Senate takes smaller pay raise; bill to Bush

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Senate balked Friday night at accepting the major pay raise passed by the House for members of Congress, federal judges and top executive branch officials.

The measure, on an issue that has bedeviled Congress all year, was quickly returned to the House, which was poised to approve it and send it to President Bush.

Idaho's two Republican senators split their votes. Steve Symms voted to approve the pay package while James McClure voted against it.

of Congress would be paid at different rates. The earlier instances were in 1975 and for a few months in 1982 when a salary raise became effective at different times for the two bodies.

Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, announced after several hours of debate that the leadership was short the necessary votes to pass a raise of up to 40 percent by late 1991, coupled with a ban on retention of speech honoraria that the House passed 274-152 Thursday. Instead, he offered a fallback position that was approved, providing a 10 percent cost-of-living raise for senators on Jan. 1, raising Senate salaries from $89,500 to $98,400.

The remainder of top federal officials, including House members, would get a 7.9 percent raise now, plus a 25 percent increase on Jan. 1, 1991.

Under the bill, while speech honoraria for personal gain would be banned immediately for the House and the rest of government, Senate honoraria would be phased out on a dollar-for-dollar basis as they received cost-of-living increases. Senate honoraria is now limited to 40 percent of salary, or $35,800, meaning that when senators receive their $8,900 raise, they can keep an estimated $26,568 in honoraria. The remainder must go to charity.

Because the House is taking a smaller immediate cost-of-living raise, it will earn less than the Senate for a year — $96,600 for the House and $98,400 for the Senate. But when the House's 25 percent raise arrives in 1991, its members salaries will go to $120,800.

Bush voices hope for peaceful change

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush sent a pre-summit cable to Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev expressing hopes for "a calm and peaceful period of change" in Eastern Europe, the White House said Friday.

Bush, responding to a virtually identical message from Gorbachev a week earlier, indicated his support for the dramatic changes in Eastern Europe and reforms under way in the Soviet Union, said White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater.

Separately, Bush brushed aside fears about the possibility of German reunification, saying, "I don't think history need repeat itself if there evolves a single German state."

Bush, in a radio interview with Mutual and NBC, said reunification is "a matter for the people of the Germans to determine. And it is a very — it's a highly sensitive matter as far as the Soviet Union is concerned, and it's better to leave it right there."

The opening of the Berlin Wall has prompted talk about a reunified Germany, which has been divided into East and West since the end of World War II. Gorbachev has said that talk about reunification would mean interference in the affairs of the two Germans.

Moreover, there is nervousness in Western Europe about restoring Germany to full strength, since a militarily strong Germany was at the center of two world wars in Europe this century.

"We've had discussions with countries that expressed concern in this regard because of certain historical precedents," Bush said.

Bush signs minimum wage boost

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush on Friday signed a bill that will raise the minimum wage from $3.35 to $4.25 an hour by the spring of 1991, formally accepting the compromise that ended a year of disagreement with congressional Democrats and organized labor.

Bush praised the measure, which he said would "protect jobs and put more money into the pockets of our workers." But Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said it merely marked progress "to the 50-year line" on the issue.

The increase, the first since 1981, would bring the wage to $4.25 an hour by April 1991, after going to

Cheney moves to cut defense budget

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration, responding to a chronic domestic budget crisis and political upheaval in the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies, will recommend cutting U.S. defense spending by billions of dollars next year, including reducing troop levels, canceling weapon programs and terminating other military contracts, Defense Secretary Richard B. Cheney said in an interview.

Cheney said he will agree to military cuts to meet deficit-reduction goals and, in a noticeable change in tone from his earlier public statements, said the military threat from the Warsaw Pact has diminished enough to begin planning to make "significant" reductions in U.S. military spending next year.

The reductions will be included in Cheney's proposed defense budget for fiscal 1991, which begins Oct. 1. He said he will propose even deeper cuts in the Pentagon's budgets in the following five years. That fits next in the midst of final negotiations with President Bush and Office of Management and Budget Director Richard G. Darman on the depth of the cuts, designed to discuss specifics of his recommendations. But Pentagon officials said a $10 billion cut is likely. That would mean spending roughly 3 percent below current levels.

"There is no way I'm going to do what I have to do without force structure reductions, weapons cancellations, contract terminations and base closings," Cheney said of his budget proposals for the next several years.

In recent days Cheney said he has had his "day in court" with Bush to push for lower cuts than Darman. And he said the president will decide within the next two weeks his "top-line" number for the 1991 military spending request. Cheney will meet next week with service chiefs and secretaries and theater military commanders from around the world after. Sen. O'Keefe, his internal budget chief, has recommended cutting billions of dollars from their budget requests.

"It was a very, very vigorous scrub," said a senior Defense Department aide. "There was a lot of broken-china-and-some-hurt-feelings, but we've gone through and pulled out rather substantial options."

Cheney, who for most of his 10-month tenure as defense secretary has been a voice of caution against overreacting to change in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, has begun to shift his emphasis as new evidence emerges of reduced Soviet military activity and new milestones of change in Eastern Europe.

"While you need to be concerned about possible reversal of trends in the Soviet Union, there's a real sense that you want to take advantage of these developments," Cheney said.

Felony charges name 2 Gooding officers

By CRAIG LINCOLN

GOODING Two Gooding City policemen have been charged with felonies after one allegedly had intercourse with an underage girl in a motor home while the other slept nearby. Terry Behunin, 23, has been charged with rape, according to court documents filed Thursday. Jeffrey Dean Powell, 27, has been charged with being an accessory to rape.

Investigators found no evidence that Behunin used force during the encounter. The incident started when Behunin met the teen-ager and her female friend Aug. 14, a Monday, at the O-So Good-Drive Inn Restaurant in Gooding, according to an affidavit filed with the criminal charges.

The affidavit, an investigative report signed by Special Agent Jackie Aloit of the state Department of Law Enforcement says Behunin invited the two teen-agers to meet him and Powell at the fairgrounds.

He told the pair that he was patrolling the fairgrounds and his wife was out of town, the report says.

That was the next day, the two teen-agers met Behunin and Powell at a motor home located at the fairgrounds and the group played cards until about midnight, the report says.

Then the two teen-agers left, but Behunin invited one to return later, according to the report.

The dropped her friend off and returned to the motor home.

Powell then climbed into one of the motor home's bunk beds and went to sleep.

The teen-ager climbed into a bunk bed with Behunin, the report states. They "began kissing, and then they had sexual intercourse," it says.

Behunin admitted to investigators that he had sex with the teen-ager, the report says. Although he didn't know her "exact" age, he "did know she was still in high school."

Powell said he knew Behunin was sleeping with the teen-ager, but wasn't sure they had sex until Behunin told him the next day.

The report doesn't say whether the two officers were on duty when the incidents occurred.

Behunin has resigned from the police force, according to Gooding Police Chief Steve Spence. Powell has been suspended without pay, Spence said.

The Times-News was unable to reach Behunin Friday and couldn't locate Powell.

DOE payment of fines under fire

No decision yet on WIPP opening

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senior administration officials disagreed in congressional testimony Friday on whether to end the Energy Department's practice of paying at environmental fines, incurred by companies that run its nuclear weapons plants.

Critics of the practice say it weakens the companies' incentive to comply with environmental protection rules, thereby undermining efforts to clean up the weapons plants, which produce tons of radioactive and hazardous wastes each year.

The 17 major facilities that make the nation's nuclear weapons are owned by the Energy Department but run by private corporations under government contracts.

In a related development, senior department officials briefed representatives of six states on Energy Secretary James D. Watkins' blueprint for opening the first permanent dump for radioactive waste from the weapons plants.

A department official who asked not to be identified said "no major decisions were made" on plans for opening the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant near Carlsbad, N.M., by July 1990 at the earliest.

No firm date is expected to be set until next spring.

The states represented in the meeting — Washington, Idaho, New Mexico, Colorado, Tennessee and South Carolina — have rejected a Watkins proposal that they temporarily store some of the weapons waste until the New Mexico dump is opened.

Existing storage capacity in Colorado may be exceeded as early as next April, and failure to find alternative storage sites could force a halt in weapons production.

Nevada also has rebuffed Watkins' urging to take some of the waste, but was not represented at the meeting. The session did not resolve the temporary storage problem, the official said, adding that further talks with the state governors would be needed.

The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, said in a report released last week that the Energy Department recently paid $295,000 in penalties against two unidentified weapons plant contractors for violations of laws governing hazardous wastes — plus $520,000 in related legal costs of the companies.

Stephen A. Wakefield, the department's general counsel, urged defeat of a House bill to outlaw such indemnification.

Activists hide after massacre

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Dozens of religious workers, labor activists, academics and political figures went into hiding Friday after the slaughter of six Jesuit priests and arrest of 12 Lutheran missionaries.

"We have the justified fear that the assassinations are the beginning of a series of actions against unions, labor groups and politicians," said Fidel Chavez Mena, secretary-general of the opposition Christian Democratic Party.

The U.S. ambassador pressured the Salvadoran government to quickly conduct an investigation, and U.S. religious leaders condemned the slayings, blamed on right-wing forces, and called for a cutoff of U.S. aid to the government of President Alfredo Cristiani.

The government, which has received $3.5 billion in U.S. aid this decade, denied responsibility.

Fighting slackened Friday between troops and leftist rebels in parts of San Salvador, six days after insurgents launched the biggest offensive in the decade-old civil war. The troops did not appear to be making substantial progress in driving the guerrillas from the capital. An opposition politician said 300,000 residents of the capital had been cut off from food and water.

A British journalist, David Blundy, 44, of the newspaper the Sunday Correspondent, was fatally shot by a sniper during combat in northern San Salvador.

Labor leaders, religious workers, academics and politicians fled to embassies or safehouses, fearing for their lives after the reactor of one of the region's leading universities was killed "in his home" with five colleagues. Later Thursday, 12 Lutheran missionary workers, including four Americans, were arrested. The Lutherans were released unharmed Friday, the U.S. Embassy said.

Among those who fled to safe havens were Guillermo Ungo and Ruben Zamora, two of the nation's most prominent leftist politicians.

Zinser receives OK to hire 3 new aides; manager decision held off

By The Associated Press

The state Board of Education has approved University of Idaho President Elisabeth Zinser's request to shift funding to hire three new assistants for her office.

But the board, meeting Friday in Twin Falls, put off action until January on Ms. Zinser's request to use $30,000 for a "house manager-personal secretary" to help her with special responsibilities and management of the $500,000 president's residence on the Moscow campus.

Board President George Alvarez, Boise, said he was sympathetic to her need for help with her far-flung duties as head of Idaho's research and land grant university. But he said he still has "a little reservation" about the scope and salary of the position, and some alternative should be considered.

"I'm not personally ready to recommend this position the way it is," Alvarez said.

Board member Charles "Tiny" Grant, Rexburg, said he felt better about Ms. Zinser's justification for the added help, after hearing her presentation to the board's Personnel-Administrative Committee, "but I'm not sure that all the members of the board will have this understanding."

Alvarez and Ms. Zinser agreed Friday that she was promised household support while she was being recruited for the presidency last spring. However, Ms. Zinser said she had no conception of what the job description or salary requirement for the house manager would be at the time.

She acknowledged underestimating the controversy her proposal would raise, and said board members appeared "to be thrown" by her request.

However, Ms. Zinser said precedent is on her side. Former UI president Ernest Hartung also employed a house manager, although immediate past president Richard Gibb did not, because his wife handled most of the entertaining and errands.

"However, I don't get down within the scope of that job will be done by me," Ms. Zinser said. "I wasn't expecting this kind of micromanagement by the public at large."

Board member J. Ray Cox, Coeur d'Alene, said he saw no reason to delay action on that position, since it was clear Ms. Zinser, as a single woman, could not do it all herself.

"I think that your request eminently reasonable and necessary under the circumstances, and I think that to deny you your request would in some ways be discrimination," Cox told Ms. Zinser.

The positions approved Friday include a secretary, office coordinator at $15,700 per year; a writer-editor at $22,000 and a production typist at $14,300. Only the writer-editor position drew any board opposition.

State Schools Superintendent Jerry Evans said he thought the request was "excessive" but the rest of the board supported Ms. Zinser's contention that after other adjustments she would still be saving money.

The new administrative positions will be financed by reallocating money from other university departments.

Nightmares follow storm for children

NEWBURGH, N.Y. (AP) —

First-grader Megan Lambert wanted to go to her school Friday, even though it was closed, and she had nightmares about the cafeteria wall that was toppled by a tornado and killed seven of her schoolmates.

"Something like this happens, your mind can never get it off," said the 7-year-old who escaped injury in Thursday's storm at East Coltonham Elementary School.

"Some of my friends are dead and some more may get dead," Megan said.

More than 100 first-, second- and third-graders were eating when a tornado slammed into the 30-foot concrete-and-glass wall, killing seven children and injuring 18 others. Thirteen remained hospitalized Friday, three in critical condition.

The National Weather Service had posted a tornado watch for large parts of the East Coast from Maryland to New England, including the Newburgh area and metropolitan New York, as storms along a rapidly moving cold front caused tornadoes, high winds and heavy rain from the Southeast to New England.

The two-day toll from the storms was at least 29 dead and hundreds injured, including 17 dead and 1,000 homeless in Huntsville, Ala., which was struck by a large twister Wednesday evening.

President Bush issued a disaster declaration Friday for Huntsville, making the city eligible for federal relief programs, said Gov. Guy Hunt's press secretary, Terry Abbott.

Hunt said he believed damage exceeded $100 million.

Another tornado Thursday knocked over trees and ripped roofs off houses in West Virginia's Eastern Panhandle. The National Weather Service confirmed. And a tornado ripped the roof off an office building in King of Prussia, Pa., outside Philadelphia.

Storms also caused flooding in Washington, D.C., blew windows out of skyscrapers in Philadelphia, destroyed a house in Piscataway, N.J., and blew the roof off a shopping mall in Quebec.

At Newburgh, National Weather Service meteorologist Roland Lofted said wind blew about 100 mph near the school during Thursday's storm, but the strongest wind was at a higher altitude and the school did not bear the full brunt of the storm.

an intermediate $3.80 on April 1, 1990.

The new law also includes a lower "training wage" for new workers who are teenagers, a provision supported by congressional Democrats.

Bush in June vetoed a bill that would have increased the minimum wage to $4.55 over three years.

At an Oval Office signing ceremony attended by congressional leaders and sponsors, Bush called the new act "a good example of what we can do in the future on other matters."

"I'm pleased to sign it," Bush said. However, Kennedy, D-Mass., who supported a higher minimum, said after the ceremony, "I think we've arrived on the 50-yard line on this."

Under terms of the new law, young people 16- to 19 years old who have never worked could be paid $3.585 percent of the minimum wage for 90 days. Employers with a training plan in place could pay the young workers a training rate for 90 days more.

The training wage can be paid to workers 16-19 years old for the first three months of work experience and for three additional months provided they are in certified training programs.

The training wage would be $3.35 an hour after next April 1. When the minimum wage increases to $4.25 a year later, the subminimum would increase to $3.61 an hour. The provision allowing for the subminimum expires in April 1993 unless extended by Congress.

Bush called for a $4.25 minimum wage during his campaign.

Early Friday night, more than a dozen House leaders flowed onto the Senate floor where they joined Senate leaders in an extraordinary direct lobbying drive for passage of the pay and ethics package.

Until the Senate balked at the House version of the pay raise and honorarium bill, the bill had moved through the House in an extraordinary bipartisan compact among all top national party leaders not to use the issue in the next election.

The compact included a promise that House Speaker Thomas S. Foley — D-Wash. — would support the bill in the next election.

Mitchell and Senate Minority Leader Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., made a similar promise to their colleagues yesterday before bringing the bill to the floor.

reportedly promised House Republicans in a meeting Thursday that they would make personal appearances in a district of Republican members who were attacked for voting "yes" on the package to defend the GOP lawmakers.

"In the emotion of the moment, this was a big point," said a Democratic leadership aide, suggesting that appearances by the leadership may be limited to "gregarious cases" but that the leaders will follow through on the extraordinary pledge.

Foley was called almost immediately on his promise when Democrat David Worley, who lost House Minority Whip to Newt Gingrich, R-Ia., in the last election, issued a letter attacking Gingrich's vote for the raise. Republicans, briefly considered, but rejected, asking Foley to go to Georgia to defend Gingrich.

Senate upgrades probe of 5 key members in huge S&L failure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate ethics committee opened Friday for a potentially explosive investigation of five senators who met with federal regulators on behalf of a failing savings and loan after receiving campaign contributions from the head of the firm.

All five, Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif.; Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.; John Glenn, D-Ohio; John McCain, R-Ariz.; and Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., have denied any wrongdoing.

The lawmakers met with regulators who were examining the collapsing Lincoln Savings and Loan of Irvine, Calif., in 1987. The chairman of the thrift, Charles H. Keating Jr., gave $1.3 million to the senators' campaigns or political causes in the mid-1980s.

Riegle, DeConcini and Glenn issued fresh declarations of innocence during the day-after reports that the ethics committee would meet and appoint an outside lawyer to review the case. Cranston said he had no comment on the idea of an outside counsel, which he called "just a rumor."

Published reports said the committee has selected as its counsel Robert S. Beneris, a Washington criminal defense lawyer.

powerful in the Senate — with Cranston the No. 2 Democrat and Riegle and Glenn holding committee chairmanships — and any lengthy probe could complicate their roles as key lawmakers in addition to posing a political threat to them.

Glenn told reporters he never discussed any deals for Charles H. Keating Jr., when participating in discussions with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board about Lincoln Savings and Loan.

"I do not recall that there was any deal whatsoever that was ever made. I was not party to any deal, did not agree to any deal," said Glenn, chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

Glenn said he only attended the 1987 meetings with regulators after receiving an accountants' report that Lincoln was solvent, and he would not have attended had he known the institution was about to fail.

The Ohio senator also said if Keating thought campaign contributions would buy influence, then "John Glenn must have been the biggest disappointment to him than anybody he contributed to."

DeConcini said, "I'm prepared and we'll cooperate with the independent counsel. If that's the decision of the committee, it would be very positive to bring out all the facts related to the charge."

"I hope the independent counsel will expedite it, or rapidly bring it to conclusion."

Riegle, the Senate Banking Committee chairman, commented, "I strongly support whatever level of inquiry the Senate Ethics Committee feels is appropriate. Their review will show my conduct in this matter to have been ethical and proper at all times."

The issue revolves around what is expected to become the nation's largest thrift failure.

Examiners for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in San Francisco were investigating Lincoln's finances in 1987 when Keating complained he was being targeted unfairly.

Cranston, McCain, DeConcini and Glenn met with then-Bank Board Chairman Edwin Gray on April 2, 1987, and those four senators plus Riegle met a week later with regional officials from the board's San Francisco office about Lincoln.

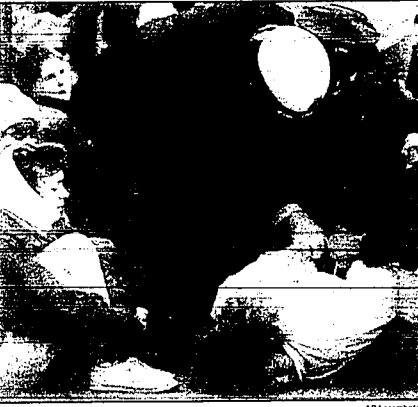

Gray has testified before a House committee that the four senators sought a "quid pro quo" in which regulators would permit the institution to continue risky direct investments in real estate in exchange for a commitment from Lincoln to step up its home mortgage business.

Cranston and DeConcini also blamed Gray's successor, M. Danny Wall, last spring endorsing Keating's attempt to sell Lincoln order to force it.

Regulators took control of Lincoln last April. They estimate taxpayers will have to cover between $1.5 billion and $2 billion in federally insured deposits in the failure. Regulators have filed a $1.1 billion fraud and racketeering suit against Keating and his associates.

In addition, hundreds of the 23,000 bondholders who bought high-risk debentures in Lincoln's holding company, American Continental Corp. of Phoenix, through Lincoln branches have sued Keating after losing an estimated $200 million.

The first formal stage of an Ethics committee case is a preliminary inquiry, which determines whether there is a "reason to believe" rules violations occurred.

District of Columbia police arrest abortion protesters Friday

Effort coming to put Roe vs. Wade in law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Abortion-rights supporters in Congress, setting the stage for a political battle next year, announced their intention Friday to push a bill that would write into law the 1973 Supreme Court ruling that legalized abortion.

The bill they introduced would, in effect, overrule the Supreme Court's decision last summer in the so-called Webster case that gave states greater authority to impose restrictions on abortions, supporters said.

Just a few lines long, the bill would forbid states from restricting a woman's right to have an abortion before the time her fetus becomes viable for life outside the womb, or at any time when necessary to protect the life of the mother.

Sponsors said their aim was to take the fight over rights to abortions away from state legislatures, allowing them to impose only those restrictions that are medically necessary to protect the life or health of the mother. Although no action was expected until next year, abortion-rights backers said the bill would become the central focus of future congressional and political debate on the abortion issue.

A result, they said, would be to thrust the abortion issue even further into the politics of the 1990 House and Senate races.

"This bill is the moral equivalent for women of the 1964 Civil Rights Act," said Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore.

A leader of the abortion opponents, Rep. Christopher Smith, D-N.J., said he welcomed the bill because it would bring a full debate on abortion. He said he was confident the House would defeat it.

"I hope they bring the bill to the floor very quickly," he said. "The question will then be very squarely: Will we permit abortion on demand for the whole nine months of pregnancy?"

The House bill had 88 sponsors, and a version introduced in the Senate carried 19 sponsors.

The bill was aimed at writing into law the landmark 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision establishing a woman's right to an abortion and at reversing the Webster case. Abortion-rights supporters contend the Webster decision eroded rights established 16 years earlier, and signaled a possible further erosion in future high-court decisions.

The Webster decision, however, has energized abortion-rights leaders and raised the temperature of the abortion debate in many states. Democrats won elections in New Jersey and Virginia last week in outcomes credited to increasing public sentiment for abortion rights.

On the other hand, the Pennsylvania legislature passed a law imposing new restrictions on abortion, including requirements for a 24-hour waiting period and that women notify their husbands beforehand.

"The Webster decision forced us to go back to the legislative brasses," said Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif. "Now the focus is on the basic right. I look forward to this being the centerpiece of the abortion fight next year."

"This bill is going to be the rallying point," said Rep. Claudine Schneider, R-R.I., an abortion rights supporter who met with President Bush on the issue this week and who is weighing a 1990 race for the Senate. Bush is expected at a fund raising event for her Monday, despite their differences on abortion.

Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., predicted passage by both the House and Senate but acknowledged supporters would probably not be able to overcome a presidential veto.

Abortion-rights supporters in the Senate on Thursday ended their efforts to overcome Bush's veto of a bill that would extend Medicaid abortions to women who are victims of rape or incest.

Both the House and Senate agreed to provisions keeping the current prohibition on federal payment for abortions.

Anti-abortion protesters arrested outside clinics

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police arrested nearly 500 anti-abortion protesters Friday on charges of violating a new District of Columbia law barring demonstrators from gathering near abortion clinics.

Speakers for Operation Rescue, the national anti-abortion group, that organized the demonstration, said more than 1,000 protesters came here from around the country to oppose the new city ordinance prohibiting demonstrators from gathering within 100 feet of an abortion clinic.

Outside a downtown Washington clinic where abortions are performed, police arrested some of about 300 protesters who were blocking the clinic's entrance and congregating on the sidewalk outside.

Most of those arrested face a misdemeanor charge of blocking an entrance, which carries a maximum penalty of 90 days in jail and a $50 fine, said police spokesman Quintin Petersen.

The protests, which began before dawn, took place at four abortion clinics. By mid-afternoon Friday, 496 people had been arrested and Petersen said the total was expected to rise.

"They are killing babies in there," said Anne Foreman, wife of acting Operation Rescue director Joe Foreman, as she stood outside one clinic.

"Abortion is an industry, and they are making millions and millions of dollars exploiting women," she said. While they blocked the entrance to the clinic, the protesters sang hymns — from the civil rights movement — and used bullhorns to spread their message.

About 100 pro-choice demonstrators attempted to shout down the anti-abortion forces from across the street.

"We just wanted to get out and voice our opinion," said Bonnie Reinstein, who took time off from her job at a nearby hotel to join the protest. "There are so many cases for abortion — rape, incest, times when a mother can't afford a child."

President Bush recently vetoed the District of Columbia's appropriations bill on the ground it allows the city to use local tax funds to finance Medicaid-financed abortions.

A similar bill was approved by Congress on Wednesday and awaits action by Bush.

Pact will help wetlands

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Two federal agencies agreed to curtail the loss of wetlands through a unified policy on development, the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency announced Friday.

The EPA and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers share federal oversight responsibility for wetlands, but their rules have not always jibed.

"We have had over the years some differences in policy reflected in different definitions, in different approaches to consideration of a proposal to develop a wetland or alter a wetland resource," William Reilly told reporters.

Reilly said previous policies "have confused the public and perhaps contributed to less than stellar performance in wetlands conservation."

He made the announcement after addressing an EPA conference titled "Environmental Challenges of the 90s."

The agreement was signed

Wednesday. Under the agreement, wetlands development proposals will be assessed first in terms of whether alternatives exist, Reilly said.

After that question has been resolved, the agreement calls for the two agencies to address questions of compensation in carrying out development in the least destructive ways.

Reilly said the agreement grew out of President Bush's pledge that there would be no net loss of wetlands under his administration.

Panama coup OK by Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — A secret plan allowing the CIA to encourage a coup against Panama's Manuel Antonio Noriega was approved by the administration despite congressional objections to overthrowing foreign leaders without a clear threat to U.S. security, intelligence sources said Friday.

The plan was presented about three weeks ago to congressional overseers in a presidential legal document known as a "finding," the sources said.

House Intelligence Committee Chairman Anthony Beilenson, D-Calif., and two others on the 19-member panel, Matthew McHugh, D-N.Y., and Robert Kasstemeier, D-Wis., responded with a letter of objection to President Bush, said government sources who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

When a president tells Congress of such a plan and presents a legal finding, lawmakers have no direct power to deny him though members can make whatever case they see as appropriate if they disagree.

Neither Beilenson nor McHugh would comment on the letter Friday. Calls to Kasstemeier's office seeking comment were not immediately returned.

Some officials suggested privately that the U.S. government might not have been upset to see the covert plan publicly leaked.

Asked about it on Thursday, Bush said he would neither confirm nor deny such a plan existed.

The plan, first disclosed in The Los Angeles Times on Thursday, may be designed as much to add pressure on Noriega to step aside as it is to encourage an actual coup, the sources said.

One source said leaking stories that a new operation was in place, that it was well funded and that the United States had new leeway to undertake actions — including the death of a leader, so long as it is accidental — would clearly be an encouragement to Noriega to retire.

U.S. officials who have visited Panama in recent weeks have reported that there are no openings, on which they did not step aside as it is to encourage an actual coup, the sources said.

The anti-Noriega plan implements a new administration policy which permits greater latitude to the CIA in encouraging the overthrow of

Shannon Duffy, 8, pets the president's 50-pound bird

Bush gets big bird for Thanksgiving

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush Friday formally proclaimed next Thursday as Thanksgiving, then bestowed a "presidential pardon" on a noisy 50-pound turkey at an annual White House ceremony.

"Combing this is serious stuff," Bush said as the squawking turkey several times interrupted his Rose Garden speech marking the 20th anniversary of Thanksgiving proclamations.

"This annual observance of Thanksgiving was a cherished American tradition ever before our first president, George Washington, issued the first presidential Thanksgiving proclamation in 1798," said

Bush's proclamation. As is the custom, Bush was presented with a live tom turkey by the president of the National Turkey Federation, John Wickliffe, and his wife Eleanor, from Detroit Lakes, Minn.

Bush called the turkey "our special guest" and noted that the first family's dog, Millie, who likes to chase squirrels and pigeons on the White House grounds, "has been put upstairs."

He said the gift turkey "will not end up on anyone's dinner table" and was being granted a "presidential pardon" and sent to a petting zoo in the Washington area.

Bush then left the podium to pet the turkey.

Housing starts up 12 percent in rebound from 7-year low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housing starts bounced back 12 percent in October from September's seven-year low, the government reported Friday.

Analysts said they expect the construction rate to remain stable through the first quarter of 1990.

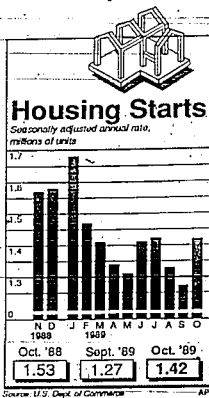

"The housing market seems to have bottomed out," said David Seiders, chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders. But he and other analysts said they do not foresee any surge in building — "just hanging in there."

The Commerce Department reported that new homes and apartments were built at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1.42 million units last month.

The 12 percent rebound from September was the sharpest gain since a 13 percent advance in December 1986. Starts had fallen 4.6 percent in September and 6.3 percent in August.

Although September's pace was revived up from the 1.26 million reported earlier, it still was the most sluggish since new homes and apartments were built at an annual rate of 1.17 million units in October 1982 during the depths of the 1981-82 recession.

Many analysts attributed the September construction drop to a spike in mortgage rates and said the October advance followed a subsequent decline. The housing industry has been among the hardest hit as the Federal Reserve drove up interest rates to slow economic growth and lower inflation.

But the Fed has slowly eased rates over the summer and, except for the blip in September, mortgage rates have fallen from March's 11.23 percent peak to 9.82 percent by the end of October, according to surveys by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

The higher rates stifled sales and boosted inventories of single-family houses to an 8.1-month supply by last March, said Richard Peach, an economist for the Mortgage Bankers Association. As rates have fallen, he said, inventories have dropped to a 6-month supply, which "by historical standards ... are in good shape."

But even though many analysts expect mortgage rates to drop another half a percentage point in coming months, Peach said he does not expect a major surge in building.

Construction of single-family homes in October rose 6.9 percent to an annual rate of 1.03 million units. Single-family starts had fallen 3.1 percent in September and 3.5 percent in August.

Apartment construction rose 28.9 percent in October to an annual rate of 393,000 units. It had fallen 9.4 percent in September.

Air Force defends $73 million buy of fax machines at $421,000 each

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force is defending its purchase of 173 custom-made facsimile machines under contracts that amount to $73 million, contending Friday they are "not your normal fax," and are designed to withstand the dirt, dust and extremes of battlefield duty.

The service was inundated with queries about the machines after a published report said they cost the Air Force $421,000 apiece, a figure computed by dividing the $73 million cost by 173.

Air Force spokesman Maj. Lou Figueroa disputed the figure, saying the service was paying $76,000 for each unit.

He said the machines were being purchased from Liton Industries under a contract for $33 million, and that an additional contract for some $40 million covers "a very extensive list" of diagnostic equipment, laser assemblies, and other items such as power supplies, training for use of the units, and the paper — which costs $100 a roll.

Figueroa said the high cost of paper was due to the fact that it came in 400-foot rolls and is specially coated to handle the high resolution images the machine is designed to transmit.

The spokesman said the custom-made units were ordered to withstand the rigors of the battlefield, and to be used under a variety of conditions that might be encountered in wartime.

"This isn't just a normal fax that sits in your office and does its thing," Figueroa said. "These are not machines made to sit in a wing commander's office. They are designed to be deployed off a dirt runway," he said.

He said the machines, which weigh about 115 pounds and are the size of a "small, compact television," are built to transmit sensitive intelligence data over a variety of phone lines.

"They can be transmitted in what is called in military jargon as 'near, real time,' which means almost instantaneously, he said.

"We are talking about a machine that is capable of allowing a commander in a battle field situation, who is managing fighter aircraft, to get transmissions from satellites to tell him what targets are out there," Figueroa said.

U.S. general says corruption plagues El Salvador, prevents military victory

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. general who drafted a classified military strategy for El Salvador said Friday the guerrillas cannot be defeated on the battlefield and the war drags on because of corruption within the U.S.-backed government.

Gen. Fred Woerner, who until recently headed the U.S. Southern Command in Panama, also said the murder this week of six Roman Catholic priests most likely was the work of the radical right wing acting with the support and consent of the conservative government.

The general, who retired two weeks ago, wrote the 1981 Woerner Report to outline a military strategy for the poorly trained Salvadoran armed forces, fighting leftist guerrillas since 1979.

That report, still classified, called for U.S. military advisers, increased forces, large deliveries of weaponry and massive amounts of economic aid to bolster the battered infrastructure.

Woerner said the six-day rebel offensive under way in El Salvador is "not surprising" and described it as "one more strategic surge for the guerrillas."

"I hold the FMLN in high regard professionally for their staying power," Woerner said, referring to the rebels by their Spanish initials. "They have demonstrated repeatedly the capability to demonstrate what I call a spectacular."

Since the start of the war the guerrillas have staged on an average one major attack every six months.

The 7,000-strong rebels traditionally use guerrilla tactics, striking at will with surprise attacks. They frequently attack the economic infrastructure by destroying power lines and bridges.

The battles under way in the capital of San Salvador are the heaviest since the fighting began.

In El Salvador, the guerrillas acknowledged they could not defeat the 56,000 strong Salvadoran armed forces but said they sought to prove the military could not destroy them, either.

"That is very candid," Woerner said. "This urban attack is the latest in a series, albeit the biggest and best, of spectacles to reestablish their credibility as a power that has to be reckoned with, that cannot be ignored nor can the problem they represent be solved militarily."

Neither the 55 American military advisers nor the millions in U.S. military aid and armaments can wipe out a guerrilla force, he said.

"His plan also sought to attack the root causes of the bitter war, which stemmed from rampant poverty among the populace with the wealth in the hands of a small oligarchy."

None of his recommendations called for direct U.S. intervention, a position he said he still holds.

"We're still at this 10 years later because the problems were so enormous," Woerner said, adding that the civilian governments "couldn't control the corruption," which led to a "focus on the military dimension of the problem at the expense of the civil plans."

Propane blaze shoots 100 feet

JASPER, Mo. (AP) — A propane fire shot flames at least 100 feet into the air before it was controlled Friday morning, and secondary fires were expected to keep 500 people away from their homes for a second night.

"We're gaining on it. It's a slow process," said Jim Gipson, a spokesman for Williams Pipe Line Co. "The situation is not under control. It's stabilized," he said.

No injuries were reported in the blaze, which began Thursday morning at the company's terminal about two miles south of Jasper. It lit up the southwest Missouri sky and was visible at least 25 miles away.

Gipson said firefighters poured water into a 300-foot-long pipeline leading to a 17-acre cavern full of propane to keep it from continuing.

10,000 Bulgarians rally, demand court trial for former leader

TODOR ZHIVKOV
Former Bulgarian leader

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — About 10,000 people rallied outside parliament Friday and demanded that ousted leader Todor Zhivkov be tried in court on allegations he amassed a fortune while Bulgaria's economy deteriorated.

The state-sponsored rally followed a shakeup in the Communist Party and government leadership that forced out several Zhivkov supporters, Petar Mladenov, who replaced Zhivkov last week as party chief, was named Friday to succeed him in the largely ceremonial role of head of state.

The crowd loudly cheered deputy Slavcho Trnski, who launched an unprecedented attack on Zhivkov during the parliament session. Marchers carrying banners for perestroika and waving Bulgarian flags chanted "Zhivkov to court!" Mladenov, in his acceptance speech to the parliament, or National Assembly, leveled harsh criticism at Zhivkov without mentioning him by name.

He said the parliament, which has been a rubber-stamp body for party policy, was "deprived of its legal rights, ... (and) turned into a facade of people's power. ... Such kind of situation cannot be qualified otherwise but as an insult to the whole nation."

"This refers to a most drastic deformation, one of the greatest sins which our people and society will probably never forgive," Mladenov said, according to a text of the speech carried by the state BTA news agency.

"The structures of the command and bureaucratic system" are beginning to shake," Mladenov was quoted as saying. "The administrative idols of yesterday are going to pieces."

Mladenov, formerly foreign minister, also spoke of radical political and economic changes, but was not specific.

The crowd, estimated at about 10,000 by Western journalists, booed official speakers. They apparently associated with Zhivkov.

After the one-hour rally in front of the National Assembly ended, about 500 people gathered at an unofficial rally and chanted, "We want democracy!" and "Down with the murderers!"

They called out the names of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and Mladenov, marched down the street and then dispersed, calling "See you tomorrow" to one another.

An unofficial rally planned for Saturday appears to have been given official approval.

On Thursday, the Communist Party Central Committee dismissed three hard-line Politburo members and installed four men likely to support Mladenov, 53, in implementing reforms.

Trnski's attack was the first harsh public criticism of Zhivkov, 78, who gained power two years after Josef Stalin's death with the aid of the Soviet dictator's supporters and ran the country in a rigid, Stalinist fashion.

The televised National Assembly session was the first plimpee for most Bulgarians of the closed corridors of power from which their lives have been controlled for two generations.

In a hint of impending reform under Mladenov, legislators also voted to strike Article 273 of the penal code, which was used to punish anyone deemed to "have endangered the state or party."

That means the country's new pro-reform groups may suffer less harassment from police than before.

An independent group called Committee 273 was formed this year to press for the change.

The National Assembly also removed some old guard Communists from the government and created an Ecology Ministry to address environmental concerns, the led to formation of the independent group Eco-Glasnost.

E. German premier talks free enterprise, sees hard time ahead

HANS MODROW
Says E. Germany is open

WEST BERLIN (AP) — The new East German premier said Friday his country is open to private enterprise and foreign investment to meet the needs of frustrated consumers, but warned of hard economic times ahead.

In his first speech to the East German parliament as head of the government, Hans Modrow recommended greater cooperation with economically powerful West Germany while rejecting reunification.

The official news agency ADN released a letter from President Bush telling the new leadership the United States is interested in closer relations.

By Friday night, about 1.2 million East Germans had entered all of West Germany, including West Berlin, presaging a second wild weekend of shopping and sightseeing since East Germany opened its borders Nov. 9.

Although East Germany's economy inspires envy in the Soviet bloc, Communist Party chief Egon Krenz and his new leadership have made clear that debts and a dwindling labor force will prevent it from catching the West anytime soon.

More than 200,000 East Germans, well over 1 percent of the population, have moved to West Germany in the past several months. Most are young, skilled workers vital to the country's industry.

Modrow sketched a blueprint for economic recovery that mixes a few free-market principles into the state plan for the nation of 16.5 million.

He said talk of reunification was "dangerous and unrealistic," and instead directed attention toward a course of reform similar to that set for the Soviet Union by President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Gorbachev's model aims at social renewal through democratic freedoms of speech, assembly and the press, and at allowing workers to produce goods or provide services privately in their free time.

East German economists have rejected the more market-oriented reforms embraced by Poland and Hungary, whose economies are in far worse condition.

Predicting hard times ahead, Modrow said continued budget deficits will be necessary and the Eleven of the 28 places were given government must bring prices into line with production costs, which will be hard on the nation's disproportionate number of pensioners.

He blamed the current deficits on "squandering of state money and excessive administrative outlays."

Modrow also revealed his proposed Cabinet at the beginning of a two-day session of Parliament. Eleven of the 28 places were given to non-Communists, members of four small political groups allied with the party.

The 42-member cabinet faced out Nov. 9 to vote for members from the allied parties, which were formed to create a semblance of open government and have become more independent since the pro-democracy movement began.

East Germany is "open for proposals," Modrow said.

isolated him within the Warsaw Pact.

Even hard-line leaders in Czechoslovakia have paid at least lip service to the need to introduce some market forces and plurality of opinion to economics and societies directed from the top.

But the Romanian Communist Party — totally controlled by its non-wild leader — considers any reform of the Stalinist model treasonous.

Romanian diplomats in Vienna said Ceausescu was expected to endorse continuation of the status quo Monday in a keynote speech.

More than 10,000 Czechoslovakians rally in Prague, demanding freedom

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — More than 10,000 people rallied Friday and demanded freedom, a new government and talks between Communist Party leaders and the opposition.

In Bratislava, the capital of Slovakia, 500 students walked from Peace Square to Comenius University, where they placed flowers on the spot where a girl was said to have been killed during the Soviet-led invasion in 1968.

Police did not interfere in the demonstration.

The peaceful demonstration in Prague, organized by the official students' organizations in memory of a Czech student who was killed in the first Czech uprising against Nazi occupation 50 years ago, was held at Charles University.

Independent groups joined the rally, which included speeches and a candlelight march to the Vysehrad Cathedral and cemetery to commemorate the death of the student, Jan Palach.

Martin Klimek, a student of natural sciences, told the crowd that "oppression is worse than death."

"We must fight for freedom because you cannot live without it. We should not only remember the past with piety, we must care for the present and even more for the future," he said.

Witnesses said police were not visible and there was no interference from authorities.

The crowd shouted "Stop lying to us!" and "Dinosaurs, resign!" — a reference to Czechoslovakia's aging party and state leadership, including President Gustav Husak, 76, who took over as party leader after a Soviet-led invasion that chilled the 1968 Prague Spring liberalization period.

The demonstrators also chanted the name of Jan Palach, a student who burned himself to death to protest the crushing of reforms initiated by former party leader Alexander Dubcek.

On Wednesday, police did not break up an environmental group demonstration in Prague, but prevented between 300 and 500 people from marching to government headquarters.

They protested plans to build a superhighway.

Romanian head defies reform efforts

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Romanian leader Nicolae Ceausescu appears to have set the tone for next week's meeting of his Communist Party, blasting what he called reactionaries who want reform.

There also reports that the government, bucking a tide of political and economic reform in the Soviet bloc, was taking measures to prevent any upheaval during the five-day party congress that begins Monday in Bucharest.

The maverick Ceausescu was the only Warsaw Pact leader to defy the Soviets in the 1960s and 1970s by not permitting joint military exercises in his country and by not participating in the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Such independence in foreign policy decisions earned him admiration in the West, while drawing attention away from repression at home, coupled with a personality cult around the "Conducator" — or "Leader," as Ceausescu is called — that has become unique in Europe.

Now, with democratization reshaping most of the Soviet bloc, it is Ceausescu's steadfast refusal to introduce political and economic freedoms that increasingly have isolated him within the Warsaw Pact.

Even hard-line leaders in Czechoslovakia have paid at least lip service to the need to introduce some market forces and plurality of opinion to economics and societies directed from the top.

But the Romanian Communist Party — totally controlled by its non-wild leader — considers any reform of the Stalinist model treasonous.

Romanian diplomats in Vienna said Ceausescu was expected to endorse continuation of the status quo Monday in a keynote speech.

World Salvador civil abuse under fire

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — El Salvador's government presided over a "resurgence of torture" this year that included sexual abuse and beatings of prisoners and summary executions of political opponents, according to a U.N. report released Friday.

The annual report by Jose Antonio Pastor Ridruejo, a special representative of the U.N. Commission on Human Rights, criticized both the government and leftist rebels for kidnappings and assassinations.

It was released a day after eight people, six of them Jesuit priests, were slain in San Salvador.

President Alfredo Cristiani, who took office June 1, said his government was not involved in the Jesuit slayings, which took place amid the biggest rebel offensive in the 10-year-old war.

The killings fit a pattern of rising repression, torture and political violence perpetrated by uniformed soldiers, as documented in Pastor's report.

"The special representative is again extremely disturbed by the number and seriousness of the human rights violations committed thus far in 1989, particularly by the resurgence of torture," Pastor said.

Members of the state apparatus, particularly of the armed forces, have carried out politically motivated summary executions whose exact numbers cannot be determined but are generally comparable to those for last year," he added.

Estimates of the number of summary executions tallied through August vary. The Roman Catholic Church's Archdiocesan Legal Protection office put the number at 50, and the government's Salvadoran Human Rights Commission estimated 68 people have been killed.

As of Oct. 14, Pastor said, the justice minister told him about 250 people were detained for political offenses, "a much higher figure than the previous year."

Non-governmental organizations that contacted Pastor in El Salvador during this visit Oct. 8-14 "complained about a marked increase in the torture of political prisoners by their interrogators," he said.

"Witnesses belonging to organizations invariably made roughly the same statement:

"Long periods of interrogation while blindfolded and without being able to sit down or rest, extensive beatings, continuous use of a hood which impedes breathing and causes fainting, electric shocks in water tanks, use of drugs and acids, and on many occasions rape and sexual abuse of both women and men, as well as threat to family members," Pastor said.

"Witnesses who did not belong to organizations "complained" of psychological ill-treatment and sometimes of beatings and death threats to themselves or to members of their families," he said.

The government told him detainees were blindfolded to prevent them from recognizing their interrogators but denied there was systematic use of torture.

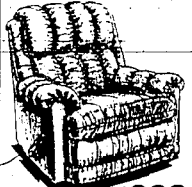

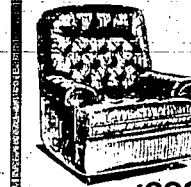

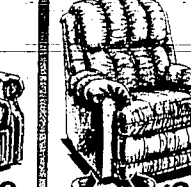

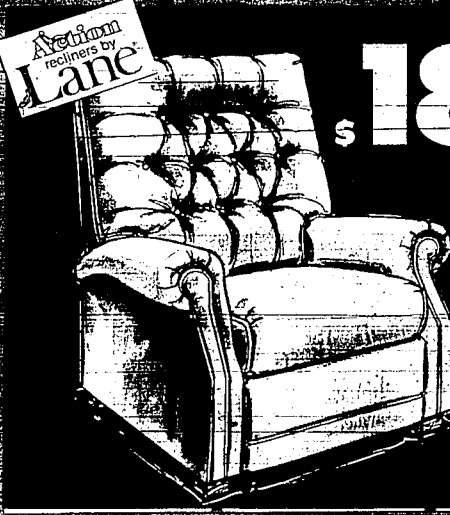

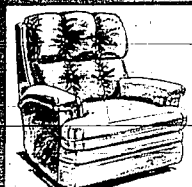

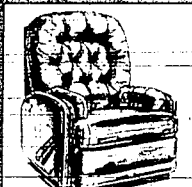

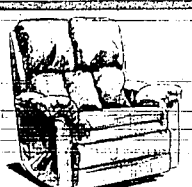

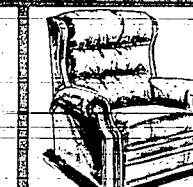

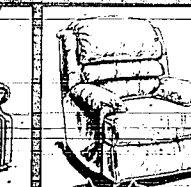

Salvadoran authorities said the claims of torture were part of a campaign by the rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Movement.

Pastor found that "thus far in 1989, organized activities of trade unions and peasant and other organizations has increased."

Still no sign of kidnapped relief workers

GENEVA (AP) — The International Committee of the Red Cross said Friday there is still no sign of its two relief workers kidnapped in Lebanon six weeks ago, although it believes the men are not in immediate danger.

Red Cross delegate Andre Pasquier said the humanitarian organization might withdraw its operations from Lebanon if Emanuel Christen and Elio Erriqez remained in long-term captivity.

The Red Cross stopped work two weeks ago, saying the southern city where the men were seized. The orthopedic center where Christen and Erriqez helped fit artificial limbs closed immediately after the Oct. 6 kidnappings.

Pasquier told Swiss radio that Red Cross negotiators met Tuesday with Angelo Gnaedinger but returned Wednesday from 10 days of talks in the Lebanon. He said there was no clue to the identity of the kidnapers and no signs of an early release for the two Swiss workers.

New coin added to Centennial series

BOISE (AP) — The state has decided to add a seventh silver medalion to its Centennial commemorative series, honoring Idaho's forest products industry.

"The forest products industry is a great part of the Idaho heritage," said Commissioner Chairman Harry P. Magnuson. "It would be unfortunate not to commemorate this vital part of Idaho's economy and history in a significant way."

That might pose problems for collectors, because the series was planned for six medalions and vinyl folders and cedar display boxes were issued with six slots.

But Magnuson said the Centennial Foundation will replace the six-hole vinyl folders with eight-slot holders. Those who own six-hole red cedar boxes were advised to send them, minus the medalions, to Medalions Consultants, Inc., Post Office Box 88, Kelloug, where a seventh hole will be inset and the boxes will be returned to their owners, Magnuson said.

Six medalions in the series honor statehood, Indian heritage, mining, agriculture, recreation and energy. The new timber medalion will be available in December.

Arizona man's body still sought

LEWISTON (AP) — Officials are continuing their search for the body of an Arizona man who disappeared in the Clearwater River following a boating accident while steelhead fishing Wednesday near Peck.

Authorities identified the drowning victim as Ron Jaeb, 37 or 38, of Mesa, Ariz.

Three divers from the Nez Perce County Sheriff's Department and four from the Clearwater County Sheriff's Department searched the river from before 8 a.m. until after 2 p.m. Thursday, said Nez Perce County Deputy Ron Hull.

The water temperature of the river was 41 degrees, Hull said. The search will continue Friday.

Jaeb and two other men, one from California and the other a fishing guide from Orofino, were washed into the river when the drift boat in which they were fishing swamped in a rapid about a mile east of Peck.

The anchor of the boat became lodged in rocks while the boat was in the rapids, causing the boat to swamp and the three men to be washed out.

Students abandon U of I lawsuit

MOSCOW (AP) — Students at the University of Idaho apparently have abandoned their threatened lawsuit against state officials over a controversial student fee increase.

But a few students are at least talking about initiating a class-action lawsuit on their own, giving the struggle new life.

Students have voted 1,224 to 428 in opposition to taking legal action against state officials. In June, the Idaho Board of Education approved fee increases of $25 per semester for resident undergraduate students, $100 for non-residents, $10 for graduate students and $5 for part-time students.

The referendum vote won't be binding if the needed 25 percent voter turnout isn't reached.

With tabulating still incomplete Thursday night, turnout appeared to be roughly 20 percent, said William S. Broadhead, chairman of the ASUI Political Concerns Board, which oversees elections.

Students did vote 669 to 448 to continue discussing the fee increase with administrators rather than just dropping the matter. But a top administrator said the fee increase is "a moot issue."

"It's difficult to have dialogue on something that's passed by the Board (of Education), is down the road and is in the budget," said W. Harold Godwin, acting UI vice president for student affairs.

But Godwin pledged the administration of current UI President Elisabeth A. Zinser will have continuing dialogue with students on such issues in the future.

Vacant hospital's new use unclear

ST. ANTHONY (AP) — The Fremont School Board plans further study on a proposal to turn a vacant hospital into a school building, even though it doesn't have the money and the city is negotiating to turn the site into a prison work camp.

Trustees voted Thursday night to look into the condition of the Fremont General Hospital building, state regulations and remodeling and purchase costs. About 75 patrons attended the meeting to back the proposal.

The proposal for the hospital came as a surprise to city officials earlier this week. The city has spent months negotiating with the Department of Corrections, which wants to turn the building into a minimum-security prison camp.

Board Chairman Bruce Crapp apologized to Councilman Evan Bastow, who represented the St. Anthony City Council at the meeting, "for placing them in a hot seat by coming into this when we did."

A study committee is to report Nov. 27.

King task force adds 2 Boiseans

BOISE (AP) — Two Boise residents have been named to the Martin-Luther-King Jr. Task Force.

Gov. Cecil Andrus announced Friday he has appointed Ernesto Sanchez and Ken Yamamoto to the task force, which arranges Idaho's observances of the birthday of the slain civil rights leader.

Yamamoto, representing the Idaho Education Association, is a new member. Sanchez, director of Idaho Legal Aid Services, succeeds Camilo Lopez, Caldwell, who resigned.

Condemned killer loses latest appeal

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal judge on Friday denied condemned killer Ronald Lafferty's appeal of his conviction and death sentence for the 1984 slayings of his sister-in-law and niece.

Lafferty, a religious fundamentalist who claimed God told him to kill his victims, was competent to stand trial and knowingly waived his right to a defense of diminished capacity, said U.S. District Judge J. Thomas Greene.

Defense attorneys had argued that Lafferty suffered brain damage from a failed attempt to hang himself in jail and long has been subject to paranoid delusions.

But Greene said his review of the transcripts of three competency examinations convinced him that 4th District Judge J. Robert Bullock correctly found Lafferty competent and aware of what he was doing when he waived the diminished capacity defense.

"I'm impressed by the fact that there was a lot of attention given to it," Greene said. "I find there has been no evidence heard that refutes that finding. I'm satisfied Mr. Lafferty received a fair trial. No one is entitled to a perfect trial."

Lafferty, shackled hand and foot, showed no emotion at the ruling. He has resisted appeals in the past, and his attorneys said they would have to talk to him at Utah State Prison before deciding whether to take the case to the 10th U.S. Court of Appeals in Denver.

"We don't know," said court-appointed attorney Michael Esplin. "It's day to day."

Lafferty, 48, and his brother, Dan, 41, were convicted in the July 24, 1984, murders of former Idaho beauty queen Brenda Wright Lafferty, a former resident of Kimberly, and her 15-month-old daughter, Erica, in their American Fork home. Dan Lafferty was sentenced to consecutive life prison terms.

In 1988, the Utah Supreme Court denied Lafferty's automatic appeal and last May rejected by a 4-1 decision defense arguments that the justices lacked a complete trial transcript during the first proceeding.

Lafferty had said he would not fight his scheduled execution in June 1988, but changed his mind at the last minute and permitted the federal appeal.

In July, he sought assurances from Greene that his appeal would be given just consideration, saying he would rather die than spend the rest of his life in prison "going through this kind of nonsense."

Assistant Utah Attorney General Sandra Sjogren said Greene's decision, affirming a 125-page recommendation by U.S. Magistrate Ronald Boyce, was "certainly what we were hoping for."

Greene also concurred with Boyce's finding that Lafferty's former attorney represented him effectively and remanded the case back to 4th District Court.

Once a district judge signs a new death warrant, he must schedule the execution not less than 30 days nor more than 60 days after. Lafferty has chosen by firing squad rather than by injection.

Before Greene's ruling, defense attorney Gary Weight argued that a trio of psychiatrists and psychologists had concluded Lafferty was incompetent, but that Bullock relied on a fourth expert witness with the opposite view.

Weight also said Bullock had questioned Lafferty about whether he wanted to plead innocent by reason of insanity, but not specifically about waiving the diminished capacity defense.

"Our position is that he did not give up that defense," he said.

Greene noted there was no suggestion that Lafferty was incompetent at the time of the killings. Weight agreed, but said the self-proclaimed prophet had insisted the "act was solely motivated by a

Board encourages rural development

TWO FALLS (AP) — The state Board of Education has awarded $199,703 in grants aimed at encouraging economic development in rural Idaho.

"While most of our awards go toward basic research with long-range goals, these particular grants target problems of immediate economic concern," Ed House, chairman of the board-appointed Higher Education Research Council, said Friday.

The grants, allocated at the board's meeting, were from a $2 million research fund authorized by the 1989 Legislature.

The rural development program came through a joint effort by the council, governor's office and the state departments of Agriculture, Commerce, Health and Welfare and Employment. House said.

"We want to put more college and university resources to work in ways that yield an immediate economic return to the state," said House, dean of graduate studies at Idaho State University.

"More specifically, we hope to promote jobs and commerce in rural areas where the economic rebound has lagged behind that of the cities," he said. "Providing economic diversity and stability in rural areas is one of Idaho's most important goals. The board's efforts will make a significant contribution to that effort," said Gov. Cecil Andrus, in a statement issued at Boise.

"We have tremendous resources at our colleges and universities. These grants will put those resources to work helping our rural communities," the governor said.

Last May, the Higher Education Research Council and other participating state agencies identified 14 areas of research that met the goals, then sent out requests for proposals to college and university faculty.

The council got 30 proposals, of which 13 were funded.

The projects, receiving grants include $19,690 for a public works infrastructure inventory; $21,819 for a study of capital availability in Idaho; $20,000 to examine the feasibility of raising beef specifically for the Japanese market and $18,950 for a study of local school participation in rural economic development assessment, planning and evaluation.

Mormon chapel bombed in Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Two bombs exploded in Bogota, causing minor damage to a Mormon chapel and a community hall, but police Friday reported no injuries.

The attacks late Thursday against the Mormon chapel in the southern sector of the Colombian capital occurred in the Garden City district, which last week also was hit by a powerful bomb that damaged several homes in the area. Nobody was injured.

The bombings are attributed to the terrorist offensive unleashed three months ago by drug traffickers following a government crackdown against the traffickers.

Idaho Falls discusses year-round schooling

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Officials of the Idaho Falls School District say overcrowding is getting worse and they're considering year-round sessions.

That was one of the options discussed Thursday night at one in a series of meetings on how to ease overcrowding. Three other alternatives involve construction of new schools.

Bush Elementary School Principal Rob Freeman, who worked under a year-round schedule in Utah for two years, said the hardest part is making the change. "You are bucking a 200-year-old system," Freeman said.

He said year-round school requires a philosophical commitment because of the initial work and cost involved, but it can increase school capacity by 18-25 percent.

Freeman cited studies conducted in Oxnard and LaMesa, Calif., where year-round schools have operated for more than 10 years. That indicates students remain in school longer and earn better grades than under conventional schedules.

The year-round system seems to have decreased the potential for teacher and student burnout and attendance has improved, he said. The usual breakdown is nine weeks in school with three weeks off.

He said the district where he worked was able to guarantee that 98 percent of all families would have all their children on the same vacation schedule.

8-year-old girl testifies in sex abuse case

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — An 8-year-old girl has testified in 1st District Court that the man accused of sexually abusing her fondled her twice at his Hauser Lake home.

The girl testified Thursday against Wylie Marks, 39, during the first day of his scheduled five-day trial before Judge Gary Haman on a charge of sexual abuse of a child.

Authorities allege Marks had sexual contact with the girl and her sister between March, 1988, and the following September.

However, Kootenai County Chief Deputy Prosecutor Lansing Haynes said Marks was charged with only one count for "tactical" and other reasons he declined to comment on.

The case is the first alleged child sexual abuse matter to be tried before a jury in Kootenai County in more than 2 1/2 years.

What's what

British women
Q. Aren't British women shorter than American women?
A. Yes, generally. Seven out of 10 are under 5-foot-7.

Ear rings
Q. Ear rings remain on that list of fangirls women like most. Despite attitude changes. Never in modern history have women in general been willing to give them up. Question arises whether those many men who now also elect to wear an ear ring or two likewise give their partner the "attention." What do you think?
A. Another tangible on the women's favored list, incidentally, is the handbag. Some men fooled with that one, but it didn't seem to rate.

Another reported fact
Q. Another reported fact you need not try to confirm at home is the average person's skull can be depressed by 10 percent before it cracks.

CAMPAIGN BUZZ
Q. How much can I get for a political button from Abraham Lincoln's last campaign?
A. Not much. Has to be shiny. That's buttons didn't crop up until William McKinley campaigned to beat William Jennings Bryan. About 36 years after Lincoln did his campaigning.

Soldiers of New Guinea's Koiri tribe
In bygone years saluted their superior officers, but not with any salute you-and I might recognize. When reporting in or passing by, they lightly chucked said superior under the chin.

Modern translators say "almanac"

Accepted way to keep your car clean in the 1920s was to throw the trash out the window. Not an somebody's front lawn-moss-but wherever the road looked road-notbody-thought highway litter a problem. So says a vehicular veteran.

Murphy's vanity reaches new heights in credits for new film

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vanity, thy name is Eddie Murphy! Reaching new levels of self-promotion, Murphy's name is trumpeted across the screen five times in the opening credits for the comedian's new movie "Harlem Nights," which opened Friday.

"Paramount Pictures presents in association with Eddie Murphy Productions a film by Eddie Murphy," the credits read, "Starring Eddie Murphy ... executive producer Eddie Murphy ... written and directed by Eddie Murphy."

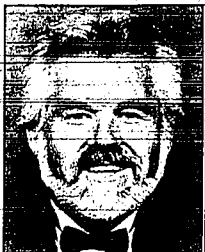

During the film's media screening in Los Angeles earlier this week, laughter rippled through the theater as the Murphy barrage reached for its five-count crescendo.

"Harlem Nights" features Murphy and Richard Pryor in a foul-mouthed, violence-filled look at a 1938 nightclub in Harlem. The film marks Murphy's feature directorial debut.

As prominent as Murphy's name is in the film, the newspaper advertisement goes one better:

EDDIE MURPHY
Takes credit for everything Murphy's name appears six times.

KENNY ROGERS
Special will air on TV as played at a concert audience at Atlanta's Fox Theater.

Kenny Rogers' show makes it to television ATLANTA (AP) — Singer Kenny Rogers' Christmas program is coming to television, a year after it played at a concert audience at Atlanta's Fox Theater. "Kenny Rogers in Concert," will premiere on Georgia Public Television Dec. 2, and will air on PBS stations across the country later in the month. The show includes a version of "O Holy Night" performed by Rogers, the Forester Sisters and the Lee College Singers from Cleveland, Tenn.

"There are Christmas songs and there are Christmas songs," Rogers said. "This song, to me, really typifies what Christmas is all about."

Gielgud pays tribute to Princess Diana's beauty
LONDON (AP) — Actor Sir John Gielgud paid tribute Friday to the "youth and exquisite beauty" of Princess Diana as she presided over his installation as the first honorary member of the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art.

The princess, whose husband Prince Charles is her third, is president of the prestigious drama, and leading actors including Sarah York and Sir Richard Attenborough were on hand for the ceremony, along with present-day students.

"My career has been marvellously lucky. I only hope that many of you will succeed as I have been lucky enough to do," said Gielgud.

Gielgud entered the academy on a scholarship in 1922 and was its president until his 85th birthday earlier this year. Princess Diana, 28, succeeded him.

Gielgud referred to the two new appointments — himself as fellow and she as president — as "venerability and wisdom" on one hand and "youth and exquisite beauty" on the other.

"I was a very bad president," Gielgud told the audience.

Attenborough, chairman of the academy's council, described him as "in truth, one of the greatest actors of all time."

"We were just very lucky. We're all excited about it," said J.J. Jackson, a specialist in Michigan State's Office of Programs for Handicapped Students.

Wunder and Jackson attended the Michigan School for the Blind together in Lansing from 1967-68 and are longtime friends.

Wunder, a Saginaw native raised in Detroit, was born blind.

Mrs. Quayle claims U.S. was not prepared
MEXICO CITY (AP) — Marilyn Quayle said the United States wasn't prepared after Hurricane Hugo and the San Francisco earthquake with lists of businesses to donate emergency supplies.

The wife of Vice President Dan Quayle, who has made disaster preparation and relief her main project, spoke Thursday during a tour of a Red Cross hospital. She also talked with officials from government civil protection and disaster agencies.

Child who was nearly abducted just wants to see rest of movie

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — For James Kirk II, it seemed like he was a long time coming. It was hearing his call. It was the theater restroom, the 6-year-old from Washougal was doing what he had been told to do if a stranger ever grabbed him: Yell at the top of his lungs.

"I was just screaming out 'Help me, help me,'" James said in an interview with The Columbian newspaper in Vancouver.

As he was carried out of the theater, James noticed no one was hearing his call.

"I guess they thought he's my father or something. He kept saying, 'Calm down, son, calm down.' And then someone called the police."

Officers later arrested Westley Alan Dodd, 28, of Vancouver. Prosecutors have said they planned to formally charge him Friday with kidnapping and with three counts of first-degree murder in the deaths of three young boys.

James had gone with his family Monday night to a theater in suburban Camas to see the movie, "Honey, I Shrunk the Kids."

His trip to the washroom could have been his last.

A man carried James out of the theater and towards his car. The theater's co-owners gave chase, and the boy ran to them when the man put him down.

Dodd, of Vancouver, has been accused of first-degree kidnapping in the attempted abduction of James, and first-degree aggravated murder in the slayings of brothers William, 10, and Cole, 11, of Vancouver, and Lee Joseph Ischi, 4, of Portland, Ore.

James, who will be 7 on Nov. 26, on Wednesday recounted what happened when he was dragged from the theater.

"One thing on his mind was the movie. He still wants to see the ending of the story featuring children shrunk by a scientist's invention who are tossed out with the trash and struggle to make it back to the safety of their house."

"The movie had been showing for about a half hour when James asked his mother, Janet Blakley, whether he could go to the restroom. She let him go alone and he noticed the man when he walked into the restroom."

"I came in and stood on the other side (of the restroom)," said James.

Seconds later, "He told me he's going to bring me outside, and he's not going to hurt me," said James. "He picked me up and I started screaming and he punched me in the stomach."

"The man made his way through the theater lobby, holding James around the waist with a viselike grip as the boy yelled."

A few feet outside the theater, the man put down the screaming boy. "He just told me to go back in," said James, who turned and ran to the theater's co-owners, Tony Ness and Cathy Asher, who had followed the youngster out of the building.

At her seat, Blakley was unaware of what had happened.

"Here he comes, holding his stomach and chest," she said.

"I said, 'What happened?' He said, 'Mom, this guy hit me.' I said, 'Who was it?'"

When the man's car broke down and single-handedly returned the man to the theater where police picked him up.

Blakley said she had noticed the man in the theater before: the show started and didn't like his looks.

"He just seemed real out of place to me," she said. "He didn't belong in there. There was something wrong."

Blakley and her three children live in a rented, two-bedroom, single-wide trailer along the upper Washougal River in western Skamania County.

A longtime hospital housekeeper, she has not worked for several years and relies on $881 a month in public assistance to raise her family.

Blakley described herself as a worrier.

"I'm nervous with them standing in the driveway waiting for the bus each morning," she said. "I hope kids will pay attention to this."

Florida woman will celebrate 115 years today

PALATKA, Fla. (AP) — A big birthday bash is planned for Carrie White, who turns 115 Saturday and is recognized by the Guinness Book of World Records as the oldest living person on Earth.

As many as 800 guests are expected at the party planned for Monday at Putnam Memorial Nursing Home, where Mrs. White lives, and there will be a big cake, nursing home administrator Paul Allen said.

When she turned 114, Guinness representatives gave Mrs. White a gold embossed certificate declaring her the oldest person alive, though she was not listed as such in the 1989 edition of the record book because hospital records certifying her age had not been authenticated in time.

Mrs. White's life is a sad mystery. She spent 75 years in a mental institution.

She was born Carrie Joyner on Nov. 18, 1874, in Gadsden County near Georgia. She lived and worked near Tallahassee and married John White, who was a blacksmith or farmer.

In 1909 her husband admitted her to the Florida State Hospital at Chattahoochee; hospital records described Mrs. White's problem as "post-typhoid psychosis," but doctors today don't recognize the term.

Porn distributor convicted in tax case

CLEVELAND (AP) — A federal court jury Friday convicted reputed pornography kingpin of conspiring to conceal some $8 million in profits from his business empire, mostly in secret Swiss bank accounts.

Reuben Sturman, who was convicted on all 16 counts of his indictment alleging conspiracy, tax fraud and violating foreign banking requirements, slumped in his seat and stroked his beard as the jury returned the verdict.

Two other defendants, Sturman's son David Sturman and business associate Ralph Levine, were convicted on one conspiracy count each.

Walesa whirls through New York day

NEW YORK (AP) — Polish Solidarity leader Lech Walesa went through a whirlwind series of meetings Friday with union officials, Jewish leaders, politicians and businessmen, and paused to praise American generosity.

He led a group of state union leaders that as he was listening to speeches that preceded his own, he came to appreciate what he termed "the greatness of America."

In Poland, he said, "We fight, we risk, but you are in a different situation. You don't have to fight, you don't have to share with us, you don't have to help us."

"But this is not the way you behave. I thought, 'Would I believe as you do? Would I be seeing this as clearly?'"

The Senate voted Tuesday to authorize $657 million in economic aid to Poland over three years. On Thursday the House went further, approving a three-year package of $846.5 million.

Walesa was scheduled to leave New York City late Friday and fly to Chicago, where Polish-Americans had been painting signs of welcome for him.

Walesa's meeting with New York state labor leaders began a day that included other sessions with Jewish leaders, newspaper editors and businessmen.

Walesa also met Friday with New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, who said "We hardly know the man ... but we cheer him for all the wonderful ideas he represents."

Cuomo announced plans by Harper & Row to publish a collection of Abraham Lincoln's speeches and writings on democracy in Polish and English next year.

Cuomo said he conceived of the "Lincoln on Democracy Project" during a meeting in June with teachers from Poland who told him books on Lincoln were not available in their country.

Walesa thanked Cuomo for the Lincoln project and alluded to the speed of political change throughout Eastern Europe: "I don't know if you can keep pace with translations for other languages because the line is already forming."

Man who punched attorney convicted by jury

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A man who punched his public defender in the face as a jury heard on his been convicted of the charges that brought him to court in the first place.

Keith Johnson Grady's blow left Assistant Public Defender John Benito crumpled on the floor Wednesday.

Bailiffs quickly subdued Grady. Benito was taken to a hospital, where he received several stitches near his eye.

Grady, 31, was found guilty Thursday on all seven counts against him — rape, robbery, burglary and two counts each of kidnapping and aggravated assault in a May 19 attack on a woman.

The punching occurred in the first hour of Grady's trial. Grady knocked his lawyer to the floor, then stood over him and yelled, "Don't stand over me no nigger," something witnesses said they never heard Benito say.

Grady was chained to his chair Wednesday and Thursday, delivering his own closing argument that way.

KAID to be off the air temporarily in valley

TWIN FALLS — Magic Valley residents will be without public television Monday and Tuesday when KAIT Channel 4 from Boise, goes off the air while a new transmitter is installed on Deer Point to boost the signal and add stereo capability.

The station will sign off at midnight Sunday and will be back on the air by Wednesday morning if there are no complications, Allen Parks, a KAIT spokesman, said.

"Some of the programs from those two days will be rebroadcast after we come back on the air," Parks said. Viewers should watch for announcements on rebroadcast times for PBS series, adult learning segments and specials, he said.

Burley and Rupert residents will also lose their public television station, KAIT's sister station KISU, toward the end of the month while a new transmitter is installed in the eastern portion of the state.

FAA awards money for new Hailey airport control tower

WASHINGTON — The Federal Aviation Administration has awarded about $242,000 for an airport control tower at Hailey to handle air traffic in the Wood River Valley, Sen. James McClure has announced.

The grant will go to the Blaine County Airport Commission for a moveable control tower.

"The new control tower will greatly improve safety at Friedman Memorial Airport," McClure said Thursday. "After all the time and effort we've put into the safety issue at Hailey, I'm pleased with this step forward toward the completion of the control tower."

The structure will be moveable, which is less costly to build than a stationary tower. The contractor will begin construction on a three-phase plan, with completion of the final tower sometime next spring.

A 1987 study conducted by an FAA technician determined that a tower was needed to improve safety at Friedman. However, FAA officials told McClure the opposite. FAA Administrator James Busey reviewed the situation and concluded the tower was necessary.

Police arrest Twin Falls man for lewd, lascivious conduct

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man was arrested Thursday on a felony charge of lewd and lascivious conduct, a minor under 16, according to court papers.

Elio August Purin, 38, 3600 N., 3400 E., is charged, with touching and fondling a girl on various occasions between January 1985 and August 1987, when she was 10, 14 years old, papers said.

Purin was arrested after he came to the Twin Falls police station for questioning, Detective Ron Garey said.

The Mode Ltd's safe among items stolen Wednesday

TWIN FALLS — While shoppers were dreaming Wednesday night about snatching bargains at The Mode Ltd's going out of business sale, someone walked off with the store's safe.

According to police reports, someone entered the Blue Lakes Mall store, forced open an office door and wheeled out the "Sentry Security" safe, containing about $6,000 in cash and $3,700 in checks. The safe itself is worth $300, the report said.

Three phones valued at $100 each also were taken.

A hammer, a screwdriver and "metal pieces" were found at the scene. Detectives and store officials declined comment.

No decision on whether dads can be part of teen program

TWIN FALLS — No decision was reached Friday regarding whether students other than teen moms should be allowed to attend the Magic Valley Teen Parent Program.

"We discussed it but we're still back where we were," Acting Program Director Keith Tolzin said of his meeting with school district administrators and program officials concerning the recent enrollment of three boys, one a father-to-be.

The consortium, consisting of representatives of the various school districts, will meet Monday to further discuss letting other students into the program, Tolzin said. "We'll deal with it on a policy level," he said. "We're going to call all the school districts together and see what they want."

Valley will feel myriad of minimum wage effects

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The price of a Big Mac or a Whopper will probably go up after new federal minimum-wage standards go into effect.

"That is the balance struck when the minimum-wage increase signed Friday by President Bush goes into effect," Twin Falls, service-sector workers, maids, kitchen helpers, fast-food workers and domestic help work at or below minimum wage, Labor Market Analyst Lon McDonald of the Job Service said.

The area has the lowest wages of any urban area in Idaho, McDonald said.

"I believe that your employers here would have more federal minimum-wage jobs than in other areas," he said, but not many more.

"I think it would surprise people in this valley that there are as many minimum-wage jobs as there are."

The Twin Falls labor market is the tightest in years for employers. It's a job-seeker's market, with employers being forced to raise their wages to attract workers.

Twin Falls will undoubtedly feel the myriad effects of an increased minimum wage, even though the booming economy is forcing bottom-end wages upward.

But certain segments of the economy remain at the minimum wage, and those forced to subsist on a minimum wage have been trying to keep up on inflation with a wage that doesn't, McDonald said. If the minimum wage had been adjusted for inflation since it was last raised in 1981, the level would be $4.42.

Employers with unemployment insurance have raised wages 42 percent between 1987 and 1988, the latest data available, Job Service spokeswoman Marilee Biersmeier said. Those with insurance are the only ones the Job Service has data on.

The lowest average wage in Twin Falls County, per job sector, was $3.17 for domestic workers, according to a Department of Employment publication. The only other segment of the economy below the $3.80 minimum going into effect April 1990 are service jobs at $3.66.

General office clerks, sales clerks, kitchen helpers, janitors and security guards sometimes start below $3.60.

But even though the minimum wage increase will help

Ofte says Superfund listing not all bad news

By N. S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Inclusion on the Superfund's National Priority List is not all bad news, the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory manager Friday said.

The Environmental Protection Agency this week added the INEL to its list of the worst hazardous waste sites in the country. But inclusion on that list provides for public involvement in cleanup decisions, said Don Ofte, the Energy Department's manager at INEL, in an interview Friday.

Not only are the state and the EPA looking at waste cleanup at INEL, but the facility itself is becoming more involved with waste management as a science, he said.

Ofte was in Twin Falls to speak to education officials about a master's degree program at Idaho Falls in waste-management technology.

"We're very serious about taking care of the back end of the cycle," he said. "The trend in waste management is to avoid or reduce the amount of hazardous waste by paying attention to what is introduced in an industrial process, he said.

The need for better waste management is well illustrated by some of the waste problems from INEL's past. Scientists are trying to develop technology that will safely and effectively clean up the several million cubic feet of plutonium-contaminated waste buried pell-mell from 1952 to 1970.

"You don't just go in there with a backhoe," Ofte said.

The most promising method, a process called vitrification, fuses waste and the soil it's buried in into glass, Ofte said.

"That process looks extremely attractive for the buried waste," he said. Digging up the waste in a conventional manner could create radioactive dust and would require redundant safety systems to keep contamination from spreading.

If it can be shown that the glass from the vitrification process won't leach radioactive material and is stable, it could be safe to leave it in the ground.

If it must be moved, the glass would be much easier to dig up and safer to handle, Ofte said.

6 deer hit while shifting range areas

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

FAIRFIELD — Three does and three fawns were hit by one car Thursday night and Fish and Game Department officials say drivers should be on the look-out for deer crossing roadways.

The deer were killed while trying to cross U.S. Highway 20 about midway between its intersection with Highway 75 and Fairfield, said Lee Frost, a Blaine County conservation officer with Fish and Game.

Frost said that while most of the multiple animal killings can be blamed on trucks, Thursday's slaughter was caused by a Chevrolet Suburban.

According to the Camas County Sheriff's Office, the car, driven by Elmer Cherry, Idaho Falls, was not speeding, as in most deer killing cases. Apparently several trucks were traveling on the roadway from the opposite direction and may have trapped the deer on the roadway.

No one riding in the vehicle was injured, although it did sustain about $1,000 worth of damage, according to Frost.

Frost warned motorists to be aware that deer and other range animals will continue to cross roadways in large numbers for at least two more weeks as they move north from their winter range areas.

He said the eight to nine miles of Highway 20 at the base of Moonstone Mountain is "probably the single most dangerous spot" in the area because many deer funnel down the mountain, across the roadway and into the desert.

Pony Express program gives kids a 'reason' to learn geography

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — What's the name of the large plateau that covers most of southern Idaho?

Is it the east or west of the Continental Divide?

Although the first question's answer, the Columbia Plateau, eluded one two-member team of seventh-graders Friday, the second question was answered correctly: Idaho is west of the Continental Divide.

While yet another study, this one a Gallup poll, recently showed that Americans don't know their geography, Magic Valley seventh-graders have been reading and studying in preparation for The Pony Express, a geography Super Bowl of sorts.

Through a program sponsored by the Idaho Geographic Foundation, 10 teams of seventh-graders, along with parents, teachers and classmates, gathered at Robert Stuart Junior High School Friday evening to see who knew the most about Idaho.

"It's been terrific," teacher Shauna Robinson said.

"The element of competition makes learning a challenge and it's also helped the kids learn to do research," she added.

Friday evening's Pony Express competition is the culmination of an eight-week program called "The Great Race."

Each week, the foundation issues a series of questions about Idaho geography, with a little bit of history mixed in. The students research the answers and compete with teams from other schools or teams within their own schools.

Students easily blurted out the answers to some of the questions, such as naming one state that borders Idaho to the west. But other questions were stumpers, such as naming certain mountain ranges.

But more importantly, students interviewed while waiting outside the Robert Stuart Junior High School library for their turn at the table said they have learned from the program.

Kerry Meyer, a 12-year-old Robert Stuart student, said she was interested in learning about Idaho geography because "this is more of a contest than studying."

Shayla Dunn, 13, who attends junior high school in Bliss, said she enjoyed doing the research because there was a reason to do it.

The research paid off for Shayla and her partner, Christian Janis. They finished first, followed by a team from Hagerman and a team from Robert Stuart. The winners will move on to the state competition in Boise next month.

Phone call to potential witness may have been Nevada sheriff's detective

By ANITA DENNIS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A mysterious phone call Wednesday night to a potential witness in the James Solomon case might have been made by a Nevada sheriff's detective.

Arnetta Boyd received a call from someone who claimed to be Randall Everett, the state prosecutor's criminal investigator in the case. Solomon's defense attorney said in court Thursday that Boyd told her he was going to release information to the press that Boyd would know to be false, but she was told to not say anything, the attorney said.

Everitt denied making any call to Boyd, but Elko County sheriff's Detective Mike Kolchak said Friday that he phoned Boyd Wednesday night on another matter.

Kolchak said he made "a courtesy call" to Boyd to let her know he would soon be speaking with the press about his investigation into her husband's death this summer. Perhaps Boyd thought he was Everett, Kolchak said.

"I really thought it was Randall Everett, but if Mike Kolchak said he did call and Randall Everett said he didn't, I guess I made a mistake," Boyd said Friday.

Kolchak, Boyd and Lt. David Tolman were murdered south of Jackpot when they were on a recreational prospecting trip in August. The case remains unsolved.

Students ask for name change of Idaho State School for the Deaf and the Blind

The Associated Press

GOODING — Students at the Idaho State School for the Deaf and the Blind in Gooding want the school's name changed.

They have asked the state Board of Education to drop the word "state" from the school's title, to keep the public from confusing it with the Idaho State School and Hospital at Nampa.

People "think we are mentally retarded and (have) other kinds of problems," student President Brian Thornberry told the board members Thursday, using sign language to speak.

Any change in name would require legislative action because the name is set by State law, said Board Member Roberta Fields, New Meadows.

The board could support the name change, she said, but no vote was taken on the proposal Thursday.

Thornberry and three other students presented their request to the board, which met at the school to consider public schools matters.

The problem, said Jim Rainier, superintendent at the Gooding school, is the perception that "state means mental institution or prison, and we are a school."

Along with the board members, Thornberry presented a letter of support from the Idaho Association for the Deaf.

Dodd formally charged Friday with murdering 3 young boys

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Westley Allan 'Dodd' was formally charged Friday with murdering three young boys and attempting to kidnap and murder a fourth.

Clark County Prosecuting Attorney Art Curtis said the 28-year-old Vancouver man could be prosecuted on state charges because federal law has no provision for a death penalty.

"The defendant does not have a right, under Washington law, to plead guilty to avoid a death sentence," Curtis said.

"We don't want to put resources into filing charges if they're not going to have any significant outcome," he said.

"I would indicate, also, that it is the decision that the federal government did make. We did not make that for them," Curtis said.

"They specifically have been involved with us in deciding which jurisdiction would handle the case."

However, he said, his office has not made a formal decision to seek the death penalty and would meet first with Dodd's defense attorney, Lee Dane of Vancouver, before announcing the decision.

"Dodd was charged with two counts of first-degree aggravated murder in the stabbing deaths of Vancouver brothers Cole Neer, 11, and William Neer, 10. The boys' bodies were found on Labor Day in a Vancouver park where they had hidden their bicycles."

He was charged in a separate document with first-degree aggravated murder in the strangulation of 4-year-old Lee Joseph Isell of Portland, whose body was found in Vancouver Lake Nov. 1, three days after he disappeared from a southeast Portland school.

"We prefer separate trials," Curtis said, adding that the move would safeguard one case if evidence in the other is jeopardized.

He added that also is why authorities obtained two separate search warrants on different grounds to gather evidence from Dodd's apartment.

Dodd was charged with first-degree attempted murder and first-degree attempted kidnapping in the case of 6-year-old James Kirk II, who was carried from a Camas movie theater Monday night. Dodd was arrested later that evening after the boyfriend brought him back to the theater.

According to an affidavit filed in Clark County District Court, Dodd admitted the Isell killing in graphic detail after his arrest Monday night.

Under Washington law, a first-degree aggravated murder conviction carries the death penalty or a life sentence without parole. First-degree kidnapping is punishable by 20 years to life in prison.

"The charges in the Isell case allege that Dodd committed aggravated murder in the course of trying to conceal his identity, in the course of rape and in the course of kidnapping."

The charges in the Neer killings make the same two allegations, plus one that the boys were slain as part of a scheme or plan.

Curtis said that while Vancouver police at first had no physical evidence that the Neer boys had been sexually abused, further tests have turned up sufficient evidence to indicate that one or both was abused.

"Most important is that we try this case in Clark County," Curtis said.

"My prosecutors would meet with Dane before Dodd's arraignment to discuss this issue."

"We do not want to try this in Timbuktu," he said.

The arraignment is scheduled for 8:30 a.m. Nov. 28.

Clark County Sheriff Frank Kanekoa said that while there is no indication that Dodd is suicidal, jailers were continuing to check on him every 15 minutes.

He was charged in a separate document with first-degree aggravated murder in the strangulation of 4-year-old Lee Joseph Isell of Portland, whose body was found in Vancouver Lake Nov. 1, three days after he disappeared from a southeast Portland school.

"We prefer separate trials," Curtis said, adding that the move would safeguard one case if evidence in the other is jeopardized.

Psychiatrist's profile fits suspect

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A psychiatrist's profile of the killer of Lee Joseph Isell bears an eerie similarity to Westley Allan Dodd, the Vancouver man who is accused of sexually molesting and strangling the 4-year-old boy.

Clark County, Wash., prosecutors on Friday filed formal charges of first-degree aggravated murder against Dodd in the deaths of Isell and Vancouver brothers Cole and William Neer.

Dr. Ronald Turco, the Portland psychiatrist who developed the profile for Portland police after the Isell boy's body was found near Vancouver, Wash., on Nov. 1, said Friday that he was not surprised that the suspect fit the profile.

Turco, a veteran homicide investigator who is a member of the Newberg police force, said police use a storehouse of private information shared only among law enforcement agencies in developing such profiles.

According to an affidavit filed in Clark County District Court, Dodd admitted the Isell killing after his arrest Monday night for attempted kidnapping after a man took a 6-year-old boy from a Camas, Wash., theater.

The affidavit contains details of Turco's profile. He said the killer probably was a man aged 25 to 35 and a loner who was "kicked out of the military if he served."

Turco said the killer probably would photograph the victim, keep child pornography and keep a diary. He would have an older model car and would be employed at a job with limited responsibility.

He would keep souvenirs and probably continue preying on only male victims, rejecting females as "defective." He probably would have committed several murders and would attempt many more.

"Control is the primary motivation, with sexual gratification being secondary," Clark County sheriff's investigator David L. Trimble said in summarizing the profile.

Trimble wrote that the killer probably would have a prior history of counseling or mental health treatment and a long history of deviant sexual behavior.

Trimble said in his affidavit that Dodd, 28, told police he lived alone and had no friends. Dodd admitted his history of sexual offenses dating back to his high school years and said he was discharged less than honorably from the Navy after being arrested for a sexual offense involving a boy.

Dodd, whose broken-down 1974 Ford Pinto station wagon played a key role in his apprehension, worked as a clerk at a Vancouver paper company.

And in describing the killing, Dodd said he photographed the boy, wrote details of the crime down in a diary and kept a piece of the boy's clothing.

Turco said that in developing such profiles, psychiatrists study all aspects of the crime and develop inferences about the state of mind of the killer.

Turco studied police and medical examiners' reports on the Isell killing and visited the scene where the boy's body was found near Vancouver, Wash.

"You look at the crime and then you begin to focus in on the kind of person who would commit that crime," Turco said.

"A lot of it is based on your hypothesis about their early development and the behavior that follows it," he said.

Turco said he began using profiles while serving in the military. He graduated from medical school in 1966 and finished his psychiatry residency in 1970 after studying at the University of North Carolina and Oregon Health Sciences University.

Turco, who also drew up a profile of former President Lyndon B. Grant, the victor in the Union general during the Civil War, and was working on one of the late jazz musician Duke Ellington for presentation in May at the American Academy of Psychoanalysis in New York.

"It's fun basically to get an understanding of famous people from the past," Turco said.

Dodd was arrested Monday night after being accused of trying to abduct the 6-year-old boy from the movie house in Camas, a mill town east of Vancouver.

Monday, police said, Dodd was a suspect in the recent killings of the Neer boys and the Isell boy.

There was no reference to the Neer killings in Trimble's affidavit.

Dodd's attorney, Lee Dane, argued unsuccessfully on Thursday that release of the affidavit would prejudice potential jurors and damage Dodd's right to a fair trial.

Task force: EPA stepped over state jurisdiction in citing Pocatello plant

POCATELLO (AP) — Polluters in Idaho will continue to be regulated by the federal government unless state agencies receive adequate funding, environmentalists have told legislators at a Pocatello meeting.

Roger Turner, a member of the Citizens Task Force on Air and Toxics, said Thursday the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency stepped over state jurisdiction last week when it cited the J.R. Simplot Co. plant near Pocatello with more than 100 violations of air quality regulations.

"It's a real blemish on our community when EPA has to come in and take these enforcement actions," he said.

Sen. C.E. "Chick" Bilyeu, D-Pocatello, said he agrees the state Air Quality Bureau needs more manpower, but he needs enforcement to be more effective at the federal level. "It's kind of tough having a state agency regulating state companies," he said.

Bilyeu, a member of the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee, said even if local legislators wanted to increase funding they would have a difficult time garnering votes from parts of the state not affected by air pollution.

"It's not affected by it, so why should they vote for it?" he asked.

State board's deadlock threatening school district's special ed program

GOODING (AP) — The State Board of Education has left West Jefferson School District in "no man's land" by a tie vote over its special education program.

The district is seeking emergency authorization for hiring a teacher not certified in special education to teach in its program. Without the authorization, the district cannot attract federal funding for the program.

West Jefferson, where Superintendent Melvin Hansen said salaries for starting teachers are among the highest in the state, money is not a problem. But just before school began this fall, the district's two special education teachers opted against returning, and no qualified replacement could be found, he said.

Phyllis Helm, a teacher with an elementary teaching certificate, said she was willing to enroll in an Idaho State University program to earn the credits necessary to become certified as a special education teacher.

The West Jefferson School Board hired Ms. Helm as a substitute and asked one of the former teachers to act as a mentor for her 15 students. It then asked the State Board of Education for the emergency authorization.

"We will probably use both of those avenues," owner Bill Kyle said. "There will definitely be price increases," Burger King owner Troy Hackmeister said. "That's the sad part about it."

Both Hackmeister and Kyle said they start workers at the minimum, but move workers up the wage scale fairly quickly.

And Kyle said that of his 120 employees, none of the ones at minimum wage are supporting households.

"The bulk of wage earners at minimum wage are second, third, fourth or fifth wage earners in the family," Kyle said. "It's not like somebody's trying to pay the grocery bill ... on minimum wage."

West Jefferson is among a number of embattled rural Idaho districts trying to attract and keep qualified special education teachers. The program is mandated by federal and state law.

A test of the in situ vitrification, however, ran into trouble when a piece of the equipment was damaged by a worker.

They're not going to let that stop us," he said. "It's too attractive a process."

In the vitrification process, four electrodes are pushed into the ground. When the power is applied the soil begins to melt. When the soil is melted to the desired depth, the electrodes are removed, and the soil cools and turns to glass. Any waste in the soil becomes part of the glass.

One also is confident that the department will open the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant, a New Mexico waste repository for the plutonium-contaminated waste stored at INEL and other federal weapons sites.

At INEL 160,000 barrels are ready to go to WIPP. "As soon as we get the authorization to do so," Ote said.

In the meantime, the Energy Department is looking to private industry for a place to store some of the plutonium-contaminated waste until WIPP does open, he said.

...that result. As long as you have your mother's comfort, so will I comfort you." Mary Baker Eddy picks up the family theme as she writes in her book, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures: "Home is the dearest spot on earth; and it should be the center, though not the boundary, of affections." During the service the congregation will be given time for spontaneous sharing. These testimonies frequently include gratitude for spiritual healings that may have occurred through several generations, healings of children, difficult home relations, and other family issues.

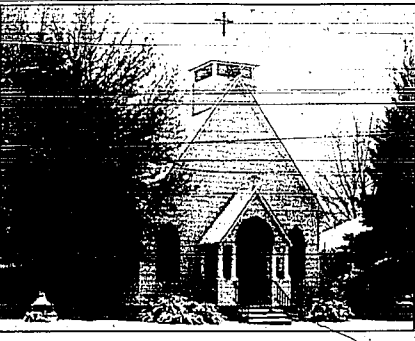

Local members welcome and invite the community to join them in giving thanks. Care for children too young to attend the services will be available.

SHOSHONE - The congregation of Christ Church Episcopal in Shoshone celebrated the 100th anniversary of its organization at a special evening service Saturday, Nov. 11, at the church. The service was followed by a dinner and program at the Masonic Hall. Many former members from out of town and state joined in the celebration.

The mistress of ceremonies for the program was Juanita Neher. She presented several awards, including those to two families - the Tom Alexanders and the Dale Bennetts and their mother, Dorothy Alexander - who represented five generations worshipping at Christ Church. Other highlights of the program included an exhibition of square dancing by the Desert Sun Dancers and reminiscences of the past 100 years by the Rev. John Tulk of Minneapolis, Minn., who was rector of Christ Church from 1959 to 1970 and who has compiled a history of the Episcopal Church in Idaho. Dale Bennett concluded the program with a prayer for the next 100 years.

The congregation, one of the oldest in the Magic Valley in terms of uninterrupted service, came into being in 1889 when a group of Episcopalians organized themselves into a congregation called the Church of the Good Shepherd. At that time, the village of Shoshone was a new settlement that had evolved from a stage stop called Naples because of the coming of the railroad in 1882. The first services were held in the school, Lodge hall or the Methodist Church, which had been built in 1885. The Rev. H. T. Osborne of Halley came to Shoshone several times a month from the Wood River Valley, where he had also established congregations in Halley, Ketchum, Bellevue and Bullton. The Rev. Samuel Jennings, the first resident priest in Shoshone, arrived in 1891; and by 1902 the congregation had conducted enough food-sales, bazaars and theatricals to fund the construction of the present church building which was consecrated as Christ Church by Bishop James Funsten. The building received considerable renovation following a disastrous fire in 1963.

Churches remain split along racial lines

By The Associated Press

They worked together in the civil rights movement and share a faith that recognizes no racial boundaries, but Christ's flock in the United States remains largely divided into black and white sheep.

Gains in integration in business, government and education have not been matched in the church, which some observers say may be the nation's most segregated institution.

Why? "Isn't it obvious? It's racism. That's what brought about the black church since its inception - slavery - and it hasn't changed," said the Rev. Amos Jones Jr., director of Christian education for the National Baptist Convention U.S.A. Inc.

More than seven in 10 black Americans say they are Methodists or Baptists, according to a 1988 Gallup Poll. Yet, in the nation's largest Protestant denomination, the 14.8 million-member Southern Baptist Convention, only an estimated 3 percent are black. In the 9 million-member United Methodist Church, an estimated 4 percent of members are black.

In the Roman Catholic Church, a black priest has started his own church in Washington, D.C., and the nation's black bishops have condemned racism within the U.S. church, although the 53 million-member body has more black members - an estimated 2 million - than any other predominantly white Christian group.

The segregation is even greater in the black churches. "A fraction of a fraction of 1 percent" is the estimated number of whites in the National Baptist Convention U.S.A. Inc., according to Jones. Officials in the 3 million-member African Methodist Episcopal Church estimate one-tenth of 1 percent of its members are white.

"Sunday morning is the most segregated time in the country," said the Rev. Charles White, a white Presbyterian pastor who is co-chairman of the North American Interfaith Network.

White said there is a profound difference between the teachings of Christianity and the way it adapts to the society around it.

Mormons open new $18 million Las Vegas temple

LAS VEGAS (AP) - Mormon officials unveiled the church's sparkling new $18 million temple Monday, beginning a period of public tours before the building is sealed off to all but members of the faith who are in good standing.

The opening of three weeks of public tours was an opportunity for reporters to join church officials and view the temple on the foothills of Sunrise Mountain.

The new structure is the 43rd Mormon temple built around the world and will be used by Mormons in good standing with the church for religious education, baptisms, marriages and other church functions.

The Las Vegas temple will be used by many of the 90,000 Mormons throughout Nevada, northern Arizona and California, who now must travel to temples in Utah or Oakland to perform religious duties.

The tour period is the only chance for non-Mormons to view the imposing structure, a four-story white cast stone building surrounded by towering spires. Ezra Taft Benson, the church's prophet and president, and other church leaders will formally dedicate the temple in ceremony Dec. 16-18.

Monday's opening of tours was attended by church Elder M. Russell Ballard, a member of the Quorum of Twelve Apostles, the church's ruling board.

Ballard said those outside the church sometimes have a difficult time understanding the Mormon faith or its use of the temples.

"We don't perform anything in our temples that is weird or hard to understand," Ballard said. "We're performing sacred, saving ordinances under the hands of the holy priesthood of God."

Church officials took great pride in showing off their new, spotless temple, which took four years to build.

Those on the tour, however, were allowed to view only some of the rooms in the 56,000-square-foot temple, and everyone had to wear blue covers over their shoes.

Negotiating pastors challenging Methodist tradition of itineracy

By The Associated Press

The Rev. Lester Meyer remembers the phone call he received one Saturday from another pastor wondering when Meyer and his family were going to move out so he could move in.

The other minister was embarrassed to learn Meyer had no idea he had been transferred, but a generation ago it was not unusual for the bishop to order a pastor to pull up stakes within a few days and move to another outpost in the United Methodist Church.

Now a member of the hierarchy himself, Meyer finds the centuries-old tradition of the itineracy - in which ministers are guaranteed jobs for life in return for going where they are sent - under challenge from clergy who no longer can or want to uproot their families to serve a small, rural church or a poor urban church.

"Formally, they still take the same vow. Practically speaking, there is a different philosophy," said Meyer, district superintendent of the Oklahoma City North District, part of the United Methodists' Oklahoma Conference. "The autocratic assignment process simply would not work in the present social times."

The 9 million-member church that once operated on the principle that "a pastor always has a church," a church always has a pastor" has had to adjust to the advent of clergy couples and working spouses and to theological changes stressing the partnership of bishops and clergy.

The future of the itineracy is being weighed by a Commission for the Study of Ministry. It began work in 1984 and expects to produce a preliminary report early next year. The final report is to be presented before the 1992 General Conference, the church's chief policymaking body.

The issue is not unique to the United Methodist Church.

In the Roman Catholic Church, bishops have been consulting more frequently with priests, and parishioner-clergy assignments in the last 20 years, said the Rev. David Brinkmoeller, executive director of the Secretariat for Priestly Life and Ministry of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

"It's a theological conviction" that everyone has some understanding of God's will, not just the bishops, Brinkmoeller said.

United Methodist Bishop Bruce Blake of Dallas, vice-chairman of the Commission on Ministry, said the hierarchical ministry is being phased out in many churches.

WWI doctor, order founder declared saints

VATICAN CITY (AP) - A 30,000 people, medicine who treated Italian soldiers in World War I trenches and an Italian priest who founded a religious order were declared saints of the Roman Catholic Church Wednesday by Pope John Paul II.

The pope conducted the canonization ceremony on the steps of Saint Peter's Basilica before an All Saints' Day crowd of Bertoni, who founded the Stigmatine Fathers in the 19th century.

Pampuri died in 1930 at the age of 32 from tuberculosis contracted in the war. Bertoni died in 1853.

Elevated to sainthood were Riccardo Pampuri, a medic who served on the frontlines in northern Italy in World War I and later became a physician and member of a religious order; and Gaspare

Vatican confirms meeting between Pope, Gorbachev

VATICAN CITY (AP) - The Vatican confirmed today that Pope John Paul II will meet for the first time with Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Dec. 1 and called it an "official" visit, a sign of the importance the Vatican attaches to it.

The Soviet leader will visit the Vatican during a three-day trip to Italy and a day before he holds talks with President Bush off Malta.

The Vatican gave no details on the meeting, and the confirmation was contained in a brief notice advising on arrangements for the news media.

Official visits often include an exchange of speeches as well as private talks and a tour of St. Peter's Basilica and the Vatican museum.

During the meeting, the pope is expected to press his case for full religious freedom in the Soviet Union, discuss a possible papal trip and renew his call for legalization of the Ukrainian Catholic Church.

The Ukrainian Church was suppressed in 1946 by Soviet dictator Josef Stalin and forcibly merged with the Russian Orthodox Church. By Western estimates, at least 4 million Ukrainian Catholics live in the Soviet Union.

Ancient Mayan find resets Pre-Columbian dates

Artist's conception of the Mayan city of Nakbe built in northern Guatemala around 630 B.C.

This 45-foot pyramid is one of about 100 large buildings and temples in Nakbe.

Ruins reveal large scale development centuries earlier than the Christian era

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Archaeologists who excavated a city in Guatemala's jungle have learned that Mayan civilization emerged centuries earlier than previously thought, hundreds of years before the Christian era.

"Our findings indicate large-scale Mayan development, including high temples and other stone buildings, were constructed during a period in which it was thought the most advanced form of construction was small villages," said Richard Hansen of the University of California, Los Angeles.

Hansen's research, announced Monday by UCLA, "is a very significant discovery," said Arthur Demarest, anthropology chairman at Vanderbilt University in Tennessee.

Archaeologists once believed advanced Mayan civilization emerged A.D. 300 and ended A.D. 900 during what is described as the "classic period." Research conducted during 1978-83 at El Mirador, Guatemala, pushed that date back to 200 B.C.

But Hansen's 50-member team excavated the ancient city of Nakbe, 350 miles from Guatemala City, and determined that roughly 100 stone pyramids and other buildings dated to between 100 B.C. and 630 B.C. So did some of the 65,000 pottery pieces, sculptures, figurines and other artifacts.

Dates can be determined by the radioactivity of carbon in organic material associated with buildings. Pottery is dated by comparison with the style of pottery from elsewhere in Central America.

"We have from 1000 B.C. to 600 B.C., a small village with wooden buildings," Hansen said by phone from his home in Rupert, Idaho. "Then all of a sudden — boom! — they brought in rock and fill and buried the village, and made platforms. On those they placed their buildings."

Hansen said Nakbe's buildings include 35- to 150-foot-tall platforms and flat-topped pyramids, many of which are topped by three small temples and "sculpture depicting important gods and kings." The buildings are solid without interior rooms.

The scale of construction

"reflects the emergence of an administrative and religious elite," to command thousands of workers, Hansen said.

"The research is part of the most exciting Maya discovery of recent decades," said anthropologist John Graham of the University of California, Berkeley.

Stone sculptures and hieroglyphic inscriptions at other sites had suggested "there was an earlier Maya civilization in the period when everybody was supposed to be simple farmers," Graham said. "Hansen provides the first simple documentation of this earlier civilization."

"An archaeologist mapped some of Nakbe's architecture in 1962. Hansen first visited in 1987 and his team conducted the first full-scale excavation last February through April.

The research by Hansen and others from UCLA, Utah's Brigham Young University and Guatemala's University of San Carlos shows Nakbe is "the earliest major center of Mayan civilization yet found," UCLA said in a news release.

But Graham cautioned that "it may turn out there's an earlier one."

Among the most important finds at Nakbe is a sculpture on a limestone slab that probably dates to about 400 B.C. and is about 10 feet tall, 4 feet wide and 18 inches thick, Hansen said.

The sculpture, showing two royal figures and a god, "is the earliest and largest pre-classic sculpture ever found," he said. "It depicts rituals, symbols of royalty and perhaps a royal transfer of authority from one ruler to another much earlier in time than we ever thought (possible) previously."

Other discoveries include sea shells and obsidian glass tools.

"Their emergence or long-distance trade. There also are signs of a society taming its environment, gutter-like water collection systems on six buildings and 60-foot-wide stone and mud roads," Hansen said.

He said he believes transformation from village to city and advanced civilization happened because trade and the need for water and transportation fostered emergence of an administrative and religious elite, which in turn ordered construction of temples.

Hansen's team faced difficult conditions at Nakbe, including a three-day, 40-mile hike from the nearest road. Water was hauled from a swamp 4 miles away.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

Men of cold passions have quick eyes.
— Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Keenan Ike defended with today's East cards. Follow the play to see if you would have found the same bone-chilling defense.

West leads fourth best, and South holds up until the third round. South's club eight is passed to East's queen, and it's time for the roll call. Do you return a passive heart jack or is it time for bolder moves?

The bidding told Keenan Ike where the spade ace was — there was no chance to find an entry to the West hand in spades. Nevertheless, Ike led back a casual eight of spades. Why? Because he also knew where the king of clubs was.

Consider South's problem. He thought he could win four club tricks via a repeated finesse (percentage play). Why risk the "unnecessary" finesse in spades? If West held the spade king, it would be a sure one down. So up went South's ace and down went the game. The second club finesse lost, and East took his spade king for the setting trick.

Had East returned a heart after the first club finesse, South would have lost the next club finesse as before. However, the spade finesse would then have been a necessity, and South would have been forced into taking his nine winners.

Whitmer ready to join Big Sky first rank

ISU quarterback Jason Whitmer is sacked by EWU's Jon McPherson.

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

POCATELLO — Very quietly, Jason Whitmer has crept into the backyard of the legendary Big Sky Conference quarterbacks. By next year at this time, he may be on the front porch.

The Idaho State University junior, who has played on team that has won six games in three seasons, will go into tonight's season finale against Weber State ranked ninth on the all-time Big Sky Conference total offense list, seventh in career passing yardage, seventh in career completions, eighth in TD passes and sixth in pass attempts. He already holds the ISU career total offense, passing yardage and completions records, having surpassed Mike Mchuresk, Paul Peterson and Vern Harris earlier this season.

"He's one of the better quarterbacks in the conference, and that's saying something considering this league has (Idaho's) John Friesz and (Northern Arizona's) Greg Wyatt," said Montana State coach Earle Solomonson. "He has good mobility and he makes good decisions, but he's playing for a much better team than he played for the last two years."

In nearly three full seasons, Whitmer has 6,596 yards passing, 5,971 yards total offense, 536 pass completions, 43 touchdown passes and 987 pass attempts. With 11 or 12 games remaining in his college career, the only Big Sky records that appear beyond his reach are the Big Sky total offense mark set by Idaho's Ken Hohart (11,126 yards) and Friesz's and Wyatt's passing yardage records, which are over 10,000 yards and rising with one game left for each of them.

"I don't think there's any question that by the time he's through, he'll be one of the best quarterbacks ever to play in the Big Sky," said ISU coach Garth Hall. "His challenge is just to continue to motivate himself to keep improving the way his has the last two years. A lot of players of his caliber get complacent after they've had some success."

Since he inherited the starting quarterback job in the second game of the red-shirt freshman season, Whitmer has had success at a price. That year, he completed 188 of 340 passes for 2,616 yards and 20 touchdowns, finished second in the Big Sky and fifth in NCAA Division I AA in total offense and 13th nationally in passing efficiency. That team finished 3-7-1 and Whitmer took a beating behind an inexperienced offensive line.

Last year, Whitmer completed 196 of 381 passes for 2,250 yards and 12 touchdowns — accounting for 73.4 percent of the offensive production of a team that finished 0-11. He was sacked 43 times.
"Jason has taken a lot of bruises to get his yards," said Hall. "You can compare him with the Bennett kid from Montana (senior quarterback Grady Bennett, who has roughly the same passing numbers this season as Whitmer, but Bennett has a lot better team playing around him. I just wish would could have given him better protection."

Actually, Whitmer's pass protection is improving, say both the quarterback and his coach.

"You see a big improvement in his completion percentage and a big decrease in his interceptions this year over last year, and first and foremost that's because of better protection," said Hall. "We built upon our offensive package some things that help Jason pre-select routes and read defenses."

CSI drubs Golden West 103-78

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The sputtering College of Southern Idaho Golden Eagles cranked it up to about seven cylinders for the final five minutes of the first half and that was the difference in a 103-78, regular-season-opening victory over Golden West Community College Friday night.

"When (freshman David) Anderson and (sophomore Jov) Jube let them just step out and catch the ball on the wing with no denial the first 10 times down the court, I knew this wasn't going to be a pretty one," said CSI coach Fred Trenkle.

From Trenkle's standpoint the difference was "it meant more to our second five and that was the reason we pulled away when the second five was in the game. The starters were still talking about the win over Australia Wednesday."

The Eagles scored just 25 points in the first 14 minutes of the game and were struggling to stay in a 25-25 draw. But in the final 3 minutes, 40 seconds, CSI reeled off 23 points to make it 48-32 at halftime. "Give them some credit," Trenkle said of the Huntington Beach, Calif., team. "They moved the ball well, they were well coached and smart players. And it seemed like they didn't miss a free throw all night (20-for-25) and that kept them in the game."

The thing that finally got the Eagles going was its transition offense, particularly off steals and turnovers. Early in the second half, Nate Jackson and Kyle Wilson combined for five follow buckets and three other two other field goals off steals accounted for all but two of the team's first

Playoffs or no, BSU-Idaho is game of year

By The Associated Press

It's not Michigan-Notre Dame or USC-UCLA. But in Big Sky Conference football, the rivalries don't get much better than Idaho-Boise State.

And this year, the stakes in the regular-season finale for both teams are even higher than usual. Will three-time league champion and fourth-ranked Idaho get to host a first-round game in the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs? Will No. 20 Boise State get a playoff bid at all?

Those questions and many more will be answered Saturday night in Moscow when the Vandals host the Broncos for what first-year Idaho coach John L. Smith calls "probably the biggest game of the year."

Boise State's five seniors, who have thirsted for victory through more than half of the Broncos' seven-year drought to the Vandals, couldn't agree more.

"It's also a chance to go to the playoffs, but the main thing is just to beat Idaho," said middle linebacker Andy Mitchell. "I feel like that would remedy our whole season, make everything come out looking good."

Idaho is 7-0 against league opponents and 8-2 on the season after dropping its first two games of the year. Boise State rebounded from losses to Nevada-Reno and first-round playoff loss Montana with last weekend's 27-20 victory over Eastern Washington. That put the Broncos back in the rankings and improved their record to 5-2 in the conference, 6-4 overall.

Kickoff time is 8 p.m. MST on channels 7 and 38 in the Magic Valley.

MVC squads dominate prep hoop ratings

By The Associated Press

Magic Valley Conference teams dominated the preseason Associated Press Class A-4 high school boys' basketball poll, released Friday.

Defending state champion Shoshone is ranked No. 1 by the AP, while Hagerman is fourth and Murtagh fifth.

Lapwai, which has a three-year, state record 76-game winning streak going, is the preseason pick to continue as Idaho's top A-3 team.

Lapwai was one of four defending state champions picked in the Associated Press preseason basketball poll to defend their titles. The others are Skyline in A-1 and Preston in A-2. Voting was by the state's AP-member sportswriters and sportscasters.

Ten of the 20 teams ranked in the preseason survey took home trophies from last year's state tournaments.

In A-1, Skyline got half the 10 first-place votes and 40 of a possible 50 points, followed by Centennial of Meridian and Pocatello, two teams which failed to qualify for last year's state tournament.

Post Falls and Centennial's crosstown rival Meridian rounded out the top five.

In A-2, Vainias received seven of the 10 first-place votes and 39 of a possible 50 points, followed by St. Maries, which made it to the state tournament last year despite a 5-18 record.

The Lumberjacks shared second in the preseason poll with 1989 state runner-up Vainias of Caldwell and with Lakeland of Rathdrum. Bonners Ferry was ranked fifth.

In A-3, three-time defending state champion Lapwai was the top choice.

Prep playoffs
By COLIN MUIRDOON
Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW — The Magic Valley's longest streak of football futility came to an end Friday when Hagerman won its first state high school football championship.

The Pirates, who had won once in 17 tries in the two previous years, outmuscled Marsing 16-12 for the state A-4 title, capping a 9-2 season and a No. 1 ranking by The Associated Press.

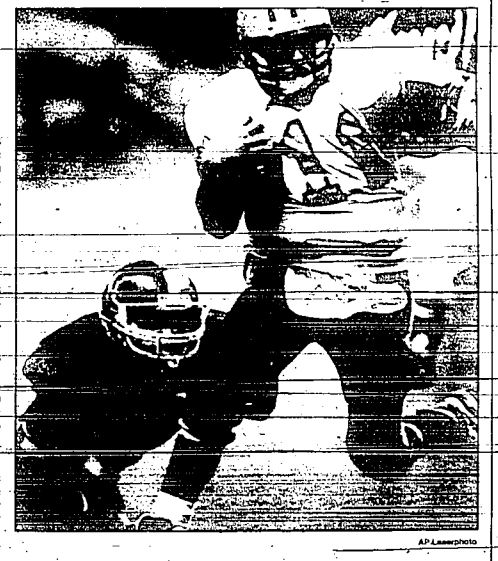

Down on the sideline in the midst of celebrations, a sample of the young, red-donning Hagerman colors were commenting.

"This is a major win for Hagerman," the first said.

"Yeah," the second answered. "It's been a long time. Before this year Hagerman hadn't had a winning season since 1976 and had never been to post-season since the state 11-man playoffs were formally inaugurated in 1981. That long they've included losing streaks of 15 and 18 games."

"Our defense came through for us again, as it has all year long," said Pirate skipper Randy Clark. "We thought they (Marsing) would wear down with our size."

There were key turnovers, key pen-

Boise State received almost $418,000 in state appropriations for intercollegiate athletics in fiscal year 1990, which ends next June 30.

The University of Idaho received more than $400,000 in state appropriations. Idaho is expected to get the most from student fees, $835,000; BSU should get $725,000 from its students and Idaho State $511,000.

Idaho State expects to receive $558,000 through gifts and fund-raising. Idaho close behind at $536,000 and Idaho State hopes to get $410,000.

Idaho expects to receive $105,500 and Boise State $104,333 from the Big Sky Conference and from televising rights to their games. However, that is down almost $151,000 for Idaho and more than $155,000 for Boise State from last year.

ties, brilliant plays and near misses. But there were a few constants, like the legs of Pirate running back Jody Lapp. His 137 yards on 29 carries and two touchdowns combined with teammate Brody Engles' 99 yards on 26 carries to keep the Hagerman offense moving while the mighty Pirate defense tumbled back the smaller Huskies in the second half.

"We were definitely outmanned," said Hagerman coach Bill Ray Barr. "There was a definite size difference."

Hagerman averaged 220 pounds a yard on the line, a good 60-pound difference than that of Marsing's.

Notwithstanding, in the first half the Marsing offense appeared to be working the ball well down the field with combinations of the option, pass and sweep. But the second half, Barr credited Hagerman with making "good adjustments" in slowing the Huskies' spread formations.

Marsing scored first early in the second quarter after an extended drive that began at its own 48-yard line with a 44-second left in the first period. The Huskies mixed it up, using short pass plays, off-tackle runs and option pitches. They survived two close calls that could have ended the drive, the first was a fourth-and-three situation and the second was a Darrin Floyd fumble on the fifth play of the drive.

Quarterback Jaime Wood got the Huskies out of the fourth and three score with a 6-yard pass to tight-end Eric DeLagotto. On the next play, Floyd fumbled after gaining seven yards, but senior split-end Ryan Percifield was there to fall on it at the Pirate 32 yard line as time expired in the first quarter. Six plays and roughly two minutes into the second quarter, Floyd rambled in from the 5 on an option pitch from Wood to put the Huskies up 6-0.

Hagerman wasted no time however on the ensuing drive. Engles received two minutes by Marsing's David Cerda, 40 yards to the Husky 26. Engles then got the Pirates inside the 20 to the 12-yard line on an 11-yard scramble. He then took a third-and-six-yard toss from quarterback Chris Wintley which moved the Pirates to the five, but still a yard short of the first down.

Lapp only needed one down though as his 5-foot, 11-inch, 185-pound frame barreled up the middle for the five-yard score.

Engles took the ball on a sweep for the two-point conversion and Hagerman took the lead for good at 8-6 with 7:13 to go in the half.

Both teams had their problems in the third quarter keeping a grip on the football. At one point, around

But that reduction is expected to be more than made up by this year's gate receipts. Boise State expects to bring in more than $1.65 million, up from about $1.5 million last year. Idaho should earn $369,000, or about $76,000 more than in fiscal 1989.

ISU expects gate revenue of $375,000, up from about $305,000 last year.

The big attendance draws also are the biggest spenders at all schools. Idaho expects to spend more than $94,000 on its three-time Big Sky Conference championship football team this year and another $420,000 on its defending league champion basketball team.

Each figure is about $60,000 more than last year.

At Idaho State this year's football expenditures are expected to be down more than $57,000.

the 530 mark, the ball was turned over three times on three consecutive plays before Hagerman managed to take control for a few minutes. This was actually one of the most important possessions that ended in disaster for the Huskies. A touchdown here would give them the 12-8 lead and a little of the momentum they had experienced in the first half.

Marsing got as close as the Pirate 18-yard line when Floyd exploded for a 36-yard run, but Hagerman's defense stalled the Huskies right there and Marsing was forced to attempt the field goal. The 35-yarder was out of the range of placekicker Todd Hughs.

Hagerman took over at the 20 and moved slowly but steadily downfield. Nothing fancy — five yards here by Engles, six yards there by Lapp. In all, 14 plays in about six minutes, culminating on an 8-yard run by Lapp widening the Pirate lead to 14-8 with 10:28.

A lot of time.

A nine-yard kickoff by Hagerman's Jason Warr gave the Huskies excellent field position and they took full advantage. Marsing quickly scored in three plays on a 26 yard sweep by Hughs.

The two-point conversion failed and Marsing found itself trailing by two points and given the previous attempt at a field goal, the Huskies needed to get into the end zone.

The Huskies had two opportunities, one of them a golden one.

On the second play of the ensuing drive, Engles coughed up the ball and Marsing's Cory Werre recovered. Engles then turned a fourth-and-three into a fourth and eight situation for the Huskies, from the Pirate 28. Wood however, had Percifield in his sights in the end zone and threw a pass to senior defensive back Kirk Lindsay, just ahead to snap the ball away just before Percifield got his hands on it, saving the touchdown and probably the game.

Hagerman then took the ball down inside the Husky 5, before Lapp fumbled on the 1-yard line.

Marsing recovered and had one last shot with under three minutes in the contest, taking over at its own one-yard line, but Hagerman the defense. On the second play of the drive Warr and teammate Lon Zeller sacked Wood deep in his own end zone for the safety.

Kansas stuns No. 2 LSU, 89-93

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Kansas went over the top of second-ranked LSU's towering lineup and Terry Brown paced a long-range attack that led the Jayhawks to an 89-93 victory Friday night in the second round of the preseason NIT.

Kansas (2-0) advanced to the semifinals round in New York next Wednesday.

Brown hit four 3-pointers in a 2:27 span of the first half as Kansas overcame a seven-point deficit and took a 29-27 lead 12 minutes into the game. LSU regained the lead at 65-63 with 9:30 left in the game but Kevin Pritchard and Mark Randall made baskets, putting Kansas on top to stay.

The Jayhawks led 84-78 with 1:46 remaining. LSU's Chris Jackson hit a 3-point shot with 41 seconds left but with Kansas ahead by four, missed twice from 3-point range in the final 23 seconds. Jeff Gueldner made a pair of free throws for Kansas with two seconds left.

Randal led Kansas with 25 points, Gueldner had 16, Pritchard 13 and Brown and Maddox 12 apiece. Jackson led LSU with 32 points, 7-foot Stanley Roberts had 12 and 7-2 Shaquille O'Neal had 10, as did Wayne Sims.

Wayne Floyd scored eight for the Christian Fellowship. Johnson wound up with nine points as did David Lowery.

Neither team shot well, with the Fellowship hitting under 23 percent in the second half and 26 percent for the game. Boise State wasn't much better, shooting 34 percent from the field.

BYU 87 SSV ULM 70

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Andy Toolson scored 25 points and three teammates scored in double figures as Brigham Young defeated SSV Ulm of West Germany 87-70 in exhibition basketball Friday night.

The game was close through the first 17 minutes, but Toolson scored nine points in the final 2:32 of the first half as BYU exploded for 11 straight points. That gave the Cougars a 43-32 halftime lead.

With Toolson and guard Marty Haws leading the way in the second half, BYU built its lead to 66-45 with 11:24 left in the game.

Center Todd Crow added 15 points for BYU while forward Steve Schreiner had 14 apiece.

Forward Archie Johnson led SSV Ulm with 23 points while Mike Born added 18 and Victor Fleming 15.

The game was SSV Ulm's fourth of the week in Utah. The German team defeated Dixie Junior College and Utah State and lost to Southern Utah State and BYU. The team is now 3-4 on its U.S. tour.

DePaul 70 N. Carolina St. 63

CHICAGO (AP) — DePaul coach Joey Meyer's motto for his unranked Blue Demons this year is "Be aggressive and patient. We need to use our athletic ability and we need to convert turnovers into points."

Meyer's players followed it to the letter Friday night and 19th-ranked DePaul Carolina State 70-63, advancing to next week's semifinals of the preseason NIT.

It was DePaul's quickness and ability to come up with 10 steals, including three in the final two minutes, that paved the way for the Blue Demons' second-round victory.

Stephen Howard made a clutch basket and four free throws in the last 2:12 and DePaul's pressure defense, thwarted North Carolina State's outstanding backcourt duo of Rodney Monroe and Chris Corchini, holding them to seven points in the final 11 minutes.

David Booth, who led DePaul with 23 points and had 10 rebounds, said, "We took ourselves at halftime not to let North Carolina State back into the game like we did against Ohio State (a 71-53 first-round victory)."

Boise St. 51 FCA 49

BOISE (AP) — Center Jon Johnson hit a three-point shot with under a minute left in overtime Friday to rally Boise State to a 51-49 exhibition basketball victory over the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

The Fellowship seniors won a game in eight tries this season, but came close against Boise State. Behind Kenny Stones' 22 points, including 16 in the first half, the Fellowship had the last shot in regulation, tied at 46-46, and then held a 49-47 lead late in the overtime.

But Johnson's three-pointer gave the Broncos a 50-49 lead and freshman center Tanoka Beard added a free throw for the final margin.

The Eagles had trouble keeping the ball away from Alex Kreps, who fouled out with just under nine minutes to go with 19 points. J.J. Jenkins had 19, also, and those two split 16 free points.

Heady Kevin Anderson added 11 more and those were the statistics that caused Trenkle to benched CSI's wing-dentist defense.

He was very open and honest with me, told me I had a chance to play CSU didn't want me to visit (ISU), but I did, saw the dome and liked it. I like it up here; people are honest with you."

19-15 but the big breakaway was still four minutes off.

It came about the time Heyburn's Dan Poulton and Lapwai's Littlefoot Ellens came in. Poulton had five points and two good assist passes and Ellens would had two more assists. Wilson hit eight points during the surge.

Whitmer redshirted his first year, during which ISU suffered from woe. Whitmer was the Bengals' quarterback of the present.

When Koetter was fired after the 1987 season, Whitmer was faced with the task of proving to Hall that he would fit into the former Oregon State assistant's system. It took a year.

"Seeing Jason react to new challenges convinced me," said the ISU coach. "He's a complete quarterback."

Then with 1:14 left, Sean Coulter sent the Eagles over the top with a mark at 101-75.

CSI will remain home at 7:30 p.m. Monday to entertain the Central Washington Jayvees.

"It's been a big difference between this year and last year," said Whitmer, a 6-foot, 185-pound 195-pound native of the Denver suburb of Northglenn. "Last year we were running a pro set and we didn't have the personnel to do it. Our pass protection was weak and I made a lot of mistakes on reads and throwing into coverage. This year, we went to a one-back set and gives us a lot more flexibility. It's basically a simpler offense, and it's been more effective."

"If I take care of the things I'm supposed to do, then the records will take care of themselves," he said. "I'm just working about playing football and getting my degree."

"But I'll say this," he added. "It's a great feeling to play in a conference with some of the best quarterbacks in the country. You could play in a lot of 1-A conferences and not see quarterbacks as good as Friesz and Wyatt. For a quarterback, it's a lot of fun."

Notre Dame beards the Lions' den today to save streak

By The Associated Press

There's going to be a Notre Dame streak broken at Penn State Saturday and the Irish just hope it's the right one.

Top-ranked and winner of a school record 22 consecutive games, Notre Dame still is tip-toeing warily into the lion's den, No. 17 Nittany Lions. That's because the Irish haven't won at State College since 1913, three quarters of a century ago.

The only Irish victory in Happy Valley came in the first game between the two schools. Since the series resumed in 1981, Penn State has won six of the eight games played, four of them at home.

After last week's 59-6 romp over rebubling SMU, Notre Dame begins its perilous two-game road trip — the Irish are at No. 7 Miami next Saturday — attempting to build on the nation's longest winning streak and set up an Orange Bowl confrontation for the national championship against Colorado.

The Notre Dame-Penn State game is the weekend's only meeting of ranked teams, although other games have conference and bowl implications.

Naturally, the highly ranked Colorado coach Bill McCartney is concerned. "I'm worried about every game," he said. "It's true that we have better players than Kansas State, but I think we realize that on a given day, any team can beat any other team."

Meanwhile, No. 3 Michigan travels to Minnesota with more at stake than the annual battle for the Little Brown Jug. A win for the favored Wolverines (8-1) would mid-dle a tie for a second straight Big Ten title and a trip to the Rose Bowl.

And, of course, Ben Schmeidler is worried about the Gophers, who have lost all but two of the last 21 meetings with Michigan.

"We feel good about our team right now, but we are also realistic enough to know that we've been beaten twice by Minnesota," he said. "I can see Minnesota being very tough for us in Minneapolis."

Both times, Minnesota beat Michigan, in 1975 and 1984, it knocked the Wolverines out of national championship considerations.

Now, Schmeidler calls a chance for the championship "conceivable, but a real, long haul."

$9 million deal makes Saberhagen best-paid

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bret Saberhagen, at age 25 only the ninth pitcher ever to win more than one Cy Young award, signed a three-year contract extension with the Kansas City Royals on Friday that will make him the highest-paid player in baseball.

Saberhagen's package will be worth approximately $9 million. The extension keeps Saberhagen in Kansas City through the 1993 season. He will pitch next year in the option year of his old contract.

The signing gives the Royals their top two pitchers through the 1992 season. Kansas City recently signed 15-year winner Mark Gubicza to a three-year contract through 1992.

Terms of Saberhagen's contract were not announced.

"We are delighted that Bret's career with the Royals will continue well into the future," General Manager John Schuerholz said. "He has established himself as one of the top pitchers in major league baseball and this contract reflects that."

BRET SABERHAGEN
Signs 3-year Royals contract

Saberhagen, on a Mexican cruise, said, "We're happy to have signed with the best organization in baseball. I want to thank the Royals and my wife for their support."

Dennis Gilbert, Saberhagen's agent, said the deal had been discussed since the World Series.

"I wouldn't say it was an easy negotiation," Gilbert said. "It took a lot of time and hard work on the part of the Royals, myself and my lawyer, Steve Schneider."

"Getting three years was very important to Bret," he said. "He wanted to know where he would be."

Saberhagen was a runaway winner of the American League Cy Young award Wednesday, getting 138 votes to 80 for Dave Stewart of Oakland.

The right-hander also won the Cy Young in the Royals' championship year of 1985.

He won two games in the World Series that year and was named
