INEL among plants due environmental checks

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — The Energy Department agreed Friday to conduct full-scale environmental assessments of its plants to clean up and modernize its vast, troubled nuclear weapons manufacturing complex.
Preparation of the "programmatic environmental impact statements" will give the public its first opportunity to participate in decisions about an operation that has been a closed circle since the dawn of the nuclear age, according to environmentalists and members of Congress who have been putting intense legal and political pressure on the department for for such environmental reports.

They said preparation of the environmental impact statements will require the Energy Department to explain and justify the environmental and economic costs of all 17 weapons production facilities in 13 states, to discuss publicly the materials that are used and the way they are handled, to develop alternatives to the construction of new facilities and to explain the potential impact of closing any of the facilities and transfer of their operations.
Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., said the decision to conduct the studies shows that "our government's purest creation of the cold war may be coming in from the cold." A congressional staff specialist said the process "will allow the public to come to grips with the whole defense complex and decide whether they want it." Another said the decision signals "the incipient collapse of the nuclear industrial infrastructure."
He and others suggested that the process will give the Energy Department a safe cover for abandoning politically important construction projects that it cannot afford or no longer deems necessary because of changes in the international political climate.

Particularly vulnerable is the proposed Special Isotope Separation Facility at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, which would use lasers to produce weapons-grade plutonium — a material that many experts say is not needed because current stocks are ample. That project lost its most important political backer earlier this month when Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, announced that he would not seek reelection.
Energy Secretary James D. Watkins said in a statement that preparation of the reports, "with opportunities for full public participation in the process, will assure environmentally informed decisionmaking with regard to these major program initiatives. This decision further demonstrates my personal commitment to chart a new environmental course for the Department of Energy. I intend for DOE to comply fully with the letter and spirit of NEPA (the National Environmental Policy Act) in its decisionmaking."

Watkins did not mention in his statement a lawsuit that 22 environmental groups filed last July in an effort to force the Energy Department to undertake the environmental assessments. A procedural conference on

Abortion issue stirs initial fuss in Capitol halls

The Associated Press
BOISE — Legislative Democrats are objecting to a Republican leadership proposal for handling what is expected to be a deluge of abortion legislation because it precludes introducing those measures in the Senate.
"These bills should not be treated any differently than any other bills," Sen. John Peavey of Carey, Democratic caucus chairman, said Friday. "The process should be the same for every bill."
But some admitted privately that the procedure also could work to shield Senate Republicans from much of the political blood-letting likely to occur as the abortion-debate heats up.
Democrats will be campaigning this fall to pick up three more seats in the Senate to gain control of that chamber for the first time in three decades.
Compounding the procedural issue were mounting questions among politicians about whether the perceived solid opposition to abortion among the state's voters will hold up if the pro-choice argument is couched in terms of cutting the government out of the personal lives of Idaho women.
But Senate Republican President Pro Tem Michael Crapo of Idaho Falls adamantly rejected any suggestion that the method proposed for handling abortion bills was politically motivated by a GOP desire to neutralize as much of the abortion debate's political fallout as possible.
The Republican leadership procedure, so far fully endorsed only by the Senate's GOP majority, would require all abortion bills to be submitted to the House-State-Affairs Committee by Feb. 2. To ensure a full debate on the issue, all proposals would be introduced.
By mid-month, a joint hearing with the Senate State-Affairs Committee would be held over two evenings at Boise State University, but no committee action would be taken on any bills at that time.

It's park and pray for Chicago parish

The Associated Press
CHICAGO — Downtown developers are offering a proposal made in heaven. The Old St. Mary's Catholic Church and Self Park will be a 12-story blessing to commuters and parishioners — 10 floors of parking space on a two-story church.
The proposed development includes classrooms, priest's quarters, parish offices and two chapels complete with altars and pews for 425 worshippers. But in place of the traditional spire, the complex would have parking for 305 vehicles.
An ersatz bell tower topped with a stainless steel cross actually will contain the elevator to the 10 open-air parking floors.
"The building will look like a church," said William McBride, the project's architect. "We want the parking garage to look secondary."
But the economics of high-priced downtown real estate played more of a role in the creation than did divine inspiration.
Church officials and their consultants, came to Standard Parking Corp. with the idea for the development to get more value out of their land.
Under the deal, Standard Parking and the developer, Stein & Co., get a prime downtown site in a growing market for off-street parking. The parishioners of Old St. Mary's would get a new church worth $5.5 million, essentially for free.
"It's a win-win situation," said Rev. Thomas J. Dove, the pastor.
The diocese retains ownership of the property and the first two floors of the development, while Standard Parking and Stein own the parking deck.
Besides the free church, the parish would get a 2.5 percent share of the parking receipts and free parking for churchgoers on Sunday and selected holy days, said Constance K. Dickinson, vice president of marketing for Stein

Wholesale price inflation reaches 8-year high

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Soaring energy costs pushed wholesale prices up 0.7 percent in December, bringing inflation in 1989 to an eight-year-high of 4.8 percent, the government said Friday.
The sharp, seasonally adjusted monthly rise helped spook financial markets into their steepest dive since the Oct. 13 "mini-crash." Traders read the inflation report as a sign the Federal Reserve Board would not lower interest rates anytime soon.
They were also reacting to stock plunges earlier in London and Tokyo. At the close of trading, the Dow Jones average of industrial stocks had tumbled 71.46 points to 2,689.21.

Meanwhile, in a separate report, the Commerce Department said retail sales in December rose a lackluster, seasonally-adjusted 0.2 percent. For the year, sales rose only 5 percent, a seven-year low and barely ahead of the inflation rate.
"We're starting the year with the worst of both possible worlds: inflation accelerating and growth slowing," said economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. Inc., a government securities dealer in New York.
The 1989 gain in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index for finished goods, one stop short of retail, topped the previous year's rate of 4 percent and was more than double the 1987 pace of 2.2 percent.
It marked the third consecutive acceleration of wholesale inflation and was the steepest rise since the index shot up 7.1 percent in 1981.
The primary factor driving prices higher, both in December and for all of 1989, was energy, which climbed 1.4 percent for the month and 9.6 percent for the entire year.
The deep freeze that gripped much of the nation last month helped boost fuel oil prices 7.1 percent and natural gas costs 1.6 percent. Gasoline prices were unchanged after falling 7.7 percent in November.
For the year, fuel oil climbed 33.9

percent, the biggest jump since 1979. Gasoline rose 9.2 percent and natural gas, 3.5 percent.
Analysts foresee energy prices increasing substantially again this month, and perhaps in February, but then subsiding with warmer temperatures in the spring.
Food inflation moderated in 1989, advancing at a 5 percent pace compared with 5.7 percent in 1988, when a summer drought scared the nation's midsection.
Egg prices rose 40.9 percent, on top of a 42.1 percent increase in 1988; pork prices jumped 19.4 percent and dairy products, 14.3 percent. However, fresh

Lithuanians reject Gorbachev secession plan

Knight-Ridder News Service
VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. — As Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev on Friday kept up his appeal to Lithuanians to cool their passion for a break from the Soviet Union, Lithuanian pro-independence leaders flatly rejected his outline of a draft law that would allow republics to secede.
The officials said Gorbachev's idea, advanced Thursday on the first day of his three-day visit to Lithuania, only seemed to delay and frustrate their ambitions for independence and to buy time for him as he tries to hold together an empire that threatens to disintegrate.
"The idea seems to be to create a mechanism that would preclude independence by tying it to a lot of economic conditions," said Rolandas Pavilionis, vice rector of Vilnius University and a member of the Politburo of the Lithuanian Communist Party, which

Soviet unrest turns nasty
The Associated Press
MOSCOW — Azerbaijanis blocked government offices and seized a radio station in a Caspian Sea port, and Georgians demanding independence drove bureaucrats from their offices in the Caucasus, according to reports Friday.
The new ethnic turmoil coincided with a visit to Lithuania by President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who is trying to counter an independence drive in that Baltic republic and has been warning of ethnic conflicts.
The protesters in the Azerbaijan city of Lenkoran vented their anger over an Armenian parliamentary measure that implied possession of the disputed territory of Nagorno-Karabakh, said Savili Peretz, deputy director of the republic's official news agency Azerinform.

Columbia crew snares satellite

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Columbia's astronauts snared an 11-ton science laboratory floating 200 miles high in a dramatic rescue mission Friday that saved the satellite from a fiery plunge to Earth.

Rising alongside the satellite at more than 17,400 mph, commander Dan Brandenstein inched the space shuttle toward the spacecraft and then held it steady as the orbiter's robot arm latched on to the satellite, called Long Duration Exposure Facility.

"The rendezvous just went famously," flight director Al

Pennington said after the morning rescue. "It looks like we really have a valuable piece of science in our grasp."

Brandenstein steered the shuttle so close to LDEF that mission specialist Bonnie Dunbar only had to move the 50-foot mechanical arm about a foot to grasp a grappling device on the satellite, Pennington said.

"He was creeping," Pennington said, estimating that the shuttle moved about one-tenth of a foot per second during the final approach.

After Dunbar secured the wiry fingers of the robot arm to LDEF, she turned the satellite slowly above the cargo bay so it could be extensively photographed for about four hours before being stored for the trip home next week.

When the photography was completed, Dunbar gently lowered LDEF into the cargo bay.

"We see all five latches latched," Mission Control reported at about 1:50 p.m. MST. "Congratulations on a super photo survey and a perfect berthing. They're a lot of smiling faces down here in the control room, and a lot of happy P's (principal investigators) across the country."

Drug war to focus on certain areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal drug officials plan to designate the metropolitan areas of New York City, Miami, Houston, Los Angeles and almost the entire Southwest border as high-intensity drug trafficking areas, qualifying them for additional federal assistance, administration sources said Friday.

It's not clear exactly how much help those areas will get by virtue of this new designation. In the current fiscal year, only $25 million has been allocated for high-intensity localities.

Whether that could increase by $20 million to $21 million with money coming out of the federal asset forfeiture fund, Reggie Walton, associate director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy, said last month. The fund contains revenue from assets seized from drug traffickers.

Tremor shakes British Columbia

PRINCE RUPERT, British Columbia (AP) — An earthquake centered between the Queen Charlotte Islands and the British Columbia mainland struck on Friday, and residents reported seeing furniture move and rooms shake.

No damage or casualties were reported in the tremor, which was centered underwater in Dixon Entrance, 60 miles west of Prince Rupert on British Columbia's north coast.

Preliminary estimates from the Pacific Geoscience Center in Victoria set the tremor at about 5.0 on the Richter scale, geophysicist Gary Rogers said.

Albania calls unrest report 'slander'

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported Friday that authorities in Albania had imposed "extremely strict" security measures, but a senior Albanian Communist called reports of unrest there "slander."

Tanjug and Belgrade television said "something is apparently happening" in hard-line Albania and that the rare travelers from there report "brutal" measures against dissent.

As the last bastion of Stalinism in Eastern Europe, Albania is seen by some Western analysts as the next country to experience radical change. But its isolation and small population of 3 million are among the factors that make Albania different from other communist countries in the region.

"Albanian authorities in an effort to prevent unrest against the regime have imposed extremely strict control measures in the country," Tanjug said.

White House delays wetlands deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the second time in recent weeks, the Bush administration put off issuing an interagency agreement Friday aimed at more clearly establishing guidelines for protecting wetlands, prompting criticism from environmentalists.

The Environmental Protection Agency said in a statement that it was approving a 15-day extension for further discussions over the final wording of an agreement between the EPA and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Last month a decision was postponed for 30 days.

The memorandum of agreement has been the subject of weeks of discussions within the administration after members of Alaska's congressional delegation complained to the White House that it threatens oil and gas development in the state.

Modrow scraps secret police plans

EAST BERLIN (AP) — Communist Premier Hans Modrow on Friday scrapped bitterly opposed plans to form a new secret police force, an effort to hold together his coalition government until elections in May.

He also promised the old security agency would be dismantled by June 30 and announced he would fire Peter Koch, who was named to oversee the dissolution.

Lawmakers cleared the way for joint ventures with Western companies for the first time, and the ADN news agency said the financially strapped government would close some foreign diplomatic missions to save money.

Modrow is struggling to keep four increasingly assertive non-Communist parties in his coalition and lead off severe opposition criticism.

Late Friday, he said he could imagine giving to the opposition deputy ministerial posts in areas such as health or the environment.

Romania outlaws Communist Party

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Interim President Ion Iliescu told thousands of anti-Communist demonstrators Friday that Romania's Communist Party has been outlawed.

"Victory, Victory!" shouted the crowd of 5,000 after Iliescu's announcement. "The Front is with us!" they yelled, referring to the National Salvation Front, the country's interim leadership.

Iliescu's announcement was broadcast live on state radio and television.

The announcement came hours after the crowd had shouted down Iliescu and other leaders who tried to speak. Demonstrators yelled "Down with Communism! Kill the Communists!" They burned a Romanian Communist flag and Communist identification papers.

Friday was a national day of mourning, with religious ceremonies held across the country in memory of the victims of the violent revolution that toppled Communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu three weeks ago.

That lawsuit is scheduled for Thursday in U.S. District Court here. "I don't think the timing is coincidental," said Dan W. Watkins, attorney for the plaintiffs.

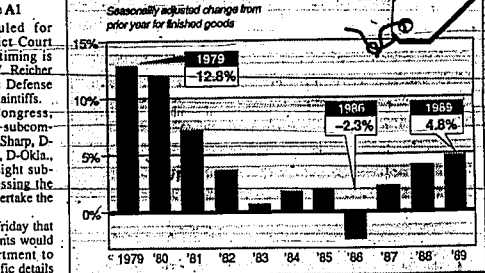

Key members of Congress, including House Energy subcommittee chairman Philip R. Sharp, D-Ill., and Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., head of an Energy oversight subcommittee, had been pressing the Energy Department to undertake the environmental studies.

An aide to Synar said Friday that the environmental statements would force the Energy Department to "come clean" on the specific details of its plans; to clean up such facilities as the Rocky Flats plutonium processing plant outside Denver and a potentially explosive complex of steel tanks holding liquid radioactive wastes at the Hanford Reservation in Washington state.

Watkins said two statements will be prepared. One will cover the Department's multi-billion dollar program to clean up radioactive and toxic wastes and repair environmental damage at the nuclear manufacturing complex. The second will deal with the so-called "2010 Plan" for modernization, which calls for construction of the Idaho facility and of two new reactors for the production of tritium, a radioactive isotope of hydrogen.

The "2010 Plan" was drafted before Watkins took office and is being revised. Watkins said that subjecting it to "environmental scrutiny" will allow DOE and the public to assess the system-wide impacts of broad policy alternatives before irrevocable commitments of resources are made.

fruit declined 10.4 percent; chicken, 8.9 percent, and fish, 5.7 percent.

December food prices, which rose a moderate 0.5 percent, did not reflect the full force of the cold snap. Vegetable prices shot up 4.1 percent, but fruit prices fell 1.7 percent.

The inflation rate excluding the volatile food and energy sectors, viewed as a good indicator of underlying inflation pressures, shot up 0.6 percent last month.

But a large part of that was attributed to a 4.5 percent jump in tobacco prices. Auto prices rose a brisk 0.6 percent, but for the year were up only 2.1 percent because of weak sales.

Prices excluding food and energy earlier.

rose 4.2 percent in 1989; down slightly from 4.3 percent in 1988. Economists attribute this stability to the policies of the Federal Reserve Board, which allowed the economy with higher interest rates until June; since then, the central bank has been allowing rates to fall in an effort to stop the country from toppling into a recession.

However, the credit easing moves have been made only cautiously and usually have not come if inflation was flaring.

The various changes in December left the price index for finished goods at 115.3 percent of its 1982 base. That meant that a hypothetical marketbasket of goods cost $115.30 in December, up from $100 a year ago.

Arctic fox off to new home in Boise zoo

TWIN FALLS - The fox found in a Twin Falls garden this week has found a home at the zoo in Boise.

Twin Falls Animal Control Officer Clay Vanderpool took the arctic fox, previously reported as a silver fox, to the Julia Davis Park Zoo in Boise on Friday, said Laurie Simonds, president of the People for Pets Humane Society.

The fox was initially slated to be killed, but an article in Thursday's Times-News prompted community concern, so the Idaho Fish and Game Department, Vanderpool and Simonds planned to find it a home.

But Simonds said that would be too difficult and would take too long. The animal was becoming stressed from being kept in a cage, she said.

Arctic foxes are not native to the area, but are raised on farms and sold as pets, Simonds said. It was reported as a silver fox to prevent someone from falsely claiming ownership, she said.

"I feel very strongly that she'd make a good candidate," McRoberts said.

Frank Habicht will be in Boise Tuesday to meet with legislators and citizens on underground fuel storage tank regulations and other environmental concerns.

The first of two meetings will begin at 9 a.m. in the Boise City Council Chambers and will focus on underground tanks. The second, at 10:45 a.m. in the House Majority Caucus Room in the Statehouse, will focus on pesticide use, disposal and the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

U.S. Sen. Steve Symms will lead the event sponsored by the Idaho Council on Industry and the Environment, a group supported by eastern Idaho businesses and INEL contractors.

Lawmakers ponder radical educational reforms

By MICHELLE COLE
Times-News writer

BOISE - Within the next few years your child's daily schedule might look a little like yours - school starts by 8 a.m. and ends at 5 p.m.

Junior's year might be structured a lot more like yours - with classes scheduled throughout the summer, but periodic breaks for vacation.

Your child's classroom might look more like your office, too - with smaller working groups and more managers.

And you might be responsible for helping to evaluate your child's teachers and school administrators.

Sound radical?

Maybe, say Idaho Republican lawmakers. But that doesn't mean they're not inclined to try a few of those ideas.

In his budget address Wednesday, Gov. Cecil Andrus urged the Legislature to bring Idaho's schools into the 21st Century. He recommended that the state spend $450 million for public education next year to reduce class sizes and boost teacher salaries.

"It has been said that the survival of education is a race between education and catastrophe," Andrus said. "Ladies and gentlemen, we must not court catastrophe."

Republicans applauded.

In fact, GOP leaders said later that they'll not only support Andrus' call for more money for education, they'll be looking for sweeping reforms this year.

"The Republicans are taking the lead on education," said state Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, vice chairman of the Senate Education Committee.

"What the Republicans are saying is that it's time to move on," Noh said. "The public is ready to move on."

Noh said the Republican agenda on education, released last week, proves his point.

Not only are Republicans calling for smaller class sizes, increased teacher salaries and a more flexible school year, but the GOP platform recommends open enrollment, performance-based pay and a school report card to measure student, teacher and administrative achievement.

The Idaho Education Association approves of most of the GOP agenda - especially the call for more teacher participation in making administrative decisions, said Richard Chilcote, president of the teachers' union and a former social studies teacher at Twin Falls' O'Leary Junior High School.

"This gives us the indication that they are starting to believe that teachers should be respected for their expertise," Chilcote said.

The IEA does not approve of the Republican recommendations on alternative certification for those without education degrees or teacher salary increases based on performance, rather than education or experience, however.

"How can you determine who makes a teacher better than another?" Chilcote asked.

In late November, the Democrats drafted an education platform of their own that is much like the GOP's January statement.

Unlike the Republicans, the Democrats

Program offers low-income women prenatal care

Joanne Bethke, expecting her second child in February, is still paying for the delivery of her 2-year-old son Adrian. Bethke gets help from the Pregnancy Program for prenatal care.

TWIN FALLS - Shelley Sneydy, 20, worked full-time before her daughter's birth. Her husband works full-time as well. Nevertheless, the family has no health insurance, and when they learned she was pregnant, they weren't sure how they would cover all the expenses.

Then Sneydy heard about the South Central District Health Department's Pregnancy Program.

"I think it's great. I think it's one of the best things," Sneydy said. "I'd have been in a real bind. It would have been really hard to pay for prenatal care."

Through the Pregnancy Program, low-income women receive free medical check-ups in the months before delivery, as well as other services such as nutritional counseling and case management.

This month, the health department's Pregnancy Program is celebrating the first birthday of a fourfold expansion in its ability to serve pregnant women.

In 1988, under stricter regulations, the program served only 48 women. With the expansion, the health district helped 132 women get prenatal care in 1989.

Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, Minidoka Hospital provide prenatal clinics

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Both Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and Minidoka Hospital have opened prenatal clinics to help serve women in the Pregnancy Program.

At Magic Valley Regional, a Family Health Services physician and a hospital nurse have clinics each Thursday. Women come to the hospital for their medical checkups.

The hospital also pays a malpractice insurance premium that covers physicians who will deliver the babies of the program's patients.

If physicians deliver more than 40 babies a year, their insurance rates increase about $15,000.

"Family Health Services and Magic Valley Regional have really come to the rescue," Maggie Machala, Pregnancy Program coordinator, said.

The program at Minidoka Hospital is similar. In other parts of the health district, which encompasses the eight-county Magic Valley, program participants are given medical treatment by individual physicians.

"All other services are received at the various health district offices."

Air Force cites other multiple-use models

The Associated Press

MOUNTAIN HOME AIR FORCE BASE - Southern Idaho residents concerned about plans to expand the Saylor Creek Bombing Range should consider the success of multiple-use programs at similar sites in Florida and Arizona, the Air Force says.

A 44-page press release issued by Mountain Home Air Force Base contends the situation at Saylor Creek is not unique, and that the Air Force has experience in successfully managing large tracts of public land.

"Avon Park Air Force Range in Florida and the Barry M. Goldwater Range in Arizona have dealt with some of the same environmental concerns expressed by the public about the proposed expansion of Saylor Creek Range," the release said.

"By looking at ranges like Goldwater and Avon Park it's easy to see how the Air Force has demonstrated its concern and ability to provide the best multiple-usage of land under their management while completing the mission," it said. "The intentions of the Air Force are the same for the Saylor Creek Range."

The Avon Park range covers 106,000 acres, including 92,837 acres leased for cattle grazing year-round. The government bought the land in 1941 and the range now is controlled by an Air Force installation commander.

The Goldwater range covers 2.7 million acres, including 880,000 acres of wildlife refuge controlled by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. No livestock grazing is allowed because of the presence of two endangered

Councilman walks out after row in Wendell

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL - An argument that prompted a city councilman to walk out of this week's council meeting began over voting procedures but didn't stay confined to that very long.

During the argument, new Mayor George Benson reminded Councilman Ron Finley that the councilman lost his bid for the mayoral seat and that Benson won.

"I didn't quite understand what that had to do with anything," Finley later said. "I was there as a councilman representing the people, not as a losing candidate... I didn't go down there to fight with the guy. For him to bring up the election was totally uncalled for."

Benson said he felt Finley was challenging his authority as mayor.

"He conducted himself very poorly at that meeting," Benson said. "It won't continue, I promise you that."

The dispute began when Councilman Dale Bunn moved that city employees would buy gasoline at a limit of 2 cents higher than the lowest price available elsewhere in Wendell. Finley seconded the motion.

Benson then called for a vote from all four council members, but Finley said he had already voted "yes" by his second of the motion.

Benson said a second is not a vote, and he asked Finley for a vote.

Finley demanded to know why.

Benson responded that parliament-

Benson appoints new Wendell superintendent

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — After taking his oath of office Thursday, new Wendell Mayor George Benson appointed a new city superintendent.
Claude Strickland, a city employee since 1967, was named to replace Charlie Doty, who has been the city superintendent since 1973. Strickland's salary will be set at the next council meeting.
The city council members Larry Osborn, Dale Bunn and Pat Goedhard approved the appointment. Strickland has worked on the city crew and for the past two years, has been the animal control officer.

Councilman Ron Finley, who left the meeting before Benson appointed Strickland, later said he opposed the change. He said Doty deserved to be given a chance to work with the new mayor, at least for a six-month trial period.
"For a guy who had no axes to grind, he sure got started quick, didn't he?" Finley asked of Benson.
Benson said Friday that he had considered replacing Doty for about two months.
"It's for the best interest of the people," he said. "That's the only explanation I can give... He's gone. I'd like to let it lay at that."
Dale Bunn was sworn in for a four-year term as a new council member, replacing his son Matt

Bunn. Pat Goedhard, who has just finished a two-year term, took office for a four-year term.
Making committee assignments, Benson named all council members to Streets and Water and Sewer committees. Bunn and Goedhard were assigned to Irrigation, Finley and Osborn were assigned to Fire, Bunn and Osborn were assigned to Library. Benson will be in charge of Administration and Police.
Benson reappointed John Holm as city clerk, Raquel Braga as deputy clerk/measurer, Keith Hosack as fire chief/inspector, Kevin Blankmeyer as police chief and Vivian Mattiz as librarian.
A new animal control officer was not appointed.

Kiebert waives preliminary hearing

SANDPOINT (AP) — Suspended Idaho Department of Transportation director Kermit Kiebert waived a preliminary hearing Friday on charges that he sexually abused his daughter after a judge denied his motion to close the proceedings to the public and press.
First District Magistrate Paul McCabe bound Kiebert, 47, over for trial and set a Feb. 5 arraignment. Kiebert remains free on $15,000 bond.
Kiebert is accused of two counts of lewd conduct and one count of sexual abuse of his daughter at his East-Hope home in 1985 and 1986.

He was suspended without pay from his $72,000-a-year job as director of the Idaho Department of Transportation after being arrested Dec. 5 in Boise.
After McCabe's ruling that Friday's hearing would be open, Priest River lawyer Nick Lamanna said the former state Senate minority leader wanted to waive his right to a preliminary hearing.

Andrus outlines goals to protect rivers

BOISE (AP) — Calling the state's rivers the "crowning legacy of Idaho," Gov. Cecil Andrus outlined six goals for protecting them Friday to hundreds of conservationists and water experts at the Idaho Rivers Symposium in Boise.
Andrus also said in prepared remarks that he would bring the five state agencies with some jurisdiction over Idaho's surface waters together as a "super-agency" to ensure cooperation in reaching his goals for the next decade.
"Idaho faces a number of critical water management issues in the 1990s," the governor said. "We must successfully resolve these issues if we are to maintain and develop our economy and continue to enjoy the quality of life all of us consider so important."

The Idaho Rivers Symposium: A Confluence of Interests, was scheduled to continue through Saturday in Boise. It was organized by the Northrup Rockies River Project as a follow-up to a meeting in Washington, D.C., last year commemorating the 25th anniversary of passage of the federal Wild and Scenic Rivers Act.

The goals Andrus outlined include:
— Reviewing and making recommendations to Congress by the end of the decade on the 60 potential Wild and Scenic rivers already identified in Idaho. That includes completing the state's comprehensive rivers planning program for at least two-thirds of the streams in Idaho.
— Increasing the number of miles of streams protected with minimum stream flows from the current 130 miles. Recommendations for minimum stream flows would be made through the "comprehensive rivers planning process."
— Examining the need to combine water quality and quantity decisions.
— Reiterating of existing hydroelectric projects, giving the state an opportunity to assess mitigation needs for recreation, fisheries and wildlife created by dam construction.
— The state Water Resource Board using its bonding authority to back hydroelectric projects at existing dams to meet Idaho's future energy needs.
The Water Resource Board using its bonding authority to encourage water conservation through loans to Idaho irrigators for such measures as lining ditches.
Andrus said the state departments of Water Resources, Lands, Parks and Recreation, Fish and Game and Health and Welfare's Division of Environmental Quality will form a "water cabinet" to review any laws or programs that present conflicts between the agencies in meeting those goals.
"The same state agencies will be directed to draft and enter into a single memorandum of agreement with the U.S. Forest Service and the BLM to cooperate on planning efforts on the 60 Wild and Scenic rivers identified for study by the federal land management agencies," the governor said.
Among those being considered is the South Fork of the Payette River, and Andrus said he will "support and work to protect" that stream as part of the national Wild and Scenic rivers system.

Strong wheat market prompts acreage increase

BOISE (AP) — Continuing strength in the wheat market prompted Idaho growers to plant 900,000 acres of winter wheat last fall for harvest this year, an increase of 2 percent over 1989 acreage, the government reported.
The 20,000-acre hike marked the second straight year producers have increased the land devoted to winter wheat since it sank to a 15-year low in 1987. The 1990 acreage total was also the highest level in six years.
Winter wheat accounts for some two-thirds of Idaho's total output of wheat, the state's number-two cash crop.
The Agriculture Department put 1989 winter wheat production at 56.7 million bushels, the second largest harvest on record as abandoned acreage was held to 70,000 acres and yields averaged 70 bushels an acre, the second best performance ever.
At the same time, the Agriculture Department said total wheat stocks in Idaho were nearly 77 million bushels higher on Dec. 1, 1989, than they were a year earlier.
The jump—in stored wheat to 63 million bushels came on the heels of a strong winter and spring wheat harvest. The two combined total 371 million bushels, the fourth largest crop ever.

do not endorse alternative certification. They do suggest that "alternative pay systems should be explored that encourage teacher growth."
State Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, agrees that the state is poised for education reforms.
"I think it can happen next year," he said. "The idea is ready."
That wasn't true 10 years ago. The Legislature wasn't as inclined to support education in the early '80s, Peavey said.
In addition to revenue shortfalls, the Legislature was controlled by conservative Republicans who saw nothing wrong with Idaho's teacher salaries ranking as 49th or 50th in the nation, he said.

"This year Republican and Democratic leaders are close to a consensus. And that can only benefit Idaho's school children," Chilcote said.
"Education should not be a partisan issue," he said, echoing sentiments expressed by the governor this week.
"My budget is an expression of the belief that men and women acting with confidence, courage and compassion can achieve a brighter future for our children and our grandchildren," Andrus said Wednesday. "I promise my best efforts to help us achieve that brighter future for ourselves and for Idaho."

Minidoka Hospital. And a program has begun in Blaine County, said Maggie Machala, the program's coordinator.
"But the problem is still not solved," Machala said.
She said some women are still being turned down for services at Jerome and Shoshone, while other women simply have not heard about the program yet.
"There are still women I am sure who haven't heard about the program. The word is not completely out yet."

Studies show that women who don't get prenatal care are three times as likely to give birth to low-weight babies — babies weighing 5 pounds or less at birth — which are 40 times as likely as a normal-weight baby to die in the first month and twice as likely to suffer a disability.
In a recent telephone interview, Shelley Sneyd said she may have been able to afford some prenatal care, but she probably would have "scrimped."
Having a baby without complications costs about $1,300 — plus the cost of prescriptions, laboratory work and hospital fees.
"Women can qualify two ways for the Pregnancy Program," species, the Sonoran pronghorn antelope and the Sandbarbs longnose bat.

"Air Force officials are working hard to protect the wildlife on a large scale," says the Mountain Home release. "The Air Force employs a full-time wildlife biologist at Goldwater Range. The biologist is studying the habits of all species found there, with special attention to the endangered species on the range."
Impact of low-level flying on wildlife at Goldwater, according to the release, and the Air Force is working with Arizona officials to preserve a number of historical and prehistoric sites on the range.
The military also allows public recreation activities on the range, within established limits, including camping, hunting, horseback riding and off-road driving.
At Saylor Creek, the Air Force proposes to expand the range from 109,000 to 4.5 million acres.
Grazing is allowed on over 97,000 acres of the current Saylor Creek range, and the Air Force says it "will continuously work with the Bureau of Land Management, Idaho Fish and Game and the public to find the best multiple-use plan for the land."

Joanne Bethke, 42, almost didn't hear the word.
"She heard about the program from a girlfriend she bumped into at a store."
Bethke's husband, a painter, is a seasonal worker. The family earns too much to qualify for Medicaid, but like the Sneyds, doesn't have health insurance.
"I couldn't have afforded prenatal care," Bethke said. She is still paying on bills from the birth of her 2-year-old son, Adrian.
Eight months pregnant, Bethke has worked throughout her pregnancy. She described the Pregnancy Program as "wonderful" and said, "This is not something I take for granted."

Women who are Medicaid-eligible — who are at 75 percent of the poverty level — automatically qualify for the program. And families who may not qualify for Medicaid, but whose incomes are less than 185 percent of the poverty level, also may qualify.
For instance, if a woman and her husband have one child, another on the way and no health insurance, they can "earn up" to $1865 per month and still qualify. For a husband and pregnant wife who have no other children, the ceiling is $1551.

ary procedure requires it, prompting Finley to ask Benson to cite the requirement.
Benson said he did not want to take time to look it up, whereupon the pair continued to argue until Finley walked out of the meeting.
At council meetings, a motion and second have always been considered as two "yes" votes, Finley said later. He said Benson did not inform him of a new procedure.
"I just wanted to know what and how we were voting on this new procedure and he wouldn't tell me," Finley said. "He introduced his family, told where his children and grandchildren lived, and then he told me that he didn't have time to tell me why we were doing this new way of voting. He told me to shut up and vote."
Benson said the procedure has been on the books, just not followed until now.
"It's not my place to educate a man," Benson said. "He has access to all kinds of books. If he doesn't know about parliamentary procedure, he should learn about it. I had him completely lost and he got insulting."
To a full room of visitors at the meeting, Benson apologized for Finley's actions. "He threw a fit and I asked him to leave," Benson said. Finley said no one has to apologize for him. "I didn't even do anything," he said.
Benson said Finley has been "real belligerent" with other people at past council meetings. "I told him to sit down," Benson said. "I did not tell him to shut up. I did apologize to the crowd, yes. Twice. For the poor conduct of a city councilman."

"He told me that he was the mayor and that there was an election and he won, and that I lost and I better not forget it," Finley said.
Finley said he is not upset about losing the election and he just wants to carry on business as usual.
Finley said Benson, during the confrontation, made an issue out of the recent election.

Grazing

A "head month" was defined as a month's use and occupancy of public range by one weaned or adult cow, bull, steer, heifer, horse, burro or mule; or five sheep or goats.
The fee reduction is expected to apply to more than 9,000 livestock owners who hold grazing permits for national forest land. More than 1.9 million animals, mostly cattle, are grazed on the national forest year. Fees are expected to be determined by a formula that takes into consideration the "fair market value" of forage involved, along with changes in private grazing rates, beef cattle prices and the costs of livestock production.
Officials said the current reduction is based primarily on increases in cattle production costs, which in 1989 exceeded gains in both beef cattle prices and the private grazing rates.
No fees were announced for 1990 grazing on national grasslands in nine states. A Forest Service spokeswoman, Diane Hitchings, said those will be announced in a week or so.

BURLEY — The music coordinator for Billy Graham Associate Crusades will present a concert Thursday in preparation for the crusade here next month.

Ted Cornell, also a pianist, organist and choir director, will perform for free at 7:30 p.m. at the Burley United Methodist Church. He will ask for anyone interested in performing in a choir when the crusade comes to the Burley Inn Feb. 11-18.

An associate of Graham will conduct the crusade.

Cornell is responsible for all music presentations during the crusades. He plans and selects all music, and musicians and schedules all guests. Cornell, a full-time Billy Graham Evangelistic Association staff member since 1968, is a soloist and an accompanist for guests and team members and prepares and directs the crusade choir.

Cornell also conducts the Ted Cornell Chome, a 40-member choral group comprised of professional singers from the New York area. Ted Cornell also served on the faculty of Kings College. Cornell has bachelor's and master's degrees from the Juilliard School of Music, and was the youngest scholarship student at that time in Juilliard history. In addition to this honor, Mr. Cornell was named in the 1973 honors edition of "Outstanding Young Men of America."

Cornell is married to Zandra Reika Zuidema Cornell. They have two children, Theodore and Brittany. They live in Wyckoff, N.J.

Decision split on comic version of Islamic text

PARIS (AP) — A colorful, easy-to-read version of the Koran in comic book form has won approval from some Islamic authorities, but one scholar has condemned it, calling the author "a new Salman Rushdie."

"Si Le Coran M'etait Conte" — "If the Koran Were Told To Me," is geared to readers aged 12 to 16, said its author, Yousssef Seddik.

The Koran is the sacred book of Islam. According to Islamic belief, it contains the words of God as revealed to the prophet Mohammed.

The comic books, which cost about $10 each, have been approved and even encouraged by some religious authorities such as Ayatollah Mehdi Roubani, spiritual leader of the Shiite Muslim community in Europe.

"I don't see any problem with the comic books, as long as you know there is a precedent — an illustrated version of the Koran published in Iran 15 years ago," Roubani said in an interview at his Paris home.

Roubani called comic books "the language of the 20th century."

"I'm all for comic books, and would encourage them if they do, in fact, get across the idea of God to young people," he said.

Paris Islamic Jurisprudence at Kuwait University's Islamic Studies faculty, was quoted Friday as saying the comic books could spark a furor like that over Rushdie's novel, "The Satanic Verses."

In February 1989, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said Rushdie should die because his novel blasphemed Islam. Rushdie has been in hiding ever since.

Faidallah said the comic book constituted a "criminal act that ridicules the sanctity of the holy Koran," and called for their condemnation, the Kuwait newspaper Al-Qabas reported.

He was quoted as calling Seddik "a new Salman Rushdie recruited to carry out this ugly task." Faidallah urged Arab and Islamic embassies in Paris "to pressure official bodies there with a view to halting such violation of Islamic values," the daily said.

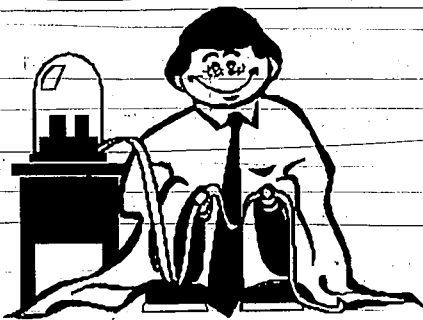

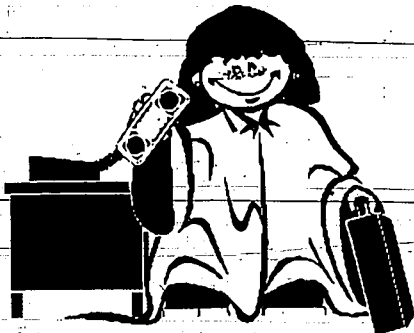

Seddik, a Tunisian-born journalist who has written extensively on Arab culture, said Friday he was "deeply saddened" by Faidallah's reaction and disputed the scholar's right to judge the issue.

"Islam is my emotional and spiritual roots. Nothing, no one can ever take it away from me," he said.

Q. Is it possible for a songwriter to think he's composing original music when he's actually just remembering somebody else's tune?

A. Happens. His ailment in that condition is called "cryptomnesia." Copyright lawyers know all about it.

Long ago a teacher of mine said: "When he's actually just remembering somebody else's tune?"

Pregnancy could be worse. The green lynx spider lays several hundred eggs in a pouch, attaches same to a bush, then for two weeks hangs upside down, clapping said pouch between her legs.

California's San Fernando Valley covers about as much ground as Chicago.

Her Nurse" sold for $7 Million, the highest price ever paid for a painting at that time. In 1989, Vincent Van Gogh's "Irises" sold for $53.9 Million, seven times the 1980 high. Not even your house has appreciated that much, what?

Q. "A" is the most frequently used letter in the alphabet, is it not?

A. In Portuguese, yes. "E" still gets that credit in English, French, Italian and Spanish.

Most popular names among 15-year-old boys are Michael, Jason and Matthew. Among 15-year-old girls, Jennifer, Arby and Sarah.

"Christians must not Tango," said the Archbishop of Paris in 1912.

VERBAL

Those lawyers who think a verbal agreement refers to an unwritten spoken agreement are wrong. Any written agreement is a verbal agreement. It's the oral agreement that's spoken but not written. So says a language expert.

Thomas Jefferson said, "My principle is to do whatever is right, and leave consequences to him who has the disposal of them."

Passport applications increase from January to a July peak, then fall off in the Fall.
