Andrus report 1st on agenda for Centennial session

The Associated Press

BOISE — For the 11th time, Gov. Cecil Andrus will present his report on the state of Idaho to the Idaho Legislature when lawmakers convene the final regular session of the Centennial Legislature today.

It's expected to be a rocky one. The state's economy has been booming to the point where one of the 1990 session's major "problems" will be agreeing how to spend a two-year state surplus projected to hit about $100 million by July.

After the State of the State speech Monday afternoon, the Legislature will mainly mark time until after the governor presents his budget Wednesday afternoon. In a switch, Andrus is expected to give lawmakers his regular budget, with a separate list of proposals on how to spend the surplus.

Idaho Legislature 1990
 Republican legislative leaders, tired of being left in the background each January when the session opens because of the attention the governor's programs get, have already issued their own legislative agenda with emphasis on the high-profile issue of education.

"They committed the majority to at least equaling the financial commitment to schools of past years, that include the 10.6 percent hike in state aid authorized this year."

"We're going to do everything we can within the budget availability we have," Senate President Pro Tem Michael Crapo of Idaho Falls said.

GOP leaders have backed more money for teacher salaries, smaller class sizes and special improvement projects — concepts the governor was also likely to endorse in some fashion as he has in the past.

But legislative leaders want to deal with the potentially explosive abortion issue early, so they can get it out of the way. Crapo said despite that hope, every abortion proposal will get a fair hearing.

"The various groups that are interested are going to come from many perspectives," he said. "Strong groups want to put it on the ballot next November and another strong group wants the Legislature to decide the abortion questions."

"There is no question it has the potential to be a very powerful political issue," said Sen. Karl Brooks, D-Boise.

"Everyone wants to settle it without it becoming a long, drawn-out, divisive battle," said Crapo. "We will have to at least review five or six different approaches to see if some kind of consensus can be reached."

"I'm hopeful we can reach consensus on some approach early on ... and get on with the issue of the budget," Crapo said.

"I think the way it has got to be framed is the 'straightforward way ... every proposal that makes it to bill form is going to committee and we will have public hearings," he said.

The House this year allowed prefilting of bills, and by Friday that produced 66 pieces of legislation plus the two traditional resolutions calling for a joint session of the House and Senate Monday afternoon and inviting the governor to appear before it.

Most of the prefilled bills were the "house-keeping" changes that crop up each session. But among the first proposals to be considered in 1990 will be one from House Minority Leader Jim Knischell, D-Sandpoint, to send proceeds from the Idaho lottery to every school district.

He wants to put some of the lottery income into the school distribution formula, which means almost every district would share in the estimated $5 million profit from the lottery.

It could be the final session for several legislators.

Rep. Boyd Hill, R-Mardian, a six-year veteran, said, "I definitely am not going to run again." He represents the "floating" legislative district which covers all of Ada

Economic optimism won't preclude budget battling

The Associated Press

BOISE — After years of being forced to cope with economic adversity, Idaho lawmakers convene their election-year session today amid widespread optimism over the state's financial fortunes.

Dramatic growth reminiscent of the late 1970s boom has produced a record cash surplus of $100 million that could grow even larger, as well as another substantial boost in revenue from the state's tax structure.

But that money, generated by the tax system to underwrite the new state budget for the year that begins in July, could be overwhelmed by a myriads of spending demands that will again force lawmakers into confrontations over spending priorities.

"There are going to be disputes over how to spend the budget surplus and all of that," conceded Republican Senate President Pro Tem Michael Crapo of Idaho Falls. "I hope that we don't get into kind of regional or political things."

Lawmakers unexpectedly found themselves with a healthy surplus last year, but they were leery of just how long the good times would last and continued to follow a relatively conservative spending approach after winding up awash in red ink for several weeks during the middle of the 1989 session.

This year it has become clear that the state is in the midst of a major economic renaissance. "Even '80, Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus, who faces voters this fall just like the members of the Republican legislative majority, made it clear months ago that he will keep a tight rein on

Telephone-sales company faces misrepresentation allegations

By JENNIFER KAUTH Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A company that sells light bulbs by phone in the Magic Valley is under attack by Oregon's attorney general.

The Oregon Attorney General is suing American Handicapped Workers of the Northwest Inc., an Arizona-based telemarketing firm, alleging the company has misled customers and violated the federal Unlawful Trade Practices Act in three Oregon counties.

Among other complaints, the Oregon suit says the company sales people misrepresent themselves as handicapped.

The company sells lightbulbs, vitamins and cleaning products in Washington and Oregon, according to court papers. Its president, Robert E. Martoz, is also named in the suit.

Another Arizona-based company called the American Handicapped Workers of the Southwest Inc., which lists the same president, officers and directors in state papers as the Northwest company, operates in Idaho. It has offices in Boise and Pocatello, and has two Twin Falls phone numbers that connect to the Pocatello office.

An American Handicapped Workers of the Northwest vice president said that the for-profit business is operating within the law and that they can document every employee's handicap.

"The key is the question, 'What is a handicap?'" Curtis Winlock said.

He said the company uses the federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973 as its guide to what is or is not a handicap. Employees are instructed to tell customers what their handicaps are if the customers ask, he said.

He said a person is handicapped if he or she "has a disability that deprives them of a major life function." One of those major life functions, he said, is the ability to enjoy gainful employment.

The Oregon attorney general's office disagrees.

"What this case is about is the perception of a handicapped person," said Jan Margosian, the Oregon attorney general office's consumer information officer. "They're putting out an image that we think of as handicapped."

Handicaps of different definitions

The Times-News

PORTLAND — Included in the Oregon Attorney General's lawsuit against American Handicapped Workers of the Northwest Inc. are several examples of "handicaps" people who had worked for the company.

One example: a high school senior who was qualified because she saw a guidance counselor.

Another example: a woman who was qualified because she had a child who was born with a disability.

She said she worked for American Handicapped Workers on and off for five months, working in a "big room with a bunch of phones" on which employees made sales calls.

"I don't know if they were all handicapped," she said. "Some of them were. There were people with legitimate handicaps, and then there were others who were handicapped but only for a certain length of time and there were some who were handicapped because they were pregnant."

DeWitt said ex-convicts worked there too, but she said "she didn't know whether the ex-cons or the pregnant women had other problems that could have classified them as handicapped."

But she said she thought the company had stopped these hiring practices — although it continues to sell lightbulbs she described as "dim" in comparison to other bulbs.

American Handicapped Workers' Winlock described the bulbs the company sells as an "engineering miracle" and said they come with a five-year guarantee.

DeWitt quit about six months ago and now dials the phone for another telemarketing group called the Idaho Handicapped Workers Cooperative — a Pocatello-based group in which handicapped workers share profits.

Its spokesperson, Robert Green, said each of the 11 employees does have a legitimate handicap. Green said, however, he didn't want to be negative about anybody.

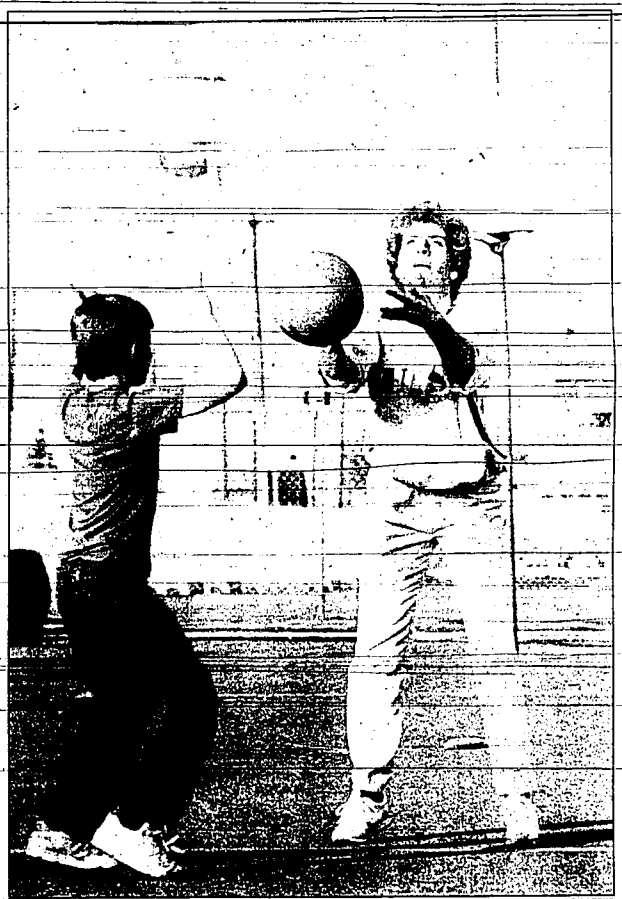

Margosian said depositions are now being filed in the Oregon suit, which asks the court to order American Handicapped Workers to pay restitution to customers, to pay $25,000 for each violation of the Unlawful Trade Practices Act and to pay the state's attorney and investigation costs.

A trial scheduled for Dec. 4, 1990, will be watched from Idaho.

"We're keeping a close eye on the case," Denise O'Donnell, an Idaho deputy attorney general, said.

The Idaho attorney general's office has received one complaint from a Pocatello man "who had thought he was helping a handicapped organization by buying light bulbs," O'Donnell said.

"We probably wouldn't take any action until we find out what happens over in Oregon," she said. "Idaho is watching that lawsuit."

Saturday afternoon proved to be weather good enough for short sleeves as temperatures rose into the 40s. Donna Gines and son Casey used the opportunity to brush up on basketball skills at the Kimberly Elementary School playground. However, the mostly clear skies were not a welcome sight to skiers waiting for fresh snow to boost skiing conditions.

Federal agents arrest cult leader

The Associated Press

NATIONAL CITY, Calif. — Federal agents Sunday arrested a religious cult leader wanted in the slayings of a family of five and seized numerous weapons, authorities said.

Jeffrey Lundgren, 39, a former Sunday school teacher and tour guide in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Ohio, was arrested outside a motel by agents of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and members of the San Diego Sheriff's Department.

Also arrested were his wife, Alice Lundgren, and their 19-year-old son, Damon. Three other Lundgren children — Kristen, 10, Caleb, 9, and Jason, 15 — were taken into protec-

Police had the motel in this blue-collar town near the Mexican border under surveillance since Saturday night, said George Rodriguez, a special agent for the ATF in Kansas City.

"We wanted to make sure they didn't get to Mexico," Rodriguez said.

Authorities were led to the motel by telephone calls made from a pay phone to another location they had under surveillance, said Steven C. LaTourrette, a Lake County, Ohio, prosecutor who held a news conference in Painesville, Ohio, earlier Sunday.

Officials said Lundgren broke away from the Reorganized Church and persuaded other members to follow him. The group once lived on a

Noriega warned he risked same fate as Mussolini

ROME (AP) — Panama's Gen. Manuel Noriega decided to give himself up after an aide warned he risked the same end as Italy's fascist dictator, Benito Mussolini, the papal nuncio in Panama was quoted Sunday as saying.

Monsignor Jose Sebastian Laboa, the Vatican's representative in Panama, said Capt. Elicor Gaifan, Noriega's personal security chief, persuaded Noriega to leave the Vatican Embassy, newspapers reported. Gaifan told Noriega they risked the same fate as Mussolini because Panamanians would one day storm the embassy, Laboa was quoted as telling Italian journalists in Panama. Mussolini was shot and killed and then hanged by his feet in a public square.

Palestinians die in clashes with military

JERUSALEM (AP) — Two 18-year-old Palestinians died Sunday of gunshot wounds after clashes with soldiers, and Israeli authorities banned nine pro-PLO activists from traveling abroad.

Palestinians traveled Sunday that the three-month travel bans on the nine pro-PLO activists imposed by Interior Minister Aryeh Deri were an attempt to disrupt U.S.-backed efforts to arrange a Palestinian-Israeli meeting in Cairo.

The targeted included Sari Nusseibeh and Faisal Husseini, the two most prominent Palestinians involved in behind-the-scenes diplomatic efforts.

Husseini complained that Israeli authorities were trying to nominate their own Palestinian representatives for the proposed talks and block any role for the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Cristiani: Military men killed priests

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Military men committed the Nov. 16 massacre of six Jesuit priests, their housekeeper and her daughter, President Alfredo Cristiani said Sunday night.

Cristiani, in a five-minute nationally broadcast address, termed the massacre "abominable" and said: "It has been determined that there was involvement of some elements of the armed forces."

The president did not say specifically who was implicated in the crime, nor did he indicate the rank or number of those responsible.

He said the work of an investigative commission "has been from the start professional and exhaustive." Agents from the United States and Scotland Yard detectives arrived this weekend to participate.

Budget

He reserved the right to perform whatever surgery is needed," he said as early as mid-August in opposing a proposed 24 percent increase in the Lands Department budget.

As it turned out, that agency's request was modest compared to the rest of the state. It became evident a large amount of money would be available.

Although the economic picture has brightened significantly since then, but Andrus said the governor has not changed his view. The budget he will hint at on Monday and fully unveil two days later will be enough to keep government operating at current levels with an adequate pay increase for state workers, a sufficient increase in education support and "a few fills."

He will propose separate plans for spending the one-time accumulation of surplus cash, funneling that money to non-earning expenses like building construction and maintenance and the reserve account that serves as a hedge against any future economic downturn. Many lawmakers have expressed support for that approach.

But demands on that surplus are already double the amount, ranging from a rebate to the taxpayers whose money built the cash cushion, to new juvenile detention centers and aid to hard-pressed county governments for bridge repair and waste dumps.

As for the traditional budget covering continuing state operations, the government will spend about $790 million by the time all the bills are paid for the current spending year that ends June 30. And analysts indicate that will probably be some $870 million, possibly more, for continuing operations in the new spending year. State agencies have requested about $120 million more than that.

"We're in a pretty good financial situation," Republican House Speaker Tom Boyd of Genesee said. "The governor has already announced he plans to offer a maintenance budget with no big increases. That's a pretty good situation for us to be in."

But that maintenance budget, estimated by legislative analysts to run just over $800 million, could eat up a dramatically greater share of the excess revenues than it has in past years because of increasing federal mandates for the state to provide expanded health and welfare programs.

Legislative Budget Director John Anderson said that federal mandates that he said he generally mandated health and welfare spending would seem like an "eight-foot-tall, 800-pound gorilla" ready to consume the state's financial resources. And Andrus conceded those mandates will be responsible for much of the spiral in his own spending blueprint.

"These federal mandates, which simply amount to laws we cannot ignore, could cost us as much as $25 million next year alone," the governor said. "Very clearly the Congress and the president passed the buck to us... Here in Idaho we will continue to manage our budget conservatively and responsibly. I only wish they 15-acre farm near Kirtland, Ohio, where investigators last week unearthed five bodies, which authorities believe to be those of Dennis Avery, his wife, Cheryl, and their three children.

In a statement issued in Washington, ATF officials said investigators had been searching for Lundgren and the others since Thursday and made the arrests without incident.

More than 20 ATF agents and sheriff's deputies participated in the arrests at the Santa Fe Motel, located on a busy intersection in National City, which is about 10 miles south of San Diego.

Motel manager Steve Liu said Mrs. Lundgren checked in Wednesday night with the three children, paying cash for the room for six nights.

Mrs. Lundgren told Liu she was checking into the motel because she had argued with her husband.

"She said she had wanted to stay in a hotel for a couple of days so maybe things would cool off," Liu said. "I saw him (Lundgren) coming back and forth during the last few days and I thought maybe they were making up."

Vin said agents raided the motel room Sunday morning and seized the AR-15, three handguns, an assortment of hunting knives and camping and survival gear.

The Lundgrens apparently were trying to make contact with relatives they could leave the children with, police said.

The Lundgrens were being held in the San Diego County jail pending extradition to Ohio, where they face charges including aggravated murder, complicity to murder and kidnapping.

Investigators said the Averys were shot and killed in mid-April and buried in a common grave in the barn near Kirtland, one day before Lundgren and his followers left Ohio for a farm near Holden, Mo.

Lundgren and 12 of his followers were indicted by a Lake County grand jury in the killings.

In addition to being shot, the victims' eyes were covered with duct tape and some had their hands and feet bound with tape.

Dale Luffman, president of the northeast Ohio chapter of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, said he did not believe the slayings were part of a sacrifice, but probably resulted from a dispute over money, sex or fear the family would leave the cult.

LaTourrette said Friday the Avery family apparently was killed in a sacrifice necessary under a prophecy of Lundgren's before the cult could relocate to the wilderness.

Lundgren worked with the church's historic temple in Kirtland, established in 1836 by Joseph Smith, founder of the Mormon Church.

Lundgren was a guide in the temple, giving tours to visitors starting in 1985 when he moved to Kirtland, about 30 miles east of Cleveland, from Independence, Mo., where the church is based.

Though it has roots and some beliefs in common with the Mormon Church, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is a separate church.

Woman, 6 kids die in foster home fire

CLAYTON, Ala. (AP) — Fire swept through a private foster home in a rural area early Sunday, killing six young children placed there by state welfare authorities and a 66-year-old woman, officials said.

Barbour County Coroner David Childs said the owners of the house, Robert and Lois Mitchell, escaped the 2 a.m. blaze uninjured, as did their three children and two other foster children.

Alabama Fire Marshal John Robison said the cause of the fire was not immediately known. An investigation was continuing, he said.

Childs said Mrs. Mitchell told him she thought the fire started in an area around the hot water heater, adding that the home was not being treated. The victims' bodies were badly burned and would be sent to a state forensic laboratory, he said.

The fire was initially reported as a possible explosion, but Childs said there was none.

He identified the children killed in the fire — two girls and four boys — as Kimberly Gilbert, 8; her brother Jessie, 10; Kimberly Walker, 5; and her brothers Larry, 10, Jessie, 7, and Marketta, 4.

Shuttle ready for launch, weather not looking good

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA officials decided Sunday to continue the countdown toward a Monday launch of space shuttle Columbia, although forecasters gave only 1-in-5 odds that the weather will permit it.

"There is a chance and we'd like to be ready to take that chance," said William B. Lenoir, the head of NASA's space flight program. As long there was more than a zero possibility for liftoff on Monday, he said, the shuttle's huge fuel tanks would be filled beginning late Sunday.

"There is a 20 percent chance we will get off," Lenoir told reporters. "We've all been here often enough to know that what is predicted does not always happen, and sometimes good things happen when bad is predicted."

The Kennedy Space Center has been socked in by fog for several days at 8:10 a.m. EST, the earliest the shuttle can be launched Monday. The launch opportunity lasts until 9:02.

The intricate timing on this 33rd shuttle flight is dictated by Columbia's main mission, to retrieve a science laboratory the size of a small bus that has been in orbit around Earth since its launch in April 1984 from the shuttle Challenger.

Columbia must be launched into the same path as the satellite, which is called LDEF, for Long Duration Exposure Facility.

The aerial chase will have the shuttle trailing the LDEF in the same plane, or driving lane. By flying in a lower orbit and thereby taking less time to go around the Earth, the shuttle eventually will catch up to the

Colombians balking over U.S. drug interdiction

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bush administration officials acknowledged Sunday they have had "some difficulties" with Colombian authorities over plans to deploy U.S. warships near Colombia to help intercept drug smugglers' supply routes.

But national security adviser Brent Scowcroft blamed the problems on "some premature and probably inaccurate leaks" about U.S. intentions and predicted officials in Colombia and other Latin American nations will come around.

President Bush himself, jogging after church Sunday, turned aside a question about whether he was positioning the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy off the coast of Colombia to help intercept drug supplies by sea and by air.

"I will address myself ... to that question at a future date," the president said before an outing on the rooftop of the historic C&O Canal above the Georgetown section of Washington.

When a reporter said Colombia doesn't want U.S. warships off its coast, Bush injected, "We don't know all that."

At a White House reception Sunday night, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney declined to say where the Kennedy or other ships were now, but told reporters, "We're always active down in the Caribbean anyway."

Cheney said he expects that within two weeks "we will announce in detail what additional steps we're taking in dealing with the narcotics problem." He said he expects the Latin nations and "anybody interested in halting the slow of illicit drugs into the United States will be supportive."

Gen. Colin Powell, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said,

"We're not blockading Colombia. We always have ships in international waters."

On ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley," Scowcroft said "we are looking at ways we might be able to improve interdiction across the Caribbean." However, he said discussions with Colombian authorities have not begun.

"There have been some difficulties," said Scowcroft, who blamed them on "some premature and ... probably inaccurate leaks about what we had in mind."

World Bank, IMF helping East change economies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nobody has much experience in moving a country from communism to a system with a big role for private business, so East European governments have turned for guidance to a pair of worldwide bodies based in Washington.

They are the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, both owned by 152 countries which have many different mixes of public and private ownership. The United States takes a leading role in both organizations.

The bank is headed by President Barber B. Conable, a former Republican congressman from New York and a friend of President Bush.

At the fund, the top official is traditionally a European; now Managing Director Michel Camdessus of France.

A senior IMF official said last week that the fund is now in contact with all the major East European countries.

The Soviet Union has said it wants to join, but the United States has opposed that on the ground that the country is far from a market economy. Poland and Hungary are already members. The new Czechoslovak government says it would like to be.

Camdessus himself put the final touches to an accord with Poland that has brought decontrol of prices, a convertible currency and other measures that the fund traditionally advises.

"We believe that the program the Polish authorities have adopted is a very strong one," said the official, who spoke on condition he not be identified. "They are trying to tackle in a very determined fashion the key problem in the country, which is skyrocketing inflation."

The fund and bank influence governments mostly through loans and the conditions attached to them. They promote conservative policies: sale of state-owned industry, reduced government deficits, abolition of price controls, holding down wages, promotion of exports, cuts in subsidies.

Love Story.

Boy meets girl. Girl likes boy. Boy professes love. And a love story is begun.

Every family started with a love story. Tell us yours, and give our readers a glimpse of life in the good old days — whether it was the '30s, the '50s, or the '70s.

Where did you meet? What did you find to do on your first date? How long did you date before he "popped the question"?

Some of us gathered with friends at Shoshone Falls for picnics. Some of us walked miles to woo our sweeties. Still others danced the night away to tunes forgotten long ago.

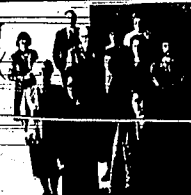

Write us a letter that tells your love story, and send a picture of those good times.

In honor of Idaho's Centennial, we are putting readers' reminiscences in a new weekly column, "Looking Back." And we'll fill a special section with them next July.

Cuba can't deny signal of democracy

The demise of communism around the world is sending a strong signal that cannot be denied by Cuba. Fidel Castro must surely know his days in power are numbered. The fall of Romanian strongman Nicolae Ceausescu should send cold chills up the back of Castro who stays in power on the back of a military force.

Modern technology has torn down the Iron Curtain. Satellite transmission of news, the Voice-of-America broadcasts and international travel to and from communist countries have told a story to Warsaw Pact nations that life can be better.

Such is the case in Castro's Cuba. The day of censorship is over. This information will be the downfall of Castro.

Communism has survived because the leaders were able to preach the fear of foreigners to those without other sources of information. That day has come and gone and so will those who rule that way.

Bush continues to enjoy free tax ride

Speaking of reading lips, President Bush's promise of "no new taxes" will become a cruel joke this week for 50 million-plus American workers whose payroll tax for Social Security goes up significantly.

The base salary on which the so-called FICA tax is levied goes up from $48,000 to $51,300, and the rate itself goes up from 7.51 percent to 7.65 percent. The employer's share also goes up commensurately, which means that money that might have been used for higher pay must go to pay Social Security taxes.

Bush is continuing the free ride, through deception, which Ronald Reagan enjoyed throughout his administration by using Social Security surpluses to disguise the truly devastating nature of the growing federal debt.

Lessons from Panama, Romania

In one of those odd confluences of unrelated events, the dramas in Panama and Romania have been playing themselves out in tandem. For a time it even seemed possible that the two stories might converge — that the fleeing Ceausescu and Noriega would re-emerge simultaneously in a place like Cuba, which seems anxious to carve out a niche as the last refuge of scoundrels.

Over the holiday weekend, though, the stories took divergent turns. The voodoo-worshipping Noriega turned himself in. The atheist Ceausescu are summarily tried and executed on Christmas Day.

In both Panama and Romania, the people on the streets are celebrating the vanquishing of hated rulers and preparing for what they hope will be better and calmer days ahead.

What lessons might we draw during this pause in the action? In the case of Nicolae Ceausescu and his wife, Elena, it seems transparent: Violence begets violence.

Noriega was brought down by U.S. troops, pure and simple. And yet Panamanians seem nearly as pleased and relieved as the people of Romania. It's as if they wanted to do it themselves, but they didn't know how.

Their new leaders share this advantage with Romania's provisional government: Things could hardly get worse.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel of conservatives, grading the administration's first year, says President Bush is OK — but he's no Dan Quayle.

A conservative think tank issued that report card, giving Bush a gentleman's C. The vice president got an A.

Walter Mears

That spells success in one of Quayle's tasks — covering the conservative political flank for the administration. It has been handled with mistakes in tone and emphasis that leave both Quayle and Bush room to insist there is no disagreement on policy. There can't be — it is a fact of vice presidential life that the No. 2 man doesn't have any policy options of his own.

Quayle has said there is no good guy-bad guy strategy at work. But on such topics as East-West relations, he tends to emphasize the negative while Bush deals with the positive. That reassures the right, still suspicious of Soviet intent, internal reforms notwithstanding.

The White House describes that as a difference in perspective, not in substance. Quayle underscores his loyalty to the president and his policies at every opportunity, and dismisses suggestions that they're not always in tune. "It's the age-old game that is played in trying to find some distinction between the president and vice president," Quayle said in a New Year interview with The Associated Press.

Still, there are distinctions, and they register clearly with conservatives. That shows in the report card.

The Heritage Foundation published its annual year-end report, and this month, in its quarterly magazine, Policy Review. Grading was done by five conservatives who were willing to put their names behind their marking system.

Given the magazine deadline, Bush's decision to intervene in Panama on Dec. 20 didn't come within their grading period. Conservatives generally applauded him for it. And they unanimously applauded Quayle for his year's work.

GEORGE BUSH

Conservatives viewed his first year as satisfactory but he's no Dan Quayle

"Quayle has proved to be a very effective advocate of conservative positions within the administration and as liaison with conservatives on Capitol Hill," said Paul Weyrich, president of the Free Congress Foundation.

Weyrich rated Quayle at A-minus, suggesting he ought to be more independent of the administration to do his own thing and build "a viable national political base for himself."

That may sound good to conservative Republicans, but independence, in policy or politics, is not part of the job description that goes with the vice presidency. Bush got a B from Weyrich, Dittig on the card of Pat Robertson, the television evangelist who challenged him for the 1988 presidential nomination.

Robertson, chief executive of the Christian Broadcasting Network, called Bush "steady, competent, unimaginative" and cautious.

"He has not told the American people where he wants to go," Robertson said. "He has not outlined a cogent policy agenda for them to support."

Robertson said Quayle merits an A as "a superb vice president."

"Whether he can rehabilitate himself politically after the vicious beating he took from the media last fall remains to be seen," Robertson said. "I hope he can."

Amy Meritz, executive director of the National Center for Public Policy Research, agreed on the A and on the complaint about Quayle's coverage. "Quayle has done a tremendous job under this pressure and it's time the American people told the bullies in the media to lay off," she said.

She saw Bush as no better than a C-minus, saying he has delivered neither victories nor vision. "George Bush is not sure why he wants to be president," she said, so he reacts to events and compromises between opposing viewpoints.

Harsher still was Edward H. Crane, president of the Cato Institute, who gave Bush a D. "Bush is a creature of government who does not object to a single federal program or department," Crane contended. "His continued popularity among conservatives is a sad commentary on what's left of the Reagan revolution."

It's time for domestic arms control

The U.S. military has run roughshod over the public lands for too long, and it's about time for some domestic arms control.

accustomed to get the way, various branches of the armed forces are trying to snatch away thousands of square miles of the West to be scarred by practice bombs, buzzed by low-level supersonic jets and trashed by tanks.

Proposals have been made to expand or establish 11 training sites in seven states, including Idaho, Montana and Washington. Unlike other public land users, the military is not governed by the land use planning process, and until recently did not need to perform environmental impact studies. Over the decades, it gained control of about 25 million acres. Fortunately, the new 3.2 million acre land grab is being resisted by a broad cross-section of Westerners. Even patriotic ranchers resent the high-handed armed forces, and question the necessity of the expansions at a time of peaceful change in Eastern Europe. "I think the special treatment for the military is a thing of the past," Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, said.

Although most plans can't become reality without congressional approval, their potential for harming the environment and economy has set off public and political alarms during the past year. Last week, the House public lands subcommittee under Chairman Bruce Vento, D-Minn., brought a number of problems to light during a hearing in Washington, D.C. The Air Force, for one, has been "untruthful and misleading" in negotiations over the largest proposal — a 1.5 million acre bombing range in southwestern Idaho — rancher Randall Brewer charged. "It is clear... they are unwilling to cooperate with other (land) users."

Speaking for the state livestock industry, Brewer said the increase from the current 100,000-acre range was excessive and would make it impossible to continue a 100-year history of grazing. The proposal would include scenic canyons and wilderness, although live munitions would be fired only in a limited area.

Other witnesses recounted horror stories of past military abuses — bombs dropped outside of designated areas near Fallon Naval Air Station in Nevada, National Guard units falling to comply with BLM permit requirements in Utah and World War II tank tracks eroding California's Mojave Desert.

Defense officials said it was in their interest to be good stewards of the land and that the expansions were needed because modern high-speed weapons and aircraft require more space to maneuver.

But the military has obviously gotten carried away and seems to harbor the antiquated view of Western scrublands as nothing more than scrubgrass and jackrabbits. It's doubtful anyone could get away with threatening to snuff a national forest, but bombing a fragile desert ecosystem is apparently acceptable.

Astonishingly, several proposals duplicate each other, as though the services are competing to have the "biggest and best," as one Air Force official bragged about the Idaho bombing range proposal. The Navy and the Air Force both want to build electronic air-warfare training centers, one in Nevada and one in Utah. At least four tank training sites are being used or proposed, three by the Army National Guards of Idaho, Montana and Nevada and one by the Army in California. Apparently unaware of the Air Force's Saylor Creek site in Idaho, the Air National Guard in Montana is seeking its own bombing range.

Surely, all these military playgrounds can't be necessary.

The issue has allied ranchers with their traditional enemies, the environmentalists. But during the hearing, Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, tried to drive a wedge between the two, pointing out to Brewer that he was sitting alongside someone who supports wilderness areas that would be more restrictive for ranchers than the bombing range.

Craig has been actively sympathetic to the ranchers' concerns and promoted establishment of a citizens advisory group under the auspices of the BLM and the Air Force that he hopes will come up with a workable agreement. "I put my faith in that process," he said.

Roger Hayes of Boise, representing conservation groups, said the Air Force should scrap its plans and start over, this time giving residents more time to study the proposal. "We felt a theft in the making," he said.

"They've got to go back to the drawing boards," agreed Stallings, who supports limited expansion. Most citizens seem to be saying Idaho needs Mountain Home Air Force Base's $100 million payroll and potential future growth, but not if it means destroying their outdoor heritage.

Larry Swisher, a former Times-News writer and editor, writes from Washington, D.C., on topics of interest to Idaho and the Pacific Northwest.

Issues that won't go away will make 1990 Legislature interesting

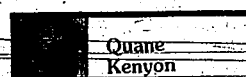

BOISE — Even with control of the Idaho Senate tantalizingly close for the minority Democrats, caution may still be their watchword when the 1990 Legislature formally convenes on Monday.

Republicans think the Democrats, anxious to protect Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus in an election year, won't be tempted to make it a partisan session.

"I don't think there's a reason not to throw stones at the status quo," said Senate President Pro Tem Michael Crapo, R-Idaho Falls. "It will help the governor in his race to have things going smoothly."

This year, all 126 legislative seats will be up for election, along with all state officials and one U.S. Senate and two congressional seats. In some years that has led to a crescendo of partisan bickering.

Democratic governor John Evans had little luck with the Republican-dominated Legislature in 1986 because he was into an unsuccessful campaign against Sen. Steve Symms, a Democrat, who trail the Republicans

Quane Kenyon

23-19 in the Senate, have made no secret that they hope 1990 is the year they can end a 32-year GOP domination.

That almost dictates that the minority Democrats will have to push the action if they hope to make political gains.

Sen. Skip Smyser, R-Parma, who is working on a possible campaign for the Idaho Supreme Court against incumbent Stephen Bistline, says a change in personalities may make it a more contentious session.

Three incumbents, all Democrats, resigned late last year and were replaced. Smyser said that should reduce some of the partisan maneuvering because two of those who departed, John Stocks of Coeur d'Alene and Gail Bry of Boise, were the driving forces in the Democratic political strategy sessions. Karen Coak of Priest River also resigned.

"They were the ones that would be pushing a political agenda more than you will see come out of this session," he said.

"With the loss of Gail, John and Karen, the Democrats will be possessing to hold on. I think the special treatment for the military is a thing of the past," Rep. Richard Stallings, D-Idaho, said.

"It's been 32 years since Democrats had control of a chamber of the Legislature. It might be that long before they win the House, traditionally a more conservative chamber where Republicans have held huge majorities for decades."

He's 60-21 now, but when the House convenes on Monday, Rep. Gary Robbins, elected as a Republican, will be seated as a Democrat because he switched parties last month. Other politicians have switched parties in the past but it's been between them. No legislator in recent memory has served one year as a member of one party and returned for the second session of that term as a member of the opposition.

House Minority Leader James Stoicheff, D-Sandpoint, said that because of the Republicans who head the Senate and House, he expects limited political wrangling.

"I think we will get along," he said. "I have never seen a session where it has been so calm and House Speaker Tom Boyd (think it is stupid to stand out there and call names because you really don't get much done)," he said.

"Everybody recognizes that it is an election year, and the Senate is an area which will serve as a battleground," said Crapo. "But the party which starts throwing mud will be the one that is punished. There are plenty of good, solid issues to show the differences between the parties."

Boyd, a Genesee Republican, said it's a hard to really find much difference between the goals of the two parties. "It might be a matter of degree," he said. "But we all agree on things such as education. I don't see a real divisive issue."

Boyd said the state's in pretty good financial shape, and Andrus has indicated he won't be asking for new spending programs which might be controversial.

Left unmentioned by all the political leaders, perhaps on purpose, is the issue which could cause the biggest divisions — abortion. And they know from past experience that having money to work with as this year's $100 million surplus, can be worse than not having enough.

"Throw in the issues which won't go away — such as child abuse, prison problems, conflict of interest laws and public access to records — and the 1990 session might not run as smoothly as legislative leaders predict."

Quane Kenyon covers Idaho politics and state government for The Associated Press.

Noriega's lawyer: U.S. need not worry about exposing secrets

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush's national security adviser and an attorney for Manuel Noriega said Sunday they didn't know what if any sensitive U.S. documents could aid the fallen dictator's defense against drug charges, but the lawyer ruled out plea bargaining to prevent their exposure.

BRENT SCOWCROFT
FRANK RUBINO

The government chose to bring General Noriega to trial and they shall have their trial," said Frank Rubino, one of several attorneys defending the former Panamanian ruler against U.S. indictments in Miami.

He said he would "absolutely not" plea bargain. Such action normally results in a guilty plea to lesser charges in exchange for information, the government can use in other cases.

A plea bargain would prevent a trial and possible release of documents sensitive to national security or embarrassing to the government. The potential threat of documents being released could hamper U.S. prosecutors.

Last week, President Bush refused to rule out a plea bargain, although one of his aides indicated Sunday the administration was comfortable with the idea of a trial.

Presidential chief of staff John Sununu, appearing on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," said the administration wants to make sure Noriega gets a fair trial.

"We ought not to do anything that creates a different category for the defendant once he enters the judicial system," Sununu said in response to a question about plea bargaining.

"This Week With David Brinkley," said he hadn't started looking for federal records of U.S. involvement with Noriega that would clear his client.

"One thing I have never done in 16 years of practicing law is to guess what may happen," he said.

Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, also on the ABC program, said the government would not try to block release of documents simply because they could be embarrassing to the White House.

But he said he didn't know if any documents existed relevant to the case that might be injurious to national security.

"As far as I know there aren't any," said Scowcroft. "You had the attorney general saying he didn't anticipate any problems of that character. I don't know whether the files have been searched to the ultimate."

He emphasized that the case against Noriega was based on drug trafficking.

"That's a fairly narrow part of his whole relationship with the United States," said Scowcroft.

Noriega began providing intelligence information about Latin America to the U.S. government in the 1950s, while a student at the military academy in Peru.

Questions about his drug dealing began while Richard Nixon was president and have arisen repeatedly through both Republican and Democratic administrations ever since.

Rubino said he would argue the case should be dismissed on grounds that Noriega could not get a fair trial in the United States.

"Pretrial publicity is amazing in the amount," the attorney said. "Not only the amount but the type of publicity."

"The president of the United States said he was a thug and purveyor of drugs to children," Rubino said. "Obviously, how can someone strike that from their mind and give this man a fair trial?"

Rubino said he also would argue that the case should be dismissed because Noriega was "maximum leader" of Panama when he was seized and therefore should be immune from U.S. prosecution as head of state in a foreign country.

Student charged with making computer worm on trial

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A graduate student charged with crippling a national computer network goes to court this week, and win or lose, his showcase federal trial will mean more stringent computer security laws, say industry experts.

Robert T. Morris Jr., 24, of Arnold, Md., a graduate student suspended from Cornell University, is the first person to be tried criminally under the 1986 federal Computer Fraud and Abuse Act. Jury selection begins Monday.

Morris is accused of designing and setting loose in November 1988 a rogue program that replicated wildly, immobilizing an estimated 6,000 computers linked to a research network, including computers at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration facility at Moffett Field, Calif., and at the Air Force Logistics Command at Wright Patterson Air Force Base in Dayton, Ohio.

The program was originally described as a computer "virus," but experts said it was more properly called a "worm," which unlike a virus does not need to be in a host program to duplicate itself.

Morris, a first-year doctoral student in computer studies, has never admitted creating the worm or introducing it into the Internet system. But a Cornell commission concluded Morris created the program and was guilty of "reckless disregard" in doing so.

Morris, whose father is chief scientist at the government's National Computer Security Center in Bethesda, Md., faces up to five years in prison and a $250,000 fine if convicted.

"It's a no-lose situation because the trial will showcase the weaknesses of computer security and current computer security law," said Harold Highland, professor emeritus of computer science at the State University of New York and editor of Computers & Security, a trade journal.

If the government loses, he said, computer security advocates "will say there is a need for stronger laws. If the government wins, they'll say he did it because the system is weak and we need to tighten up the system."

Christopher A. Breceda of American Computer Security Industries Inc., a Nashville, Tenn., maker of security systems, agreed.

"Either way it goes, the pure attention is going to fuel the cry for tougher laws and better security," he said. "Whether Morris is convicted or not, we win."

Probe finds woman linked to Stuart

BOSTON (AP) — Charles Stuart bought a $250 brooch last week and was repeatedly called by a woman while he was hospitalized, leading investigators to suspect a romantic motive for him to kill his pregnant wife, wound himself and blame the attack on a mugger, published reports said Sunday.

Stuart, who received a nationwide outpouring of sympathy after his crime for help over his car phone led police to his dying wife Oct. 23, jumped to his death from a Boston Harbor bridge Thursday after becoming a suspect in her slaying.

Authorities said he committed suicide after his brother Matthew told investigators Stuart murdered his wife. Carol Stuart was shot after the couple left a birthing class. Her son, delivered by Caesarean section, died 17 days later.

Authorities sought genetic tests to determine if the child was fathered by Stuart, and they continued to look insurance policies for a motive.

The search for the gun used in the shootings went into a fourth day Sunday with no results.

Matthew Stuart, 23, said his brother passed him the gun and his wife's purse the night of the shootings and that he later threw them into a river in Revere, a Boston suburb. The bag has been recovered.

Stuart, who was shot in the stomach, provided a description of the assailant, and the crime riveted the nation as a chilling example of urban violence. The drama was bolstered by transcripts of Stuart's gripping call for help on his phone.

Police have questioned a woman who worked with Stuart at Edward F. Kagan & Sons, a fur shop where Charles was manager, the Boston Globe reported Sunday.

In a search of Stuart's Reading home, police found telephone bills that indicate she had been using his credit card to call him at the hospital, said Reading police Detective Dave Saunders.

AROUND THE VALLEY

Canal stockholders meet slated Tuesday

TWIN FALLS — Company Manager Jack Eakin urges stockholders of the Twin Falls Canal Co. to attend the company's annual meeting at 10 a.m. Tuesday at CSI's Vocational-Technical Building, Room 108.

"It's their company," Eakin said. "I feel they ought to know what's going on."

Eakin will report on the upgrade of the canal that includes a power plant. He also will discuss moss problems and canal maintenance.

He said the company is trying to rebuild structures rather than just repair them "to try to make it last another 50 years."

A lawsuit filed against the company over a fish kill also will be discussed.

Twin Falls Canal Co. has about 4,000 stockholders. In the past, the board of directors and employees have made up the 100 or so that have shown up for most meetings.

Eakin said he isn't sure why more stockholders don't attend the annual meetings. "We're either doing a real great job or they just don't care," Eakin said.

Quayle ignores invitation to Lincoln Day festivities

TWIN FALLS — It looks like Vice President Dan Quayle will stand up the Twin Falls County Republican Central Committee again this year.

Quayle has not responded to the committee's invitation to participate in local Lincoln Day festivities, Mark Stubbs, the county's GOP chairman, said.

Last year, the vice president turned down the invitation after the event had already taken place, Stubbs said.

There's no word yet from Republican National Chairman Lee Atwater, either. So the committee has invited Sen. James McClure to headline the Feb. 16 event — and they've ordered their tickets printed.

Fair Board again studying sponsorship of Miss Rodeo

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls Fair Board today will again consider whether to continue sponsoring the Miss Rodeo Idaho pageant.

Last month, the board seriously considered withdrawing support for the pageant because of potential lawsuits by disgruntled parents of non-winning contestants.

The board meets at noon at Canyon Springs Inn.

Other items on the agenda include the rodeo band, food booths, premium book printing, livestock corral and third arena, three-phase power, South Park survey, National High School Rodeo Finals and an entertainment contract.

Financial reports and Fair Board reorganization are also on the agenda.

Ex-Peace Corps volunteer speaks to Republicans here

TWIN FALLS — Jim Citek, who recently completed a stint as a Peace Corps volunteer in Costa Rica, will speak about his experiences in Central America at a meeting of the Twin Falls County Republican Central Committee Wednesday.

The GOP group will meet at 7:30 p.m. in the Twin Falls County Courthouse, courtroom number one.

New political developments in the county and state will also be discussed.

Challis molybdenum mines open once more after layoff

CHALLIS — It's back to business as usual at Cyprus Minerals' Thompson Creek Mine near Challis, following a two-week lay-off over the Christmas holidays because of an apparent molybdenum oversupply.

Thompson Creek Manager Pat Fitch said the mine's 410 employees are back to work full-time and the price of molybdenum has edged up 10 cents a pound in the past week. Molybdenum is used in alloys to harden steel and as a lubricant.

Cyprus enacted a two-week "slowdown" at its Thompson Creek and Tonahop, Nev., molybdenum mines in response to an apparent oversupply in the market that caused the world price to drop to a low of $2.50 a pound.

The oversubundance was thought to be the result of price slashing by Codelco, a Chilean government-owned molybdenum mine.

Fitch said Cyprus is prepared to take another 4 million pounds out of circulation in the next year through similar short-term actions if the market warrants. Meanwhile, Cyprus' main domestic competitor, Climax Molybdenum, a subsidiary of Ammax Minerals, has announced a 15 percent production cut at its Henderson Mine outside of Empire, Colo.

Centennial stamp puts spotlight on Idaho Post Offices

The Centennial spotlight is on the post office in Idaho today when the new Idaho Centennial postage stamp is put on sale in the state's county seats.

The number of post offices in the Magic Valley today is only a fraction of the nearly 200 that have existed since the first one opened its doors. About half were started before statehood a century ago.

Charting the start of post offices is an excellent way to follow the settlement in the valley.

According to post office department

Virginia Ricketts Then and Now

records, the first one within the confines of the eight counties of the present-day Magic Valley was the mining camp of Shoshone, located in Alurus County on the north canyon wall overlooking the Twin Falls.

Postmaster Charles Calten opened the Shoshone office on May 25, 1870. It served the mining camps in the Snake River canyon until Jan. 10, 1871, when the 3-day-old post office at Rock Creek, then in Owyhee County, took over the task.

Commodore Jackson, the first Rock Creek postmaster, is credited with starting the town of Mountain Home a few years later. Oakley was next when its post office opened in 1876 with Samuel Hayward as postmaster. Five others in that area and one elsewhere in the Snake River valley followed before 1880.

In 1880, 12 post offices were begun.

A crowd in front of Jerome Mercantile Co. waits for the stagecoach to bring the mail. This photo was made in 1907.

Sublett, Kelso and Laneville were in Cassia County while others were in Wood River County, resulted in 15 new post offices that year and nine the following year. Included in those 24 were Soldier and Naples, renamed Shoshone in 1883.

Among nine started in 1884 was the post office at Shoshone Falls with Lettie Walgamott as the postmistress. Located in the little tent hotel on the north side of the Shoshone Falls, it was open until the new post office built on the other side of the river in 1886.

If later post office records are correct that Standrod was in Utah, another Cassia County town — McCollen — had the distinction of being the last before statehood day. The first one after statehood was at Yale on the Raft River, also in Cassia County.

Miner, the first irrigation project post office, opened in April 1904 when construction began on the Milner Dam.

The Twin Falls post office opened on July 1, 1904, followed by 70 others during the next decade. I. B. Perrine's Blue Lakes post office, open since 1898, was closed in June 1905 in deference to Twin Falls.

After the rural routes were started in 1912, many of the community offices closed.

As one feature of rural delivery, the carriers delivered mail on Christmas Day in 1912 if each patron would meet the carrier at their mailbox. Motor routes were established in 1916, making it possible to extend the territory covered on each rural route.

During World War I, the post office department raised postage 2 cents

Wendell voters decide school levy Tuesday

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Voters in the Wendell School District will decide Tuesday on a $98,000 supplemental levy to pay for a new boiler, asbestos abatement and roof repairs at the high school gymnasium.

The one-year levy would cost taxpayers about $137 per $1,000 of assessed market property value, Superintendent Larry Manly estimated.

A simple majority from registered voters is needed to pass the levy.

"The school district is faced with 'have to' expenses, Manly said, and has no choice in replacing the boiler, complying with federally mandated asbestos removal

Polls open at noon
Voting for the $98,000 supplemental levy will be from noon-8 p.m. Tuesday in the high school gymnasium, 700 B. Main St.

and making emergency roof repairs to avoid further water damage.

"These are things beyond our control the district has to deal with," Manly said.

If the levy fails, the trustees would have to "look seriously" at running another levy, Board Chairman Don Fowler said.

"What we're asking for is something that the district needs," he said. "We wish we didn't need a new boiler, but it's a fact of life. We have to replace that thing."

Cost of a new boiler will be $47,700 plus the cost of some heating system repairs and alterations. It will be more efficient and will save a substantial amount of money in annual fuel bills, Fowler said.

"Inspectors told us the boiler is in bad shape and they won't insure the school with that boiler anymore," he said. "We cannot operate the school without having insurance on the boiler."

The levy also is needed to pay for removing asbestos insulation, tile and fiberboard, a job mandated by the federal government and requiring workers with special training, Manly said.

The elementary school and other school buildings all have asbestos problems,

Manly said. The district will need a special vacuum cleaner to collect airborne asbestos, he said, all resulting in an estimated $45,000 price tag for the entire project.

The cost, about $45,000, is beyond the district's current resources, trustees said.

At the high school gymnasium, a leaking flat roof above the front foyer needs immediate repair to prevent further damage, Manly said. This work is estimated to cost about $3,000.

School trustees said the district could use additional funding for other needs, but a higher levy will be voted down, they said. To help the levy pass, trustees decided to ask only for a minimal amount, $98,000, to cover only the district's emergency needs.

State expert says Wendell schools need long-range plan for facilities

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — The school district needs to start working on a long-range plan for its school facilities, a state expert says.

"Planning isn't a waste of time," Eldon Nelson, an advisor for the Idaho State Board of Education, recently told Wendell trustees. "It is a process that gets you to a destination."

The trustees agreed to organize a committee to work on a long-range plan, which has been needed for a long time, Chairman Dime Fowler said.

About 13 years ago, a district study by state officials concluded that the Wendell Elementary School had reached full enrollment. Although the district built temporary classrooms several years ago, the new space hasn't been enough to absorb the 90-student enrollment increase since then.

After a day of touring the school buildings in Wendell, Nelson said he saw two janitorial closets being used as classrooms and janitorial equipment kept "where it shouldn't be."

"No one can accuse you of not using every inch of space," he said. The elementary library is inadequate for the number of students it has to serve, he added.

The 13-year-old study also raised questions about the structure of the old high school, Nelson said, a structural engineer should evaluate the high school, first to determine what repairs are needed and, second, if the building is worth the investment those repairs would cost.

Nelson said one possible solution might be to build a new high school at the gymnasium site, use the present high school as a middle school and use the

Fullers want school evaluation

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — While he'd gladly open the door to an independent evaluation of the school district's special services, as requested by a local attorney, Bill Feusahrens says taxpayers shouldn't have to foot the bill.

Feusahrens, the Twin Falls School District's director of support services, said the evaluation would only duplicate one of the state Education Department performs every three years.

Bill Greg Fuller wants to pay the evaluator's fee, that would be terrific," Feusahrens said. He stressed that he was speaking for himself, not as spokesman for the School Board or the district.

Local attorney Greg Fuller and his wife, Shawna, propose filing a non-adversarial class action suit against the school district.

In an earlier interview, the Fullers said they are not seeking money, they only want to reach an agreement with the district to have an independent expert evaluate how the district helps children with learning disabilities.

The Fullers say they will present their ideas Tuesday night at the School Board's

1 Idaho, 3 Nevada sites studied for war network

By N.S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Three sites in Nevada and one in Idaho are candidates for inclusion in a wartime communications network.

The Air Force is looking over areas around Rockford, Idaho, and Tuscadero, Austin and Amargosa, Nev., as possible sites for 300-foot radio towers that would be part of the Strategic Modernization Program begun by former President Reagan.

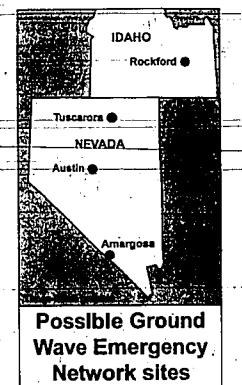

The 96-tower Ground Wave Emergency Network would provide vital communications even during a nuclear attack, defense officials say. A high-altitude nuclear burst would generate an electromagnetic pulse that would wipe out conventional radio communications.

The system would transmit ground-hugging, low-frequency radio waves to radar and command posts and Strategic Air Command bases.

Fifty-two of the system's towers already have been built, and the Air Force says it wants to build 44 more. The towers would be about 300 feet tall and supported by 15 guy wires.

They would use commercial electrical power but would have backup diesel generators.

Each tower would have 100 buried 330-foot copper wires radiating from the base to strengthen the signal. Peak power would be from 2,000 to 3,000 watts.

Possible Ground Wave Emergency Network sites

Towers would transmit about six seconds per hour and are not expected to interfere with radio and television broadcasts.

The Air Force disclosed last year that it was looking for sites in Nevada and Idaho but did not name specific areas.

The Air Force has produced an environmental impact statement covering all the proposed towers, and public hearings are planned in nearby communities.

County employees glad to occupy new building

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Leaving a place where animals make their home in the basement and where brownouts are common will be a pleasure, at least one county employee says.

Even more encouraging is that the new building some county employees will move into is much more roomy and modern, said Heten Phillips, administrative secretary for the county zoning department.

"I'm jacked personally," Phillips said.

The Planning and Zoning Administration, the Weed Bureau and the University of Idaho county agent's office will be moved by Feb. 1 to the newly purchased Eastern Idaho Production Credit Association building at 246 Third Ave. E., County Commissioner Marvin Hempleman said.

The county bought the building for $165,000 using funds it received from the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, which bought a county building next to the hospital for $150,000.

That building is earmarked for demolition to make room for future expansion. The downtown building, once used as a maternity ward, is a maze of add-ons with no central heating and single-paned windows, Phillips said.

"Most people will tell you they were born there," she said.

The 10,000-square-foot PCA building is almost 2,000 square feet larger than the county's building, Commissioner Norma Bliss has previously said. It also has much more parking space, she said.

The county is knocking out a few walls to make room for a meeting room, where the Planning and Zoning Board will hold its meetings, Hempleman said.

County maintenance workers are stripping and painting walls. Remodeling will only cost about $10,000, Hempleman said.

In other business, the county has applied for a $35,500 grant from the Idaho Recreation Vehicle Account to build a rest room/shower facility at the fairground's new Recreation Vehicle Park, Hempleman said.

The county will have to pay 10 percent of the cost of the facility, or about $3,500.

Craig could be 1st to seek McClure's seat

BOISE (AP) — It appears Rep. Larry Craig, the five-term-veteran from Idaho's 1st Congressional District, will be the first Republican to get into what is expected to be a wide-open scramble to succeed James McClure in the U.S. Senate.

After McClure announced Friday he's retiring at the end of this year, Craig didn't say flatly that he's running but scheduled a statewide series of news conferences on Tuesday — the kind of events usually used to launch a major campaign.

He's expected to have company in the primary, which could turn into a crowded field similar to the six-way battle Republicans staged in 1978 for their party's governor nomination.

Actually, both Craig and Republican Attorney General Jim Jones started work last month laying the groundwork for a possible Senate campaign. That came before McClure made his intentions known.

Both politicians said they had no firm word that McClure planned to get out, but they had to start organizing and preparing for a campaign.

Former governor John Evans, who made the same race four years ago, said it took him two full years to organize and line up financing for what turned out to be an unsuccessful campaign against Republican Sen. Steve Symms.

But there's less than five months before the May 22 primary, and political newcomers will be hard-pressed to build an organization and name identification by then.

Idaho Falls legislator David Steed was the first to formally announce, for the Democratic nomination, but he's an absolute political unknown.

Craig has successfully run for Congress five times after service in the Idaho Senate, and is well-known in the 1st District. But like some others, he has to establish his identity in the rest of the state.

Jones, in his eighth year as attorney general, won't have that problem. He's won statewide races and didn't even have an opponent four years ago. He also ran for Congress twice in the 2nd District, losing to veteran Republican George Hansen in the primary both times.

Democrat Richard Stallings has said for months he didn't want to run for the Senate this year, pointing toward a 1992 race against Sen. Steve Symms. But he hasn't closed the door to running, especially since it's always easier to win an election for an open seat than to beat a veteran incumbent.

David Leroy, who barely lost to Gov. Cecil Andrus in the governor race four years ago, may run for the Senate or the 1st District congressional seat. Besides the governor race, Leroy also was elected attorney general and lieutenant governor, so he is no stranger to statewide races.

Evans, now a Burley bank president, said he's keeping his options open, but wanted to wait until McClure declared his intentions before giving another campaign serious thought.

A weekend news story listed 25 possible candidates for the Senate, the two congressional seats and attorney general, all triggered by McClure's decision to retire. One of them is Jeanne Givens, Coeur d'Alene, a former state legislator who lost to Craig in the 1988 1st District congressional race. State Agriculture Director Dick Rush announced earlier he was looking at the Senate seat, but also has been considering a congressional bid.

Republican state senators John Hansen and Mike Crapo, both of Idaho Falls, indicated they might run for an open seat. Republican senators Rachel Gilbert of Boise and Roger Fairchild of Fruitland have talked about resigning to run for governor, so the GOP could be faced with the prospect of filling several Idaho Senate seats with newcomers.

Several Republicans said they might run for Jones' seat if he runs for the Senate, but only Blaine County Prosecutor Larry Scholawak has been talking about bidding for the Democratic nomination.

promising to remove it after the war. True to its promise, the postage was lowered in 1919.

Two special branch post offices started during World War II — the Naval Convalescent Branch at Sun Valley in 1945, a branch of the Ketchikan office, and the Hunt

Virginia Ricketts' column on Magic Valley history appears every other Monday.

Plan

elementary building for students in kindergarten through fourth grade.

"At some point the district will need to pass a bond," Nelson said. "We're not going to help you from the state, except from the lottery, and that's not going to be a lot."

Another solution, he said, would be for Wendell to consolidate with another district.

In 1993, a bond to build a high school gymnasium will be paid off. By then, a prioritized list of needs could be ready, Nelson said.

The trustees, along with a committee of local citizens, need to collect data on enrollment projections, determine what educational programs are needed, review existing facilities and evaluate the district's financial condition, he said.

Public comment is vital in gaining community support, Nelson said. To analyze the data, trustees should appoint a steering committee of seven to nine members representing a cross-section of the district.

The trustees also heard a talk by K.B. Rasmussen, who talked about how the Bear Lake County School District went from rags to riches.

A foundation formed and first drew funds from former students who were successful, Rasmussen said. Then, local groups joined the effort and soon the entire community supported the project, Rasmussen said.

Trustees said they may contact Rasmussen for advice.

"It's time to make some decisions about the future," Nelson advised. "Too many schools in Idaho wait until they have to do something and then make a decision overnight."

Fullers

regular monthly meeting. The board meets at 7 p.m. in the district's downtown administration building.

Feusabren said he thinks the district's current system is "working well, although I believe there is room for improvement and we are continually looking for techniques to better deliver instruction to children."

"It's an ongoing process," he said.

"We're not satisfied and we're not sitting on our laurels. We want to improve."

He also pointed out that the Fullers have never sought special services from the school district.

Fuller conceded that he is getting his information from clients.

"Quite frankly it is hearsay and that's not proof of anything," he said. "But if the system is doing its job, let's see. Let's have the evaluators do that. I feel we have a right to ask for that."

New East German coalition crumbles

WEST BERLIN (AP) — An environmental and economic coalition created by six East German reform movements to challenge the Communists crumbled Sunday just three days after being formed, underscoring the difficulties pro-democracy forces face in May elections.

While Communist Party leader Gregor Gysi kicked off his party's campaign in Potsdam, one of the pro-democracy groups announced it was leaving the coalition, and the largest group said it preferred to run candidates independently.

The Communist Party has been stripped of its constitutional mandate to rule and has been tarnished by corruption scandals, but the lack of a credible alternative has left it in control of the government and better positioned for the election than the fractured opposition.

Massive street demonstrations and the exodus of thousands forced the Communists to grant historic concessions last year, including the promise of free elections May 6. Dozens of citizens' groups pressing for social, political,

Police move to protect crumbling wall

WEST BERLIN (AP) — Tourists have chiseled so many souvenirs out of the Berlin Wall that some sections are in danger of collapsing, and police have had to cordon off one especially hard-hit area near the Brandenburg Gate.

The East German government plans eventually to tear down the entire wall and replace it with normal border markings, President Manfred Gerlach disclosed in an interview last week. But free-lance demolition work has already proceeded on the 100-mile border barrier, especially on the West Berlin side.

East German border guards on Sunday welded steel bars over a gaping hole near the Brandenburg Gate to shore up the reinforced concrete structure.

West Berlin police put up crowd control barriers Saturday around the most damaged sections to keep adults and children from climbing inside giant holes carved out of a double-walled segment. Police cited a danger of collapse.

Once covered by graffiti, the wall has been chipped bare at the Brandenburg Gate, the 18th-century arch that now symbolizes German unity.

The wall has also taken a beating atCheckpoint Charlie, the famed intra-Berlin crossing, but police said they do not fear a collapse there.

On Sunday, onlookers and chippers on the West Berlin side boomed when East German border guards welded steel bars over a 7-foot-high hole at the Reichstag, the former seat of Germany's parliament near the Brandenburg Gate.

Enterprising vendors have been selling pieces of the wall for up to $30 and even rent hammers and chisels for do-it-yourself chipping.

Mohdshemi says no ties with U.S.
NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian Parliament member Ali Akbar Mohdshemi said in an interview released Sunday that Iran does not have ties with the United States and that the Lebanese have a right to hold foreign hostages.

In the interview with the English-language Tehran Times, the former Iranian foreign minister said Iran is interested in developing diplomatic relations with all the countries of the world except the United States, Israel and South Africa.

Mohdshemi said the holding of foreign hostages in Lebanon was an internal matter and he believes the Lebanese are within their rights.

Lebanese Sunnis, Shiites, Druze and Christians are the hostages of the U.S., Israel and other Western powers, Mohdshemi said. "So it's their natural right to take hostages to inflict heavy blows on their enemies."

Nicaragua approves 6 visas for U.S.
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government has approved six entry visas for American diplomats to allow the minimum number of officers at the U.S. Embassy, an official source said Sunday.

Twenty U.S. diplomats were expelled from Nicaragua on Dec. 29 in retaliation for a raid by U.S. troops on the Nicaraguan ambassador's residence in Panama City. Nine U.S. diplomats were left in place, including Charge d'Affaires John Leonard.

Under international conventions, the minimum number of diplomats in a foreign mission is 15.

The Nicaraguan Foreign Ministry source, who insisted on anonymity, said the six American diplomats were expected to arrive soon.

Demonstrations continue in Bulgaria
SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Demonstrators protesting the restoration of ethnic and religious rights to the Turkish minority on Sunday shouted down Communist officials and demanded they resign.

"Bulgaria — a one-nationality country," read banners carried by some of the 10,000 ethnic Slavs who rallied outside Alexander Nevski Cathedral.

Standing in zero-degree weather, the protesters booed, hissed or chanted "Resignation! Resignation!" as Premier Georgi Atanasov and Interior Minister Atanas Semerdzhiev tried to address them.

In an apparent attempt to appease the protesters, Atanasov said Semerdzhiev would remain the official language. But both his and Semerdzhiev's speeches were drowned out.

"A hard time will befall the country whose people is divided," the official Bulgarian news agency BTA quoted Semerdzhiev as saying. He appealed to the crowd not to undermine "the tendencies toward democracy in the country."

The demonstrators were demanding the repeal of a Dec. 29 order allowing Bulgaria's 1.5 million ethnic Turks and Muslims to use their Moslem names and practice their religion without restrictions.

Gunman killed on Jordanian border
JERUSALEM (AP) — Soldiers killed an armed infiltrator from Jordan near an Israeli tourist resort Sunday in the fifth shooting this year along the country's border, an army spokesman said.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin issued a tough statement on behalf of the government, saying Israel regards Jordan as fully responsible for any border infiltrations.

The army spokesman said troops opened fire on a gunman wearing a Jordanian army uniform near the Hamat Gader sulphur springs park, five miles east of the Sea of Galilee.

The spokesman, who under military regulations was not identified, said the gunman was carrying a U.S.-made M-16 assault rifle, standard equipment in the Jordanian army. No Israeli soldiers were reported wounded.

Romanians march, pray against Communism

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Thousands of anti-Communist marchers and prayed Sunday for the martyrs of Romania's bloody revolution, and students rallied in several cities for educational reforms and a greater say in national affairs.

Marchers carried white cloth banners with letters in blood-red paint proclaiming, "The martyrs want liberty and bread." They knelt repeatedly on the ice-covered sidewalks during their slow, half-mile procession.

At sites of particularly heavy fighting, they halted to chant the Lord's Prayer and cross themselves. Many women wore black scarves, and some demonstrators carried lit funeral tapers.

The march was called by the Peasant and Christian Democratic parties to honor those who fell in the battle against loyalist forces of executed Communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu.

The once-banned parties, which have joined forces in preparation for promised elections in April, have warned against a renaissance of the Communist Party, which has been in de facto dissolution since Ceausescu's downfall.

The opposition groups also have expressed concern that the April election date is too soon to allow former parties other than the provisional government, the National Salvation Front, sufficient time to prepare. The Front's chairman and interim president, Ion Iliescu, said last Saturday they could be postponed, the national Rompres news agency reported.

The Peasant and Christian Democratic parties also have accused the Front, which includes several former Communists, of being a front for communism. Those fears were in evidence Sunday.

"They are calling for a new Communist Party," said Constantin Dimitrescu, alluding to tentative calls by some Communists to reform as a Democratic Socialist Party. "We say to that — the wolf has changed its fur but not its morals."

Less than two miles away, about 2,500 students met for a rally at the Polytechnical Institute to press for reform of Ceausescu's heavily indoctrinated education system.

Students read an 11-point program addressed to Premier Petre Roman, demanding autonomy for universities, more student say in determining the curriculum and postponement of examinations scheduled for Jan. 25.

"We believe the prime minister will listen to our opinions because he, too, is one of us," Bogdan Constantinescu, a mechanical engineering student, told the cheering crowd.

Roman previously taught hydraulic engineering at a university before his appointment last month as government head.

"We don't want to waste time on subjects such as political economy... (and) Marxism... instead we should be able to choose the subjects we want to take," Constantinescu said.

During Ceausescu's 24-year reign, all students were required to take political subjects extolling the virtues of "scientific socialism."

Slogans reading "Freedom to the Students," "No Politics," and "University Autonomy," were draped across the rally hall, where Constantinescu announced the formation of a free students trade union. It will press student demands within Romania's newly established free trade union federation.

Gorbachev is facing widespread nationalist challenges in homeland

The Washington Post

MOSCOW — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev faces immediate nationalist challenges, both political and military, from one end of the country to another, and the coming week is bound to be viewed as a key moment in the way he begins to tackle these multifaceted issues.

In Azerbaijan, Shiite Moslems demanding free access to Iran continued today to destroy fences, guard posts and equipment along the country's frontier with Iran despite the presence of an increasing number of Soviet troops in the area.

In Lithuania, both the republic's Communist Party and its popular independence movements are anxiously awaiting Gorbachev's visit Jan. 10-12 to see what kind of compromises or demands he will bring. In Moscow Gorbachev continued to hold talks with Lithuanians Saturday.

Both issues present challenges that previous Soviet leaders would likely have solved with quick displays of force. But in both instances Gorbachev wants to use a minimum amount of coercion, according to his advisers.

In Azerbaijan, he does not want a repeat of last April's show of brute military force in neighboring Georgia, where army troops used poison gas and snows to break up

Sudan to investigate Arab, African clash

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — The Sudanese government said Sunday it would form a committee to investigate a clash between Arab and African tribes Dec. 28 which it said left 214 people dead.

A cabinet statement said an unspecified number of Sudanese from the two tribes had been arrested.

Although the rebel Sudan People's Liberation Army claims that more than 2,000 southerners of African descent were killed by Arab militiamen, the statement said only 214 had been killed and 38 wounded.

The southern rebels have accused the government of complicity in the massacre. They said 90 southerners were killed in a police station where they sought refuge.

The clash took place Dec. 28 in the Jabalain area, south of Kosti and about 250 miles south of Khartoum.

SNOW BUILD-UP

During the last few days of continued snowfall and snow build-up the City Street crews have had an increasing problem with snow being pushed out into streets and alleys from private property. City Code Section 8-2-9(b) prohibits the obstruction of public ways except by special permits.

Private property owners are urged to take the following steps to prevent snow from blocking or partially blocking streets, alleys, and sidewalks with snow removed from their property are violating the law. They are also increasing their personal liability exposure by creating hazardous driving conditions for the traveling public. Property owners should pile snow on their own property to stay legal. Citations will be issued if continued violations occur.

Baker-Finch put together a streak of seven birdies in 10 holes that ended with a decisive, last-hole bogey that enabled Paul Azinger to score a one-stroke victory in the Tournament of Champions on Sunday.

The victory was worth $135,000 from the total purse of $750,000.

Rams beat Giants in OT play, 19-13

By BARRY WILNER
The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Traveling is getting to be fun for the Los Angeles Rams.

They are seeing the USA on a weekly basis, playing big football games. They're winning and getting closer to the Super Bowl, where the real fun begins.

The Rams moved within one step — albeit a massive one — of becoming the fourth wild-card team to make the Super Bowl when they beat the New York Giants 19-13 in overtime Sunday. After Flipper Anderson caught a 30-yard touchdown pass from Jim Everett to win it, his thoughts turned ahead.

“This is what we wanted, what we were after, another shot at the 49ers,” Anderson said of next Sunday's N.F.C. title game against the defending champions at San Francisco. The Rams won there 13-12 this season, then lost 30-27 at home to the 49ers in Week 14.

“We felt we should have beaten the 49ers on Monday night,” Anderson said. “We've been working to get another chance at them.”

The Rams and Giants worked extra time Sunday — it was the first playoff overtime game for Los Angeles and New York's first since the famous 1958 NFL Championship game against Baltimore.

But this one didn't last long, thanks to Everett's throws and a pass interference call on cornerback Sheldon White that immediately cost New York 27 yards.

One play later, it cost the Giants their third straight loss to the Rams when Anderson got behind Mark Collins.

“I don't think there was any question,” Anderson said of the penalty on a slant-in pattern. “He got me. As soon as he reached for the ball, he touched me and you're not allowed to do that downfield. That's a penalty.”

Not according to White and his teammates, who had kept the Rams' potent attack (No. 2 in the NFL in scoring) quiet most of the way.

“All I have to say is the ball wasn't even catchable,” White insisted. “I don't even know if there was contact. The ball was five feet from his hands. Superman couldn't have caught that ball.”

“The call was made and we just have to live with that,” said Lawrence Taylor, who sacked Everett twice — forcing one fumble — and was the Giants' best player. “All losses are tough.”

“All of us don't want to lose in the playoffs. Especially on that (kind-of-call). That's the worst thing about it!”

That depends on your perspective.

“Those things happen in games and we, as coaches, have to accept that they will

Machines may be replacing man to officiate sports

By JULIE CART
Los Angeles Times

Technology has been applied in sports most often to benefit athletes.

And why not? Machines are increasingly responsible for the gains made in the last decade by athletes, who now have access to computerized weight-training devices and wind tunnels in which to ride their bicycles.

But machines also are used to govern and judge sport. Some believe this area will yield the greatest sports breakthroughs of the next decade.

Here, then, is a brief look at technology as it is applied in some sports, and projections for the future for others.

Who would have guessed that one of the most significant innovations in professional football would entail a gang of men clustering around a television set, intently watching something they had already seen.

Instant replay has been an experiment in the NFL since it was approved in 1986. It has survived tenuously on a year-to-year basis since then.

Its institution was born out of the agoniz-ingly close calls, foot-on-the-line touchdowns and flat-out missed infractions that persuaded league owners to approve the use of video replays to review controversial or close calls by officials on the field.

As it is used, a replay official — the league has 16 — calls for a play to be reviewed. Using a television feed, officials review the play and either confirm or reverse the on-field official's call.

Replays have proved to be costly and most irritating — time consuming. And the replay has many times provided controversy of its own.

But if the NFL is losing interest in instant replay, at least two other groups are investigating it.

The National Hockey League has decided to experiment with instant replay during the next exhibition season.

If, after the tryout, the league goes ahead with the plan, instant replays most likely will be instituted for the playoffs of the 1990-91 season.

The replay will be used only to determine if the puck crossed the goal line, often a difficult assessment to make in such a fast-moving sport.

Broncos bust the Steelers

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

DENVER — Dan Reeves thought his Denver Broncos were going uphill all day in the first step on their quest to reach their third Super Bowl in four years.

But John Elway and Melvin Bratton got them over the top Sunday and on to yet another meeting with the Cleveland Browns, whom they beat in two dramatic games to get to their first two NFL title games.

Bratton gained just 3 yards in 4 carries, but two of them were 1-yard touchdown runs, the last one literally over the top of the Pittsburgh line with 2:27 left. It gave the Broncos a 24-23 victory over a team they had beaten 34-7 on Nov. 5, limiting them to 170 yards in the process.

This time, the Steelers had 404 yards, racing over, around and through a Denver

Title gives Miami dynasty thoughts

By STEVEN WINE
The Associated Press

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Dennis Erickson, whose two immediate predecessors each won a national championship, already is working on becoming the first Miami Hurricanes coach to win it.

“There are a lot of players coming back,” Erickson said. “If we work like we did this past year and continue to improve in the spring, we'll be an outstanding team.”

Miami won the 1989 national title by beating Alabama 33-25 in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's night. The Hurricanes, who also finished No. 1 under Howard Schnellenberger in 1983 and Jimmy Johnson in 1987, were 11-1 in Erickson's first year at Miami.

Idaho's Motta takes on Kings

By JIM SOUHAN
Dallas Morning News

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — A middle-aged fan wearing a Kings cap approached Dick Motta on Thursday, court-side at Arco Arena. He pushed his kid forward and asked for an autograph.

“Really glad to have you here, Coach!” he gushed.

Motta broke off a sentence and warned the guy with a stare that must have caused Mark Aguirre sleepless nights.

“Yeah,” Motta said. “Hope it works out.”

Motta's attitude as he takes over his first coaching job since he turned the Mavericks into a 55-win team, then quit in a gum-chomping fit, is this: If it doesn't work out, it won't be his fault.

“I wouldn't get put into any situation where I could fail,” Motta said Thursday night, eight hours after the Kings announced they had hired him to replace Joe Reynolds, who is moving to the front office as player personnel director.

“I coached 19 years and I've never been fired. That's not egotism, it's just that I can't comprehend any other way than winning. We will win here.”

Problem is, he just took the helm of a franchise that has comprehended every possibility but win-

Knicks barely escape Clippers, 110-109

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrick Ewing hit one of two free throws with 6.6 seconds left in overtime and broke out of a minislump with 44 points and 22 rebounds as the New York Knicks beat the Los Angeles Clippers 110-109 Sunday night.

Ewing, whose scoring average dropped from 29.6 to 27.7 in the last eight games, dominated Los Angeles inside as the Clippers tried to continue their recent improvement on the road.

He scored seven of New York's nine points in overtime, including the game-winning free throw after he was fouled by Benoit Benjamin.

Ron Harper, who led the Clippers with 29 points, missed a driving bank shot at the buzzer that would have won it for Los Angeles.

The Clippers, who never led after halftime, came back from an 85-76 deficit in the fourth quarter to tie the score 99-99 with 31 seconds left on a free throw by Charles Smith, who had 22 points and 14 rebounds.

Ewing gave the Knicks a two-point lead with a tumorous jumper with 12.6 seconds left but Smith again tied it, this time on a baseline jumper with 2.2 seconds left, forcing the overtime.

Ewing had three baskets as the Knicks scored eight of the first 10 points in the extra period for a 109-103 lead.

New Jersey 98-Atlanta 93

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Roy Hinson scored 20 points and Lester Conner added nine key points in the fourth quarter as the New Jersey Nets defeated the Atlanta Hawks 98-93 Sunday night and snapped a five-game losing streak.

An 8-0 run that included a pair of baskets by Conner and a technical foul shot by Purvis Short after Atlanta's Kevin Willis was ejected enabled the Nets to turn a 75-71 deficit into a 79-75 lead with six minutes remaining.

The Hawks, who beat New Jersey 105-96 in Atlanta on Saturday night, were by Dominique Wilkins, who had 33 points and had 15 rebounds.

But Conner, who scored 13 points, made two free throws with 23 seconds to play.

After a 3-point goal by Atlanta's Moses Malone, Conner hit two more free throws, giving the Nets a 97-93 lead with 10 seconds left.

Malone, who scored 13 of his 15 points in the second half, missed another 3-pointer with five seconds left and Conner closed the scoring by hitting one of two free throws.

No. 8 Louisville crushes UCLA, 97-80

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Felton Spencer had six points in his own opening 20-3 run by Louisville as the eighth-ranked Cardinals coasted to a 97-80 victory over No. 15 UCLA Sunday.

Louisville (10-2) made its first four shots while taking a 9-0 lead and led 20-3 just 6:25 into the game as Spencer, a 7-foot center, made two shots in the lane and two free throws.

Louisville's Keith Williams scored on a layup for a 31-13 lead, but UCLA (9-2) scored seven straight points on Tracy Murray's 3-pointer and baskets by Trevor Wilson and Kevin Walker to slice the margin to 31-20 with 6:31 left.

But Everick Sullivan scored four points in 7-0 shut out the next two minutes to push Louisville's lead to 38-20 and the Cardinals led 51-29 at halftime.

UCLA was also hampered when Don MacLean, its leading scorer with 21.3 points a game, picked up his third foul midway through the half and went to the bench.

gon State to a 64-58 Pacific-10 Conference victory over California Sunday.

Payton was just 2-for-7 in the first half as Cal led 32-28 at intermission.

The Bears stretched their lead to 47-37 before Payton got hot and the Beavers switched from a zone defense to man-to-man.

The Oregon State star scored nine points during a 16-4 second-half run that gave the Beavers (11-2 overall, 4-0 in the Pac-10) a 58-54 lead with two minutes remaining.

shot from the baseline with no time on the clock to give Stanford an come-from-behind 58-56 win over Oregon in a Pac-10 Conference game Sunday.

Only 20 seconds before, Ammann slipped away a pass from Oregon's Bob Fife, knocking it into the hands of Stanford's Adam Keefe, giving Stanford possession to set up the winning basket.

Stanford, now 9-2 overall and 1-1 in the conference, outscored the Ducks 6-3 in the final three minutes to take the win.

Dolphins owner Robbie dies at 73
MIAMI (AP) — Miami Dolphins owner Joe Robbie, who two years ago moved the NFL team to its own privately financed stadium, died Sunday at age 73. Miami coach Don Shula said Robbie, who had reportedly been ill in recent months, died at an undisclosed Miami-area hospital.

"I was aware he was seriously ill, but I only found out about this a half hour ago, and it's still a shock," Shula said from his home late Sunday.

"Nobody wanted to win more than Joe Robbie did, when you think back on Joe Robbie, you think about the good times, the Super Bowl years," Shula said.

There was no immediate word on the cause or exact time of his death.

Bowden salary doubles in life pact

Florida State football Coach Bobby Bowden has agreed to terms of a lifetime contract that will double his salary to more than $600,000 a year, according to his agent and university officials.

The contract makes Bowden the highest-paid collegiate coach in the state and one of the best-compensated in the nation, said interim athletic director Bob Goin.

"Bobby Bowden is a user contract," Goin said. "All we've done is upgrade it — substantially. He'll be here until he doesn't want to coach any more."

The agreement ends rumors Bowden might consider leaving Florida State for another coaching job, such as that at Alabama, should Crimson Tide Coach Bill Curry move to Kentucky.

Ex-ISU athletic head takes new post

POCAHELLO (AP) — Tom Jewell, who resigned as athletic director at Idaho State University last month, has been named acting assistant housing director at the Pocatello school.

Jewell will assume the duties of Teresa Irish, who moved up to succeed Peter Angstadt as housing director when he was elected mayor of Pocatello in a Dec. 5 runoff election with incumbent Mayor Richard Finlayson.

Jewell's new assignment will be at a lower salary than he received as athletic director, Kent Tingey, ISU university relations director, said Wednesday.

Tingey said Jewell's appointment was temporary, but he may apply for the permanent position.

One play later, that was the ball game.

The Giants were blitzing and Anderson got a step on Collins, who had picked off Everett's pass on a similar pattern in the third period.

"I was called for a pass pattern," said Anderson, who caught a 20-yard TD pass with 17 seconds left in defense that allowed the fewest points in the league this season—the Steelers had leads of 10-0, 17-7 and 23-17 before Elway engineered the 71-yard, 9-play touchdown drive that led to Bratton's winning run.

So excited was Bratton that he misspoke a bit.

"I'm glad I got it," he said. "In the past, every time I score the winning touchdown, we lose. I guess my jinx is off."

Indeed, there were few tears at either locker room as Pittsburgh concluded a remarkable season that began with two losses by a combined score of 92-10 and ended with five victories in the last six regular-season games. That finish gave the Steelers a 9-7 record and an AFC wild-card berth.

Then came a 26-23 overtime victory last week over Houston in the wild-card game and a dominating 24-17 upset here at the same stage of the 1984 playoffs.

"I don't have a whole lot to say, but I'm proud as hell of our football team," said coach Chuck Noll, who despite four Super Bowl victories in the 1970s was being vilified in Pittsburgh after a series of mediocre seasons and this year's horrible start.

Motta

The Kings are 7-21 and haven't made the playoffs since 1986. They haven't won a playoff game since 1981. The only championship banner hanging in Arco Arena is from 1951, when they played in Rochester.

In a reflective moment, Motta will admit his work here won't be as much fun as being through Idaho or hanging out at his summer home in Fish Haven. "I'm in a position in my life where I can't get into a no-win situation," Motta said. "I have a real neat life. I probably shouldn't muddle it up this way."

But Motta also admits that as a television analyst for the Detroit

Pistons, watching basketballs bounce without determining how they should be directed, drove him crazy. And when a friend described by Motta as a "third party" told him that the Kings were not high on any of their other candidates for the job, John MacLeod, Bob Weiss or Mike Schuler — Motta called Sacramento.

Why Sacramento? There have been plenty of other openings since Motta left Dallas after the Mavericks lost to a highly regarded Seattle team in the first round of the 1987 playoffs.

Motta says it's simple. This is the first job that has come open since his urge to coach was renewed.

Therapy

 nings is decorated with kid-sized tables and stools. Sometimes she'll have clients paint with the "wrong" hand; sometimes they'll work with clay. "And no client ever tells her they can't," make art, Davis claims. "There's no wrong or right to it," says Davis. "It's perfect just the way it comes out."
 Once the painting is done, the left brain comes back and "can take a look at it and verbalize it," says Davis. "Immediately, they'll be able to start talking about it. The whole idea with this kind of therapy is it's so quick — it gets you zeroed in." Davis also enters the process at this point, but the art does most of the talking.

"I just throw out questions — they themselves do the analyzing," she says.
 With their artwork before them, "they don't need me to explain what's wrong."
 Marilu Jeno, owner of New Beginnings, says she started working with Davis months ago and saw the potential art therapy has.
 Although it started as a hair salon, New Beginnings has also offered yoga, counseling and a variety of programs through the Earthrise Institute, all in-line with the concept of total healing.
 "The 1990s will be the decade of healing," says Jeno. "The only way we can heal the planet is to heal the child within."

Memory program slated at Valley High
HAZELTON — John Cruddele, a nationally known speaker, will present "Who Made Some Memories" in a program at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Valley High School gymnasium. Cruddele, who will also be talking to Valley students the same day, tells people how to resist pressure to use drugs and alcohol. The public is invited. A short Valley SOS general meeting will be held prior to Cruddele's presentation.

Children, legal system topic of discussion
TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter will discuss "Children and the Legal System" when Xi Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma meets at 1 p.m. Saturday for a luncheon at 734's Chuckwagon, 1859 Kimberly Road. Members are encouraged to attend.

 makes them a family unit.
 She admits to having her life mapped out on a calendar and actually owns three of them. She keeps one at home by the phone, one in her purse and one in her desk at school.

"I jot down everything from birthdays to hair appointments on them," she says.
 If you're looking to put some order in your life, Everybody's Business in the Blue Lakes Mall has a wonderful array of calendars and planners to suit every taste, need and

Labels

 estees? Consider these possibilities:
 Realize that you can change. Avoid using, say, a label of "I'm dumb" and then supporting it with conclusions such as "That's just me." "I've always been that way," "That's my nature."
 You do have the ability to change anything you'd like.
 "I'm going to label when you label yourself you give any positive characteristic you have or any positive thing you've ever done in your life. Take the statement, 'I should have thought of that myself. I'm so self-centered I can't think of anyone else.'
 Making a statement like that ignores all the genuine, selfless efforts you've ever made on the behalf of others. (Besides that, who said you should have thought of a particular idea. Be good to yourself — cut out your merciless criticism!)
 Keep track of the labels you typically use for a week or so. Then throw them out of your language. Instead of descriptive and stay with the situation at hand: "I would have liked to have thought of that idea, but I didn't, and that's OK." (The last part of that statement is an example of being good to yourself!)
 "Think Grey." Instead of thinking of your characteristics or performance in absolutes, think about them in percentages: "Probably 95 percent of the time I do think about other people's needs. I'm ac-ually pretty good at doing that!"

 Try thinking of your behavior or performance in neutral terms. Imagine using the label "failure" as a description of an animal's behavior, says Dyer. Consider a dog barking for fifteen minutes, and saying about the dog: "He really isn't very good at barking. I'd give him a 'C'."
 That's absurd, Dyer emphasizes. "It is impossible for an animal to fail because there is no provision for evaluating natural behavior. Spiders construct webs, not successful or unsuccessful webs. Cats hunt mice; if they aren't successful in one attempt, they simply go after another. They don't lie there and whine, complaining about the one that got away, or have a nervous breakdown because they failed. Natural behavior simply is! So why not apply the same logic to your own behavior and rid yourself of the fear of fail-budget.

 Just remember not to go overboard because flexibility is an admirable quality, and "a little vice is nice."
 Half the fun of having a good routine is being able to break it now and again.

Even if you want to improve your behavior, consider where you're at as "natural behavior" — as simply a neutral starting point for change — instead of some awful flaw in yourself.
 Remember that all of these points apply to other people as well. When you label others, you see them as totally "bad" or "deficient" and wipe out their personality or "essence." You're not giving the other person specific information about a specific behavior that occurs in a specific situation that may have bothered you. That makes it difficult for the other person to even consider a change!

Hypocritical widower gives 'good' woman a bad deal

DEAR ABBY: I am a petite, trim, attractive (I've been told), 60-year-old widow with a pleasing personality. I have been going with a successful, nice-looking widower for 18 months.

At the end of the first month, he asked me not to date anyone else, and I agreed not to if he promised me the same thing. He said, "Fine." He painted glowing pictures of cruises he planned to take me on. I even went out and bought cruise clothes, but those trips never materialized. I finally pinned him down and asked him why he made such big promises but never delivered. He said, "Frankly, there are so many lonely women out there who would not only pay their own way to go on a cruise with a man — they would pay his way, too!" (Abby, this man brags that he has a net worth of $2 million).

Now, after a year and a half of this affair, I have realized that he is never going to offer me anything more than his bed. He says he doesn't want to marry me because he doesn't want to be tied down, yet he expects sex daily in a lovely wifely fashion.

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

I finally told him I want out because I wanted a man who would love and cherish me as I did him, so we could grow old together. He said that at least we had companionship — someone to eat and dance with. Abby, this man wants a "good" woman by his side. Yet he offers a good woman nothing in return.

I have a name that is highly respected in this community. I have never had an affair in my life outside of this one. I truly fell in love with him.

He professes to be a good Christian. He has several pictures of Jesus in his home, an open Bible on a stand and "praying hands" on a stand. He wants me at his side every Sunday in church. Abby, do you think this man is using me? And what should I do?

— FEELING USED IN TEXAS

DEAR FEELING USED: Of course this man is using you — but not without your cooperation.

He spoke of cruises, then told you of the "lonely women" who would gladly pay his way as well as their own. This man is a cheapie. He is also a hypocrite, pretending to be a good Christian but acting otherwise. Say goodbye to this man. He's a user. You want the respectability of marriage — he just wants to "play house."

DEAR ABBY: I was a widow for many years. Four years ago, I married a widower. His wife had a long bout with lung cancer and he never stops talking about it. It gets on my nerves at times, and most of his friends are also tired of hearing about it. It saddens me the way he dwells on it.

Another thing: Every holiday, he goes to the cemetery and takes flowers. At Christmas, he placed a large spray on her grave. Me, I had to go out and buy my own poinsettia plant. At Easter, there is always a large pot of spring flowers on her grave, but I don't even get one card. This makes me sad, because I am alive and can enjoy flowers, but I get none. Yet he continues to take flowers to her grave where nobody can enjoy them, but it looks good to the family and friends.

Abby, I had a happy marriage and my husband was a wonderful man, but I don't spend every holiday at his grave, nor do I talk about him all the time. Why can't my husband leave the past in the past and get on with the future? This has created a barrier between us.

By the way, from what I've heard from neighbors and close friends, their marriage was not all that great. So what is he living with?

— MARRIED BUT SO ALONE

DEAR MARRIED BUT SO ALONE: Possibly guilt. He may be trying now to make up for what he failed to do for his late wife while she was living.

Stretching: Can it help counter sore muscles?

Anyone who has ever exercised has probably experienced delayed-onset muscle soreness (DOMS) in skeletal muscles after strenuous or unaccustomed exercise.

The pain is usually first perceived eight to 24 hours after exercising and lingers for two to five days.

Bodylessons

People tend to think that stretching alleviates delayed-onset muscle soreness, despite the fact that research has been inconclusive. Many studies have explored whether stretching causes a chronic, or long-term, reduction in muscle soreness after exercise.

One study observed less pain in stretched than in nonstretched muscles, while another study found no reduction in pain after stretching. One study attempted to determine whether a routine of post-exercise static stretching could alleviate exercise-induced DOMS in the short or long term.

Another purpose of the study was to determine the possible effects of stretching on factors that usually accompany such pain: reduced muscle strength and elevated serum creatine kinase, a commonly used marker of exercise-induced skeletal muscle

Stretching has some benefits other than preventing sore muscles (muscles you use when pulling toward your body). Stretching did not alleviate the pain.

All the volunteers reported soreness in the left knee extensor muscles after exercise. They also reported soreness in the right sole of their foot.

Despite conflicting research results on post-exercise stretching, it is important for maintaining or improving your range of motion (flexibility).

The following stretch is for the hamstrings, calves and gluteals.

- Sit with your legs extended in front of you; your posture straight and tall.
- Without slouching, gently tilt your torso forward until you feel a comfortable stretch in your hamstrings. Be sure to bend at the hips, and avoid rounding forward through your upper back.
- Flex your feet to enhance the calf stretch.
- Place your hands in front of or behind you, whichever is comfortable. Hold without bouncing for about 30 seconds.
- Relax, then repeat as desired.

Prepared childbirth course slated

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Regional Medical Center will hold a teen-age prepared childbirth course beginning Tuesday and continuing through Feb. 30.

This seven-week course will meet from 4 to 5 p.m. on Tuesdays in the Women's Health and Education Center conference room, second floor. A support person is encouraged to attend.

Designed for girls in their sixth to seventh month of pregnancy, the course will cover such topics as the specific needs of a teenage mother, relaxation and breathing techniques, preparation for delivery, hospital procedures and infant care.

The fee is $25, with financial arrangements available. Participants must pre-register by calling the Women's Health Center at 737-2900, between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Big Kids Club meets here Saturday

TWIN FALLS — The Big Kids Klub is a program designed to help children (ages 2½ to 5) adjust to the idea of a new baby brother or sister. Sponsored by the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, this siblings class will be from 10 to 11 a.m. Saturday in the Women's Health and Education Center conference room, second floor.

The class is taught by Leslie Silvester, LPN, who recommends that the big kid should attend in the mother's eighth month of pregnancy. She asks the children to bring a favorite doll or stuffed animal to the class. Participation cost is $3 per child or $8 per family. Class size is limited to 10, so early pre-registration is advised.

To register or for more information, call the Women's Health and Education Center at 737-2900, between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.
