Looking back in time

Inspired by the decade of flower power, these members of the Twin Falls High School newspaper and yearbook staffs remind parade watchers of the "turbulent 60s." "Blas't Back to the Past" was this year's Homecoming theme and cavemen to flower children were represented in Friday's Main Avenue festivities. Homecoming was capped Friday night when the Bruins played Mountain Home in a football game.

Warehouse raid brings $2 billion cocaine haul

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Federal drug agents seized 20 tons of cocaine with a street value of $2 billion Friday at a warehouse in a quiet section of the city, and officials called it the biggest drug haul in history.

Three men were arrested and about $10 million in cash was seized at the warehouse on an upscale, tree-lined street in a mostly residential community of Sylmar near the San Gabriel Mountain foothills, said John M. Zienter, the Drug Enforcement Administration's agent in charge for Los Angeles. "I've been on this job for 25 years, and I've never seen so much dope in one place," Zienter said at a late morning news conference. "I couldn't believe it."

The three Mexican men, who were not immediately identified, were expected to be arraigned Monday on charges of possessing and distributing cocaine. In addition to the drugs and cash, agents seized financial records, customer lists and a large truck-trailer that was parked at the warehouse's entrance. No weapons were found.

The seized records offered a list of leads that was "endless," said Ira Reiner, Los Angeles County district attorney.

Zienter placed the street value of the drug at $2 billion. Earlier, DEA spokesman Ralph Lochridge valued the haul at one-tenth that amount, based on a price of $100 a gram for pure cocaine, which he called "a very conservative estimate." But Lochridge later said that when the cocaine was prepared for smoking, it could bring in far more. "If it's rocked up in the form of crack, it could go as high as 10 times above that, up to $20 billion," Lochridge said, explaining that the figure was based on diluting the cocaine to the maximum amount possible and converting it to rock form to be sold individually on the street.

Using Los Angeles police techniques to calculate the value of diluted cocaine on the street — $170,250 per pound — the value of the drug would be nearly $7 billion.

Friday's haul easily topped the previous U.S. record of more than 8,700 pounds recorded in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in 1987, and surpassed the record on diluting the cocaine in Colombia, said DEA agent Phil Hartman.

The huge stash was arranged in orderly rows up to 10 feet high.

Senate OKs internee reparations

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted Friday to waive budget restrictions and grant an estimated 60,000 Japanese-Americans compensation for their forced internment during World War II.

The 74-22 vote keeps a promise made last year by making the compensation an entitlement under law, which provides automatic reimbursement for those who meet the qualifications.

"If we don't act, we will have committed another act of incivility — passing a law and then doing nothing," said Sen. Pete V. Domenici, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

"To be for the bill that created the right and not be for the waiver (to provide the money), borders on hypocrisy."

Congress last year authorized reparations for Japanese-Americans who had been interned during the war, but appropriated no funds because of the budget crunch.

The $500 million reparations program will make $20,000 payments available to each of an estimated 60,000 eligible Japanese-Americans at the beginning of the 1991 fiscal year, Oct. 1, 1990.

No funds are provided for fiscal 1990, which begins Sunday.

The reparations payments were made part of a pending $17.3 billion appropriations bill for the Commerce, Justice and State departments, which was approved by voice vote.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., tried to block the Senate action.

But other senators said that guaranteed compensation was essential to rectify an injustice.

Soviet troops near 1954 A-bomb test

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union dropped an atomic bomb near its own soldiers 35 years ago to test their ability to fight on ground contaminated by radiation, the Defense Ministry newspaper disclosed Friday.

Although the official Tass news agency reported at the time that an atomic test had been carried out, there was no mention that soldiers were involved, said the daily Red Star.

"A real atomic bomb was detonated during a Soviet military exercise on Sept. 14, 1954, in order to study the effects of the explosion and test troops' ability to negotiate contaminated terrain," it said.

"After the atomic strike, there were not only no landmarks left on the terrain, but the area itself became unrecognizable."

Red Star said there were no casualties at the time, but it did not address possible long-term health problems caused by radiation.

All Soviet and U.S. nuclear tests have been underground since 1963 when the countries signed a treaty banning atomic explosions in the atmosphere.

Prior to the treaty, the United States conducted 100 tests above ground, and scores of soldiers assigned to the Nevada Test Site near Las Vegas later sought compensation from Congress for illnesses they said were caused by the tests.

Figures on the number of Soviet tests carried out are not available, and there have been no reports of radiation casualties.

Red Star said it carried the article, titled "The Explosion We Can Now Talk About," in response to a reader's query — a technique often used by officials to open formerly closed subjects to public scrutiny.

The newspaper said the test, in the South Ural Military District of central Russia, was carried out because of the Cold War and at a time when NATO forces in Europe were expanding by bringing West Germany into the defense alliance.

"It never occurred to us to question any measure meant to bolster the army's battle-worthiness and the country's defense capability," the newspaper said.

"Full-size foxholes and standard-fire trenches, with

'Russia can't be worse,' exclaims Zsa Zsa after jury finds her guilty

The Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Zsa Zsa Gabor was convicted of battery for slapping a police officer and two other misdemeanor charges Friday, prompting the fiery actress to remark, "I think Russia can't be worse than this."

But Miss Gabor was acquitted of disobeying the officer when she drove away during a traffic stop confrontation. She said she interpreted an obscene phrase he allegedly used as an order to leave.

In addition to the battery charge, the Hungarian-born actress was found guilty of driving without a valid driver's license and having an open bottle of alcohol in her Rolls-Royce.

Miss Gabor, convicted of the most serious of the charges, faces a possible 18 months and five days in jail and a maximum fine of $3,500, defense attorney William Grayson said. Sentencing was set for Oct. 17.

"I am very disappointed," Miss Gabor told reporters outside court.

"I can't believe in a country as great as ours that a 6-foot-4 policeman can beat up a lady of 5-foot-4 and use dirty language like you were a streetwalker. ... I think Russia can't be worse than this, or Communist Hungary either. I think it's ridiculous."

Prosecutor Elden Fox said he would not ask for jail time for Miss Gabor, but that he would seek compensation for the trial's cost. "I want the $30,000 restitution to the court for this media circus," Fox said. The amount is the estimated cost of the trial.

Miss Gabor contended she was convicted because of her celebrity status.

"I know it's Zsa Zsa Gabor — the diamonds. She loves to talk up, she's not a milquetoast," she said.

But jury foreman John Barke, a Hollywood accountant, disagreed.

"That's not the person we really tried. We tried a person who had a conflict with the police," he said.

The 12-member jury deliberated 90 minutes on Wednesday, all day Thursday and returned their verdicts Friday afternoon.

Juror Kevin Goodman, an attorney, said there were plenty of

Index opens, receives an eviction notice

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — An eviction notice served by a Twin Falls sheriff's deputy put a kink in Friday's grand opening of a bookstore offering adult materials.

In a letter signed by Mark Stubbs, attorney for Wayne Jones and Bill Nichols, the owners of the building at 214 Blue Lakes Blvd., bookstore owner Thomas Fernandez was ordered to vacate in three days and to pay $622 still owed.

"Mr. Fernandez is being evicted because he failed to meet the terms of the lease agreement," Nichols said. Fernandez "is not being evicted because it has been determined that he plans to run a porno shop."

Nichols has previously said that he thinks he was deceived by Fernandez. Nichols said Fernandez told him that at most his store, The Index, would sell Playboy and Penthouse and be similar to other legitimate bookstores around town.

"The Index has an 800-square-foot back room that contains several racks of adult materials including sexually oriented magazines and books and novelty items such as 'tasty pasties,' Nichols said. It also has adult videos with titles such as "Deep Throat" and "Heat," he said.

"I didn't know there were that many girls' magazines being printed," he said.

In a larger main room there are children's books, comic books, numerous popular magazines and a large assortment of classical literature that includes "A Collection of Poems of Emily Dickinson."

Demos ready pens for capital-gains bill

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Democrats said Friday that President Bush's cut in capital-gains taxes is no sure bet in the Senate, while his treasury secretary criticized opponents for discussing the issue in terms of rich against poor.

"I think there is a reasonably good chance we'll be able to prevail here" and defeat the reduction, Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell told reporters.

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., a member of the Finance Committee, said he thinks the deficit-reduction plan to be written by the panel next week will not include the capital-gains cut, which the House approved on Thursday.

Instead of the capital-gains cut, Bradley said the Finance Committee is likely to approve a measure making tax-deductible Individual Retirement Accounts available to more workers as an incentive for saving.

At a Finance Committee hearing on IRAs, Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady defended the capital-gains reduction as an important tool for economic growth. He said there is no certainty IRAs increase savings, and called the proposal too expensive when the budget deficit exceeds $100 billion. Brady complained that 80 percent of the tax saving under the expanded IRA proposed by Bentsen would go to those with incomes over $50,000 a year.

Democrats' major argument against the capital-gains cut is that 80 percent of its benefits would be collected by those above $100,000.

"It is hard for me to understand why this whole discussion has to reach the level of rich vs. poor," Brady said.

The rich are getting richer in this country and the poor are getting poorer," said Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D. "You'll have to forgive us for bringing it up."

Brady countered the figure cited by Democrats on capital gains is misleading. On grounds the over-$100,000 category includes many people of relatively modest earnings who, once in a lifetime, sell a small business or a home and for that year their income is pushed above that level.

Capital gains, which are profits from the sale of investments, are taxed at the same rate as wages. Bush and

Bakker says fund-raising for retreat was $3 million-a-week nightmare

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Evangelist Jim Bakker testified at his fraud trial Friday that a vision from God for a Christian retreat turned into a $3-million-a-week fund-raising nightmare.

"I think fund-raising was my most burdensome job," said Bakker, who is accused of spending millions of dollars that he raised for his PTL television ministry on personal luxuries such as Rolls-Royces and gold-plated bathroom fixtures.

"It never left me. You never ever, ever get away from the pressure that you have to raise funds for next week, next month, next year," he said.

Bakker said the funds were needed to build Heritage USA, PTL's theme park and religious retreat, which he called a vision from God.

"I felt like I was almost born with this vision in my heart," the evangelist told jurors. "I felt God spoke to me to build a Christian center for people. It came out of my youth, my need to serve people."

Bakker, who was briefly hospitalized at the beginning of his trial after he was reported to be suffering from hallucinations, is charged with 24 counts of fraud and conspiracy. He took the stand in U.S. District Court after his lawyers had presented more than 70 witnesses in his defense.

Neither his wife, Tammy Faye, nor his two children were in the courtroom when Bakker testified.

In a low voice, Bakker described the roots of his PTL ministry, which he resigned in a sex and money scandal in 1987. He then described his vision to build the 2,400-acre Heritage USA.

"We needed to build," he said. "In the middle of the night I woke up. It was a vision or a dream, I don't know. God gave me the concept of the Heritage, Grand Partner Center and I began to sketch it."

Bakker is accused of bilking followers of $158 million through the sale of "lifetime partnerships" in the PTL ministry. The $1,000 partnerships typically entitled holders to three nights' lodging annually in hotels at Heritage USA.

Gains

A majority of the House want to tax only 70 percent of gains.

The secretary cited an estimate that 47 percent of capital gains are realized by people whose other income is less than $30,000 a year.

In response, Sen. Lloyd Benken, D-Texas, said the joint-committee staff, which provides technical advice to Congress, found that only 18 percent of the gains were taken by people who reported just one transaction — including sale of a home or business — a year.

The Finance Committee will begin work next week on a package of spending cuts and revenue increases aimed mainly at reducing the deficit by about $17 billion during budget year 1990, which begins Oct. 1.

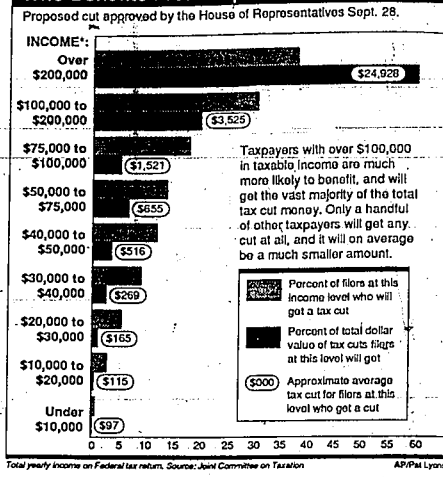

Capital-gains taxes are an issue because a reduction in the tax rate is expected to generate enough asset sales to bring in about $9.4 billion for deficit cutting over the next three years.

Bush won on the capital-gains issue in the House by holding all but one of the 176 Republicans and picking up votes of 64 Democrats, mainly from Southern farm and timber states. He is likely to make a parity deal with the 45 Democratic senators, but there is no indication yet how many Democrats will support the reduction.

The IRA proposal that House Democrats wanted to substitute for the capital-gains cut was tied to a tax increase on the nation's 45 wealthiest taxpayers. The Senate plan includes no such tax increase.

Under Senate rules, it might take 60 votes — rather than the simple majority required under most procedures — to approve the capital-gains cut. This is because of estimates of future-year revenue losses.

Obscene art funding bar OK'd

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate negotiators agreed Friday to bar federal funding for art deemed to be obscene and lacking in significant literary or artistic merit.

The provision represents a weakening of a Senate-passed measure backed by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., that called for banning federal aid for art that is "obscene or indecent" or that "denigrates" a religion, race, ethnic background, age group or handicap.

offensive, Nichols said he has no way of determining whether they can legally be called pornographic.

He said he wishes the city would write and enforce an anti-pornography ordinance that can withstand court challenges.

It was a lawsuit involving Visions West Book Club, an adult bookstore that closed last week. 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbut earlier this year ruled as unconstitutional a city ordinance that prohibits adult bookstores within 2,500 feet of schools.

Nichols said it bothers him that the Index carries adult materials and children's books, even though children would not be allowed in the adult section in a back room.

"Kids want to see what is back there," he said. "I don't think Peter Pan and Playbox mix."

Fernandez said he intended to pay the $622-Friday, hoping to remain in the store that he has spent hundreds of dollars and many hours fixing up.

Rex Champey's, city fire and building inspector, said he gave The Index a temporary occupancy permit Friday. He said the store needed a few minor touch-ups before it could receive a permanent permit, which could come some time next week.

Tim Fernandez, the store owner's twin brother, said while painting letters on the store front window Friday that the store has sold more items from its "clean" section than from the adult section.

"He's trying to make an honest living," he said.

"Today is our grand opening," Fernandez said Friday. "Business as usual."

But Stubbs said even if Fernandez pays up, he will not be allowed to stay. He said Fernandez came to his office Friday afternoon and left without paying.

"He claimed he had the money but he did not offer it," Stubbs said.

The eviction notice said that Fernandez has failed to pay $622 of the $1,122 owed for rent, utilities and other bills.

Fernandez also failed to show proof of insurance to transfer responsibility for electricity into his name, the notice said.

Stubbs said if Fernandez does not vacate in three days, he will seek a court-ordered eviction.

Red Star said soldiers were equipped with gas masks, dark glasses and chemical-resistant clothing, and special decontamination centers were established near the blast site.

To limit the spread of radiation and fallout, the bomb was dropped from an airplane and detonated at an altitude of only 300 to 500 yards, the newspaper said.

Observers merged from the shelter to see "a huge cloud, covering half the sky, pushed from below by scarlet flames," the article said.

Although no injuries were reported, the article said one soldier barely escaped, blindness and possible death by hurling himself face-down into a foxhole as the bomb exploded.

Unidentified people help woman from wrecked Amtrak train Train wreck survivor remembers nothing

CATLETT, Va. (AP) — A fireman atop a fire truck that sped across the path of an Amtrak train into a collision that killed two and injured 150 said Friday the last thing he remembers is mowing his lawn.

Michael Kirk, 21, thinks he was riding in the jump seat directly behind the driver of the Catlett Volunteer Fire Department truck when it crossed the tracks.

Officials have declined to speculate on the cause of the collision Thursday evening about 50 miles from Washington, D.C.

"I don't remember anything," Kirk said by telephone Friday from his bed at the Washington Hospital Center. "The last thing I remember I was mowing the grass ... then I was here."

Lucy Caldwell, a state police spokeswoman, said the firefighters were responding to a report of a blaze near a home on the other side of the tracks.

Amtrak officials said the Crescent, en route from New York to Atlanta and New Orleans, sounded its horn when it approached the crossing of the private drive alongside Virginia 28.

There was no crossing bar and no warning light at the crossing.

Ms. Caldwell said the fire truck had its air horn, siren and flashing red lights on at the time of the collision.

Two of the five firefighters on the truck were killed; at least 150 of the train's 379 passengers were injured. Most of the injuries to train passengers were minor.

Kirk, who joined the fire department about four months ago, was in fair condition. "I feel all right ... just pretty sore," he said.

Frankie Herndon, another firefighter, said he felt the truck cross the track "and the next thing I know, I woke up and I was in the hospital." Herndon was treated at a hospital and released.

The third survivor on the truck, Ernest Colbert, was in serious condition at Fairfax Hospital.

Firefighters Mark Miller, 23, and Matt Smith, 22; both of Catlett, died at the scene.

"We're talking to witnesses, to the crew, to see why it happened," said Rachel Halterman of the National Transportation Safety Board.

"I was looking outside a window and I saw a fire engine. Then a split second later, I saw flames shoot past my window," said Charles Horton Jr., 18, of New Jersey.

The collision destroyed the truck, scattering bits of the vehicle.

Bush offers encouragement, responds to relief effort critics

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — President Bush on Friday toured a region ravaged by Hurricane Hugo, offering "a little encouragement" and a $1.1 billion relief check while defending federal efforts against charges of foot-dragging.

"I do know that there's been a critic or two" of the federal disaster-relief effort, Bush said after a brief look at the storm damage. "To the critics, I simply say: I understand. We are trying very hard."

Almost from the moment he landed, the impact of Hugo was evident.

Bush's 15-minute motorcade from Charleston Air Force Base inland to Summerville took him past decimated trailer parks, dozens of roofless buildings and pine forests filled with trees snapped in half.

In Summerville, the president was shown around the Dorchester County Courthouse grounds, which were littered with smashed cars, fallen trees and twisted metal. He visited a community center where a school bus, flattened by a fallen tree, still stood in the driveway.

Later, he flew in a helicopter over the Carolina coastline, where Hugo had come ashore a week earlier, and flew low over some of the hardest hit areas of downtown Charleston.

Throughout, Bush offered words of encouragement to residents of a state where 270,000 people were made jobless by the hurricane, where more than 200,000 people still have no electricity and where 50,000 are homeless.

In Summerville, he patted Mayor

Berlin Meyers on the shoulder, asked himself a question and then answered it.

"Why am I here?" Bush said. "I'm here to give a little encouragement to a courageous man."

Touring a Summerville street lined with destroyed and damaged houses, Bush talked to several residents and, putting one on the shoulder, said, "What spirit!"

Besides offering encouragement, Bush came to South Carolina to respond to a week of rising criticism that the federal government has been too bureaucratic and too slow in helping victims of what Mayor Meyers called "the worst storm that ever happened to our state."

The president was met as he landed by one of the most vocal critics, Charleston Mayor Joseph Riley Jr., who said it was "absolutely ridiculous" that only two federal disaster relief offices had been opened in Charleston and who has complained that when he asked for emergency power generators, he was told the proper forms had to be filled out first.

Riley said he told Bush that "our people are really hurting" and that the president "said he understood."

The mayor also told reporters: "I know his coming here helped us. We're glad he's here and I know by being here he will see and understand."

Riley was not invited to join Bush, Gov. Carroll Campbell and several members of the state's congressional delegation on the tour.

Later, as he ended his two-hour visit to South Carolina, Bush told reporters that the hurricane "was tough. It was devastating."

"But the spirit of the people of South Carolina came through loud and clear and you couldn't help but be impressed to hear people say, 'We're going to bounce back.'"

As for the complaints about the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., had described as "as sorry a bunch of bureaucratic jackasses as I've worked with in my life," Bush said:

"When all the dust is settled and the debris is removed, people are going to understand that this has been a total team effort."

Earlier, in front of the demolished school bus, the president said, "I'm here trying to mobilize the resources of the federal government."

As part of that effort, Bush signed legislation shortly before arriving that makes $1.1 billion in emergency assistance available to Hugo's victims.

Of that, $400 million will go to Puerto Rico, $300 million to the U.S. Virgin Islands, $200 million to South Carolina and $50 million to North Carolina.

Bush said the money, approved by Congress just a day earlier, is needed to help people "rebuild their homes, communities, businesses and lives."

In addition, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said that the Commerce Department was making $5 million available for the retraining of displaced workers.

Deduct $592

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government on Friday set at $592 the 1990 deductible amount for Medicare insurance coverage of hospital costs.

That means Medicare will pay for all medically necessary, inpatient hospital costs next year after a covered beneficiary pays the initial deductible.

The amount, based on hospital costs, is $560 this year.

With the fate of the Medicare catastrophic illness program in doubt, a deductible could be subject to change.

Illegal aliens barred from census count

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate endorsed legislation Friday barring the counting of illegal aliens in the 1990 census, an action with potential impact on the drawing of congressional districts and federal aid to areas with large alien populations.

The amendment, offered by Sen. Richard C. Shelby, D-Ala., would bar the counting of illegal aliens for the purpose of congressional reapportionment.

It was approved by voice vote and attached to a $17.3 billion appropriations bill for the Commerce, State and Justice departments after an amendment to table it was defeated, 50-41.

The overall bill, which contains the annual appropriations for the three departments, the federal judiciary and related agencies, was approved on a voice vote.

The action took place after a number of senators noted that the Constitution provides for the counting of "the whole number of persons" in each state, not just citizens.

But Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said that if that were followed literally, "an occupying army would qualify" to be counted by the census.

"There's no reason not to order the Census Bureau to exempt illegal aliens," Hatch said.

Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas agreed, saying some states with few illegal aliens are losing seats in Congress.

Raises approved for food stamps

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of low-income families using government food stamps will get cost-of-living increases beginning Oct. 1, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

Ann Chadwick, acting assistant secretary for food and consumer services, said the monthly food stamp allowance will be increased about 10 percent.

Also, she said, income eligibility levels will go up about 4 percent, meaning a family can have more income and still qualify for the program.

Department budget officials estimate that more than 18 million people share in the program, which is estimated to cost around $13 billion a year.

Eligible people get the monthly coupons free of charge and can exchange them like cash at grocery stores.

Chadwick said the increase will boost the monthly allocation for a family of four to $31 per month from the current level of $30 per month.

Gross income levels help determine eligibility for households.

Outgoing chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff praised by Bush

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — President Bush on Friday lauded outgoing Adm. William J. Crowe Jr. as a man of "quiet valor" during a ceremony marking Crowe's retirement as the president's principal military adviser.

Crowe was honored at a full military sendoff, complete with flyovers by fighter planes at the U.S. Naval Academy where the Oklahoma native got his start in the Navy 43 years ago. He became chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in 1985, appointed by President Reagan.

In remarks to the colorful outdoor gathering, Bush said Crowe had a "no nonsense toughness, a resolve when it comes to defending America, and a warm heart for what makes America worth fighting for."

"Admiral Crowe's heroism has reached far beyond serving in combat, through a lifetime of acts of quiet valor, through work, words and deeds done for sheer love of country."

The 64-year-old admiral's four-year term as chairman of the Joint Chiefs ends Oct. 1. He will be succeeded by Army Gen. Colin Powell, who at 52 will be the youngest man ever to hold the job.

Bush said the money, approved by Congress just a day earlier, is needed to help people "rebuild their homes, communities, businesses and lives."

In addition, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said that the Commerce Department was making $5 million available for the retraining of displaced workers.

Thornburgh can't intervene

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court, rebuffing Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, ruled Friday that he could not intervene to challenge secrecy rulings in the Iran-Contra case of a former CIA agent.

A three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., held that only independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh could appeal rulings allowing the disclosure of government secrets in the trial of former CIA agent Joseph P. Fernandez.

The court said that Thornburgh's only recourse to protect the secrets would be to exercise a politically unpalatable option the attorney general had sought to avoid — filing a motion that could lead to the dismissal of charges.

Thornburgh had sought to intervene to prevent the disclosure of the location of CIA facilities in Central America that the trial judge held could be made public as part of Fernandez's defense.

The appeals panel said Thornburgh can still file an affidavit blocking — the release of — the documents in open court.

Nuclear submarine grounded at cape

CARE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The missile-firing nuclear submarine USS Pennsylvania ran aground Friday as it was entering Port Canaveral, but no injuries or damage were reported, the Navy said.

The mishap occurred at 10:50 a.m. The ship and tug were close to freeing the 560-foot-long, 16,600-ton submarine about 2 hours later, the Navy said in a statement. There were about 150 crew members aboard.

The Pennsylvania, equipped to fire Trident missiles, was entering the port on a routine visit.

County officer quits; investigation begun

TWIN FALLS — A corporal in the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department has resigned and a state agency is conducting an "internal personnel investigation" into circumstances surrounding the resignation, Sheriff Jim Munn said.

Cpl. William H. Parsons resigned Sept. 23, Munn said, but he declined to comment on Parsons or the nature of the investigation.

Mike Burgess, a special agent for the Idaho Bureau of Investigations who was asked Sunday to look into the matter, said Parsons was a shift supervisor in the county jail and had worked full-time for the sheriff's department since June 1986.

Burgess said he expects to make a report to the sheriff's office, but would report to the prosecutor's office if criminal charges are involved.

Twin Falls rescue personnel search for 3 missing boys

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department and local search and rescue personnel were searching the South Hills Friday evening for three local boys who did not return from a fishing trip.

No further information was available.

Accused forger waives right to his preliminary hearing

TWIN FALLS — A local man facing four counts of forgery waived his right to a preliminary hearing Friday.

Michael Green, also known as Michael Daneke, submitted a written waiver of rights in 5th District Magistrate Court Friday, said his attorney, Public Defender Michael J. Wood.

Green, 42, 819 Aspenwood Lane, was arrested in Alliance, Neb., and brought back to Twin Falls last month after allegedly forging his wife's signature on four checks amounting to $25,595, according to court documents.

Attorney Walker receives 'Democrat of the Year' tag

TWIN FALLS — Attorney Lloyd Walker was named "Democrat of the Year" Friday night by the Twin Falls County Democratic Party.

In announcing the honor during a party fund-raiser, county party Chairman Ken Pedersen said Walker was the local central committee's "obvious choice." Walker has served twice as state party chairman.

The county's Democrats also honored Pam Webb as "Citizen of the Year." A Circle K manager, Webb has been actively involved in fund-raising efforts for United Cerebral Palsy. Her grassroots efforts in the past two years have raised nearly $2,000 for the charity. Webb also helped organize the Twin Falls Arts and Crafts Show.

Gov. Cecil Andrus also received kudos from the local Democrats for "safeguarding the borders and citizens of Idaho from toxic nuclear waste." The governor was not present to accept his plaque, but Pedersen promised he would take it to Andrus next week.

Environmentalist Liz Paul chosen 'Citizen of the Year'

KETCHUM — The Snake Valley-Ketchum Chamber of Commerce has selected environmental activist Liz Paul as Citizen of the Year for 1989-90.

Paul was selected by the board for her contribution to the Ketchum-Sun Valley community in raising the consciousness of all Southern Idaho regarding the disposal of radioactive wastes at the Idaho Nuclear Engineering Laboratory. She is executive director of the Snake River Alliance.

The award is presented annually to men and women in recognition of the exceptional leadership and contributions to the community. Previous winners have been Bill Jansz, the Community Library, Bill and Annie Vanderbilt, Milt Kuoli, and Earl and Carol Holding.

Studded tires permitted starting Sunday, state says

BOISE — Motorists may drive with studded snow tires beginning Sunday, according to the Idaho Transportation Department.

The department recommends the tires, studded with small metal cleats in the tread, be installed on the vehicle's drive wheels only; front-wheel-drive vehicles, however, should use studded tires on all four wheels.

Studded-tire laws vary in neighboring states. The tires may be used on roads in Montana and Nevada as of Sunday; in Utah on Oct. 15; in Oregon on Nov. 30; and in Wyoming there are no restrictions.

Idaho allows motorists to use studded tires from October to April 15.

Bank walks away from Hawkins bean interest

By MICHELLE COLE
Times-News writer

FILER — Negative publicity coupled with a weakened case prompted First Security Bank of Idaho to cut the threads on its legal tangle with Magic Valley bean growers, the bank's chairman said Friday.

In an open letter advertisement in Friday's Times-News, Chairman James E. Phelps announced that First Security Bank of Idaho filed papers Thursday with the United States Bankruptcy Court releasing all claims the bank has pursued against commercial or seed beans in the Hawkins Company Ltd.

Phelps confirmed that the bank will walk away from a $1.6 million interest in the case.

"We don't want this drug out in the news any longer," Phelps said in a telephone

Growers will meet Oct. 11

A meeting of the growers involved in the Hawkins Co. Ltd. bankruptcy dispute will be held at 8 p.m. Oct. 11 at Filer High School.

interview after his letter appeared.

"We want to put this to bed," he said. "As far as I'm concerned it's a dead issue and everybody should go back to their daily business."

Most interested parties learned of the bank's retreat when they opened their newspapers Friday.

"It's a welcome relief," said Steve Peterson, a Twin Falls lawyer representing 80 growers.

Peterson said the bank's withdrawal may speed the end of the dispute, though he could not give a timetable.

"Hopefully will it will be over soon," he said.

Peterson added that while the bank's claims weren't without substance, he didn't think First Security had a good chance of prevailing in court.

"It's a combination between P.R. and not having a very good case," he said.

"In a sense it doesn't change anything legally," said Lloyd Walker, an attorney representing 17 Filer growers.

Roger Vincenta, Filer farmer with beans stored in the bankrupt warehouse, said he'd like to believe the bank has completely withdrawn its case. But he's skeptical.

The state suspended the Filer bean warehouse company's license last November after a year-end audit revealed inventory shortages. The legal battle involving the bank, growers and others with claims on the beans, began in January after the owners of the beleaguered warehouse filed for bankruptcy.

There have been several court dates since. And earlier this month First Security lawyers filed a pre-trial statement with the court disputing all ownership claims of the beans by more than 400 growers and three bean purchasers.

Temper flared during a Sept. 20 meeting between the bank and several farmers when First Security lawyers suggested that the growers' claims may be invalid because the warehouse had overpaid the farmers for years, resulting in a $2.66 million windfall.

The angry farmers pledged to launch a boycott of First Security and of Twin Falls Bank & Trust, which will soon be purchased by First Security's Utah-based holding company.

Rupert street improvement could begin next spring

By JANE BYWATER
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — If all goes well, work could begin next spring on a complete renovation of A Street, following the City Council's approval this week of additional costs for the project.

Powers Engineering Co. on Wednesday gave the council an update on the project, including a request for an additional $5,990 to pay for higher-than-expected easement settlement costs with property owners.

The city has contracted to have the street widened, a new road surface put down and curbs and gutters and a new storm system.

The city has been approved for federal funds to pay for about 90 percent of the $1.114 million estimated cost of the project. Community Development Coordinator Don Dustin said after the meeting. The city will pay for about 10 percent.

Powers Engineering has obtained deeds to 21 of the 29 parcels of land that it requires. The company still needs four easements and 49 temporary work spaces.

These additional agreements, together with additional costs for obtaining and changing documents, have made it necessary for Powers Engineering to increase its fee by $5,990.

The approval is contingent upon an okay from City Attorney Donald Chisholm, who will look over the original contract to make sure none of the additional costs are covered in the original contract.

In other matters, Councilman Ronald Klebe will talk with Union Pacific Railroad Co. officials to try to develop a plan to build a new road across the tracks near the former location of the old depot.

A new road opening onto the plaza would help ease traffic congestion in and around Rupert Square and would provide an easier way for people to travel between the Square and the shopping center on the other side of the tracks, Mayor Bill

Whitton said.

The council formed a committee to study the ongoing controversy over the ordinance prohibiting the drinking of beer in all city parks.

Some local businesses told the council in June that the city's ban has hurt their operations. Also, the Mini-Cassig Mens Softball Association sent the council a letter stating that members had voted to play most of their games in Burley due to the ban.

This committee is composed of Whitton, Donald Chisholm, Acting Public Works Supervisor Les Hutchinson and Councilman Joel Rogers.

Ketchum bank rejects buyout bid

KETCHUM (AP) — A $25 million bid to purchase Mountain West Savings Bank, with banks here and in other towns in the area, has been rejected by the bank's board of directors.

After daylong meetings Wednesday in Coeur d'Alene, the board issued a brief written statement saying it had unanimously agreed "the terms of the offer were inadequate."

Bank officials refused comment on the inadequacies or to say whether the rejection was final or if negotiations would continue with the unidentified bidder.

Last week, that buyer offered $25 million for all the outstanding shares of Mountain West's capital stock. That comes to about $15.25 per share for a company that has a fully diluted book value of about $10.75 per share.

Arrest made in lottery ticket theft

By The Times-News and Associated Press

CASTLEFORD — A man who was arrested on drug-related charges Wednesday led Twin Falls police to make another arrest for stolen lottery tickets, according to police and court papers.

Robert Dale Anglin, 27, 439 Maple Ave., Castleford, was charged with petit theft Thursday after police found 36 stolen lottery tickets in his apartment, papers say.

Michael Ray Robbins, 27, was arrested early Wednesday morning when police found 1 ounce of marijuana in five small baggies in Robbins's pickup. Robbins also had some lottery tickets in his possession that were traced as stolen from a Bull street, Twin Falls police Detective Ron Axman said.

Robbins told police there were more tickets at Anglin's apartment, Axman said, so they went there to search.

Mark Klingler, criminal investigator for the Idaho State Lottery, said those tickets that weren't winners were apparently

Bellevue residents who live near sewer site irked

By ROBERT DOYLE
Times-News correspondent

BELLEVUE — The City Council set a public meeting for Monday following complaints this week from residents living near the proposed site of the town's new sewer treatment plant.

The City Council on Thursday considered a petition signed by 35 Bellevue residents living in the area where a proposed sewer plant would be constructed, asking that it be located elsewhere.

The plant "will effect the quality of life as well as the property value" of those residing near the site, east of Highway 75 adjacent to Glendale Road, the petition states.

The council also received a letter from Twin Falls attorney Mark Stubbs, who represents homeowners in the nearby Wood River Ranch Subdivision, asking members to reconsider buying the land. Stubbs's letter also stated that the city had not given adequate notice as to where the sewer plant would be located.

All notification requirements had been met, said John Mallar, of Foresgren Associates, the firm hired by the city to design the plant. "It's been published in the legal notice section of the local paper for five weeks," he said.

Councilman Dennis Wright asked Mallar how the council should respond to the petition, as well as the letter from Stubbs.

The plant can't be located further out, Mallar said. "All we can say to the petitioners is, if not here, where?" he said.

Mallar and Bellevue Mayor Wayne Douthitt just finished talks with the property's owner, John Heath, "and he appears willing to sell," Mallar said.

The city had previously considered five sites for the plant, narrowing it down to the Heath property near the Big Wood River.

The public meeting is set for 7 p.m. Monday in the multi-purpose room at Bellevue Elementary School.

Voters in June approved by about 60-40 percent a revenue bond to raise just more than $1 million to help fund the town's first sewer system. The balance of the $3.1 million project will be paid for with government grants.

In other matters, county Animal Control Officer Jody Dyke told the council the city's contract for control services is for just 10 hours of patrol a week and that more vigilant control would require full-time officers.

Two Bellevue residents, Mary Griffin and Rob Heed, earlier this month asked the council to take action against the Jack Shipman family, who they said has 15-20 cats and four dogs creating a neighborhood nuisance.

The request prompted a discussion of whether Dyke was doing her job.

Beginning this month, Bellevue will pay $500 a month, up from $400 a month last year for the service.

Dyke told the council that she had impounded 90 dogs found in the Bellevue city limits since October 1988. "Last year there were no dogs shot, no dogs poisoned, with only two recorded dog bites," she said as evidence her patrols have kept problems to a minimum. "That's not been the case in previous years."

To completely enforce the city's leash law, the city would have to have "at least five full-time officers doing animal control," Dyke said.

She suggested that people need to be more tolerant and talk to one another. "If neighbors talk to neighbors, the problem's often resolved," Dyke said.

Dyke said she had talked to the Jack Shipman family on two occasions and the family had cooperated by reducing the number of their pets.

County Prosecutor Ned Williamson appeared with Dyke and told the council that Bellevue still owed $1,000 as its portion of an animal control truck.

The council will discuss at its October meeting whether the city will continue with county animal control services.

Dyke said she has a 24-hour phone that residents could call if they wished her services. The number is 788-3901.

Chutists leap from Perrine Bridge to kick off Rim to Rim

By ANITA DENNIS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Though jumping out of airplanes may be the traditional sky diver's adventure, a Twin Falls man has an alternative: parachuting from the Perrine Bridge on the edge of town into the Snake River Canyon.

"You do what Jim Wagenman and some of his friends plan to do this morning, weather permitting, Wagenman said.

Wagenman, who runs a local massage therapy business, said he has already made the jump twice. "I've done it four times in recent months. He and from one to five friends, some of whom are coming in from Utah for the jump, will parachute off the bridge about 9:30 a.m., just before the annual Rim-to-Rim run.

Wagenman said he is an experienced parachutist. A member of the Utah National Guard, he has been through the U.S. Army Jump School and is certified by the Army at packing and inspecting parachutes.

And he said although he doesn't know whether parachuting off the bridge violates any laws, he doesn't intend to ask permission.

"You do understand the mentality of a parachutist," he said. "They're renegades, they're rebels."

Asking permission only grants someone else authority, he said.

According to Twin Falls County Sheriff Jim Munn, no state or local statutes prohibit parachuting off the bridge.

Munn said that although deputies would be sent to check on the parachutists, he could do nothing to stop the jump.

"My hands are tied," he said.

Boy found in mine goes home at last 2nd escapee captured Friday by Bonner County searchers

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Ten-year-old Joshua Dennis, lost for five days in a pitch-black abandoned mine, was released from the hospital Friday to a home bedecked with yellow ribbons and packed with cheering friends.

Joshua replied that he felt "fine" as relatives helped him into a car at Primary Children's Medical Center and whisked him to an abbreviated homecoming party. A full-blown celebration will be held as soon as Joshua is out of the wheelchair he's confined to while his frostbite feet heal, said Mark Budd, the boy's uncle.

Joshua was wearing a homemade T-shirt proclaiming, "We Found Our Hidden Treasure," a play on the name of the mine from which he was rescued Wednesday afternoon. He clutched a helmet bearing the signatures of the Utah Power & Light Co. mine rescue team who found him after days of futile searches.

The Kearns boy had become separated Sept. 22 from a group of Boy Scouts his father was helping supervise on an expedition into the former silver, lead and zinc mine in the Oquirrh Mountains 45 miles southwest of Salt Lake City.

After five days, hope had all but vanished that the boy would be found alive. Then a mine search team that had passed within 150 feet of him in half a dozen sweeps heard his faint cry for help and discovered him on a ledge.

During his vigil, Joshua said, he had heard searchers' voices a few times, but his cries for help weren't heard. "I wasn't thinking if it was day night, or what day it was. I thought it was night, and when they told me it was Wednesday, I thought it was Sunday," he said.

Joshua was dehydrated and suffering from mild frostbite on his feet. Dr. Ted Jenkins, the boy's pediatrician, has said Joshua made a "remarkable" recovery and would likely suffer no permanent emotional or physical injury from the ordeal.

The frostbite, however, is painful and requires the boy to be in a wheelchair, said the uncle. Once he's recovered, friends and neighbors will hold a larger celebration.

"Joshua wants to have a party when he's better able to get up and around," Budd said.

DOVER (AP) — The second of two men who escaped from a Wyoming prison farm was captured Friday by Bonner County sheriff's deputies after a day-long search.

Kevin Sundquist, 22, was captured without incident Friday evening at a residence west of the north Idaho town, sheriff's Capt. Harry Mitchell said. No one was home when Sundquist broke into the house.

Sundquist and Patrick Craun, 20, escaped from the minimum-security Wyoming Honor Farm in central Wyoming on Monday in a state pickup truck loaded with fence-building equipment.

Craun was caught early Friday morning and deputies with search dogs spent the day following Sundquist's tracks in the sparsely populated area's steep, wooded hillsides. Police officers from Priest River and Idaho State Police officers assisted in the search.

The two were in the Wyoming pickup that was initially spotted shortly after midnight driving erratically on U.S. 2 near Priest River, about seven miles east of the Washington state border. Town police pursued the vehicle, which sped west before making a U-turn in a supermarket parking lot near Oldtown.

The car turned back east on U.S. 2, racing at speeds of up to 105 m.p.h, said Priest River Police Chief Wally Mitchell.

Sheriff's deputies joined the chase. The men ditched their pickup in a gravel pit near Dover, east of Priest River, and fled on foot.

Searchers with a tracking dog found Craun about 2:25 a.m. sitting under a tree in an open field. His knee was injured, and Craun told officers that Sundquist left him behind when he couldn't continue running, said Chief Deputy Nick Krager of the sheriff's department.

Both men were arrested for possession of stolen property and felony escape, and Craun, who was driving the pickup, was charged with eluding an officer.

Neither man was armed when arrested, although deputies recovered a rifle and some other implements from the abandoned pickup.

Both men were serving one-to-three-year sentences in Wyoming. Craun, of Jackson, Wyo., had his probation revoked and was serving time for a Teton County burglary. Sundquist, of Gillette, Wyo., had been sentenced for larceny and forgery in Campbell County.

Lee Alley, assistant security chief for the Wyoming Honor Farm, said the men were scheduled to go on a fencing job Monday afternoon.

Cattlemen decry animal rights groups

BOISE (AP) — Radical animal rights' groups are making life tough on the range for cattle ranchers.

Incidents of "eco-terrorism" by radical animal rights activists directed against cattle ranchers have risen dramatically in the past year, according to a lobbyist for the National Cattlemen's Association.

"The openness of these groups is appalling," Kathleen Hartnett said in a speech to the NCA convention in Boise. "It is time for us to act."

Hartnett, referred to acts of vandalism and violence claimed by animal rights groups such as Animal Liberation Front and Earth First! She cited the example of a brick and an unlit Molotov cocktail thrown through a window of the California Cattle Association's office in May.

Pam Neal, executive vice president of the Arizona Cattle Association, recounted the story of a death threat she received on her answering machine after she spoke out against an Arizona wilderness bill.

"The message said, 'You're gonna get shot, that's all I have to say,'" she said. "It changed things for me. I started carrying a .38 in my purse."

Hartnett urged cattle ranchers to report all incidents of vandalism and theft, and to take steps to tighten security on their farms.

Hawkins

Vincent said several area farmers and businesses have pulled their accounts in the past 10 days, and the unofficial boycott will continue until the growers are satisfied the bank will not challenge their interests.

Vincent called Phelps' letter "sloppy" and "flowery" but said it stops short of addressing several key issues. But Phelps on Friday reiterated First Security's decision to totally withdraw from the dispute.

"I want to understand the growers to understand that the bank takes no interest in any beans — commercial or seeds — that the growers might have an interest in," he said.

Moreover, Phelps and lawyers representing the growers said Friday that Bankrupt Judge Alfred Hagans already had made it clear that farmers with beans stored in the Hawkins warehouse — not the bank — are the owners of those beans.

Phelps said documents filed routinely by Hawkins with First Security indicated that Hawkins purchased the beans from the farmers and therefore Hawkins owned its inventory. But once in court, Hawkins directors made a "100 percent flop" from what they had told the bank, Phelps said.

The judge has not ruled on the question of who owns seed beans at the warehouse, but Phelps said First Security will give up its interest in those beans.

Following the stormy Sept. 21 meeting, First Security bank officials indicated they were working on a plan to restore the farmers' good will, Phelps said the decision to withdraw from the proceedings was formulated in the past week.

Phelps, who served as vice president and president of First Security offices in Twin Falls from 1960 to 1967, said he still counts quite a few friends in Magic Valley agriculture.

He ended his open letter by extending an olive branch.

"We value our customer base in the Magic Valley and that of Twin Falls Bank & Trust and do not want to disrupt the close friendship that has grown up between us over the decades of supporting this area and its economy, notwithstanding the technicalities of the law. Further pursuit of our position in the bankruptcy, while legally and economically justified, would impose a price on the residents of this valley which we are unwilling to ask."

But can the bank heal wounded public relations?

Vincent said he'll wait and see.

Walker believes the withdrawal won't make a lot of difference.

"They waited an awful long time to react," he said. "They're a little late."

discount "good will" assets. Without an estimated $4 million in those assets, financial analysts say the tangible book value of Mountain West is about $20 per share.

R. A. Pejters, a financial institutions analyst for Dain Bosworth Inc. in Seattle, said the Mountain West offer was a strong one "that doesn't leave a lot of room for someone else to come in and up the ante."

While the identity of the bidder has not been disclosed, analysts say Portland-based U.S. Bancorp and Seattle-based Washington Mutual Savings Bank are among the most likely candidates. Officials of both those companies have refused comment.

Mountain West Savings Bank was created last October when First Federal Savings & Loan Association of Coeur d'Alene acquired Ketchum-based Mountain States Savings Bank. In addition to Ketchum, Mountain West has banks in Hailey and Gooding in the area.

destroyed; others were not attempted to be redeemed.

Anglin was also charged with possession of marijuana with intent to deliver after he told police he dried and packaged the marijuana found in Robbins' pickup. Axtman said.

No criminal charges regarding the stolen lottery tickets have been filed against Robbins, Axtman said.

Meanwhile, Rufino Vasquez, 25, of Fruitland, was in the Park County Jail in lieu of $2,000 bond. He was arrested Sept. 18 after allegedly trying to redeem a lottery ticket altered to look like a $500 winner at Larry's Market in Payette.

"The sharp eye of the lottery retailer and the cooperation between the Payette Police Department and Lottery security reflects our intolerance to ticket fraud," said Mike Best, director of security for the Idaho Lottery. "We want the public to know that tampering with the Idaho Lottery is not a profitable business."

Vasquez is the fourth person arrested for attempted lottery fraud in Idaho. Boise residents Gwen Woolsey, 35; Neal Davis, 32; and Jim Peirson, 25, all face a Nov. 28 trial in 4th District Court after pleading innocent to trying to redeem a ticket altered to look like a $10 winner in the Idaho Match 3 scratch game.

They were arrested Aug. 2 in Boise.

Counties seek health insurance pool
POCATELLO (AP) — If a recent meeting of the Idaho Association of Counties is any indication, Blue Cross of Idaho could see several Idaho counties pull out of its health insurance program in the near future.

Most of the county commissioners who attended the association's annual meeting in Burlington voted to proceed with plans to form a health insurance pool in hopes of putting an end to rising insurance premiums.

More than half of Idaho's 44 counties currently contract with Blue Cross for health insurance, and some have seen as much as a 100 percent increase in their premiums over the past five years.

Similar action was taken by the IAC three years ago when many counties were priced out of the liability insurance market. Although there were some heavy claims against the Idaho Counties Reciprocal Management Program last year, the liability insurance program that now includes 40 counties remains solvent.

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Department of Water Resources officials say they hope to reach a compromise with the Bonneville Power Administration to allow the state agency to plan a hydroelectric plant at the new Clearwater Fish Hatchery near Orofino.

BPA officials met Thursday with Water Resources Director Keith Higginson in Boise and offered to develop a proposal to be reviewed by the state Water Resources Board.

Details of that proposal were not revealed.

State agents seize Bonner marijuana
COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — An early morning drug raid by Idaho Bureau of Narcotics agents has resulted in the seizure of 83 marijuana plants in southern Bonner County.

Officers from several agencies, acting on a tip from an anonymous caller using the state's marijuana hotline, discovered a growing operation Thursday in a metal shed east of Idaho Highway 41.

Officers said Danny K. Smith, 35, was arrested at the residence on charges of manufacturing a controlled substance and failing to purchase a marijuana tax stamp, said David Kane, Bureau of Narcotics acting special agent in charge.

Boise man probated on porn charge
BOISE (AP) — A former Boise stockbroker with a doctorate in literature has been placed on probation for soliciting and receiving child pornography in the mail.

U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan on Thursday ordered Jeffrey Allen Sadler, 45, Meridian, to serve two years of supervised probation, perform 200 hours of community service, and pay a $3,000 fine.

Ryan also required Sadler to continue receiving mental health counseling.

Ryan said he took into account the defendant's advanced education, support from friends and family and lack of a prior criminal record.

Professors: Drug testing major issue
MOSCOW (AP) — Two University of Idaho professors say drug testing of student athletes is a civil rights and university issue, not just an athletic issue.

Roy Atwood, associate professor of communication, and Donald Crowley, associate professor of political science, have asked the UI Faculty Council to discuss drug testing at its meeting on Tuesday.

"The main concern is that we work more toward a policy that works on education rather than penetration and violation of civil rights," Atwood said Thursday.

Crowley said students have constitutional rights, too.

Subcommittee chair backs INEL projects

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The head of a House subcommittee studying advanced nuclear technology says she strongly supports two weapons-related projects planned for the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

Rep. Marilyn Lloyd, D-Tenn., said Friday that she is working in a conference committee to rescind a House-imposed ban on site preparation spending for the Special Isotope Separation project.

The U.S. Department of Energy wants to build the $1 billion SIS at the eastern Idaho site. It would use lasers to refine fuel-grade plutonium for use nuclear weapons.

Lloyd earlier this year denied $10 million in funding for site preparation work on the project during the next fiscal year. The Senate narrowly approved the funding, and a conference committee is working out the differences.

Mrs. Lloyd chairs the House Science, Space and Technology Committee's Subcommittee on Energy, Research and Development. She was in Idaho Falls for a field hearing on the needs of advanced nuclear reactor programs.

At a press conference, she said she is trying to convince her House colleagues to free up the $10 million for site preparation, even though the SIS technology will not be tested until an environmental impact statement is completed at Lawrence Livermore Laboratory in California. She also said she fully supports construction of a New Production Reactor at the INEL to produce tritium for nuclear weapons.

Currently, the nation's only source of tritium is the Department of Energy's Savannah River nuclear facility in South Carolina.

Meanwhile, Rep. Steve Schiff, D-N.M., another subcommittee member, said problems continue to plague the Department of Energy's Waste Isolation Pilot Plant in his state.

The WIPP facility, designed as the final repository for plutonium-contaminated waste now stored at the INEL and elsewhere, originally was scheduled to open last fall. But now, Schiff said, the sooner it could be opened is sometime next year.

He said the New Mexico attorney general has issued an opinion that the transportation routes to WIPP near Carlsbad, N.M., were improperly chosen and the process will have to be repeated.

A New Mexico agency overseeing WIPP development also has raised questions about the possibility that gases generated by buried waste at the site could accumulate to dangerous levels.

Schiff said since New Mexico residents realize WIPP "will be there forever," it is crucial for all the questions to be answered before the facility is opened.

Scientists head 3 ways toward next reactors

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Scientists are heading in three directions to develop the next generation of nuclear power reactors, but some general themes keep coming up — make them simple, make them marketable and make them soon.

The House Science, Space and Technology Committee panel met Friday in Idaho Falls to discuss the future of nuclear reactor technology. Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, is a member of the committee.

Rep. Marilyn Lloyd, D-Tenn., chairwoman of the Subcommittee on Energy Research and Development, said about 100 nuclear reactors now produce about one-sixth of the nation's electricity. But new reactor production has been virtually stagnant since the 1979 Three Mile Island accident, and utilities are relying on older "fossil reactors."

Stallings said before the hearing that studying second generation reactors for commercial use is true to the research roots of the U.S. Department of Energy's Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, west of Idaho Falls.

The congressman, whose district includes the INEL, said he supports increased defense work at the site. However, he said, "Energy research is, in my opinion, more important than defense."

Testimony before the committee focused on the three reactor designs that make up the new wave of reactor technology — the liquid metal reactor, the high temperature gas-cooled reactor and the advanced light water reactor. The first two designs have close ties to the INEL.

The liquid metal reactor is being studied at INEL's Argonne National Laboratory-West, where scientists are researching the Integral Fast Reactor.

Supporters say IFR is inherently safe and will burn long-lasting nuclear wastes, turning waste disposal into a job that takes hundreds rather than tens of thousands of years.

As a breeder reactor, the IFR also will stretch limited uranium resources.

"If (reactors) breed, uranium sources are ample," said Charles Till, Argonne's associate laboratory director for engineering research.

The liquid metal reactor is also being tested at Washington's Hanford Nuclear Reservation. Tests at the Fast Flux Test Facility tie closely with IFR tests at Argonne's Experimental Breeder Reactor-II, said Danny Newland, who manages Westinghouse Hanford's advanced reactor development division.

The high-temperature gas-cooled reactor may be developed at INEL as a New Production Reactor, to produce tritium for nuclear weapons. And for commercial uses, it would be a safe, simple reactor, said Linden Blue, vice chairman of General Dynamics of San Diego, a contractor working on the design.

Blue said Department of Energy development of a New Production Reactor would be "a dramatic step in making this reactor a reality" for commercial use. But Dan Mears of San Diego-based Gas-Cooled Reactor Associates said a commercial gas-cooled reactor prototype probably will be built by the end of the century, with or without the NPR.

Blood and the fathers

A science writer named Jared Diamond in "Discover" magazine contends group blood tests now show an estimated 10 to 30 percent of British and American babies are illegitimate. And usually, he says, the first fathers are next-door neighbors.

A medico contends every baby feels cold immediately after it's born unless the room temperature is 102 degrees F.

FRINCE CHARLES

Q: Wasn't Prince Charles bussed to school?

A: Not exactly. But driven, yes. He was the first British heir to the throne who went to school outside the palace grounds.

Was pretty common in the South of a century ago to refer to the family out-house as "the federal building." But that one died out.

DUKE ELIZABETH

Traditional title of the British ruler of the Channel Islands is the Duke of Normandy. Queen Elizabeth II is that ruler. So technically, the Queen is the Duke.

Marcos' following dwindles, not gone

By ROBERT H. REID
The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — Support for Ferdinand Marcos has dwindled steadily since he was ousted in a civilian-military uprising three years ago, and few believe his followers are strong enough to topple his successor, Corason Aquino.

Still, President Aquino refuses to allow Marcos, who died Thursday in Hawaii, to be buried here because she said the funeral might trigger "destabilization efforts."

Her adamant stand reflects a fear among senior officials that Marcos' well-financed followers can create enough trouble to discredit the government and frighten off foreign investors needed to help rebuild the country's debt-ridden economy.

In a country where public opinion surveys are notoriously unreliable, it is difficult to determine the extent of support for Marcos, who ruled this country for 20 years, longer than any Philippine president.

But the results of elections held since 1986 — as well as the turnout in recent pro-Marcos rallies — indicate a decline in the number of hardcore Marcos supporters.

After the February 186 uprising that toppled Marcos, the late president's followers could muster up to 10,000 people for rallies demanding the return of the man they considered their legitimate president.

But in recent months, Marcos loyalists have been able to attract only a few hundred participants. Many are middle-aged men and women from Marcos' northern Luzon island stronghold.

None of the candidates clearly identified as Marcos supporters won election to the Senate in the May 1987 congressional balloting. Nineteen avowed pro-Marcos politicians were elected to the 200-member House of Representatives.

Unlike the 24 senators who were elected in nationwide balloting, House members were elected by district, indicating scattered pockets of support for Marcos, particularly in northern Luzon and parts of Mindanao island.

Marcos supporters are organized into about 30 different factions, including the "Ako'y Pilipino" or "I am a Filipino" group and the New Society Movement, the party Marcos organized.

One source with close ties to the Marcos movement, speaking on condition of anonymity, estimated that up to a million of the 58 million Filipinos were either members of pro-Marcos groups or supported them.

That represents a sizeable political base, and already politicians are jockeying for control of the movement.

Candidates for the Marcos mantle include Vice President Salvador Laurel, Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile and Eduardo Cojuangco. Mrs. Aquino's estranged cousin who fled to California after Marcos was overthrown.

Division within the Marcos camp may be in part responsible for the delay in organizing the protests that were widely anticipated after Marcos' death.

After Marcos' ouster, the peak of the loyalist movement was the June 1986 takeover of the Manila Hotel. Troops loyal to Marcos seized the hotel and declared the former president's 1986 running mate, Arturo Tolentino, as acting president.

The mutineers, who were receiving instructions by telephone from Marcos, surrendered about 40 hours later. In January 1987, pro-Marcos troops seized a radio-television station and held out for about 60 hours before surrendering.

Afterward, the government claimed Marcos was preparing to leave Hawaii secretly for Manila in case the coup attempt succeeded.

The base of Marcos' support is in the Ilocano-speaking areas of the north, which includes the late president's birthplace, Sarrai, and the family's ancestral home, Bataan.

Other Marcos strongholds include scattered areas of the central Visayas islands and Mindanao — mostly in districts controlled by warlords with whom the former president forged alliances.

But the deepest sympathy for Marcos is in the Ilocano regions of the north. Filipino culture requires special loyalty to members of one's own linguistic group or province.

Ilocanos, a strongly clannish group, number about 6 million and are the third-largest linguistic group in a country where more than 80 languages and dialects are spoken.

Ilocanos are strongly represented within the Philippine military. Figures on their numbers are unavailable, but reporters covering the August 1987 coup attempt, led by renegade Lt. Col. Gregorio Honasan, heard many of the mutineers speaking Ilocano.

Aquino won't let body return

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corason Aquino said Friday she has forgiven Ferdinand Marcos for the murder of her husband but cannot permit the late president to be buried here because it would trigger domestic unrest.

The government put troops and police on alert after the 72-year-old former president died Thursday in Honolulu. There were no major demonstrations by Marcos supporters.

Mexico pledges to fight drug war

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Carlos Salinas de Gortari urged closer cooperation with the United States in battling drugs as he prepared for his first official visit to the United States.

Mexico "will continue to fight it because it represents a threat to national sovereignty," Salinas said Thursday night.

Salinas, who leaves Sunday for a weeklong visit to the United States, said drug trafficking will be a top issue in his talks with Bush.

Colombia steps up car checks

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Soldiers and police searched cars for guns and explosives at dozens of checkpoints Friday after a car bomb exploded in a parking garage.

Police said one person suffered minor injuries in the blast Thursday night at the Tequendama Intercontinental, which is owned by the army's retired officers' association. The explosion sent bombs raining down on the building.

Police said they did not have a motive for the slayings, but execution-style murders are frequently the work of Colombia's cocaine traffickers.

Meanwhile, a judge rejected an appeal and cleared the way for the government to extradite another Colombian to the United States to face drug charges, the Bogota daily El Tiempo reported.

The Justice Ministry would only say it was preparing a statement on the case.

The suspect, Ana Maria Rodriguez, was arrested three weeks ago. A judge in Cartagena, 500 miles north of the capital, Thursday rejected a plea for her release, El Tiempo said.

To protect judges from reprisals in drug cases, the Justice Ministry often withholds their identities.

Ms. Rodriguez is not among the top 12 cocaine traffickers wanted by the United States, the destination of up to 80 percent of Colombia's cocaine.

The bomb at the Tequendama Intercontinental was the third placed in a hotel in the past five days.

Another bomb exploded Thursday night in the capital, at a government electric company's transformer substation in southern Bogota, police said.

Two bombs exploded in the western town of Tumbia city of Cali on Thursday night, one at a bank's automatic teller machine.

Chinese condemn Western lifestyles

BEIJING (AP) — The Communist Party leader, Jiang Zemin, condemned the West's "rotten lifestyles" and predicted the triumph of socialism over capitalism as he opened celebrations Friday marking 40 years of Communist rule.

"We are full of confidence in our socialist cause and are sure of a bright Communist future for mankind," he said in his first major speech since taking office in June after a power struggle triggered by pro-democracy protests.

Jiang's 30-minute speech televised live from the Great Hall of the People began a weekend of activities that will climax with dances and fireworks on Sunday, National Day. But he gave short shrift to celebrating the achievements made since Mao Tse-tung's Oct. 1, 1949, proclamation of the People's Republic of China.

CSI volleyball team 4-1 at NCCI tourney

POWELL, Wyo. — The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team opened the Northwest Community College Invitational here Friday with a 4-1 record.
The Eagles posted wins over Western Nebraska 15-2, 15-7, Rick's 15-10, 1-15, 17-16, Sheridan 15-4, 15-3, and Casper 15-5, 15-6.
The sole loss of the opening round came to host Northwest Community College 5-15, 15-12, 15-10.
"We played real well," said CSI coach Ben Stroud. "With the exception of a serious letdown against Rick's, I'm pleased."
The Eagles will finish the tournament today as the teams play a double elimination bracket set up from Friday's games.

Well, that's your opinion the young pitchers have struggled. I don't think they've struggled. I don't buy that at all. I don't know how you can say that... You think they're going to be supermen, these young kids? Don't bother me. Don't come near me. Don't come near me. Show up here two days a week and expect to know it all.

Blue Jays beat O's, clinch tie in AL East

By BEN WALKER
The Associated Press

TORONTO — At least for one big game, the choke collar did not fit the Toronto Blue Jays.

The Blue Jays, battling their own history as well as Baltimore, clinched a tie for the American League East championship Friday night when Lloyd Moseby singled home the winning run with two out in 11th inning to beat the Orioles 2-1.
Moseby's hit followed a controversial intentional walk and ended a night for wasted opportunities for both teams. But Toronto, which blew chances in 1987, scored the tying run in the eighth on reliever Gregg Olson's wild pitch and, after leaving the bases loaded in the 10th, finally won a duel between two of the best extra-inning teams in baseball.
Toronto, now 10-2 in extra innings, can take its second division title in five years with a victory in either of the final two games. The Orioles, 12-5 in extras, must win both to force a one-game playoff Monday in Baltimore.

"I knew we kept getting close, but so did they," Toronto manager Cito Gaston said. "But I wasn't nervous, and neither was the team. We weren't thinking about the past."

The ghosts that haunted the Blue Jays in recent seasons, showed up quickly when Phil Bradley homered on the game's first pitch. But with two outs in the eighth and Kelly Gruber batting, Olson bounced a 1-2 curve ball past catcher Jamie Quirk and pinch runner Tom Lawless scored the tying run without a play at the plate.

"I'm going to live or die with my curve. I'm going to throw it again," Olson said. "If I don't throw it, they'll hit my curve and Kelly Olson escaped a jam again in the 10th when rookie John Olerud fied out with runners on second and third and then got Gruber on a grounder with the bases loaded.
"Sure it's disappointing," Olson said. "But I guarantee that I speak for everybody in this room when I say we're going to come out Saturday and play as hard as we can."

In the 11th, Manny Lee singled with one out against Mark Williamson, 10-4, and Nelson Lirio pinch ran. Lirio got second on Ernie White's grounder. Orioles manager Frank Robinson then elected to intentionally walk rookie Junior Felix to pitch to the veteran Moseby. But Moseby spoiled the strategy by hitting a drive off the left-field wall to score Lirio.
"I guess Frank knew I hadn't been swinging the bat that well," Moseby said, "but at that point and in that situation, you can throw the stats out the window."
Robinson said he "wanted to set up a force play at all three bases."
"Moseby's been struggling. I knew that," Felix said.

Robinson is batting .257 and Moseby, who is in a 10-for-55 slump, was hitting .220.
Tom Henke, 8-3, the fourth Toronto pitcher, went two innings for the victory.
Duane Ward started the 10th for the Blue Jays and Cal Ripken led off with a shot off the pitcher's right hand for a single. Henke replaced the injured Ward and retired the side.

Jeff Ballard took a 1-0 lead into the bottom of the eighth inning when Mookie Wilson led off with a single. Fred McGriff grounded into a force play and Lawless pinch ran.
After Lawless stole second, Olson relieved and George Bell grounded to short, moving Lawless to third.
With Gruber batting, Olson threw the wild pitch allowing Lawless to score the tying run. It was Olson's ninth wild pitch of the season.
Gatcher Jamie Quirk thought he should have stopped it.
"I should have blocked it," Quirk said. "I've blocked that pitch 100 times this season. It should have been 101."

Ballard pitched 7 1-3 innings and allowed six hits.

Toronto's Todd Stottlemyre contemplates his first pitch that Phil Bradley, background, hit for a home run but the Blue Jays prevailed in the 11th inning.

Showdown turns out to be blowout —BANCROFT— The game of the year in the Sawtooth Conference ended up being something less.

Second-ranked North Gem exploded for 30 points in the first half and ended up shutting out fourth-ranked Camas County 46-0 on a game that ended with two minutes left in the third quarter under the state's new 45-point rule.
The victory, which counted double in the Sawtooth Conference standings because the teams were unable to schedule a rematch, all but wrapped up North Gem's second straight league title and the playoff berth that goes with it. The Cowboys are now 5-0 overall and 5-0 in league games, while Camas County fell to 4-1 overall and 3-2 in league games and into a second-place tie with Carey and Rockland. The Mushers, who have games remained with Carey, Rockland and Richfield, will vie with the Panthers and the Bulldogs for the second berth in the Sawtooth Conference in the state eight-man playoffs.
"I think the Camas kids were a little flat after the long bus ride," said first-year North Gem coach Mel Hall. "Defensively, I thought they did a pretty good job. They sacked our quarterback twice, and that's the first time this year anybody has gotten to him."
But the Cowboys' quarterback, 5-foot, 7-inch, 135-pound junior Neal Rogers, burned the Mushers badly. Rogers sprinted 61 yards from scrimmage.

Boise State opens Big Sky season tonight in Ogden

By The Associated Press

While the Big Sky Conference's two favorites battled it out on national television Thursday night, Saturday's games offer three other teams the chance to begin a run at the league title.
Victories for Montana State, Northern Arizona and Boise State would firmly establish them as contenders in a race dominated by two-time champion Idaho and prime challenger Montana.
Idaho defeated Montana 30-24 Thursday night in a national televised game to move atop the conference standings with a 2-0 record.
"Even though some teams have a loss on their record, I still think it's wide open," said Boise State University Coach Skip Hall as his Broncos prepared for their first road game and first Big Sky game of the season at Weber State.
"Other games Saturday include Northern Arizona at Eastern Washington and Montana State at Idaho State, Nevada-Reno is idle.
The Broncos and Wildcats tee it up at 7 p.m. Boise station KTVB, Channel 38 in the Magic Valley, will broadcast it live. KBOI-AM in Boise will broadcast the game.
ISU hosts Montana State at 7:30 p.m. in Holt Arena. Bengal games are broadcast on Pocatello radio station KSEL-AM.
Boise State, 1-2 after a furious comeback fell short in a 37-30 loss to Oregon State of the Pac-10 last week, will have former backup quarterback Mike Virden at the helm from the start in Ogden, Utah.
The junior college transfer was the spark-plug in a second-half surge against the Beavers. He replaces Duane Halliday as the Broncos' starter after throwing five touchdowns and trailing only Idaho quarterback John Fries in Big Sky passing efficiency in just 64 minutes of playing time through three games.

Bruins run record to 4-1 in rout over Mountain Home

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Linebacker Shane Quesnell took the suspense out of the game early, intercepting a pass to set up Twin Falls' second touchdown in the first five minutes and pointing the Bruins to a 44-0 non-conference decision over the Mountain Home Tigers.
"That was the end of the ballgame," said Bruin coach Jon Jund of Quesnell's play. "It put us up 14-0 and took them completely out of any type of game plan they might have had."
The victory runs Twin Falls' record to 4-1 and now brings them to the heart of the schedule against nothing but Boise area teams the rest of the season. That begins in a schedule change next week with the Bruins hosting the Boise Braves at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. The game originally was slated for 8 p.m. Friday.
Mountain Home dropped to 1-4.
"I'm glad we're getting into that part of our schedule," said Jund who has seen his Bruins made through four Class A-1 Division II and A-2 teams while bowing to top-ranked Centennial. "A couple of these games helped us. But I think our young men are ready to go into the league. I think we need it to increase our intensity."

"Two things I appreciated about this week," the coach continued. "First, considering everything that's been going on this week (homecoming festivities) I felt we showed some improvement. The other was I liked seeing (Dave) McClusky kicking that field goal. We may need that in the near future."
The game was only three minutes old when Twin Falls established its leadership on the scoreboard. The Bruins took the opening kick and in seven plays marched 41 and now brings them to the heart of the schedule against nothing but Boise area teams the rest of the season. No. 2-ranked Valley blows out Wendell

By RON GATES

WENDELL — The best defense is a good offense. Backwards? Maybe, but consider the Vikings of Valley High School.
The second-ranked Vikings held Wendell to seven yards total offense in the first half and exploded a 14-0 advantage into a 33-0 halftime spread in the five minutes before intermission enroute to a 55-0 Canyon Conference blowout Friday night.

Valley took a 7-0 lead with only 8-minutes 15-seconds gone in the contest when Blake Mitchell ran off tackle for the final seven yards in a 51-yard drive that consumed 11 plays. Bernard Mussenmann then kicked the first of his five conversions.
Friday's victory, the Vikings' first on Trojan turf since 1983, left Valley all alone atop the Canyon at 3-0 while Wendell, 2-3 overall, evened out at 1-1 in league.
Mussenmann added seven more on a 20-yard drive.

Cardinals owner leaves behind empire of baseball, beer

By ED SCHAFER
The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — St. Louis Cardinals owner August A. Busch Jr. died Friday, leaving behind an empire of beer and baseball and images of Clydesdale horses that were almost as big as the grand old man's career.
Busch, who was 90, died at his home on Grant's Farm in suburban St. Louis after a brief illness.
"We mourn his death while celebrating his many accomplishments," baseball commissioner Fay Vincent said.
And they were many.
Busch built Anheuser-Busch into the biggest brewery in the world, and he built the Cardinals into one of baseball's most successful teams.
"He was Mr. Anheuser-Busch, Mr. Budweiser, Mr. Cardinal and he was Mr. St. Louis," said Fred Kuhlman, the Cardinals' chief operating officer.
"He was a person who had a remarkable gift of his dealing with the public in all walks of life. I've never seen a man who could react so perfectly and properly."

Busch was hospitalized on Aug. 29 for routine tests and returned home about two weeks ago. His family declined to give the cause of death.
He was honorary chairman of the board of Anheuser-Busch and also president and chief executive officer of the Cardinals, as well as being a civic leader and breeder of the world-famous Clydesdales.
Probably the most vivid memory of Busch in recent years was at the World Series in 1982, '85 and '87, riding atop the Budweiser beer wagon, pulled around Busch Stadium by eight Clydesdales.
Each time, the wagon emerged from the Cards bullpen with Busch, as he was called, waving a red cowboy hat as the organist played the Budweiser anthem, "Here Comes the King."
In 1993, Busch convinced the company's board of directors that it should purchase the team and renovate old Sportsman Park.
Later, when developers ran out of money for the new Busch Stadium in downtown St. Louis, Busch stepped in and helped raise the additional $3 million needed. The company now owns the stadium.

"I was saddened to hear of Mr. Busch's passing," said NL president Bill White, who played for Busch and the Cardinals in the 1960s. "It is a loss to baseball, since he was one of the game's fine owners. He contributed greatly to the game and to St. Louis. The success of the Cardinals' franchise is testimony to his work and skill. He will be missed by baseball fans everywhere."
Even though he was one of the most influential owners in baseball, Busch was best known as the man who took a small and ailing brewery in 1946 and turned it into the world's largest by the time he retired from the company in May 1975.
Likewise, the Cardinals flourished under Busch, winning the World Series three times in six tries between 1964 and 1987.
"... I guess we all expected it, it was a shock, and when you lose a good friend like that, it's quite a shock," said Whitney Herzog, manager of the Cardinals since 1980. "I just can't say enough about how good he's been to me and my family."

Generous teams proving more successful this NFL season

The Associated Press

To paraphrase the Beatles, money may not be able to buy you love, in the NFL, however, it can buy the closest thing — victories.

Just ask the Minnesota Vikings on the one hand, the Cleveland Browns, Philadelphia Eagles and New York Giants on the other.

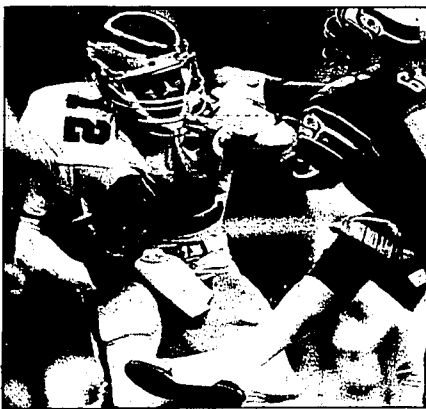

The Vikings showed up at training camp July 31 as the consensus favorite to win the Super Bowl. They also showed up minus eight holdouts — at least in part because of their deserved reputation as one of the league's most penurious teams.

So three weeks into this season, the Vikings are 1-2, including Sunday's 27-14 loss at the hands of the Pittsburgh Steelers, who entered the game having scored 10 points and allowed 92.

Worse, both Vikings and ex-Vikings talk openly of their discontent with management, providing a reason, perhaps, why they tend to lose games they should win against teams like Pittsburgh and Green Bay. They lost enough such games to keep them from taking the NFC Central title away from the Chicago Bears.

This year, for example, wide receiver Anthony Carter and strong safety Joey Browner are playing at less than their potential and tight end Steve Jordan was hurt. All are Pro Bowl players, all missed long stretches of training camp as holdouts.

"There's a heck of a long way be-

File photo

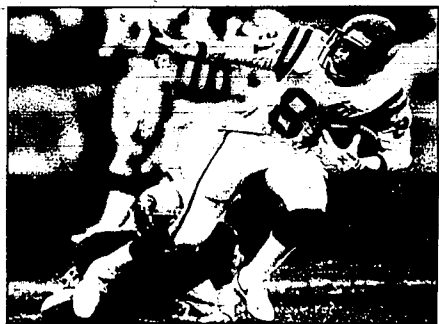

Philadelphia signed Randall Cunningham to an $18 million contract

...having great players and a great team," Coach Jerry Burns said after Sunday's game. "We certainly are no great team. I don't know who we can beat at this point."

Mike Muller, a former Viking (discontinued version) said after catching a 15-yard touchdown pass for Pittsburgh Sunday: "Once I caught it I wanted to spike it right at the Vikings. I just wanted to stick it right in their face."

The Eagles, Browns and Giants do things the other way.

Philadelphia, of course, handed Randall Cunningham a six-year, $18 million contract extension a week ago. That ensured he will be the quarterback of the '90s with the Eagles rather than anyone else should,

File photo

Minnesota's All-pro Anthony Carter wants an All-pro salary as expected, some form of free agency comes to the NFL in the next few years.

Cleveland did the same with Bernie Kosar, tying him up for the next five years, and the Rams are negotiating with Jim Everett for a contract that will put him in their class.

All three teams are operating on the expectation of new rules for NFL contracts.

One is that there will be some form of free agency for all players when a collective bargaining agreement is reached with the players union. That agreement is in limbo while both sides wait for the courts to decide on the antitrust suit filed by the NFLPA after the players' strike two years ago.

The other is that there will be more bidding for free agents under the current system. Cunningham or Kosar are worth far more than the Eagles and Browns would get as compensation, particularly since most No. 1 draft picks hold out for most of training camp and are being paid more than long-time All-Pro. After a decade with no free agent offers, Wilber Marshall went to the Washington Redskins from the Bears in 1988. Ray Childress of the Houston Oilers and Bruce Smith of the Buffalo Bills got offer sheets this year that were matched by their old teams.

"It's a two-tier system," agent Leigh Steinberg, who represents a flock of quarterbacks, said. "If you have a star quality player, you want to get him tied up before someone else grabs him."

But it's not only stars. The Giants took that philosophy one more step by re-signing some of developing young talent — tackle Doug Riesenberg and wide receivers Odesha Turner and Stephen Baker. All were in their option years and all might have demanded more next season.

The Giants learned from experience.

Last season, tight end Mark Bavaro and linebacker Carl Banks held out for most of training camp after All-Pro seasons, then (see the Vikings' Jordan above) spent most of the season playing subpar with minor ailments.

Last year the Giants were one of the favorites to go to the Super Bowl but finished 10-6 against a weak schedule, missing the playoffs by losing to the New York Jets in the final game. This year, the Giants were picked to finish third in the NFC East but are 3-0 and playing well — with Banks, Bavaro, Riesenberg, Turner and Baker all contributing.

Maybe money can't buy you love, but it can buy wins.

Colorado State takes on Washington after former quarterback's death

By The Associated Press

Darian Hagan calls signals for fifth-ranked Colorado against No. 21 Washington on Saturday, diminished by the loss of a fallen teammate who once called signals for him.

Former Buffaloes quarterback Sal Aunese, for whom Hagan was expected to play backup this season, died last Saturday of stomach cancer. He had been ill for six months.

"Sal just took me under his wing and showed me what I was doing wrong," Hagan said.

Although Aunese's illness was known to be terminal, Coach Bill McCartney said the reality of it stunned team members.

"We all had high hopes he would make it through the season," McCartney said. "So when he died, it caught everybody hard. Our players took it extremely hard."

None of them have never seen a casket, have never seen anyone laid out before. It's really hard to know how it's going to impact us."

In other games involving ranked teams, it was: No. 1 Notre Dame at Purdue; No. 2 Miami, Fla. at Michigan State; Oregon State at No. 3 Nebraska; No. 4 Auburn at No. 12 Tennessee; Maryland at No. 6 Michigan; No. 7 Clemson at Duke; Texas-El Paso vs. No. 8 Arkansas at Little Rock, Ark.; and No. 10 Pittsburgh at No. 9 West Virginia.

Also, No. 13 Tennessee at Vanderbilt; Temple at No. 14 Houston; Kent State at No. 15 North Carolina State; 16 Oklahoma at Kansas; No. 17 Arizona at Oregon; Southern Cal at No. 19 Washington State; Southern Mississippi at No. 22 Texas A&M; South Carolina at No. 23 Georgia, and No. 24 Air Force at Colorado State.

As he has all season, Hagan will be a key for the Buffaloes (3-0), as the leader of their run-oriented wishbone offense. Colorado has outscored opponents 110-23 this season, including a 38-7 victory over Illinois, which was ranked 10th at the time.

Washington (2-1) sustained its first loss of the season last week at Arizona, 20-17.

"This obviously is the best team they've had in years and years and years," Huskies coach Don James said. "I'd say top five, and I don't know anybody I'd put ahead of them, either."

James said he had hoped the Huskies would play better defense in Tucson last Saturday, and he has made one change. Senior Greg Travis will start at outside linebacker in place of sophomore Brett Collins.

At West Lafayette, Ind., Notre Dame (3-0) puts the longest winning streak in the nation on the line when it goes for its 16th in a row against Purdue (1-1). The Irish also have won nine straight over Big Ten opponents.

Notre Dame beat Purdue 52-7 last year, and Boilermakers coach Fred Akers believes this is a better Irish team than the one that won a national championship last season.

"They're more of a well-rounded team than they were a year ago, and they got that confidence at quarterback," Akers said. "There's no way you can replace that, the guy has won and won and won. Everybody has confidence in him."

God's word spread at sporting events

MARYSVILLE, Ohio (AP) — The kick is up, and somewhere in the stands there's a sign, a banner, a sight so common it's often forgotten as soon as it's seen.

In bold black letters on a bedsheet: JOHN 3:16.

The Bible verse is familiar. From the King James version: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, who came in the flesh, so that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

The signs are there when PGA professionals bend over their putts, as field goals and points-after fly through the uprights, when catchers chase foul balls into the stands and as free throws rise from the foul line. They are seemingly everywhere.

But only four people, including Doug Hill of Marysville, are carrying the banners, spending their weekends traveling the country to spread the word via televised spots. Hill, who drives a car decorated with Bible verses and the names of Christian rock bands, said his mission is clear: "I really have a burden for people, for where they're going to spend eternity."

"I'm a strong believer that there is a heaven, that there is a hell, and God makes it very clear ... that people have to be born again," Hill said. "And doing it this way ... I may be wrong, but I don't think there's any other way to reach as many people at one time."

"Every event that we go to, there's millions of people that watch," he said.

Wiry and soft-spoken, Hill works at a publishing house in Columbus but lives in this central Ohio town about 30 miles northwest of Columbus with his wife, Carol, and two sons.

"I'm sure it's hard on (my wife)," Hill said. "A lot of times I'll be ready to go and I can sense her saying, 'Oh, you'll be gone again.' ... I'm a family man, I've got two kids that I dearly love. But she understands the great burden that I have for people."

He began carrying Bible-verse banners to sporting events more than two years ago, after catching a televised glimpse of Californian Roland Stewart, who started the practice. Stewart's wife also carries banners, as does a Florida man, Will King.

Hill said the foursome is in regular contact, and said he and the others compare plans to ensure they don't accidentally double-team an event.

Mullin signs 9-year deal

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Chris Mullin has signed a nine-year contract with the Golden State Warriors, the NBA team announced Friday. Financial terms were not disclosed.

Mullin, 26, averaged 26.5 points, 5.9 rebounds and 5.1 assists last year in his fourth season. Only Chicago's Michael Jordan and Portland's Clyde Drexler had higher averages in all three categories. Mullin was named to the All-Star team and All-NBA second team.

The Warriors' first-round draft pick out of St. John's in 1983, Mullin became a restricted free agent following last season. There have been repeated rumors throughout his career that the Brooklyn native might eventually sign with the New York Knicks as a free agent, but the signing pact rules that out. Mullin's salary was $700,000 last season.

WSU coach shoots the messenger to motivate Cougars against USC

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Washington State Coach Mike Price is known for his unusual methods of motivating football teams, but shooting the messenger was a new one.

At the end of Wednesday's practice in preparation for their contest Saturday against Southern California, Price huddled his team when someone dressed as a Trojan mascot, complete with a cardboard sword, galloped onto the field and circled the startled players.

As the Trojan horseman was about to make his getaway, Price pulled out a starter's pistol and fired blanks at the actor, who feigned collapse as the players broke into cheers and laughter.

"I had no idea what was going on," said defensive end Martin Brown. "I was looking into the coach's eye and I thought he was going to make us tackle it."

"One of the kids said 'kill him,'" Price said afterward. "Then he said, 'no coach, I didn't mean it.'"

Foreign interest in Northwest Airlines cut

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Transportation Department on Friday approved the takeover of Northwest Airlines by Wings Holdings Inc., after Wings agreed to a government demand that foreign investment in the deal be cut by more than half. Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner said Northwest's new owners had agreed to cut from 57 percent to 25 percent the equity interest of KLM Royal Dutch Airlines in the takeover, which was completed last month.

Northwest was purchased in a stock buyout by Wings Holdings, led by California investor Alfred Checchi, the new Northwest chairman. In Amsterdam, a KLM official said the airline, which is partially owned by the Dutch government, objected to the limitations Checchi had agreed to and would continue discussions with U.S. officials on its investment in Wings.

Skinner, who has cited national security concerns and the need to protect U.S. airlines' negotiating position for foreign routes as reason for "scrutiny of financial ties with foreign carriers, said Friday's action was "an indication of the department's conclusion that KLM's $400 million equity interest in NWA would put the foreign carrier "in a position to exercise control over Northwest," thereby depriving Northwest of its U.S. citizenship status. "We do not agree," said Checchi, "that KLM is, or has ever been, in a position to exercise any actual control over NWA."

Skinner said the new owners were "exceptionally qualified to expand Northwest's operations and improve its quality of service."

Checchi disagreed with the department's conclusion that KLM's $400 million equity interest in NWA would put the foreign carrier "in a position to exercise control over Northwest," thereby depriving Northwest of its U.S. citizenship status. "We do not agree," said Checchi, "that KLM is, or has ever been, in a position to exercise any actual control over NWA."

Checchi provided 57 percent of the $705 million in equity Chechris raised by Northwest but officials' own just 5 percent of the airline, as most of its interest is in nonvoting stock. Under the agreement with the Transportation Department, Northwest must cut KLM's equity share to 25 percent within six months.

Company loses foreclosure case

The Associated Press

REXBURG — David Steed and Associates will not be going to court to argue its counterpart against a bank's foreclosure of the Idaho Falls farm equipment business.

Seventh District Judge Grant Young has denied a request from the company to file a third counterclaim against Idaho First National Bank, now called West One Bank.

Young also turned down Steed's third request that the judge disqualify himself from hearing the case. Steed's second amended counterclaim was dismissed two weeks ago when Young granted the bank's motion for summary judgment. This week's rejection of a request to file yet another counterclaim led to Steed's request for the court to vacate his earlier ruling to begin Oct. 11.

Young's ruling of summary judgment, allowing the foreclosure to proceed, the judge said was written loan agreement and notes with Idaho First "are complete and unambiguous."

"He also said undisputed facts indicate the bank did not act arbitrarily in discontinuing financing for Steed and Associates."

"If this court has a correct application of the law to these undisputed facts there is no issue for a jury to try," Young said. "On the other hand, if this court has erred, the error is of such a fundamental nature that the error should be corrected before the parties are put to the additional expense of a long, protracted trial on the merits. These issues can only be definitively addressed by our appellate courts."

Idaho First National Bank sued Steed and Associates for foreclosure in January 1987, alleging the business had defaulted on more than $1 million in loans.

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government said Friday that its chief forecasting gauge turned up in August for the second straight month, another sign the nation's economy is likely to grow, albeit modestly, at least into next year.

The Commerce Department's Index of Leading Indicators climbed 0.3 percent last month after rising 0.1 percent in July and falling 0.1 percent in June. The back-to-back July-August advance was consistent with expectations of many analysts who foresee the current economic expansion reaching its seventh birthday in December and forecasting a mild recession. Since had thought the expansion might be curtailed this year by Federal Reserve efforts to control inflation by tightening credit and thus slowing the economy. But as inflation responded, the Fed has eased its grip, permitting the economic growth to continue but at a slower pace.

The leading indicators are a mix of 11 forward-looking business statistics designed to predict economic activity six to nine months into the future.

The index has risen four times this year and declined four, prompting Ysabel Burns McAleer of the American Business Services Association to observe: "This trendless result for 1989 seems consistent with the slow growth experience of the overall economy."

Five of the indicators contributed to the August gain — an increase in the manufacturers' new orders for consumer goods and materials, higher stock prices, an increase in the money supply, lower initial unemployment claims and increased building permits.

Six others pointed down — a drop in an index measuring consumer confidence; lower prices for sensitive materials, indicating slow demand; and a decrease in manufacturers' unfilled orders; fewer orders for new plants and equipment; factory vendor deliveries, meaning declining demand; and a shorter work week.

The GNP grew 3.1 percent on an annual basis during the first half of 1989, but is expected to slow during the second half. The Bush administration forecasts a 2.9 percent growth rate for the year, meaning the economy would need to expand only at a 2.3 percent annual rate to meet that goal.

Housing industry tries to soften GAO report

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing groups sought Friday to soften the impact of an audit disclosing massive losses in federal mortgage insurance programs, arguing that the fund backing loans for single-family homes was still fundamentally sound.

The trade groups also said the government should raise to $125,000 the limit on mortgages backed by the Federal Housing Administration in order to make home loans more widely available to middle-income Americans.

National lobbying groups representing homebuilders, real estate companies and mortgage bankers took issue with a report released Wednesday by the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress.

The report said FHA, which is a part of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, had a record loss of $4.2 billion last year — far more than had been previously thought.

Warren Lasko, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, did not dispute the figure but said it reflected accounting changes and should not be viewed as threatening to the program or the federal budget.

"Their numbers are not wrong but neither are they very revealing," he said. "The GAO has taken every opportunity to highlight HUD's failures and glosses over the fundamental soundness of the fund that stands behind the largest FHA program — FHA-insured loans to buy single family homes."

He said that a $1.4 billion loss attributed to the single-family FHA program included a $1.2 billion "accounting adjustment of a technical nature" through accelerated accounting of losses.

He also challenged the GAO's estimate of losses, saying it assumed all loans in default will result in claims "when we know historically about one of three defaults is cured and no loss occurs" through the successful sale of assets.

Lasko also said losses should be expected since the program was providing mortgage underwriting in regions where the economy was in recession and private insurers were pulling out.

Officials of the National Association of Home Builders and the National Association of Realtors joined him at a news conference.

Kent Colton, executive vice president of the builders group, called the GAO report "confusing and misleading" and said that even with a mortgage fund has $1.8 billion in reserves and remains "strong financially."

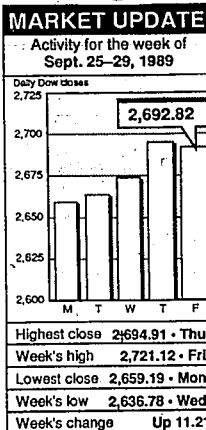

The GAO report's disclosure of broad new FHA losses has had the effect of raising estimates of the cost of the widening troubles as HUD brought from $2 billion to $6.9 billion, according to congressional estimates.

"Nearly $1 billion of the total came in the co-insurance program, which HUD began in 1983 to allow private lenders to write FHA insurance coverage for 80 percent of a mortgage, assuming only 20 percent of the risk but collecting large fees up front in the form of points."

The government often got stuck for the full tab when a borrower defaulted.

At a Senate Banking Committee hearing Friday, John M. Ols Jr., director of housing for the GAO, said developers reaped excess profits by combining subsidies from several HUD programs on the same property.

Lasko, a former HUD employee who contends his warnings about problems in the co-insurance program were ignored, said new HUD Secretary Jack Kemp and his management team have moved to clean up scandals "but they too must soon
