Idaho figures in plan for new plutonium plants

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Energy Department is quietly reconsidering key parts of an $81-billion blueprint for modernizing the nuclear weapons complex, including plans to build new nuclear reactors in Idaho and South Carolina, officials said Friday.

Also being reviewed is a recommendation in the December 1988 blueprint that a new-generation plant to convert fuel-grade plutonium to weapon-grade material be built at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory near Idaho Falls, Idaho.

The Bush administration inherited the 20-year plan, known as the "2010 Report," from the Reagan administration, which had concluded that major changes were needed to reconfigure, modernize and clean up the decrepit weapons complex, which includes 17 major arms factories and laboratories in 12 states.

The plants are run by private companies under Energy Department contracts.

Energy Secretary James D. Watkins told Congress several times shortly after taking office last March that he supported building two new reactors, at an estimated cost of $6.6 billion, and for the plutonium plant, expected to cost $2 billion.

The reactors would replace existing ones at the Savannah River weapons plant near Aiken, S.C., which are 35 years old and have been shut down for more than a year for safety improvements. The reactors produce tritium, a radioactive gas needed to make warheads, but are nearing the end of their useful life.

The plutonium plant envisioned for Idaho is said to be needed to ensure a long-term supply of the material, which Watkins admits is in relative abundance now.

Both projects have been put in doubt by growing opposition on Capitol Hill, fueled in part by continuing disclosures of safety and environmental problems throughout the weapons complex. Congress last summer refused the administration's request for money to begin construction of the plutonium plant, known as the Special Isotope Separation plant, in the current fiscal year.

Watkins has said little publicly about the 2010 Report, but in an internal memorandum dated Sept. 29 he made clear his doubts about the validity of its some of its recommendations and the basic assumptions used to develop the report.

"They did not adequately address some of the serious problems that have since been identified particularly with respect to environmental and waste management issues," Watkins wrote. A copy of the memo was made available to The Associated Press.

"Based on my review of these results, I am not satisfied that the assumptions upon which the study was based are valid when reviewed by today's standards," he said, adding that he was ordering "a hard relook at this discussion."

Watkins did not spell out exactly what parts of the 2010 report he did not like. He said he had created a special review committee, comprised of senior department officials and representatives of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the National Security Council, to make recommendations to him on a new modernization plan.

Harrison Elementary School teacher Peggy Boesel, right, takes old newspapers from students Marcie and Linda Pomesao as the school began collecting recyclables as part of a state-wide program. Schools in the drive can earn playground, audio-visual, and computer equipment while individual students are awarded with food and drink coupons from McDonald's and t-shirts from Pepsi distributors. A 1980 Subaru Justy will go to the student who collects the most pounds of aluminum cans, newspapers, cardboard and household container glass. Last year, about 1.2 million pounds of recyclable items were collected by Idaho school children.

Officers answer alarm; shot hits deputy in leg

By ANITA DENNIS Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A state police officer apparently shot a Twin Falls County sheriff's deputy in the leg Friday morning after they both responded to a burglar alarm, according to the county prosecutor's office.

A state police official described the shooting as "purely accidental," and Deputy William E. McDaniel was said to be "resting comfortably" at a local hospital.

Authorities have not identified the Idaho State Police officer involved.

According to a press release from County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter:

McDaniel responded to a burglar alarm at Gem Equipment at 2670 Kimberly Road at 2 a.m.

McDaniel noticed a state police officer already at the scene and went to the other side of the building to check for intruders. The state officer, whose name is being withheld, was apparently unaware of McDaniel's presence.

The two officers approached the northwest corner of the building from different directions at the same time. When they met, a shot was fired downward, hitting McDaniel's left calf.

"The preliminary indications are that the shot was fired from the state police officer's gun," Baxter said.

McDaniel was taken to the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, where he was "awake, alert and resting comfortably," the press release said.

The hospital would not comment on McDaniel's condition Friday, but the press release said he was expected to be discharged within a few days.

The state police officer was not injured, Baxter said.

Energy costs push wholesale prices up sharply in September

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A sharp rise in energy costs helped trigger a rebound in wholesale prices in September, wiping out three rare monthly declines this summer, the government said Friday.

The 0.9 percent increase in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index, measuring inflation one step short of the retail level, represented a return to the high inflation rates experienced in the first five months of the year.

Analysts were not unduly concerned, however. They noted that nearly all of the gain in the index can be attributed to two special factors: an "unusually large and probably one-time rise" in oil costs and a shift in seasonal patterns that made a modest drop in auto prices look like a large increase.

"If you take out the seasonal for autos and the energy blip, which I think is just a rebound from (declines) we had this summer, it suggests inflation's just not that bad," said economist John Silvia of Kemper Financial Services Inc.

Nevertheless, stock prices fell in early trading after the data was interpreted as an indication the Federal Reserve Board will not lower interest rates soon.

"These figures are appropriate for Friday the 13th and seem destined to strike terror into the hearts of financial markets," said economist Gordon Richards of the National Association of Manufacturers.

The market also was initially reacting to a Commerce Department report showing a stronger-than-expected 0.5 percent increase in retail sales last month, the seventh consecutive rise.

Later in the day, the market fell sharply on the news that a labor-management group that preceded Black Monday on Oct. 19, 1987.

But many Wall Streeters insisted it was far too soon to declare that another collapse was in the making.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials plunged 190.58 points, or 6.91 percent, to 2,569.26. That marked its second biggest point drop ever, exceeded only by the 308-point loss recorded on Black Monday.

On Monday of this week the average stood at a record closing high of 2,791.41.

The market had been retreating steadily but gradually for most of Friday's session until the group planning to buy UAL said it had been unable to get enough bank financing for the transaction it had planned.

That quickly cast a pall over shares of UAL, parent of United Airlines. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down about 190 points, the steepest drop since the 1987 crash.

In a balancing act, the central bank is trying to keep interest rates high enough to control inflationary pressures but low enough to avoid a recession. The gain in retail sales indicated some buoyancy in the economy, despite traders' hope for Fed easing. Those hopes had been kindled last week by a Labor Department report showing manufacturers lost 103,000 jobs in September.

The Business Council, composed of 100 top business leaders gathering for a conference in the resort town of Hot Springs, Va., predicted Friday that the economy will continue to soften in 1990 and may even topple into a recession unless the Fed cuts interest rates.

The climb last month in wholesale prices wiped out consecutive declines of 0.4 percent in August and July and 0.1 percent in June. That brought the annual wholesale inflation rate for the first nine months of the year to 5.1 percent, compared with 4.0 percent in all of 1988.

Merger fails, selloff rocks Wall Street

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The biggest selloff since the crash of 1987 rocked the stock market Friday, driving prices into a free-fall decline following news that a big buyout deal for UAL Corp. had fallen through.

The sudden slide came almost exactly two years after a similar Friday-afternoon

Merger of UAL and Pan Am failed, leading to a massive selloff of UAL stock.

On Monday of this week the average stood at a record closing high of 2,791.41.

Packer verdict: Murder, butchery certain

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Gold prospector Alfred Packer was guilty of murder and at his victims' too, an expert concluded in a Friday the 13th report on the most celebrated instance of cannibalism in American history.

"Packer was as guilty as sin and his sins were all mortal ones," said James E. Stars, a professor of law and forensic science who led a summer expedition of archeology, anthropology, pathology and firearms experts to Lake City, Colo., to unearth the scattered remains of Packer's five fellow prospectors.

They studied the bones for 30 days.

His purpose, Stars said at a news conference, was to show how much can be learned through forensic science, a field he says is underutilized in criminal investigations.

But he also did it, he said, because "I am an iconoclast and this was a great icon to cast."

Over the years, Packer became an icon of folk history.

At an annual feast of bad taste at the University of Colorado in Boulder, he is toasted. His bust has been displayed in the state capitol. In 1901, a lively newspaper campaign led authorities to parole him 15 years after he was sentenced to 40 years in prison.

Spreading the Packer legend has been a remark attributed to Judge Melville Gerry upon sentencing Packer:

"They was sivin Dimmickers in Hinsdale County, and ye eat five of them ...!"

Stars said his scientific slaying established that Gerry never said it, that the quotation was made up by a bandwaggoner.

Packer, a Union Army veteran, was convicted of murder in 1883 and of five charges of manslaughter three years later when the first conviction was overturned on a technicality.

— He was accused of killing his fellow prospectors in 1874 and then staying alive by eating their flesh while stranded in the snow during a murderous winter in the Colorado Rockies.

His story was that one of the gold seekers, hunger-crazed Shannon Wilson Bell, came at him with a hatchet when he returned empty handed from a five-day sortie in search of wildlife.

Now it's Elvis in Leningrad

MOSCOW — Only days after reports that knobhead giants from space invaded a Russian town, Elvis has been spotted in Leningrad.

The official news agency Tass, which gave the world the alien invasion of Voronezh, made a bold assessment Friday of the American star's popularity in the Soviet Union.

Bush repeats call for Noriega ouster, 'wouldn't mind force'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush issued a new call Friday for the overthrow of Panamanian ruler Manuel Antonio Noriega. Bush said he would use force if it could be done in a prudent manner. But he emphasized he was not offering a blanket commitment of American troops.

Ten days after an uprising against the Panamanian general was crushed, Bush vigorously defended his handling of the situation, rejecting criticism from Democrats and Republicans alike over his refusal to provide U.S. military assistance. He seemed particularly disturbed by charges that he abandoned the rebels, leaving them on their own after publicly exhorting the Panamanian military to oust Noriega. Bush said that was "a stupid argument that some very erudite people make."

At a hurriedly called news conference, Bush also addressed politically charged issues in Congress. He said:

• He opposes federal funding of abortions for poor women who are victims of rape and incest but holds out hopes for a congressional compromise that would "avoid a veto on my part." He said he would see if there is room for flexibility when Senate and House negotiators work out a compromise version of a bill that now would allow such federal payments.

• He will permit a bill outlawing flag burning to become law without his signature. "I don't think it's appropriate," Bush said, renewing his call for a constitutional amendment along the same lines but adding that he would not veto the legislation in the meantime. • He still wants Congress to approve his plan for a cut in the capital gains tax, and he did not rule out the possibility of signing legislation that committed the proposal with a Democratic version liberalizing individual retirement accounts. A few hours later, Senate leaders agreed on a plan to strip hundreds of special-interest provisions from a $14.1-billion deficit-reduction bill, leaving the capital gains fight for the future.

Asked about attempts in Congress to repeal catastrophic health care legislation for the elderly, Bush made clear he was staying away from that controversial topic, preferring instead to let the congressional process flush this out. "As for a possible future coup against Noriega, Bush said, "I hope I would never be reckless enough as a commander-in-chief to make a blanket commitment to use of force without knowing the facts regarding some coup attempt."

On the other hand, the president said, "I wouldn't mind using force if it could be done in a prudent manner. So, in other words, I'm not ruling out the use of force for all time." Bush said, "I am not going to give carte blanche support to an operation, particularly when they don't ask for this support. And I have to reserve that right. I have at stake the lives of American kids and I am not going to easily thrust them into a battle unless I feel comfortable with it and unless those general officers in whom I have total confidence feel comfortable."

He rejected the idea of Noriega giving up power in return for dismissal of drug charges.

Bush will accept flag legislation but not sign, wants amendment

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush said Friday he will sign a bill to outlaw flag burning even though he will continue trying to amend the Constitution as a stronger way to accomplish the same end.

"I don't think it's enough," Bush said of the legislation. He said he will allow the newly passed bill to become law automatically without his signature, but added he does not think the law will withstand legal challenges.

"I'm withholding that signature to signal our belief that a constitutional amendment is the best way to provide lasting protection for the flag," Bush told reporters at a brief White House news conference.

A firestorm of controversy regarding the U.S. flag arose after the Supreme Court overturned a Texas conviction last June, ruling that protesters could legally burn the flag under constitutional free-speech guarantees.

Bush proposed a new constitutional amendment against flag desecration, but Congress chose to deal with the matter through legislation rather than changing the

'I'm withholding that signature to signal our belief that a constitutional amendment is the best way to provide lasting protection for the flag.'

—President Bush

Constitution. The legislation approved by the House and Senate put the president in a politically prickly position. In vetoing it, he might have risked being seen as throwing out a promise he had made just for the chance to push Congress on a constitutional amendment that would be harder to get approved.

He also found himself in a situation similar to his Democratic presidential opponent from last year, Michael Dukakis, who vetoed flag legislation on grounds it was unconstitutional. The Massachusetts governor was scathingly criticized by Bush for rejecting the legislation which would have required public schools teachers in the state to lead pupils in daily recitations of the Pledge of Allegiance.

Legislation "becomes" law automatically if the president does not act on it within 10 working days of when Congress sends it to the White House, unless Congress is in recess. Then a president can pocket-veto bills by refusing to sign them.

Bush said his decision to let it become law was not politically motivated. "I don't want to set the clock way back and rule out the legislation, even though I don't think it's enough," he said.

Bush repeated his contention that the new federal legislation will not survive court challenges. "I can understand the rationale of those who voted for this legislation, but in my view, it is not the ultimate answer," he said.

He called the flag "a unique and special symbol of our nation and it should be protected from desecration."

President Bush speaks during a news briefing at the White House Friday morning.

Bush seeking alternative to avoid vetoing abortion legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush sought "room for flexibility" Friday to avoid vetoing a bill that allows medical abortions, but both sides of the politically explosive issue offered little hope for compromise.

"I'm not looking for any conflict over this," Bush said at a news conference. "I am not going to change my position any. But let's see how those negotiations come out."

White House officials met with Capitol Hill Republicans in an attempt to find a way out for the president, a top GOP congressional aide said.

But with abortion-rights forces claiming the political momentum was on their side, anti-abortion leaders turned up the heat on the president by demanding a veto of the measure permitting federally financed abortions for poor women in cases of rape or incest.

"The movement will expect a presidential veto, and if he doesn't veto it, they're going to have a real problem on their hands," said Gary Bauer, president of the Family Research Council and a former domestic policy adviser in the Reagan White House.

"This is a time of testing for the White House," Bauer said. "People will be watching quite carefully to see if the White House lessens its commitment to the abortion issue, and if there is any sign it is shifting, there will be an incredible political firestorm for the Republicans."

Neither side in Congress publicly offered a compromise. Democrats acknowledged they didn't have the votes to override a veto.

"Bush said he had not wavered in his opposition to a provision passed by the House on Wednesday and signed by the Senate that would fund a decade-long ban on federally funded abortions for poor women who are victims of rape or incest.

But he stopped short of repeating his veto threat, saying there was "negotiation and discussion" under way that could lead to a compromise that would avert a veto.

Abortion-rights forces contend that public opinion polls show increasing numbers of voters support broader abortion rights, and that a Bush veto would be politically costly for the president and lawmakers who voted with him.

Asked if he was leaving open the possibility he would not veto the measure, Bush said, "Well, because I'm told ... that the conference language may be able to avoid a veto on my part."

"We'll see what we can do in terms of the conference committee, to see if there is room for flexibility," Bush said.

The legislation is part of a broader fiscal 1990 spending bill for the departments of labor and health and human services. The measure was sent back to the Senate for agreement on a separate provision, but the House language on abortion was identical to that already approved by the Senate.

It would expand current law that permits Medicaid abortions only in cases where the life of the mother is endangered. The new provision would still prevent Medicaid funding of abortions in most cases, but would allow it in cases of rape and incest if the victim "promptly reported it.

Although Bush referred to possible changes in "conference language," the bill has already been reported by House and Senate conferees and goes back to the Senate, which could send it directly to Bush.

Most House members had already returned to their districts, as the House held only a pro-forma session Friday.

"There's nothing on the table — there's no table," said Ron Fitzsimmons, legislative aide to Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore.

Airlines PAC gave thanks to members of House panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Airlines-Political Action Committee has contributed more than $19,000 this year to the campaigns of 21 members of a House committee expected to vote Monday on legislation to forestall Donald Trump's proposed $7.5 billion takeover of the carrier.

Federal Election Commission records for the first six months of 1989 show that the PAC that represents American Airlines has given money to the campaigns of nearly two-thirds of the 34 members of the House aviation subcommittee.

Chairman James L. Oberstar, D-Minn., has received $5,000 and the panel's ranking Republican, Rep. William F. Chagny Jr. of Pennsylvania, has received $350.

The two, along with Rep. Glenn Anderson, D-Calif., chairman of the Public Works and Transportation committee, ranking Republican John P. Hanen, chairman of Arkansas, and Rep. Peter A. DeFazio, D-Ore., are sponsors of airline takeover legislation moving quickly through the House that would benefit American.

Anderson, Hammerschmidt and DeFazio have also received American Airlines PAC contributions this year.

Democratic Rep. Pete Geren of Texas, recently elected to fill the seat vacated by House Speaker Jim Wright, is seeking an assignment to the panel. He has received $10,000. Five members of the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee have also received $8,000 this year from the PAC. The panel has already approved legislation similar to the measure in the House subcommittee. A PAC is funded by voluntary contributions from company officers.

Businessmen say 1990 recession possible

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Economic growth in 1990 will slump to its slowest pace in eight years with an outright recession a distinct threat unless the Federal Reserve lowers interest rates, the nation's top business executives forecast Friday.

The forecast, prepared by a panel of the chief executives of 100 of the country's largest corporations, said that the economy began to lose steam this summer. They predicted that the sluggish period will last through much of next year.

The forecast said, however, that a timely assist from the Fed could make the slowdown the "pause that refreshes" and lead to a rebound in growth in 1991. That would give the country an unprecedented nine consecutive years without a recession.

The study, prepared by a panel of top corporate economists, predicted that the overall economy, as measured by the gross national product, will expand at a 2.9 percent rate this year, identical to the Bush administration's forecast.

For 1990, however, the Business Council said growth will slump to an anemic 1.8 percent annual rate, the slowest pace since the recession year of 1982.

"This prediction is significantly below the administration's outlook for growth of 2.3 percent next year and would represent a blow to Republican hopes for reasonably robust growth to boost their chances in the 1990 congressional races."

"There are a variety of potential weaknesses in the economy that carry the risk of a recession," said Lewis T. Preston, chairman of J.P. Morgan Inc., the large New York bank. "I urge the Fed. I would be inclined to lean in the direction of an easier policy. My sense is that we will need a fair amount of insurance against trouble."

The administration has also been pushing the central bank to lower interest rates as a way of making American exports more competitive overseas. Lower interest rates in this country make dollar-denominated investments less attractive to foreigners, and thus lower the value of the dollar.

However, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan has given no indication that the Fed is going to loosen credit anytime soon and in fact the Fed is still sending signals that it is worried about inflationary pressures.

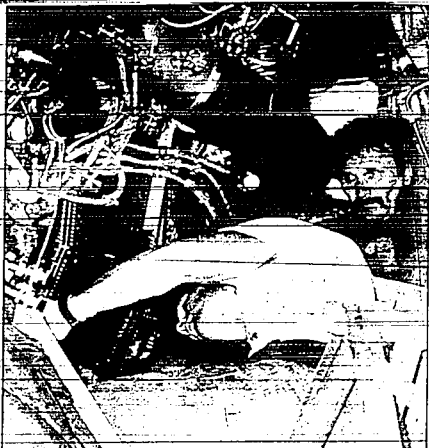

The government reported Friday that inflation at the wholesale level shot up 0.9 percent in September.

"Many of the business executives, however, dismissed the inflation report as a temporary blip that did nothing to change their view that recession and not inflation was the bigger threat facing the economy at the present time."

James D. Robinson III, the chairman of American Express Co., said that the Fed has done a good job in holding inflation in check following a spurt in prices earlier this year "but now is the time to bring interest rates down."

The business executives forecast that inflation will show further moderation with the consumer price index rising at annual rates of 4.5 percent or less over the next two years. The business chiefs were also optimistic that U.S. exports will remain strong over the next two years, helping to drive the merchandise trade deficit down to $100 billion next year. The growth in exports was based on a belief that "strong growth in Europe" and Japan will spur continued demand for U.S. goods even with the rise in the value of the dollar this year.

The forecast was released on the opening day of the Business Council's fall meeting.

HUD aide used office to help Red Cross

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former top aide at the Department of Housing and Urban Development used her office to raise money for a charity and targeted her appeal to consultants who did business with the agency, documents in her files show.

Deborah Gore Dean's files show that when she sought donations for a Red Cross event in 1984 she listed her HUD telephone number on her letters and asked that recipients be phoned in to her secretary.

A HUD attorney who discussed the issue Friday on the condition of anonymity said Dean's action appeared to violate agency standards prohibiting the use of an office for private gain as well as rules against the misuse of government workers. One of Dean's lawyers, however, disputed those assertions.

"There is absolutely no evidence that Deborah Dean gained anything from her service on behalf of a nationally-recognized charity," attorney James Watt said.

"I am certainly unaware of any regulation that makes the use of a secretary's time unlawful and of the files reflect that (the secretary) spent an immaterial amount of her time on behalf of this charitable organization."

The fund-raising letters for a New Year's Eve ball were sent to a number of developers and consultants who did HUD-related work, including former agency officials Joseph Strauss and R. Carter Sanders, former Interior Secretary — James Watt — and Washington attorney David Barrett, whose law pariters include at least two former HUD officials. Also solicited was Edward Wiedert, chief adviser to the 1990 Reagan-Bush campaign who is a partner in several HUD developments.

Copies of the letters in Dean's files show that while she listed her home address on the letters and used blank stationery she gave her HUD phone number and said those wishing to attend should contact Sherill Nettles, her secretary.

Dean was a member of Young Friends of Red Cross, which sponsored the ball.

Her files were released recently under the Freedom of Information Act. Her efforts on behalf of the Red Cross were first reported Thursday by The Boston Herald.

Dean, who has refused to testify before a congressional inquiry, is a spokeswoman in the investigation of allegations of influence peddling, fraud and mismanagement at HUD during the Reagan administration and the tenure of her boss, former HUD Secretary Samuel Pierce. He, too, has refused to testify, as has Dean's predecessor as Pierce's executive assistant, Lance Wilson.

Dean is the second former HUD official whose charity work has been questioned. Thomas Demery was also criticized in a HUD audit.

Faulty space shuttle computer replaced

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Technicians replaced a defective computer in space shuttle Atlantis on Friday as they worked toward a Tuesday launch to deploy the Jupiter-bound Galileo probe.

Testing of the new $6 million unit began immediately and was to be completed Saturday.

"All the work is going well at the launch pad," said NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone. "We can launch on Tuesday if the testing goes without a hitch."

Shuttle managers planned to meet at noon Saturday to assess test results and "decide" when the interrupted countdown should be resumed.

About 3.7 million families receive AFDC, the nation's largest cash assistance program costing about $8.5 billion a year. HHS estimates that up to 138,000 families will be able to leave the welfare rolls over the first five years of the JOBS program.

ound computer began soon after the countdown was halted Tuesday because the device gave a false pressure reading. Launch had been set for Thursday.

The tedious work involved removing engine heat shields, creating access platforms and unhooking about two dozen connections between the computer and the shuttle. Because of limited space in the engine compartment only six people could work there at a time.

A federal judge on Tuesday rejected a request by environmental groups to halt the flight for fear the nuclear-powered Galileo probe could scatter plutonium over Florida if the shuttle exploded.

The groups filed notice with the judge Thursday that they were going to appeal his ruling to the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Liftoff on Tuesday was scheduled for 12:57 p.m., a time in which Jupiter will be in the right position.

Rules issued for federal job training and work programs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government Friday issued rules states must follow in setting up required education, job training and work programs to help welfare recipients become self-sufficient.

The rules implement the Job Opportunities and Basic Skills Training program, a $3.7 billion, five-year initiative, passed by Congress last year. It was the first major welfare overhaul in more than half a century.

"This final rule recognizes that parents must work toward self-sufficiency and government must support their efforts," said Eunice Thomas, acting assistant secretary of the Family Support Administration at the Department of Health and Human Services.

All states must have a JOBS program approved by the federal government no later than Oct. 1, 1990.

Twenty-five states that have begun their programs must have them re-approved to assure they comply, said David Siegel, a Family Support Administration spokesman.

"States, whose program funding will be matched by the federal government, initially will have to bring 7 percent of their caseload in Aid to Families with Dependent Children programs under the new plan, and by 1994 will be required to have 20 percent in the program.

About 3.7 million families receive AFDC, the nation's largest cash assistance program costing about $8.5 billion a year. HHS estimates that up to 138,000 families will be able to leave the welfare rolls over the first five years of the JOBS program.

Army lets greyhounds go rather than break their legs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Nineteen greyhounds were released by an Army hospital ordered to halt research that would have involved breaking the dogs' hind legs.

Leterman General Hospital agreed to release the dogs Thursday after an animal rights group won the court order.

The order also forces the Army to confine whether the former owners of the dogs had knowingly given them up for research. The dogs were released to the Marin Humane Society and will be reunited with former owners or offered for adoption.

The hospital acquired the dogs for $300 each from a middleman and had intended to use them in research on healing broken bones because greyhounds are a docile, stoic breed that can endure pain without turning

MURDERS IN MIAMI

A native Floridian says the homicide rate around Miami was almost twice as high in 1925 and 1926 after the great Florida land bust — hard to imagine, what? — as it has been in recent years.

Civil rights leaders angered over portrait of King in new book

Rev. McKinley Young, left, and Jesse Hill, chairman of the Martin Luther King Jr. Center board of directors.

ATLANTA (AP) — Civil rights leaders such as Jesse Jackson and Andrew Young are demanding the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy repudiate a portrait of Martin Luther King Jr.'s sexual exploits in his final hours, a spokesman said Thursday.

Abernathy's autobiography, "And The Walls Came Tumbling Down," says King spent parts of the night before he was shot with two women and physically fought with a third.

The leaders said they objected to the controversial passages in the book, published this month, and doubt that Abernathy wrote them.

Jesse Hill, chairman of the board of the King Center in Atlanta, said Thursday that a number of civil rights leaders, including Jackson, Young, NAACP chief Benjamin Hooks and Southern Christian Leadership Conference chief Joseph Lowery, sent Abernathy a telegram Sunday calling on him to "repudiate" his writing.

"We take particular exception to your personal reconstruction of Martin's last hours on this earth," said the telegram, read to reporters by Hill at a news conference in front of the King Center.

The group went on to conclude that "the Memphis section" of Abernathy's book was so out of character with Abernathy's life and previous statements that it must have been "put into your mouth by others who need a sensational story to response" from Abernathy, an Atlanta minister who has been out of town this week promoting the book.

Abernathy told reporters Wednesday in Memphis where King was killed down April 4, 1968: "It is most unfortunate that a small group of people — a small group of people — are trying to make it of evil intent on my part. I loved Martin Luther King more than I loved myself — and I do not intend to injure him."

Interviewed Thursday night on ABC's Primetime Live, Abernathy appeared to soften the references to sex in the book, saying he did not know what King did behind closed doors.

Asked to detail what occurred on the night before King was killed by an assassin's bullet, Abernathy said the two men did not have dinner as other biographers reported.

Instead, he said, the men visited a house, where Abernathy fell asleep on a sofa.

"I had awakened and I saw Dr. King coming from a room. I didn't say what he had done in that room," Abernathy said, adding that he had no way of knowing what could have occurred.

King "believed in the biblical prohibition against sex outside of marriage," Abernathy wrote. "It was just that he had a particularly difficult time with that temptation."

He said all "short of the mark." Sexual sins are by no means the worst. Hatred and a cold disregard for others are the besetting sins of our time."

The book's allegations are in line with reports that King had extramarital affairs.

Hill said the group which sent Abernathy the telegram included Jackson, a two-time Democratic presidential hopeful; Young, now mayor of Atlanta; Hooks, head of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Lowery, head of the King-founded SCLC; U.S. Rep. John Lewis, D-Atlanta; and comedian and activist Dick Gregory. None of those attended Thursday's news conferences.

King Center officials said King's widow, Coretta Scott King, president of the center, would have no statement other than what came from Hill.

John Hurst Adams, an A.M.E. Church pastor, said civil rights leaders were in contact with Young, Jackson, Hooks and former King aide Bernard Lee, all of whom were in Memphis with King on his final days.

All have "sharply different recollections of the events of those days," Adams said.

Jackson issued a statement Thursday saying that the character of King's work would stand "when all the dust clears."

"Dr. King cannot speak for himself," the statement said. "Those of us who appreciate Dr. King's work will stand with him through every challenge."

Hooks, in a statement released from NAACP headquarters in Baltimore, said he had read the book and was "deeply saddened and distressed" that Abernathy "would succumb to the temptation to 'desecrate' King's memory."

"It is possible that this unfortunate episode was brought on by the two men who were contacted by Dr. Abernathy in recent years," Hooks' statement said, "or by the toll the more than 35 years of struggle, beatings and physical abuse has taken on Dr. King's dearest friend."

Lewis also issued a statement on the matter, saying he was "surprised, disappointed and hurt" by Abernathy's revelations.

"I was hurt that someone so close to Dr. King and so critical to our struggle for civil rights would attempt to discredit Dr. King and our movement in this way."

"The book, which devotes only a relatively small part to King's alleged extramarital affairs, said he spent part of his last night with two women, and that that morning had an argument with a third and "knewed her across the bed."

None of the women was named but one was described as a black woman who was a member of the Kentucky Legislature.

The Kentucky Legislature had two black women members in 1968: Sen. Georgia Powers and Rep. Mae Street Kidd. Democrats from Louisville, both have since left the legislature. Powers participated in civil rights demonstrations with King and had a

Creator of 'Bullwinkle' cartoons dies at age 69

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cartoon creator Jay Ward, whose Rocky the Flying Squirrel and Bullwinkle Moose brought hip humor and sophisticated satire to television cartoons, died Thursday of kidney cancer, he was 69.

Ward died at home with his wife, Ramona, and three children present, said Ward's longtime publicist and friend Howard Brandy.

With his partner Bill Scott, who died four years ago, he created a world of memorable cartoon characters whose adventures delighted children without condescending to them and kept adults amused with witty wordplay.

The quirky philologist Ward and Scott created in the 1950s the plucky Rocky J. Squirrel and sidekick Bullwinkle Moose; bumbling spies Boris Badenov and Natasha Fatale; smarmy Dudley Doornight of the Mounties and overacting villain Smedley Whitetooth; Warlock Machine-inventor-(and-dog)-Mr. Peabody, and his boy, Sherman.

The characters were savvy, dumd, well-meaning, brave, flawed, and uttered atrocious puns as they helped or hindered each other through weekly situations in a series of cartoon shows by Ward and Scott.

Their first effort was "Rocky and His Friends" for ABC, which ran from 1959 through 1961. Rocky and Bullwinkle's adventures, continually narrated by William Conrad, gleefully spoofed cliffhanging serials.

From 1961 to 1962, Ward and Scott produced for NBC "The Bullwinkle Show," believed to be the first prime-time cartoon segment for network television. The show ran until 1964, and its last network appearance, in reruns, was in 1982.

The show featured "Fractured Fairy Tales," "Peabody's Improbable History," "Acrop and son," and "Adventures of Dudley Doornight," which eventually became its own series.

A Berkeley native, Ward went to the University of California as an undergraduate student, then attended Harvard Business School for a Master's Degree.

He returned to his hometown and opened a real estate office, but on the first day of business a truck lost its brakes, rolled down a hill and into his office. He was pinned to a wall and both his legs were broken.

"Anybody who is in real estate in California and can't run, better get out of the business," Brandy said.

Ward joked with friends while he was recovering.

During that period Ward and friend Alex Anderson invented the character of Crusader Rabbit, and decided to produce it for television.

"They were so intorated that the first show they shot was done upside down (on the film)," said Brandy.

"Crusader Rabbit," the first cartoon show developed expressly for television, had "Ward's trademark puns and word play and was a hit after its introduction in 1949.

After Anderson left the cartoon business for advertising, Ward teamed with Scott, to create the first "Rocky and His Friends."

Among the writers and creators who worked with the production company during the early-1960s were film director Paul Mazursky and Allen Burns, later the Emmy-winning co-producer of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," said Brandy.

Ward and his associates also produced the Cap'n Crunch breakfast cereal commercials. His last cartoon series, "George of the Jungle," ran from 1967 to 1970.

"He saw humor in everything and had one of those contagious laughs, a wonderful rolling laugh that had everyone laughing around him," said Ward's daughter, Tiffany Fabregas, 42, who said her father loved impulsive wit.

"He got the name Bullwinkle from a car dealership," she said. "He just drove by a dealership in Berkeley and said, 'That's it. That's the name.'"

"It felt very good about the shows he created, and that even 30 years later people were watching them," she said.

Ward always picked the clips for the numerous film festivals he was invited to, his daughter said.

Noisy party turns to fight with police at UW-Oshkosh

OSHKOSH, Wis. (AP) — A raucous party near the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh turned into a melee when police arrived to break it up, with students breaking windows and damaging cars, officials said Friday.

Seventeen people were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct, resisting arrest, unlawful assembly and disturbing the peace, said Sgt. Ron Eichman.

Some 60 police officers, university police and the Winnebago County Sheriff's Department and the State Patrol were called to quell the disturbance Thursday night and early today, Eichman said.

"Let's call it what it is, a disturbance," Eichman said, adding he did not consider it a riot.

An estimated 500 to 600 students gathered after officers arrived shortly after 10 p.m. Thursday to check on a loud party across the street from the university campus, Eichman said.

Some students began marching down the street toward the downtown, breaking car and business windows, damaging street signs and shoving garbage, he said.

Some officers sustained minor injuries when they were struck by debris, he said.

"Two people were arrested for disturbing the peace at the party, but we didn't get any further because it mushroomed into something a little bigger," he said.

South Korean students hold anti-U.S. rallies, fight with police Korean students are restrained by police Friday morning. Six students stormed the U.S. ambassador's residence.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Radical students held anti-American rallies and fought police in three cities Friday after demonstrators rampaged through the U.S. ambassador's residence at dawn.

Ambassador Donald Gregg and his wife escaped through a side door minutes after six invaders with homemade bombs, tear gas grenades and steel pipes stormed the residence and began smashing artworks, lamps and pottery.

Police used tear gas to overpower the students, described by officials as an "anti-U.S. death squad." They shouted "Drive out the Yankees!" while being dragged away.

They protested U.S. pressure on South Korea to lower trade barriers and demanded that President Roh Tae-woo cancel a visit to Washington scheduled for next week.

About 2,000 radical students protested or fought police later Friday on at least 11 campuses in Seoul, Incheon and Kwangju. Police reported two dozen arrests.

Hundreds of protesters at Konkuk, Sorang and Kyunghee Universities in Seoul hurled rocks and firebombs at riot police, who responded with tear gas. The students burned American flags and effigies of Roh and President Bush. Gregg and his wife, Mgg, were sleeping when the students stormed the house. The ambassador said he did not see the students but could hear them on the other side of the locked bedroom door.

"I never saw any of them," Gregg told a news conference. "We heard shouting in Korean. I don't know what they were shouting."

He said the living room, where the damage was done, is 50 to 60 feet from the bedroom.

Gregg said the attack would not affect U.S.-Korean relations. "This is the act of six people who broke into our home and I don't put a larger significance on it than that," he said.

South Korea's governing Democratic Justice Party called the rampage a "senseless riot" and leading opposition parties denounced it.

U.S. Embassy officials said there had been a security problem at the residence, but would not elaborate.

They said they security procedures would be reviewed. Security for the residences is handled by a private firm under contract and U.S. Marines are not posted there, the officials said. In Washington, Rep. Stephen

Solarz, D-N.Y., who heads the House subcommittee on Asian and Pacific affairs, said "Incidents of this type represent misguided actions of only a small minority."

Gregg, the former CIA station chief in Seoul, became ambassador last month and radical students have been protesting since. They claim he was sent to South Korea to impose military rule.

Police officials, who would not let their names be used, said the students used homemade bombs to distract police, then scaled the wall of the residence compound and hurled tear gas grenades at security guards who tried to stop them.

Once inside, the raiders blocked the main door with chairs and sprayed the floor with paint thinner, threatening to ignite it if police attacked and threw more of the homemade bombs at police, the officials said.

U.S. diplomats described the devices as "firecracker-like noise bombs," used in other attacks on U.S. diplomatic and military facilities, which make a loud bang but cause little damage.

The REAL News Anchors

Cronkite, Brinkley, Brokaw, Rather, Jennings.

Just hearing these names brings to mind the image of the TV news anchor ... looking into a camera in the network studio ... each night reading and showing us the top news stories of the day.

Informative, yes. Important, yes. But no matter how valuable the role of the TV news anchor is - when you really think about it - the real news anchors are the boys and girls, men and women, who deliver the The Times-News to your home each and every day. These are the dedicated and dependable individuals we truly rely on to bring us the local, national, and global news daily.

Today on International Newspaper Carrier Day 1989, we stop and pay tribute to the more than one-half million newspaper carriers in the United States and Canada. Join us as we say "THANKS" TO THESE REAL NEWS ANCHORS FOR A VERY IMPORTANT JOB WELL DONE!

p.m. Thursday and Friday and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday at the church at 109 Fifth St. in Filer. The sale will include such items as doll furniture from Haiti, picture hangers from Bangladesh, baskets from the Philippines, handbags and purses from India and many other items from other areas.

SHELFPIL Crafts sells functional and decorative items that have been made by needy producers who need jobs and money for food, medicine, school books and other essentials. The other half covers the cost of packing, ocean freight, customs duty, warehousing and shipping costs in the United States. SHELFPIL Crafts are sold at MCC-related shops, Mennonite Relief Sales and locally organized community events like the International Crafts Sale. This sale is not a production sale. All proceeds are donated to MCC.

For more information, call Terry at 326-5150 or Carolyn at 733-0322.

Superintendent of the Methodist Church will be the guest speaker at the morning worship service at 9 a.m. and at the Church Conference at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in Richfield.

Church news

RUPERT — Father Kate King, a former Episcopal vicar of the Rupert and Burley congregations, has announced his retirement from the ministry effective Oct. 1.

Father King was ordained in 1957 in Wheatland, Wyo., where he served the Episcopal mission field of Wheatland-Gleno-Hartville. In 1957 he became canon of St. Michael's Cathedral in Boise, Idaho, where he served for two years. He was then appointed to Trinity Memorial Church in Rupert and a year later was appointed to St. James' Church in Burley as well. St. Mary's Church in Emmet called him as rector in 1963, where he served for nine years. During this time, Father King and his family (wife, Amory and two children, Lacey and Christopher) took a mini-sabbatical to work with the first Black rector of the Diocese of Bloomington, Orange Free State, South Africa, for three months. In 1972 the new Bishop of Liberia, West Africa, called him to serve as the canon pastor of the Holy Trinity Cathedral in Monrovia, a totally Black congregation. After the newly-organized Diocese of the cathedra was installed, the Kings moved to Glasgow, Mont., where he was rector of St. Matthew's in Glasgow. St. Mary's in Malta, and vicar of All Saints' in Seobey for six years. In 1979, he returned to Idaho as he was appointed vicar of St. Agnes' Church in Sandpoint and St. Mary's Church in Bonners Ferry, where he served for five years. Father King was called back to Wyoming to serve his last five years in the active priesthood at All Saints' in Wheatland and the Church of our Saviour in Hartsville, where he had begun his ministry.

Father King and Amory King moved to their retirement home at PO Box 8, Lowgap, NC 27024, on Oct. 1.

TWIN FALLS — The public is invited to attend a concert by Jim and Shirley Tubbs at 10:45 a.m. Sunday at the Twin Falls Church of the Nazarene, 401 Sixth Ave.

JIM AND SHIRLEY TUBBS

Jim and Shirley travel throughout the United States performing a variety of musical and songwriting/singing duet. Their daughters, Evie, Marcie and Jamie travel with them, as Evie and Marcie often sing with them. They both graduated from Olivet Nazarene University and began careers in business management and engineering physics. However, they became increasingly aware that the Lord was preparing them for a music ministry and began traveling in 1984. The submission of 17 years of songwriting for Jim has debuted in their first album entitled "His Way," and their new release, "A Road In The Night," their prayer is that you will hear and sense a harmony that goes far beyond their music.

A nursery will be provided. There is no charge, but a freewill offering will be received.

BREA, Calif. — A Medjugorje Peace Conference has been scheduled for Aug. 11-12, 1990 at the Bren Events Center in Irvine, Calif., to draw attention to the miraculous appearances of the Blessed Virgin Mary and her messages to all the world to find peace by returning to her Son, Jesus. Medjugorje is a small village in Yugoslavia where the Blessed Mother is said to be appearing daily with messages of love, concern, and hope for a world in turmoil. These events had drawn over 15 million pilgrims of all faiths and have been reported on major television programs and videos and in major newspapers and countless books.

The conference will feature speakers who are world-renowned authorities on Medjugorje and testimonies from those who have had personal encounters with these events. The proceeds will be given to organizations promoting the messages of the Medjugorje.

Anyone interested in attending may wish to take advantage of the "promotional" early-bird registration fee of $20 for adults and $25 for young adults (ages 12-18), which will increase to $25 and $20 respectively after Jan. 1, 1990. The Bren Events Center is limited to 5,000, so early registration is encouraged. For more information, write or call: Medjugorje Peace Conference, PO Box 1775, Brea, CA 92622-1775; (714) 879-6858 or (714) 572-9465.

Stallings prefers a legislative remedy

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Reps. Richard Stallings and Larry Craig have voted to ban flag burning, saying the majority of Americans condemned the court ruling allowing it.

"I have supported efforts to amend the current federal flag statute because I was greatly disturbed by the Supreme Court's ruling that flag burning is within the protection of the First Amendment," Stallings, D-Idaho, said.

The Supreme Court ruling left our flag without protection, Republican Craig said. "I voted today to provide at least some protection until Congress can send forth an amendment for the citizens to ratify."

"Fair, and only that, will provide the absolute protection the majority of Americans are asking for."

Because of uncertainty over whether the prohibition will be declared unconstitutional, Stallings is co-sponsor on a resolution calling for a constitutional amendment.

Murderer returns for resentencing

BLACKFOOT (AP) — Convicted murderer Richard A. Leavitt has returned to the Bingham County Jail to await his resentencing for the 1984 mutilation slaying of a Blackfoot woman.

Leavitt, 31, was convicted of first-degree murder in September 1985 for the killing of Dannelle Jean Elge, 31, and sentenced to death by 7th District Judge J.L. Reynolds on Aug. 31.

No date had been set for resentencing by Friday.

Official says lottery will top expectations

POCATELLO (AP) — The public acceptance of the state's 3-month-old lottery has prompted the Andrus administration's financial chief to predict lottery sales will run 10 percent higher than initially projected.

Speaking to business leaders in Pocatello this week, Budget Director Chuck Moss said lottery sales should hit $41 million by the end of next June, $10 million more than any state official had been writing to project up to now.

The Lottery Commission reported on Thursday that ticket sales since the games began July 19 have exceeded $20 million.

Moss's new estimate translates into nearly $3 million going to the school building account, which will be disbursed by the state Board of Education next summer, and an equal amount to the public building fund, which the state Legislature ultimately controls. Originally, officials had hoped the lottery would slacken off in a year and Moss estimated that outlook by predicting lottery sales to slip back to $33 million in the year after this. Potentially countering that decline, however, could be the introduction of Lotto America, a multi-million-dollar jackpot by the beginning of the next revenue cycle July 1.

On the general revenue front, Moss said economic growth, that produced a $52.2 million surplus at the end of June, has been steady since the current budget year began. The administration believes new money this year will exceed $815 million, $75 million more than state lawmakers projected less than nine months ago.

Even with huge bills that have to be paid for forest and range fire suppression and prison expansion, Moss predicted the unobligated surplus would run around $90 million by the time state lawmakers convene their election-year session in January. Coupled with economic growth continuing at the same pace for yet another year, state lawmakers $950 million overall to meet spending needs in the budget year that begins next July.

Andrus has indicated he wants to use the one-time surplus revenue only for nonrecurring expenses like equipment purchases or building. Moss said.

While a tax rebate has been mentioned by some officials, Moss said, "Returning a portion to the taxpayer deserves consideration but done in light of long-term budget implications."

He indicated additional deposits should be made into a reserve account that no totals $12 million so the state has a buffer against future economic downturns.

Andrus said on Friday that one of his top priorities continues to be keeping the state economy growing, and Moss said the administration may ask the Public Employment Retirement System governing board to set aside some of its $1 billion fund for investment in capital projects in Idaho.

Teen faces life in prison after murder conviction

BOISE (AP) — A 14-year-old killer has been sentenced to life in prison as an adult for gunning down his father at their rural Adair County home.

Jeremy Broadhead was sentenced Thursday by a tearful 4th District Judge George Cline, who ordered him to spend at least 15 years behind bars before becoming eligible for parole.

The parole board, Cline decided, was "such a horrible crime" that Jeremy had to be sentenced as an adult.

"There was no reason for this crime," the judge said.

The popular Meridian eighth-grader pleaded guilty last month to second-degree murder, admitting he ambushed his divorced father on Feb. 23 with a hunting rifle.

John Steven Broadhead, chief financial officer of Idaho Timber Corp., was shot five times as he entered his house. After his death, authorities said Jeremy brought teenage friends over to the house to view the body.

"I know that I've hurt a lot of people, and I'm sorry about that," the teen-ager told the courtroom. "I've hurt myself, I just wish that I could take it all back, somehow do it all over again. ... I know I should go unpunished."

Speaking for the family, Clair Broadhead said his late brother may have had a mental problem, but he clearly loved Jeremy and his other son, Brandon, 20.

"He just wanted a chance to be a part of their lives, to teach them how to love and respect others, to give them a good start in life. ... Nothing was too good for his kids."

Jeremy will remain in Ada County Jail until the Department of Corrections decides whether to place him in prison under protective custody or contract in the interim with a youth center.

A leading option is the state-run Youth Services Center in St. Anthony in eastern Idaho.

Corrections Director Richard Vernon said he is against putting Jeremy in a prison cell until he is old enough to cope with the predatory environment

Early nuclear plant faces retirement

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — The end of the line is near for an historic nuclear plant prototype at the Naval Reactors Facility, but a new era has begun for another reactor prototype at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

The A1W aircraft carrier prototype was restarted Sept. 13. Training ended nine days later at the S1W, a prototype of the reactor used in the USS Nautilus, the world's first nuclear submarine.

The U.S. Department of Energy said the Navy is preparing to shut the reactor down for good. The Department of Energy described the status of the two prototypes in response to written questions submitted in mid-September by the Post-Register in Idaho Falls. The department issued its responses Thursday.

Critical operations have resumed at the A1W after a lengthy refueling and overhaul project.

"The restart process went smoothly, with no delays. No problems were encountered that would compromise the safe or effective operation of A1W," the Department of Energy said.

A1W is safe and reliable for unrestricted operation. It is currently expected that A1W will be operated until at least the mid-to late 1990s."

Energy Department officials did not reveal how much the restart cost. But the overhaul, which was plagued by delays and a series of cost overruns, totaled more than $60 million.

The Navy stated up only one unit of the A1W's dual reactors last month. While the prototype's "A" reactor is operating, the "B" unit will remain in standby. Training of naval personnel resumed at the facility in late March and has been worked around prototype tests.

Andrus doesn't see waste dump opening by July

BOISE (AP) — Maintaining the federal government has "very poorly handled" the problem of waste disposal from its nuclear weapons production plants, Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus does not think the newest deadline for opening a permanent waste dump will be met.

Although he believes the permanent New Mexico repository for low-level radioactive waste will be opened soon, Andrus said he doubts the Energy Department will meet the latest target date of next July 1.

That would mark the fifth time since October 1988 that the department has missed its promised deadline for opening the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant that it first promised Idaho to have in operation by the end of the 1970s.

"They're going to continue to acquiesce to some very close-minded members of that (New Mexico congressional) delegation," Andrus said, referring to opposition on a number of grounds from New Mexico officials to starting up operations at the dump.

"It has been poorly handled," he said during the taping Friday of KTVB-TV's "Viewpoint" program that will be aired Sunday.

If Andrus proves accurate, the government's waste storage problems will be aggravated to the point of possibly being forced to shut down its Rocky Flats plant in Colorado. Rocky Flats is the nation's only manufacturer of plutonium triggers for nuclear warheads.

The waste from Rocky Flats about 250 cubic yards a month, had been piling up in temporary storage at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory until September when Andrus banned any further shipments for storage at INEL. He took the action because the government failed to meet its promises for a permanent dump. Over 150,000 cubic yards of radioactive waste is currently stored above and below ground at the eastern Idaho facility.

Land swap could save trout, endanger other delicate species

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A proposed land swap between Elko and Clark counties could remove the Lahontan cutthroat trout from the federal threatened-species list, but also might harm another delicate species, the desert tortoise, according to an official said Friday.

But Dave Vandenberg, real estate specialist for the BLM Elko district, said the bureau must first determine through environmental assessments whether the proposed exchange would indeed help the trout and whether it could harm any desert tortoise habitat in southern Nevada.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service wants the desert tortoise placed on the endangered species list because the population is suffering from a sometimes fatal respiratory disease.

"We've got to determine a whole range of issues, including the impact on any desert tortoise habitat, and decide whether the swap will result in the most public value,"

Vandenberg said. "Some of the land might be adjacent to desert tortoise habitat, but that's based on old surveys."

In Elko County, it appears that with proper management, the swap could restore trout habitat, but the Lahontan cutthroat trout delisted, he added.

The BLM has scheduled two public hearings on the proposed land swap. On Oct. 25 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. a hearing will be held at the BLM Elko office. And on Oct. 26, a public hearing will be held from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the Las Vegas BLM office.

Vandenberg said it would take at least a month after public hearings to finish the draft environmental assessment. And it could be as long as six months before the BLM makes a final decision on the proposed land swap.

The land swap was proposed by Olympic Management, Inc., an Arizona development company that's acquiring the land for real estate speculation in growing Clark County, according to Vandenberg. He said the company has no immediate development plans.

Under the proposed swap, the BLM would acquire 60,000 acres the company owns in Elko County and Olympic would get 2,300 acres in the Las Vegas Valley.

The Elko land is intermingled with existing public land within the Mary's River, Humboldt River and Bruepan River drainages about 30 miles east of Elko.

Vandenberg said Olympic has proposed two different Clark County sites for the swap, one at the north end of the valley where no development exists and the other at the south end which has scattered housing.

Vandenberg said the north valley site "has more desert tortoise potential" than the southern portion, but neither area has been confirmed as habitat for the animals.

Romer: plant should wait for waste plan

DENVER (AP) — Gov. Roy Romer says the government should temporarily suspend operations at Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant until it can develop a better plan for storing the low-level radioactive waste the facility produces.

The governor made the comments on Thursday at a news conference held to discuss the Department of Energy plan to have seven states share Rocky Flats' waste until a permanent storage facility can be completed in New Mexico.

Many of the governors said their states would not accept the wastes. Romer, however, has said Colorado is willing to temporarily store its share.

"They ought not to produce a crisis," Romer said Thursday after meeting with Leo Duffy, an aide to Energy Secretary James Watkins. "There's a very practical solution to the problem. I'm a bit fed up."

He said he opposed one DOE proposal to expand the amount of waste Colorado is allowing to be stored at Rocky Flats—1,600 cubic yards. That limit is expected to be reached about March 1. The permanent waste storage facility near Carlsbad, N.M., however, is not expected to be ready until next summer.

Romer also said President Bush had botched the plan to have the states temporarily share the waste by not becoming involved personally.

The seven states that were asked to share the waste are Idaho, Colorado, New Mexico, Nevada, South Carolina, Tennessee and Washington.

White House Chief of Staff John Sununu contacted the governors of those states. He said closing Rocky Flats would amount to unilateral nuclear disarmament since it is the sole maker of plutonium triggers for warheads.

"There's a difference when the senior elected official of the United States sits down with you and tells you how critical it is," Romer said. This would allow governors to tell their constituents "I am cooperating with the president of the United States."

CUT leader admits lies about guns

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — The vice president of Montana's Church Universal and Triumphant pleaded guilty Friday to conspiracy in a scheme to illegally buy paramilitary weapons and ammunition.

Edward L. Francis, 39, the church's business manager and husband of leader Elizabeth Clare Prophet, pleaded guilty to one federal count of conspiracy to make false statements in connection with the acquisition of firearms.

Francis faces a maximum five-year prison term, a $250,000 fine or both when sentenced Dec. 15. However, under terms of a plea agreement, Assistant U.S. Attorney Tom Rice will recommend Francis be sentenced to four months and a $5,000 fine.

He was released on his own recognizance pending sentencing and ordered not to leave the state of Montana without court permission.

Mrs. Prophet accompanied her husband during Friday's court hearing.

Another church official, Vernon D. Hamilton, last month pleaded guilty to conspiracy to make a false statement in the acquisition of a firearm.

Rice told U.S. District Judge Justin L. Quackenbush that if the case had gone to trial, the government would have called Hamilton to testify that he and Francis discussed ways of obtaining false identification. Francis then gave Hamilton nearly $150,000 in cash and gold to purchase the semiautomatic weapons, Rice said.

Francis told the judge that Hamilton approached him in April or May with the idea of changing his identity to buy weapons so that they could not be traced to the two church officials.

Francis took pains to note the incident was not sanctioned by the church and said the decision to have Hamilton use fake identification stemmed from a desire to avoid potential negative publicity.

"There could have been an appearance that this was some kind of church activity," Francis said.

Mormon apostle says role of religion is neglected

BOISE (AP) — Public education is falling short by ignoring the role of religious liberty played in American history, a Mormon Church leader says.

In remarks before the U.S. West Educational Symposium, Dallin H. Oaks, a member of the church's Council of the Twelve Apostles, decried the omission from history textbooks of references to religion and its "significant role in American history."

Oaks, a former Utah Supreme Court justice, also lashed out at efforts to prohibit denominational prayers.

Oaks referred to a recent controversy involving Utah's Jordan School District, in which the district was pressured into banning prayers at high school graduation in order to avoid a potentially expensive lawsuit.

The suit had been filed by two students who objected that prayers at their school's June graduation were "denominational" since they mentioned Jesus Christ.

"It is no part of the business of government in this country to prescribe prayers or to censor them," he said.

Those attending the symposium at Boise State University Friday focused on the Williamsburg Charter, whose purpose, Oaks said, was to "celebrate and reaffirm religious liberty as the foremost freedom of the First Amendment to the United States Constitution."

Bush will not visit Utah chemical plant

TOOELE ARMY DEPOT, Utah (AP) — President Bush will not be coming to Utah to attend Oct. 30 groundbreaking for a new chemical weapons demilitarization plant at Tooele Army Depot.

Stephen Studdert, assistant to the president for special activities, said the ceremony at the western Utah desert installation is not on Bush's calendar.

"There are no plans for the president to attend," he said.

Barring unusual circumstances, such a visit would be on the calendar by now if we were going to occur, he said.

Rumors had been flying among Army officials in Utah and Washington that Bush would attend the groundbreaking.

No financing for UAL

The Associated Press
CHICAGO — The pilot-management group trying to buy United Airlines parent UAL Corp. said Friday it could not get financing for its $6.75 billion deal, an announcement that helped trigger a stunning stock market drop.

The group issued a statement that banks mandating the financing for the proposed $300 a share acquisition.

Battle of Michigans may be an air show

By The Associated Press

Elvis Grbac of Michigan and Dan Enos of Michigan State are ranked 1-2 in the Big Ten in passing this season, and that's what concerns coaches Bo Schembacher and George Perles.

No. 5 Michigan and 21st-ranked Michigan State meet in their annual showdown on Saturday at East Lansing in what may result in an uncustomed air show.

"I think you'll see both teams concentrate on not having turnovers with interceptions," Michigan State's Perles said. "Both teams will work hard not to get sacked."

"You'll see both teams drop back roll out, bootleg. You'll see a lot of similarities."

Michigan is 3-1 while the Spartans are 2-2, their losses coming against top-ranked Notre Dame and No. 2 Miami.

"The key will be turnovers and the kicking game," Schembacher said. "Any closely contested game will be that way. It'll be an emotional, heavy-hitting game."

Grbac, a redshirt freshman, took over the starting job for Enos in the season's first game against Notre Dame. Since then, he has completed 56 of 87 passes for 618 yards and six touchdowns.

While Grbac has completed 64.4 percent of his passes, Enos has been even more efficient, completing 71.3 percent. He has connected on 57 of 80 passes for 636 yards with one touchdown.

In other games involving ranked teams on Saturday, it's No. 4 Notre Dame at No. 17 Air Force; San Jose State at No. 2 Miami; No. 3 Colorado at Iowa State; No. 4 Nebraska at Missouri; No. 7 Arkansas at Texas Tech; No. 8 Houston at Texas A&M; Navy at No. 9 Pittsburgh; and No. 10 Southern Cal at California.

Also: SW Louisiana at No. 11 Alabama; Louisiana State at No. 12 Auburn; Georgia Tech at No. 14 Clemson; Texas vs. No. 15 Oklahoma at Dallas; No. 16 Illinois at Purdue; Stanford at No. 17 Washington State; No. 19 Florida State at Virginia Tech; No. 22 UCLA at Arizona; No. 23 Penn State at Syracuse; No. 25 Brigham Young at Colorado State; and Vanderbilt at No. 25 Florida.

While Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz praises the opposition, it's worth noting that last year, Air Force went to Notre Dame as the nation's top rushing team, averaging 432 yards a game, but managed only 170 against the Irish. And Notre Dame won 41-13.

Once again, the wishbone Falcons lead the nation in rushing, averaging 449, while quarterback Dee Dowis is fourth in the nation, averaging 134 per game.

The problem for Air Force is Notre Dame allows an average of just 94 yards per game.

"Notre Dame is a great football team, obviously," Air Force coach Fisher DeBerry said. "They're the defending national champions. They have a 17-game winning streak."

Freshman "Gino" Torretta is 2-0 since replacing injured quarterback Craig Erickson at Miami, and coach Dennis Erickson says Torretta may have earned some playing time after the starter returns.

But neither of the Ericksons will have to worry about that this week. Torretta will start again against San Jose State, and the Hurricanes (2-0) are off next week before facing Florida State on Oct. 28. That's what Erickson the coach would like Erickson the quarterback back.

"In my mind, that's what we're shooting for," the Miami coach said. "But we really won't know for a couple of weeks."

Colorado is 5-0 going into its game at Iowa State with another of the nation's most explosive running teams, led by quarterback Darian Hagan and tailback Eric Bienemy.

Colorado is fourth nationally in rushing with an average of 370.6 yards a game, and the Buffaloes average 6.1 yards per running play.

Iowa State coach Jim Walden says it's the Buffaloes defense that makes it work, though Colorado has allowed only six touchdowns this season.

"The defense makes sure their offense is out there all the time," Walden said. "It's 1-2-3 and out. That offense is on the field all the time. Well, not all the time. They average seven yards a crack, so seven times longer it takes to get that way is as long as they're in there."

Last week, Missouri got beat by Colorado 49-3. Two weeks before that, the Tigers lost 38-7 to Miami. Now, they're facing Nebraska, and coach Bob Stull says it hasn't been a lot of fun.
