High court to decide water control issue

Los Angeles Times

Jones calls water case most important in decade

The Associated Press

BOISE — The U.S. Supreme Court has agreed to hear a water rights case that Attorney General Jim Jones says could be one of the most important of the decade.

Without comment, the court on Monday agreed to hear a California case decided by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The appeals court ruled that streamflow conditions established by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission superseded state water regulations. Jones and other Idaho officials say that could jeopardize the state's ability to manage its own water.

Idaho and more than 40 other states submitted "friend of the court" petitions asking the Supreme Court to hear the case and Jones said by the time the case is heard next fall, he hopes to have all states behind Idaho's position.

There is no guarantee that the Supreme Court will decide in the states' favor,

For more than four decades, the Supreme Court has sided with federal regulators in power plant disputes, but Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, a states' rights proponent, may be ready to tip the balance

Jones said, but the fact that the court agreed to hear the matter is an important victory.

"This case will determine which governmental entity, state or federal, will have ultimate control over water rights and streamflow conditions," the attorney general said.

"The Supreme Court's decision is likely to be the major water rights development of the decade. It is extremely critical that the states prevail in this struggle," he said.

In the 1946 case of First Iowa Hydro-Electric Cooperative vs. the Federal Power Commission, the court ruled that the federal regulators may grant a power license without getting a state's approval.

However, in a 1978 case, known as California vs. U.S., involving federal dams and irrigation, Rehnquist said that states could put conditions on the operation of federal projects. State attorneys hope that Rehnquist, as chief justice, can fashion a majority to overturn the First Iowa decision.

"The states are entitled to have their own separate voice in these matters," said California Deputy Attorney General Roderick L. Walston.

Lawyers for the plants say they were built and licensed with the understanding that they would depend on a single set of federal water regulations. It would scare off investors, they say, if states could limit the water flow.

Despite the broad impact of a potential Supreme Court ruling, the actual stakes in the case before the court are quite small.

Bush urges 'new thinking' toward Gorbachev, Europe

The Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — President Bush said Monday it's too early to proclaim an end to the Cold War, but added that Mikhail S. Gorbachev's acceptance of sweeping reform in Eastern Europe "absolutely mandates new thinking" by the West.

Wrapping up his weekend summit journey with a stop at NATO Headquarters, Bush also told reporters the United States would maintain "significant military forces in Europe as long as our allies desire our presence."

The president said he wants a treaty making initial cuts in the superpowers conventional forces in Europe "in the bank" before seeking deeper reductions. He told NATO leaders he hoped a multinational summit could be convened in Europe next summer to sign such an agreement.

Conventional forces aside, the United States and Soviet Union are negotiating a proposed 50 percent cut in long-range nuclear weapons, as well as a proposed ban of chemical weapons.

Bush was in a buoyant mood as he neared the end of a journey that took him to last weekend's summit in Gorbachev.

Asked if it hadn't been risky to venture out in a small boat in the storm-tossed harbor in Malta during the weekend, he replied, "Hot dogging?... No. You know these charismatic, macho, visionary guys.

They'll do anything."

He arrived at the White House in Washington by helicopter from Andrews Air Force Base to be greeted on the South Lawn by his wife Barbara, who got a kiss, and dog Millie, who got a pat. The president waved to a small welcoming crowd and headed inside without speaking.

The president spoke at Gorbachev was convening a meeting of a radically reformed Warsaw Pact in Moscow to review the weekend summit.

Bush and Gorbachev agreed at an unprecedented "joint press" conference before leaving Malta that their meeting heralded a new era of cooperation in East-West relations, including arms control and trade. They intend to meet again in the

Pact condemns '68 Czech invasion

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Warsaw Pact leaders met Monday amid rapid, bewildering political change in Eastern Europe and uncertainty about the 34-year-old military alliance's role and unity.

At Monday's session, the Soviet Union and Pact members Bulgaria, Hungary and Poland condemned their own action in invading Czechoslovakia in 1968 to crush a reform movement.

The Soviet news agency Tass also said the Kremlin and Prague will begin talks on possible reduction of Soviet troops still based in Czechoslovakia.

Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev indicated at the meeting that the Warsaw Pact and its Western opponent, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, will someday become political rather than military alliances.

For leaders of four of the seven nations, it was their first meeting, underscoring how quickly old guard Communists have been swept from power. They heard Gorbachev report on his Malta summit with President Bush.

Erstwhile diplomatic cover for the Kremlin's ideological policing of its allies, the seven-member pact faces unprecedented pluralism from its first non-Communist head of government Polish Premier Tadeusz Mazowiecki, to Romania's hard-line Communist leader Nicolae Ceausescu.

Somewhat, those men must agree on Eastern Europe's future and defense policy if the Warsaw Pact is to be an alliance in anything but name.

Having ceased to make ideological demands on its allies, the Warsaw Pact should "stay out" of members' politics altogether, said Foreign Minister Gyula Horn of Hungary.

Horn's feints are not baseless: In 1968, the Soviet Union and Romania reportedly requested joint Warsaw Pact action against Poland.

Montanans had a bear too many

The Associated Press

BOISE — A teddy bear snatch Sunday from a Jerome gift shop led to the arrest of two Montana brothers, both truck drivers, in Boise on a charge of felony possession of stolen property.

The rescued 5-foot tall, stuffed bear was welcomed to Boise by a cousin, Trooper Teddy, the giant brown bear displayed at fairs and festivals by the Idaho State Police, ISP Sgt. Ralph Powell said.

The Jerome County Sheriff's Department provided a description Sunday evening that started the bear hunt, Powell said. Two men were seen leaving a gift shop carrying a black stuffed bear, with brown eyes and nose, without a receipt. Price: $200. The men

EPA proposes ban on widely-used fungicide as cancer source

Combined wire services

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency proposed Monday banning within 18 months most uses of the nation's most widely used fungicides, contending they pose an unacceptable high risk of cancer to consumers and agricultural workers.

According to EPA calculations, the short-term risk of using the chemical — ethylene bithiothiocarbamate (EBDCs) — is "negligible" for children and adults.

"If more immediate action were warranted, I can assure you that EPA would be taking it," said EPA Administrator William K. Reilly in his first major pesticide decision. "No one need change his or her eating habits."

Reilly took the unusual step of calling a news conference to announce the decision to head off the kind of controversy that followed last year's reports that a chemical used on apples — Alar — presented unusually high risks of cancer to children who consume apple products in especially large amounts.

"I am making this announcement myself to assure all Americans that our food supply is safe, that we give the highest priority to keeping it safe," Reilly said.

But a spokesman for Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, said the announcement would start needless panic among consumers. "It's the alar thing all over again," said Dave Pearson, referring to the scare over the chemical used on apples. "There are not any potatoes in the ground right now but there are a lot in the cellar."

And Reilly's decision did not satisfy consumer activists who want to see the supply rid immediately of cancer-causing substances.

EBDCs are a family of chemicals used to combat fungal diseases on about a third of the fruits and vegetables grown in this country. They break down over decay or heat into a potent carcinogen, ethylene thiourea (ETU), which has been found to cause tumors of the liver, thyroid and pituitary gland in laboratory animals.

A National Toxicology Program study last summer showed that the aggregate cancer risk of the fungicide is 700 times higher than the EPA considers an acceptable dietary risk. That standard is a 1 additional case of cancer for every million people.

Risk is estimated by exposure to maximum doses of pesticides over a lifetime of 70 years.

major manufacturers of EBDCs volunteered to stop producing the chemicals by Jan. 1 for 42 of the 55 types of produce on which they have been used for decades.

Monday's decision seeks to stop other companies from manufacturing EBDCs for those 42 types of produce. Another three crops — tomatoes, potatoes and bananas — were added to the list that EPA wants to ban. Of the three, tomatoes treated by EBDCs pose the highest estimated risk — 20 times higher than the EPA standard. The 10 crops on which the EPA will continue to permit EBDCs — grapes, wheat, cranberries, onions, sugar beets, sweet corn, peanuts, almonds, asparagus and figs — pose an estimated cumulative risk of three extra cancers for every million people.

Reilly said the 3 in 1 million risk is within the range most regulators consider negligible and leaves the consuming public "without significant threat to health."

He said the agency hopes to finalize its action in the spring of 1991 after producers complete a survey of EBDC residues on other produce.

The removal of EBDCs from their residues measured on field crops fade significantly by the time crops get to market. In the 18-month interim, Reilly said, the risk to children exposed to EBDCs still in use on fruit and vegetables will be lower than the 1-in-1 million standard.

Fighting intensifies in Manila where 2,000 trapped

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Fighting intensified today between rebels and loyal forces in the Makati financial district, where about 2,000 foreigners, including more than 200 Americans, are trapped in hotels.

Efforts to evacuate foreigners held by the rebels appeared to have stalled early in the day.

A 60mm mortar round slammed into a squatter settlement near the Makati Medical Center about 6 a.m. (3 p.m. MST Monday). Ten people were taken to the hospital, including a 6-year-old girl who died.

Two bombs exploded in the capital late Monday, wounding two people. It was unclear if they were related to the coup attempt, which began Friday and has killed at least 71 people and wounded more than 500.

The U.S. Embassy recommended Tuesday morning that Americans living in Makati remain in their homes but avoid upper floors.

At least three people were killed in Makati Monday and 15, including one American, were wounded by sniper fire and shells.

Troops loyal to the government of President Corason Aquino, backed by three armored personnel carriers, began moving under cover of fire toward the hotel district where the foreigners are.

The Japanese Embassy recommended that Japanese citizens living in parts of the posh Makati district not under rebel control leave for safer areas of Manila. It estimated that about 500 Japanese remained in Makati, including about 300 trapped in the hotels.

A statement telephoned to news organizations from a rebel spokesman, Capt. Albert Yen, said the insurgents would release the foreigners to disperse unless they were being held hostage.

The statement said the foreigners would be free to leave the hotels at 10 a.m. Tuesday and would be taken to Manila's airport aboard shuttle buses.

Yen said the move did not indicate the rebels were about to end their bid to oust Mrs. Aquino.

About 400 elite Scout Rangers were holding 22 buildings in the Makati district, where many foreign embassies and the residences of many foreign diplomats and businessmen lie.

About 400 rebels continued to occupy Mactan Air Base in Cebu, 350 miles south of Manila. Their leader refused to surrender and threatened to blow up the base's planes.

ISF Capt. Elias Lejin spotted a rig about 7 p.m. that matched the description at a truck stop in Boise. Lejin found the black bear inside with the price tag attached.

"He (Lejin) also rescued a smaller panda bear and a 5-foot kangaroo," Powell said. "The truck's full of stuff. All in the sleeper berth."

Dale D. Daniels, 29, and Mike E. Daniels, 27, of Missoula, Mont. were arrested and taken to AdCo County Jail Sunday night to await transfer to Jerome. Theft of anything valued more than $150 is a felony.

The truck, cargo and items within the tractor cab were impounded,

"There were many, many articles still in cellophane, all brand new," Powell said. "There were several other stuffed animals, beaucoup video cassette tapes, decorative wall plates."

Chill grips Florida

By The Associated Press

A blast of Arctic air sent shivers as far south as Florida on Monday, cracking low temperature records in cities across the South. Another cold front brought heavy rainfall to the Pacific Northwest.

Almost the entire eastern half of the country recorded freezing temperatures overnight as stiff north winds blew cold air south out of Canada. Readings dipped into the single digits in Minnesota, Wisconsin, upper Michigan and the northern Atlantic Coast.

United States in the second half of June.

"At his news conference, Bush said, 'We stand at the threshold of a new era,'" but declined to assert the Cold War has ended as Gorbachev suggested.

"That day hasn't arrived," the president said when asked about Gorbachev's statement declaring an end to the "epoch of the Cold War."

Barring a utopian development, Bush said, "the United States must stay involved" by keeping troops massed against Warsaw Pact forces.

"If you want to project out 100 years, or take some years off of that, you can look to a utopian day when there might be none (U.S. troops in Europe)," he said. "But as I pointed out to them (NATO leaders), that day hasn't arrived — and they agree with me."

Dutch Prime Minister Ruud Lubbers said he was impressed by the United States' "extraordinarily positive attitude" toward events in Europe.

one-mile stretch of the South Fork of the American River near Placerville, Calif. In 1987, the Rock Creek power plant was licensed to take water out of the river, run it through the turbines and return it to the river one mile downstream.

During the dry season, the plant was required to maintain a "minimum flow" in the river of 11 cubic feet per second.

But the State Water Resources Control Board said the plant must maintain a river of 30 cubic feet per second, nearly three times as much.

Otherwise, it said, the trout would suffer.

In response, FERC officials said California had no authority to set its own water-flow requirements, and in June, the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals upheld that decision. The case of California vs. FERC, 89-333, will be heard early next year, with a ruling due by July.

The National Weather Service says temperatures are expected to trap cool air and snow in many southern Idaho valleys Monday. However, warm, moist air from the Pacific will bring surges of rain to northern and central Idaho today. This band of moisture may sag into southern Idaho.

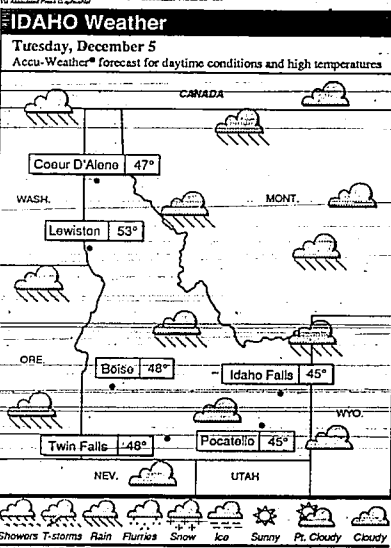

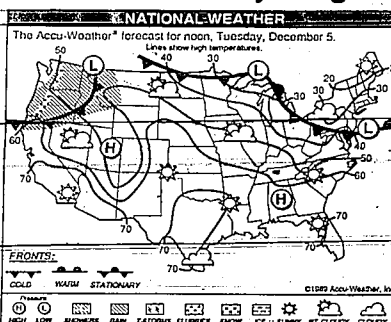

A colder, more winter-like storm from the north Pacific is likely to move inland near the end of the week.

High temperatures across Idaho Sunday ranged from 32 to 52, generally to 55 degrees Fahrenheit. Low temperatures Monday morning varied between 5 degrees at Stanley and 46 at Lewiston. Ketchum and Dixie both reported 5 inches of old snow on the ground. Twenty-four hour rainfall amounts in northern Idaho ranged upward to three tenths of an inch. Only slight amounts were reported elsewhere.

The extended forecast for Southern Idaho - Cloudy Thursday through Saturday with a chance of showers mainly on Friday. Highs in the upper 30s and 40s. Lows in the 20s and lower 30s.

The warmest temperature in the state Monday was 58 degrees at Lewiston. Stanley reported the coldest at 4 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Monday, the highest temperature was 83 degrees at Woodland Hills, Calif. The lowest was 20 below zero at Watertown, N.Y.

Bush says that defense cuts won't transfer to domestic spending

President Bush gestures at a press conference after NATO meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush warned Monday that he foresees no "peace dividend" for domestic programs from military-cuts related to reduced East-West tensions, even though many in Congress already are campaigning for just such a revenue transfer.

"We have a lot of demands at home, and there's no question about that," Bush said. "But I think it is premature to speak as some are at home about a peace dividend — take a lot of money out of defense and put it into other worthy causes."

The president said the reason there can be no such windfall was that the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law requires that he produce a budget for fiscal 1991 containing a shortfall of no more than $6 billion.

The deficit for this budget year, which ends Sept. 30, is projected at about $110 billion. Bush will present his proposed budget to Congress on Jan. 22.

"There just isn't a lot of extra, excess money, unquote, floating around there," Bush told a news conference in Brussels, Belgium just after he briefed NATO leaders on his weekend summit with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

— Although members of Congress are split over the question, many believe it is time to impose deep cuts on the nearly $290 billion defense budget, which comprises about one-fourth of the government's $1.2-trillion annual spending.

They cite three reasons: the easing of Cold War tensions, the need to shrink the deficit and a desire to slash "unnecessary" domestic programs that have been hit hard by Reagan spending cuts.

"The more you cut from the military, the less damage you do to domestic programs to meet Gramm-Rudman targets," Rep. Barney Frank of Mass. said Monday.

Frank has been a leader of a group of liberals pressing congressional leaders to slash about $20 billion off the Pentagon's budget and redistribute most of it among health, housing, education and other domestic programs.

But it is not just liberals who want to reduce the Defense Department's coffers.

Conservative Rep. Sonny Montgomery, D-Miss., chairman of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee, told reporters Monday that he would like to see next year's defense spending frozen at 1990 levels and envisions savings by eventually bringing some U.S. troops home from Europe.

"I [we do have these extra monies] would like for them to go into the national debt and take about half the money and use it for domestic programs in the United States," Montgomery said.

Since Frank's group made its proposals, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney has begun considering plans to shrink expected military spending rates by up to $180 billion over the next three to five years.

Such a reduction sounds dramatic, but it would in fact do little to change the direction Pentagon spending has taken in recent years.

Since 1986, military spending has decreased by an average of 3 percent annually when inflation is taken into account, even though the actual amount of money going to the Pentagon has increased each year. Defense Department outlays, $265 billion in 1986, should reach $287 billion this year.

The cuts Cheney is examining would not literally cut defense spending. Rather, they would slow the rate by which military spending would otherwise increase. Many Capitol Hill believe that in the end, the amount of money going to the Pentagon will remain at about $290 billion for each of the next several years.

Defense spending is difficult to shrink quickly because much of it — such as purchases of fleets of jet fighters — is committed in contracts that span over several years. Even reducing numbers of troops has offsetting costs, such as higher civilian unemployment rates.

Thus, the conventional wisdom among lawmakers and lobbyists is that the 1991 Defense Department budget is unlikely to contain reductions of more than $3 billion to $8 billion from the increases that were already planned for the year.

U.S. stand may divide allies

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — President Bush on Monday endorsed a cautious and measured approach to reunifying Germany, instilling gratitude in West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl but wariness among some other NATO allies.

Bush indicated at a special session of Western alliance leaders that a single German state still loyal to NATO would express the yearning of Germans for unity as well as the right to a nation's self-determination.

"We are not trying to accelerate the process," Bush later told a news conference wrapping up his talks with allied leaders here. "It's better to let things move on their own."

But his concept of a reunified Germany within a future Europe bound by common goals and values gave new life to an issue that stirs concern on both sides of the East-West divide.

"Self-determination must be pursued without prejudice to its outcome," Bush told reporters in recapping his views on reunification.

He said West Germany must remain committed to NATO and the European Community, "with due regard for the legal role and responsibilities of the Allied powers," and said reunification would have to be "peaceful, gradual, and part of a step-by-step basis."

He said he thought Kohl "feels comfortable" with the U.S. terms of "rejoicing the two Germans," and stressed that no time frame has been identified for reunification.

Kohl expressed thanks for Bush's support on those questions of concern to us Germans."

The "German Question" dominated and intensified the alliance gathering called to discuss the weekend summit in Malta with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, which also dwelled heavily on the democratic reform wave eroding Europe's political divide.

The changes reshaping Eastern Europe most directly affect the Germans who have been separated since World War II into the rival camps of NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

Summit gave leaders chance to size each other up

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — President Bush said Monday his meeting with Mikhail S. Gorbachev gave the two leaders a chance to cement a personal relationship, though "it wasn't all sweetness and light."

In a news conference before leaving Europe after briefing the NATO allies on his summit talks with Gorbachev — Bush summed up his own new relationship with the Soviet president, forged in the stormy waters off Malta during their weekend of talks aboard a Soviet cruise ship.

"What happened was, I think, he took my measure and I took his, and I think we just feel more comfortable about our common objectives," said Bush.

He hedged a bit when asked if he considered the Soviet leader a personal friend. That they had "friendly conversations," was as far as he would go.

But — Bush made clear that Gorbachev had made an impression on him.

"I feel I can sense much more clearly the things he feels more strongly about. And we had a good chance to point out to him some of the difficulties with our relationship. It wasn't all sweetness and light," said the president.

In their private sessions aboard the Maxim Gorky, anchored firmly in harbor against the harsh December storm, Gorbachev was less openly buoyant with Bush on Sunday over the first joint news conference for Soviet and American leaders.

In public, Gorbachev felt free to joke about his summit partner, talking of the importance of "cautiousness" and "I use the favorite word by President Bush."

Gorbachev also praised the Malta meeting, enthusiastically, saying it had placed his relationship with Bush "on a different level."

Bush said, "As I watched the way in which Mr. Gorbachev has handled the changes in Eastern Europe, it deserves new thinking. It absolutely mandates new thinking."

Noting Gorbachev's willingness to consider disproportionate troop withdrawals from Europe and his support for peaceful change and a right of Warsaw Pact countries to make their own choices, Bush said that he and the Western allies feel "in certain respect for what he's doing and thus, we want to try to meet him on some of the areas where he needs help."

In the Malta talks, Bush said, "He seemed very much in control. You can tell the way that he interacted with his own top people there. He felt very confident in discussing without notes a wide array of subjects with me."

"He seemed subdued" is the wrong word, but I would say determined and unemotional about it. The most emotion we saw was at that press conference yesterday, but it was a wonderful presentation," said Bush.

The two leaders didn't resolve U.S. grievances over the actions of Soviet-backed governments and rebels in Central America, but even there Bush sounded a more conciliatory note than he had before.

He spoke at length of Gorbachev's support for free elections in Nicaragua, and said he felt the Soviet leader was "impressed by the message from Oscar Arias," the Costa Rican president who relayed a complaint about "destructive role" by Fidel Castro's Cuba in the Western Hemisphere.

Even on Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, a nemesis of U.S. policy, Bush sounded an understanding note about what he portrayed as Gorbachev's limited influence over a government that gives massive support from the Kremlin.

Bush said he did not want to imply that Gorbachev "can just snap his fingers and have Mr. Ortega ... do what he said."

Nurses' compensation lags as roles expand

Ron Fisse

A condition referred to as "the nursing shortage" exists in the nation and is being especially felt here in the Magic Valley.

More than 20 vacant nursing positions at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center have increased pressure on staff and administration alike.

Several times in the last few weeks, emergency room staff have been told not to admit any other patients to the facility. Those patients were either discharged for long periods in the ER, awaiting a bed or were transferred.

Meanwhile staff in the various departments worked hard trying to find more help or transfer patients with less serious problems.

This situation is happening in hospitals across the country, but may be more acute here where nurses' wages are some of the lowest in the state. A sorrier fact, considering Idaho is among the lowest paying states in the nation.

Nurses today are still expected to deliver quality care despite hindrances that are inherent in an inflated, cumbersome and needlessly complex medical system. And as nurses have historically been "caught in the middle," we assume much of the guilt when we can't perform the way we would like. So many, in fact, that our country has some 200,000 vacant nursing positions with no indication that the trend will change.

Women, who comprise 96 percent of the nursing force in this country, are choosing more lucrative, less demanding professions with less personal risk. There are more women in the marketplace than ever before, yet nursing is experiencing a severe shortage. Where will future nurses come from and will there be enough to go around?

Out of necessity, the health industry is slowly changing its perspective toward its employees and are beginning to realize the wisdom in treating them well. It shouldn't be difficult for hospitals to realize that happy workers can produce more and are less likely to quit.

But huge hospital budgets strain under the load of construction and maintenance costs and equipment purchases. The hope of generating more income, losing sight of the simple truth that health care workers have been saying for years:

Pay us what we are worth and treat us with the respect we deserve, and you'll see the shortage. If almost all the nurses who have accepted this premise which has transformed Japan into the production giant it is today.

During the seventies we have seen the introduction of more sophisticated technologies in health care. Through the eighties we used these advanced technologies to perpetuate the simple truth that some may consider reasonable.

The challenge for the nineties will be in facing the difficulties of paying for this technology or living with our decisions when we cannot. Dilemmas created by unpaid millions on hospital bills and the inequities of Medicare will not go away. What may become a "thing of the past" is the special caring that we have come to expect from our nurses.

The nursing shortage is not some public relations scheme. It is a real situation that may only get worse and the taxpayers alike deserve to know what nurses have known for years.

That building projects, new technology and other high priced capital expenditures can never replace the warmth and kindness implicit in the healing art of nursing.

If I were satisfied with that outcome, I would join the UAW and turn bolts for $25/hour with no risk of contracting AIDS or threat of malpractice suits.

These risks are also increasing for the allied professionals. Respiratory therapists, lab techs, X-ray techs and the like, experience many of nursing's frustrations.

Most unfortunate is the rumor that the "bedside nurse," the LPN/LVN, is not being considered in proposals to attract more nurses. I shudder to think where our hospital would be without the fifty-plus LPNs who work every bit as hard as RNs. The notion that they might not be included in a pay increase disturbs me.

When it comes to good nursing, the patient doesn't care if you have an RN or an LPN behind your name, as experience is preferred to labels of an extra year of schooling.

I feel for my fellow nurses, both LPNs and RNs. We're in this together and need to be recognized for our experience as well as our training. Nurses should be rewarded for doing jobs that most of us would not. So many, in fact, that our country has some 200,000 vacant nursing positions with no indication that the trend will change.

High court to make medico-legal history

Dr. Peter Singer

The U.S. Supreme Court makes medico-legal history this week when it hears the Missouri case of Nancy Cruzan — the first case involving the right of an adult patient to forgo life-sustaining treatment. Even Quinlan, the famous 1976 case that spawned a long progeny of "right-to-die" cases, was decided by a state supreme court (New Jersey's).

Nancy Cruzan is a comatose 31-year-old woman with almost no chance of ever regaining consciousness. She has been in this condition since a 1983 motor vehicle accident. She is kept alive by nutrients and fluids administered through a tube surgically implanted into her stomach. In 1987 her parents requested that artificial feeding be stopped. The hospital refused to do so without a court order.

The parents petitioned a lower court, which granted their request. The Missouri attorney general appealed the case directly to the state supreme court. In November 1988 that court ruled 4 to 3 that Nancy Cruzan's artificial feeding must be continued.

The majority expressed "grave doubts as to the applicability of privacy rights to decisions to terminate the provision of food and water to an incompetent patient." The court concluded that the strong state interest in life outweighed the individual rights invoked on Nancy's behalf.

The U.S. Supreme Court will ultimately decide whether Nancy Cruzan's artificial feeding may be stopped. But, more generally, the "right-to-die" raises seven key questions at the intersection of medicine, law and ethics:

• Does the constitutional right of privacy extend to the decision to forgo life-sustaining treatment? The privacy right has been applied by the U.S. Supreme Court to medical matters in Griswold vs. Connecticut (contraception) and Roe vs. Wade (abortion). First applied to the decision to forgo life-sustaining treatment by the New Jersey Supreme Court in the case of Karen Quinlan, the privacy right has served as a foundation for the "right-to-die" in state and federal courts.

• Whether the U.S. Supreme Court finds the privacy right applicable to the life-sustaining treatment decision is a fundamental legal question presented by the Cruzan case.

• Alternatively, since the word "privacy" does not occur in the Constitution while "liberty" does, the current conservative court may choose to found the "right-to-die" in the liberty protections of the Fifth and 14th amendments.

• Do an individual's constitutional and common law rights outweigh the state interest in life? Since Quinlan, almost every court that has ruled on this question has answered it in the affirmative. Missouri demurred. It's now up to the U.S. Supreme Court to decide.

• Do incompetent patients retain the same right to forgo life-sustaining treatment that competent patients possess? Based on constitutional guarantees of equal protection under the law, the answer is almost certainly yes. Indeed, most cases since Quinlan have involved incompetent patients.

The practical dilemma is that incompetent patients cannot themselves invoke their right to forgo life-sustaining treatment.

• Who should make decisions on behalf of the incompetent patient? This is a vexing question when the patient has no family or friends, or when there is disagreement about the preferred course of action. (In Nancy Cruzan's case, no one contests the standing of her parents to represent her.)

5. On what grounds should decisions to forgo life-sustaining treatment be made? Everyone agrees that the patient's prior wishes are determinative.

As a practical matter, such information is not always available. Only rarely do patients leave explicit directives about end-of-life care that seem to cover the clinical situation at hand.

In the absence of such directives, courts have disagreed about the standard of evidence required for prior wishes. In New York, as expressed in the case of Mary O'Connor, there must be "clear and convincing evidence" that the patient held a firm and settled commitment to the termination of life supports under circumstances like those presented. In other states, "trustworthy" evidence of prior wishes is sufficient.

Nancy Cruzan had "expressed the feeling that she would not wish to continue living if she couldn't be at least halfway normal." The Missouri Supreme Court characterized this evidence as "inherently unreliable." The U.S. Supreme Court may consider what evidentiary standard such statements must meet, and how important, what level of evidence is required to effectuate a decision to forgo life-sustaining treatment.

• Does the right to forgo life-sustaining treatment encompass artificial feeding? The early "right-to-die" cases featured high-technology life-sustaining treatment. Quinlan, for example, involved the discontinuation of a respirator. More recently, cases have involved tube-feeding. This transition was fueled by the legal view, as expressed in the 1985 New Jersey case of Clair Conroy, that "analytically, artificial feeding by means of a nasogastric tube or intravenous infusion can be seen as equivalent to artificial breathing by means of a respirator." The majority in Cruzan has questioned this view: "Common sense tells us that food and water do not treat an illness, they maintain it."

Having been personally involved in both the withdrawal of a respirator and of a feeding tube, I can attest that the decision to stop artificial feeding is emotionally far more difficult for the health care professional. Whether this distinction has any legal standing is a matter for the U.S. Supreme Court.

If Cruzan is upheld, however, I believe the court should specifically restrict the decision to artificial feeding. Otherwise, it might impede the progress made since Quinlan in giving dying patients the right not to lie in the Procrustean bed of medical high technology.

• Does a patient's right to forgo treatment oblige the staff of a conscientiously objecting health care facility to participate in the treatment plan? The right of individual health care providers not to participate in non-emergency treatment plans that they find morally objectionable is well established.

The prerogative of health care facilities to refuse certain types of care on moral grounds has recently been challenged in the courts. In the 1987 case of Nancy Jones, (who, like Nancy Cruzan, was in a persistent vegetative state and kept alive by tube feeding), the New Jersey Supreme Court not only affirmed that artificial feeding could be stopped but also ordered the conscientiously objecting health care facility to care for Jones until she died.

But health care is a complex process, not well captured by the language of informed consent to individual treatments. The prerogative of health care facilities to project a particular moral vision of health care, as expressed in a statement of institutional mission, serves the public good in our morally pluralistic society.

It offers the promise that treatment proposals begin from shared fundamental beliefs. Such missions should be clearly stated and known to patients and their families at the time of admission. In the Cruzan case, there is no evidence that objection of artificial feeding conflicts with the mission of the hospital. Nevertheless, the court might consider the public interests served by protecting a spectrum of health care facility missions.

Sex is not a spectator sport

Let's not worry about morality or sexually transmitted diseases like AIDS; we need our sexual freedom!

I feel that Sally Bloxham's reply, "Don't limit society's freedoms" was unfortunate. She turned a letter of advice into a stand against one of the forms of sexual displays on television to bigotry.

Allowing television networks and stations the freedom to show indiscriminate sexual activities limits my freedom to even turn on my television. No more and more, I turn to parents who don't have the TV on because of this display of sexual freedom.

One evening while watching a family show, one of the local stations aired three consecutive ads for shows to be aired later that displayed people engaged in sexual activities. Trying to explain that to a three-year-old child.

I am glad to see someone taking a stand, although I feel they should have targeted all displays of indiscriminate sex. I feel that the TV industry has gone too far in the name of reality. A dear friend of mine put it this way, "Sex is not a spectator sport."

McClure response inaccurate

Senator James McClure, in responding to Larry Swisher's column on the National Forest Management Act hearings in Washington, D.C., said that it was "mixing apples and oranges" to include non-federal timber sales in discussions of federal timber sales and the effect on the Magic Valley.

It's not. Responsible actions addressing Idaho's timber supplies must look at all sources of timber, not just escalations of below-cost timber sales from the national forests.

Increases of federal timber sales do little to affect Idaho's total timber supply, since 1/3 to 1/2 of Idaho's timber production comes from non-federal sources, such as private and industrial and non-industrial lands.

It's especially hard to believe that appeals of federal timber sales are choking off the Law firm performs an injustice

Law firm does injustice to growers and stockholders.

What a great job the law firm of Nelson, Rosholt, Robertson, Tolman and Tucker claims to have done on the Hawkins Bankruptcy. Though I am not involved in the Hawkins bankruptcy, I have followed the proceedings and observed the beating that the area farmers have taken in this bankruptcy — which is now sadly starting into its second year.

It is very disturbing to me to see a law firm, which is retained by its stockholders of the Twin Falls Canal Company, hire on to represent the Hawkins Company in bankruptcy against the farmers who are the stockholders in the canal company.

This seems to me to be clearly a conflict of interest and that they want the best of both worlds.

It seems to me that the attorney fees they want to collect from the sale of the beans are grossly over stated — maybe the purpose being that the bankruptcy judge will award them a smaller amount than they are asking so that their expenses will be covered.

They have accumulated the majority of their fees by trying to prove that the Hawkins Company owned the beans instead of the farmers; therefore, I feel they have no claim to the farmers' bean proceeds.

I think the time has come for the firm of Nelson, Rosholt, Robertson, Tolman and Tucker to make a decision about which side of the fence they want to stand on.

If they feel so strongly about being paid out of the farmers' bean proceeds, then they should be relieved of their legal duties to the Twin Falls Canal Company.

On the other hand, if they feel any sense of loyalty and dedication to the Twin Falls Canal Company and its stockholders, they should abandon the Hawkins bankruptcy and drop their claims to the past year's bean proceeds.

Catastrophic health plan premiums continue beyond coverage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 33 million retirees will have to pay premiums for several more months for Medicare catastrophic coverage — a program that will be abolished on Dec. 31.

Gwendolyn King, commissioner of the Social Security Administration, blamed Congress' late action in repealing the law. She said Monday there is no way that Social Security computers can be adjusted more quickly to halt withholding of the premiums from monthly benefit checks.

— The premiums will be refunded in a lump sum later, Ms. King said.

— We have people going flat out... but we won't be able to make all the changes until perhaps the end of April or the beginning of May," Ms. King said.

That means the great majority of retirees — perhaps up to 29 million — will have to pay $5.30 a month for three to four months for a program that will no longer exist.

— Some retirees pay less; others pay

— The bottom line is that Social Security will unscrabble this egg, but we did not lay it," Ms. King said.

Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate Aging Committee, said in a letter to Ms. King that "a lengthy delay (in halting collection of the premiums) will create a firestorm of protest. We must recognize the impending firestorm and move rapidly to alleviate the problem."

Pryor predicted that if the Social Security Administration continues withholding the premiums until early summer, it could take the rest of the year for retirees to get their money back.

Pryor estimated that would temporarily take $1 billion out of the pockets of the elderly. In many cases, he said, they need that money to pay private "Medigap" insurance policy premium increases expected to result from repeal of federal catastrophic coverage.

"We knew there might be a problem, but I don't think we expected it to take this long to resolve," said John Royher of the American Association of Retired Persons. "Congress normally gives the Social Security Administration about a three-month lead time for changes."

Since Jan. 1, most people 65 and older have been paying $4 a month to finance part of the cost of Medicare catastrophic coverage. The year-old program aims to prevent a retiree from being bankrupted by a major illness. The monthly premium is scheduled to rise to $5.30 on Jan. 1.

Premiums paid this year will not be refunded, they finance extended hospital coverage and other, minor catastrophic benefits that have been in effect since January.

— Two-thirds of the cost of the program would have been borne by higher-income retirees through an income surtax of up to $800 a year.

U.S. officers held briefly by Soviets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet military personnel in East Germany detained 10 U.S. military officers for 7 1/2 hours on the eve of President Bush's summit with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the Pentagon said Monday.

"There were no U.S. or Soviet injuries. U.S. personnel were released later that day. The incident is under investigation."

Pentagon spokesman, Navy Lt. Cmdr. Ken Satterfield said.

Satterfield said the U.S. team was "on their assigned mission" Friday which involved observing installations in East Germany. It was not immediately clear how many U.S. and Soviet personnel were involved in the incident.

The spokesman said the vehicle in which the U.S. team was riding detained and "a tire was punctured with a bayonet."

Satterfield said the team was not threatened by the Soviets.

The incident, which was confirmed by several other Pentagon officials, has raised tempers among some military officers.

In March 1985, a Soviet sonar shot and killed an unarmed U.S. Army major, Arthur D. Nicholson Jr., and left him to die without medical aid, saying that Nicholson had been "caught red-handed" taking pictures in a restricted area.

Another Pentagon official, asked why the incident was not immediately announced, said that some officials believed the detained U.S. personnel were lower-level Soviet officials "over-reacting" to the presence of the military team.

The U.S. military mission was established under a 1947 Potsdam accord that allowed the Western allies and the Soviets to set up such offices in each other's occupied zones of Germany. Under this pact, the United States, Britain and France have military liaison offices in East Germany and the Soviets have three in West Germany.

Though the incident was announced, Pentagon officials offered information about it when queried by The Associated Press.

"They don't want to elevate this," said one Pentagon source referring to efforts by U.S. officials to minimize the incident at a time of improving U.S.-Soviet relations. Bush and Gorbachev met over the weekend in Malta and said their talks heralded a reduction in East-West tensions.

Satterfield said he was not aware that any official protest had been filed over the detention.

"The incident was not routine, but it's not unheard of, either," he said. "It's being handled on a military-to-military basis."

The spokesman said the liaison officers operate under an agreement that allows contentious issues such as these to be discussed between U.S. and Soviet military commanders.

This incident "merits discussion," he said.

The spokesman said the incident occurred at about 9:30 a.m. local time (1:30 a.m. MST) in the vicinity of the East German city of Halle, 80 miles southwest of Berlin.

Under the 1947 accord that established the missions, each office is allowed 14 officers and enlisted personnel. The provision on freedom of travel in the U.S.-Soviet agreement states:

"Each member of the missions will be given identical travel facilities to include identical permanent passes in the Russian and English languages, permitting complete freedom of travel wherever and whenever it will be desired over territory and roads in both zones, except places of disposition of military units, without escort or supervision."

The detention came despite the signing in June of a U.S.-Soviet agreement designed to avoid dangerous military incidents reached between the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Adm. William Crowe, and top Soviet military officials.

Attorney general opens Pierce probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Dick Thornburgh disclosed Monday that he had ordered a preliminary inquiry to determine whether a special prosecutor should investigate alleged criminal wrongdoing by former Housing Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr.

Justice Department spokesman David Runkel said a letter to Congress delivered earlier in the day informed lawmakers that the attorney general had ordered the start of a preliminary inquiry.

Thornburgh ordered the inquiry in response to a request by 19 House Democrats, formally known as an independent-counsel, to investigate allegations of criminal wrongdoing by Pierce when he ran the scandal-plagued Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Runkel said the preliminary inquiry, which can take as long as 90 days, began on Saturday.

A lawyer for Pierce, Robert Plotkin, dismissed the move as insignificant, saying he was confident it would not result in appointment of an independent counsel.

"Under the very low threshold the statute requires, we aren't surprised that preliminary inquiry has been undertaken," Plotkin said. "We are confident that at the end of the 90-day period they will find there is no basis for appointing an independent counsel."

Skinner sees wide drug use in transport

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner predicted Monday that random drug testing will reveal an "alarming amount of drug usage" among people responsible for the safety of land, air and sea transportation.

Rules begin going into effect in two weeks that require random and other drug tests for millions of airline, railroad, mass transit, bus company, trucking company and pipeline employees.

Skinner said that where court orders do not stop the testing, companies must comply with the new rule.

Lawmakers suggested there was evidence of a conspiracy by Pierce and other top officials at the Department of Housing and Urban Development to defraud federal urban aid programs by awarding grants on the basis of political favoritism.

The congressmen, all members of the House Judiciary Committee, had also suggested in their Nov. 2 letter that Pierce had lied to the House Government Operations committee and housing subcommittee when he testified last spring.

The lawmakers cited Pierce's testimony that he was did not have a "hands on" involvement in dispensing HUD grants to private developers.

Under the independent counsel law, Thornburgh was required to decide within 15 days of receiving the lawmakers' Nov. 2 letter whether to proceed with a preliminary inquiry. The law gave him until Friday 15 days to report that decision to Congress.

Independent counsels are appointed by a special federal court that reviews applications submitted by the Justice Department.

After receiving their request last month, Thornburgh pointedly accused of the lawmakers of trying to inject "partisan politics into this matter, which has until now been handled on a non-partisan, professional way by the Congress, HUD and this department."

Defense in shooting shows bike, rests

MIAMI (AP) — The defense rested Monday in the manslaughter trial of a Miami policeman after rolling a motorcycle into the courtroom to show jurors how the vehicle looked "the day the defendant shot and killed his driver."

The case could go to final arguments Tuesday.

William Lozano, 31, a suspended officer, faces two manslaughter counts in the January deaths of the bike's driver, Clement Lloyd, 23, and passenger, Allan Blanchard, 24, both black. Lozano is Colombian born. The shooting triggered three days of racial violence in Miami.

Navy tests missile after keeping protesters at bay

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The Navy outmuscled Greenpeace anti-nuclear protesters Monday, crippling their vessels and towing them out of an area where they tried unsuccessfully to halt the test launch of a Trident 2 missile.

The high seas drama took place in the Atlantic 50 miles off the Florida coast just before the nuclear-powered submarine Tennessee unleashed the $26.5 million missile on a test that put the Trident 2 program back on track after two explosive failures in the first three undersea launches.

"We did a perfect launch, just beautiful," Vice Adm. Roger Bacon, commander of the Atlantic Submarine Fleet, said at a news conference.

"The Navy said its ships had to 'shoulder' aside a large ship carrying protesters, and capture and tow away two high-speed rafts called Zodiacs from the launch area."

Greenpeace USA peace activists said the Navy rammed their ship, aimed fire hoses down their smoke stacks to stop its engines and that Navy divers had sliced the fuel lines and punctured the pontoons on the Zodiacs.

Bacon said hoses were used and that Navy sailors in rafts cut the fuel lines on one of the Zodiacs after the other broke down in heavy seas.

Three Navy helicopters made life even more miserable for the two men

A U.S. Navy Trident II takes off from a submerged submarine in each of the Zodiacs by hovering overhead, making already choppy seas even choppier.

Shannon Fagan, a spokeswoman for the protesters, said a Navy ship, the 254-foot submarine support ship USS Graep, left two gashes in the hull of the USS Greenpeace, a 190-foot ocean-going tug. She said the largest, about 3 feet long, was stuffed with mattresses to keep water out.

Cmdr. Deborah Burnette, a Navy spokeswoman, said Navy officials at the scene reported only one hole about 1 foot in diameter in the Greenpeace hull.

"This is a terrible outrage," said Peter Bahouth, executive director of Greenpeace USA, in a statement. "This is an unbridled act of aggression against a peaceful protest in international waters."

Fagan said Greenpeace was considering legal action against the Navy.

Greenpeace had successfully used the ship and Zodiacs to block a Trident 2 launch attempt July 28. But the Navy was ready for them this time.

"We were more prepared today because we looked at what they tried to do on July 28, and we used the minimum force necessary today to clear the area," Bacon said.

Once the protesters' vessels were muscled outside the 5,000-yard diameter safety circle, the Tennessee sent the 44-foot missile shooting out of a tube in the deck. It broke the Atlantic surface, ignited and propelled a dummy warhead package to an ocean target several thousand miles away.

The Navy announced the success about 20 minutes after the 8:40 a.m. MDT launch.

"We issued repeated warnings to clear the area," Burnette said of the Greenpeace incident. "The MV Greenpeace acknowledged our warnings and declared its intention to stay in the area. Two submarine support ships, Graep and Kittiwake, shouldered it out of the safety arc."

Burnette said the warning told the protesters that if the ship did not move, the Navy "will exercise its rights under international law and will forcibly remove you."

The MV Greenpeace refused to budge. "You are doing your best but you haven't sunk us yet, we are staying," Fagan said.

Fagan said the ship was "dead in the water" for a while after the Navy ships poured water down the smoke stacks, but the crew got one of the two engines restarted and the ship headed for port in Jacksonville, Fla., after non-essential people were taken off by helicopter.

The incident began shortly after the nuclear submarine USS Tennessee submerged for the attempt to launch the Trident 2 missile on its fourth test flight.

Two of the first three Trident 2 launches from the submarine ended in explosions just above the surface. The second in the series was declared a success by the Navy.

The failures, blamed on an inadequately designed nozzle system, had set back the plan to send operational Trident 2s to sea late this year. But if the program continues to succeed over about half a dozen more undersea launches, the Tennessee is scheduled to go on operational patrol next spring with 24 of the deadly missiles. Each is capable of hurling up to 12 nuclear warheads to different targets more than 4,600 miles away.

Nineteen land-launch tests, 15 of them successful, preceded the sea trials.

Savings regulator resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — M. Danny Wall, under fire for his handling of the costliest savings and loan failure in history, resigned Monday as the government's chief savings regulator.

Wall, 52, has been accused of making a "scapegoat" for the problems of the entire industry.

In his letter of resignation to President Bush, Wall complained of a "steady stream of one-sided information" from Congressional hearings concerning the collapse of Lincoln Savings and Loan of Irvine, Calif.

He specifically criticized Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas, chairman of the House Banking Committee, saying "Gonzalez resorted to corruption of the truth" in trying to force him out.

Gonzalez said in a statement, "I know this was a difficult decision, but I commend him for taking the action so that the air may be cleared and we may move forward in dealing with the savings and loan crisis." He made no mention of Wall's accusations.

The committee's ranking Republican, Chalmers Wylie of Ohio, said Wall was "a victim of circumstances" but that his departure "was necessary under the circumstances because of the adverse publicity and because he was under attack. His administration time was being taken up with preparing responses to continued questions."

For nearly two months, Wall has been the chief target of hearings by the panel. A main question members have emphasized has been why federal regulators allowed Lincoln to remain open at all last April even though examiners had recommended in May 1987 that it be closed. The bailout of the institution is expected to cost taxpayers up to $2.5 billion.

"As I testified under oath, neither political influence nor Lincoln's Charles Keating affected my decision on Lincoln," Wall said in his resignation letter. "Nor for that matter have I ever made decisions for political reasons during my tenure as chairman and director."

His denial that "political influence" was a factor in his decision appeared to refer to inquiries made by five senators about the Lincoln case.

The Senate ethics committee is investigating whether the senators — Donald Riegle, D-Mich.; Alan Cranston, D-Calif.; Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.; John McCain, R-Ariz.; and John Glenn, D-Ohio, — violated conflict-of-interest rules in their dealings with Phoenix businessman Keating, who was instrumental in obtaining thousands of dollars in political contributions to them.

Ministers refuse to testify against contrite robber

BERKELEY SPRINGS, W.Va. (AP) — Interrupting a Pentecostal church service, a sobbing Larry Yost cleared his conscience by confessing his sin: He was "involved" in a break-in at his uncle's building supply store.

Now three ministers say a prosecutor wants them to testify — not for God, but for the state — at Yost's trial on a breaking-and-entering charge. They say authorities have crossed the boundary between God's work and their own.

"We have to refuse," said Shirley Hiles, a minister at the Word of Deliverance Association. "We don't want to be rude, indignant or anything like that. We aren't saying we won't. We're saying we can't."

Yost's trial on the felony count is set for today. If convicted, Yost, who already has a criminal record, could face a life sentence under the state's repeat offender statute.

It's not clear exactly what Yost said to the congregation. He insists he confessed only to "witnessing the burglary, not to taking part in it."

"I just told them I watched someone do it," Yost said. "What I said was to my brothers and sisters in church. It was their confidence and should not be taken out into the world."

A judge's order says that Yost told the congregation he "was sorry he had let his fellow members of the church down, and he wanted to confess that he had been involved in a breaking and entering at Yost Building Supply."

But Mrs. Hiles' husband, Jack, who is founder and pastor of the church, said it wasn't that clear.

"He came in crying and mumbling about being involved in a break-in," Hiles said. "To be honest with you, if I had to go on a witness stand, I couldn't tell you what he said. He was very drunk, hurt and crying when he came in. He was a broken man."

Morgan County Prosecutor Charles Trump IV declined comment on the charges against Yost or his subpoenas of Hiles, 58, Mrs. Hiles, 51, or a third minister, Wilda Maconaughey, 54.

He also refused to disclose why he subpoenaed only the ministers and not other members of the congregation.

The state Supreme Court last week refused to hear the ministers' challenge to the subpoenas.

West Virginia and New Hampshire are the only states that do not protect confessions made to ministers or priests in criminal cases, according to Richard Gay, the ministers' lawyer. West Virginia, however, does allow statements made to clergy about divorce proceedings to be kept secret, Gay said.

Yost, 35, a Berkeley Springs carpenter, said he told the congregation just before last Christmas that he watched and did nothing as another man broke into his uncle's store last December. He denied having a role in the robbery.

"It was such a burden on my heart, I just had to go to my church and get it off my chest," Yost said from the Eastern Regional Jail, where he has been in custody since January in lieu of $15,000 bond.

Gay is trying to block the subpoenas. If the ministers are found in contempt of court, Gay said, he will appeal again to the state's high court.

Space shuttle sonic booms spur skyscraper quake safety concerns

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sonic booms set off by a descending space shuttle created ground motion that showed earthquakes may shake Los Angeles skyscrapers more violently than once thought, scientists said Monday.

"Engineers say we don't need to worry about it, but I'm not so sure," said geophysics professor Hiroo Kanamori of the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena. "It's time to really think about this problem more carefully and more seriously."

The study by several Caltech and U.S. Geological Survey scientists was outlined by Kanamori during the American Geophysical Union's fall meeting.

The researchers found that the shuttles' characteristic twin sonic booms thumped 400 high-rise buildings in downtown Los Angeles and the nearby Wilshire district when the shuttle Columbia swept to the northeast over the city at 2,600 mph before landing at Edwards Air Force Base last Aug. 13.

The early morning booms prompted dozens of alarmed calls to police. The shuttle was returning from a five-day mission to deploy a spy satellite.

The thumps against the buildings were transmitted down to the soft sediment of the Los Angeles Basin, triggering seismic waves that reached Caltech instruments 12.5 seconds before the sonic booms were heard there. That's because waves move more quickly through rock than through air.

The scientists learned from the data that the soft, 1.25-mile-deep sediment beneath Los Angeles amplifies the effects of slow-swaying "long-period" quake waves with a period — or time between wave crests — of 2 to 3 seconds.

Short-period waves cause sharp jolts. Buildings 20 to 30 stories tall tend to sway back and forth once every 2 to 3 seconds, making it possible that "in an earthquake, the Los Angeles basin would preferentially amplify ground motion, giving 20 to 30-story buildings more shaking than if they were founded on solid rock," Caltech said in a news release.

USGS seismologist Jim Mori, a co-author of the study, estimated buildings on the sediment would shake three to five times worse than those on solid rock.

However, that's less severe than the tremors and greater amplification of shaking during the great quakes of 1985 in Mexico City, which rests on an old lake bed.

"While these results certainly call for the close study, I don't believe there's any cause for alarm," said Caltech civil engineer James L. Beck.

Henry Kozu, a structural engineer at EQE Engineering in Los Angeles, said skyscrapers "are designed and built to pretty strict criteria. There's so much inherent flexibility in high rises they can accommodate significant motion."

"I don't think those buildings are going to fall down," said Leigh Hauksaan, a University of Southern California seismologist. "Probably the engineers are right in that they have designed these buildings with some overestimates of what the shaking might be to make sure the buildings are safe."

But contractor Mori warned: "There's reason to be concerned."

"And researcher Kanamori said: 'My feeling is these effects have not been really evaluated, very carefully and very quantitatively.'"

Robert Harder, assistant chief of the city's Building Bureau, said the city requires buildings taller than 160 feet to be designed using computer-simulated quakes to test loads, stresses and swaying.

E. Germans outraged by corruption

EAST BERLIN (AP) — East Germans outraged by the corruption of disgraced former leaders have tried to storm secret police offices to make sure the evidence was protected, Communist Party reformers said Monday.

Prosecutors blocked access by the ousted officials to evidence that might be used against them. Citizens helped police guard important locations and the opposition joined an ever-widening corruption investigation.

State television showed pictures of people joining police at luxurious government guest houses and at warehouses in East Berlin and Potsdam. Rumors have spread about documents being taken away to prevent their use in criminal trials.

Premier Hans Modrow emerged as the leading political figure one day after the Communist Party leadership resigned. He led a three-member delegation to the Warsaw Pact summit in Moscow.

Wolfgang Schwanz, now chief of national security, ordered flights to Romania halted because of reports that sensitive material was being smuggled to the Warsaw Pact ally, whose leader, Nicolae Ceausescu, has rejected reform.

Officials said there was no proof documents were being sent there. Opposition sources said earlier that important documents were taken from party headquarters to Schoenefeld airport for a flight to Romania.

More than 120,000 people marched through Leipzig, a center of pro-democracy protest, in the regular Monday rally. West Germany's ARD television said some tried to get into the secret police building there.

HANS MODROW
Emerges as political leader

ADN, the official news agency, said 60,000 people rallied in Karl-Marx-Stadt, 10,000 in Schwerin and tens of thousands in Dresden. It also reported demonstrations in other cities.

For the third week in a row, several speakers at Leipzig demanded the reunification of Germany. At least one West German flag was seen in the crowd.

President Bush indicated at a special session of NATO leaders in Brussels that a single Germany loyal to NATO would satisfy both the German yearning for unity and a nation's right to self-determination, but added later to reporters:

"We are not trying to accelerate the process. It's better to let things move on their own.

The Christian Democrats, one of four parties allied with the Communists, said they were cutting those ties, the television reported. It said they demanded that Egon Krenz, who resigned as Communist Party chief Sunday along with the Politburo, also give up the largely ceremonial post of president.

Brigitte Zimmermann, spokeswoman for the party's interim governing committee, a reform-minded group of 25 people, appealed for calm to avoid "anarchy and chaos."

"The committee members have been troubled to learn of indications of people taking the law into their own hands and trying to forcefully enter public buildings," she said in a statement read to reporters in East Berlin.

Ms. Zimmermann said angry citizens recently tried to storm the Erfurt offices of the secret police to keep documents from being taken away, but she did not say precisely when it happened. Similar action is planned in Leipzig, she said.

Flights have been prohibited, as part of the anti-corruption crackdown, in the area of a huge depot stocked with weapons the ousted leaders were selling in the Middle East, Africa and Latin America.

Alexander Schalek-Golodkowski, a ranking former official who ran the weapons operation, has fled the country. The government said late Monday it was enlisting its embassies in an international search for him.

Officials in West Berlin said Schalek-Golodkowski might be there.

Pop stars re-record Band Aid song to raise famine funds

LONDON (AP) — Pop stars finished a new version of the 1984 hit song "Do They Know It's Christmas?" early Monday to raise money for African famine victims.

More than a dozen singers ranging from Australian teen idol Kylie Minogue to U.S. veteran Tina Turner worked into the early hours to remake the Band Aid song that topped the charts in Christmas 1984, organizers said.

The single is expected to go on sale Dec. 11. The original record raised some $10 million for starving Africans and spawned other projects including the transatlantic Live Aid rock extravaganza on July 13, 1985 which brought in more than $100 million.

Millionaire pop-record producer Peter Waterman, who supervised production of the new single at his London studios, said he was considering organizing Live Aid II next year. "First we have to bring the public's attention to the record, then we will sit down just after Christmas and talk about a live show," he said. "It would be perfect timing."

Waterman lined up the pop stars and groups, including Cliff Richard, Chris Rea, Bananarama, Bros, Jason Donovan and Tears for Fears, after being approached by Irish pop singer Bob Geldof last week.

Company signs deal to make tires in U.S.S.R.

MILAN, Italy (AP) — The Italian tire company Pirelli said Monday it has signed an agreement to manufacture 5 million radial tires a year in the Soviet Union.

The deal, whose value was estimated at $535 million, came after last week's Soviet accord with Italian automaker Fiat to build a factory near Moscow.

The Fiat plant is expected to produce up to 900,000 cars a year by 1994.

The letter of intent for the Italian-Soviet joint venture was signed in Milan by Leopoldo Pirelli, chairman of the tire company, and Nikolaj Lemuev, the Soviet minister for the chemical industry.

The Soviets will finance two-thirds of the venture, whose value was not disclosed. Pirelli will finance one-third of the project.

A Pirelli official said 85 percent of the yearly production of tires will be sold in the Soviet Union and the rest on international markets.

The Pirelli deal was the latest signed in the wake of last week's visit to Italy by President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

What's what

They stay on the job
Secretaries may be a little like teachers in a way. Once the beginners drop out, the old pros tend to continue in that line of work. Take secretaries under the age of 30, about 57 percent say they plan to stick with it. Among secretaries over the age of 30, about 57 percent say they intend to stay in that occupation.

BEAUTY QUEENS
In both the 1948 and 1986 Miss American contests, the winners stood 5-foot-9. But the 1948 winner weighed 140 pounds while the 1986 winner weighed 117. Fewer of the 1948 contestants measured between 5'7 and 5'9 inches or more at the hip. Most of the 1986 contestants had considerably slimmer hip statistics. Fair Board considers withdrawing from pageant

By MARK KIND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A potential lawsuit by disgruntled parents of contestants led the county Fair Board on Monday to contemplate withdrawing financial support from the Miss Rodeo Idaho Pageant.

The parents' complaints include an allegation that the contestants were required to engage in illegal "taxi dancing."
"We didn't know whether we were going to continue (supporting the pageant) or not," board Chairman Emmet Harrison said after the board's monthly meeting. "There are many problems with it, financial and otherwise."

Discussion on the matter was tabled until the board's January meeting after members met privately for about 30 minutes in executive session.
The Fair Board provides financial backing to the 25-year-old pageant and lets the pageant use the fairground arena in Filer during the Twin Falls County Fair and Rodeo. The pageant franchise, however, belongs to the Miss Rodeo Idaho Pageant Committee and the pageant's director, Sheri Prescott.

A Twin Falls attorney said Monday afternoon his office had drafted a civil complaint against the Fair Board and Prescott, alleging numerous irregularities in the 1989 edition of the pageant.
The complaint will be filed on behalf of several of the 1989 contestants' parents "in a day or two," attorney Harry DeHaan said. "We'd like the (pageant) results to be declared invalid and a new contest run, and we're asking for damages."

At issue are two contestants' disqualifications from the pageant's horsemanship competition for violations of rules that DeHaan says were not published in the pageant's rule book.

"Someone went to the judge's trailer and told them these girls should be disqualified," DeHaan said. He said Prescott was apparently the one who recommended disqualification and she was acting on a "personal vendetta."
"Statements were made that these two people's parents had caused trouble for the organizer and she was going to pay them back," DeHaan said.
Prescott stands by the decision to disqualify the two contestants and denies any personal vendetta.

"The girls were 'disqualified' because they broke the rules," she said. "I have nothing against either of these girls. Not a thing."
According to information on file at the fair offices in Filer, contestants Dalana Jolley and Andrea Schlapia were disqualified from the horsemanship competition after one allegedly received hand-signal instruction from her coach in the grandstand during competition, and the other allegedly misinterpreted the type of equipment she used on her horse.
DeHaan declined to disclose which contestant was accused of which infraction.
Schlapia is not involved in the possible suit against Prescott and the Fair Board, but Jolley's parents are, along with at least two other contestants' parents, DeHaan said. He declined to specify how many parents are involved.
An additional charge in the civil suit accuses the Fair

Board and Prescott of "violating an Idaho statute against 'taxi dancing.'" DeHaan said contestants were required to collect $1 from each dance partner during the fair, to help pay travel expenses of last year's pageant winner, Juni James.
James won the Miss Rodeo America pageant in Okla. from City last month.
Prescott insists that no dollar-a-dance demand was made. "That never happened," she said.
Finances and ownership of the pageant franchise were other factors Fair officials cited in considering ending support for the pageant.

"The Fair Board felt like they were the franchising holder," Fair Secretary Manager Cindy Dentonny said. "In the last couple of weeks we found out that it's not the Fair Board's responsibility."
If the Fair Board were to stop supporting the pageant, the organizing committee would ask for continued use of the grandstand and would try to run the pageant without the Fair Board's help, Prescott said.

The Fair Board has contributed $3,400 toward the pageant and committee's $8,000 in expenses this year, according to the Fair Board's calculations.
In other business Monday, the board awarded Bob Gilliland an exclusive contract to harvest earworms from the fairgrounds. He will pay 50 cents per pound harvested.
The board developed a riding club arena policy. Groups using the arena to practice will be charged $30 per night, plus $10 per hour for arena lights. Groups may work at the fairgrounds in lieu of payment, however.

Bautista-Mejia pleads innocent to charges

TWIN FALLS - A man arrested after holding his two daughters hostage in August pleaded innocent Monday to five felony counts stemming from the incident, according to Public Defender Michael Wood.

Before 5th District Judge Daniel C. Hurlbut Jr., Jesus Bautista-Mejia, 32, pleaded innocent to two counts of injury to children and three counts of assault on a law enforcement officer.

Trial was set for April 17, 1990, a District Court judge said.
In a plea bargain in Bingham County on an unrelated charge, Bautista-Mejia pleaded guilty last week to misdemeanor simple assault and was sentenced to two months in jail, a clerk in the Bingham County prosecutor's office said. The charge was reduced from aggravated assault, Bautista-Mejia was credited two months for time served.

Bail set for man arrested on aggravated assault charge

TWIN FALLS - Bail was set at $1,500 Monday for a man arrested Friday night on a charge of felony aggravated assault, according to court records.

Tommie Edward Jackson, 37, address unknown, was in the Twin Falls County Jail Monday night, according to a sheriff's deputy.

Deputies were called at 6:38 p.m. Friday to the home of Sandra Mohl, 195 Camarillo Way, according to records. Mohl told deputies that Jackson, an acquaintance, had come to her house uninvited and they had argued.

Mohl took her 6-year-old daughter out to her van, she told deputies. She said Jackson beat on the windows, yelled at her and aimed a .38-caliber pistol at himself and her, Mohl told deputies.

When he went inside again, Mohl walked to a neighbor's house, and when she returned, the man was gone.

Jackson was arrested later that night at a motel.

Victim of ax assault listed in good condition at MVRMC

TWIN FALLS - The victim of an ax assault was in good condition at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Monday night, the hospital's nursing supervisor said.

No one has been arrested in the incident.

Warren Ray Reynolds, 26, 237 Jackson St., told police he was walking home from a party on Fourth Avenue North at 3:15 a.m. Sunday, and when he was outside the home of a friend, in the 400 block of Sixth Street North, he was attacked by an unknown Reynolds' left arm was injured.

When police went to the party Reynolds had been attending, they found the host, Albert Balles, 32, 560 Fourth Ave. N., didn't want officers to take it, the report said. He was arrested and charged with obstructing an officer and resisting arrest.

2 teens, 2 adults arrested Sunday on burglary charges

BURLEY - Two teens and two adults were arrested Sunday night on burglary charges, Cassia County Sheriff's Lt. Dennis Dexter said.

One of the boys borrowed a key to Nelson's Cafe and Pilot's Club, on West Ninth Street, and used it to enter the building at about 9 p.m., Dexter said.

The four same stayed inside and "partied for a couple of hours," Dexter said, and left with a half a case of beer. They were picked up at 11 p.m. after a deputy saw them leave from the building's back door, Dexter said.

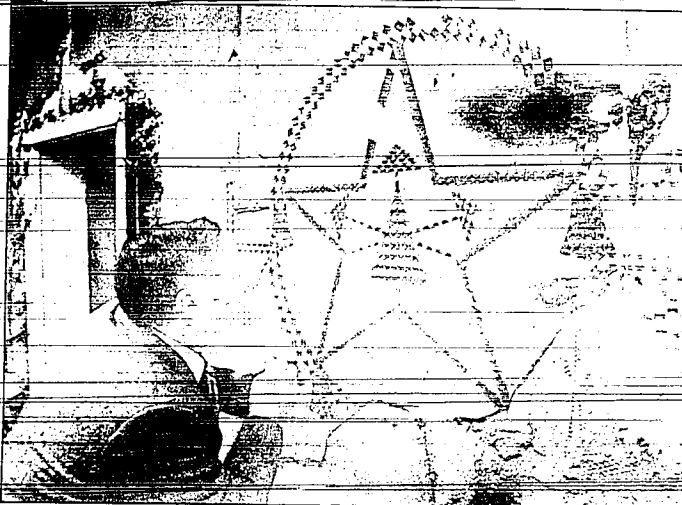

Bill Murphy, 18, and Ron Eckley 20, as well as two 14-year-old boys, all from Burley, were charged with felony first-degree burglary.

The forum and reception are free. The public is invited.

County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman takes a close view of the uncovered holiday design.

Workers discover signs of inmates past

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A makeshift Christmas decoration from yesterday is among what was uncovered in a demolition project at the county's old fourth-floor jail.

Someone, probably an inmate, according to county officials, used Christmas Seals dated 1934 to design a Christmas tree surrounded by a five-point star. The star, in turn, is surrounded by a circle with some bells.

Robert Jackson, the contractor in charge of razing the old jail, said he thought the decoration looked almost like an Aztec drawing.

Carved initials, names and profanity were also uncovered Monday.

The holiday artwork overlaps the etched name "Vincent Murphy," accompanied by a series of numbers and then the year 1927.

The walls became visible after workers tore down metal sheets that had covered the plaster walls of a dormitory cell.

The sheets of metal were put up sometime after the fourth floor of the Twin Falls County Courthouse was converted to a jail, Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said.

Sheriff Jim Munn said the sheets have been up for "better than 20 years."

The graffiti suggests the room was indeed a jail in the 1920s, when the Christmas Seals were fashioned into some inmate's holiday decoration.

Playing cards, combs, cigarette butts and matchbooks of all kinds, including one from a Sambo's restaurant, were among tidbits from the past that could be seen in the dusty rooms.

A 10-cent coupon for "Fresh Spray" room deodorant was still readable but expired Nov. 30, 1967.

A photo of a baby and another of a man with crossed arms and long hair were found near some copies of a religious tract from a Minneapolis publishing company.

Subscription cards for Reader's Digest and Encyclopedia Britannica were in the same room.

Jackson said he had found two envelopes, one 1-cent and 2-cent stamps dated 1930 in a kitchen cupboard.

And a note from an inmate named Vicki asked Gary M. to quit talking about her when she was in quarantine. Sheriff Munn said he remembers a woman named Vicki who had been an inmate "years and years ago" in the cell where the note was found, but he couldn't remember her last name.

Hospital plan includes pay raises for nurses

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Registered nurses at the county hospital will see a significant pay raise next month, as will any hospital employee who works weekends or night.

These are just two parts of a four-part contingency plan - aimed at attracting and keeping nurses - that will expand even more in the months to come.

Commentary - A4

"This is just the first step," explained Elizabeth Beuthin, Magic Valley Regional Medical Center's planning director of nurses. "We're going to do this in well-planned steps."

Beuthin outlined various other ideas Monday night for coping with the hospital's nursing shortage, including:

- Reducing stress to improve working conditions
- Building skills ladders in which experience and time-of-shift would affect pay.

Enriching part-time nurses to work just a few more hours with offers of full benefits.

Expanding the hospital's child-care facility.

Redesigning the work force to free nurses from duties other than caring for patients.

"I think more than anything it's going to be restructuring the work force," Hospital Administrator John Bingham said.

The hospital has an 18 percent vacancy rate for registered nurses. There are still about 20 openings and the lack of nurses has forced the hospital to request that elective patients be put on hold so acutely ill patients can be cared for properly.

As an example of an elective admission, Bingham described a patient who decides to have knee surgery after putting it off for months.

The pay raises give Magic Valley Regional Medical Center the third highest nursing pay among a dozen or more Idaho and Salt Lake City hospitals, according to a survey by the hospital.

While the hospital's former base pay of $10.65 an hour was one of the lowest, its new base of $11.31 for registered nurses places it third in the group. The high end will also rise from $15.09 to $16.97.

But Bingham warned that status may be

Wendell Highway District incumbents soundly defeated

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

WENDELL - Both Wendell Highway District incumbents up for re-election were soundly defeated after a year wrecked with controversy.

Incumbent Dale Gilbert received 177 votes to challenger Vernon Mason's 322 votes for the Subdistrict 1 seat. And Russell Ross, who held the Subdistrict 2 seat, lost to Mitch Bunn, 266-237.

Earlier this year, several residents demanded Ross and Gilbert's resignations when two highway district employees were fired.

The Gilbert was charged with misuse of public funds, a felony, for allegedly hired himself to do road work for the district.

Fifth District Judge William Hart dismissed the charge in a scathing opinion. Hart, "having heard that this action was initiated by a small, disgruntled group of citizens," admonished Gooding County Prosecutor Lynn Nelson to "more carefully investigate the underlying facts before initiating criminal charges."

Hart's decision, however, did not save the incumbents at the polls.

Here's a wrap-up of other highway district elections around the valley:

CASSIA COUNTY

Albion, a heavy voter turnout resulted in incumbent Jim Chaburn fighting off a write-in candidate to retain his seat. Chaburn received 146 votes to Lee Jolley's 60.

Results for the Burley and Oakley districts were unavailable.

ELMORE COUNTY

In Glenns Ferry, incumbent Harold Tew was 78-0 over challenger Robert P. Johnson.

GOODING COUNTY

In Gooding, incumbents Matt Patterson and Joe Pavkov were re-elected with 14 votes each. Both ran unopposed.

In Hagerman, incumbent Dwight Osborne and newcomer Mark Boldue were elected with 25 votes each. Both ran unopposed. Boldue will fill the seat vacated by Vic Cook, who did not run.

In Bliss, incumbent Jim Brizendine was re-elected in Subdistrict 1 with 93 votes. Lloyd Hammond received nine write-in votes. In Subdistrict 2, incumbent Brad Gough

Council passes building permit fee increases over 3 years

By N. S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The City Council Monday approved an increase in building permit fees to be phased in over three years.

Mayor Doug Vothmer and several other council members suggested spreading the increase over a number of years would soften the blow.

Fearing that a one-time increase would drive off potential building projects, Jim Vickers suggested the increase be spread over three or four years.

With some members preferring four years and others proposing two years, the council compromised on three.

The fee increase is needed to meet increased expenses, according to Jim Leitchliter of JUB Engineers, which oversees the city's building inspections. Building permit fees have not increased since 1982.

The council decided to phase in the increase by thirds, the first increment to come on Jan. 1, 1990.

City Engineer Gary Young said the fee increase would help improve the level of service. Having an inspector show up when needed would be worth more to builders than the added cost, he said.

The minimum fee for small projects would increase $5 over the three years. They would go up to $15 from $10. Permits for a $50,000 project would increase to $415 from $283, and permits for a $100,000 project would increase to $640 from $433.

The increased permit fees are part of the 1983 edition of the Uniform Building Code.

CSI student senate focuses on academics

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho's student senate, traditionally has focused mostly on planning social activities. This year, however, the students want to shine the spotlight on academic excellence. "When you know that there are people out there who want you to do better and they notice when you're not doing better, then you'll strive to do even better," said Mike Nazareth, the student senator who suggested the idea. "Maybe some of our money shouldn't be solely for activities," he said. "Education comes first." CSI's student senate adviser, Graydon Stanley, commended Nazareth and the senate for choosing the promotion of academic excellence as one of its goals for this school year. In previous years those goals have included improving the school's facilities and improving communication between the school and students. The new reader board planned for Falls Avenue is one of the senate's projects. But academic excellence is a new field for the group. "We've never before focused on what they're here for in the first place," Stanley said. "I was really impressed that they would come up with that idea." "The athletic teams get a lot of notoriety," he added. "All those extracurricular activities get a lot of attention naturally too, but all those people in the classroom don't, too. To fulfill its goal, the senate recently started a "student of the month" program — winners will have their pictures displayed in a display case and plans to hold a spring recognition ceremony for outstanding students. The senate is also developing a scholarship based solely on academics. Educational and cultural events are also part of the plan. Instead of always sponsoring dances and concerts as the traditional thing, we want to come up with activities more suitable to non-traditional students," Stanley said. Renaissance jazz groups and a film festival were two ideas Stanley mentioned.

Authorities say teen drugged, held for sex

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Utah authorities are investigating a possible "white slavery" ring that allegedly kept a 16-year-old girl drugged for five days in a Salt Lake City home and used her for sexual purposes. The girl had been attending a modeling agency in Orem and was reportedly sent out on a "job" where she made contacts on a film set, said Doug Whitney of the Utah County Sheriff's Department. She was allegedly persuaded to go to Salt Lake with the contacts she had met.

Judge grants request to hire investigators

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (AP) — A judge has decided that defense attorneys for four men charged with killing a fellow inmate in a prison may hire private investigators but under "very narrow parameters."

First District Judge F. Lanny Gunnell on Monday granted a request from all four defense attorneys to hire the investigators to look into each case and collect evidence. However, Gunnell said he would meet with the attorneys Dec. 11 in his chambers to decide appropriate funding and how much money the investigators should have.

The former Western Brine Shrimp Co. employees are charged in the beating death of Miguel Enrique Ramirez, 38, of Lincoln City, Ore., who died during a fight on Oct. 25.

Engineer believes inadequate grounding caused Challenger blast

NORTH-OGDEN, Utah (AP)—Inadequate grounding of a Morton Thiokol solid fuel booster rocket caused an electric discharge that set off a detonator and destroyed the space shuttle Challenger, a company engineer says.

Dan Joos, who testified before a federal grand jury in Alabama about the motors last week, told the Ogden Standard-Examiner in a weekend interview that he is working with a ghostwriter on a novel about the 1986 explosion that doomed the spacecraft and its seven astronauts and grounded the U.S. space program for 2 1/2 years.

Joos said he began working for Thiokol in 1974 after selling his instrument business, and that he reviews flight instrument data.

Joos said he also is concerned that problems with grounding still endanger space shuttle flights.

Thiokol Corp., renamed last summer when the Chicago-based Morton Thiokol split its operations, embarked on an exhaust ive redesign of the booster motor after the explosion and supplies the redesigned motors to NASA.

Joos' theory contradicts the findings of a presidential commission that concluded that a field joint in one of Challenger's twin boosters did not seal properly, allowing a plume of superhot gas to ignite the shuttle's main liquid fuel tank.

The commission also found that subfreezing weather the night before the launch stiffened the O-rings used in the joint, contributing to the failure.

Joos, who studied electrical engineering at the University of Utah but did not earn a degree, said the leaking joint was burning into the fuel tank and eventually would have destroyed the shuttle.

However, he said, static electricity had built up and did not dissipate properly through the boosters' exhaust, discharging instead through a detonator placed on the main tank to allow ground control to destroy the craft if it went out of control and threatened populated areas.

Joos would not explain why the static built up and discharged at the detonator.

"It's too complicated," he said. "It boils down to one thing: There was a grounding problem in both the right- and left-hand boosters."

Joos said he suspected the detonator within a day of the Jan. 28, 1986, accident and reached his conclusion after a frame-by-frame analysis of flight film.

"I knew it was the detonator because you can see it," he said.

The investigatory commission also reviewed flight data and recordings, including computer-enhanced images, and commission member Joseph E. Sutter said Monday he had not changed his opinion.

"The evidence is pretty powerful," said Sutter, chief designer of the Boeing 747 airliner and chairman of NASA's Aerospace Safety Advisory Panel.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials involved with the shuttle program also have rejected Joos' explanation.

Joos said Thiokol officials are aware of his theory, but he did not want to comment publicly about the company's reaction.

Thiokol spokesman Steve Lawson said Monday he had no comment on Joos' statements.

Joos said he was making his concerns public now because the grounding inadequacy continues on the redesigned motors.

"There's no question there's an engineering problem," he said, adding that instruments monitoring the boosters' performance on the first three shuttle flights after the space program was resumed recorded electrical noise ... coming from the boosters themselves."

Joos said that on the third flight, the phenomenon was recorded in both rockets. However, he would not go into detail because the instruments were the subject of the grand jury probe in Birmingham, Ala.

NASA officials have said the panel is looking at allegations that Thiokol did not properly inspect and qualify the instruments. Thiokol officials have said Joos' concerns had been evaluated and discounted.

Joos said winter weather conditions increase the probability of electrical trouble.

"I want to see a better grounding system," he said. "We'll be working on it pretty heavily this next week. I will be pushing to get an answer before the next shuttle goes up" later in the month.

Joos said his novel, titled "Under Another Cover," is based on his theory, but that he tries to tell the story based on his imagining of what the experience was like for the astronauts.

The name refers to an alternative report to the conclusions drawn by NASA and the presidential commission.

A videotape also is being produced to explain how the accident occurred, he said.

Texan manages new think tank for natural resource debates

MOSCOW (AP)—The executive director of Idaho's new natural resources think tank believes his credentials as an outsider will lend credibility to the work of the panel charged with providing unbiased factual information on the most controversial environmental issues facing the state.

Jay O'Laughlin takes over at the new University of Idaho Natural Resource Policy Analysis Group on Dec. 20 after nine years as a forest economist at Texas A&M University.

"I don't carry any political baggage," he said. "I don't believe anyone can find a tag that can be pinned on me."

The state Legislature created the group last winter in a bid to provide at least factual information on issues like wilderness or wolf introduction that can be accepted by all sides in those policy debates.

"I relish the opportunity to wrestle with issues that might impact Idaho's fantastic natural resource base," O'Laughlin said in brief talks to Idaho that included three days of trout fishing on the Lochsa River this fall.

"Well informed, natural resource policies can make Idaho an even better place to live, to work and to visit," he said. "Hopefully, good information will lead to sound policies. There's no guarantee that decision-makers will make good choices, but that's out of our realm. It's difficult enough providing information that everyone agrees is objective."

It will be O'Laughlin's task to mediate between researchers and the advisory board that sets the research priorities for the group that includes representatives from land management, environmental, ranching, farming, logging, sportsmen and tourism interests.

The first two projects involve ongoing public opinion on streamside degradation on Bureau of Land Management land and assessing the viability and social impact of a pulp mill proposed in the Silver Valley.

"The idea," said John Hendee, dean of the university's College of Forestry, Wildlife and Range Sciences, "is to arm our decision-makers with the facts about potential impacts before they act rather than having them implement policies based on partial or inaccurate information."

Polish diplomat says Pope, Gorbachev meeting an event of major significance

LOGAN, Utah (AP)—The recent meeting between Pope John Paul II and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and the subsequent promise of diplomatic relations was an event of major historic significance, a Polish diplomat says.

Bodien Lewandowski, a member of Polish labor leader Lech Walesa's Council of Advisors and former ambassador to the United Nations, told a Utah State University audience Monday that the meeting was another in a series of rapidly unfolding historical events taking place throughout eastern Europe.

The Catholic church will help the reformers to create a more favorable climate for change, especially in the Ukraine. And as the Ukraine goes, so goes the neighborhood," Lewandowski said.

There are four million Catholics in the Ukraine who until recently had been practicing their faith clandestinely, he said, and the estimated number of Catholics in the Soviet Union may be as high as 10 million. "It has been almost one year since the Communist Party relinquished power peacefully in Poland, he said, adding, "I think it took ten months was accomplished in his theory, but that he tries to tell the story based on his imagining of what the experience was like for the astronauts."

and only about 10 days in Czechoslovakia."

Sonia Johnson to speak in Salt Lake City

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Sonia Johnson returns to Salt Lake City this week, 10 years to the day of her excommunication from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. She said it marks a decade of personal freedom and the visit will give her an opportunity to present her philosophy of a new feminist world in the "capital" of Mormonism, which she calls "the world's pre-eminent university for patriarchal studies."

Johnson's Utah visit is being sponsored by the local chapter of the National Organization for Women and Womensworth, a Unitarian feminist group.

Johnson will present "Wildfire: Igniting the She-Volution," the same title as her most recent book, Dec. 8 at 7:30 p.m. at the Utah Law and Justice Center. Admission is $5 to $10, based on ability to pay.

Her traveling workshop, "Breaking Up With Patriarchy Instead of Ourselves," is scheduled Dec. 9 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Filibert Hall, First Unitarian Church, with a sliding-scale fee of $15 to $25.

Reached by telephone in Long Beach, Calif., another stop on her lecture circuit, Johnson talked about her ideas for a feminist world and her frustration with a patriarchal society that she has decided won't change, no matter how vocal the protests, nor how effective the lobbying.

She also looked back to Dec. 5, 1979, when she was excommunicated from the Mormon Church for "preaching false doctrine" following her criticism of church leaders for their opposition to the Equal Rights Amendment.

Her expulsion from the church coincided with her husband's request for a divorce, Johnson said. "They both released me at once. It was excruciatingly painful at the time, but also there was a part of me that knew it was perfect. Even while I was suffering most seriously, I also knew it was working out just right."

She approached the next decade with unweaving dedication and determination to squelch patriarchy.

Her first book, "From Housewife to Heretic," was published in 1981; she fasted for 37 days for passage of the ERA in Illinois.

She unsuccessfully ran for president of NOW in 1982, and for president of the United States as the Citizens Party nominee in 1984; publicly announced a change in sexual preference; wrote a second book, "Going Out of Our Minds: The Metaphysics of Liberation."

She then turned to communal living—a new philosophy of a feminist world that would ignore patriarchy, rather than trying to change it; and the self-publication of her latest book.

Boise school project finds no answer for plastic problem - yet

BOISE (AP) — A Boise school teacher had a shock when she tried to find the answer to the problem of what to do with approximately 7,000 polystyrene foam trays tossed into the trash each school day by Boise School District students.

The solution: none — yet. That's what Jackson Elementary School teacher Harriet Badesheim and her fifth-grade students learned when they tried to find a way to recycle the "plastic" foam trays in Boise.

After reading in a national student publication that schools in the East are recycling them, Badesheim and student Casey Echevarria, 11, got on the phone to Boise recycling companies.

Although they came up empty, they haven't given up.

Badesheim, who is treating the endeavor as a "science" education episode for the children. "This also is making them socially conscious of our world."

In fact, the recycling of plastics, including polystyrene, is picking up steam nationally.

Vast quantities of polystyrene are used not only by schools, but by fast-food and other restaurants in Boise and elsewhere. Polystyrene cups are sold in supermarkets for serving hot beverages.

The plastics industry has been under pressure for producing non-biodegradable petroleum-based products that add to litter and garbage problems. As a result, it has announced plans to establish five polystyrene foam reprocessing centers by 1990.

Amoco Foam Products has opened the first facility in Brooklyn, N.Y., and has a demonstration project in Oregon City, Ore.

"The time for foam plastics recycling has arrived," said Bob Ruscill, president of Amoco subsidiary Polystyrene Recycling Inc.

There certainly is no shortage of polystyrene in Oregon, where 67 Portland elementary schools, plus area McDonald's outlets, are sending millions of plastic trays and containers to recyclers, where they are chopped into pellets.

The pellets are then shipped to New Jersey where they are melted with other plastics and formed into plastic lumber. That in turn has been used to build kiosks and other facilities at an environmental learning center in Oregon City.

Portland schools are under pressure to recycle with an intensity that doesn't exist in Boise. Portland is shipping municipal garbage to eastern Oregon because it has run out of landfill space.

It is costing $175,000 annually to rinse and ship the trays to the recycler, said Portland schools spokesman Bob Sherwin. However, that amount will drop to $80,000 early next year, when the recycler will be able to take the plastics without rinsing.

Even so, the total cost of using plastic trays is cheaper than paper or permanent dining ware, since conversion to those alternatives would cost an estimated $260,000 a year more.

The recycling costs might be reduced if the value of recycled materials should rise with petroleum prices, Sherwin said.

And, he said, "We wish to contribute to reducing the amount of material going to the landfill."

Ada County has an estimated 100 years of landfill "space" left, but Dave Neal, solid waste director, said, "We shouldn't waste it. We really shouldn't encourage people to throw more and more away, simply because we have a lot of space."

Indians trade Carter to Padres for 3 players

By BOB NIGHTENGALE Los Angeles Times

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The San Diego Padres acquired the rights to center fielder Joe Carter from the Cleveland Indians, sources here at the baseball winter meetings said Monday night. ... The deal was consummated at about 10:30 p.m., MST, Monday, according to sources close to the negotiations, but will not be made final or announced until the Padres sign Carter to a contract extension. ... When contacted, Jack McKeon, vice president-baseball operations for the Padres, would neither confirm nor deny that the trade was made.

"We haven't finalized anything yet," McKeon said. ... "If we sign him and don't sign him," Jim Turner, Carter's agent, said, "I think it (a trade involving Carter) is coming down shortly, but no one has said anything to me, and you'd think I'd be one of the first to know." ... The commission's decision is expected to give the Padres 72 hours to renege on their offer. ... Carter earned $1.63 million in 1989 and is eligible for arbitration in 1990, his last season before being eligible for free agency. ... Although Carter said that his first choice was to play for the Kansas City Royals, Turner said of the Padres: "There he would like to talk to them. ... This is a guy named Gwynn who excites him."

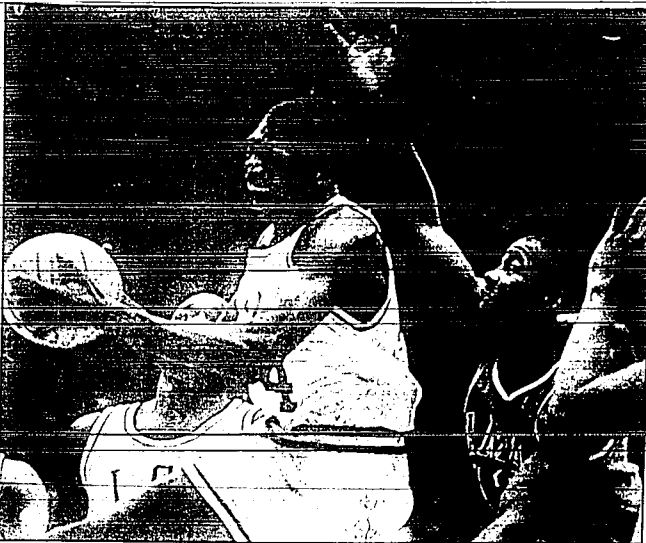

Carter telephoned Padres right fielder Tony Gwynn last week and asked him about playing in San Diego, and from their conversation, Carter indicated that he would rather wait to sign a contract extension. ... "He told me that he didn't want to sign an extension with anybody right now," White said. ... Gwynn said, "I was telling Joe all about San Diego, really selling him on the place. I told him everything is perfect down here, it's a great place to play in a great city." ... • See CARTER on page C3

Average baseball pay nears $500,000

The Associated Press

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — The average baseball salary rose 13 percent to a record $497,254 this season, the Major League Baseball Players Association said Monday. ... Two arbitrators earlier had determined that collusion by owners against free agents following the 1985 and 1986 seasons had helped slow the salary spiral. ... Miami closes on Colorado in AP football poll

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — The University of Miami moved two steps closer to its third national championship this decade.

After the Hurricanes (10-1) improved two places to second in Monday's Associated Press poll to No. 2, first-year coach Dennis Erickson quickly assessed his team's chances of averting No. 1 Colorado.

"We're excited about that," Erickson said, "because it puts us in a position where, if we focus in and take care of business at the Sugar Bowl against Alabama, we've got the opportunity to win the national championship."

"If we're able to beat Alabama... and Notre Dame were to beat Colorado, then I would say that because of where we're ranked right now, our chances are pretty good."

Miami will play in the Sugar Bowl on Jan. 1 against Alabama (10-1), which fell from second to seventh following a 30-20 loss at Auburn Saturday.

The Buffaloes (11-0) will play in the Orange Bowl against Notre Dame (11-1), which moved up one spot to fourth. Michigan (10-1) still is No. 3 and will play Nov. 12 Southern Cal in the Rose Bowl.

Miami loses and Notre Dame wins, the Fighting Irish start to win their second consecutive national championship.

Miami finished No. 1 in 1983 and 1987 and No. 2 in 1986 and 1988. The Hurricanes' only stumble this year was a 24-10 loss at Florida State. They ended Notre Dame's 23-game winning streak with a 27-10 victory Nov. 25.

Miami received four first-place votes and 1,407 points, while Colorado received 35 first-place votes and 1,492 of a possible 1,500 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Michigan received the other first-place vote and 1,374 points. Notre Dame's point total was 1,323.

Rounding out the Top 10 are Florida State, Nebraska, Alabama, Tennessee, Auburn and Arkansas.

Florida State, winners of nine in a row since opening the season with two losses, moved up one place to fifth after beating Florida 24-17 Saturday. Nebraska, which was idle, advanced from No. 7 to No. 6. Tennessee remained eighth after defeating Vanderbilt 17-10.

Auburn jumped two places to No. 9 following its win over Alabama, and Arkansas fell one spot to No. 10 following a 38-24 win over Southern Methodist.

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Dennis Scott scored 42 points, including a fallaway bank shot with one second left that gave No. 18 Georgia Tech a 93-92 victory over No. 22 Pittsburgh Monday night in the opening game of the Big East-ACC Challenge.

Scott, who was 8-for-14 on 3-pointers, got the ball near the lane with four seconds left and then drove toward the basket, pulling up for the winning shot.

Jason Matthews had given Pitt the lead at 92-91 with two free throws with nine seconds left.

But Georgia Tech (3-0) advanced the ball to midcourt and called a timeout to set up the winning play for Scott. The junior swingman averaged 29.5 points in the Yellow Jackets' first two games.

The game was billed as a battle between the strong inside game of Pittsburgh (6-2) and the perimeter-scoring of Georgia Tech. The outside game won as Scott, freshman Kenny Anderson and Brian Oliver scored 83 of Georgia Tech's 93 points.

Pitt's big men never could get untracked and it was the Panthers' perimeter trio of Brad Brooklin, Darrle Porter and Matthews that handled the bulk of the scoring.

Oliver finished with 21 points, while Porter led Pittsburgh with 25. Matthews had 19 and Brooklin 18.

minutes to go in the first half, broke open a close game and rolled to a 116-76 victory over Lamar Monday behind the 30 points of Chris Jackson.

LSU (11-1) led 28-25 when the Tigers swarmed out of the zone they had used from the tip-off. Lamar got just seven more points before intermission and only two — on a pair of free throws by Victor Trahan — in the final 4:32.

Jackson had 18 of his points in the final 6:40 of the first half as LSU opened a 60-32 halftime lead.

Oklahoma 130
Angelo St. 62

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma scored 31 consecutive points in the first half Monday night and the 12th-ranked Sooners routed Angelo State 130-62.

Oklahoma (3-0) is averaging 149 points per game and has won by an average margin of 78.3 points. The Sooners' 69-point victory over the Division II Rams was their smallest this season.

William Davis scored 10 of his game-high 22 points during the run. Davis, a senior forward who has been Oklahoma's leading scorer in each of its games, also had a game-high 13 rebounds. He is averaging 25.7 points and 13.7 rebounds.

and scored 21 points Monday night as No. 11 Louisville used its superior size and quickness to beat Cleveland State 104-77.

The Cardinals (1-1) made 9 of their first 10 shots. LaBradford Smith and Tony Kimbro set the pace with consecutive 3-pointers in the first 1:10 and Keith Williams' turnaround jumper at the 13:52 mark made it 23-8.

Cleveland State, getting three long-range baskets from William Stanley, pulled to 31-25 on Kenny Robertson's follow shot with 9 1/2 minutes remaining. But that was as close as the Vikings (2-1) got.

Missouri 86
Creighton 79

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Freshman Travis Ford made three 3-pointers as Missouri closed the first half with a 32-9 run Monday night and the fourth-ranked Tigers beat Creighton 86-79.

Missouri (5-0) trailed 28-20 with 8:16 remaining in the half after Matt Roggenbuck made three straight 3-pointers. Nathan Buntin then made a 7-foot hook shot, starting the run.

Creighton's leading scorer, Chad Gallagher, committed his third foul at 5:16 of the first half. Ford's 3-pointer gave the Tigers their first lead at 33-32 and Missouri capitalized on the absence of the 6-foot-10 Gallagher, outscoring the Jays 22-5.

Portland pulls away, beats Orlando 121-95

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Sparked by its defense, the Portland Trail Blazers pulled away in the second half Monday night to defeat the Orlando Magic 121-95.

The Trail Blazers outscored Orlando 66-44 in the second half to push its record to 13-4 — second best in the NBA. Jerome Kersey scored 22 points and Kevin Duckworth had 19 for Portland.

Orlando was led by Reggie Theus' 17 points. Terry Catledge added 16 points and Jerry Reynolds 13. Portland led 55-51 at halftime. But Kersey had 11 points as Portland outscored the Magic 20-14 in the first eight minutes of the third quarter to take an 84-65 lead.

Portland's swarming defense made the difference, cutting off the Magic's inside game in the second half. The Trail Blazers also got its running game going, scoring 26 points on fastbreak opportunities after intermission.

Catledge scored only two points in the second half, while Theus had four.

Besides Kersey and Duckworth, Portland got double-figure scoring from Clyde Drexler with 18 points, Buck Williams and Terry Porter each with 16 and rookie Cliff Robinson with 15.

Kersey hit 10 of 16 shots and had nine rebounds. He started the game hitting 38.6 percent from the field.

Kansas moves up to 2nd position in AP college basketball rankings

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — After calling pollsters "flat-out ridiculous" for voting Kansas No. 4 last week, Roy Williams woke up Monday morning to discover his Jayhawks had moved up to No. 2.

"I heard that and I said, 'Oh, no,'" Williams said. "But somebody had to tell me. I wasn't going to look for myself."

Nevertheless, the Jayhawks remained unbeaten after six games and now trail only Syracuse in the Associated Press Top 25, a poll which Williams maintains will have much greater validity in March.

"I still say it doesn't mean a thing now, but at the end of the season it might mean something," said the seven-year Kansas coach. "After every body has gone through the season, then you have an idea of what people have done on the court, and it's not so much everybody's opinion."

Syracuse got 48 of the 63 first-place votes and 535 points from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters after winning four games in its first-ever week as a regular-season No. 1.

Syracuse beat Rutgers and Cornell and won the Carrier Classic by beating Virginia Commonwealth and Temple. The Orangemen are 4-0.

Kansas (6-0) had 17 first-place votes and 1,443 points, 18 more than Georgetown (3-0), which remained No. 3 and had five first-place votes.

Missouri (4-0) and UNLV (3-1) rounded out the top five and were followed by Duke, Illinois, Michigan, Louisiana State and Arkansas.

Adding to the irony of being No. 2, Williams said, is the fact his team did not play as well last week as it did the week before to become No. 4. After being ignored by all the preseason pollsters, the Jayhawks leaped into prominence by beating Alabama-Birmingham, LSU, UNLV and St. John's in the preseason NIT.

"The thing that had head-turning streak in walk-through victories came home over Idaho, 87-58, and Maryland-Baltimore County, 86-67.

"Our concentration was not anywhere near the level of the NIT," Williams said. "For us to be a good team we have to have full concentration and effort at all times. We're not the most physically talented team in the world."

and 1,325 points, 60 more than the "Runnin' Rebels" as both teams improved one place from last week. Duke (3-0), which has broken the 100-point mark every time out this year, had 1,246, while the Fighting Illini (2-0) had 1,139. Both also moved up one place.

Michigan (3-1) moved from 10th to eighth with 1,080, 29 more than LSU (2-1), which stayed ninth. Arkansas (3-0), which had two first-place votes, moved from 11th to No. 10 with 1,031 points.

Arizona was the only team to drop from the Top Ten. The Wildcats fell to 1-2 after a disastrous three days in the state of Oregon. They dropped from No. 2 to No. 20 after losing at Oregon 68-63 and Oregon State 84-61, the latter the worst loss for the Wildcats since Lute Olson took over as coach.

Both were conference games and Arizona, the two-time defending Pac-10 champion, already trails UCLA by two games.

The impressive win brought Oregon State (3-0) into the rankings at No. 24. Alabama (4-0), which beat North Carolina 101-93 on Thursday, also moved into the Top 25 at No. 21.

Notre Dame (1-1), which had been 19th, dropped from the poll after losing to Louisville 84-73, and Oklahoma State fell out with a first-round 102-90 loss to Pittsburgh in the Tournament of Champions. The Cowboys (2-1) had been 23rd.

Buffalo moved to Seattle's 15 on its next possession, but Dwayne Harper leaped to break up a pass for Flip Johnson and tipped the ball to Robinson for an interception.

Ex-New Yorker strives to revive Silver Valley's lagging reputation

KELLOGG — A 17-mile stretch in the Idaho Panhandle remains the plant's richest silver district, but it is still traveling from Millan to Kellogg in the depressed times of the 1990s has had to look long and hard to find any silver for sale.

But working to change that is Rick Colgan, a Silver Valley State University graduate who has made a successful entrepreneur out of designing, minting and marketing commemorative one-ounce coins from Silver Valley silver.

Colgan was corporate planning director for the old Bunker Hill Co. in Kellogg until depressed market prices and environmental problems forced Bunker's closure at the end of 1981.

Earlier that year, Colgan had headed up sale of Bunker's limited-edition series of five coins, each commemorating a part of the sprawling mining and smelting complex. Some 130,000 of the numbered, one-ounce, pure silver rounds were sold.

Other mining companies, then communities, churches, civic groups and the State of Idaho followed suit with coins of their own.

"The marketing department wanted something to use to promote Bunker Hill with customers," Colgan said. "So we figured it was best to talk about it, and we were all there a lot of interest."

Rick Colgan poses with silver coins he designed and marketed.

Each of the five coins sold about 25,000 copies, and complete sets were sold.

Company faces problems finding qualified workers

NAMPA (AP) — Idaho's economic upswing has pushed total employment in the state to near-record levels while the unemployment rate drops to an all-time low, and that has created some new problems for businesses.

Zilog, the Nampa electronics manufacturer, has seen applications for available jobs plunge by 90 percent in recent months, and personnel managers are concerned about the size of the qualified labor pool when the company undertakes a major expansion late next year or early in 1991.

"We used to be able to put an ad in the paper and the next day we would get 100 applications," said human resources director Bill Harman. "Now the last several months, we're lucky to get 10 to 12 a week."

Harman said Zilog expects to need up to 300 new workers in 1991, but "hoping that many people is going to be a problem for us."

With the jobless rate so low, some analysts see the area as experiencing full employment, he said. Applications for work at Zilog have slowed to a trickle. In addition, the state Job Service has begun screening potential applicants to ensure they can qualify before referring them to Zilog.

Harman said the company hopes the continued economic growth in southwestern Idaho will bolster the labor pool with workers having the skills it needs before the expansion plan is implemented.

But he also said actively recruiting workers from outside the state would be a last resort for Zilog.

Factory orders drop for 2nd month

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to U.S. factories dropped 0.2 percent in October, the second straight monthly decline, the government said Monday in its latest report on the sluggishness gripping the industrial sector of the economy.

"It really corresponds with what is happening in the economy," said David Berson, chief economist with the Federal National Mortgage Association.

The Commerce Department said orders for both durable and non-durable manufactured goods fell to a seasonally adjusted $233.9 billion following a revised 1 percent decline in September. September originally was reported to be unchanged following a 1 percent drop in August.

The level of orders was the lowest since $230.4 billion were written last July.

Durable goods — "big-ticket items" that are expected to last more than three years — fell 1.3 percent to $123.6 billion. Since they often are financed through loans, they have borne the brunt of high interest rates resulting from Federal Reserve efforts to slow the economy and contain inflation.

"In manufacturing, the durable part is really hurting badly, primarily because autos are doing so poorly now," Berson said. "The non-durable portion of the economy is not doing terribly because consumption spending on non-durables really is pretty strong."

Non-durable orders were up 1.1 percent to $110.3 billion, led by gains in foods, chemicals and tobacco products.

Automobile sales have fallen steadily since car makers began the new model year in October by dropping incentives and posting higher sticker prices. But despite the decline in auto sales, transportation orders rose 1.7 percent because of increases in orders for commercial aircraft and defense shipbuilding.

Excluding transportation, however, orders would have fallen 0.2 percent. Without the defense category, orders would have been up 0.3 percent. Orders in the volatile defense category declined 12.1 percent in October.

Shipments of manufactured goods fell 0.6 percent to $232.2 billion, while inventories rose 0.3 percent to $271.9 billion.

If inventories increase without a corresponding gain in new orders, it could signal production cutbacks in the future as factories attempt to get rid of goods on shelves and backlogs.

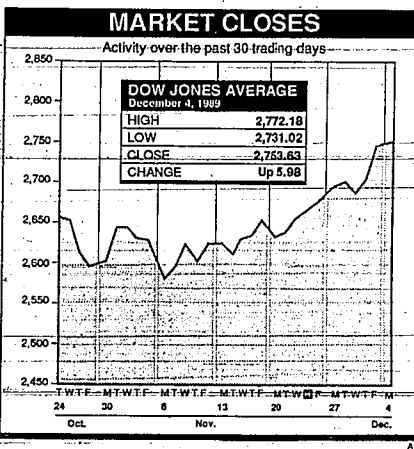

Machinery industries led the decline in durable goods orders. Non-electrical machinery dropped 6.7 percent, with office and computing equipment accounting for nearly 40 percent of the drop. Electrical machinery orders were off 4.1 percent, much of the decline concentrated in communications equipment.

Primary metals orders were down 3.2 percent.

In the key category of non-defense capital goods, a barometer of business investment plans, orders rose 1.2 percent — the first increase since a 5.9 percent gain last July.

Market rises without the same punch as Friday's rally

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rose Monday, but its advance failed to pack the punch of Friday's impressive rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks advanced 5.98 points to 2,773.63, its ninth-highest close ever.

Advancing issues edged out declining ones by about 8 to 7 in nationwide trading of stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange, with 810 issues up, 708 down and 469 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board totaled 150.36 million shares, down from 199.20 million in Friday's session.

Analysts said the market was buoyed mainly by takeover speculation involving several stocks and strength in technology issues. Investors' hopes for lower interest rates, which had catapulted Wall Street higher last Friday and lifted the Dow Jones average 41.38 points, appeared less solid on Monday.

The market will have to see Friday's scheduled government report on unemployment in November before regaining confidence that the Fed will ease credit by nudging interest rates lower, he said.

Wall Street also seemed a bit disappointed with the results of the U.S.-Soviet summit this past weekend, analysts said. Hopes for the summit had helped spark Friday's rally.

The market shrugged off Monday's report by the Commerce Department that orders to U.S. factories for manufactured goods fell 0.2 percent in October to their lowest level since July.

The factory orders report was the latest indicator showing the economy slowing as the year draws to an end. The manufacturing sector has been particularly weak, prompting concern of possible layoffs and a rise in the unemployment rate.

Traders also were unperturbed by news that M. Danny Wall, under fire for his handling of the costliest savings and loan failure in history, resigned as the government's chief S&L regulator.

Among actively traded issues on the NYSE, USX jumped 3 to 37 1/2 amid continued speculation that investor Carl Icahn is preparing a takeover proposal as part of his effort to force a major restructuring of the steel and energy company. IBM rose sold for $82 to employees and $92 to the public. They fetch upwards of $150 in coin shops nowadays, even though the price of silver is less than half what it was when the sets were struck.

The Bunker Hill series was a sell-out and netted its parent corporation a half-million dollars in profit.

But as he worked to bring the Bunker Hill coin series from a bright idea to a shiny striking of silver, Colgan discovered that no one knew much about the business of making a commemorative coin. The customer was at the mercy of private mints, most of them tiny, specialized operations with financial problems.

He traveled the country in search of a mint that could be entrusted with 130,000 ounces of Bunker Hill's silver and deliver a quality proof coin.

"You almost had to hunt them down, go visit them to find out if there were two people or 20 people there," he said.

Going broke with Barbie

She sits there with her shimmering hair and her slightly upturned nose and that come-hither look in her eyes — along with a manufacturer's suggested retail price of $5.97 plus tax.

Her name is Barbie. She is costing me a small fortune.

A few weeks from now, when my bank account is bone dry and the credit cards are maxed out and even my own mother laughs hysterically when I pull out my checkbook, I will point to Barbie.

"She did it," I'll say. "The little so-and-so took me for everything I had. Maybe I'll do some public service spots on TV, something along the lines of: Barbie ruined my life — don't let her ruin yours. Just say no to Mattel.

When Barbie first came into my home last Christmas, as a gift from Santa to my 4-year-old, I handled it with my customary grace and benevolence.

I thought to myself: It's only a doll. What harm can she do?

Besides, it's better than bringing in a cat and having it scratch someone's eyeball out and getting involved in a nasty lawsuit.

Then a few weeks later, my daughter delivered an important announcement.

"Daddy," she said, "Barbie is lonely."

"We're all lonely, I said. You don't see me laughing and doing cartwheels across the floor, do you? Tell Barbie to go down to the tavern and shoot some pool."

But my daughter said Barbie needed a boyfriend. A boyfriend named Ken.

So the next day we went to the toy store to look for this character Ken.

"You can't miss him," said my wife. Darkly handsome, perpetual smile, preppy-looking. If he was only six inches tall, you'd swear he's in his third year at Dartmouth.

Sure enough, we had no trouble finding Ken. He practically had a spotlight trained on him: third shelf, eye level, next to Cool Times Barbie, Fun to Dress Barbie, SuperStar Barbie, Style Magic Barbie, Barbie clothes, Barbie accessories, Barbie friends, Barbie associates and a cousin from Minnesota twice removed.

Garbage man won't get pay for goofing off

The Associated Press

—STRATFORD—Gonn, a sanitation worker accused of goofing off on the job says he will work for free until March to prove he is productive.

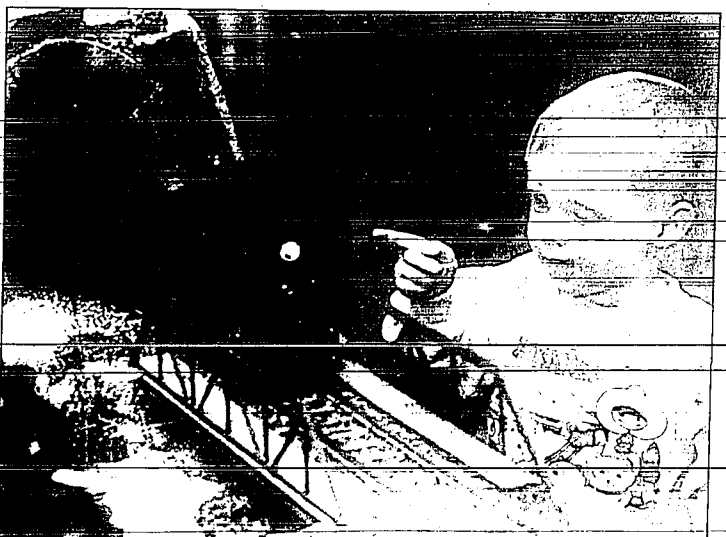

Robert Baronowski is one of two employees followed by reporters during a three-month investigation by the Bridgeport Post-Telegram.

The newspaper said Baronowski and housing code inspector Gil SaNogueira spent more time in restaurants and on personal business than on the job. Both have been suspended without pay.

"As an employee with the town for the past 23 years, I feel terrible about what has taken place," Baronowski said in a letter to Town Manager Ronald Owens. "Recently I have been under extreme stress due to family illnesses. While this is no excuse for what has taken place, it is a reason why I have not been myself as an employee."

Owens said Baronowski will return to work Monday and work for free until March 2.

SaNogueira, who was suspended Tuesday and faces a recommendation that he be fired, refused comment. The Public Works Union is contesting the recommendation.

I want that!

Up to 48,000 people buried in already occupied graves

The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Up to 48,000 people were buried in graves that were already occupied at two cemeteries in a practice dating to the 1920s, according to investigators for the state attorney general's office.

Three former officials of Louisville Crematories and Cemetery Co., the city's oldest cemetery company, are to stand trial in February on charges resulting from the investigation of Eastern and Greenwood cemeteries.

"It may be beyond the abilities of most people to comprehend just what has gone on out here," University of Louisville archaeologist Phil DiBlasi, said in a recent interview.

Some graves contained the remains of as many as six people, and graves containing the remains of three or four are common, said DiBlasi, whose team examined about 100 graves at the two cemeteries in eastern Louisville.

Remains from previous burials were found so often in a section of Eastern Cemetery called Babyland that about 70 infants' bodies were buried only 10 to 18 inches deep, employees have told investigators.

Jim Caldwell, an investigator for the state attorney general's office, reported finding human bones throughout Eastern Cemetery in a trunk, glove compartment, a tool box, a storage shed, dirt piles and even a fast-food hamburger bag. Caldwell said he found ashes from 244 cremated bodies, many of them unidentified, in a cabinet and on shelves in the cellar of the crematory at Eastern.

In July, a Jefferson County grand jury indicted three officials on 60 counts, including reuse of graves and abuse of corpses.

Charles Alexander Jr., executive director of Louisville Crematories and Cemetery since May 1986; Clifford B. Amos Sr., board president and acting executive director from 1980 to 1986; and Robert Copley, board vice president and a company employee since 1987 face 188 to 268 years in prison and fines of up to $4,000 if convicted. The company could be fined up to $1.12 million.

The three men resigned from the company.

DiBlasi said he had determined that the practice of reusing graves had been going on long before the three joined the company.

"This isn't something that started with these folks back in the '70s, as was first suspected," he said.

DiBlasi said his team's excavations indicated that graves were being reused as early as the mid-1920s at Eastern Cemetery records indicate it was probably full shortly after the turn of the century.

Eastern, which occupies 45 acres, had enough room for about 18,000 bodies under existing standards, but investigators estimate about 51,000 were buried there, according to DiBlasi and Caldwell.

Caldwell's report estimated that about 15,000 too many bodies were buried at Greenwood. That would put the estimated number of bodies in previously used graves at both cemeteries at 48,000.

Louisville Crematories and Cemetery, a 141-year-old company which has mostly served Louisville's poor and middle class, also operates Schardin Cemetery.

The company came under scrutiny in May when employee Bob Allen called the attorney general's office, Caldwell's report said.

Allen, a gravedigger and maintenance worker, said graves were reused throughout the eight years he worked for the company. He said that at one point within the past year a skull was dug up and inadvertently left sitting atop a dirt pile during a funeral.

The grieving family never saw the skull, and we put it back in the hole after they left," he said.

Video game makes bang at airport

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — To the U.S. Customs Service agent at Los Angeles International Airport, the object spotted by an X-ray machine in a piece of luggage bound for Colombia on an Avianca Airlines jet looked like "three stlecks of dynamite, bound together."

Los Angeles Police Department bomb squad experts weren't willing to get that descriptive, but after viewing the X-rays early Wednesday, they decided that they had a "suspicious device" on their hands. They hauled it out to a remote spot at the western edge of the airport and blew it to smithereens. Then they examined the smithereens. ... And found a Nintendo video game. Or what was left of one.

None of the agencies involved — not the airline, not the police, not customs, or the FBI, which was called in on the case — criticized the operation.

Perspectives

Kevin Cowherd

'Sure enough, we had no trouble finding Ken. finding Ken. He practically had a spotlight trained on him: third shelf, eye level, next to Cool Times Barbie, Fun to Dress Barbie, SuperStar Barbie, Style Magic Barbie, Barbie clothes, Barbie accessories, Barbie friends, Barbie associates and a cousin from Minnesota twice removed.

I didn't see the world-famous Barbie Crisis Management Team that will join Bush and Gorbachev at the upcoming floating summit, but that was probably an oversight.

My daughter was very happy that we had found Ken, although I could not share in her joy as I was busy breaking another $20.

About a month later, we received another bulletin from Barbie headquarters.

"Barbie wants a Ferrari," my daughter said.

Well, she can't have one, I said. Daddy drives a 9-year-old Toyota, for God's sakes. What makes this little bim ... er, person think I'm going to drop everything and get her a Ferrari?

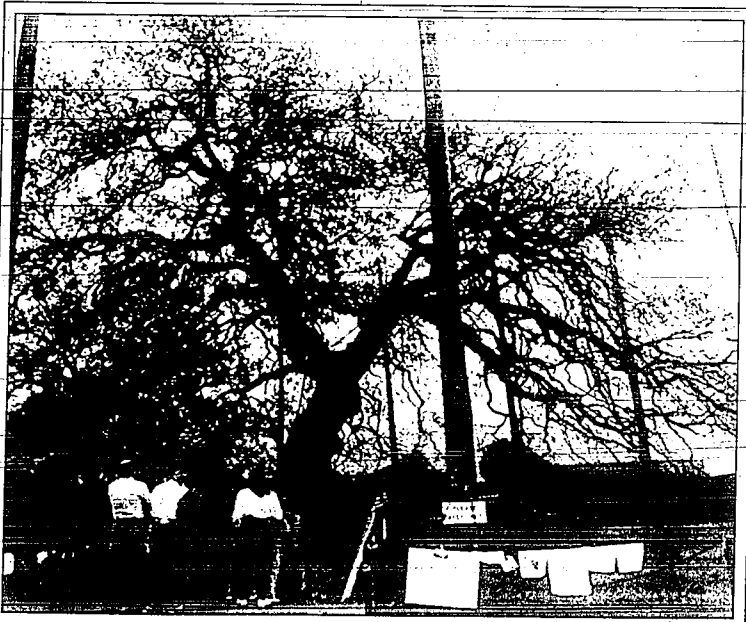

Anyway, the answer is no. And that's final.

Apparently my daughter disagreed with this — at least that is what I assumed when she ran sobbing to her room and created a barricade situation, which I eventually resolved in the old-fashioned way: I caved in like a mine shaft.

I am not going to tell you what Barbie's Ferrari cost, but it wasn't that much different from what Barbara Streisand's Ferrari cost.

Let me put it this way. When the clerk in the toy store rang up Barbie's Ferrari, she asked if we wanted a five-year loan and the rust protection package.

As spring became summer, and ...

Authorities look for bullet in a tree for murder

The Associated Press

GREAT FALLS, Mont. Authorities plan to cut down a 150-year-old cottonwood tree in hopes of finding a bullet that might shed light on an unsolved double murder 33 years ago.

Cascade County Sheriff Harry Michelotti said investigators hope to find the bullet that killed 18-year-old Lloyd Bogle, whose body was found near the tree on Jan. 3, 1956, along a dirt road that was a lovers' lane of the era.

The body of his 16-year-old girlfriend, Patricia Kalitzke, was found the next day seven miles away.

Both had been shot in the head and the bullet that killed Bogle was missing.

The tree ... has always been of major interest to law enforcement officers because that's where he was killed — right at the tree," Michelotti said.

Michelotti said police are cutting down the tree now because they had talked about it for years and finally decided to do it.

Recovery of the bullet would enable authorities to determine the caliber of the murder weapon, the sheriff said. There even is a possibility the bullet could be matched with a weapon seized sometime over the last 33 years in another crime.

Efforts to X-ray the tree failed because of its size and density, said Sgt. Dick Duncan, an investigator on the case.

The sheriff said the tree — 80 feet tall, with a trunk 4 1/2 feet in diameter — will be cut down and 33 growth rings will be shaved off its lower section.

"Once we hit the 23-year mark on the tree, we should see an entry if the bullet went into the tree — a hole, a tunnel," Michelotti said.

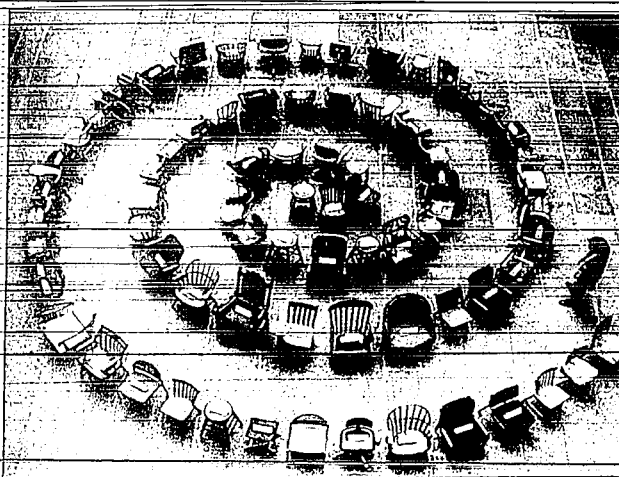

Body falls from coroner's van on freeway

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A body fell out of a coroner's van onto the Hollywood Freeway Tuesday of last week, temporarily closing southbound lanes, the Highway Patrol said.

The body, on a gurney, was spotted by a motorist at about 5:20 a.m. on the freeway near the downtown interchange, said patrol spokesman Monty Keifer.

The body was that of a suicide victim being transported to the morgue by the Los Angeles County Coroner's van. By 5:40 a.m., the body was put back in the van and the freeway lanes were reopened, said Keifer.

The cause of the incident was under investigation.

Budget cuts makes a county sheriff's office use answering machine to handle emergency calls

PAWNEE CITY, Neb. (AP) — It's not exactly 911, but the Pawnee County Sheriff's Department has come up with a way to answer emergency calls despite budget cuts.

Callers in the evenings and weekends are greeted by Sheriff John Schulze on a telephone answering machine.

"This is sheriff John Schulze. Due to a budget cut, a deputy or dispatcher is not available to take your call at this time," the tape-recorded message says.

The tape includes a telephone number for the sheriff's home, and says people may call collect in the event of an emergency, Schulze said Monday. "So far, we haven't had any major emergency that has been hindered by the system."

Schulze said the answering machine has been in use since the department was cut back to one deputy sheriff six months ago.

"It has been years since the department staffed a 24-hour dispatcher," he said. "After that, calls were routed to deputies' homes — and it is still that way sometimes, depending on the schedule."

Town uses stench to stop tree theft

MONROE, Conn. (AP) — Chopping down a Christmas tree from Monroe's town parks is a foul idea, and town officials plan to make sure everyone agrees.

All the evergreens in the town's three parks are being sprayed with foul-smelling mixture to dissuade people from robbing the parks for Christmas trees.

"You can't smell it outdoors, but when you bring the tree inside and it warms up, bang, you have a pungent, stinky odor," said park ranger David Solek.

Parks director Ron Walissa said even trees too tall for use as Christmas trees are vandalized when thieves cut off the tops.

Solek said anyone caught stealing a tree will be fined $25 to $30 per foot of tree.

Barbie

Summer dissolved into fall, it became more and more expensive to keep Barbie in the manner to which she had become accustomed.

Every time I turned around, Barbie needed new outfits. And new accessories. Or so I was told.

Recently if Barbie wears the same outfit for more than, oh, 10 seconds, she has some sort of breakdown and can't show herself in public for weeks.

Same thing with her accessories. The girl has thousands of different pocketbooks, hats, bracelets, sunglasses, scarfs — and none of these is fished out of the Goodwill bin, if you catch my drift.

The whole thing is costing me some heavy iron. And with Christmas around the corner, it doesn't figure to get better.

Just in time for the holiday season, I'm told you can now buy Barbie a horse. The horse is named Blinking Beauty and goes for 17 bucks, not counting feed.

Or, if Barbie ever wraps her Ferrari around a tree, you can buy her a '57 Chevy ($30) when she gets out of the hospital. Or an ice cream parlor with a real ice cream maker — ($30). Or a three-story townhouse, fully furnished ($70).

My daughter informs me that our Barbie would very much like one of the above gifts for Christmas.

Maybe you can guess which one. I'll give you a hint.

The drapes shouldn't clash with the carpet.

Smoker finally sees the light

DEAR ABBY: My family has been trying to get me to stop smoking for the last 10 years. I would always try to pacify them all by saying that one of these days I would quit — regardless if I really meant it or not. And then something happened to me that completely changed my way of thinking.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

I was at my sister's home one afternoon, and as I was leaving, my 4-year-old niece came running out the door after me. She had a newspaper clipping in her hand, she grabbed a hold of me and hugged me, she told me she loved me, and then asked me to read the clipping to her. The article was from your newspaper column, and it was a letter that a woman from Denver had written to you. Her name was Susan Ortiz, and she had recently lost her mother to emphysema and pneumonia — this woman's mother smoked for 50 years.

I began to cry as I read this letter and finally realized that I was putting my family through a lot of unnecessary pain because of my unwillingness to break a habit. My family is more important to me than anything, and I would never do anything to intentionally hurt them. I understand their reasons now, and am happy to say that I have quit smoking.

I want very much for this woman in Denver to know what an impact her letter had on my life. My thanks to her for having the courage to write, to you for allowing your readers to see it, and to my niece, Heather, for loving me!
— HOLLY SMITH, WICHITA, KAN.

DEAR HOLLY: Thanks for a great letter. Meet a soul sister in Phoenix: DEAR ABBY: Every morning, I get up, get the morning paper, fix my cup of tea, light a cigarette and take a series of pills. I have chronic obstructive pulmonary disease and was placed on a respirator for seven days at the age of 38. I was in terrible shape, and lived only through the grace of God and the prayers of my two daughters, ages 16 and 19.

I am very much aware that smoking is a hard habit to break because I have honestly tried to quit — but I could never stay quit. Abby, I want you to know that the letter you had in the column from Susan Ortiz inspired me so much that I cut it out and hung it on my refrigerator door. Tomorrow morning, I am going to get up, get the morning paper, fix my cup of tea, take my pills and NOT light a cigarette. Thank you, Abby. Thank you, Susan. Wish me luck.

— B.J. OF PHOENIX
DEAR ABBY: Some friends of mine have an infant whom I love as if they were family. I am touched that they trust me enough to let me take care of him occasionally, while he was having one day. I went in to check on him, as all of us baby-tenders do almost automatically, and a terrifying thought suddenly struck me! What would I do if he weren't OK? What if I didn't see his little chest rising and falling with each breath? What would I do, besides panic?

I had thought about taking a CPR class for years but never got around to it. That's no longer true. It took only a few hours. I hope I never have to use it, but at least now I know I'll never have to live with, "If only I had..."

My message is directed to everyone else who has considered taking a CPR class but hasn't gotten around to it yet. Call your local hospital or Red Cross chapter and enroll in the next class before it's too late.

— JOANN AMORE, NORMAL, ILL.

DEAR JOANN: I have suggested CPR courses before, but it's an important message that bears repeating.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the girl who spoke for "the single ones" — she thought single people should be entitled to bring a date (or escort) to a wedding. Doesn't she realize that most catered weddings cost anywhere from $25 to $75 per person?

If she doesn't feel comfortable at a wedding without a date, she should decline the invitation and use the money she would have spent on a wedding gift to invite a man of her choice out for an evening of dinner and dancing. Believe me, she wouldn't be missed at the wedding.

POPCORN BALLS

1 cup white sugar
1 cup Karo syrup
1 cube butter or margarine

8 quarts popped popcorn

Mix ingredients together and boil to soft ball stage (either shown on a candy thermometer or drop small amount into cold water - it's ready when it forms a soft ball). Pour over popcorn mixing thoroughly. Form into balls. (wetting hands before forming helps). Makes between 20-25 balls.

2 cups hot water
1/4 cup unsweetened cocoa powder
1/4 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon ground
nutmeg

cinnamon
2 cups evaporated milk
6 large marshmallows
3/4 teaspoon vanilla

FIRESIDE COCOA

In heavy saucepan, mix hot water, cocoa, sugar, salt, cinnamon, and nutmeg. Over medium heat, cook mixture to a boil. Boil 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Reduce heat and add evaporated milk and marshmallows. Heat slowly until marshmallows are dissolved. Add vanilla. Remove from heat and beat one minute with rotary beater. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

2 c. sugar	1/2 c. water
1/2 c. light corn syrup	1/8 tsp salt
2 egg whites	1/2 tsp vanilla
1 c. chopped nuts (optional)	1/8 tsp cream of tartar

Combine sugar, water, salt and cream of tartar. Cover and boil 5 minutes. Uncover. Wipe sides with damp cloth. Boil without stirring to firm ball stage (245-248 degrees). Remove from heat. Pour slowly, heating constantly over stiffly beaten egg whites. Continue beating until it holds its shape. Add flavoring and nuts. Drop on waxed paper by spoonfuls. Needs to be made on a nice day. A rainy day may cause it to fail.

Potato Soup

4 medium potatoes (cubed)
4 strips bacon
4 medium onions (diced)
Salt (to taste)
2 medium carrots (diced)
1 T. parsley flakes
2 stalks celery (diced)
Milk

Cook ingredients in small amount of water until tender. Add enough milk to barely cover vegetables. Heat through, but do not boil. (If you are not using bacon, add 1 or 2 tablespoons butter and salt and pepper to taste.)

Hamburger Soup

1 tsp butter
6 cups beef stock
1 lb ground beef
3 medium carrots, sliced
3 medium onions, sliced
3 medium potatoes, sliced
14 oz can tomatoes
3 celery stalks, sliced
1/2 bay leaf
1/4 cup sm sea shell pasta salt, pepper, sweet basil to taste
Worcestershire & Tabasco

Melt butter, add beef and cook slightly. Add onions, tomatoes, salt, pepper, basil, bay leaf and beef stock. Bring to a boil; cover and simmer for 1 hour. Add remaining vegetables and cook 1 hour longer. Stir in shells during the last 12-15 minutes of cooking. Add seasonings. Remove bay leaf. Test shells to see if tender. Serve hot.

Christmas in France

Noel is the French word for Christmas and is celebrated throughout the land with deep religious devotion. The start of Noel is right after "The Feast of St. Nicholas" on December 6 and continues through the Epiphany on January 6. Children put their shoes at the fireplace hearth on Christmas Eve with the assurance from the grownups that the spirit of little Jesus will fill the shoes up by morning. Someone usually explains how once, Jesus himself came to the hearth, but nowadays, Jesus sends Pere Noel in his place. No one really knows why. Songs are sung this Christmas night until Maman announces that the time has come for the children to go to bed. Then Pape remembers that the children must put out a snack for Pere Noel and his donkey. Noel has come to France once again.

Here We Come A Wassailing

Here we come a wassailing, among the leaves so green
Here we come a wandering, so fair to be seen
Love and joy come to you, and to your wassail too
And God bless you, and send you A Happy New Year
And God send you a Happy New Year!

We are not daily, beggars that beg from door to door
But we are neighbors children whom you have seen before
Love and joy come to you, and to your wassail too
And God bless you, and send you a Happy New Year
And God send you a Happy New Year!

We have got a little purse of ratching leather skin
We want some of your small change to line it well within
Love and joy come to you, and to your wassail too
And God bless you, and send you A Happy New Year
And God send you a Happy New Year!

God bless the master of this house, likewise the mistress too
And all the little children that round the table go
Love and joy come to you, and to your wassail too
And God bless you, and send you A Happy New Year

WHILE SHEPHERDS WATCHED

While shepherds watched their flocks by night,
All seated on the ground,
The an-gel of the Lord came down
And glo-ry shone a-round,
And glo-ry shone a-round.

"Fear not," said he, for might-y dread
Had seized their troubled mind;
"Glad tidings of great joy I bring,
To you, and all man-kind,
To you, and all man-kind.

"To you in David's town this day
Is born, of David's line,
A Savior, who is Christ the Lord;
And this shall be the sign,
And this shall be the sign.

The heav'nly Babe you there shall find,
To human view dis-played,
All mean-ly wrapped in swath-ing bands,
And in a man-ger laid,

Christmas In Denmark

Christmas Eve in Denmark, Juleaften, is the most important day of the holiday season. The day that precedes it, called little Juleaften, is the busiest. Gifts are wrapped, and there are lots of them because most Danes exchange Christmas gifts with all members of the family as well as with close friends and associates. All nature is glorified at Christmastime. Children make certain that their pets are well cared for and farmers give animals an extra portion of food with the "Christmas Toast". Eat well, keep well, this is Christmas Eve. It is said that the animals in the barns stand at midnight in honor of Christ's birth. At four o'clock in the afternoon, church bells throughout Denmark begin to chime. They herald the start of the true Christmas celebration. Mother settles the goose in the oven and the family leaves for the five o'clock candlelight services at the church. All but a small percentage of Denmark's population belong to the Evangelical Lutheran Church. When church is over, family members greet their friends and neighbors with a hearty "Glaedejig jul" — Merry Christmas! Afterwards they go home for the feast that awaits them. Mother places a lighted candle in the window. This is done as a welcome sign for any stranger who may pass by, for no one should go hungry on this night.

Christmas In Spain

In every home in Spain, poor or rich, but especially where children are living, the pre-Christmas activity is the construction of the family "nacimiento", the Nativity scene. Some of the families purchase the necessary figures, but most make their own — a cave or a stable, and a background that could be as simple as a shepherd on a hillside or as elaborate as a re-creation of the entire town of Bethlehem. Children and parents both take part in this family project. Some schools and churches have living "nacimientos". Students or parishioners assume the various roles in the Nativity scene. "Belenistas" are clubs or organizations devoted to building and admiring "nacimientos". The groups organize displays and conduct competitions in which awards are given the best nacimiento of the year. As Advent draws to a close, Spaniards exchange holiday greetings and otherwise busy themselves with the family nacimiento and prepare for Christmas Eve. The Spanish Christmas Eve is known as Nache Buena, "the good night". It is a time of gaiety and merrymaking.

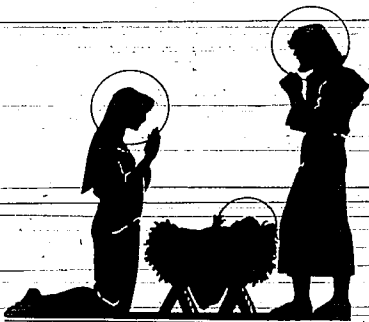

Away In A Manger

Away in a manger, no crib for his bed
the little Lord Jesus lay down his sweet-head
The stars in the sky looked down where he lay
The little Lord Jesus, asleep in the hay.

The cattle are lowing, the poor baby wakes
But little Lord Jesus, no crying he makes
I love Thee, Lord Jesus, look down from the sky
And stay by my cradle till morning is nigh.

Be near me, Lord Jesus, I ask Thee to stay
Close by me forever, and love me I pray
Bless all the dear children in Thy tender care
And take us to heaven to live with Thee there.

Christmas In Ireland

The Irish consider Christmas the most holy and joyous time of the year. On Christmas Eve, the Irish put lighted candles in their windows. The candles, it is said, light the way for Mary and Joseph who wander forever on Christmas Eve. In the days long ago, when the English tried to suppress Roman Catholicism, the candles were a sign to passing priests of a house where Mass could be said in safety. Christmas Day in Ireland is a quiet day. Everything is closed except the churches. It is a time for family. The day begins early with squeals of delight when the children "rush to the socks". Gifts and treats left by Father Christmas, or Santa Claus, are discovered in the stockings. After the contents of the stockings are discovered, older family members may gather around the Christmas tree to exchange gifts. A single present for each member of the family is still the custom. People remember the "hard times" all too well.

CHRISTMAS IN AUSTRIA

In other countries Father Christmas, Santa Claus, or St. Nicholas may fill the thoughts of children at Christmas time. But in Austria, it is the Christkind who brings the presents on Christmas eve. He also decorates the tree.

The approach of Christmas in Austria is also a time of thoughtful preparation for celebrating the birth of Jesus. Many Austrians observe Advent as a solemn season of preparation for Christmas similar to Lent as the spiritual preparation for Easter.

One seldom hears a Christmas carol in Austria before December 24th because the Advent season has its own special songs. All over Austria, both children and adults don traditional costumes to celebrate the Advent in song and dance.

The "Herbergsuchen" (seeking shelter) is a well-established Austrian custom, especially popular in Salzburg and Styria. There are many variations of the tradition, which is often practiced on behalf of charity. Children go from door to door, enacting Mary and Joseph's search for a place to stay in Bethlehem, and collect money for charity. Traditionally, Austrian youngsters write to Christkindl early in Advent to tell him of their hearts' desires. The Christmas wish list is carefully placed in a window or on a windowsill where the Christ child or one of his angels will be sure to see it. By the following morning the letter is always gone.

As the Advent season draws to a close, greetings are exchanged and spirits rise like the refrain of one of the most beautiful of all the Advent songs: "Freue dich, Christkindl, Kommt bald!" "Rejoice, for the Christ child is coming soon!"

God Rest Ye Merry, Gentlemen

God rest ye merry, gentlemen, may nothing you dismay, Remember Christ, our Saviour was born on Christmas Day,
To save us all from Satan's power, when we were gone astray.

O tidings of comfort and joy, comfort and joy,
O tidings of comfort and joy.

From God, our Heavenly Father, a blessed angel came, and unto certain shepherds brought tidings of the same,
How that in Bethlehem was born, the Son of God by name.

O tidings of comfort and joy, comfort and joy,
O tidings of comfort and joy.

The shepherds at those tidings rejoiced much in mind,
And left their flocks afeeding, in tempest, storm and wind,
And went to Bethlehem straight-away, the Son of God to find.

O tidings of comfort and joy, comfort and joy,
O tidings of comfort and joy.

HOLIDAY PUNCH

- 2 quarts cranberry juice
- 2 quarts Seven-Up
- 1/2 gallon raspberry sherbet

Place equal parts of cranberry juice and Seven-Up in a punch bowl (2 quarts each). Spoon or drop in 1/2 gallon raspberry sherbet. Serve some sherbet with each serving of punch. Yields 1 1/2 to 2 cups per person (16 to 20 servings). It is best to use chilled juice and Seven-Up for quicker service.

MOM'S CINNAMON ROLLS

- 1/2 cup warm water
- 1 cup boiling water
- 1 yeast cake
- 1/2 cup shortening
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2 egg yolks (well beaten)
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 9 cups flour
- 1 cube butter or margarine

(Blend 2 teaspoons Cinnamon with 1 cup sugar for mixture)

Mix together 1/2 cup warm water, yeast cake, and the teaspoon of sugar. Let stand until it dissolves. Next mix together boiling water, egg yolks and the yeast mixture. Add flour (may not be able to use all of it). Put in bowl and let rise once before putting in all of the flour. Roll out dough 1/2 inch thick. Spread with melted butter or margarine. Sprinkle generously with Cinnamon mixture. Sprinkle with chopped nuts or raisins if desired. Then roll up and cut. Place on well oiled baking sheet. Cover with warm damp cloth and let rise. Bake in oven at about 425 degrees for about 20 minutes.

BROWN BUTTER ICING

- 1 cube of butter or margarine
 - 1 box powdered sugar
 - 6 tablespoons of canned milk or cream
- Brown butter in heavy pan stirring constantly. Add milk and bring to a boil. Then add sugar. Ice while rolls are warm.

TRADITIONS

Traditions are time honored practices passed down from generation to generation. No other time of the year has so many variations of these practice as Christmas Time. The United States, with it's molting pot of people mixing with different cultures honors traditions from all over the world. The following are a few symbols associated with Christmas and some of their possible meanings.

THE STAR

The star appears in many places including atop the Christmas tree. This symbol represents the Star in the East that the wisemen followed to find the baby Jesus.

LIGHTS

The lights that decorate our homes and Christmas trees represent Christ as the light of the world. In the past candles were left in the windows so the Christ Spirit could find its way into that home.

HOLLY AND IVY

Decorating with holly and ivy originated with the Roman's custom of presenting it as a good luck and fertility charm in their winter celebration. Both are evergreen and bear fruit in the winter. Eventually holly has come to be associated with Christ's crown of thorns. But holly by tradition has been described as masculine and ivy as feminine. It was believed that both were needed to share the blessing of fertility.

CHRISTMAS CARDS

Christmas card exchanging is fairly recent. They were first printed on a wide scale in about the early 1860's in the London area. In about 1865 an American began printing multi-colored cards and marketed them in Europe. It wasn't until about 1875 that they began selling in the United States.

TRADITIONS

THE POINSETTIA

Another fairly modern practice in the United States is the giving of the Poinsettia. Its lovely scarlet color makes it a perfect decoration for the Christmas celebration of fire and light. Dr. Poinsett who brought it to the United States from Mexico in about 1828 didn't realize that the plant was already associated with the Christmas season. The name of the plant in Mexican is Flower of the Holy Night. Today it is given as a present and included in many decorations celebrating the Christmas season.

MISTLETOE

The origin of the custom of kissing under the mistletoe is unknown but seems to be of English descent. Until English people lived in other countries, this tradition did not exist. There are many who believe it had something to do with the Druidical belief in its power of charm & fertility. A traditional form of this custom was to pick off a berry every time a kiss was claimed under the bough. When the berries were all gone there was no more kissing.

SAINT NICHOLAS

Saint Nicholas was famous for his generosity in about A.D. 300's and people came to believe that surprise gifts came from him. He was chosen as the patron saint of children in the Netherlands and his fame has spread.

GOOD CHRISTIAN MEN, REJOICE

Good Chris-tian men, re-joice
With heart and soul and voice,
Give heed to what we say: News! News!
Je-sus Christ is born today!
Ox and ass, be-fore Him bow,
And He is in the man-ger now;
Christ is born today!
Christ is born today.

Good Chris-tian men re-joice
With heart and soul and voice,
Now ye hear of end-less bliss: Joy! JOY!
Je-sus Christ was born for this.
He hath open'd the heav'n-ly door,
And man is bless-ed ev-er-more;
Christ was born for this.
Christ was born for this.

Good Chris-tian men, re-joice
With heart and soul and voice,
Now ye need not fear the grave: Peace! Peace!
Je-sus Christ was born to save.
Calls you one and calls you all
To gain His ev-er-last-ing hall;
Christ was born to save.
Christ was born to save.

Buttermilk Rolls

- 3 cakes yeast
- 7 c. flour
- 2 c. buttermilk
- 2 tsp. salt
- 1/4 c. sugar
- 1/4 tsp. soda
- 1/4 c. shortening
- 1/4 tsp. baking powder
- 1 egg (beaten)

Place yeast in slightly warm buttermilk. Add sugar, shortening and beaten egg. Add flour which has been mixed with salt, soda, and baking powder. Let rise until double. Knead on floured board and make into rolls. Let rise again double and bake in hot oven, 425 degrees about 15 minutes.

Casserole - tuna, chicken or turkey

- 1 3 oz. can chow mein noodles
- 1 pkg almonds or cashews
- 1 can cream of mushroom soup
- 1 c. diced celery
- 1/4 c. water
- 1/4 c. minced onion
- 1 can tuna or 1 cup chicken or turkey
- Salt & pepper to taste

Toast noodles in oven. Combine ingredients quickly, using 1/2 of noodles and nuts. Put mixture in casserole dish. Sprinkle remaining half of noodles and nuts on top. Cook at 325 degrees for 40 minutes.

The Holly and The Ivy

The holly and the ivy, now both are full well grown, of all the trees within the wood, the holly bears the crown.

Chorus

Oh the rising of the sun, the running of the deer, the playing of the merry organ,
sweet singing in the choir,
sweet singing in the choir.

The holly bears a blossom, as white as any flower, and Mary bore sweet Jesus Christ, to be our Savior.

(chorus)

The holly bears a berry, as red as any blood, and Mary bore sweet Jesus Christ, to do poor sinners good.

(chorus)

The holly bears a prickly, as sharp as any thorn, and Mary bore sweet Jesus Christ, on Christmas Day on the morn.

(chorus)

Egg Nog

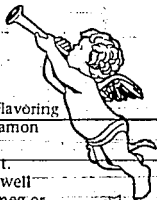

- | | |

AN AMERICAN CHRISTMAS TREE

The custom of setting up a tree indoors and decorating it was brought to America by German settlers late in the eighteenth century. It was not until the American Revolution that Christmas began to be celebrated throughout the American colonies. The tree was not an established part of Christmas until more than 200 years after the first colonists arrived.

In the seaport cities like New York and Boston, imported items from around the world were used for decorations. In remote communities many of the first American trees were decorated with Indian popcorn, wild cranberries, paper chains, a few wisps of cotton and hand dipped candles made of tallow.

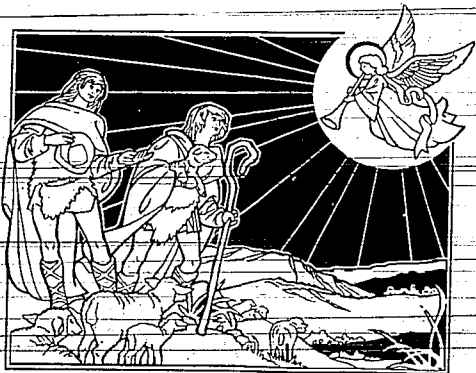

O Holy Night

O holy night, the stars are brightly shining—it is the night of the dear Saviors birth.
Long lay the world in sin and sorrow pining
Til He appeared and the soul felt it's worth.
A thrill of hope, the weary world rejoices for yonder breaks a new and glorious morn!

Fall on your knees! O hear the angel voices,
O night divine! O night when Christ was born!
O night divine - O night, O night divine!

Led by the light of faith serenely beaming with glowing hearts by his cradle we stand And led by light of star so sweetly gleaming here come the wise men from the Orient land.
The King of Kings lay thus in lowly manger in all out trials born to be our friend.

He knows our needs, He guardeth us from danger.
Behold your King! Before Him lowly bend!
Behold your King Your King before Him Bend!

CORN BREAD

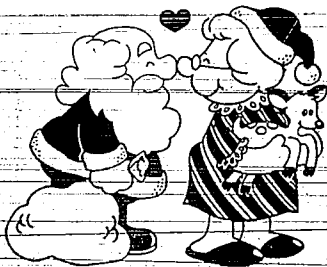

1 cup yellow cornmeal	1 cup sifted enriched flour
1/4 cup sugar	1 egg
12 teaspoon salt	1/4 cup soft shortening

Sift together dry ingredients into bowl. Add egg, milk and shortening. Beat with egg beater until smooth (about 1 minute). Do not overbeat! Bake in greased 8 inch square pan or greased muffin pans in hot 425 degree oven for 20-25 minutes.

QUICK & EASY CHILI

1 can chili beans	1 can tomato sauce
1 can chili con carne	1/2 to 1 lb ground beef

Brown meat slowly in heavy pan. Add the onions and cook until the onions are see through. Add other ingredients and cook thoroughly.

newspaper balloon colored tissue paper crayons pieces of cardboard-small pieces of candy & prizes papier mache paste.

Although traditionally pinatas are made with a clay pot, the following instructions will show you how to make a pinata using an inflated balloon.

- (1) Blow up the balloon.
 - (2) Paste strips of newspaper (about 1 inch wide) over the inflated balloon with the papier mache paste leaving an area at the top uncovered to later pop the balloon and full with candy and surprises.
 - (3) Cut, shape and add cardboard pieces to make legs, head and neck (can use crayons for color).
 - (4) Cut out and paste colorful ruffles of tissue paper.
 - (5) Decorate with cardboard pieces for the eyes, nose and mouth.
 - (6) Hang to dry overnight. In the morning pop balloon and fill with candy. Cover area with cardboard let dry for a few hours.

At your Christmas celebration hang pinata in a good location, on a rope over a rafter or on a long pole. Let the children take turns wearing the blindfold, spin them around & let them try to hit the pinata. (broom handle works well). Raise the pinata up and down so that each child may have a turn.

When the pinata breaks, the children will scramble for the candy & surprises.

O Christmas Tree (O Tannenbaum)

O Christmas Tree, O Christmas Tree,
O evergreen so lovely.
A symbol of good will and love,
You'll ever be so lovely.

Each shining light, each silver bell,
no other sight spreads cheer so well.
O Christmas Tree, O Christmas Tree,
You'll ever be so lovely.

EASY TO MAKE SCONES

2 yeast cakes
1/2 cup warm water
1/2 cup shortening
1/4 cup sugar
2 cups warm water
1-teaspoon salt
2 eggs (separated)
6 to 7 cups sifted flour

Dissolve yeast in 1/2 cup warm water.

Place 2 cups of warm water in a mixing bowl and add egg yolks and all other ingredients except flour and egg whites. Whip until well-mixed. Add 4 cups flour and beat. Add rest of flour 1 cup at a time, until dough is stiff. Add unbeated egg whites and beat into dough (this will seal out grease when frying). Let rise and whip down. Let rise again and cut on floured board. Let rise and fry in hot shortening.

HOT SPICED OR MULLED APPLE CIDER

1 quart sweet apple cider
Few grains of salt
8 whole allspice
1/4 cup brown sugar, well packed
8 whole cloves
1 stick cinnamon, if desired

Put cider into a 3 quart saucepan, add the spices, salt, and sugar, and cover; heat very slowly to the boiling point. Heat should be so low that it takes the cider about half an hour to come to a boil. Remove from heat, strain, and serve steaming hot. Makes 5 servings.

We Wish You A Merry Christmas

CHRISTMAS CRAFTS

Pretty old-fashioned decorations

PAPER CHAIN

MATERIAL LIST:

red paper, white paper, green paper glue pencil snub-nose scissors tape

- (1) Cut the paper into strips 1/2 inch by 5 1/2 inches.
 - (2) Take both ends of a paper strip and join them together with glue.
 - (3) Take another strip of paper and put it through the first ring, then glue the ends together.
 - (4) Continue adding the strips until you reach the length that you desire. You can alternate the colors, form a pattern or make the garland all one color.
- The chain can be used for all kinds of decorations.

CRANBERRY AND POPCORN GARLAND

MATERIAL LIST:

popcorn (let stand for a few hours) needle cranberries heavy thread small piece of cardboard

- (1) Thread a medium-sized needle with about 6 feet of thread (72 inches). Double back and knot the thread. (Makes thread length about 3 feet).
- (2) Pass the needle through the small piece of cardboard then through the center of 3 to 5 pieces of popcorn and then through a cranberry. (Use a thimble to push needle through the cranberries, they can be very stiff).
- (3) Repeat this pattern until the string is full. (You can make your own pattern).
- (4) Remove the needle and knot the end of the thread.

Up On The Housetop

Up on the housetop, reindeer-pause out jumps good old Santa Claus
all for the little one's Christmas joys.

(Chorus)
Ho, ho, ho! Who wouldn't go?
Ho, ho, ho! Who wouldn't go?
Up on the housetop, click, click, click down through the chimney with good Saint Nick!

First comes the stocking of little Nell,
dear old Santa, fill it well.
Give her a dolly that laughs and cries,
One that will open and shut her eyes.

(Chorus)

Next comes the stocking of little Will
Oh just see that glorious fill
Here is a hammer and lots of tacks, also a ball and a whip that cracks.

(Chorus)

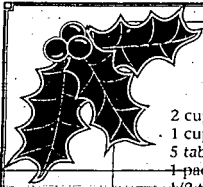

JOLLY OLD ST. NICHOLAS

Jol-ly old Saint Nich-o-las Lean your ear this way!
Don't you tell a sin-gle soul
what I'm going to say;
Christ-mas Eve is com-ing soon;
Now, my dear old man,
Whisper what you'll bring to me,
Tell me, if you can.

When the clock is strik-ing twelve,
When I'm fast a-sleep.
Down the chim-ney-broad-and black,
with your pack you'll creep;
All the stock-ings you will find
Hang-ing in a row;
Mine will be the short-est one,
You'll be sure to know.

John-ny wants a pair of skates,
Su-sy wants a sled;
Nel-lie wants a picture book
Yel-low, blue, and red;
Now I think I'll leave to you
What to give the rest;
Choose for me, dear San-ta Claus,
You will know the best.

HOLIDAY CHEESE BALL

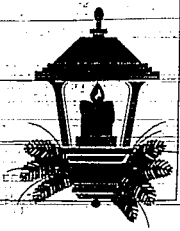

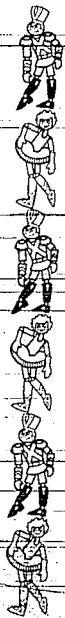

- 2 cups (8 ounces) shredded cheddar cheese
- 1 cup (4 ounces) grated Parmesan cheese
- 5 tablespoons crumbled Blue cheese
- 1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese, softened
- 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1 small can evaporated milk
- 1 cup chopped walnuts

Beat together the cheeses, the dry mustard and the evaporated milk. Chill 1 hour or until firm. Shape into a ball. Roll in chopped nuts. Wrap in waxed paper. Chill until ready to serve. Serve with crackers.

IT'S A PARTY SHRIMP DIP

- 4 oz. creme cheese
- 1 tablespoon horse radish
- small can drained shrimp
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 2-3 tablespoons maynaise
- 1 bottle or jar of cocktail sauce

Use mixer to blend creme cheese, horse radish, maynaise, and lemon juice. Spread mixture about 1/2 inch thick into dish. Let set for 2 hours (can leave overnight). Pour cocktail sauce evenly over the top. Spread shrimp across the top. Serve with either crackers or chips.

PEANUT BRITTLE

- 2 cups sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup light corn syrup
- 2 cups raw Spanish peanuts
- 1/2 cup hot water
- 1 teaspoon butter
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 1/2 teaspoon baking soda

Combine sugar, syrup, water, salt and bring to a full boil. Add peanuts. Cook until nuts snap and turn color. Add butter and vanilla. Cook until amber colored at 300 degrees. Remove from heat. Add baking soda and pour onto large cookie sheet. Cool. Makes 1-2 pounds.

CARAMEL CORN

- 1 cup unpopped popcorn
- 2 cups packed brown sugar
- 1 cup butter
- 1/2 cup corn syrup
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Pop the corn and set it aside. Boil butter, sugar, syrup, and salt together for 5 minutes without stirring. Remove from heat. Add baking soda and vanilla. Pour over popped corn. Stir to coat evenly.

Jingle Bells

Dashing through the snow in a one horse open sleigh;
over the fields we go, laughing all the way;
bells on bobtail ring; making spirits bright;
what fun it is to ride and sing a sleighing song tonight!

(Chorus)

Jingle Bells, Jingle Bells, Jingle all the way;
Oh, what fun it is to ride in a one horse open sleigh
Jingle Bells, Jingle Bells, Jingle all the way;
Oh, what fun it is to ride in a one horse open sleigh!

A day or two ago I thought I'd take a ride;
Soon Miss Fanny Bright was seated by my side;
the horse was lean and lank, misfortune seemed it's lot, he got into a drifted bank, and so we got upstot!

(Chorus)

Now the ground is white, go it while you're young;
Take the girls tonight and sing this sleighing song.
Just get a bobtailed nag, two forty for his speed, then hitch him to an open sleigh and crack you'll take the lead!

(Chorus)
