT will air Olympics on cable

NEW YORK (AP) — The Olympics will go on cable television for the first time under a $50 million deal between CBS Inc. and Turner Broadcasting Systems Inc., that covers the 1992 and 1994 Winter Games.

Under Tuesday's deal, Turner Network Television will air approximately 50 hours of programming for each Olympics. CBS, which paid $243 million for the 1992 Games at Albertville, France, and $300 million for the 1994 Games at Lillehammer, Norway, plans on airing about 120 hours of each Olympics.

"There's a lot of programming at the Winter Olympics that doesn't get on because of the limited amount of time," CBS Sports president Neal H. Pilson said. "We think it will help promote the prime-time programming. We don't think the dilution factor will be one of concern. We think there will be an audience for TNT there."

TNT, begun last year, will broadcast from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. EST on weekdays, much of it live, and from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. on weekends (tape). In addition, it will replay CBS' prime-time broadcast beginning at 1 a.m. every night. CBS' schedule consists primarily of nightly prime-time shows and weekend afternoons.

TNT's coverage will not be showing events that will be on CBS, but instead will show events that would not have been televised.

"We contemplate they will carry a cross-section of events and they will not simply be doing the 30k cross-country skiing," Pilson said.

U.S. boxers show poorly at Amateur

MOSCOW (AP) — The United States will have to settle for three medals at the World Amateur Boxing Championships.

It will be their lowest total in a world championships or an Olympic Games during the 1980s.

Skipper Kelp, 18, of Colorado Springs, Colo., and Terry McGroom, 23, of Chicago, were beaten Tuesday in quarterfinal matches.

Kelp lost 11-7 to Michael Carruth of Ireland in the 139-pound class, and McGroom was beaten 22-9 by Nurmagedom Shanavazov of the Soviet Union at 178 pounds.

Semifinalists are assured of bronze medals.

The Soviet Union will have 11 semifinalists, Cuba will have nine and East Germany will have seven. The three U.S. boxers remaining in the competition will fight Wednesday night.

Eric Griffin, 22, of Houston; will box Kim Duk-Nam of North Korea in a 106-pound semifinal; Tonga McClain, 19, of Racine, Wis., will meet Julio Gonzalez of Cuba at 132, and Raul Marquez, 18, of Houston will box Francisco Vastag of Romania at 147.

Kelp, who had a second-round walkover and had not boxed since a first-round win Sept. 18, looked lethargic in losing to Carruth.

"That was my worst performance yet," said Kelp, a U.S. amateur champion. "I just couldn't do anything."

"The kid pressured himself," said Pat Nappi, a three-time U.S. Olympic boxing coach, who is in Moscow as a coaching advisor for the U.S. team.

"No one can match our market coverage program. No one."

Director of Marketing
The Times-News

"Now with over ten years behind us, our Total Market Coverage (TMC) of The Times-News Penny-Saver program is one of the best in Southern Idaho. Both in terms of the operation itself and the solid results it produces for our always growing list of advertisers."

"Simply put, TMC offers unduplicated coverage of Twin Falls County, Jerome County, and Gooding County by combining pre-prints in The Times-News with a weekly mailing or home delivery to non-Times-News subscribers. And with 36 geographic selections available, it works for display and classified advertisers, large or small, full or part-run. You can zoom in on as few as 6,000 homes or blanket nearly 41,000 homes."

"Of course, the bottom line is what's important, and I'm pleased to say that our numbers show it's working. Last year, for example, TMC distributed more than 14 million pieces - an average of 270,000 per week. During one day alone we targeted more than 338,000 pieces. Another week featured 30 advertisers. And because we've always kept an open ear for the marketing needs of our customers, we anticipate even greater numbers in the future."

TMC. The success story continues, but no matter how you tell it, the ending is always the same; results. And that's what TMC has delivered since day one.

Market up slightly today

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market finished slightly higher Tuesday after a strong rally fizzled in the final hour of trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials ended with a gain of 4.75 points at 2,663.94, after climbing more than 21 points during the session. On Monday the blue-chip indicator dropped 24.42 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by a margin of about 5 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 740 issues up, 634 down and 566 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 158.35 million shares.

up from 121.13 million in the previous session.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 165.925 million shares.

The market opened broadly higher, aided by a sharp run-up in Japan's stock market overnight and an unexpectedly strong U.S. government report on durable goods.

The Commerce Department reported that factory orders for "big ticket" durable items such as cars, airplanes and machinery, rose 3.8 percent in August.
