Li-hua Yu is in Twin Falls to help decipher artifacts from the Mon-Tong mining site

Chinese in early-day Idaho interest visiting teacher

By N. S. NOKKENTVED Times-News writer

TWIN-FALLS — During the 1870s more Chinese miners than white miners worked in Idaho, according to a student of Chinese people in Idaho.

Li-hua Yu is studying the miners and other Chinese living in early Idaho for a doctoral dissertation. She is in Twin Falls to help local archaeologists decipher artifacts found at the Mon-Tong Chinese mining site in the Snake River canyon.

Yu, who has not yet visited the site, was especially interested in the number and variety of trademarks on opium tins found at the canyon mining site. The miners imported opium from Hong-Kong until it was outlawed in the United States in 1887.

Records from the Stricker Stagecoach Stop show a number of shipments of opium to the Chinese miners.

In 1870, of the 4,500 Chinese in Idaho, 3,500 were miners, she said. The Chinese, who referred to America as "the Gold Mountain," had come to Idaho to get rich, like their European counterparts, said Don James.

James, who teaches eighth- and ninth-grade history and geography at Robert Stuart Junior High School, has been investigating the site on the Snake River since last spring.

"I didn't expect to find this much," James said. "I really only expected to find a few old opium cans."

Yu has provided the Chinese perspective on many of the artifacts found at the site and explained some of the cultural mysteries about the Chinese who lived in the area more than 100 years ago.

But Yu said she has never seen so many artifacts, so well preserved at one site. She explained away a common misconception about Chinese opium use: It was only the rich in China who could afford to smoke opium, she said.

She is from Xian, the ancient Chinese city where archaeologists have unearthed an army of life-sized terra-cotta soldiers. She has been in the United States since 1984.

In Xian she taught at the foreign languages university until 1984, where she took part in a faculty exchange with Bowling Green State University in Bowling Green, Ohio.

She taught English writing and Chinese culture and literature at Bowling Green, where she now is working on a doctorate in American culture.

A copy of the report's summary and its recommendations for corrective actions, plus an internal memorandum on the subject from Energy Secretary James D. Watkins, were provided to The Associated Press by the office of Rep. David Skaggs, D-Colo.

Rocky Flats reprocesses plutonium in order to make nuclear weapons in order to make triggers for new warheads. It is owned by the Energy Department and run under a government contract by Rockwell International Corp., which earlier this month said it would quit the plant soon. The new contractor will be EG&G Inc.

Watkins, in the report's summary, ordered John Meinhardt, acting assistant secretary for defense programs, to prepare an "action plan" in response to the report's findings and its explanations for the root causes of the problems.

The investigation was conducted at Watkins' instruction by SCIENTECH Inc., an engineering and management company based in Idaho Falls, Idaho, that specializes in nuclear safety issues.

Watkins ordered the investigation in response to reports that man-made radioactive elements found at Rocky Flats

Plutonium accumulated uncontrolled at Rocky Flats operation

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Operators of the Rocky Flats nuclear arms plant in Colorado inadvertently allowed dangerous amounts of weapons-grade plutonium to accumulate in uncontrolled conditions, and the problem may be more widespread than is now understood, according to an independent investigators' report released Friday.

The report said investigators determined that the known plutonium accumulations, equaling several kilograms, were being released into the environment but were great enough to cause an accidental nuclear reaction under certain conditions.

An accidental reaction could produce a lethal dose of radiation to workers at close range and could, in some circumstances, release radioactive material into the environment.

Prior to the investigation conducted from July through September, the plant managers had insisted that this type of plutonium accumulation was not happening at the plant, even though a former employee had warned of the possibility, the report said.

The investigators also said plant workers who provided anonymous tips on where to

Bush, Cheney defend U.S. response to coup

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush vigorously defended his handling of the failed coup in Panama on Friday, saying there was no opportunity to seize Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega and use of U.S. force "wasn't warranted under the existing circumstances."

"I'm not being stubborn but as I look at all the information I received, there made a different decision than," Bush said.

He added that he wouldn't rule out any option, including military intervention, in any future coup attempt.

After a fortnight of complaints and questions over the U.S. action, the White House and Pentagon marched in step, saying the United States had responded correctly when rebels attempted — and failed — to depose

Noriega, who faces drug-trafficking charges in Panama

Bush offered his defense during a closed-door meeting with Senate Republicans on Capitol Hill and then publicly defended the U.S. response to the coup during a news conference.

He said the U.S. was not engaged in surgery at Walter Reed Army Medical Center for the removal of a finger cast.

Similarly, top military leaders — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff — testified in a closed session before the Senate Intelligence and Armed Services Committees.

The two panels were preparing an analysis of issues that remain in dispute surrounding the events in Panama and contacts between the rebel officers who organized the coup and U.S. officials.

Armed Services Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said a lack of clear policy guidance from Bush had greatly contributed to U.S. confusion in dealing with the coup attempt and that there should have been specific arrangements for how U.S. troops were to react.

"We have had a definite, longstanding policy in this country of encouraging coup" in Panama, Nunn told reporters. "We should anticipate that our policy may succeed. Then we have to know what we're going to do next."

Privately, a senior administration official said that with the benefit of

Assassins may go after Noriega foes

The Associated Press

PANAMA CITY, Panama — Supporters of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega have offered $250,000 to assassins who kill six of his enemies, including a former president, says a report Friday in the pro-government newspaper Critica.

The offer, presented as a letter from unnamed businessmen to a daily, said assassins could not be confirmed immediately.

"They (opponents) have allowed a price to be put on (Noriega's) head, with dollars given to them by the United States," the letter said. "Therefore, 'we consider it justified to use our money to pay those who execute traitors.'"

"We have international contacts and there will be no difficulty in carrying out these sworn duties," said the letter, published in a column by Balatazar Renán Alzupra, who also is chief spokesman for the state power authority.

"It said the unnamed 'nationalist' businessmen had deposited the money in a Swiss account.

Armed men in civilian clothes invaded a radio station Friday that broadcast a rebel communique against Noriega during Tuesday's coup attempt. They destroyed broadcast equipment and forced employees to leave.

Threats to Noriega's enemies and the attack on the radio station came after the general, who blames the coup on the United States, said he would get tough with opponents.

The six people threatened include former President Eric Delvalle, who tried to fire Noriega last year and was dismissed, and Col. Roberto Diaz Herrera, the former top commander who accused Noriega of drug trafficking.

Opposition leader Guillermo Endara continued a hunger strike from the shelter of the papal nuncio's residence a day after he was beaten and thrown out of his office by Noriega's soldiers.

Endara's doctors Friday said he was in good condition but could not talk to the press.

Senate kills health surtax

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate refused Friday night to repeal a catastrophic health coverage for retirees and voted instead to preserve some benefits but kill the unpopular surtax that pays for them.

A 99-0 vote approved a bill by Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., that would wipe out the surtax, along with extended reimbursement for physicians' fees and coverage for prescription drugs. That would leave a program built around nearly unlimited reimbursement of hospital charges.

The House voted earlier this week to repeal the entire program. Negotiators from the House and Senate will have to work out a compromise between the two bills.

"Senior citizens will rest a little easier tonight knowing ... that this body has acted in a sensible fashion," McCain said.

The Senate paved the way for accepting McCain's bill when it refused to repeal the program outright. The vote against a repeal amendment offered by Sens. William Roth, R-Del., and John Danforth, R-Mo., was 73-26.

Idaho's senators, James McClure and Steve Symms, cast votes for the repeal.

Sen. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii did not vote on the McCain proposal.

Roth, arguing for repeal, compared the year-old catastrophic coverage with the ill-fated Edsel automobile.

"We promised too much, we taxed too much, but let's not throw it all out," said Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

'Be patient,' Gorbachev advises East Germans

The Washington Post

BERLIN — Soviet Premier Mikhail Gorbachev, seeking to quell growing social unrest in a country regarded as Moscow's most strategically important ally, urged East Germans Friday to be patient in their demands for change.

He spoke as he joined other Warsaw Pact leaders in East Berlin, to mark the 40th anniversary of the Communist German state.

Despite calls from the West for the Soviet Union to show its peaceful intentions by tearing down the Berlin Wall or helping to resolve the division of Germany, Gorbachev said that Moscow would not interfere in East German politics.

"Our Western partners should understand that questions regarding the German Democratic Republic are solved not in Moscow but in Berlin," Gorbachev said in an address that seemed designed to avoid embarrassing the Soviet-style East German leadership now facing one of the gravest challenges to its authority.

Although Gorbachev did not directly pressure the East Germans to begin a Soviet-style program of radical reform, he said that changes are sweeping through all of Eastern Europe and he expressed support for the East German Communist Party's capabilities in leading the country through any changes.

Earlier in the day, Gorbachev indicated to a group of foreign reporters and other onlookers that he would not try to press 77-year-old East German leader Erich Honecker to initiate a reform program based on his own. "Be patient," Gorbachev told a group of young East Germans. "Don't panic."

Burmese hijackers surrender

UTAPHAO, Thailand (AP) — Two Burmese students demanding democracy in their military-ruled homeland hijacked a jetliner carrying 83 other people but surrendered peacefully early Sunday to Thai authorities.

The Burmese government rejected all of the hijackers' demands and before the two men surrendered one gave a written statement containing seven demands to a reporter who read the list to other journalists gathered around the plane.

That officials gave this account of the drama: The Fokker landed at Utaphao at 5:40 p.m. Friday. The hijackers released 35 hostages but threatened to destroy the plane if Burma refused their demands.

After further negotiations led by Thai Deputy Prime Minister Tienchai Sirisunpan, one of the hijackers left the aircraft and had a reporter read a handwritten statement.

But the statement also said if negotiations failed the hijackers would kill the passengers, destroy the aircraft and commit suicide.

After the note was read, the remaining 44 passengers disembarked.

At about 4:25 a.m. Saturday the hijackers, four crew members and Tienchai left the plane.

after negotiations with Thai and Burmese authorities. Early reports had said at least one of the hijackers had a hand grenade and that he had possibly planted explosives, but hours later authorities would not say if the sky pirates were armed. Thai explosives specialists checked the plane and took away the suspicious box for examination.

Narcs arrest Fonda's daughter

NEW YORK (AP) — The daughter of film actress Jane Fonda was arrested Friday on disorderly conduct and other charges after narcotics officers observed her entering a building known for drug trafficking, police said.

Vanessa Vadim, 21, the daughter of Ms. Fonda and filmmaker Roger Vadim, was also charged with loitering for the purpose of procuring drugs and obstructing governmental administration.

Ms. Vadim was arrested with Thomas Feegal, 22, who was charged with criminal possession of a controlled substance, two envelopes believed to contain heroin, and a hypodermic needle, said a police spokesman, Sgt. Peter Sweeney.

Soviets seek stronger World Court

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviet Union on Friday called for strengthening the World Court binding authority to settle international disputes.

If negotiation or mediation did not succeed "within a reasonable period of time," any party to a dispute could take the matter to arbitration, said the plan.

submitted by Vladimir Petrovsky, a deputy foreign minister.

Currently, decisions by the U.N.'s World Court at the Hague, formally known as the International Court of Justice, are only advisory unless a nation agrees to the court's authority in a particular case or area of law.

Affair may be behind car bombing

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A man who says he was questioned by the FBI at the bombing of a van belonging to the former captain of the USS Vincennes alleges an extramarital affair may be behind the attack, The San Diego Tribune reported Friday.

George Marxmiller said he told the FBI shortly after the March 10 bombing that Capt. Will Rogers had been having a three-year affair with a woman in Kensington, Md., a suburb of Washington, D.C., the newspaper reported.

The FBI declined comment on the case and the Rogers' attorney called the allegations "irresponsible" and "wrong."

adding that would leave many low-income retirees with no insurance against costs of an expensive illness and no way to buy it.

Earlier, the Senate turned thumbs-down on a leadership-backed plan that would have preserved most benefits as well as part of the surtax.

That 62-37 vote rejected an amendment by Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., to retain almost total reimbursement for the cost of Medicare for the patient pays the first $1,780 a year, all doctors' fees. Coverage for prescription drugs would have been eliminated. McClure and Symms voted against the Durenberger amendment.

Although McCain's plan would wipe out some major benefits, its big selling point was that it would kill the surtax of up to $800 a year, which has drawn the protests of many retirees and which has been the focus of opposition in Congress.

Congress is under heavy pressure from some retirees to repeal or make significant changes in the catastrophic program, enacted last year to protect older Americans from being wiped out financially by a massive increase in health care costs. All new enrollees for Medicare are required to enroll in catastrophic care coverage.

In other votes, the Senate rejected: "An amendment by Sen. Edward Markey, D-Mass., that would have retained coverage for hospital charges and prescription drugs but eliminated expanded protection for physicians' fees and kill the surtax. The vote was 64-35.

By 71-25 vote a proposal by Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., that would have allowed individuals who could prove they have equivalent private coverage to drop catastrophic coverage.

By 87-12 an amendment by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, and Carl Levin, D-Mich., that would have repealed the surtax, retained all catastrophic benefits and paid for them by raising income taxes on the nation's 600,000 wealthiest couples and individuals.

hindsight, the United States should have done some things differently and had "learned some things we need to improve."

"But," however, said, "We revealed all the information and don't see anything now that would have made me make a different decision then."

Many members of Congress have complained that Bush erred by not using the 12,000 U.S. troops in Panama to assist in Tuesday's rescue of the hostages.

He said he knew that some people wanted him "to unleash the full military to go in and get Noriega."

Bush said the decision not to use force was made because "it wasn't warranted under the existing circumstances. The commander-in-chief must have the lives of American citizens foremost in mind when making such a decision."

The president said he still wants to see Noriega-removed from power but "there was never a chance to have him handed over to us," Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has said he had information that the rebels wanted to give Noriega to the United States.

Recounting Bush's remarks on Capitol Hill, White House press secretary Martin Fitzwater said, "He just said he had felt he made the right decisions when he reviewed the information involved, that he had as good information as could be expected and that he was confident he did the right thing."

"He said we were willing to use force but not unless we knew the circumstances and have better information."

Sen. John Warner, R-Vir., quoted Cheney and Powell as saying they "basically ... would not have changed the decision and recommendations to the president based on what they know today."

While insisting that all of the administration's statements about the coup had been correct, Fitzwater withdrew an earlier line that the United States had not been in direct contact in advance with any coup leaders.

He confirmed that U.S. representatives had been in touch before Tuesday with the coup leader, Maj. Moises Giroldi, who is believed to have been killed, perhaps by Noriega. Earlier, Fitzwater had said that advance word had come through a third-party contact.

Fitzwater emphatically denied a report in The Wall Street Journal that Giroldi's wife had tried to alert U.S. officials about the coup three weeks ago. Similarly, Cheney said he had not heard that kind of information.

Nevertheless, Cheney said, "There are some reports on a fairly regular basis. That is not new."

Fitzwater, during a briefing with reporters, offered clarifications on several points: The rebel forces asked, and the United States agreed, for American forces to block access routes to Noriega's headquarters. Even so, Fitzwater said, "We don't consider that participation in the coup. We were not involved in the planning, in the operation, in the carrying it out."

A cable transmitted to Washington by U.S. military officials in Panama incorrectly stated that the rebels wanted the United States to take custody of Noriega. Fitzwater said the cable should have said the rebels "won't let the U.S. have custody."

Fitzwater said the erroneous cable never reached Bush. "There was never a piece of information in this White House that said anything other than they were not willing to give him up period."

Sen. Helms has repeatedly said he had information that the rebels wanted to turn Noriega over to the United States. Fitzwater said Helms' staff was interviewed by White House chief of staff John Sununu and could not back up their claims.

"Despite earlier suspicions, the United States now believes Giroldi was actually trying to overthrow Noriega. Earlier, Cheney had said U.S. officials feared "a setup" because Giroldi had been a Noriega confidant and had helped repel a coup attempt last year.

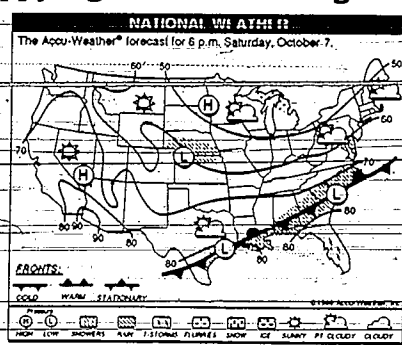

Fitzwater said that doubts about Giroldi "were major factors that led to a concern that maybe the whole thing was a setup."

Disputing the Wall Street Journal on another point, Fitzwater denied that the rebels had ever asked the United States to deploy a helicopter to take Noriega into custody.

Today's weather

Mild days, nippy nights across the region

Twin Falls, Burley, Rupert, Jerome and Coeur D'Alano
Sunny days and clear nights today and Sunday. A little warmer days. High from 65 to 70 and around 70 on Sunday. Lows tonight and tomorrow 40 to 45.

Camas Prairie and Wood River Valley: Sunny today and Sunday and clear at night. Warner-Light winds. Highs in the mid 60s today and the upper 60s Sunday. Lows tonight in the 30s.

Northern Utah and Nevada: Utah — Sunny days and fair at night through Sunday. Slow warming trend. Highs from 65 to 70 and lows near 40. Nevada — Sunny and warmer today and Sunday. Clear tonight. Lows tonight in the mid 30s to mid 30s. Highs today in the mid 60s to mid 70s and on Sunday in the upper 60s to near 80.

Summary: The National Weather Service in Boise says a low pressure system moved across Idaho Friday inducing widespread scattered clouds.

A high pressure system moved inland from the Pacific coast and should begin to clear the weather over the state through mid-week.

This will bring warmer and stable air to the area for a pleasant fall period.

Sleazy Friday morning was mostly clear in the north with a few mid and high level clouds over the southern half of the state.

A few areas of fog blanketed some of the high mountain valleys.

The only precipitation reported during the past 24 hours was some light showers over the north-central mountains.

Fog clearing in the region from the low in the state of 21 at Dixie to the warmest overnight reading of 46 at Lewiston. Most valley readings were in the 30s and 40s.

The pollen count in Twin Falls Friday was 18 particles per cubic meter.

The extended forecast for Southern Idaho — Monday through Wednesday, fair. Highs in the 70s Monday and Tuesday cooling to the upper 60s to lower 70s Wednesday. Lows in the upper 30s to mid 40s.

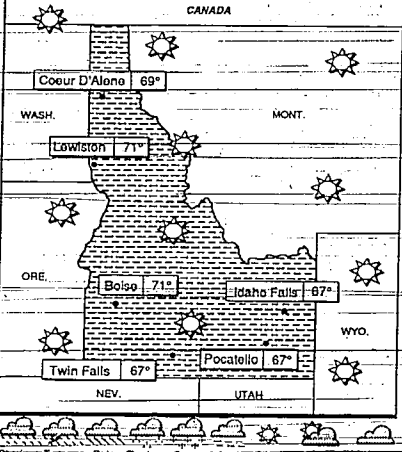

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 77 degrees at Moscow. Dixie reported the coldest at 21 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 110 degrees at Beaville, Texas. The lowest was 16 at Gunnison, Colo.

of Idaho. But she has been surprised at Americans' great interest in the Chinese, she said.

Among the artifacts, she also was captivated by the charred remains of a grass sleeping mat. Such mats still are used for sleeping in China, Yu said.

Yu is working with the Idaho State Historical Society and may turn her dissertation into a book on Chinese in Idaho. She lives in Boise for the time being.

John Lytle, Bureau of Land Management archaeologist, said she's been a great help and has corrected some misconceptions that have been on the books for years.

Her translations and interpretation of the artifacts will be used in a planned display and publication of details of the site, Lytle said.

NASA says nuclear payload is safe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The space agency told a federal court Friday there are no safety reasons for stopping next week's launch of a nuclear-powered probe from the space shuttle and that opponents are trying to spread "a tale of horrors."

"There is no evidence that these horrors will in fact or are likely to occur," NASA told U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch in a court filing. Gasch has scheduled oral arguments on Tuesday — two days before the shuttle Atlantis is to lift off from Kennedy Space Center carrying into orbit a probe called Galileo, powered by two 24.7-pound nuclear generators.

To date, NASA has spent $1.5 billion on the project, which will culminate in six years when the craft begins orbiting the planet Jupiter. The nuclear devices create electricity for the long journey and are similar to the ones that powered the Voyager probe as it swept past Neptune recently.

Surgery leaves Bush feeling 'just fine'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush underwent minor surgery on Friday to remove a troublesome cyst from his finger, and said afterward he felt "just fine."

"It was real minor," Bush told reporters as he left Walter Reed Army Medical Center holding his right hand with bandaged middle finger aloft.

"All is well," he said with a laugh. Bush said he had not felt any pain during the 25-minute operation, because he had been administered a local anesthetic, called digital nerve block anesthesia. It was expected to wear off three or four hours after the operation, and Bush said the doctors had told him to expect some pain then.

The White House said pain medication would be prescribed "as necessary." Bush left the hospital by helicopter to fly to Camp David, Md., for the weekend.

President stays firm on capital gains

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush rejected on Friday a Democratic offer to pare down a deficit-reduction bill the Senate is about to consider, removing his capital gains tax cut along with provisions close to the Democrats' hearts.

In a day of publicly made offers and counteroffers, private meetings and behind-the-scenes maneuvering, the Democratic proposal as inadequate, although negotiations aimed at finding middle ground seemed possible.

"Capital gains is vital," Bush said before discussing the situation with Senate Republicans in the Capitol. "It's not an extraneous matter with me."

The Senate's majority Democrats, who first offered to pare down the bill Thursday night, said debate on the measure would begin with an unusual Saturday session.

Thousands slated to demand housing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tens of thousands of people, already having bent and blistered the ears of Congress, are expected to march Saturday in the largest demonstration for decent and affordable housing since the Reagan years that they say stiffened government's helping hand.

They are, in part, the hard-core homeless, the flat-broke dwellers of heating-gas and abandoned cars and cardboard boxes.

Their plight is the most obvious — but hardly the exclusive — grievance of those who have gathered in Washington to knock on the doors of Congress and the administration the past two days: Organizers of the "Housing Now!" effort hope to muster 100,000 or more for a march and rally on the national mall.

Many of the demonstrators are the less visible homeless — able but jobless adults with children who subsist on welfare and live in municipal shelters or dowdy motels.

Yazov invites Cheney to Moscow

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Defense Minister Dimitri Yazov ended his first U.S. visit Friday by inviting his counterpart to Moscow, praising American soldiers and bragging about the impenetrability of his country's air defense system.

Yazov and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney appeared at a joint news conference where they pledged a continuation of military exchanges, but made no substantive announcements.

"It is important to build friendship, develop mutual understanding," said Yazov.

HUD audit shows subsidies cost millions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Errors in calculating rents for subsidized housing are costing the federal government millions of dollars a year, according to a Department of Housing and Urban Development internal audit obtained Friday.

A second audit, sent to Congress this week, raises fresh charges of bias in the awarding of rent subsidies and says such conduct was allowed because of poor program accountability. Mismanagement—and political favoritism are the key subjects of congressional investigations of HUD during the Reagan administration.

For the rent study, completed last week and released under the Freedom of Information Act, HUD's inspector general reviewed 142 of the 2,755 areas for which the department sets fair-market rents for subsidized housing. He found that in 116 of those areas, the government was paying as much as $39.1 million a year in excessive subsidies. Since the review covered only 5 percent of the rent areas and that sample was not drawn at random, the auditors said they could not provide a nationwide estimate of likely overpayments but noted that HUD's long-range commitments to the Section 8 program are in the area of $183 billion.

Still, they recommended that HUD take a number of steps to bring its Section 8 rent formulas in line with local real estate market conditions, particularly in rural areas not covered by government or industry housing surveys. In a smattering of areas, the auditors said HUD also might be paying too little in subsidies.

The report was sharply criticized by HUD officials in charge of the program, who responded to a draft copy in July by saying "the evidence simply does not support a conclusion of any serious problem."

The auditors revised their findings somewhat after receiving the department's critical response but still concluded in last week's report that HUD "to ensure that the department's (fair-market rents) realistically reflect prevailing local market rents," they recommended that HUD immediately study its formulas and seek the advice of its regional economists, who now are virtually shut out of the process.

The rents, which ultimately determine the amount of subsidies, HUD pays, are calculated through a formula that is supposed to arrive at rents that are in line with similar, non-subsidized apartments in the area, with the government rents perhaps slightly higher to cover any rehabilitation costs.

But the auditors said in some areas the fair-market rents set by HUD were well above local market rents. For example:

• In Columbia, Mo., the auditors said HUD's monthly rents for one-bedroom apartments were $82 higher than the local average and those for four-bedroom units were $34 too high. In all, the auditors estimated HUD was paying up $794,000 a year too much in subsidies to that area.

• In Cowlitz County, Wash., one-bedroom rents were $142 over local averages and three-bedrooms excessive by $84, with potential overpayments to that area totaling nearly $1 million, the auditors said.

• For all of HUD's Region X—Alaska, Washington, Oregon and Idaho—overpayments were estimated between $12.9 million and $14.6 million a year.

Study: Schools fail to prepare handicapped

NEW YORK (AP) — Parents and educators believe disabled children are getting a better education than a decade ago, but a majority feels public schools are still not preparing them adequately for jobs or college, a poll finds.

Ninety-four percent of educators and 77 percent of parents of handicapped children said disabled youngsters are faring better in school since passage in 1975 of the Education for All Handicapped Children Act. The federal law conferred most of the educational rights such youngsters now have.

Only 11 percent of parents and 15 percent of teachers and other educators said schools are doing an excellent job preparing handicapped students for jobs after high school. And only 15 percent of both groups polled said schools are doing an excellent job in preparing students for education beyond high school.

The poll results are included in a Report Card on Special Education, a survey of attitudes toward education for the handicapped. Louis Harris and Associates conducted the survey for the International Center for the Disabled, based in New York, and the National Council on Disability. A copy was given to The Associated Press on Friday. Many teachers and principals expressed lack of confidence in their expertise in dealing with disabled children.

Nearly half the regular classroom teachers surveyed said they have two or more handicapped students in their classes. But just 40 percent of those said they had training in special education, and only 33 percent felt confident of their decisions affecting handicapped children.

Both educators and parents are saying that schools are not preparing these students for college or jobs. When you think about the state of education, as bad as the quality of schooling is for nondisabled children, to hear that it's worse for the handicapped is pretty shocking," said Thomas Mehner, assistant survey director for the International Center for the Disabled.

A total of 702 public school educators for the handicapped were interviewed by telephone, including special ed directors, school principals, and both regular and special ed classroom teachers.

One thousand parents and 200 handicapped students also were interviewed by telephone. The sample was designed to represent students with the 10 disability types defined by the federal law, as well as their parents.

The margin of sampling error was plus or minus two percentage points for questions asked of everyone in the survey. It ranged up to 14 points for questions that could be directed only to various subgroups.

About 4.4 million handicapped students attend special education programs offered by U.S. public schools, according to latest federal statistics.

Jury finds Hersh not guilty of libel

CHICAGO (AP) — Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist Seymour Hersh did not libel a former Indian prime minister in a book that called the Indian effort a paid CIA informant, a federal jury found Friday.

Jurors deliberated about six hours over two days. Morarji Desai, India's prime minister from 1977 to 1979, contended Hersh libeled him in his 1983 book, "The Price of Power: Kissinger in the Nixon White House," by writing that Desai was a paid CIA informant.

Desai's lawyer, Cynthia D. Kappil, asked the six-member jury to award $3.5 million to his client. Desai, 94 and living in Bombay, is ill and did not appear at the trial.

Burmese hijackers surrender

UTAPHAO, Thailand (AP) — Two Burmese students demanding democracy in their military-ruled homeland hijacked a jetliner carrying 85 other people but surrendered peacefully early Saturday to Thai authorities.

The hijackers commandeered the Burmese Fokker 28 Friday while it was on a domestic flight from Mergui, Burma, to the capital of Rangoon. They were the plane to land in neighboring Thailand at the military airport at Uthapho, 80 miles southeast of Bangkok.

At one point, the hijackers threatened to blow up the plane but made no other threats after their political passage.

The Burmese government rejected all of the hijackers' demands and before the two men surrendered one gave a written statement containing seven demands to a reporter who read the list to other journalists gathered around the plane.

That officials gave this account of the drama.

The Fokker landed at Uthapho at 5:40 p.m. Friday. The hijackers released 35 hostages but threatened to destroy the plane if Burma refused their demands.

After further negotiations led by Thai Deputy Prime Minister Tienchai Sirisunpan, one of the hijackers left the aircraft and had a reporter read a handwritten statement.

But the statement also said if negotiations failed the hijackers would kill the passengers, destroy the aircraft and commit suicide.

After the note was read the remaining 44 passengers disembarked.

At about 4:25 a.m. Saturday the hijackers, four crew members and Tienchai left the plane.

They had demanded the release of political prisoners, an end to military rule and the restoration of democracy in Burma.

No passenger list was issued, but it is believed all aboard were Burmese, nationals because foreigners are barred from Mergui.

The hijackers released 35 hostages Friday night and then the 48 other passengers and crew Early Saturday after negotiations with Thai and Burmese authorities.

Early reports had said at least one of the hijackers had a hand grenade and that a box possibly contained explosives, but hours later authorities would not say if the sky pirates were armed. This explosives specialist checked the plane and took away the suspicious box for examination.

Narcs arrest Fonda's daughter
NEW YORK (AP) — The daughter of film actress Jane Fonda was arrested Friday on disorderly conduct and other charges after narcotics officers observed her entering a building known for drug trafficking.

Yvonne Vadim, 21, the daughter of Ms. Fonda and filmmaker Roger Vadim, was also charged with loitering for the purpose of purchasing drugs and obstructing governmental administration.

Ms. Vadim was arrested with Thomas Fegall, 22, who was charged with criminal possession of a controlled substance, two envelopes believed to contain heroin, and a hypodermic needle, said a police spokesman, Sgt. Peter Swency.

Affair may be behind car bombing
SAN DIEGO (AP) — A man who says he was questioned by the FBI in the bombing of a van belonging to the former captain of the USS Vincennes alleges an extramarital affair may be behind the attack. The San Diego Tribune reported Friday.

George Maxmillier said he told the FBI shortly after the March 10 bombing, that Capt. Will Rogers had been having a three-year affair with a woman in Kensington, Md., a suburb of Washington, D.C., the newspaper reported.

The FBI declined comment on the case and the Rogers' attorney called the allegations "irresponsible" and "wrong."

Soviets seek stronger World Court
UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Soviet Union on Friday called for a treaty giving the World Court binding authority to settle international disputes.

"If negotiation or mediation did not succeed within a reasonable period of time, any party to a dispute could take the matter to arbitration, said the UN spokesman.

Summary:
The National Weather Service in Boise says a low pressure system moved across Idaho Friday morning producing scattered clouds.

A high pressure system moved inland from the Pacific coast and should begin to influence the weather over the state through mid-week.

This will bring warm and stable air to the area for a pleasant fall period.

Sites Friday morning were mostly clear in the north with a few mid and high level clouds over the southern half of the state. A few areas of fog blanketed some of the high mountain valleys.

The only precipitation reported during the past 24 hours was some light showers over the north-central mountains.

Friday morning lows ranged from the low in the state of 24 at Dietie in the warmest overnight reading of 46 at Lewiston. Most valley readings were in the 30s and low 40s.

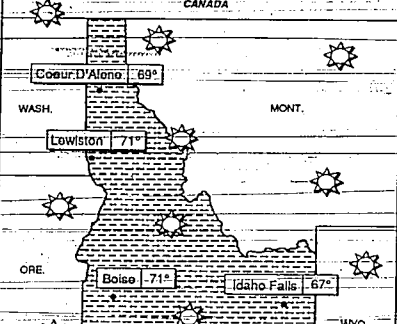

The pollen count in Twin Falls Friday was 18 particles per cubic meter of air.

The extended forecast for Southern Idaho — Monday through Wednesday, fair. Highs in the 70s Monday and Tuesday cooling to the upper 60s to lower 70s Wednesday. Lows in the upper 30s to mid 40s.

The warmest temperature in the state Friday was 78 degrees at Moscow. Dietie reported the coldest at 21 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 101 degrees at Beville, Texas. The lowest was 10 at Gunnison, Colo.

adding that would leave many low-income retirees with no insurance against costs of an expensive illness and no way to buy it.

Earlier, the Senate turned thumbs down on a leadership-backed plan that would have preserved most benefits as well as part of the surtax.

That 62-37 vote rejected an amendment by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, to retain almost total reimbursement for hospital charges and, after the patient pays the first $1,780 a year, all doctors' fees. Coverage for prescription drugs would have been limited to Medicare and Symms voted against the Durenberger amendment.

Although McCain's plan would wipe out some major benefits, its big selling point was that it would kill the surtax of up to $800 a year, which has drawn the protests of many retirees and which has been the focus of attention in Congress.

Congress is under heavy pressure from some retirees to repeal or make significant changes in the catastrophic program, enacted last year to protect older Americans from being wiped out financially by an expensive illness. All people eligible for Medicare are required to enroll in catastrophic care coverage.

In other votes, the Senate rejected an amendment by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., that would have retained coverage for hospital charges and prescription drugs but eliminate expanded protection for physicians' fees and kill the surtax. The vote was 64-35.

On a 74-25 vote a proposal by Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., that would have allowed individuals who could prove they had equivalent private coverage to drop catastrophic coverage.

By 87-12 an amendment by Sens. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, and Carl Levin, D-Mich., that would have repealed the surtax, retained all catastrophic benefits and paid for them by raising income taxes on the country's 600,000 wealthiest couples and individuals.

hindsight, the United States should have done some things differently and had learned some things we need to improve.

Bush, however, said, "We reviewed all the information and I don't see anything now that would have made me make a different decision then."

Many members of Congress have complained that Bush acted by not using the 12,000 U.S. troops in Panama to assist in Tuesday's attempted coup. And the president said he knew that some people wanted him "to unleash the full military to go in and get Noriega."

Bush said the decision not to force was made because "It wasn't warranted under the existing circumstances. The commander-in-chief must have the lives of American citizens foremost in mind when making such a decision."

The president said he still wants to see Noriega removed from power but "there was never a chance to have him handed over to us." Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has said he had information that the rebels wanted to give Noriega to the United States.

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., quoted Cheney and Powell as saying they "basically... would not have changed... their decision... and recommendations to the president, based on what they know today."

While insisting that all of the administration's statements about the coup had been correct, Fitzwater withdrew an earlier one that the United States had not been in direct contact in advance with any coup leaders.

He confirmed that U.S. representatives had been in touch before Tuesday with the coup leader, Maj. Moises Giroldi, who is believed to have been killed, perhaps by Noriega. Earlier, Fitzwater had said that advance word had come through a third-party contact.

Fitzwater emphatically denied a report in The Wall Street Journal that Giroldi's wife had tried to alert U.S. officials about the coup three weeks ago. Similarly, Cheney said he had not heard that kind of information.

Nevertheless, Cheney said, "There are coup reports on a fairly regular basis. That is not new."

Fitzwater, during a briefing with reporters, offered clarifications on several points.

The rebel forces asked "the United States to open our military forces to block access routes to Noriega's headquarters. Even so, Fitzwater said, "We don't consider that participation in the coup." We were not involved in the planning, in the operation, in the carrying it out."

A cable transmitted to Washington by U.S. military officials in Panama incorrectly stated that the rebels wanted the United States to take custody of Noriega. Fitzwater said the cable should have said the rebels "wanted" let the U.S. have custody.

Fitzwater said the erroneous cable never reached Bush. "There was never a point of information in this White House that said anything other than they were not willing to give him up, period."

Sen. Helms has repeatedly said he wanted to turn Noriega over to the United States. Fitzwater said Helms' staff was interviewed by White House chief of staff John Sununu and could not back up their claims.

Despite earlier suspicions, the United States now believes Giroldi was actually trying to overthrow Noriega. Helms, Cheney had said, U.S. officials feared "a setup" because Giroldi had been a Noriega confidant and had helped repel a coup attempt last year.

Fitzwater said that doubts about Giroldi's motives and factors that led to a concern that maybe the whole thing was a setup.

Disputing The Wall Street Journal on another point, Fitzwater denied that the rebels had ever asked the United States to deploy a helicopter to take Noriega into custody.

NASA says nuclear payload is safe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The space agency told a federal court Friday there are no safety reasons for stopping next week's launch of a nuclear-powered probe from the space shuttle and that opponents are trying to spread "a tale of horrors."

"There is no evidence that these horrors will in fact or are likely to occur," NASA told U.S. District Judge Oliver Gasch in a court filing. Gasch has scheduled oral arguments on Tuesday — two days before the shuttle Atlantis is to lift off from Kennedy Space Center carrying into orbit a probe called Galileo, powered by two 24.7-pound nuclear generators.

To date, NASA has spent $1.5 billion on the project, which will culminate in six years when the craft begins orbiting the planet Jupiter. The nuclear devices create electricity for the long journey and are similar to the ones that powered the Voyager probe as it swept past Neptune recently.

Surgery leaves Bush feeling 'just fine'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush underwent minor surgery on Friday to remove a troublesome cyst from his finger, and said afterward he felt "just fine."

"It was real minor," Bush told reporters as he left Walter Reed Army Medical Center holding his right hand with bandaged middle finger aloft.

"All is well," he said with a laugh. Bush said he had not felt any pain during the 25-minute operation because he had been administered a local anesthetic called digital nerve block anesthesia. It was expected to wear off three or four hours after the operation, and Bush said the doctors had told him to expect some pain then.

The White House said pain medication would be prescribed "as necessary." Bush left the hospital by helicopter to fly to Camp David, Md., for the weekend.

President stays firm on capital gains

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush rejected on Friday a Democratic offer to pare down a deficit-reduction bill the Senate is about to consider, removing his capital gains tax cut along with provisions popular with Democrats' hearts.

In a day of publicly made offers and counteroffers, private meetings and news conferences, Bush and his GOP Senate allies braced the Democratic proposal as inadequate, although negotiations aimed at finding middle ground seemed possible.

"Capital gains is vital," Bush said before discussing the situation with Senate Republicans in the Capitol. "It's not an extraneous matter with me."

The Senate's majority Democrats, who first offered to pare down the bill Thursday night, said debate on the measure would begin with an unusual Saturday session.

Thousands slated to demand housing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tens of thousands of people, already having bent and blistered the ears of Congress, are expected to march Saturday in the largest demonstration for decent and affordable housing since the Reagan years that they say stiffened government's helping hand.

They are, in part, the hard-core homeless, the flat-broke dwellers of heating grates and abandoned cars and cardboard boxes.

Their plight is the most obvious — but hardly the exclusive — grievance of those who have gathered in Washington to knock on the doors of Congress and the administration the past two days. Organizers of the "Housing Now!" effort hope to muster 100,000 or more for a march and rally on the national mall.

Many of the demonstrators are the less visible homeless — able but jobless adults with children who subsist on welfare and live in municipal shelters or dowdy motels.

Yazov invites Cheney to Moscow

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Defense Minister Dimitri Yazov ended his first U.S. visit Friday by inviting his counterpart to Moscow, praising American soldiers and bragging about the impenetrability of his country's air defense system.

Yazov and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney appeared at a joint news conference where they pledged a continuation of military exchanges, but made no substantive announcements.

"It is important to build friendship, develop mutual understanding," said Yazov.

HUD audit shows subsidies cost millions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Errors in calculating rents for subsidized housing are costing the federal government millions of dollars a year, according to a Department of Housing and Urban Development internal audit obtained Friday.

A second audit, sent to Congress this week, raises fresh charges of favoritism in the awarding of rent subsidies and says such conduct was allowed because of poor program accountability. Mismanagement and political favoritism are the key subjects of congressional investigations of HUD during the Reagan administration.

For the rent study, completed last week and released under the Freedom of Information Act, HUD's inspector general reviewed 142 of the 2,755 units for which the department sets fair-market rents for subsidized housing. He found that in 116 of those areas, the government was paying as much as $39.1 million in excessive subsidies.

Since the review covered only 5 percent of the rent areas and that sample was not drawn at random, the auditors said they could not provide a nationwide estimate of likely overpayments but noted that HUD's long-range commitments to the Section 8 program are in the area of $188 billion.

Still, they recommended that HUD take a number of steps to bring its Section 8 rent formulas in line with local real estate market conditions, particularly in rural areas not covered by government or industry housing surveys. In a smattering of areas, the auditors said HUD also might be paying too little in subsidies.

The report was sharply criticized by HUD officials in charge of the program, who responded to a draft copy in July by saying "the evidence simply does not support a conclusion of any serious problem."

The auditors revised their findings somewhat after receiving the department's critical response but still concluded in last week's report that increased efforts need to be made by HUD to ensure that the department's (fair-market rents) realistically reflect prevailing local market rents. They recommended that HUD immediately study its formulas and seek the advice of its regional economists, who now are virtually shut out of the process.

The rents, which ultimately determine the amount of subsidies HUD pays, are calculated through a formula that is supposed to arrive at rents that are in line with similar, non-subsidized apartments in the area, with the government rents perhaps slightly higher to cover any rehabilitation costs.

But the auditors said in some areas the fair-market rents set by HUD are well above local market rents.

For example, in Columbia, Mo., the auditors said HUD's monthly rents for one-bedroom apartments were $82 higher than the local average and those for four-bedroom units were $34 too high. In all, the auditors estimated HUD was paying up $794,000 a year too much in subsidies to that area.

In Cowlitz County, Wash., one-bedroom rents were $142 over local averages and three-bedroom excessive by $81, with potential overpayments to that area totaling nearly $1 million, the auditors said.

For all of HUD's Region X — Alaska, Washington, Oregon and Idaho — overpayments were estimated between $12.9 million and $14.6 million a year.

Study: Schools fail to prepare handicapped

NEW YORK (AP) — Parents and educators believe disabled children are getting a better education than a decade ago, but a majority feels public schools are still not preparing them adequately for jobs or college, a poll finds.

Ninety-four percent of educators and 77 percent of parents of handicapped children said disabled youngsters are faring better in school since passage in 1975 of the Education for All Handicapped Children Act. The federal law conferred most of the educational rights such youngsters now have.

Only 11 percent of parents and 15 percent of teachers and other educators said schools are doing an excellent job preparing handicapped students for jobs after high school. And only 15 percent of both groups polled said schools are doing an excellent job in preparing students for education beyond high school. The poll results are included in "A Report Card on Special Education: A Survey of Attitudes Toward Education for the Handicapped," Louis Harris and Associates conducted the survey for the International Center for the Disabled, based in New York, and the National Council on Disability. A copy was given to The Associated Press on Friday. Many teachers and principals expressed lack of confidence in their expertise in dealing with disabled children.

Nearly half the regular classroom teachers surveyed said they have two or more handicapped students in their classes. But just 40 percent of those said they had training in special education, and only 32 percent felt confident of their decisions in placing handicapped children. "Both educators and parents are saying that schools are not preparing these students for college or jobs. When you think about the state of education, as bad as the quality of schooling is for nondisabled children, to hear that it's worse for the handicapped is pretty shocking," said Thomas Mehner, assistant survey director for the International Center for the Disabled.

A total of 702 public school educators for the handicapped were interviewed by telephone, including special ed. directors, school principals, and both regular and special ed. classroom teachers.

One thousand parents and 200 handicapped students also were interviewed by telephone. The sample was designed to represent students with the 10 disabilities specified by the federal law, as well as their parents.

The margin of sampling error was plus or minus two percentage points for questions asked of everyone in the survey; it ranged up to 14 points for questions that could be directed only to various subgroups. About 4.4 million handicapped students attend special education programs offered by U.S. public schools, according to latest federal statistics.

Jury finds Hersh not guilty of libel

CHICAGO (AP) — Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist Seymour Hersh did not libel a former Indian prime minister in a book that called the Indian official a paid CIA informant, a federal jury found Friday.

Jurors deliberated about six hours over two days. Morarji Desai, India's prime minister from 1977 to 1979, contended Hersh libeled him in his 1983 book, "The Price of Power: Kissinger in the Nixon White House," by writing that Desai was a paid CIA informant.

Desai's lawyer, Cyriac D. Kappil, asked the six-member jury to award $2.5 million to his client. Desai, 94 and living in Bombay, is ill and did not appear at the trial.

Police make arrest in boy's abduction

By JENNIFER KAITH
Times-News writer

HEYBURN — A 42-year-old Minidoka County resident has been arrested in connection with Wednesday's alleged abduction and sexual molestation of a 5-year-old Heyburn boy.

Cassia County and Heyburn law officers arrested the man in Cassia County at about 1:30 p.m. Friday, Heyburn Police Chief Robert Vasquez said.

"The arrest was made from information that Sheriff Ray Jarvis of Minidoka County received from a confidential informant," Vasquez said, reading a prepared statement.

"Based on this information and other evidence we had recovered, this arrest was made. We cannot tell you anything else but that," he said.

Vasquez refused to identify the arrested man.

The 5-year-old, abducted about 12:30 p.m. Wednesday, while walking to school, is "doing fine as near as we can tell," Vasquez said.

The boy was picked up near the intersection of 17th Street and L Street in Heyburn and dropped off at about 2:30 p.m. near Kamauna, 20 miles away.

He was found by a local woman at about

3:45 p.m. on Highway 21.

Vasquez said a physician checked the boy after his two-hour ordeal. There was some indication that the boy had been touched sexually, which falls under the category of sexual abuse under Idaho law, Vasquez said.

He said more information about the man will be released Tuesday when he is arraigned.

Vasquez would not confirm whether the man met the description given by the boy.

The boy had described his kidnapper to the police as a Caucasian with dark hair, driving a brown pickup with a metal-colored camper and possibly Oregon license plates. The man reportedly wore a blue T-shirt, light-colored long-sleeved shirt and brown pants and may have had a spotted dog with him.

Earlier in the day, Vasquez reported that several people called in leads about vehicles matching the boy's description, but that nothing had panned out.

He said then that police had followed up on each tip, but had not come up with anything "concrete."

"It's been a busy afternoon," Vasquez said after the arrest.

Prosecutor requests Araiza death penalty

BOISE — Ada County Deputy Prosecutor Roger Bourne has asked for the death penalty for a former Gooding man convicted June 22 of first-degree murder of Richard Holmes at the Idaho State Penitentiary.

Rodney "Shorty" Araiza was convicted of first-degree murder and rioting after a month-long trial.

Bourne listed a number of aggravating factors supporting a death sentence in a nine-page sentencing memorandum filed in 4th District Court this week.

Chief among them is Bourne's contention that the slaying was "especially heinous, atrocious and cruel."

The 22-year-old former Gooding resident was found guilty of breaking into Holmes' cell during a riot on Sept. 25, 1988. The victim was stabbed at least 18 times in the abdomen, chest, back and leg.

Sentencing is scheduled Tuesday before Judge George Carey.

Car, loader collision sends 17-year-olds to hospital

OAKLEY — A 17-year-old Oakley boy was in stable condition Friday evening at Cassia County Memorial Hospital after the car he was riding in struck a front-end loader about two miles north of Oakley.

David Miller, 17, was driving a 1987 Chevrolet south on Marion Road when the front of his car struck the right rear wheel of the loader at about 11:15 a.m., said Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal.

The loader, driven by Willis Harold Whittle, 78, of Oakley was turning left into a private driveway, Crystal said. The sheriff said Miller was traveling in excess of the speed limit but said the accident could "technically be blamed on both of them (drivers)."

Miller's passenger, Carl R. Judd, also 17, was taken to the hospital and admitted with several injuries, according to the nursing supervisor on duty. Miller was treated for minor injuries and released.

Neither were wearing their seat belts, Crystal reported.

Whittle escaped without injury.

Jerome public hearing will consider zoning decision

JEROME — A public hearing is set for Nov. 2 to consider whether to overturn a Planning and Zoning recommendation not to rezone 640 acres of land west of Jerome.

At 7:30 p.m. in the courthouse the commissioners will hear appeals from rural homeowners who want their property changed to A-2 from A-1, which would be more restrictive toward rural uses.

Planning and Zoning Commission members voted last week to leave the land zoned A-1, saying they did not want to create a "hodgepodge" of different zoning. The county commissioners must make the final decision.

Rural homeowners have said their 17-lot Leisure Acres subdivision more closely fits the looser agricultural zone.

Kenny Vanderham, whose dairy is on the land, and several other landowners have opposed rezoning, saying it would restrict their operations.

Murtaugh district to serve as school program test site

MURTAUGH — The school district has been selected by the Northwest Regional Educational Laboratory, Portland, as a pilot site for its Successful Schools Program for 1989-90.

The program, provided free by the laboratory, helps the school develop a common vision for preparing students for adulthood, determine how successful the district is preparing students and develop a plan for improving the success of its students.

The program's goals include developing a consensus on the community on the purpose of schooling, developing a school profile, to use community resources in the schools, recognize and reward success and strengthen cooperation among staff and the community.

The laboratory is the regional agency dealing with the improvement of education in the western region.

Richard Carl closes master gate for the Twin Falls canal system a few notches. Water in the canal is less than half of summer peak flows.

Water to flow a little bit longer

By N. S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Despite this week's rain, the Twin Falls Canal Co. will continue to deliver water to its shareholders a while longer.

The company board has not yet decided when it will shut off the water, but it will probably run through the end of October, company Manager Jack Eakin said.

"The last two years we pinched it off as soon as we could to begin storing water," he said.

But this year water was plentiful. The company, which relies primarily on natural flow, used less than half its stored water this year, Eakin said.

"We had a super year. If winter snow packs are anywhere near normal, next year will be good, he said. Last year the Twin Falls Canal Co. delivered water until Oct. 20.

The North Side Canal Co. already has shut off deliveries.

The Big Wood River Canal Co. stopped delivering water from the Magic Reservoir on Sept. 22, and plans to deliver water from the American Falls Reservoir until Oct. 10.

The Milner Low Lift Irrigation Co. tentatively will shut off its water of Oct. 13. The Burley Irrigation District will deliver water until Oct. 14.

Reservoirs in the Upper Snake River System start off the new water year with 1,516,454 acre feet of water, or 36 percent of capacity. Last year the reservoir system started the water year with about 454,000 acre feet, or about 11 percent of capacity.

Local economy 'near capacity' for employment

By The Times-News and The Associated Press

TWIN FALLS — In the midst of the harvest, the Twin Falls labor scene is about as busy as it can get.

Unemployment figures show the economy is "near capacity," said Lon McDonald, Job Service labor market analyst in Twin Falls. The unemployment rate for Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding areas dropped 0.3 percent in September to 4.7 percent, compared with 5.0 percent last year at this time.

September and October are historically the busiest months of the year, McDonald said, with the harvest and food processing in full gear.

The 4.7 percent rate is an adjusted figure to compare months, McDonald said, but raw figures showed the unemployment rate at 3.5 percent.

Statewide, the start-up of the fall food processing industry and the school year contributed to an unemployment rate of 4.8 percent, the Department of Employment said Friday.

Idaho's seasonally adjusted jobless rate declined 0.4 percent from the month before, thanks to increased activity in food processing and more work in the lumber industry because the fire season ended.

The statewide rate was one-half point better than last year at this time, and continued a 25-month trend in which the unemployment rate for Idaho has been lower than a year earlier.

The statewide rate was also one-half point better than the national unemployment rate reported Friday. The national 5.3 percent rate was up one-tenth of 1 percent from the month before, caused by shrinking payrolls at automobile plants and other facries. Nationally, manufacturing reported the loss of 103,000 jobs during September.

In Idaho, total employment went up 2,000 from August to 450,500 workers. Employment for September, 1989, was up 700 from August of 1988. The number of unemployed workers fell 1,500 from one month earlier and was down 2,000 from September of 1988.

Idaho's computer and semiconductor industry also continued to boom, with more jobs available now than both last month and

Filer will curtail parking for churches on Yakima

By BEVERLY HICKS
Times-News correspondent

FILER — A 30-year privilege for some church-goers here ended Wednesday.

The City Council, concerned about traffic hazards, this week voted to prohibit parking along the Yakima Street island. Signs which read "No Parking Except During Church Services" from Highway 30 to North Street came down Wednesday.

Church-goers still can parallel park along the outside edges of Yakima.

Tuesday the vehicles parked along the island create a traffic hazard. "Last Sunday I was driving down Yakima when a little girl ran out between two parked cars," Schmoed said. "If I had been going the speed limit of 25 mph, it would have been all she wrote."

"The parking is an accident waiting to happen," Police Chief Don Barkley said.

The council unanimously approved the motion, made by Councilman Marshall Johnson.

The decision will affect three churches most directly — The Church of the Nazarene, Missionary Church and Community Bible Church, Merl Schmoed, 303 Yakima, told the council.

Rain delays end of early harvest

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Recent rains put a damper on Amalgamated Sugar Co.'s harvest just as the company was wrapping up its early beet harvest.

The rains last week and early this week forced the company to cut back its factory production about 25 percent.

"That's the first time I've had to make a recommendation to a factory," said Len Kerbs, Amalgamated agricultural manager. "It's sad, because we like to be at 100 percent idle every day."

The company's early harvest was scheduled to end Friday. The rains

Andrews prosecutor: Many reasons spurred opposition to juror

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The prosecutor in William Andrews' murder trial testified Friday that he challenged the gate black potential juror partly to protect his case in the so-called "Hi-Fi" killings from an appealable error.

Robert Newey testified in an evidentiary hearing before U.S. Magistrate Ronald Boyce on defense claims that the juror's exclusion wrongly left an all-white jury to judge Andrews and co-defendant Pierre Dale Selby, both black.

Selby and Andrews, the nation's longest-standing death row inmate, were condemned for the torture killings of three people during a 1974 robbery at Ogden's Hi-Fi Shop. Selby was executed in 1987.

Andrews, 35, of Jonesboro, La., was to have been executed by lethal injection on Aug. 22, but the 10th U.S.

Circuit Court of Appeals issued a 160-day stay based on his writs of habeas corpus before the U.S. District Court. Andrews also has requested a hearing before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Newey, the former Weber County attorney, said he had exercised a peremptory challenge to potential juror James Oltmann Jr. partly because he was black, but primarily because he was a law enforcement officer who had worked for the Ogden Police Department and knew at least 26 officers investigating the case.

Under questioning from defense attorney Timothy Ford, Newey said he also was aware that Gillespie's father, James Gillespie, was president of the Ogden chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and the younger man was acquainted with a relative of one black witness and knew the families of others.

"I felt from his standpoint that undue pressure might be placed," Newey said. "There were other primary reasons why I exercised the peremptory challenge — this was only part of the considerations that had."

Noting that defense attorneys also had sought to have Gillespie dismissed for cause, Newey said he had stipulated to the dismissal "due to the possibility of mistrial or appeal."

Second District Judge John Wahlquist had denied the defense motion, and Newey used his last peremptory challenge to remove Gillespie, who now is with the state Department of Corrections.

Andrews testified that he remembered little about the trial or the jury selection, but that he could not recall over discussing the jury pool with his trial attorney, John Caine.

"Mr. Caine did not consult me on who he was going to strike from the jury," Andrews said.

Boyce instructed attorneys on both sides to submit written submissions by Oct. 20 and indicated his recommendation would be made to the U.S. District Judge, who will render the final decision, would follow.

The 10th Circuit Court has said it would consolidate all Andrews' appeals — the original and supplemental writ and a civil rights appeal — and expedite hearings once all the issues are dispatched in the lower court. Sam already has denied two, leaving only the supplement writ pending.

Andrews' federal appeals contend his rights were violated — by being forced to accept as a public defender an inexperienced lawyer; that the judge failed to instruct the jury it could find him guilty of the lesser charge of second-degree murder; and that a mistrial should have been declared when a juror found a note saying "Hang the niggers."

The issue of Gillespie's exclusion arose during Andrews' commutation hearing before the state Board of Pardons, which later refused his request for clemency on the grounds that even though Selby was the admitted triggerman, Andrews intended the victims to die.

During the robbery, five people were bound and forced to drink a caustic liquid, drain-cleanser. One woman was raped and all were shot in the head, but two men survived.

Newey testified during the commutation hearing that race played a part in his decision to strike Gillespie, and during Friday's hearing he said he hadn't elaborated on his other considerations because "no one asked me."

Special Assistant Attorney General Robert Wallace has maintained that Newey actually saved the defense a peremptory challenge, and that in any case a prosecutor legally cannot be questioned as to his trial tactics.

Andrews' supplemental writ also contends that former prison psychologist Allan Roe testified falsely during the trial's penalty phase that three convicted Utah killers had killed again after being released.

The defense produced another witness who told the pardons board that of the three convicts Roe had cited, only one was a repeat killer.

Education board veteran dies Settlement reached in sex suit

TETONIA (AP) — J. Clint Hoopes, a prominent eastern Idaho farmer and civic leader and longtime member of the state Board of Education, died Wednesday. He was 63.

Hoopes was found dead in his car by a family member Wednesday evening. Shirley Mathkin, a Teton County sheriff's deputy, said Friday that the death was caused by self-inflicted carbon monoxide poisoning.

Hoopes was assistant secretary of the Idaho Legislature in 1959 and was appointed to the Idaho Board of Education in 1975 by Gov. Cecil Andrus. He was reappointed in 1980 by Gov. John Evans and served as board president in 1980 and 1985.

The state and the community in the Upper Snake River Valley have lost a valuable man who contributed a great amount of his time and energy in behalf of the children of Idaho. He formed for many years in the Rexburg and Clementaville areas. At the time of his death he owned and operated the J.H. Ranch Inc., a grain-and-wood-potato operation in Teton.

He was one of the organizers of the Teton Valley Pipeline Association and the Teton Seed Association, and had served as president and vice president of the Teton Wheat Growers Association. He was an active member of the Idaho Economic Task Force and other agricultural organizations.

Hoopes is survived by three daughters, a son, a brother, a sister and 10 grandchildren.

Funeral services are scheduled for Monday in Teton.

KENNEWICK, Wash. (AP) — A week he is prohibited from talking about the settlement.

But both he and Steve Schmitz, the district's assistant superintendent for personnel and public relations, said the out-of-court settlement is not an admission of wrongdoing.

The Benton County Superior Court suit claimed that beginning in February 1986, when the former student was 16, Gregorich began "grooming" her by "using her as a teaching assistant, awarding her special attention as an advanced student, coaching her in tennis, praising her talent in educational and cultural activities and otherwise obtaining her admiration, trust and confidence."

The suit alleged that what began with hugs and kisses ended in sexual intercourse.

The suit claimed that former Superintendent Don Anderson, Assistant Superintendent Bob Valliant and Gregorich's alleged behavior.

Today (Friday) we will see the growers getting in to dig and may make a decision to take the factory up on strike because we have confidence in the harvesting ability of growers," Korbe said. "It's like getting out of the woods and well-be out of the woods probably Monday night."

Amalgamated farmers are gearing up for the harvest again, Korbe said and he expects to be up to speed again by the first of the week.

great state, so it's convenient if they can park near the church," she said.

Representatives of the larger Church of the Nazarens and the smaller Community Bible Church were not available for comment.

Barkley said a long-term solution to providing more parking along the street might be to remove the island. "I recommend that someone from the churches approach the council about tearing out the grass island and putting in parallel parking down

Jobs

The Department of Employment also said unemployment decreased because education employment entered its cyclical upturn. Students and teachers returned to work at the state's colleges and universities.

Department analysts said factors indicating a healthy economy were a strong food processing industry, continued demand for lumber and wood products and continued expansion of computer-related manufacturing.

The seasonally adjusted figures for September showed a civilian work force of 473,400, with 22,900 jobless and 450,500 persons working.

The work force was slightly smaller than September of 1988, but the number of jobs was down 2,000.

Ada County continued to have the best employment rate in the state, with only 3.4 percent without jobs. That was slightly above the year-ago total.

The Lewiston-Clarkston area had the second-best jobless rate, 3.8 percent, down 1.1 percent from one year earlier.

On the other end, Canyon County pushed out the Idaho Panhandle for the first time in months as the area with the highest unemployment mark. Canyon County reported a 6 percent jobless rate, slightly above the 5.9 percent reported for the Panhandle.

One year ago, the Panhandle's rate of 7.1 percent was nearly 1 percent higher than any other region.

Area unemployment forecasts with the September mark followed by August 1989 and then September 1988:

- *Panhandle 5.9, 6.3, 7.1
- *Lewiston-Clarkston, 3.8, 4.1, 4.9
- *Canyon County 6.0, 5.8, 5.8

Publishers substitute terms to avoid offending Bible readers

LONDON (AP) — Jesus rides into Jerusalem on a donkey instead of an ass in a new English-language Bible that is careful not to upset U.S. readers, the editor said Thursday.

The old usage is a classic example of offense being caused in the United States for obvious reasons," said Roger Coleman, coordinating editor of "The Revised English Bible."

In Britain, the word ass doesn't have as many meanings as it does in American use.

References to ass have been adjusted to the insensitive and unambiguous donkey," he said.

The change is one of thousands in the 1,294-page revision of "The New English Bible" which appeared in 1970 and which in Britain has largely replaced the Authorized Version or King James Bible of 1611 and its later 19th-century Revised Version.

Colman said American viewpoints reached the translators through the New York offices of the Oxford and Cambridge university presses, which are jointly printing the new Bible.

They came largely from people who want to use the Bible literally, with only the meanings they attribute to the words, although a large number of Americans are used to the Authorized Version where "ass" is used liberally," Colman said.

The publishers describe the new Bible as a linguistically updated version, whose style relates less to the vocabulary of a 19th-century clergyman and more to the needs of a 20th-century congregation.

It substitutes "you" for "thee" and "thou," "did" for "doeth" and abandons the "O" in references to God such as "O Lord."

God is still referred to as "the" but without a capital H in faithfulness to the original writings, Colman said, but in other references to gender-neutral English is used.

"We carefully looked at all cases where male-oriented language was used — men or brethren inclusive gender term or adjusted the translation to sidestep the problem," he said.

"Brethren" becomes "friends" in some places and "a man" sometimes is changed to "a person."

Elsewhere, "com" has been changed to "grain" in more cases because of its use in some countries, mainly in others such as Scotland.

William Duff Humphrey, formerly Regius Professor of Hebrew at Oxford University; the revision's director, was asked why the phrase, "Vanities of vanities... all is vanity" from the first chapter of Ecclesiastes was changed to "Futility, utter futility."

"We discussed it for a long time," he said. "Vanity did not represent all that the original Hebrew ought to represent, but futility was the best we could do. We still have slight misgivings."

Ninth candidate enters mayoral race
POCATELLO (AP) — David R. Anderson, a Rockwell International employee at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, has added his name to the growing list of mayoral candidates in Pocatello.

Anderson picked up his nominating petition Friday to challenge Mayor Dick Finlayson. He is the ninth person to announce his candidacy for mayor in the Nov. 7 election.

City will vote to allow Sunday sales
IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The Idaho Falls City Council has approved a November advisory vote on whether to legalize Sunday sales of beer and wine by the drink.

Councilmen Wes Deist, Mel Erickson and Sam Sakaguchi voted for a measure Thursday to conduct the non-binding vote Nov. 7. Councilmen Art Chandler and Ralph Wood opposed it.

Harding takes on ISU assistant post
POCATELLO (AP) — Ralph Harding, a former Democratic congressman from Idaho's 2nd District, has been tentatively hired as a special assistant to Idaho State University President Richard Bowen.

The appointment, which is subject to Board of Education approval, includes an annual salary of $12,000. His job will focus on increasing the Pocatello school's ties with Pacific Rim nations.

Agency says dam brings no impact
BOISE (AP) — A federal agency says a preliminary survey indicates there will be no significant impact from proposed modifications of the Deer Flat Dam embankments in southwestern Idaho.

The Deer Flat dam, built between 1908-11, impounds Lake Lowell. They are part of a Bureau of Reclamation irrigation project. At full level, Lake Lowell is 29,000 acres above river level.

University seeks dorm name change
BOISE (AP) — Boise State University wants to re-name its Towers Residence Hall dormitory to honor former BSU President John B. Barnes.

Boise State will ask the Idaho Board of Education at its meeting Oct. 19-20 in Sandpoint to approve the change. School officials said the recommendation "has the support of all academic and employee units on campus."

Crowl returns as deputy warden
BOISE (AP) — C.W. "Bill" Crowl, who was director of the Idaho Department of Correction for five years, is returning to the agency as a deputy warden.

"I've always missed it," Crowl, 53, said Thursday. "I've got something left to give."

He will be assigned to the Southern Idaho Correctional Institution south of Boise, a minimum-and-medium-custody prison.

Andrus says silver needs attention
COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — It will take aggressive action, and quick action, to halt the drop in silver prices that plagues Idaho's silver industry, Gov. Cecil Andrus says.

"The principal cause of the price slump has been the dumping of subsidized silver from major producing countries in the third world, primarily Peru and Mexico," Andrus said Friday, in remarks prepared for a congressional subcommittee hearing at Coeur d'Alene.

"Our domestic producers, including many you will hear from in Idaho, are faced with trying to compete in this totally unfair market place," the governor said.

Forest Service allows hunting lodge
BOISE (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service says a member of the Idaho Fish and Game Commission, Norm Guh, can keep his hunting lodge at Smith Gulch on the Salmon River.

Four individuals challenged Guh's right to have a hunting lodge on the Salmon River. They included Cambridge author and river guide Cor Conley and Bill Wolf, a conservationist from Stevensville, Mont. They appealed the Forest Service's decision to allow Guh to build a permanent lodge on the river.

Wolf vowed to appeal the case to federal court.

Unrest grows in fee increase dispute
MOSCOW (AP) — Student unrest is mounting against the student body president of the University of Idaho over her attempts to get a student fee increase overturned.

An anonymous recall campaign started Thursday against student leader Tina Kagi with the circulation of recall petitions in residence halls.

"I don't know what I did to deserve this," Ms. Kagi said Thursday night.

Specialist questions rancher's claims for sheep lost to bears

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — An appropriation that could give an eastern Idaho farmer up to $112,500 for sheep lost to bears is being questioned by a Montana wildlife conservation specialist.

Tom France, Bozeman, said the appropriation is "special interest legislation" and an unacceptable way of dealing with the depredation problem.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, attached a supplemental appropriation for $85,000 to the 1990 Senate appropriation bill last week. The bill also has a provision that could boost the payment to $112,500, said McClure press aide H.D. Palmer.

A House-Senate conference panel has approved the appropriations bill, which is up for final action in both chambers. If approved, it will go to the president for approval.

Palmer said if the Davis Sheep Co., Terrell, believes it is entitled to more than $85,000, the Davises can ask for up to $27,500 additional. They must justify these further losses and seek congressional approval.

Palmer said McClure's legislative appropriation was justified because the Davis family should not have to bear losses incurred because of government programs to protect bears.

Bryant Christensen, range chief for the Targhee National Forest, said the action isn't unprecedented. In 1984, he said, Bill Enget of St. Anthony received $4,326 in similar legislation sponsored by McClure for moving his sheep off the Two Top Mountain allotment in the Island Park area.

Enget incurred costs and experienced some sheep losses when he moved his herds to a different allotment, Christensen said.

Palmer said because grizzly bears are protected under the Endangered Species Act, the bears took precedence over the safety of sheep. Heavy losses made the Davis family decide to remove their sheep from a prime and longstanding grazing area, when the only alternative was range of poorer quality, he said.

France said livestock depredation by an endangered species is a concern. "But the senator's way of dealing with it is wholly unacceptable," he said.

Interest fuss could cut revenue

BOISE (AP) — An attorney general's opinion last month on whether should receive interest on funds in dedicated accounts will cause a multi-million dollar drop in revenue going into the general fund, state Treasurer Lydia Justice Edwards says.

An opinion prepared by Deputy Attorney General David High said the Idaho Constitution makes it clear that interest earned on funds deposited in accounts dedicated to highway purposes must return to that fund.

In the past, interest earnings have been going into the general fund. About three-quarters of general tax revenue goes to education.

"This diversion of interest earnings back to highways will create a multi-million dollar shift away from general account income," the treasurer said Friday.

She had no immediate prediction of the amount involved, but High said earlier discussions indicated it could be up to $2 million per year.

Five cents worth of candy isn't much to a modern youngster, but in 1923 it was a carload of cavities. The wages back then were a little different, too.

Tell us how you earned a living and how those hard-earned dollars were spent. Did you buy bread or make it at home? What did the family's clothing originate? Mom's sewing machine or catalog order?

Dig out the family album and tell us the story behind your first car or that new poolside skirt.

Share your stories and photographs with us and we'll share them with our readers. It doesn't have to be a long story - just write a friendly letter about life before convenience foods and microwave popcorn.

Farmers harvest jet parts

ALTA, Iowa (AP) — General Electric Co. has paid $4,700 to five farmers whose fall harvests turned up parts of a jetliner that crashed at Sioux City, but a $50,000 bounty remains for the part most sought by investigators.

"The harvest is in full swing right now, and they're getting crops out, and they're able to see where they haven't been able to see before," Buena Vista County Sheriff Chuck Eddy said.

Officials of the National Transportation Safety Board and GE hope missing parts will provide clues to the crash of United Airlines Flight 232, which crashed July 29. The crash killed 112 people, but 184 survived.

Most of the parts turned in, including three this week, appear to be engine fan blades of GE, a lawyer representing GE, the company made the CP-6 tail engine that disintegrated before the crash.

Many other pieces of engine were found immediately after the July 19 crash, said Stephen Gadd, a lawyer representing GE. The company made the CP-6 tail engine that disintegrated before the crash.

Smoking blamed for nursing home fire that killed 9

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A nursing home fire blamed on careless smoking filled the four-story building with thick smoke that killed nine elderly residents and sent nearly 100 to hospitals, officials said Friday.

The fire gutted the second-floor room where it began, but did little damage to the rest of the brick building. The home does not have a sprinkler system; none was required when it was built in 1969.

"Even though we lost nine people, the potential was there to lose significantly more than that," said Fire Chief Thomas E. Gardner.

Gardner said the Thursday night fire was started by smoking materials at the foot of a bed in the second-floor room at the 172-bed Hillhaven Rehabilitation and Convalescent Center.

One of the room's occupants, Major Leary, 78, died in the blaze and the other occupant escaped without serious injury, the fire chief said.

The nursing home's residents, some in bedclothes and some naked, were helped down halls and down ladders as firefighters tackled the fire that broke out at 8:20 p.m. MDT as residents were going to bed.

Gardner said many residents stayed in their rooms with the doors closed while firefighters used a pressurized ventilation system called a smoke-blaster to clear smoke from the building.

Resident Katie Gwaltney, 88, said she was told to stay in her fourth-floor room after she heard a fire alarm.

"They came and told us that everything was OK," she said from a wheelchair outside the home. "I couldn't get out, I just lay so still."

Ninety-eight of the nursing home's 163 residents were taken to hospitals for treatment of smoke inhalation, said Don Haupt, administrator of the city's Paramedical Rescue Service.

Seven remained hospitalized Friday, six in critical condition, said Rhonda S. Hoover, a spokeswoman for Sentara Norfolk General Hospital.

The fire chief said the fire would have been less severe if the 20-year-old building had a sprinkler system. "If it were sprinkled, then probably some of them would not have died," he said.

State codes in 1969 did not require sprinklers in nursing homes, Howard H. Summers Jr., the state's chief fire marshal, said any multi-story nursing home constructed today would have to include a sprinkler system but a single-story building could be built without one if it included fire-resistant construction materials.

Gardner said he would urge state lawmakers to require that buildings such as the nursing homes be retrofitted with sprinklers.

Hillhaven will consider installing sprinklers, but they are difficult to place in existing buildings, said Jeffrey M. McKain, a regional vice president for The Hillhaven Corp., a Tacoma, Wash.-based chain that owns the home.

McKain said smoking is prohibited in bedrooms. The home has smoke and heat detectors and fire-resistant doors and "it appeared most of those systems all functioned as they should," he said.

One of the injured residents, Elijah Williams, 85, said he heard no fire alarm in his second-floor room but knew something was wrong when he heard noise on the first floor.

Rescue personnel attend to elderly victims on the front lawn until evacuated to hospitals. "I went to the window and I saw smoke," he said. Williams said he was rescued by a firefighter who brought him down a ladder and left him outside the building. "I didn't know what to do," Williams said from Sentara Norfolk General Hospital. "I didn't have anything on, nothing but my night clothes." There were about 200 people in the building when the fire broke out, McKain said. He said damage was so minimal on the third and fourth floors that residents might return there in a few days. He had no damage estimate. At least two residents went home with their families and the others were placed in hospitals and nursing homes, McKain said. Haupt said 141 people were transported to hospitals or nursing homes.

New research disputes gene link in illness

NEW YORK (AP) — New research casts doubt on a highly publicized 1987 study that linked a major psychiatric disorder called manic-depressive illness to a faulty gene, a scientist says.

At the time, the study was hailed as the first to show a genetic defect in a psychiatric illness that includes no physical abnormalities in the brain.

But with the new data, researchers are "not nearly as confident as we were" that they had found the approximate location of such a gene, said David Pauls of the Yale University School of Medicine.

"I guess the conclusion is that the evidence isn't as strong as we thought, and additional work needs to be done so that we can either definitely rule in or rule out the finding," he said.

The new work was reported recently at a scientific meeting. Co-authors included several researchers who wrote the 1987 paper, such as Pauls, and others.

Genes lie along tiny threadlike structures called chromosomes that are found in cells of the body. The 1987 paper presented evidence that a gene causing manic-depressive illness in three generations of a large Amish family lay within a portion of the chromosome numbered 11.

The new work suggests that either there is also a second gene for the disease in the Amish, or that the originally reported gene does not exist, Pauls said.

The illness, also called bipolar disorder, affects about one in 100 Americans.

Generally it involves severe depression plus episodes of mania, which can include restlessness, racing thoughts and delusions of grandeur, or of hypomania, a less intense form of mania. Symptoms can be largely controlled with drugs.

Bush visits Senate floor, makes history

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush made a little history Friday when he walked on to the Senate floor for a few seconds.

Senate associate historian Don Richie said there's no record of any sitting president making an informal visit to the floor, although presidents have given formal addresses in the Senate Chamber.

Normally, presidents speak in the larger House chamber to a joint session of Congress.

Bush decided to visit the floor after separate private meetings with Senate Republicans and Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine. He walked through the door to a round of applause from the handful of senators on the floor and the mostly empty spectator gallery.

The visit ended in less than a minute.

Town closes doors to racists' march

PULASKI, Tenn. (AP) — Business and community leaders in this southern town are taking a simple approach to today's scheduled march by white supremacists: they plan to shut the town down.

"I doubt there'll be over five places open in Pulaski, and they'll probably be on the outlying sections of the city," said Mayor Hal Stewart.

"We're just going to shut the town down and let them have their march. There won't be anything open around the square. All the merchants downtown agreed to close."

The Aryan Nations, a white supremacist group based in Hayden Lake, Idaho, is scheduled to march in Pulaski at noon MDT today to commemorate the Oct. 6 birthday of Civil War hero Sam Davis.

Davis, a Confederate scout, was hanged in Pulaski after refusing to tell Union leaders who had given him information about the movements of Northern troops.

Pulaski population 7,600 also owns a footnote in history as the 1865 birthplace of the original Ku Klux Klan. The current Klan, which traces its roots to 1915 Georgia, has also marched here.

No one knows how many marchers to expect Saturday in this town 90 miles south of Nashville, but the Tennessee Highway Patrol with help police from Pulaski and surrounding towns with security.

"All we've got to go on is what their leader (Rev. Richard G. Butler) says, and he says they're going to bring in a thousand," said the mayor. "We don't have any proof there'll be that many."

However many show up, city officials are confident Police Chief Stanley Newton will keep the march under control.

"He's had three years of experience with three other marches by the Klan, so we feel he and his officers are well-sensitized," said Alderman Dan Speer.

Pulaski residents were quietly indignant about the Klan marches, which began in 1986 to protest designation of Martin Luther King's birthday as a national holiday. But this time they decided to take a stronger stand.

A group called Giles Countians United, after trying to discourage the march with petitions and resolutions, is urging residents to stay away from the downtown area to avoid possible confrontations with the marchers.

"Our whole goal is to at least tell the rest of the world that Pulaski does not share the views of that group," said organizer Mike Curry, president of Pulaski's First National Bank.

"Many residents have made a point of leaving town Saturday, and two high school football games were moved up to Thursday night to avoid incoming Aryan Nations members."

More than 130 businesses agreed to close their doors Saturday, no small decision, according to Speer, an insurance agent and former restaurant owner.

Jobless rate up; economy shows softness

WASHINGTON (AP) — The largest decline in payrolls at auto plants and other factories in nearly seven years helped push the national jobless rate to 5.3 percent in September, the government said Friday in a report showing unexpected softness in the economy.

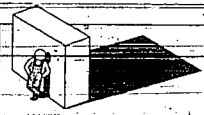

The civilian unemployment rate was up from 5.2 percent in both July and August, the Labor Department said in the first comprehensive look at the economy last month.

Non-farm employers told the government they added a seasonally adjusted 209,000 jobs in September, more than double a revised 88,000 in August. But, nearly all of the growth can be attributed to two special factors: teachers returning to their classrooms and 75,000 telephone workers ending a strike, analysts said.

"This report is the first in quite a while that suggests the economy could be heading for a fallopian," said economist Allen Sitalof of the Boston Co. "Another report like this one would begin to cause a good deal of worry."

Manufacturers reported a loss of 103,000 jobs, including 33,000 at auto plants. It was the biggest drop since November 1982 at the end of the last recession. Payrolls either declined or were flat within all manufacturing industries except food processing.

The most disturbing feature of September's business survey data was the large decline in manufacturing employment," Commissioner of Labor Statistics Janet L. Norwood told Congress' Joint Economic sign that the Federal Reserve Board has more leeway to lower interest rates.

Early last year, the Fed embarked on a year-long program of raising interest rates to slow the economy and cool inflationary pressures.

Then, after signs of economic sluggishness emerged, this spring, particularly in interest-rate-sensitive sectors such as construction and auto manufacturing, the central bank nudged rates down a bit, hoping to keep the nation from slipping into a recession.

Economic data for July and August indicated the Fed appeared to be getting what it wanted — slower but sustained growth. However, with Friday's employment report, some analysts said the Fed, which hasn't loosened credit since mid-July, must be more to react against a downturn.

Overall, the unemployment rate has changed little over the last 12 months. A year ago, it was 5.4 percent, moving down to a 15-year low of 5.0 percent in March. Since then, it has fluctuated narrowly between 5.1 percent and 5.3 percent.

In September, 117.5 million Americans held jobs and 6.6 million were looking for work, essentially unchanged from August.

However, in a worrisome sign, the government said for the first time in 6 years, more industries lost jobs than gained, indicating the general business is spreading more widely throughout the economy.

The jobless rate reported by the Labor Department is derived from a survey of American households. A separate survey of businesses provides the job growth figures.

September job growth was artificially bolstered by the return of striking telephone workers. But in the household survey strikers are counted as employed, so their return did not affect the unemployment rate.

Of the 95,000 government jobs added, 87,000 were at local governments, a swing the Labor Department attributed largely to the end of summer vacation for school employees.

Average hourly earnings of non-farm workers rose 0.5 percent to $9.73 last month after holding steady in August. For the year ending in September, average hourly earnings increased 3.8 percent, well behind the rate of consumer price inflation.

The average manufacturing work week and factory overtime edged up 0.1 hour to 41.0 and 3.8 hours, respectively, offsetting small declines in August.

Heptachlor tests end in 10 states

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says it has ended a four-month testing program in 10 states for possible contamination of swine and poultry by the pesticide heptachlor.

Lester Crawford, administrator of the department's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said tests results show there is no contamination problem and that "will return to routine monitoring."

Crawford said Thursday that since heptachlor began in 1979 tests were run on more than 2,100 hogs from 146 plants, and nearly 1,800 poultry samples from 70 plants.

"None showed any heptachlor residues, except for an isolated case of a very big in Tennessee," he said. "Because of difficulties in testing that hog's owner, we continue to investigate that case."

The Environmental Protection Agency in 1978 banned heptachlor for all agricultural uses except as a seed treatment, because "the pesticide has been shown to cause cancer in mice." Last May, the EPA banned heptachlor as a seed treatment.

But also in May, illegal levels of heptachlor were detected in chickens at one poultry operation in Arkansas, Crawford said. The firm voluntarily destroyed more than one-half million chickens and thousands of pounds of processed products.

As a consequence, the USDA agency set up an "intensive testing" program in Arkansas and nine other states — Illinois, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma, Tennessee and Texas — to determine if the problem was widespread.

On July 10, the agency announced that no evidence of further contamination had been found. However, the testing was continued as a further check.

Evangelists' revenue falls, but most recovering from scandals

"When Jesus entered the Temple, he overturned the tables of the moneychangers and said unto them, 'It is written, My house shall be called the house of prayer, but you have made it a den of thieves.'"

NEW YORK (AP) — As Judgment Day arrived Thursday for a fallen Jim Bakker, America's electronic church was having signs of recovering the congregation contributions and credibility lost amid the lapses of Bakker and other big-time ministers.

"The scandals didn't kill TV evangelism, but they did rearrange it," said religious historian David Harrell of the University of Alabama at Birmingham. "It's damaged, and it's changed permanently."

Jimmy Swaggart, once the top apostle of the airwaves, lost 69 percent of his viewership and 72 percent of the enrollment at his Bible college after revelations in 1988 that he paid a prostitute to pose naked and talk dirty.

Health-career Oral Roberts, once the most famous televangelist, is closing his City of Faith Hospital and medical school in Tulsa, Okla. Just two years ago, before scandals raised skepticism, Roberts could tell his flock that a 900-foot-tall Jesus appeared in a vision to say he would "come home" if Christians didn't send in $8 million and get the money.

Four out of ten TV households — 34 million TV households — watched some TV evangelists during a four-week period, according to a 1988 study by Nielsen, the TV audience rating firm.

AP/Cynthia Greer

executive director of the 1,300-member National Religious Broadcasters, an umbrella group for the $2-billion-a-year industry.

"Everyone was reminded that if you are going to spread the word of almighty God, you have to live in a manner that makes your message credible," Cook said.

Earlier this year, the Internal Revenue Service began auditing 23 TV ministries and said tax exemptions for some could be in jeopardy.

Even before the IRS action, the NRB expelled Swaggart and tightened its rules, insisting each member make public yearly audits of donations and spending.

The NRB says that at the local level, the electronic church is flourishing, with the number of Christian TV stations growing more than 50 percent to 336 in three years and the number of radio stations increasing to 1,488.

But overall credibility suffered because of Bakker's and Swaggart's misdeeds. Shortly after the scandals, only 23 percent of Americans said TV evangelists could be trusted with money, according to a Gallup poll. In a New York Times CBS News Poll, 75 percent of regular viewers of TV evangelists thought they were too concerned with money; and one-third of the contributors had an unfavorable opinion of TV ministries.

checks anymore," said Richard Yao of Fundamentalists Anonymous, a Debra Murphy recreating the poses she said Swaggart posed her to do in Playboy magazine.

"In 1987, the group inducted Swaggart into its Hall of Infamy as a one-man honor show," derided Roberts for "spiritual extortion."

Bakker made PTL, which stands for "Praise the Lord or People That Love, into a $129-million-a-year gold mine. Today, the TV show once seen by 614,000 households in 124 markets airs from a rundown mall in Orlando, Fla., on eight channels. Bakker's custom to his wife, Tammy Faye, whose slithering on makeup, false eyelashes and free-flowing tears made her the butt of nasty humor around the country.

Bakker's downfall began with his 1987 confession to having had sexual trysts with New York church secretary Jessica Hahn. He allegedly tried to buy her silence with $765,000 — the value of her house and her body for $1 million in Playboy magazine. "Fifthhouse featured prostitute Debra Murphy recreating the poses she said Swaggart posed her to do in motels. Swaggart tearfully confessed in 1988 to "moral failure." Dofeked by the "Amoral failure" of God and ordered to stay away from television for a year, he instead took a three-month TV break — and saw his audience nose-dive from 2 million households to 923,000, according to Arbitron, the TV rating service. This year, he is seen in 628,000 households.

Falwell's revenues this year were $135-million-up $47-million from the previous year, because of cassette sales and other non-TV revenue. Falwell took over PTL from Bakker but failed to keep it out of bankruptcy court.

"It was our greatest growth ever," Falwell spokesman Mark DeMoss said of the favorable revenues. "We finally feel far removed from the situation we found ourselves in the middle of two years ago."

Robertson also has rebounded. Ratings are up 18 percent since Robertson returned to "The 700 Club" 15 months ago. He also building a $2.1-million conference center in Virginia Beach, Va.

"It was a chastening thing, a cleansing thing," spokesman David Robertson said. "We've weathered the storm."

White and Hispanic students join to fight adults' racial bias

MARSING (AP) — Hispanic and white students at Marsing High School have joined to fight racism — at the school's football games — and apparently won.

Racial slurs have been shouted from the school's bleachers by a small group of fans at the Marsing football games.

At last Friday's game, a strongly worded anti-racist statement was handed to adult fans. A modified version blasting "bigots, or big idiots" was read over the loudspeaker, drawing loud applause from the crowd of 600.

For the first time this season, no racial epithets were heard at a Marsing High football game.

"It's the best example of student power I see," said Student Body President Andy Persfield. "We decided we weren't going to put up with it."

"The kids are smarter than the grownups, that's the whole problem," said Marsing Mayor Gene Showalter. "I think it's great that the students did this."

This "story could have had a dramatically different ending. The natural school, student population 129, was on the verge of racial polarization only a couple of weeks ago.

On Sept. 25, the 10 Hispanics on the 21-member football team boycotted practice, angered by shouts of "Stupid Mexican!" and other insults from a few white adults attending their games.

Observers say only Hispanic players would be criticized for misdeeds. White players dropping a pass or missing a tackle would return to the huddle unscathed.

A surprising number of team boosters, the coach included, didn't hear the taunts, but were noticed by Hispanic players.

"These kids have been here since they were born," said Marsing High teacher Badamer Elizondo, himself Hispanic. "This kind of thing hurts."

Among the affected was linebacker — Ernesto "Neto" Villalreal, 16, who led anti-racist resistance to the point of appearing alone before the school district's Board of Trustees.

"I figured if we just let it go, it wouldn't change a thing. Changes generally come slow to this town along the Snake River in northwestern Owyhee County."

Prep football reigns each fall as the best entertainment around.

The minority players plan to avoid harassment by leaving the team for only would have destroyed a promising career as a scholar-athlete as well. Roughly a quarter of Marsing High students are Hispanic, school officials said.

Principal Bill Duncanson saw in the crisis a rare opportunity for his students to reject the intolerance of their elders. He counseled the troubled athletes not to surrender.

"By quitting, you're letting those jerks in the stands win. They're winning, and you're quitting," Duncanson told them.

Later that day, the student council voted unanimously to crack down on racist language at school functions. The swift response convinced Hispanic students to end their holdout. The following afternoon, all 21 players were back at practice.

With the blessings of administrators, students handed the statement to adults entering Friday's homecoming game.

The Huskies went on to crush visiting Notus 50-6 and improve their season record to 3-2.

"I feel fortunate," said Johnny Garcia, a 16-year-old offensive tackle. "Now I know if the fans cheer, they're cheering for all eleven guys on the field."

The starting quarterback, Jaime Wood, 17, who is white, said the team has grown closer since the incident.

"It pulled us all together," he said. "It's been like filling your tank with gas."

"That fact hasn't been lost on first-year football coach Bill Barr, who isn't likely to forget his emotional roller-coaster ride. "Ever since, they've been going at it — 100 percent," he marveled Wednesday afternoon at practice. "There's a real positive change."

Nuns locked selves in henhouse to save chickens from slaughter

DAVENTRY, England (AP) — Thirteen nuns locked themselves into their henhouse for three hours Friday to prevent health officials from slaughtering their flock of 5,000 chickens.

The chickens at the Our Lady of the Passion Monastery, 6.5 miles northwest of London, were condemned to death by the Ministry of Agriculture on Wednesday after a salmonella victim blamed them for her food poisoning.

An inspection found salmonella in the flock.

But the nuns, led by American-born Mother Catherine, from Erlanger, Ky., said the birds "were well cared for and not connected to any outbreak of salmonella poisoning."

"The strain that was found in our chickens has been in chickens since 1913," Mother Catherine said Friday. "No one has done anything about it because there was no real danger. We will not allow the chickens to be slaughtered."

Richard North, a spokesman for the nuns, said their action prevented the slaughter. He added that the nuns relied entirely on income from the sale of eggs and that if the chickens were killed, the convent might have to close.

"They (the ministry officials) were formally and officially refused entry and that's why the slaughter did not take place," said North.

But ministry officials said they could not proceed because they didn't have anywhere to dump the carcasses. They said they would return the United Kingdom Egg Producers Association supported the nuns.

Soviet cuts will pare surprise attack ability

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Union will be unable by 1991 to mount a surprise attack if Mikhail S. Gorbachev makes his promised cuts in conventional military forces, the International Institute for Strategic Studies said Thursday.

"The situation is already in the process of significant change," the institute said in The Military Balance 1989-90, its annual survey of military forces. "The unilateral reductions will, once complete, virtually eliminate the surprise-attack threat which has so long concerned NATO planners."

After the cutbacks, it would take the Soviets one to two weeks to marshal the forces for an attack, institute director Francois Heisbourg told a news conference Wednesday.

"In short hand, that translates as no surprise attack," he said. Soviet withdrawals from Eastern Europe now under way include units needed in lightning attacks, Heisbourg added.

Fass, the official Soviet news agency, carried a lengthy dispatch on the institute's report.

In a speech to the United Nations on Dec. 7, Gorbachev promised to reduce the Soviet armed forces by 500,000 troops and to eliminate 10,000 tanks, 8,500 artillery pieces and 800 combat aircraft by 1991.

The institute said it discovered, because the Kremlin answered its questions for the first time, that the Soviet Union had 6,700 more main battle tanks than previously estimated, bringing the total to about 60,000. It said the additional tanks probably were in storage.

The Soviet-led Warsaw Pact's huge tank force is a key element in calls its overwhelming numerical superiority in conventional forces. The institute's new survey showed NATO with 34,400 tanks and the Warsaw with 78,200.

Of these, NATO has 21,900 tanks deployed and the Warsaw Pact 58,500, the survey said.

Troop levels, excluding reserves, were shown as about equal in the area, with NATO having 2.24 million active service personnel compared with 2.3 for the Warsaw Pact.

The survey said the long-range strategic nuclear arsenals of the United States and Soviet Union remained "in rough parity."

Institute officials said their estimates of conventional forces did not include Soviet cutbacks since Gorbachev announced the planned reductions.

Heisbourg gave no figures for withdrawals so far but said the Soviets have begun pulling out crack units and that Moscow had said frontline divisions deployed in East Germany would be withdrawn.

"Some of these divisions are divisions which any NATO planner would like to see removed," Heisbourg said, but he cautioned that the Soviets would be capable of "major sustained offensive operations" even after the promised cutbacks.

He said the Warsaw Pact had been weakened by political upheaval and disagreement with Poland and Hungary implementing sweeping reforms and East Germany sticking to communism. Both reformers and hard-liners have maintained military ties with Moscow but relations are strained, Heisbourg said.

"It would be a very hardy analyst who would consider Hungary and East Germany still to be allies in any meaningful sense," he told the news conference.

The institute is an international non-governmental center for research on security and arms control. It is financed by private foundations, membership fees and sales of its publications.

Rembrandt burial place a mystery

LOS ANGELES Times

LEIDEN, Netherlands — Researchers hoping to unearth Rembrandt's mortal remains said Friday they have given up hope of finding the grave of the painter, who died in such poverty that he could not afford a tomb.

Prof. Harmen Baeuwers, who is leading the effort to find the grave of the Dutch Old Master, said the excavation of a tomb in which Rembrandt's son, Titus, was buried had yielded no clues as to the whereabouts of the painter's last resting place.

"There is less than one chance in 100 that Rembrandt's remains are among the 500 skeletons reconstituted from a crypt in Amsterdam's Westkerk church, the professor said.

Nothing had confirmed that the painter, who died in 1669, was laid to rest alongside his son, who had died a year earlier.

History reminding Boise State not to take Bengals lightly
 By STEVE CRUMP
 Times-News sports editor
 BOISE — Go figure.
 Three years ago, Idaho State University's football team was headed rather precipitously for a 2-9 season and paused to humiliate Boise State rather convincingly, 25-6.
 Two years ago, Frank Selto returned a kickoff 96 yards in Bronco Stadium with 1 minute, 48 seconds left to lift the Bengals to a 35-33 come-from-behind victory. ISU finished 3-7-1 that season.
 So with the Broncos 2-2 and coming off a decisive Big Sky Conference-opening victory over Weber State and the Bengals, leaving won two games in two years, Boise State has every right to be nervous about the Bengals' 6 p.m. visit to Bronco Stadium tonight.
 "I don't think our players will be overconfident," said Boise State coach Skip Hall. "We've got plenty to keep their noses to the grindstone."
 The Bengals, 2-2 following a league-opening 23-21 victory over Montana State last week, have beaten the Broncos four times in 21 tries, but it's been a bizarre series.
 In 1971, Idaho State won on an option pass by halfback James Jackson, the only pass attempt of Jackson's three-year career. In 1975, the Bengals appeared headed for a big upset and a shot at the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs when Gooding's Gary Correll blocked a field goal attempt and returned it for a touchdown. In 1978, Boise State place-kicker Tom Barrett sprained his ankle in pre-game warmups, so punter Ed Thomas kicked three field goals, the last with seven seconds left to win it. In 1981, ISU's national championship season, the school's record-setting passer, Mike Michurek beat the Broncos on a 14-yard quarterback draw play.
 "Emotion is important in a game like this," said Hall. "Obviously, we're going to have to take care of business."
 Hall said BSU is "getting closer to what we're looking for, but we're not there yet. We're still making some immature decisions."
 He wants to "improve the Boise State running game, which could be a problem for Idaho State, since the Bengals are fast in the Big Sky against the rush."
 But the Bengals rank fourth in the Big Sky in pass defense, which is a dramatic turnaround from last season.
 "Idaho State's defense is a lot better than most people think," said Nevada-Reno coach Chris Aull, whose Wolf Pack beat ISU 39-10 in Reno two weeks ago. "They're going to surprise some people before the year is over."
 ISU's Garth Hall said the Montana State victory last week could be a turning point for the program.
 "If we expect to win this week, we have to cut down on dumb penalties. Last year, I said our game with Montana State was the turning point for them," Hall said.
 "Some people are drawing parallels. It was a win to give us confidence and enthusiasm. It was a huge victory for where we're at," the Bengal coach said.
 But the Bengals will face a far more daunting defense this week, statistically the fourth-best in the Big Sky overall and the best against the run. The Broncos are allowing opponents less than three touchdowns a game and have forced 11 turnovers in four games.
 Trouble is, Boise State has coughed up the ball 14 times, including 10 interceptions, seven of them by the incumbent quarterback, Mike Virden. Virden replaced Duane Halliday two weeks ago and completed 21 of 44 passes for 326 yards and four touchdowns against Weber State, including one TD pass and nine receptions for 185 yards to junior wide receiver Winky White, last week's Big Sky offensive player of the week.
 ISU also had a successful debut by an understudy quarterback last week. JC transfer Duffy Daugherty, who stepped in for starter Jason Whitmer when Whitmer suffered a separated shoulder against Nevada-Reno, completed 27 of 38 passes for 243 yards and a touchdown. He remains the starter this week, but only because Whitmer isn't yet healthy.
 The game will be broadcast by Boise radio station KB01-AM and Pocatello station KSEI-AM.

 JEROME — Gary Showers turned a draw play into an 88-yard score on Jerome's first handoff of the game, pointing the big-play Tiger offense to a 42-6 rout of Wood River in a South-Central Idaho Conference football showdown Friday.
 Showers, who ended the night with 207 yards rushing on 40 carries, surprised the Wolverines' defense with a quick out-at-his-own-30-yard-line and romped the rest of the way untouched for Jerome's first touchdown less than five minutes into the game.
 Before the half ended, Jerome moved its advantage out to 28-0 on a 25-yard run by junior Jason Wilson and Shane Burton scoring passes to Matt Williams and Wilson both aeriels coming in the final 1 minute, 13 seconds of the second period.

 The victory left the Tigers with a leg up on their sixth straight District 4 Class A-2 title and trip to the state playoffs. That will come if they beat Buhl in the final game of the regular season. If not, the Magic Valley's sole berth in the A-2 postseason will have to be settled by a three-way

 TORONTO — The fans raised the roof at the SkyDome and then the Toronto Blue Jays' offense fell on Oakland, 50-26, gave the Blue Jays the boost they needed and the team reeled off a winning 7-3 Friday night and ending the Athletics' lead in the American League playoffs to 2-1.
 Toronto is 11-0 when the retractable roof is shut and 37-19 overall in its new building. And if this all sounds familiar, maybe it is: Could Minnesota ever have won the World Series two years ago without the Metrodome?
 "I sure hope we get the same results," Blue Jays manager Cito Gaston said.
 The next two games will be in Toronto and league president Dr. Bobby Brown has announced the dome will be closed both days.

 HAGERMAN — It isn't mandatory that Hagerman running back Brody Engles break everything left once he clears the line of scrimmage. But he usually does.
 With one exception Friday, Engles used that cutback maneuver to score four touchdowns and lead the fourth-ranked Pirates to a 36-6 Magic Valley Conference decision over the second-ranked Mackay Miners.
 "When Brody gets the ball we don't know which way he's going to go," smiled Hagerman Coach Randy Clark.
 The victory was key to Hagerman's postseason Class A-4 playoff hopes and hoisted them into second place as Raft River was knocked off by pacesetter and undefeated Castletford. Hagerman now is 3-1 in the league and 5-1 overall while Mackay is 4-2 for the season and 3-1 in the conference. Castletford visits Mackay next week and Hagerman hosts the Wolves on the last night of the regular season.

Sutcliffe worrying about Williams going into game 3 of NLCS

Chicago's Rick Sutcliffe congratulates Mark Grace after Thursday's victory

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rick Sutcliffe knows Will Clark and Kevin Mitchell are going to get their hits. It's Matt Williams he's thinking about.

"The biggest surprise is Williams," said Sutcliffe, who will start for Chicago against San Francisco's Mike LaCoss in Game 3 of the playoffs Saturday night. "He used to chase a lot of bad pitches. Our plan was to pitch around Clark and Mitchell to get to Williams, but he's hitting the ball well now."

The best-of-7 series is even at one game apiece with the next three games at Candlestick Park.

The Cubs canceled a scheduled workout on Friday, and both teams took the day off to rest after the flight to the West Coast.

Game time is 6:25 p.m. NBC-TV, Channels 7 and 38 in the Magic Valley, will broadcast it live.

"I didn't want to have a workout two weeks ago," Cubs manager Jim Freer said. "But (general manager) Jim Freer told me maybe we should have it for the press. Then, coming out on the plane we decided not to have it."

In the two games at Wrigley Field, Clark and Mitchell combined to go 10-for-17 with four homers and 11 RBIs. During the regular season, the Giants slugged combined for two homers — both by Clark — and 17 RBIs against the Cubs.

"Candlestick is a pitcher's park," Sutcliffe said. "It shows you what kind of seasons Clark and Mitchell had, each driving in 100 runs and each scoring 100 runs."

In the first two games, Williams was 3-for-8 with a double, home run and four RBIs. He also made several outstanding defensive plays, including a third base "glitch" victory in Game 1.

Williams didn't hit for average, only .202, but he finished the season with 48 homers and 50 RBIs after spending most of the season with Class AAAA Phoenix.

He started the season with the Giants, but was sent to Phoenix on May 1 with a 1.29 average. In the minors, Williams hit .320 with 26 homers and 61 RBIs and was recalled on July 23.

"Matt worked very hard at Phoenix and he has become a better hitter," Giants manager Roger Craig said. "It's important that he is hitting so they can't pitch around Mitchell."

Sutcliffe is at his best when he changes speeds and hits the corners.

"We've been using sliders to try and get Williams out," Sutcliffe said. "But he's not the wild swinger he was."

Sutcliffe had a sore arm the last month of the season, but says he's ready to go.

"Physically, I don't think I could have started the opener," Sutcliffe said. "I pitched in the final game of the season and it was important for me to find out it was OK."

Sutcliffe also was a member of the Cubs' 1984 NL East championship. He was 16-1 for Chicago in '84 and 1-1 in the playoffs against San Diego, and won the NL Cy Young Award.

"That was a veteran club," Sutcliffe said.

"This group just goes out and has fun. They don't worry about what happened in the past."

LaCoss (10-10) began the year in the bullpen and is getting the start because Don Robinson has a leg injury.

"I didn't think I was that good," Craig said. "If he gets hurt, we might not be able to use him again."

"The Cubs are a very aggressive team," LaCoss said. "But right now Mark Grace is their hot hitter and I can't let him beat me."

Grace went 6-for-8 in the first two games with a home run and six RBIs.

In addition to Clark, Mitchell and Williams, Zimmer also is worried about the fickle winds at Candlestick Park.

"At Wrigley Field, I just look at the flag," Zimmer said. "If it's blowing out, the wind is blowing out. If it's blowing in, the wind is blowing in. I don't know how to manage here."

Zimmer, who coached under Craig for the Giants, said the San Francisco manager doesn't allow players to use the wind as an excuse.

"Roger Craig didn't allow any players to complain about it," Zimmer said.

Zimmer is also very familiar with LaCoss.

"He's a tough cookie," Zimmer said.

"Mike and I became very close when I was here. In one game here after I became manager of the Cubs, we beat him with a squeeze play. I hope we can do it again."

Sometimes at Candlestick, a squeeze play is the safest thing.

Coaches say proposals by NCAA would hurt athletes, not help them

The Washington Post

The NCAA Presidents Commission "expected opposition to proposals to shorten the college basketball season by a month and cut spring football practice in half."

This week it got it.

Coaches and officials around the country alternately leveled accusations of meddling and expressed concern that the suggested rules, if passed, would harm athletes rather than help them.

The director of Michigan athletic director and football coach Bo Schembler called the proposed legislation "ridiculous, unbelievable."

He said the limits on the basketball season, with 25 games to be played between Dec. 20 and early March, would actually result in overburdening the athletes with more games in a shorter period of time. "Now they'd never be in class," he said. And he said that the effective elimination of spring practices would result in longer practices with more injuries in the fall.

"When you get these academicians into things, they have no idea what it's all about," he said. "That's what happens when you turn these people loose with no information. But I tell you one thing about those people: you still have to put 100,000 in the stadium."

Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said the basketball legislation, while bold, is impractical. He said the start of the season would conflict with many schools' exam periods, and the eliminated games will cost athletic departments needed revenue. "It makes no sense," he said. "In this case they end up hurting the kids."

Miami favored by 40 points minus starting QB

By The Associated Press

Second-ranked Miami begins its month without starting quarterback Craig Erickson on Saturday.

"The team probably is the best defensive team in the country," said Miami coach Jimmy Johnson, whose Bearcats play the Hurricanes in Miami. "By virtue of that, they may be the best overall team in the country."

Miami (4-0) is favored by 40 points even though Erickson is out with a broken knuckle on the index finger of his throwing hand. He isn't expected to resume practice until early November.

Erickson's replacement will be freshman Gino Torretta, who took over last week when Erickson was hurt in the second quarter against Michigan State. Torretta completed 15 of 23 passes for 134 yards and a touchdown in that 26-0 victory.

Miami coach Dennis Erickson compared Torretta favorably with Erickson.

"Craig, to me, has the strongest arm in college football," the coach said. "But Gino has a way above average arm. There isn't a lot of difference between the two."

Miami has averaged 47 passes per game, and the coach said that wouldn't change.

"We're going to keep doing the same things," he said.

In other games, Saturday involving ranked teams: No. 1 Notre Dame at Stanford; Miami at No. 3 Colorado; Kansas State at No. 4 Nebraska; Wisconsin at No. 5 Michigan; Georgia at No. 6 Tennessee; No. 7 Arkansas at Texas Christian; No. 8 Pittsburgh at Temple; Virginia Tech at No. 9 West Virginia; and Washington at No. 9 Southern Cal.

Also: No. 17 Auburn at Kentucky; Baylor at No. 12 Houston; No. 13 Alabama vs. Mississippi at Jackson, Miss.; Middle Tennessee at No. 14 South Carolina State; Virginia at No. 15 Clemson; Oklahoma State at No. 16 Oklahoma State; No. 22 Florida State at No. 17 Syracuse; Ohio State at No. 18 Illinois; No. 19 Texas A&M at Texas Tech; No. 20 Air Force at Navy; No. 21 Washington State at No. 23 Oregon; No. 24 Michigan State at Iowa; and Arizona State at No. 25 UCLA.

Last week, a national TV audience watched as Notre Dame destroyed Purdue 40-7. This week, only local fans can watch as the Irish (4-0) play at Stanford. The big TV show will be some 30 miles north at Candlestick Park, where the San Francisco Giants and Chicago Cubs play Game 3 of the National League playoffs.

Stanford (1-3) upset nationally ranked Oregon 18-17 two weeks ago before losing to San Jose State last week, but Irish coach Lou Holtz is not impressed by the Cardinal lineup.

"I do not try to con people," Holtz said. "When I look at an opponent, I do not try to build up an opponent for a psychological reason. What I try to do is establish at what level they are capable of playing."

Colorado (4-0) has the fourth-best rushing attack in the country, averaging 354 yards per game, while Missouri is the worst of 106 major colleges, with a 48-yard average. The Buffaloes are coming off a 45-28 victory over Washington that knocked the Huskies out of the rankings.

The Tiggers are in the midst of a brutal five-game schedule that has them playing Indiana, Miami, Arizona State, Colorado and Nebraska.

"We know this stretch of games would be difficult," Missouri coach Bob Stull said. "But it doesn't help to have poor execution on offense."

The last two times Kansas State coach Bill Snyder went to Lincoln, Neb., he was a witness to disaster. He was an assistant with Iowa when the Hawkeyes lost 57-0 in 1980 and 42-7 in 1982 to Nebraska.

"It's harder than the devil to play in that stadium," he said. "You're walking into a hornet's nest."

Nebraska (4-0) has won 16 straight against Kansas State under coach Tom Osborne, although the Wildcats are coming off a 30-game victory over North Texas State that snipped a 30-game winless streak.

Since losing their opener to Notre Dame, the Michigan Wolverines have won two in a row and Wisconsin coach Don Morton is appropriately impressed. The Badgers were off last week, so Morton scouted Michigan's victory. Maryland.

"I'm impressed with Michigan's explosive, big-play offense," Morton said. "Their receivers do a lot of things well. They catch the ball well and they're complete players. They block well and run well in the ball game."

"Defensively, they look like a typical Michigan team. They pursue the ball well and aren't going to give up any big plays."

Redshirt freshman Elvis Grbac, threat for two touchdowns in his first five passes against Maryland.

Cowboys willing to deal Walker but he must agree

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have discovered they won't be trading Herschel Walker.

Herschel Walker will be trading Herschel Walker.

Walker doesn't have a no-trade clause in his five-year, $5 million contract that he signed in 1986.

Walker is wealthy enough to be set for life because of his contracts with the Donald Trump's New Jersey Generals in the now defunct USFL. He doesn't have to play football for a living.

So the Minnesota Vikings and the Cleveland Browns, reported to have been dealing with the Cowboys for their talented, 28-year-old running back, need Walker's approval to guarantee he will show up.

Any team signing him would likely want him to bargain for a contract extension. The club would have to try to resign him next season.

Walker said he will consider retirement when the contract is up.

"I love playing football," Walker said recently. "But it's not my life and I don't have to play football. I just do it right now because I enjoy it. When the day comes I don't, I'll walk away from it. I have other interests."

This summer Walker attended FBI school and said he'd like to be a special agent some day. He's performed at the ballet, writes a column for The Dallas Morning News, and does numerous television and radio advertisements.

Walker and his wife, Cindy, live in Dallas. They've bought a large home at Las Colinas near the Cottonwood Valley Golf Course.

"Cindy likes Dallas and I do, too," he said. "We feel at home here."

Walker isn't enthusiastic about new coach Jimmy Johnson's offense, complaining after the opening 28-0 loss to New Orleans that "it's a passing offense and running backs are going to get left out."

Walker, later said, the media had overplayed the incident although he wanted the ball more in David Shulars' Miami-style offense.

Walker, who had over 2,000 yards rushing and receiving last year, has only gained 202 yards on 69 carries this season, a 2.9 average. He leads the team in receiving with 18 catches, including a 37-yard scoring play last week.

The Cowboys, from owner Jerry Jones — who was out of town on Friday — to Johnson, are denying a trade involving Walker was ever "on the table."

Johnson called them "just rumors."

Walker said, "I'm here. This is where I'm going to play."

Walker, who met with both Jones and Johnson on Wednesday night, said the trade rumors were "something I don't want to get into."

Remembered deals with the Vikings included a picky linebacker David Brown, strong safety John Bradwood, linebacker Jesse Solomon and running back Darrin Nelson.

Both Dallas newspapers quoted various sources as saying Walker nixed a deal with the Vikings.

New refugees enter West on possibly last train

HANOVER, West Germany (AP) — More than 600 East Germans rolled into West Germany on Friday aboard what some worried would be the last freedom convoy, many telling of the towns without bakers and shopkeepers they left behind.

Despite tightened borders, the flow of would-be emigrants continued into Prague and Warsaw, where more than 100 East Germans took refuge in the West German Embassy in hopes of following their countrymen West.

A train carrying 633 East German refugees arrived in Hanover after a 14-hour ride from Warsaw and across their Communist homeland. Those aboard had crowded the embassy in Warsaw.

On Thursday, 7,600 East Germans had sought sanctuary at the West German Embassy in Prague, Czechoslovakia, were delivered by freedom trains to West Germany. About 7,000 more arrived last weekend on trains from Prague and Warsaw.

In all, more than 47,000 East Germans have left their homeland through Hungary, Poland and Czechoslovakia since mid-September, when reformist Hungary sparked the exodus by opening its border to the West.

The new emigrants on the train from Warsaw said the exodus was having severe effects on their homeland.

"Things are really bad in East Germany," said Ludz Kopeczy, 29. "There are no bakers without bakers and no shopkeepers without shopkeepers."

But Kopeczy, like others leaving East Germany, said he felt he had to go because of the lack of democratic freedoms and slim chances that things will change soon.

Some refugees told of reluctantly leaving relatives behind.

"My son suddenly came down with a high fever, so he and his mother stayed behind," one saddened man said. "But I am going to go through the authorities to try to get him out."

Other refugees said Communist police, some with attack dogs, lined the route through East Germany and that some train stations were surrounded by barbed-wire fences.

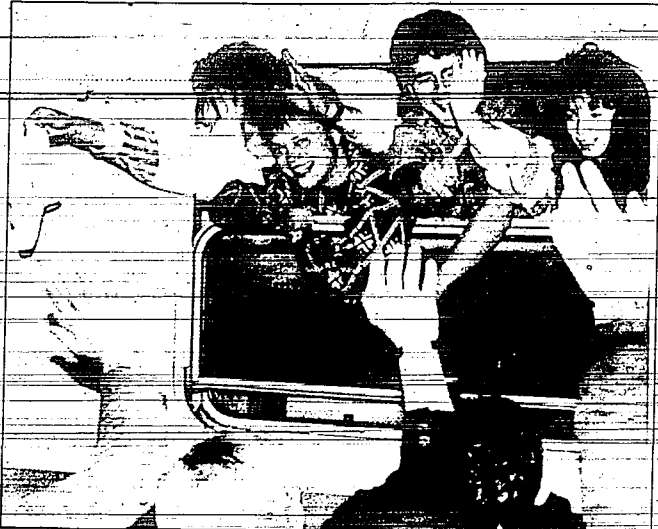

The heavy security was apparently meant to prevent a repeat of a Wednesday night riot in Dresden, East Germany, where thousands of people gathered in hopes of boarding a freedom train but were freed away by police swinging clubs.

Nonetheless, a number of Friday's arrivals told of a young East German couple and their child who successfully negotiated the train just before it left Polish territory.

"The train doors were locked tight, but they were able to get in through a window," one refugee said.

Some people told of receiving help from Poles in their efforts to join the exodus.

"We drove to Warsaw with mixed feelings," said Walter Irmscher, 40.

East German refugees wave farewell to onlookers in Warsaw as their train pulls out of the station Thursday, taking them to freedom in the West.

but after we got there, the Poles were so helpful they even showed us the way to the embassy.

The 633 refugees, who were accompanied on the train by West German envoys, cheered, whistled and hugged each other when a local politician welcomed them to "my countrymen."

"I'm not the type who gets tears in my eyes, but this time I felt something deep down," said Manfred Mix, a 36-year-old refugee. "They looked well-rested and more relaxed than most who arrived earlier in the week—from Czechoslovakia."

West German officials and Red Cross workers had prepared temporary housing and other forms of care.

The journey came as East Germany deeply embraced the exodus, began two days of celebrations marking its 40th anniversary.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, in East Berlin, to mark the anniversary and expressed "complete confidence" in East Germans' ability to come to grips with the rising discontent. He urged East Germans to "be patient."

Triumphs to the West through East German refugees taking that route in the past 24 hours, Bavarian border officials said Friday.

Reformists, centrists clash at party congress

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Liberal Communists and their more orthodox counterparts clashed Friday at a historic party congress with reformers calling for an end to orthodox Communism and their rivals emphasizing loyalty to past values.

Deciding how much their party should change, delegates at the four-day congress will influence the political future of Hungary. With its commitment to free elections by next year, the country is, along with Poland, at the forefront of reform in the Soviet bloc.

While reformists seek to discard orthodox Marxist concepts in favor of a democratic party that can compete in a multiparty system, the conservatives only want to modify existing beliefs and structures.

"We must say goodbye to the political nannies who refuse to accept change," said Anita Agh, a leader of the rank-and-file reformist faction at the congress.

"The old is no longer viable, the present is stagnating, and the new is just being born," he said.

The agreement between opposition groups and the mostly reform-minded Communist leadership to hold the country's first free elections in 47 years could be endangered if conservatives slow full-fledged liberalization.

They could do so by persuading delegates to vote for traditionalists instead of reformists in key party posts, and by turning down draft documents outlining a new, liberal party as a replacement for the traditional Communist model.

Sounding the reform theme in a keynote address, party chairman Rezső Nyers urged the 1,279 delegates to effectively terminate the 70-year-old party and replace it with one based on democratic values.

"The historic role of the Hungarian Socialist Workers Party has reached an end—here," said Nyers, using the formal name of the Communist Party.

"It is my belief that the new party cannot be Communist," said Nyers. "It is a party that must combine communism with socialist democratic beliefs, such as those of European leftist parties or the British Labor Party."

Nyers did not expand on this and other reformist told reporters the definition of "democratic socialism" still had to be debated by the congress.

Some people told of receiving help from Poles in their efforts to join the exodus.

Masked kidnappers seize 2 Swiss Red Cross workers

SIDON, Lebanon (AP) — Masked kidnappers pushed two Swiss Red Cross workers into a car Friday and sped into a Palestinian refugee camp outside this ancient port in south Lebanon, police reported.

A Palestinian guerrilla spokesman linked the abductions to a Lebanese Shiite Moslem hijacker imprisoned in Switzerland.

The victims were identified as Emmanuel Christen, 32, and Elio Erruiz, 23, citizens of Belgium, at an artificial limb center operated by the International Committee of the Red Cross in Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut.

None of Lebanon's armed factions claimed responsibility.

Eighteen Westerners, including eight Americans, are missing in Lebanon, most believed to be captives of Shiite Moslems loyal to Iran. Held longest is Terry A. Anderson, chief of Middle East correspondence for The Associated Press. He was kidnapped March 16, 1985.

Friday's abductions were the latest of several involving foreigners working for relief agencies in south Lebanon. Most are blamed on Fatah-Revolutionary Council, a Palestinian group led by terrorist Abu Nidal, who broke with PLO chairman Yasir Arafat in 1973.

Zaid Wehbeh, spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization, said the PLO would "spare no effort" to help rescue the victims.

Moein Shabaita, spokesman for Yasir Arafat's Fatah faction, the PLO's main guerrilla component, linked the kidnappings to a Lebanese Shiite Moslem hijacker, Mohammed Hariri.

Hariri was jailed for life in February for hijacking an Air France jetliner July 2, 1987, and killing a French passenger after the plane landed in Geneva.

Shabaita said the group that kidnapped Christen and Erruiz was the same that abducted Swiss Red Cross worker Peter Winkler last year, "apparently for the purpose of trying to win Hariri's release."

Pope begins trip to Asia

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II departed Friday on a 10-day pilgrimage to Asia that is expected to focus on human rights and Catholic-Moslem relations during his stops in South Korea and Indonesia.

The pope's special Atlanta Boeing 747 left Rome's Leonardo da Vinci airport and made a brief refueling stop in Venice to allow a news conference. His final arrival was expected late Friday, MDT.

In a sign of vastly improved Vatican-Soviet relations, the Kremlin approved a flight plan that will allow the pope to fly over the Soviet Union. China barred a papal overflight.

The Asian trip, the 44th foreign pilgrimage of John Paul's 11-year papacy, raises several politically sensitive topics for the pope.

In Seoul, the pope is scheduled to address a religious meeting that has taken up the issue of eventual reunification of North and South Korea.

His next stop is overwhelmingly Moslem Indonesia and a stop in East Timor, a heavily Catholic island annexed by Indonesia after its invasion of 1975.

John Paul will also make a two-day stop in the Indian Ocean island nation of Mauritius before returning to Rome Oct. 16.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

"Woman never use their intelligence - except when they need to prop up their intuition."
- Jacques Deval

It may have been intuition that propelled South to today's slam, but it took more than that to score 12 tricks. The hand was played at the North American Women's Bridge. Deal: Championships, declarer was Kerri Shuman of Los Angeles, a member of the winning team.

North's strong raise promised a singleton. Kerri's four-club bid asked where it was. After discovering it was in diamonds, Kerri checked on aces and bid the small slam.

West chose to lead diamonds (a heart lead would have made the slam easy), and Kerri saw she had her work cut out for her after winning the minimum in diamonds.

She won her diamond ace, led the trump queen, breathing easier after West covered and dummy's ace won. How to proceed?

Kerri seems natural to draw the trumps, hoping for a 2-2 split, and rely upon the heart finesse to land 11 winners. This finesse loses, and several declarers made only 11 tricks at game after choosing this line.

Kerri gave herself an extra chance. She led a low club from dummy at trick three, forcing East to win the queen. East shifted to a heart, but this finesse was now unnecessary. The ace won, trumps were drawn and the heart queen went on a high club. Two diamonds were ruffed in dummy and Kerri had her 12 tricks.
