William Carter is lowered to the ground by a fire department ladder truck after a ceiling collapsed at the old jail

Ceiling section in old Twin Falls County jail collapses, sends worker to hospital

TWIN FALLS — Demolition of the old county jail has been halted after part of the ceiling collapsed Friday afternoon, sending a construction worker to the hospital.

William Carter, 47, of Walla Walla, Wash., was rushed to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, where he was in fair condition in the emergency room and expected to be admitted Friday night, a nursing supervisor said.

No one will be allowed on the fourth-floor-and-all-further-work is postponed until insurance and safety inspectors can evaluate working conditions, said contractor Bob Jackson, owner of Jackson Electric Co. of Jerome.

Friday afternoon's accident occurred at 2:10 p.m. Carter was one of eight workers on the county courthouse's fourth floor, where the contractor is gutting old jail cells. Carter was standing on a wooden step of a ladder, Jackson said, cutting metal off a wall or window frame.

The metal-lath and concrete ceiling in the 18-square-foot cell gave away and swung down as if hinged on one side, swiping Carter in the shoulder and knocking him to the ground, Jackson said.

Vibrations from the construction work or loose bolts could have caused the ceiling to collapse, Jackson said. Carter's work Friday afternoon did not cause the accident, Jackson said.

When Jackson heard the noise, he ran to Carter.

"He hollered at me that he was not pinned, but he was hurting," Jackson said. Carter remained conscious, Jackson said.

Two fire trucks and eight firefighters came to the courthouse. A vent in the roof was removed and enlarged. Carter was lifted through the roof on a stretcher and lowered to the ground with a fire ladder.

Friday afternoon's accident was the third time firefighters responded to calls at the jail.

Tuesday afternoon they went to douse smoldering insulation. They were called Friday morning to check on a triggered alarm. Fire Commander Phil Clough said.

Jackson said demolition is a risky business, but he was aware of jail conditions when he began this project last week.

"We're working in an area that's very unsafe and we know that," Jackson said. "No matter how many safety precautions I take, there's always something else that comes."

"One worker always keeps an eye on safety measures, Jackson said, and someone has been at the site 24 hours a day since the insulation smoldered on Tuesday, he said.

Although hard hats are available, Carter was not wearing one at the time, Jackson said.

Jackson took the job for a fixed price — $20,000 — and said the accident will not cost the county. His bid was less than half what two competitors had bid.

County Commissioner Norma Blass said the county would let safety inspectors decide when it is safe to continue with the demolition.

"We don't feel it was the contractor's fault," she said. "It was just an accident."

Colorado, EPA set up cleanup for Rocky Flats

The Associated Press

DENVER — Two governmental agencies that oversee Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant signed a draft agreement Friday assigning responsibility to begin cleaning up the contaminated complex "almost immediately."

A third agency, the Department of Energy, put off signing the document until next week because of a minor financial snag.

The Environmental Protection Agency and the Colorado Department of Health signed the document, which would be a blueprint for carrying out cleanup priorities agreed upon in principle by Gov. Roy Romer and DOE Secretary James Walkins in June.

Cleanup of contamination is estimated to cost $500 million to $1 billion and to take more than a decade, officials said.

"We can feel very comfortable that what we're signing here has been agreed upon with an agency agreement and just needs to be signed."

OK, which will assume will come early next week," EPA regional administrator James J. Scherer said at a news conference.

Nation's jobless rate hits 10-month peak

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Unemployment climbed to a 10-month high of 7.3 percent in November and manufacturing payrolls shrank for the eighth consecutive month, the government said today in a report many analysts said showed the economy was flirting with recession.

The increase in the civilian jobless rate from 5.3 percent to 5.4 percent came despite the addition of 210,000 non-farm jobs last month because of a big jump in the number of Americans looking for work.

The stock market reacted favorably to the data, taking evidence of sluggishness as an indication the Federal Reserve would seek to spur the economy by easing its hold on credit before the end of the year, thus lowering interest rates.

Area rate rises — B1

The 210,000 new non-farm jobs reported by the Labor Department was in itself a moderately strong number, but the government also sharply cut its job growth figures for October from 233,000 to 93,000.

That brought the average month-to-month job gain for the second half of the year to about 160,000, well off the average monthly gain of 200,000 for the previous 2½ years. All of the new jobs have been in the service side of the economy; manufacturing employment is down 165,000 since March.

"What it means is the economy is weaker than we had previously thought," said Elliott Platt, a senior vice president at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette Securities Corp. "We're not in a recession yet but we're not in a recovery yet either."

Kremlin may revise party monopoly law

The Washington Post

MOSCOW — The Kremlin said Friday that it is "willing to consider revising, or even eliminating, the law guaranteeing the Communist Party's monopoly on power as part of an overall rewriting of the constitution."

However, officials said that calls by "ultra-radicals" for an emergency debate on the Soviet Union's one-party system were "irresponsible" and a cause of "instability."

"Every point in the constitution, including Article 6 (which guarantees the 'leading role' of the Communist Party), can be thought through, modernized or even excluded," said a long, unsigned editorial on the front page of the party newspaper, Pravda. "This should be done as part of a constructive redrafting of the entire constitution, and this work has already started."

The statement, along with an open discussion of the party's role among party and non-party officials in the state-controlled mass media in the past several days, represents a distinct softening of the party's previous stand on perhaps the most crucial issues of political reform in the Soviet Union.

Santa skeptic stays at home

The Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis. — The mother of a youthful skeptic says it will take a miracle on any street to get her daughter to go to school after she denounced the existence of Santa Claus.

Kindergarten pupil Cherish Stuts doesn't believe in jolly old St. Nicholas and she's going to stay home from school for the rest of the year to protest her right to that belief, her mother said Friday.

Cherish's teacher violated the girl's rights when the teacher told the student aside this week and asked her to keep her skepticism about Santa Claus to herself, said Debra Stuts.

"I'm going to home-school her," the mother said. "The children were discovering that not everybody thinks alike. That is a fact of life."

Mrs. Stuts said Cherish told other students that Santa Claus wasn't real, the teacher overheard it and asked the girl not to say such things.

But Principal Graydon Axtell said the teacher talked to the girl only after several crying classmates told her about Cherish's opinions.

Axtell said he stands by the teacher's actions. Parents should decide whether their children believe in Santa Claus or not, he said.

"I even believe in Santa, for crying out loud," Axtell said. "Here (students are) all excited about St. Nicholas, and here is a little girl coming along and saying there is not a Santa Claus."

Mrs. Stuts said her daughter has never believed in Santa Claus because she was told the "true story of how Santa Claus came to be. She just believes it is a story, just like Cinderella and all the others."

Cherish came home hurt and confused when those beliefs were questioned, the mother said. "Her feelings were like, 'What did I do wrong?' What she was going to do was go to school and sit there and not say anything all day? I've told my children to stand up for what they believe."

Earth can fight asteroid hazard

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Earth is wrecked by quakes, floods, slides, storms and volcanoes — not to mention an occasional 100,000-megaton whack from an asteroid.

But sitting ducks can fight back, geophysicists said Friday.

As the American Geophysical Union held its five-day fall meeting, suggestions for reducing death and destruction from natural hazards included requiring tornado shelters in mobile home parks, planning land use to avoid quake and slide damage, and steering incoming asteroids away from Earth.

An asteroid two-thirds of a mile wide hits Earth about every 300,000 years, and today it could kill more than half Earth's population because of climate and direct effects of a blast equal to 7.7 million Hiroshima-sized atomic bombs, said Clark Chapman of the Planetary Science Institute in Tucson, Ariz., and David Morrison, of NASA's Ames Research Center in Mountain View.

Conservatively assuming a 50-year human lifespan, that means any person has about a one-in-6,000 chance of being killed by an asteroid during his lifetime, compared with an American's one-in-20,000 chance of dying on a plane crash or one-in-50,000 chance of being killed by a tornado, said the pair, who wrote the book "Asteroid Catastrophes."

"This is, in fact, a real hazard," Chapman said. "We're not in a shooting gallery."

Even a small asteroid impact "could be mistaken for a nuclear attack," he said. "It might trigger a nuclear attack."

One asteroid passed within 50,000 miles of Earth this year, about twice the moon's distance, and a small, one-kilometer-wide asteroid — an uninhabited part of Siberia in 1908.

So it makes sense for society to better evaluate likely consequences of a collision and use telescopes to provide years' notice of incoming asteroids, Chapman said.

"It's within our technical capabilities to design a space mission to nudge the asteroid out of the way" by using special rocket engines or, perhaps, hydrogen bombs, although bombs might break up an asteroid into more deadly fragments.

E. German Communists offer lawyer as new party chairman

EAST BERLIN (AP) — East Germany's embattled Communists on Saturday overhauled their leadership structure and posed for the post of party chairman a 41-year-old reformist lawyer who has worked for the opposition, a party spokesman said.

Gregor Gysi's name was put forward during a meeting that could be the Communists' last as the nation's ruling party. He was the only candidate, party spokesman Brigitte Zimmermann told reporters in a closed-door briefing of the party's emergency congress.

Gysi has spoken out for sweeping political and economic reform and acted as lawyer for the major opposition group, New Forum. He has served on the interim party leadership and heads a committee investigating corruption allegations against the ousted leadership.

Ms. Zimmermann said the delegates decided not to dissolve the party, but to change its name. The new name has yet to be decided.

She said the delegates were also choosing a 100-member party board with a chairman that will be its next leadership.

That meant the party had abolished its traditional leadership structure of a general secretary, a Politburo and the policy-making Central Committee. The structure was a holdover from the Stalinist era.

Ms. Zimmermann said delegates voted unanimously not to dissolve the party and by a margin of more than 3 to 1 to change the name.

About 3,000 delegates attended the emergency congress that began Friday. They went behind closed doors Saturday after a five-hour debate failed to produce agreement on the course of an emergency session.

Many of the 2,753 delegates insisted on continuing a debate to explore abuses of the past. Others insisted that the party first needs new leadership.

The deep differences reflected the rifts in a party that has lost 10 percent of its members since September and which has lost its grip on the country.

Party sources said Premier Hans Modrow was also presenting a report on the work of the now-outdated Communist Party Central Committee, which quit in disgrace on Sunday.

"The historic congress, held in an East Berlin sports hall, began by debating the party's proposed program that calls for free elections and broad cooperation with opposition groups.

The congress was called to elect a new leadership, to consider changing the Communists' name to the Socialist Party of Germany, and possibly scrap the leadership hierarchy of a general secretary, a Central Committee and a Politburo.

Castro rejects European reforms

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro-fellied Communists around the world to defend socialism against the East bloc reforms, which he said could only hurt Cuba's economy, an official Cuban report said Friday.

"The socialist capitalism was gaining unusual strength in socialist countries but rejected it as a means of solving Cuba's problems. He said it would mean a loss of sovereignty and independence, declaring, "We would be an extension of Miami."

Castro spoke for nearly an hour at funeral services for more than 2,000 Cubans killed abroad over the past 14 years, most of them in Africa, the government news agency Prensa Latina said in a dispatch monitored in Mexico.

"It's a good thing to have. But I don't see that happening all at once," Bush said in an interview at WHO, a station where Reagan once was a sportscaster.

Critics have said free trade in farm products would eliminate safety nets that ensure farming will remain profitable enough to assure a stable and safe food supply and would open the possibility of a flood of foreign meats and grains into U.S. markets.

Subsidy-free farm trade far distant

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The administration's goal of eliminating worldwide agricultural subsidies is "an utopian-vision" that can't be achieved soon, President Bush said Friday night.

The president's comments came in a radio interview in the heart of the Corn Belt during a brief campaign stop on behalf of Rep. Tom Tauke, the Iowa Republican who is attempting to unseat Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin in 1990.

A policy seeking to remove barriers to sales of U.S. farm products abroad, set by the Reagan administration and continued by Bush, seeks the

Surgeons transplant another liver

CHICAGO (AP) — Surgeons on Friday undertook the nation's second liver transplant from a living donor, removing part of the organ of a 15-month-old Tennessee man and placing it into his 15-month-old daughter.

"It's going just like we like it," Dr. Peter Whittington said Friday afternoon of the operation at the University of Chicago Medical Center, where he is director of pediatric transplant services.

In the operation, Robert Jones, a dry-wall installer and contractor from Millington, near Memphis, had the left lobe of his liver removed and the partial organ implanted into his daughter, Sarah. Doctors made their first incision into the girl about 2 p.m. MST.

Hospital spokeswoman Mary Fettsch said Jones was listed in critical but stable condition. "He says he doesn't feel too bad, according to his wife," she said.

with a multi-party system in the republic and on the eve of a plenary session of the Communist Party Central Committee in Moscow.

The legislators and activists here calling for a revision of the party's role and the rise of a multi-party system on a national level also have been emboldened by the legal abolition of guaranteed Communist Party dominance in Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary and Poland.

Although the Central Committee plenum Saturday is scheduled to discuss long-range economic plans, it is also likely to feature a lively debate on what to do about the question of the party's role when it comes up next week at a two-week-long session of the national legislature, the Congress of People's Deputies. The party will also discuss what to do about the challenge to its authority in Lithuania and Estonia.

Some of the leading radicals in the Congress, including human rights activist Andrei Sakharov and historian Yuri Afanasyev, are calling for a brief symbolic strike Monday to dramatize public support for revision of the party's role in public life.

"Unlike in Eastern Europe, it's obvious that we can't mobilize public support for a strike so quickly, but the word is getting out through channels like television for revision of the party's role," Afanasyev said.

Some liberals who generally favor the eventual creation of a multi-party system in the Soviet Union also point out developments in Eastern Europe are a poor analogy with the Soviet Union. Communist Party dominance has existed in Eastern Europe for four decades, not seven as in the Soviet Union, and in those countries there were also many small parties and social movements in place.

perilously close in this quarter and probably going to be perilously close in the first quarter next year.

Indeed, chief economist Allen Sinai at Boston Co. Economic Advisers said the economy might already be in recession and at best was "near and certainly headed" for one.

They and others predicted the Fed would relax its credit policy, but not all analysts shared that view.

"The economy is kind of moving along in second gear," said Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm. "It's not very weak and it's not very strong. I don't think these numbers suggest further easing."

The unemployment rate has not been 5.4 percent since January. The increase came despite the job growth because the civilian labor force — those looking for work and those with jobs — grew by 410,000 to 124.5 million, with 117.7 million of them holding jobs.

The Labor Department said the huge revision of the October job growth figure stemmed from overestimating the number of teaching and other school jobs added this fall. That revision contributed to the reported decline in the number of local government jobs last month.

Elsewhere in the service sector, which has been carrying the economy, wholesale and retail trade posted gains of 18,000 and 33,000 jobs, respectively, health services added 40,000 positions and business services added 13,000 positions.

Flats

Dave Simonson of the DOE's Rocky Flats office said he expected to sign the agreement early next week.

"I think it's a good agreement for all of us. It sets out what will be done. It sets out the regulatory framework for environmental work at Rocky Flats," Simonson said.

The agreement, in draft form until it is finalized after a 60-day public comment period, coordinates state and federal environmental laws to ensure the cleanup of waste at the plant 16 miles northwest of Denver.

It also establishes, for the first time, schedules for the study and cleanup of contaminated sites.

"What we have here is a step forward in this inter-agency agreement, that allows us to put a very strict group of schedules and work plans together so that actual cleanup action can begin almost immediately," Scherer said.

Tom Looby, assistant state health department director, said the agreement resolved a number of issues that have plagued the cleanup of other federal facilities by integrating the responsibilities under the federal Superfund Act and the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act.

In addition, the agreement requires DOE to complete a state hazardous waste laws, he said.

"I think that by virtue of this cooperative approach of recognizing the state's environmental laws, we are in the position of making sure we get the cleanup that's necessary," he said.

The DOE plant manager triggers for nuclear weapons. In June, the FBI raided the plant, looking for evidence of alleged illegal hazardous waste handling. A federal grand jury is weighing the case, but has not issued indictments.

This fall, DOE replaced Rockwell International Corp. with EG&G Inc. as contractor at the plant. EG&G is scheduled to take over in January.

Under the agreement, DOE will investigate the extent of contamination at 178 sites on and off the plant site to evaluate and prioritize cleanup activities.

The agreement stipulates that all of the contaminated sites will be assessed with five years after the agreement is finalized.

DOE also will be required to submit a comprehensive report of spills and incidents from the beginning of plant operations to current time, according to the document.

Under Superfund laws, the EPA must supervise cleanup of mixed-waste contamination and oversee federal law compliance.

A 60-day comment period will begin Dec. 22 to give the public time to offer opinions on the agreement.

Hispanics try to help convicted policeman

MIAMI (AP) — The Hispanic community launched a drive Friday to raise money on behalf of a Colombian-born policeman convicted of killing two black men, while religious leaders declared a weekend of prayer to unify the races.

Black leaders have hailed the manslaughter conviction of Miami Officer William Lozano, 31, as a victory for justice.

But many Hispanics, particularly those in the 200,000-strong Colombian community, say the officer was a scapegoat to racial politics.

The deaths of the two black men touched off three days of rioting in January.

WILLIAM LOZANO
Convicted in 2 black deaths

Colombian-oriented stations WOCN-AM and WKAT-AM have organized drives to help the officer and his family.

Lozano's fearful mother went on the air Friday morning to ask for help in paying legal expenses.

"My son, to everyone who has always known him, wouldn't hurt or kill anyone without reason," she pleaded. "We need money."

WOCN scheduled a radiothon and rally at noon Saturday to raise funds and seek signatures on a petition asking Circuit Judge Joseph Farina to show leniency when he sentences Lozano on Jan. 24.

The Rev. Vane Eubanks, a black minister and president of People United to Lead the Struggle for Equality, said "an impromptu celebration after Thursday's verdict celebrated a victory for justice, not the conviction of Lozano."

"We are not a bloodthirsty lynch mob out to get someone," Eubanks said, adding even an acquittal would have caused a riot because the black community could see the trial was conducted fairly.

Roman Catholic officials, who represent a largely Hispanic following, did not attend the news conference.

However, Mary Ross Augusta, a spokeswoman for the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Miami, said church officials had been in contact with the Community Relations Board and parish priests intended to speak out on the issue of racial unity this weekend.

Lozano and his family are expected to participate in the broadcast, said afternoon news coordinator Fernando Escobar.

To help heal the wound between blacks and Hispanics, a group of Jewish, Protestant and lay religious leaders held a joint news conference declaring a weekend of prayer for the families of Lozano and the shooting victims, Clement Lloyd and Allan Blanchard.

Remarks by some Hispanic leaders, however, suggest they will not be easily appeased.

"We are deeply hurt," said Herando Torres, executive secretary of the Colombian American Political Action Committee. "We are convinced that Officer Lozano was doing his duty offending the community."

Up to 3 inches of snow suspended in parts of northern Arkansas, and authorities said at least seven people died in accidents on snow-covered highways.

Snowfall over western Pennsylvania included 5 inches at Mount Morris and Ohiopyle, 4 inches at Waynesburg and Marianna, and 3 inches at Somerset, Uniontown, Bedford and Johnstown.

Although Colombians have led the drive to support Lozano, many in the larger Cuban-American community see the verdict as a blow to all Hispanics.

At noon, freezing rain extended from southeast Arkansas into southwest Mississippi and over central Tennessee, western North Carolina and southern Virginia.

An unusually early heavy snowfall socked Virginia and nearby states with 7-12 inches of white powder, snarling traffic.

Winter storm blankets mid-Atlantic states

By The Associated Press

A snowstorm covered the mid-Atlantic states and the nation's capital on Thursday, entangling motorists on slush-slicked roads and forcing officials to close schools and offices early.

At 1 p.m. MST the snow cover near Washington included 5 inches at Salisbury, Md., 3 inches at Baltimore and 2 inches at Andrews Air Force Base and Washington National Airport.

The band of snow stretched with sleet and freezing rain stretched from Arkansas through North Carolina and Kentucky and into Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Most accumulations were fewer than 5 inches.

In Washington, the Office of Personnel Management told nearly 400,000 federal workers to go home early, sending waves of employees home at 30-minute intervals throughout the afternoon.

The storm was expected to linger into Saturday and could leave up to 1 foot of snow across much of central Virginia, southern Delaware and Maryland, and 8 inches in the Washington, D.C., area, according to the National Weather Service.

It was the first time the federal government has used the plan, which is designed to help avoid traffic tie-ups.

During evening rush hour.

"Traffic is moving more slowly because people are being cautious, but we're not hearing of any real problems," Tara Hamilton, a spokeswoman for Washington's public works department, said

The snow was the first of the season in Arkansas, where schools closed Friday and utility crews worked to restore electricity to as many as 24,000 people after ice and snow covered highways and powerlines.

Up to 10 inches of snow accumulated in parts of northern Arkansas, and authorities said at least seven people died in accidents on snow-covered highways.

Snowfall over western Pennsylvania included 5 inches at Mount Morris and Ohiopyle, 4 inches at Waynesburg and Marianna, and 3 inches at Somerset, Uniontown, Bedford and Johnstown.

With up to 3 inches covering the Philadelphia area, secondary and elementary public school students were sent home early, as were students in Maryland and Delaware.

In West Virginia, snowfall by midday included 4 inches at Huntington, 3 at Charleston and 3 to 5 inches at Elkins.

In southern New Jersey, midday totals had reached 2 inches at the Atlantic City Airport.

Snow also extended over eastern and southern Ohio, eastern Kentucky, western Tennessee and from northeast to south-central Arkansas and northwest Louisiana.

Snow was also scattered over northwest Iowa.

At noon, freezing rain extended from southeast Arkansas into southwest Mississippi and over central Tennessee, western North Carolina and southern Virginia.

Review finds unfair disability cuts made to many Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government incorrectly cut off cash benefits to some of the most vulnerable of America's poor — the elderly, blind and disabled — in more than half the cases reviewed in a study by the Social Security Administration said Friday.

Eligibility rose from 80,000 in 1987 to 105,000 in 1988.

An internal review of 1,293 suspension cases found that benefits were incorrectly cut off in 54 percent of the cases and that the suspensions were justified but incorrectly recorded in an additional 30 percent of the cases.

The findings suggest more than 10,000 recipients of Supplemental Security Income may have their benefits suspended each year despite being unable to act or unlikely to understand what they must do to continue receiving benefits, an agency report said. It said about 25 percent of those affected are mentally impaired to some degree.

Most of the incorrect suspensions occurred because Social Security employees were not giving recipients adequate time and assistance to provide financial and other information required to demonstrate eligibility, the report said.

Clearly, the agency needs to guard against this lapse in public service, it said.

Social Security spokesman Phil Gambino said the agency was extremely concerned about the findings because they do show we're suspending SSI payments who go to some of the most vulnerable people, the elderly and disabled.

SSI provides a minimum income floor to 4.5 million low-income aged, blind and disabled people. Maximum monthly benefits are $368 for an individual and $553 for a couple this year, rising to $386 and $579, respectively, in 1990.

This can cause very serious problems for these people who are living on very limited incomes," Gambino said.

Social Security's study found that the number of SSI beneficiaries whose benefits were suspended for failure to cooperate with the agency's efforts to monitor eligibility rose from 80,000 in 1987 to 105,000 in 1988.

An internal review of 1,293 suspension cases found that benefits were incorrectly cut off in 54 percent of the cases and that the suspensions were justified but incorrectly recorded in an additional 30 percent of the cases.

Most of the incorrect suspensions occurred because Social Security employees were not giving recipients adequate time and assistance to provide financial and other information required to demonstrate eligibility, the report said.

Social Security spokesman Phil Gambino said the agency was extremely concerned about the findings because they do show we're suspending SSI payments who go to some of the most vulnerable people, the elderly and disabled.

This can cause very serious problems for these people who are living on very limited incomes," Gambino said.

In response to the report, the Social Security Administration in late November issued a directive to field offices cautioning that workers at the Social Security Administration must be careful to make sure that SSI benefits are not improperly suspended for failure to provide information.

Employees were reminded that recipients must be given 30 days to respond to requests for information about their financial status, and that an extension may be granted to those who have difficulty providing requested information.

In addition, the memo said, recipients who have difficulty complying with the request because of advanced age, disability or homelessness should receive a follow-up contact by telephone or in person before benefits are suspended.

Sen. David Pryor, an Arkansas Democrat who chairs the Senate Special Committee on Aging, said the study indicated many of those whose benefits were cut off were too frail to be able to comply with SSA's requests without the help of a field worker — help which never arrived.

"When an SSI recipient is cut off, it can lead to homelessness, starvation or exploitation," Pryor said.

The study cited heavy workloads at the Social Security Administration.

Financier gets fraud sentence

NEW YORK (AP) — An Argentine financier who produced the Oscar-winning film "The Official Story" was sentenced Friday to seven years in prison for his role in a $38 million bank fraud.

CORRECTION

On page 17 of this week's sale circular the photo for the $15.99 3-piece snack tray is incorrect. We are sorry for any inconvenience this may have caused.

Jacobo Finkelstein, 51, of Buenos Aires and New York, also was ordered to pay back $34.7 million even though he claims he has no assets remaining.

Finkelstein pleaded guilty Aug. 17 to five counts of conspiracy and bank fraud.

He admitted to two schemes which defrauded the Central National Bank of New York of $38 million.

Finkelstein was the 99 percent owner of the federally insured bank, which was closed and placed into receivership in September 1987.

At sentencing, U.S. District Judge Michael M. Mukasey attached the $34.7 million restitution as a condition to three years probation.

Bush planning to attend drug summit despite Colombian violence

DENVER (AP) — President Bush has shown no hesitation about attending an anti-drug summit in Colombia in February, but recent violence there is causing concern among top advisers. Federal drug policy director William Bennett said Friday.

Bennett spoke to reporters as he accompanied Bush on a three-state, two-day trip in which the president was mixing anti-drug speeches with Republican fund-raising.

"You have to be concerned with everybody's safety in Colombia these days. It's really very rough," Bennett said. Violence there could delay the summit, or even bring about a new location for it, but "the burden of proof is still on those who would argue that you shouldn't go," he said.

The president was in Denver to take part in an anti-drug rally with members of the Denver Broncos football team and to speak at a fund-raiser for Republican Rep. Hank Brown who is seeking the Senate seat being vacated by Republican Sen. William Armstrong.

Bush told his GOP audience that when Congress reconvenes next month one of the "top items on my agenda" would be a renewed effort to reduce the capital gains tax.

"After the fund-raiser, Bush headed to Denver's John F. Kennedy High School for remarks encouraging students to volunteer their own ideas on ways to fight the drug war.

"You live in tough times — in some ways much more complicated than the world I knew when I was your age," he said.

"That is why we want your help, advance team would go there over the next few days "to get our own eyes and ears down there and evaluate the situation."

A bomb killed two police officers in Colombia on Thursday, and the day before a dramatic blast at secret police headquarters in Bogota killed 52 persons and wounded hundreds more.

Asked why Bush was determined to go to violence-torn Colombia, Bennett said the visit was being planned by President Virgilio Barco "wants him to."

Washington (AP) — The Bush administration is actively reviewing proposals to relax the ban on sale of high technology exports to Warsaw Pact countries, some of whom may help them out of the hands of their Communist neighbors.

Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher said Friday.

Mosbacher said the review of current controls on high-technology products, which should result in proposals for change by April, is a reflection of the sweeping changes occurring in the Communist bloc.

"Everybody is discussing what we should be doing about Eastern Europe, whether it is politically, economically or technologically," he said.

Mosbacher indicated that Hungary and Poland could be two of the major beneficiaries of such a change. He said those two countries were discussing with U.S. officials how to prevent the transfer of military strategic items to neighboring Communist bloc countries.

"Hungary and Poland have talked about giving us additional assurances about what they are doing with high technology," Mosbacher said.

A change in U.S. restrictions, still under discussion in several government agencies, would be designed to encourage the political liberalization in Eastern Europe and to deal with heavy pressure from U.S. allies seeking an easing of export controls to the Soviet bloc.

U.S. insistence until now on preserving the controls — imposed for nearly 40 years by the 17-nation Coordinating Committee on Multilateral Arms Trades, COCOM — has been a sticking point in relations between the Bush administration and its allies.

"We will re-look at the (COCOM) levels and probably change the level of some things approved for trans-shipment to the Eastern bloc, Mosbacher said earlier in an interview taped for public television's American Interests program.

The United States is considering "a shortening of the list (of restricted items) to those things which are truly important and essential," he said.

"The shortening will be substantial, that would be our recommendation," said Mosbacher.

Mosbacher said a final administration decision would be made in time to present proposals at a meeting of COCOM scheduled for April in Paris. COCOM consists of the 15 NATO nations, Japan and Australia.

The administration has been split during the debate over the liberalization between hardliners, such as Defense Secretary Dick Cheney who opposes the easing for national security reasons, and others, such as Mosbacher who deals not only with U.S. allies but also American businesses.

Mosbacher said countries such as Poland and Hungary have promised to allow monitoring to make sure Western technology exports are not being diverted to other countries.

"Those countries who have talked to us about on-site inspections, they're not doing trans-shipment from their country to another country. I think we're going to get a lot better treatment," he said.

3 murder-suicides result in 12 deaths in one day Guns turned on families cause horror

SPANAWAY, Wash. (AP) — A gunman described in a psychological examination as unlikely to harm his ex-wife burst into her house early Friday and killed her, two daughters and her new husband before killing himself.

Neighbors identified the man, who left a note telling his parents he was "sorry for what he had to do," as Ronald Richard Burris, 45.

The others, all shot to death, included his ex-wife Shirley, 42, his 14- and 12-year-old daughters, Vicki Marie Woody, 14, and Anne Marie Woody, 6, and Shirley Woody's husband, Robert James Woody. No ages were available for the adults.

Police declined to confirm the identities pending notification of relatives.

It was one of three murder-suicides reported around the nation on Friday in which 12 people died.

In Belleville, Ill., a man identified as 48-year-old Kurt Steibel shot and killed his wife, daughter and 1-year-old grandson, then shot at firefighters before committing suicide by re-entering his burning home, authorities said.

After firefighters recovered Steibel's body, they found the bodies of his wife, Carolyn, and his daughter Cindy Towley, whose ages were unavailable, and his grandson, Eric Towley, 8.

Police said they had been shot to death. Burris said they hadn't determined a motive.

In Buxton, N.D., authorities said farmer Wayne Nygaard, 42, apparently shot his wife, Carol, and their 11-year-old daughter, Kate, before turning the gun on himself. The bodies were found by the couple's 17-year-old son, authorities did not name a motive.

In the Washington state case, authorities said Burris was armed with a handgun and a shotgun.

"We have seasoned firefighters who were disturbed at what they found," Fire District Capt. Bruce Carpenter said of the scene.

"We don't know for sure why he did it, except here you have an ex-husband and a divorce that wasn't the nicest in the world," Curt Benson, spokesman for the Pierce County Sheriff's Department, said as he stood on the rainsoaked, tree-lined street outside the home.

Divorce and child custody and support records, along with a 1988 court order barring Burris from contact with his ex-family, show a 19-year marriage that broke up in 1987 after Shirley Burris accused her husband of sexually molesting their daughters.

The accusation, investigated by state child protective workers, did not result in criminal charges against Burris, according to records on file at the Pierce County Clerk's office in nearby Tacoma.

In a lawsuit, which was a civilian logistics supply official at nearby McChord Air Force Base, denied the allegations in the divorce and custody papers, calling them "a willful and malevolent charge."

His ex-wife later called him "so anti-mother that the girls resent it." That comment was made in a sworn statement used to uphold a February 1988 restraining order barring Burris from contact with his daughters and living within two miles of his ex-wife's home.

A psychological examination in September 1988 found that if Burris was "seriously inclined to do her harm, he would already have done so," according to custody dispute records, Burris submitted to the exam as a condition for getting the restraining order lifted.

Burris said Burris awoke his victims when he smashed through a sliding glass door at the rear of the house and shot Woody in the couple's bedroom as he called sheriff's deputies to report the break-in.

When deputies arrived minutes later, about 6:12 a.m. MST, they found Burris' body in a living room where he had committed suicide.

Burris said.

Quayle says Soviet threat diminishes

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Vice President Quayle said Friday that the Soviet military threat means the military threat from the Soviet Union has diminished, but that the Bush administration will resist any effort to make "radical" reductions in the U.S. military budget.

Quayle, who has been one of the administration's leading skeptics concerning change in Soviet foreign policy, said the White House will submit to Congress in January a four-point assessment of the Soviet military threat showing "it is not what it has been in the past."

He also said "the idea that somehow conservatives are upset" with the outcome of the Malta summit between President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev "is simply not true."

In a luncheon interview with editors and reporters at The Washington Post, Quayle reiterated his view that the Soviet support for Nicaragua and Cuba remains "one of the main problems we still have" with Moscow. But he said there is a diminished threat from Soviet military forces in Europe.

"The Soviet Union has to have cooperation from Eastern Europe in any kind of attack that they would impose against the West," Quayle said. "If such events there, it's less, less formidable than it was a year ago or even six months ago."

"Looking down the road," he said, "we're going to have fewer people in the armed forces, it will be a smaller force structure." Echoing a recent statement by Bush, the vice president ruled out any quick "peace dividend" in military spending, saying that "there will be some that will want perhaps to make radical defense reductions and that would be imprudent, it would be wrong, something the president and this administration will resist."

Quayle added, "One of the challenges that we will have is how do you bottom out — hold a floor on defense spending because I know many in Congress will want to go beyond that." He urged Congress not to slash military spending before a Conventional Forces in Europe pact is reached, perhaps as soon as next year.

While Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, a Mississippi Democrat who heads the House Veterans Affairs Committee, called the reorganization a smart move, others on Capitol Hill were more skeptical.

A spokesman for Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said the Texas Democrat would want "much stronger assurances than he's gotten that this will not make it harder for Texas veterans to receive the medical care they earned in service to their country."

Britain tests nuclear weapon in Nevada

PAHUTE MESA, Nev. (AP) — A British nuclear weapon was detonated under the Nevada desert Friday, the Energy Department said.

The 8-ton MST blast caused ripple motions in high-rise buildings in Las Vegas, 105 miles away.

It registered 5.4 on the Richter scale at the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo.

VA to merge 7 regional offices into 4

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Veterans Affairs Department, in an attempt to consolidate its services, is merging seven regional medical offices into four, with plans to close centers in five cities and create new headquarters in Jackson, Miss., and Baltimore, officials said Friday.

A spokesman Don Smith said the VA is merging seven regional offices located in Dallas, Albany, N.Y., Durham, N.C., Gainesville, Fla., and St. Louis.

Ann Arbor, Mich., and San Francisco would keep their medical center headquarters, with Ann Arbor serving the Midwest and San Francisco the West, while new centers would be established in Baltimore to serve the Northeast and in Jackson to serve the Sun Belt, Smith said.

Smith said Veterans Secretary Edward J. Derwinski hopes to have the plan in place by May 1990. Derwinski also wants to close the VA's 27 district medical offices around the country.

The group placed the grenade by a tree and on the evening of Jan. 3, 1986, David Inscore threw it into their campfire, the documents said.

The primer detonated while the campers hid behind their vehicles, leading them to believe the grenade had exploded. When they gathered around the fire the weapon exploded a second time, this time more violently, injuring all seven of the campers.

U.S. not responsible for exploded grenade

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal judge has dismissed a lawsuit brought against the U.S. government by five campers injured when a hand grenade exploded in their campfire in the southern Utah desert.

In a ruling released Thursday, U.S. District Judge David Sam found the campers cannot sue the government for injuries because they intentionally threw the weapon

Injured bears great outdoors again

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A bear that suffered severe electrical burns when it toppled off a utility pole in spectacular explosion of sparks has been allowed outdoors with her cub for the first time since their capture in August.

The two will winter in an outdoor enclosure at the Rio Grande Zoo — out of sight of the public to minimize human contact — after which state game officers intend to release them back to the wild.

The cub was first to step outside. After about 15 minutes it huddled to a cottonwood in the enclosure and began climbing the tree.

The mother bear has gained 80 pounds since Aug. 14, when she fell, trailing smoke, from the 25-foot pole in an Albuquerque neighborhood. She had been hit by two tranquillizer darts fired by state game officers and suffered severe burns from 7,200 volts she received.

Communists take minority in Czech cabinet

PRAGUE (Czechoslovakia) (AP) — Communist leaders on Friday offered to surrender their shaky control over the government for the first time since 1948 and accept a minority role in a coalition Cabinet.

New Communist Premier Marian Calfa sat down with members of the opposition and the four small official parties permitted in Czechoslovakia to discuss the future of the government.

The talks followed weeks of historic concessions by the Communists to the nation's emboldened opposition movement, which has filled the streets with pro-democracy protesters and has threatened a general strike Monday unless reforms are made.

In other developments in Czechoslovakia on Friday:

- The republic of Slovakia's Communist premier, Pavel Hrivnak, and his entire 15-member Cabinet resigned or were fired, the state news agency CTK said.
- Hard-line Communist

MARIAN CALFA
Negotiating with opposition President Gustav Husak issued an amnesty aimed at meeting opposition demands to release all political prisoners. Federal prosecutor Jan Pjeseak resigned.

- Foreign Minister Jaromir Johannes asked the government to replace 21 of the country's ambassadors.
- Calfa, the Communist tapped to form the government after Premier Ladislav Adamec resigned Thursday, wants a government consisting half of members of all political parties — including the Communists — and half of people with no party affiliation, government spokesman Marcel Jansen said.
- The Communist Party "is convinced that the most important thing is that they are competent and professional," party spokesman Josef Hora said. "The political affiliation is only secondary."
- Jansen said the round-table talks might take some time and the government probably won't be named until early next week.
- A government named Dec. 3 by Adamec included only five non-Communists in a 21-member Cabinet and left Communists in control of all key ministries. The announcement prompted widespread outrage and a new round of demonstrations.

The opposition threatened a general strike on Monday if the government refused to name a new Cabinet by Sunday.

Demands mounted all week for more genuine power-sharing, with the small People's Party, once a docile ally of the Communists but now more outspoken, proposing the 50-50 divide between party and non-party members.

Besides the Communists, the People's Party and the Socialist party are permitted in the Czech lands, and the Freedom and Renewal parties in Slovakia.

People's Party chief Josef Bartonek said his party backs the opposition candidate for first deputy premier, Jan Carnogursky, a Slovak lawyer and Roman Catholic activist.

Porn fans 'punished'

BEIJING (AP) — Authorities have "punished" nearly 11,000 people in Beijing since October in an anti-vice campaign against the "six evils," a newspaper reported Friday.

The Legal Daily quoted the municipal government as saying 10,964 people had been punished and it had seized 50,000 pornographic books, 1,630 videotapes, 1,203 gambling implements and the equivalent of $73,000 in gambling money.

The campaign is part of the conservative leadership's drive against Western tendencies, and has targeted the "six evils" — prostitution, gambling, drugs, pornography, superstition and the selling of women and children.

The report did not say how many of those "punished" were arrested, but noted that 40 percent were under the age of 25 "which means the health of the youth is being seriously corroded."

It said prostitution, gambling and pornography were the three most common vices in Beijing and that some managers, factory directors and leaders "are shielding, conniving at and sometimes even organizing" illegal activities.

Soviets reactivate space lab

MOSCOW (AP) — Cosmonauts repositioned a module at their Mir space station as they prepared to reactivate the laboratory and experiments on board Mir, the official news agency said.

The module was separated from the space station and redocked at an airlock in maneuvers performed by engineers at the Mission Control Center and aboard the space station by cosmonauts.

resupply module will considerably improve the working conditions and life of the cosmonauts and expand possibilities for research and experiments on board Mir, the official news agency said.

The module was separated from the space station and redocked at an airlock in maneuvers performed by engineers at the Mission Control Center and aboard the space station by cosmonauts.

AROUND THE VALLEY

Area labor force takes usual post-harvest dip

By The Times-News and Associated Press

TWIN FALLS—The end of the harvest season brought predictable results to the Magic Valley's workers, but unemployment levels continued to be lower than last year.

November's 4.5 percent unemployment rate "does not change the low unemployment seen during this fall season," Job Service Analyst Len McDonald said. "Our rate was slightly over one full percentage point less than last year's level."

The labor force—the number of people employed—in Twin Falls, Jerome and Gooding counties fell 2,050 people from October to November.

"A large majority of those people were working temporarily on local farms helping with harvest activities," McDonald said. The Magic Valley labor force normally declines after harvest and when food processors start cutting back.

According to Department of Employment statistics, 35,610 people were working and about 1,500 were unemployed in the three-county area that the department defines as the Magic Valley.

Magic Valley's 4.5 percent November unemployment rate compares well with 5.6 percent in November 1988. October's 4.3 percent rate was the lowest rate since 1975. Idaho's seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate held steady at a record-low 4.7 percent in November, the third straight month the jobless rate has been below 5 percent.

Absent a major job disruption this month, it appeared the average unemployment rate for the year would be well below the 5.9 percent posted in 1988 and approaching the lows during the boom years of the late 1970s.

The employment outlook underscored the continued strength of the state's economy, which is producing a record cash surplus of more than $100 million in state government coffers. Growth in the total labor force bolstered the state's financial prospects.

The continuing strong labor picture, however, has prompted some state officials to warn of an impending shortage of qualified workers. Employment Director Julie Kilgrow said the state's 25 percent high school drop-out rate will become a critical factor in Idaho's future economic vitality.

The Department of Employment reported Friday that a substantial increase of 3,700 jobs from October was offset by a jump in the number of letters to pursue the civilian work force over 480,000 for the first time in six months.

"Activity increased in the retail trade sector, particularly the general merchandise, apparel and miscellaneous stores," analysts said.

The 4.7 percent rate was three tenths of a point below the rate in November 1988. That continues a streak of 31 straight months that current unemployment rates have run below year-earlier levels.

The Idaho rate was also three quarters of a point below the national average, which jumped a notch to 5.4 percent as manufacturing employment fell for the eighth consecutive month.

Secretary of State Pete T. Cenarrusa will act as committee chairman. Cenarrusa said a major focus of Smysler's campaign will be his strong support for the death penalty.

2 men arrested separately on drug-related charges

TWIN FALLS—Two California men were arrested separately on drug-related charges on Thursday.

An Idaho State Police officer pulled over Duke R. Hoagland, 35, of Arcata, Calif., for speeding on U.S. Highway 93 at 10:05 a.m. The officer searched the vehicle and found $12,600, as well as marijuana and cocaine, according to court papers.

Hoagland was charged with felony possession of cocaine, misdemeanor counts of possession of marijuana and having an expired license.

The state Bureau of Narcotics is assisting in the investigation, and Merrill Kelley, agent-in-charge at the Twin Falls office, said the substances are still being weighed.

At 7 p.m. Thursday, a state police officer patrolling Highway 93 pulled over John E. Chestnut, 38, of Sacramento. The officer found methamphetamine in the car, court papers said.

Chestnut was charged with felony possession of methamphetamine, and two misdemeanor counts: driving under the influence of drugs and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Kelly said the methamphetamine is still being weighed.

The jail employee was treated at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, papers say.

A Twin Falls County sheriff's deputy followed a suspicious car around midnight on Thursday, and finally pulled it over, papers said.

The driver, Pamela Sue Bass, 19, was taken to the county jail and booked on charges of not having insurance and illegal possession and consumption of beer, court papers said. She resisted giving the jail employee some of her possessions and bit the employee, court papers said.

The 7-Eleven stores nationwide are participating by giving out ribbons from Thanksgiving through New Year's. Kehoe said 180,000 ribbons to other businesses that in turn pass out the ribbons to customers and employees, Kehoe said.

Gov. Cecil Andrus depicts the wide eyes through which some have viewed the state's budget surplus

Andrus declares state agricultural economy 'on the mend'

By MICHELLE COLE Times-News writer

BURLEY—In a speech peppered with potato jokes, Gov. Cecil Andrus declared the state's agricultural economy "on the mend" Friday.

The governor told a Burley business group that he "talked to a fellow just the other day who was able to sum up in just a few words the state of Idaho agriculture."

He said "AW sheeks, if I can't struggle by on 59 spuds, I guess I just can't make it."

The anecdote drew knowing laughs from the audience.

"The economy's upturn has done more than provide Idaho with a state budget surplus, Andrus said. More than a billion dollars have been added to Idaho's total payroll. And, he said, "that rolls down the main streets of Idaho."

But, during a question and answer period following the governor's remarks, one businessman told the governor that rural towns such as Burley aren't responding quite as well as the state's bigger cities. "What are you going to do to help?" the businessman asked.

"No, we're not where we want to be," Andrus responded. "But we're in a better place than we were."

He cited Twin Falls, Jerome and Burley as

Body found near Paul was disemboweled, dismembered

By DONNA SCHORZMAN Times-News correspondent

RUPERT—The body of an infant found burned last month near Paul had been partly disemboweled and dismembered, a county official said.

Minidoka County Prosecuting Attorney Charles Creason said Friday the cause of Baby X has some "disturbing" aspects. "The condition of the body suggests that it was not a simple case of child abandonment," Creason said, partly due to little evidence of remains of several internal organs. Creason refused to speculate whether the death was part of a satanic ritual, saying no other evidence at the scene indicated that.

The burned body of Baby X was found in a metal container Nov. 17 just south of the Minidoka County Landfill by residents who were 4-wheeling in the area.

The baby probably had been one or two weeks old and was a white or light pigmented Hispanic female, Creason said recent analysis shows.

Officials have fixed the time of death somewhere between Nov. 10-17 but are not sure of the cause, although it probably wasn't from burning, Creason said, because her throat showed no carbon traces.

It also appears she was disemboweled before being burned, since no traces of her organs were found.

The baby died about eight hours before the burning and appeared to be a full-term birth as determined through tests on her bones.

One arm and both feet were removed from the body after burning, Creason said. "The ligaments show it was probably not done by animals," he said. No knife marks were found on the body, but Creason said the limbs may have been removed by manipulation of the joints.

No satanic symbols, altars or markings were found near the body, Creason said. He said literature he's been reading on Satanic killing indicates human sacrifices are part of cult worship but that the methods follow no pattern.

He also said talks with people in the area believed to be involved in Satan worship have produced "no hot leads."

The case will be difficult to solve because no child has been reported missing, Creason said. "The mere fact that the child has been found and nobody claims to have lost a child creates a very difficult trail to follow," Creason said.

The body is still undergoing laboratory tests and hospital records are being checked to help of tracing the baby girl, Creason said. The metal container and other pieces of physical evidence are being tested for fingerprints. "There were several things found that may be helpful that do subject themselves to tracing," Creason said.

No effort was made to hide the body after the burning, Creason said. Investigators don't know where the baby was killed but do know that the fire was in the trail where the container was found and that the fire was started with an accelerant such as gasoline, Creason said.

Anyone with information of activity in the area during the time period in question should call Minidoka County Prosecuting Attorney Charles Creason. The caller can remain anonymous and a $1,000 reward is offered for information that may help solve the case.

He said rumors that the baby was shot in the head are false. The damage to the skull was due to the heat of the fire, and not a gunshot wound.

Rupert Council approves beer consumption in some parks

By JANE BYWATER Times-News correspondent

RUPERT—Beer can now legally be consumed in some city parks. The City Council passed a resolution Thursday allowing beer in Big Valley Park and the ball field across from Neptune Park.

Although the council directed City Attorney Don Chisholm to draft a proposed ordinance on the resolution, Mayor Bill Whitton said after the meeting he hopes the change will remain as a resolution.

An ordinance requires a long process of public review, while city councils can pass resolutions without public review.

The resolution allows the city to respond to potential problems more quickly, Whitton said. "If we start having problems then it will be repaired in a matter of days," he said. "I think we'll probably leave it in resolution form."

The resolution allows beer to be consumed during exhibition and tournament softball games at Big Valley Park ball field with the approval of the parks director. Currently, beer is allowed only at Neptune Park.

In both parks, a $50 cleanup deposit will be assessed and, should it be necessary, the city will deduct $10 an hour if city workers have to clean after an event.

Councilman Joel Rogers, who proposed a different plan at last month's meeting, was the only council member to vote against the motion. He said after the meeting he was concerned about the lack of control. His proposal would have required permission for all drinking of alcohol in all city parks.

He also said he was concerned that drinking was being confined to just one area of town, where the two parks are located. "The only parks that allow beer consumption are on the south side of the railroad tracks. I can't go along with that," he said.

Softball league members and area businessmen told the council in June they wanted permission to drink beer during games. The league said members voted to play in Burley due to the ban and business owners said the ban had hurt their businesses.

"The merchants lost business, and the Men's Softball League want a resolution before they will agree to come back," Whitton said.

Some league members were bitter about the city's ban on beer drinking in the parks last summer, he said. They believed they had a "handshake agreement" with the city that drinking would be allowed during games as long as it didn't create problems.

Whitton said the potential for problems are even less than in the past because parks are better lighted and parallel and some

Officials discuss INEL's 5-year cleanup plans

By S. S. NORKKENTVED Times-News writer

IDAHO FALLS—State and federal officials are looking into the future of cleaning up past mistakes at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

A group of state regulators and legislators met with Energy Department officials and INEL contractors in Idaho Falls Thursday to discuss the site's five-year cleanup plans.

Though most of the comments were highly technical, the spirit of the cooperation was plain. It was the state's displeasure with the omission of one facility at the site.

State officials all expressed concern that the Naval Reactors Facility was not included in the INEL plan.

"We shouldn't have to deal with two separate entities," Anderson said. "Much of the waste to be cleaned up was buried between 1952 and 1970, some of it with little or no record-keeping."

Of the INEL facilities included in INEL's five-year plan, the "Federal" Environmental Restoration and Waste Management Facility Plan, buried waste in the Radioactive Waste Management Complex is the state's No. 1 priority, Hill said.

"We want to accelerate that particular project of waste removal," he said.

Funding laid out by the five-year plan needs to be flexible enough to allow adequate money to clean up the radioactive waste complex, Lance Nielsen of the state and a seat on the budget-writing Senate Finance Committee. Crapp said those two positions would not be filled until after the Legislature convenes Jan. 8.

Tominga said it was a "close vote" between Beck and Ricks.

The Idaho Transportation Board has placed Kiebert on administrative leave without pay pending resolution of the charges, but Andrus said he would have fired Kiebert if the decision had been his.

POCATELLO — Ada County Republican Rod Beck, a three-term member of the Idaho Senate, has been picked as that chamber's GOP floor leader, replacing gubernatorial contender Roger Fairchild of Fruitland.

As majority caucus chairman, Tominga's name was bandied about as someone who may move up in Republican Party leadership. He was also mentioned as a contender for the chairmanship of the Senate's Agriculture Committee.

Fairchild, in his fifth term in the state Senate, announced this fall that he would resign Jan. 10 to devote full time to his campaign for the Republican nomination to challenge Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus next year.

Beck, a real estate broker, said he believed he could fill in easily with the style of the current GOP leadership team, claiming his election as majority leader "continues the tradition of our party in seeking regional balance."

Ms. Gilbert claimed Friday that Kiebert was "abandoned on the altar of political ambition by the governor he so faithfully served."

Beck captured the No. 2 leadership spot on the second ballot Friday from among the Senate's Republican majority during a party caucus in Pocatello.

"There was no domino affect," Tominga said during a telephone interview after the vote late Friday.

Beck's elevation opens the chairmanship of the Senate Human Resources Committee and a seat on the budget-writing Senate Finance Committee. Crapp said those two positions would not be filled until after the Legislature convenes Jan. 8.

"It is a sad day in Idaho when the Bill of Rights no longer applies to a public employee," she said, contending Kiebert has been "tried, convicted and executed by the media and the governor even before the first witness has been called."

Association of Commerce, Industry calls for educational changes

BOISE (AP) — Changes are needed in Idaho's educational system, the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry says.

"While we believe that Idaho's system is basically a good one, we also maintain that it must change to meet the increasing demands of a more complex society," association spokesmen said at a news conference Friday afternoon.

"IACA supports education proposals that set standards for accountability at the school level."

IACI said it will encourage new and creative methods of dealing with solid waste, and will work for legislation setting criteria for identifying the responsible party of hazardous substance spill

Farmers want more time to comply with new rules controlling chemicals

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Eastern Idaho farmers are asking state Agriculture Department officials to give them more time to comply with new regulations on controlling chemicals used in irrigation.

"You guys are undoubtedly working for us. Let's fix the time schedule so it's feasible," Dale Jensen of Idaho Falls said about the regulations. They will be reviewed before being signed by Agriculture Director Dick Rush early next year.

IACI represents much of the state's industry and commerce. It presented its legislative agenda on Friday, a month before the 1990 Legislature convenes.

Those concepts can include the publication of test scores by school, consolidation of school systems, open-enrollment and alternative certification of teachers.

At a hearing Thursday night in Idaho Falls, farmers said they need more time to get equipment installed so they can conform to the chemical regulations stated to go into effect early next year.

At a hearing Thursday night in Idaho Falls, farmers said they need more time to get equipment installed so they can conform to the chemical regulations stated to go into effect early next year.

Cheminists who can be landowners, hired workers or chemical dealers — will be responsible for maintaining the equipment. Areas near public facilities or residential property that are chemigated with Category 1 pesticides, the most toxic, will have to be posted with warning signs in English and Spanish.

"In order to meet these future needs, IACA has determined that the emphasis must take place at the school level if improvement is to occur," the association said.

Gene Hill, chief executive officer for Idaho for US West Communications, served as chairman of IACA's Education Committee.

IACI said it will oppose efforts to force employers to offer health care benefits.

Under the regulations, farmers will have to install valves or switches to control the flow of chemicals into irrigation systems. Irrigation systems cannot be connected to domestic water supplies unless a device is installed to keep the farm water from flowing back into the culinary system.

"The city intends to recruit support from nearby towns such as Chubbuck."

He said the Education Committee will work to identify elements necessary to create "effective and acceptable standards of measurement."

To environmental law, the Legislature passed a chemical law effective July 1. It's designed to prevent fertilizers and pesticides from entering groundwater at levels dangerous to people who might use the water for drinking.

In eastern Idaho, farmers are primarily concerned about the chemical regulation because of all the nitrogen that potato farmers apply to their fields through irrigation systems. The state's chemical rules include fertilizers as well as pesticides.

Awe demonstrated equipment that would cost about $600, but the cost and number of devices needed will vary.

Councilman doesn't think just a handful ride bus INEL

POCATELLO (AP) — Pocatello City Council members have gone on record against Greyhound Bus Line's proposal to drop its line to Burley, saying it cuts off their city from the rest of the state.

"I think we have little choice but to intervene in this case because if service is dropped, it is going to hurt not only Pocatello, but most of east Idaho," Mayor Dick Finlayson said.

Somehow I have a little trouble believing fewer than two people a day are on that bus headed for Pocatello," Councilman Earl Pond said.

State lags behind others in West; Boise paces state

BOISE (AP) — Wages in Idaho were the lowest of any western state last year, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, but workers in Boise did better than the statewide average.

Of the eight western states included in the Bureau of Labor Statistics report, Alaska had the highest average annual wages at $28,033, California was second with $24,124.

But Ms. Salowsky acknowledged that the figures can be misleading.

"This (report) does not mention what you can buy with your money," she said.

DOE's overall progress on INEL, he said.

Annual pay in Idaho for 1988 was $17,648, up 3.4 percent from the year before. But Boise wages averaged $20,238, up 4.5 percent from 1987.

The five remaining western states, in order, were Washington, $20,806; Nevada, $20,556; Hawaii, $20,444; Arizona, $20,333; and Oregon, $19,637.

"In addition, she said, the figures "cannot represent the quality of life in any area."

"Department headquarters is trying to figure that out," said Bill Lutren of the Energy Department.

DOE's overall progress on INEL, he said.

The city intends to recruit support from nearby towns such as Chubbuck.

"Until our office has received the statistics and analyzed them, there's not much I can really say," Hawkins said.

"The national average for annual wages in 1988 was $21,871."

"If not fully funded," Hill said, "what can we expect will drop off the list?"

DOE's overall progress on INEL, he said.

Catholic politicians take sides on bishops' abortion strategy

By The Associated Press

The abortion issue increasingly is being felt by Catholic politicians straddling the divide between constituent and conscience as they struggle to mind their church and uphold their oaths of office.

"When I made this decision, I knew the church wasn't going to stand up and applaud," said New York Assemblyman Herman Farrell, who first took a stand in favor of legalized abortions in 1974. "I'm surprised that it took them so long to bring some of this stuff up."

Some of "this stuff" includes a California legislator being refused Communion, banishment from a Rhode Island church newspaper for politicians who won't take an anti-abortion oath, a statement from the bishop's conference last month that for Catholics there is no choice.

But the crackdown is a relief for many Catholic lawmakers who resent colleagues who dissent from the church's teaching on abortion. "If prominent Catholic (politicians) in Congress were to support the pro-life cause it would certainly prevail," said U.S. Rep. Henry Hyde-R-Ill.

"They should have done this a long time ago," said state Rep. Ed Bybee of Hawaii.

Leaders of the 53 million-member church last month declared "no Catholic can responsibly take a 'pro-choice' stand," and said Catholic legislators have a special moral responsibility to work for legislation limiting legalized abortion. This came soon after the Supreme Court gave legislatures greater authority in regulating abortions.

In a special California state Senate election Tuesday, Lucy Killen won a narrow victory despite being barred by San Diego Bishop Leo T. Maher from receiving Communion because of her pro-choice campaign commercials.

Her opponent, Freshman Assemblywoman Carol Bentley, conceded Wednesday she had been defeated by 1,528 votes. Although 2,500 to 3,000 absentee ballots remained to be counted, Bentley said she didn't think they would make a difference.

"It's a stunning victory, a real upset," and it's on the issue of abortion that she won," said Kate Michelman, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League. "The bishop shot himself in the foot," Michelman said. "This is not the role for religion. They should not be getting involved in politics."

Montana's bishops have asked Catholic politicians not to publicly contradict the church on abortion, and two officials who spoke at an abortion rights rally have been called on the carpet. And in Providence, R.I., the diocesan newspaper told politicians they had to sign a pledge supporting a constitutional amendment against abortion if they wanted to advertise holiday greetings.

"My religion will not interfere with what I perceive to be my role in government," said state Sen. Vincent Fumo of Philadelphia. "I did not take the oath as an ambassador for the Catholic Church."

Utah State Rep. Frank Pignelli of Salt Lake City said the church's justification that no abortions are possible puts officials in a no-win situation.

"What position does a Catholic take. If a bill comes up that prohibits abortion except if the mother's life is threatened and you vote for it, you are perceived as taking a pro-abortion stance. Catholic legislators have one hell of a decision before them," he said.

Minnesota state Sen. Gene Waldorf expressed skepticism over the attacks on the bishops' stand. "I never heard anything about separation of church and state when the bishops were talking about the poor and the hungry. It's only when they talk about abortion," Waldorf said.

Still, many politicians said the bishops' strategy will backfire if they keep on sanctioning. "I think they will be very effective in getting Catholic legislators away from the Communion rail. As political strategists, they leave a great deal to be desired," said Idaho state Sen. Mike Blackbird.

Mormon leaders speak of historic Christmas

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The "shackles of enslavement" are falling from much of the communist world, evidence that as the Christmas season approaches the spirit of Jesus Christ is keeping watch over the Earth, Mormon Church leaders say.

In comments Sunday on behalf of the church's ruling First Presidency, Gordon B. Hinckley, first counselor to President Ezra Taft Benson, told the world's 6.7 million Mormons that "not in a long while has there been a Christmas quite comparable to this. "I am convinced the spirit of Christ is brooding over much the Earth," Hinckley said during the church leadership's annual Christmas devotion. "We have witnessed in the past few months miracles undreamed of only a short time ago. "The shackles of enslavement are falling. The ruthless-atheism that in some areas has hung as a cloud of darkness for decades is now being dissipated," he added.

Changes in Eastern Europe are a "Christmas present of gigantic proportions to millions who have been under the yoke of bondage," Hinckley said.

Reminding Mormons that America is celebrating the 200th anniversary of its Bill of Rights, he said the spirit of Christ now is creating another bill of rights "over great areas of Europe and millions of people. "Like a glorious sunburst through dark clouds," there is emerging freedom of worship, freedom of assembly, freedom of expression, freedom to choose those who will govern," Hinckley said.

In rejoicing over the loosening of the communist world's bonds, believers should not forget the true meaning of Christmas — the birth of the Savior of mankind.

Sampson wins bull riding national finals

YAS VEGAS (AP) — Charles Sampson, who developed a yen for riding as a youngster in the tough Watts section of Los Angeles, won the bull riding competition Friday night in the seventh round of the National Finals Rodeo.

Sampson, who has been battered by rodeo's roughest event, finished with a score of 81. Marty Starnart of Sanger, Calif., was second with a score of 80. Cody Lambert of Henrietta, Texas, was third with 79.

ISU names its lawyer as interim athletic director

The Times-News

POCATELLO — Idaho State University's lawyer has been named the school's interim athletic director.

Kelley Wilbank, a Pocatello attorney who serves as counsel for ISU and various departments within the university, was named Friday as temporary replacement for Tom Jewell, who resigned Wednesday. Wilbank will serve as athletic director until a permanent replacement is named.

Wilbank said his tenure would be strictly temporary.

"I'm taking an assignment for a short period of time — until we run a credible and effective search," he said. "I'm not a candidate."

Jewell, who has been ISU's A.D. for the past 3½ years, announced his resignation earlier in the week, citing the poor performance of the school's football and basketball teams during his tenure.

Wilbank, who served as the athletic department lawyer among his other assignments, said he's familiar with the day-to-day operation of the department.

Smith stays with Idaho

MOSCOW (AP) — First-year University of Idaho football coach John L. Smith has turned down a confidential offer from New Mexico State University, although the salary reportedly was double his present income at Idaho.

Smith announced Friday he was not ready to leave his Big Sky Conference championship Vandal job for the Las Cruces, N.M., post. The Aggies have won only four games in four years.

Even without a promise of the Aggie job reportedly was worth a long-term contract, Smith decided to stay.

more than $100,000, nearly double the $51,000—Smith made as the Vandal coach under Athletic Director Gary Hunter. Hunter has been pushing for Idaho to go to long-term rather than one-year contract. Idaho's close call with losing a coach who produced a season record of 9-3—best ever for a first-year Vandal coach—may well speed up the process.

Bruins face Pocatello squad: Region III game of the year?

By STEVE CRUMP

TWIN FALLS — Pocatello High School's boys' basketball team will step on the court for the first time tonight, and their season-opening foray into the Twin Falls High School gym could just be the game of the year in Region III.

"I've said all along that Pocatello was the preseason No. 1," said Twin Falls coach John Astorquia, "who's ballclub will entertain the third-ranked Indians tonight at 8 p.m. in the Bruin gym. They're definitely the team to beat in this region, and there's not going to be any better time for us to do that, especially since we have Highland here next Wednesday. If we could win both of those, it would sure help for the rest of the season."

The five Region III coaches predicted in a preseason Times-News poll that the Indians and Bruins would finish 1-2 in the region this year, and if so, tonight's game will be the truest test. The two teams will play again in Pocatello on Jan. 13, but the Bruins haven't won in the Pocatello gym since Andy Toolson's senior year, in 1984.

"Pocatello has great size and great shooters," said Astorquia. "Senior center Nate Jorgensen is 6-7 (11.4 points per game, 8-1

"Maybe we overlooked them," he continued. "They're quick, a bunch of good athletes that just keep coming at you."

But the dominance which the Golden Eagles held in the second 20 minutes hints that, although the men's basketball conference that makes up Region 18 of the National Junior College Athletic Association has a new name, little else has changed.

SALT LAKE CITY — David Anderson scored 12 of his 18 points in the first half to keep his team close and four-time defending champion College of Southern Idaho responded with a big second-half opening run to blow past Salt Lake Community College 80-64 Friday night in the Region 18 men's basketball opener for both teams.

A recent poll of athletic directors representing each of the 10 conference-member schools decided that Region 18 league condone any deliberate action taken to injure another player. If any such conduct is proven by either direct or indirect evidence the sanctions will be severe."

The controversy has simmered since Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson charged that Eagles coach Buddy Ryan offered bribes to some Eagles players to knock Dallas kicker Luis Zendejas and quarterback Troy Aikman out of the Nov. 23 game, which Philadelphia won 27-0.

LUIS ZENDEJAS

NEW YORK — The NFL said Friday it had no proof that bounties were placed on Dallas Cowboys players by the Philadelphia Eagles during a game last month, nor did it have any evidence there was intent to cause deliberate injuries.

However, the league warned that severe penalties would be issued against any team engaging in such activities.

The NFL in a two-paragraph statement, said its findings were based on an investigation by Commissioner Paul Tagliabue following charges that surfaced after the Eagles played the Cowboys on Thanksgiving Day.

Under no circumstances does the league condone placing "bounties" on an opposing player, the league said. "Nor does the that Eagles coach Buddy Ryan offered bribes to some Eagles players to knock Dallas kicker Luis Zendejas and quarterback Troy Aikman out of the Nov. 23 game, which Philadelphia won 27-0.

dejas said. "I guess it all depends on how tightly the guys who were investigating it took it. I guess they didn't take it too seriously."

Zendejas, who threatened legal action if he was not satisfied with the league's findings, said he would wait until after Sunday's game before deciding whether to release the tape.

"The thing is, nobody on the Eagles was going to jeopardize his job by telling what really happened," he said. "That's the sad part."

Johnson said he expected such a ruling, although he did not agree with it.

"Although nothing has happened to change my belief about the incident, I put this behind us a long time ago," Johnson said. "The matter is closed."
