SIS hearings off; DOE drops plans for project

By N. S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Local opponents of the Special Isotope Separator are calling it "dead on arrival" after the Energy Department confirmed hearings on the project were postponed.

Energy Secretary James Watkins approved on Friday an earlier, informal announcement from officials at the department's San Francisco office that the hearings would be postponed, department spokeswoman Kathy Kaleniak said in Washington, D.C.

An anonymous source quoted by the Associated Press Friday went a step further: Watkins has dropped plans to build the $1.2 billion plutonium refinery in Idaho.

The decision to end financing for the SIS plant will be formally revealed Monday when President Bush sends his fiscal 1991 budget to Congress, sources who spoke on the condition of anonymity told the AP.

Phil Hamric, manager of the Energy Department's Idaho field office, declined to confirm the decision.

Kaleniak would not comment on reasons for postponing the hearings or on the status of the SIS project until Bush unveils his new budget on Monday, she said.

Local opponents to the project, however, see the postponement as an indication that the new federal budget will contain no money for SIS, a project the Reagan administration regarded as "time-critical and essential" to modernizing the nuclear weapons complex.

"The cancellation of the quickie Feb. 7 SIS hearing in Idaho Falls is the first real sign that the DOE plan to cluster plutonium facilities in Idaho has been stopped," said Dr. Peter Richards, Twin Falls podiatrist and outspoken critic of the project.

The Snake River Alliance, an Idaho environmental group that has opposed building the nuclear weapons plant in Idaho, already is celebrating the project's demise.

Idaho's congressional delegation also has expressed a unanimous opinion that the budget will not include SIS construction money.

The department went to hear public comment for an environmental impact statement on proposed tests of the SIS technology. The SIS, slated for construction at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, would use laser technology to refine weapons-grade plutonium from fuel stock owned by the Energy Department.

Hearings had been scheduled for Feb. 2 and 3 in Livermore, Calif. and Feb. 7 in Idaho Falls.

The technology has been developed at California's Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, and a similar system now is used to refine uranium for reactor fuel. But the SIS system has never been tested with plutonium, only with non-radioactive surrogate materials.

If the hearings are rescheduled the department will announce new hearings in the Federal Register and through local media.

Girl, 9, escapes abductor

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A 9-year-old Burley girl escaped from a kidnapper after he forced her into his car and tried to molest her, Cassia County Sheriff Billy Crystal said.

The girl was walking to school in a snowstorm when the man stopped beside her, rolled down his window and asked her whether she wanted a ride, Crystal said.

The girl, whom Crystal did not identify, ran about two blocks before the truck turned in front of her. The man jumped out, grabbed her and threw her into the car.

She was about a block from Dworshak Elementary School at the time, Crystal said. Few children were on the street to witness the abduction, he said.

"Most parents probably took their kids to school today because of the poor visibility," he said.

The man drove about 10 minutes to a canal bank near 600 South and 150 East. During the ride the girl continually screamed and kicked at the man. He hit her on the head and choked her to quiet her down, Crystal said.

The girl was able to open the door and get out of the car. She ran across the canal and a farmer's field to a house, where she telephoned for help.

"We have several leads that we're following right now," Crystal said. "We don't have a suspect yet."

Crystal said the man is described as being Hispanic, skinny and 6 feet tall, with a mustache. He was wearing brown leather shoes and jacket, a white shirt and brown pants.

He was driving an older-model, red pickup with peeling paint, a camper shell and lights around the shell and under the doors.

Soviet troops sent in to crush Baku coup

Knight-Ridder News Service

MOSCOW — Soviet troops were sent into Azerbaijan last week because its increasingly powerful Popular Front was on the verge of totally seizing control from Communist authorities, Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov said Friday.

"Our job is not to arrest anyone, but rather to crush the structure of power which was formed at all enterprises and offices," Yazov said, according to the government newspaper Izvestia. "This is not a slip of the tongue. I mean power. They were preparing to seize it."

Yazov's sharp criticism of the Azerbaijani Popular Front appeared to put him at odds with other Soviet officials who had advised elements of the nationalist group only a day earlier and suggested a dialogue with its leaders.

Soviet troops twice smashed their way into Azerbaijan's diplomatic mission in Moscow early Friday morning and arrested one of the Popular Front leaders, Ekhtibar Mamedov.

Meanwhile, a group of Soviet legislators likened the military action in Azerbaijan to the Soviet invasion of Hungary, and called for parliamentary debate.

In Moscow, Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov confirmed that Mamedov, the Popular Front leader, was being held for plotting to involve Azerbaijanis living in Moscow in the struggle.

Jet may have been running out of fuel

Los Angeles Times

COVE NECK, N.Y. — Investigators said Friday that the crew of a Colombian Boeing 707 jetliner radioed twice that the plane was running out of fuel, and as many as three of the four engines apparently were not operating when the craft plunged in rain and fog into an isolated wooded hillside here Thursday night.

The National Transportation Safety Board said 72 people were killed in the crash while 89 survivors were taken to 14 hospitals. Some of the injured were in critical condition with major trauma, and the death toll could increase. Among the dead were the plane's two pilots and the flight engineer.

The fourth engine of the plane, buried in mud at the crash site, has not yet been inspected.

After a day-long investigation, Lee Dickinson, an NTSB official, said a member of the cabin crew who survived told police there was no alarm of a pending accident before the crash. Dickinson said that early in the flight the cockpit voice recorder showed the crew had "concern about the amount of fuel in the aircraft."

That concern intensified after the pilots aborted a first try at landing at John F. Kennedy International Airport because the plane was descending too fast and a warning system repeatedly announced: "Pull Up! Pull Up!"

After the missed approach, the Avianca Airlines flight, which originated in Bogota with 161 people on board, was directed by air traffic control toward a second approach.

"The crew reported they were running out of fuel or they were low on fuel," Dickinson told a press conference at a hotel on Long Island. "Air traffic control gave them vectors and asked them if this was OK and the crew responded, 'OK.'"

The plane was then given a new heading to the airport by approach controllers. "The crew reported the

Noriega not a POW, held without bond

Knight-Ridder News Service

MIAMI — Deposed Panamanian leader Manuel Noriega, who has formally declared himself a prisoner of war in a letter to President Bush, was ordered held without bond Friday after he refused to participate in the court hearing.

U.S. prosecutors presented a stack of documents to show that as leader of Panama Noriega spent freely and stashed millions of dollars in banks around the world that could be used to buy him freedom outside the United States if released on bond.

When asked to rebut the government's claims, Noriega lawyer Frank Rubino refused and instead stated Noriega's name, rank and serial number: "His name is Manuel Antonio Noriega, his rank is four-star general and his serial number is 0001."

Shortly before the hearing began, Rubino filed a motion asking the judge to acknowledge that the U.S. district court did not have jurisdiction over the case because Noriega was a prisoner of war under the rules of the Geneva Convention.

Noriega's three-paragraph letter to Bush was part of Rubino's motion. The motion asked that Noriega be moved to a neutral third country to avoid facing U.S. drug conspiracy charges.

As Noriega wearing his military uniform, sat and listened silently, Rubino argued that Noriega was captured as the result of an illegal military invasion in violation of international law.

To support the request that Noriega be sent to a third country, the seven-page motion recounted events leading up to his arrest Oct.

Fish, Game commissioners defend record

The Associated Press

BOISE — Fish and Game Commissioners Norm Guth and Louis Racine are defending their records in a bid for Senate confirmation to new six-year terms, despite opposition from thousands of sportsmen from around the state.

"I'm sure in the years I've been involved there have been animosities," Racine, who became commission chairman just this month, told the Senate Resources and Environment Committee on Friday.

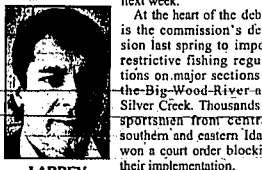

"I have gone against the recommendations of some groups," the Pocatello attorney said. "I cannot answer those 10,000 nameless people... I've done what I could. It has been my purpose to try to serve the people of Idaho."

But Sen. Larry Anderson, R-Twin Falls, led the opposition to the reappointments by Gov. Cecil Andrus, armed with hundreds of pages of petitions calling for the Senate to refuse both men new terms on the five-member panel.

He accused Racine and Guth, an outfitter from Salmon, of pursuing a policy "of elitism in the state of Idaho... of locking up Idaho's fish and game and keeping it away from the people."

Committee Chairman Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, said the panel will consider the reappointments next week.

LARRY ANDERSON

The constitution maintained the regulations were needed to help revitalize the fishery, but critics said the rules went too far, accusing the commissioners of ignoring overwhelming local opposition to the plan.

Noh tried to focus the public hearing on whether both Racine and Guth met the statutory qualifications for serving on the commission, but public testimony repeatedly strayed to policy decisions both have been involved with, and supporters and critics clashed over them.

"Every decision we make makes someone unhappy," Guth acknowledged. "But we try to come down always in favor of the resource."

Both men rejected claims that they had conflicts of interest — Guth because he is an outfitter affected by Fish and Game regulation and Racine because he has had clients whose interests intertwined with resource management policies.

Racine disputed contentions he has failed to meet with sportsmen on critical wildlife management issues, and both objected to claims that the commission has catered to special interest sportsmen groups while ignoring the interests of sportsmen in general.

"I realize I should not do I think it would be healthy if I were to hold an election of the sportsmen in my area to set wildlife policy," Guth said.

Bush seeks $7 million defense spending hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush will propose a $7 billion increase in military spending in the new budget, including money for five B-2 stealth bombers and two land-based nuclear missiles...

mothballing of two battleships and cancellation of several weapons programs, including the Marine Corps V-22 Osprey tilt-rotor aircraft and the Army's M1 tank.

The figure includes $292.1 billion for Pentagon spending, up from $286.8 billion, with the rest representing Energy Department spending for nuclear programs.

McCure may give up on wild area bill

By ERIC ANDERSON States News Service

WASHINGTON — Idaho Sen. James McClure said Friday the climate of U.S.-Soviet relations has changed enough that a decision on the future of the Idaho wilderness Separation (SIS) project can be put off this year.

Speaking to reporters, McClure — who announced earlier this month that he would not seek reelection this November — also said he is considering giving up on his efforts to push his wilderness bill through Congress.

While McClure said he can't speculate about the future of relations with the Soviet Union, he added: "I do believe that the situation has changed enough that we can afford to wait another year to determine what ought to happen on the SIS."

But he added that research for the project at a California laboratory should continue. "I don't regard the changes in U.S.-Soviet relations as so clear that we can abandon all efforts to maintain a nuclear weapons stockpile."

When asked about the future of an Idaho wilderness bill McClure drafted in conjunction with Idaho Gov. Cecil Anding, McClure said he is "going through an evaluation right now to determine whether the prospects are worth the effort."

Daniel Roden, 3, is carried to safety after Avianca crash

Surgeons find pouches of cocaine inside victim

MANHASSET, N.Y. (AP) — Surgeons operating Friday on a victim of the Avianca plane crash discovered some extra baggage: condoms filled with a white powder believed to be cocaine.

Dr. Robert Ward, the chief of special surgery at North Shore University Hospital, said doctors working to stop the surviving man's internal bleeding discovered what he estimated as more than a pound of the drug in condoms inside his intestines.

The flight from Bogota stopped in the drug-smuggling capital of Medellin before continuing on to New York. The plane crashed Thursday night in Cove Neck, killing at least 66 people. The man, identified only as passenger No. 7, was in critical condition, but was expected to survive. He suffered severely broken legs and internal injuries, the doctor said.

Police were at the victim's bedside waiting to question him, Ward said. After the surgery, when doctors told the middle-aged man "We have to know what this is," the patient admitted it was cocaine, Ward said.

Crash

Continued from Page A1 loss of two engines, and following that the cockpit voice recorder quit, the NTSB investigator said.

The plane had been in a holding pattern for over an hour before it received permission to land.

Another passenger said that minutes before the plane hit all lights, including the landing lights, went out.

"I tried to land. We came in low and I recognized the highways (around the airport)," said Jorge Lozano, 59, a Colombian business man who suffered cuts, spinal injuries and internal bleeding.

Lozano said the pilot made no further announcements before the plane hit the hill. "He didn't say anything after telling us the flight would be delayed."

Lozano spoke with difficulty from a stretcher at North Shore University Hospital where he was taken by ambulance. The entire rescue effort was complicated by hundreds of curious local residents who clogged roads leading to the crash scene.

Many relatives of those on board wandered throughout the night at Kennedy Airport.

"It was bumpy. The ladies and kids were screaming. I had time to say a prayer. I put my attitude across over my knees because I didn't have a pillow... In about five seconds we were crashing into the trees."

Noriega

"Military troops blocked out the telephone around the Vatican Embassy, surrounded the embassy with barbed wire, focused high-intensity lights in the embassy and blinged the area with loudspeakers," the motion said.

U.S. District Judge William Hoever said the motion was frivolous and that he would not rule on it because the matter before him was whether Noriega should be freed on bond until his trial.

Rubino, reiterating that his client was a prisoner of war according to international law, then told the judge that Noriega would not take part in the bond hearing requested by the government.

Economy slows to crawl; recession talk beginning

Gross National Product

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy slowed almost to a standstill in the last three months of 1989, registering a barely perceptible 0.5 percent annual growth rate that was the poorest since 1982, the Commerce Department said Friday.

The weak growth in the gross national product, the country's total output of goods and services, raised fears among private economists that the record seven-year-long peacetime expansion was in danger of ending, especially if jittery financial markets drive interest rates higher.

The Bush administration was more upbeat, however, predicting that the sluggishness will be followed by an economic rebound, although Vice President Dan Quayle called the GNP report disappointing, adding, "These numbers 'this morning' were not what we had hoped for."

The Commerce Department blamed the big drop-off in growth from October through December on a rare decline in consumer spending, a deteriorating trade deficit and a slump in business investment spending.

For the year as a whole, the GNP rose 0.5 percent, following a much more rapid 4.4 percent increase in 1988. It was the slowest annual growth rate since a 2.7 percent rise in 1986.

Even with the slower growth, inflation was slightly worse during the year with a price index tied to the GNP rising by 4.5 percent, up from 4.2 percent in 1988 and the worst showing since 1982, when it was 6.2 percent.

While the fourth quarter GNP advance was in line with expectations, many economists questioned where the economy will get strength for a rebound.

"The economy ground to a virtual halt in the fourth quarter with signs of weakness everywhere," said Allen Sinai, chief economist for the Boston Co. "My own view is that we are near and possibly headed into some sort of recession."

Other economists were not as pessimistic, believing that the Federal Reserve would provide another dose of lower interest rates if necessary to spur growth.

"We are on the bottom edge of the famous soft landing, although it is somewhat softer than one might have wanted, for comfort," said Robert Deterick, chief economist of the Northern Trust Co. "Nevertheless, the odds are against a full-fledged recession."

The administration is basing its $1.23 trillion budget for 1991, due to be unveiled Monday, on a forecast that the GNP will grow 2.6 percent this year, when measured from the fourth quarter of 1989 to the fourth quarter of 1990.

But private analysts, even the "majority," who are not forecasting a recession, are decidedly less optimistic, projecting a lackluster GNP increase this year of around 1.8 percent, which would be the slowest growth rate since the recession year of 1982.

But private analysts said recent uneasiness in the stock and bond markets could take a toll on economic growth by pusing interest rates up, which could cause investors to sell. Such a development would harm housing and other interest-sensitive sectors of the economy.

The 0.5 percent GNP increase was the weakest quarterly showing since a decline of 1.8 percent in the second quarter of 1986, another period of sluggish activity and one that raised fears at the same time the recovery from the 1981-82 recession was in danger of stalling out.

The biggest drag on activity last quarter was a huge swing in consumer spending, which went from a robust growth rate of 5.6 percent in the third quarter to a bare decline of 0.1 percent in the fourth. The swing was attributed to car sales, which surged in the third quarter.

Son's action may put president in awkward position

WASHINGTON (AP) — Neil Bush's decision to fight conflict-of-interest charges leveled by federal thrift regulators may put his father, the president, in the awkward position of appointing the official likely to decide the case.

The Office of Thrift Supervision said Friday it will issue a "notice of charges" alleging that actions by the younger Bush as a director of a Colorado savings and loan "amounted to conflicts of interest."

The announcement came after the president's son refused to voluntarily accept an order from regulators directing him to refrain from actions constituting a conflict of interest in the future, he became an officer of a savings and loan, a bank or a credit union.

Neil Bush was a director of the failed Silverado Bank and Savings and Loan Association in Denver from 1985 until August 1988, resigning two weeks before his father accepted the GOP presidential nomination.

According to Karl Hoyle, senior deputy director of the thrift office, the younger Bush's stance triggers an administrative process that typically lasts a year and could stretch to as long as two years if initial rulings are appealed.

Hoyle said the thrift office will ask an administrative law judge to hold a hearing on the notice of charges and recommend to thrift office director M. Danny Wall that a cease-and-desist order be issued against the president's son.

But Wall, a Reagan administration appointee who announced his resignation last month, almost certainly will have left the agency by then, passing on the case to a new thrift office director, who must be nominated by the president, and confirmed by the Senate.

White House spokeswoman Aileen Glen said, "The president's decision on a nominee for the thrift office will be made completely independently of this or any other case."

Neil Bush said in a statement Thursday night that he refused to accept the order sought by regulators because that "would leave an implication that I misbehaved."

The December 1988 collapse of Silverado, now operating as part of Columbia Savings, the largest thrift in Colorado, is expected to cost taxpayers up to $1 billion.

The agency has focused its investigation of Silverado on what it said was "an exceptionally large number of problem transactions" between Silverado insiders and borrowers.

The younger Bush was a partner in an oil-exploration firm, INB Exploration, with two of Silverado's major borrowers, developers Bill L. Walters and Ken Good. In his statement, however, Bush said there was nothing improper with the connection.

"Bill Walters had a passive 6.25 percent interest in INB Exploration," the president's son said. "Because I did not benefit directly or indirectly from any loan or transaction between Silverado and businesses controlled by Bill Walters, as an outside director I voted in 1986 with the other directors in unanimously approving the Walters loans and transactions brought to us by management."

Administration orders energy conservation plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dramatizing his point by helping install a high efficiency lighting fixture, a top Bush administration energy official Friday outlined energy conservation initiatives he said could save $32 billion by the year 2000.

"Americans are not wasteful by nature," W. Henson Moore, deputy secretary of energy, told a news conference. "The record is good, but the record is not good enough."

Moore said the initiatives being announced required an investment of $336 million in the next six years, including $30 million shifted from other Energy Department programs this year.

The programs range from the use of more efficient lighting fixtures to exploring possible development of unused hydroelectric capacity at existing dam sites.

Moore helped an electrician, Charles Jones, replace a part in a fluorescent lighting fixture, one of 36 in the room, where the news conference was held.

He said it would increase the efficiency of the fixture by 25 percent, reducing its cost by $6.50 a year.

The initiatives outlined at the news conference concentrate on increasing energy efficiency and using renewable energy resources.

"Using energy more efficiently under these initiatives will also avoid damage to the environment by an estimated 800 million tons of carbon dioxide, 2.3 million tons of sulphur oxides and 2.1 million tons of nitrogen oxides annually," Moore said.

Moore said federal engineers and design specialists will identify federal buildings to retrofit with more advanced lighting technologies.

He said the department would also explore ways to make it as profitable for electrical utilities to increase efficiency as to expand their capacity.

The department will encourage states and localities to adopt the voluntary, interim standards the department has formulated for residential and commercial buildings, Moore said.

He said the department will establish three new energy analysis and diagnostic centers per year at engineering schools until it has increased the current 13 centers to 40. The department also plans joint ventures with industry to demonstrate advanced technologies for producing energy from waste, the deputy secretary said.

The lawsuits, filed Thursday in U.S. District Court, stem from the 1988 death of Airman Recruit-Lee Mirecki, 19, of Appleton, Wis., during a rescue drill at Pensacola Naval Air Station.

Mirecki's mother, Elaine Kitowski, is seeking $5 million.

Supreme Court member touts right to dissent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice William J. Brennan, the leading liberal member of an increasingly conservative Supreme Court, said Friday that dissenting from court rulings is not "an egoistic act" but a duty.

In a speech to the New York State Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers, Brennan said, "Where significant and deeply held disagreement exists, members of the court have a responsibility to articulate it."

A copy of the speech was made available here.

"I do not mean to suggest that one has a duty or right simply to make noise," Brennan said. "What I am saying is that all of us — judges, lawyers, students, teachers, factory workers, bankers — must recognize values which are so important to us that we cannot remain silent if and when we feel those values threatened."

The justice added, "The right to dissent is one of the great and cherished freedoms that we enjoy by virtue of the excellent accident of our birth as Americans. For a dissenting judge, Brennan said, "Writing is not an egoistic act — it is duty. Saying, 'Listen to me, see it my way, change your mind,' is not self-indulgence — it is hard work that we are not permitted to shirk," he said.

He noted that dissents can strain collegiality and sometimes bruise feelings. Brennan, 83, is the high court's senior member. He was appointed by President Eisenhower in 1956.

ATTENTION AGRICULTURAL EMPLOYERS

Under Pre '89 Act Tax Law, cash wages paid to agricultural labor were exempt from Federal Income Tax Withholding. This law was changed with the passage of the 1989 Tax Act.

Beginning January 1, 1990, most agricultural employers will be responsible for withholding Federal Income Taxes on any agricultural employees who earn more than $150.00 per year. Federal withholding may be required even if the worker earns less than $150 per year, if the employer pays more than $2,500.00 during the year to all employees. Some exceptions apply; for more information see your tax advisor.

Women clean up the mess caused by a storm tide, Friday morning along the Elbe River near Hamburg.

Storm-battered West Europe begins massive cleanup effort

LONDON (AP) — Crews scrambled to restore power to a million homes and clear toppled cars from cluttered highways Friday after a fierce storm flayed Western Europe with hurricane-force winds, killing nearly 100 people.

The storm that paralyzed transportation and cut off communications in six nations finally blew out into the Baltic Sea on Friday, sinking a Danish ship and leaving behind an estimated $1 billion in destruction.

The storm Thursday spawned winds of up to 110 mph. It tore a hole in the roof of Parliament in London, toppled a nuclear plant chimney in France and smashed $29 million worth of greenhouses in Holland.

Official reports showed 93 dead and hundreds injured.

With winds diminished but still at gale force, the storm moved along the Baltic on Friday, striking Scandinavia, northern Poland and the Soviet republics of Latvia and Lithuania. Britain's meteorological center said.

The European Community said it would aid victims of the storm after it completes an assessment of the damage.

Hardest hit was Britain, where 45 people were reported killed by collapsing roofs, falling trees and many traffic accidents. Official reports said 19 people died in Holland, eight in France, 10 in Belgium, four in Denmark and seven in West Germany.

In the Baltic Sea, the Danish boat Jotun sank Friday off the East German coast in heavy seas. A Danish helicopter rescued three crew members, but one later died. Three others were missing and presumed dead after their lifeboat was found empty.

Dutch authorities said hundreds of Dutch were injured in the storm, the worst in a decade. Four main rail lines remained closed Friday.

The death toll in Britain was more than twice that of Oct. 16, 1987, when the country's worst storm in centuries left 17 people dead.

That storm struck late at night, when most people were indoors. The storm Thursday caught motorists on country roads where falling trees caused many deaths. Trucks flipped over on major highways, making them impassable. Children were at school, and two died and 16 were hurt when roofs collapsed.

Roof tiles, scaffolding and heaps of brick from collapsed chimneys littered sidewalks around London. The government said at one point 1-million people, mostly in western England, were without electric power.

Subway, rail, bus and air services halted in the London area Thursday but transport workers were out through the night clearing debris from the tracks and were able to restore much of the rail service by Friday.

The London newspaper The Independent said insurers put early estimates of damage to property in Britain at more than $1.3 billion, compared with $1.8 billion for the 1987 storm.

In Sweden, winds uprooted trees and damaged houses, but no injuries were reported.

Gorbachev's inner circle feels situation tricky but survivable

By PAUL QUINN-JUDGE

MOSCOW — Mikhail S. Gorbachev's inner circle believes the crisis in Azerbaijan has plunged the Soviet leader into a "deeply difficult" but "probably survivable" position, sources say.

The Azerbaijan turmoil has deepened the suspicion of both Gorbachev supporters and critics that the central government no longer is able to control the course of events in the Soviet Union.

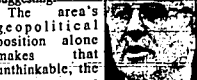

Strong supporters of liberal reform fear that the fighting in Baku will reinforce the Soviet law-and-order lobby, already strong in the higher echelons of the party leadership. Even some reformers believe a majority of the population would now support a sharp, effective crackdown.

But they warn that such a move — either launched by Gorbachev in an effort to save his position, or by conservatives if they supplant him — could be dangerous.

"It would be like driving down an icy road at very high speed, then throwing on the brakes," said Vyacheslav Shostakovskiy, the rector of Moscow's High Party School.

Sources who in the past have accurately reflected the views of the Gorbachev entourage say that the Soviet leader is determined not to abandon Azerbaijan to its own resources, as some Soviets are suggesting.

GORBACHEV

The area's geopolitical position alone makes that unthinkable, the sources concluded.

Azerbaijan flanker, which also has a Shiite Muslim population, and Turkey, to those people the Azerbaijanis are related.

A source said Thursday while Gorbachev and his close aides are deeply concerned, they are not panicking. Neither are they sitting passively observing the military operations in Azerbaijan, sources said.

Some radical reformers believe that the slowness with which Soviet troops were deployed in Baku was due to a rightist plot aimed at undermining Gorbachev in an effort to save his position, or by conservatives if they supplant him — could be dangerous.

Radical reformers are both fearful that Gorbachev could be overthrown by the right and irritated with what they see as his fence-sitting on the pace and breadth of change.

Centrism was fine when most of the country was undecided about reform, the radical economic and political writer Vasily Selyunin said in an interview. "But the country has become sharply polarized in the last few months. He has to move now."

Thursday saw the first signs of government action after several days in which military commanders seemed the most visible representatives of Soviet power in the south. The signs pointed to a classic Gorbachev compromise: an offer to negotiate with Popular Front moderates, an investigation into the causes of the bloodshed, and an attempt to defuse the military situation.

But many political activists will probably once again dismiss Gorbachev's moves as too little, too late. The right wing of the political spectrum wants discipline restored in Baku and throughout the country. The left wants Gorbachev to throw his weight behind high-speed transformation of the political system.

Interior Minister Vadim Bakatsh was quoted by the official news agency Tass Thursday as speaking of "healthy forces" in the Popular Front, and as referring to the possibility of lifting the night curfew in Baku if the situation improves. Bakatsh made his comments shortly before a deadline set by the Azerbaijan Parliament for all troops

E. German splinter parties OK government with Communists

EAST BERLIN (AP) — East Germany's splintered, pro-democracy groups agreed Friday to form a government with embattled Communist Premier Hans Modrow on the condition that all Cabinet members renounce their party loyalties.

The surprise show of unity among the fractious political groups followed the announcement by Christian Democrats that they were pulling out of Modrow's 27-member Cabinet, presumably to distance themselves from the distrusted Communists and boost their election chances.

East Germany's Christian Democratic Union is one of four splinter parties that stood by the Communists through their 40-year monopoly on power.

One of the conditions set by the pro-democracy groups currently unrepresented in the government was that the officially recognized small parties join the coalition as well.

Reform movements such as New Forum and Democratic Awakening do not want the official parties to escape responsibility for the disastrous state of the East German economy.

U.S. will close 2 Greece bases

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The United States will close two of its four major military installations in Greece, political party leaders said Friday.

Constantine Mitsotakis, leader of the conservative New Democracy grouping, confirmed a report by Athens newspaper Ethnos that U.S. envoy to Athens Michael Sotirchos advised the Greeks on Thursday of the U.S. decision to shut the bases.

The Ethnos report said that Sotirchos passed on a letter from U.S. Defense Secretary Richard Cheney to his Greek counterpart Tzannis Tzannetakis.

Romanian VP quits

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Vice President Dumitru Mazilu resigned Friday because, he said, "Stalinist methods" are being used by the government that took over when the dictator Nicolae Ceausescu was deposed and executed.

Mazilu, who had been under pressure to quit because of ties he once had to Ceausescu, made the announcement on Radio Free Europe.

Court rejects unusual damage claim

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Court of Appeals has rejected a claim for damages from a former Idaho man who claims his attorneys failed to prosecute his claim against a fundamentalist Catholic church.

The court unanimously upheld a lower court ruling against the attorney-malpractice lawsuit filed by former Kootenai County resident Jerry Bryant O'Neil, now a resident of Kalispell, Mont.

"In 1975, O'Neil filed a lawsuit against bishop Francis Shuckardt of the 'Fatima Crusade,' a fundamentalist sect of the Catholic Church. The case has been through the Idaho legal system for years and in the latest ruling last year, the Idaho Supreme Court reinstated damage awards of $50,000 for each of O'Neil's four children.

150 mark Bear River Massacre date

PRESTON (AP) — About 150 people gathered as snow fell along bluffs of the Bear River north of Preston to mark Monday's anniversary of the worst Indian tragedy in Idaho history, the 1863 Bear River Massacre.

"We want to pay proper homage," in an historical atmosphere, Allie Hansen, president of the Bear River-Battle Creek Monument Association, said at Friday's ceremony.

Col. Patrick Edward Connor led his California volunteers in a dawn assault on the Indians who were camped in their winter grounds near Bear River on Jan. 29, 1863. A delegation of Northwestern Shoshoni attended the ceremony, as well as a group from Albuquerque, N.M., protesting any honor bestowed on Sagwlich, an Indian survivor whose claim ran away from the battle rather than protect his family.

Sex offender gets prison sentence

BOISE (AP) — A former Boise County sheriff's deputy convicted of having sex with two minor step-daughters has been sentenced to at least three years in prison.

Dennis Wheeler, 42, has been sentenced to up to 13 years by 4th District Judge Alan Schwartzman. Authorities say Wheeler sexually abused the girls, now both 16, over a three-year period beginning in 1986. Ada County Deputy Prosecutor LaMont Anderson said the incest began under the ruse of parental sex education.

Combo given transportation post

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Falls attorney John X. Combo is the newest member of the Idaho Transportation Board.

Gov. Cecil Andrus on Friday appointed Combo to succeed another Idaho Falls lawyer, John M. "Mick" Ohman, on the three-member board. Ohman served six years, the last four as chairman, but notified Andrus in October that he did not want to be reappointed.

Combo has been in private law practice in Idaho Falls for the last eight years. Prior to that, he served as chief counsel and later deputy manager of the Department of Energy's Idaho Operations Office at Idaho Falls. He has degrees in engineering and law.

Boise sex education enrollment up

BOISE (AP) — Although a sex-education elective for Boise students has had a rocky history, the number of pupils taking the class has jumped in some schools.

Since the course was first offered to seniors at Capital High School a year ago, enrollment has increased 80 percent, with 106 students signed up for the elective at two senior highs and one junior high.

"An 80 percent increase in one year, in a program that's still a pilot, has to be considered significant," curriculum director Jack Craven said Thursday. "It would appear that youngsters believe this course has value."

Legislators grill board on building plans

BOISE (AP) — The state Board of Education is again on the defensive in the Idaho Legislature, this time about its long-range plans for a $7.5 million building project in Idaho Falls.

The board's point man on the issue, GARY E. VAN ALSTON, Twin Falls, came under a barrage of questions this week from legislative budget writers and House and Senate education committee members.

Perhaps the toughest line of questioning came from House Education Committee Chairwoman Janet Hay, R-Nampa, a former Education Board president.

"Does the board have a plan? The board is the governing body for the higher education institutions in the state," Hay said Wednesday. "It seems to me when you come before us with a request like this, the board ought to be able to tell us what plan it has to develop the educational opportunities in Idaho Falls in the next five to 10 years."

FAY, who chaired the committee assigned to assess higher education needs in Idaho Falls, conceded the state board has not decided the issue.

"Before the construction of the building, the board will have a plan," he said.

The Board of Education first proposed the building last fall as a way to enhance college and graduate courses now provided by Idaho State University, the University of Idaho and Ricks College at Rexburg.

Gov. Cecil Andrus' budget recommendation would pay for half the project cost and rely on private contributions for the rest.

The Permanent Building Fund

Advisory Council has recommended spending $750,000 next year toward designing the Idaho Falls classroom and laboratory building and a similar structure in Boise.

Under questioning from Sen. John Hansen, R-Boise, Fay said it was his view those funds would be used to design the structure and not to continue reviewing educational needs at Idaho Falls.

He maintained the area is the only major Idaho city without a higher education institution.

Idaho Falls classes offered by Idaho State and the University of Idaho, held at high schools, the UI-owned University Place, and in rented buildings, Hansen said.

Meanwhile, budget committee co-chairwoman, Rep. Kathleen Gurnsey, R-Boise, questioned the board's decision to hire a higher education coordinator for programs in Idaho Falls.

Fay countered that the Board of Education could assure cooperation among the schools by assuming control over coordination at Idaho Falls.

"Quite frankly, in the Idaho Falls area as well as in the Boise area, we can not begin to meet the entire needs of those communities and those regions," Fay said.

"We have to have cooperative programs among the institutions for the delivery of those programs. We just can't have competitiveness within our institutions."

Rep. Steve Neibaur, R-Rainier, questioned whether the state could afford a new campus at Idaho Falls when its other campuses are short of money.

"It all comes down to the amount of money we're going to have available to put out," Neibaur said. "It isn't that it isn't a nice plan. But economically, can we do it?"

Fay suggested that since Idaho Falls taxpayers have helped provide educational programs throughout the state, the state's second-fastest-growing city deserves some programs of its own.

But he stopped short of saying where the lawmakers could lay up the money.

"I'm certainly not advocating taking on your responsibility to find the money that we're asking for," Fay said.

"Obviously, it's going to cost more to construct the facility as well as to serve the needs of people in the Idaho Falls area."

Drug suspects will reside in Ada jail until March trial

BOISE - Four Mini-Cassia area men arrested on federal drug charges will remain in Ada County Jail until their trial in March, a U.S. Magistrate ruled this week.
The men appeared before U.S. Magistrate Mikel Williams Thursday, when the judge set their trial for March 14. He declined to set bail for the men.
Ruben Zamora, 26, of Burley; Salvador Rios, 19, of Paul; Rene Parales, 33, of Rupert; and Remy Dupuy, 30, of Burley, were arrested Jan. 19. They face different charges, including conspiracy to distribute cocaine and/or marijuana and distribution of cocaine. They will be tried together before U.S. District Judge Marion J. Callister.
The men were arrested after a task-force investigation by 15 local, state and federal law enforcement agencies into drug trafficking in the Burley area.

Jerome County residents receive adjudication notices

JEROME - Notices have been mailed to Jerome County property owners to file water rights claims in the Snake River Basin Adjudication.
About 6,000 notices were sent to solicit claims for water rights that are due on or before Nov. 19, 1987, according to the state Department of Water Resources.
The filing deadline for Jerome County is April 12.
"If a water right is not claimed there is nothing for the court to see, and the water right will be deemed to have been forfeited," adjudication Chief David Shaw said.
People who get water from a municipal system, irrigation district or canal company need not file, he said.
Holders of water rights of 13,000 gallons per day or less for domestic or stock use are not required by law to file, but Shaw urged all water rights holders to file to protect their claims.
The basic filing fee of $25 may be higher if a later adjudication is required.

Snow, wind make driving treacherous

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Slippery roads and wind-buffed snow led to several serious accidents and numerous slide-offs Friday morning, law enforcement officials reported.
And the weather pattern isn't expected to change - snow storms should hit the Magic Valley every 24 to 36 hours, said Bill Galkin with the National Weather Service's Kimberly station.
The next storm should hit the valley by midday today, Galkin said, with yet another scheduled to arrive late Sunday afternoon.

"And there's very little change in the extended forecast," Galkin said.
He said the storms, arriving via the British Columbia Coast, are being pushed along by strong westerly winds.
"This is the usual winter pattern," Galkin said. "This is more normal."
Friday morning's slushy but icy roadways caused trouble for many drivers.

Both the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department and the Idaho State Police reported more than 10 slide-offs each. Twin Falls dispatcher Robert Bawser said some motorists slammed through fences and rammed telephone poles after losing control of their cars.
But several more serious accidents were reported as well.
Sebastian Vagner, 68, was listed in serious condition Friday evening at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center after he lost control of the van he was driving along Interstate 84. The van skidded across the interstate and into the path of a semi-truck driven by James Wilson, 61, of California, ISP dispatcher Dee Silver said.
The accident occurred just after 8 a.m. about seven miles west of Burley. Wilson was not injured, Silver said.
Later in the morning, a semi-truck driven by Otis Johnson, 27, of Missouri, rolled over onto its side just east of the Addison Avenue and Highway 50 intersection.

Accreditation Adventist school loses accreditation; state places 3 others on 'warned' list

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - One Magic Valley school has lost its state accreditation, according to the state Education Department, and three others are on the "warned" list.
But in the Jerome School District, which almost lost its accreditation last year, things have improved greatly.
Magic Valley Seventh-day Adventist School in Twin Falls is no longer on the state's approved school list because the husband-wife teaching team that runs the school lacks Idaho teaching certificates.
But Principal Gary Dennis said Friday that parents shouldn't take that as a sign kids aren't getting a good education there.
"Our standardized achievement tests show that they are," he said.
Dennis and his wife, Jacquie, are the school's sole teachers, he said. Both were trained at a Walla Walla, Wash., Seventh-day Adventist college, which has a different set of criteria from the state of Idaho.
The Dennises, who have been running the Twin Falls private school for five years, are working on getting their Idaho certificates, he said, but "there just aren't enough hours in the day."

He said, however, that he's not sure what requirements they must fulfill to earn their certificates.
Schools are rated on a point scale by the Education Department, thereby earning either the "approved," "advised" or "warned" status - or losing accreditation. "Advised" is one step down from "approved," and "warned" is another step down.
Evelyn Cairns, the department's coordinator of elementary school programs, said schools on the "advised" and "warned" lists are still approved, but they need to correct some deficiency.
Schools can be demoted to the warned list if a certain problem is not corrected after a couple of years, Cairns said. And a school can be dropped for not correcting a problem in four years, as in the case of the Seventh-day Adventist school.
School officials file their reports with the state in mid-October.
Several local schools are on the state's "warned" list.

Man's body found in river

By ANITA DENNIS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The body of a Buhl man who was reported missing in November was found Thursday night in the Snake River.

The man apparently jumped from the Perrine Bridge, Twin Falls County Coroner Cal Edwards said. Steve Connors' body was retrieved around midnight Thursday after he was spotted face down in the water, about 1 1/2 miles downstream from the bridge.
"It looks like it was suicide," Edwards said.
Connors, 33, was reported missing Nov. 9 after his car was found abandoned on the north side of the bridge. His wallet and watch were in the car. The Twin Falls Sheriff's Office and Search and Rescue team combed the canyon for a few days, but found nothing, Twin Falls County Sheriff Jim Munn said.

STEVE CONNORS

Linda Connors last saw her husband when he went to work the evening of Nov. 7. She told police at the time that he was in "good spirits," Buhl Police Chief Les Cochran said.
Two witnesses reported seeing Connors in Jackpot, Nev., early the next morning. He told them he had hitchhiked to Jackpot and planned to hitch to Wendover and Laughlin, near the Arizona border, they said.
The search for Connors was called off after a few days, when a tip placed him in Wendover.

An autopsy shows Connors probably died in the early morning of Nov. 8, Edwards said. He apparently either hitchhiked or drove to Jackpot, then returned and killed himself, Cochran said.
He died from massive chest injuries from the fall, Edwards said. The body may have been under water and unseen during the initial search, he said.
"It looks like he hit the water and went under," Edwards said.
The body was found a half-mile downstream from the sewage treatment plant, Edwards said.

When Edwards talked to Linda Connors Friday morning, she said he'd been "dependent," before his death, although he never talked about suicide.

Robbins bill to repeal 'trigger' law moves ahead

By the Associated Press and The Times-News

BOISE - Despite opposition from a few members, the House State Affairs Committee agreed to introduce a bill sponsored by Rep. Gary Robbins, D-Twin Falls, to repeal Idaho's so-called "trigger" law on abortion.

The law, which would impose prison sentences of up to five years for any woman submitting to an abortion and for anyone helping with the procedure, would go into effect only if the U.S. Supreme Court reversed its 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision sanctioning most abortions.

Under an agreement between the House and Senate, all abortion bills in Idaho this year will originate in the House, and the House State Affairs Committee will consider them all at a hearing.
"The father-son team was hired by a local attorney whose children have learning disabilities. The Drakes expect to submit a formal report to the board in about two weeks.
"Although the Drakes gave few specific comments about Twin Falls schools, they indicated there are some areas that need improvement.

Computerizing history

High school students record the tales of Dietrich old-timers

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

DIETRICH - On Thanksgiving in 1931, George Loden, 66, was walking home with a package of leftovers from his dinner with William and Sylvia Towne, when his neighbor, N.O. Nielson, 69, shot him in the head with a shotgun.
Nielson buried Loden's body in the snow and took the package of food. The two life-long bachelors had apparently been feuding with each other over irrigation water.
At home, however, Nielson, apparently overcome with remorse, wrote in his diary that he had decided to hang himself for the murder he had just committed.
In his next diary entry, Nielson wrote that he had attempted to hang himself in the barn, but had worked his hands free and returned Loden's turkey dinner.
In another diary entry, Nielson wrote that he was ready to try the suicide again. It was his last entry; the local milkman found him the next morning hanging in the barn.

Gerald Frees, who claims to be Dietrich's oldest native born son, recalled this story for Dietrich students who are compiling their town's history as a project for their computer class. Since September last year, Frees and a dozen other long-time residents have met with students about once a month at the high school to tell stories of early life in Dietrich.
The project's goal is to produce a book of local history, said Wanless Southwick, Dietrich science and computer teacher. Along the way, he noted, students will learn computer and writing skills.
Part of the computer use includes the exchange of local histories with other schools in New York, New Jersey and several mid-western states under a national program called American Experience II, Southwick said.
Bridgette Towne, a junior and granddaughter of Dietrich natives Ralph and Delores Towne, has written about 18 pages of history on the computer program. She said she was surprised to learn how large the town used to be compared with today.

One of her favorite stories is about a man who robbed the mercantile store and was shot at by the owner as he tried to get away, Towne said.
Part of the birdshot spray caught the robber and the rest of it flew into the store wall, making an outline of the running man.
After stealing a car, the robber was later caught near Pocatello, where the doctor who turned him in reported that the man's entire back side was torn with birdshot.
Other stories, Bridgette said, were about an Indian robbing homes, a woman and her nephew standing on top of a fence post to let a cougar pass, and the first local gymnasium, which had ceilings only 2 feet higher than the basket rims.
In the wintertime, she said, the few people who owned cars would leave them parked at the mercantile store, and anyone who wanted to use them would have to go to the store to get the keys.

But on Friday, Rep. Elizabeth Allan-Hodge, R-Caldwell, refused to go along quietly. She was the only committee member voting against introducing the bill.
"I have concerns," she said. "I believe it is the proper role of government to protect the new life, both born and unborn."
Two abortion bills have been introduced in the Senate. One is similar to the Robbins proposal, repealing the "trigger" law. The second proposes a voter referendum to decide whether the law should be repealed.
"There are no bad people in this matter," said Robbins. "This is a matter of basic rights - rights to privacy, freedom of choice and - like government intervention as possible."

Robbins said he is pro-choice but does not favor abortions.
Regarding the law that could send a woman to prison for up to five years for having an abortion, he said, "I can't imagine that thing ever got into the code. But it's there. It's offensive to me and it's offensive to women."

Evaluators blame school failings on state funding

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Learning-disabled students in Twin Falls schools may be getting short-changed, but that's at least partly because of Idaho's school funding formula, two evaluators who spent the week studying the school district said.
"It (state funding) has frankly gotten to the point of ridiculousness and kids are suffering," said Charles Drake, a Boston-based psychologist.

Drake and his son, David Drake, gave School Board members a preliminary report Friday on their week-long study of how the district serves learning-disabled children.
The father-son team was hired by a local attorney whose children have learning disabilities. The Drakes expect to submit a formal report to the board in about two weeks.
"Although the Drakes gave few specific comments about Twin Falls schools, they indicated there are some areas that need improvement.

Most of what they did say, they related to the state's funding formula - which gives smaller schools districts more money per pupil and has a cap on how much extra money each district gets for learning-disabled programs.
The older Drake said the funding formula has had a direct impact on screening - or testing - of learning-disabled children. After the meeting, David Drake said a personnel shortage is to blame, but most Idaho school districts probably share that problem.

The Drakes said they support a move by the state to equalize funding for schools. And Charles Drake even urged that the state's $126 million in surplus funds be directed to this cause.
David Drake said the report will be "multi-dimensional" and address such topics as state financing, staff training of teachers, special-education teachers' salaries, the

Rev. Thomas Reese is the coordinator of a symposium on the "universal catechism"

New compendium of Catholic religion is put under scrutiny

NEW YORK (AP) — Considered one of the most important Roman Catholic documents since the reforming 1962-65 Second Vatican Council, a proposed new "universal catechism" now is under review by bishops.

Theologians and other scholars also are taking a look at it and find some serious faults with it, as well as some merits.

Offered as a comprehensive summation of basic Catholic teachings on faith and morals, its finished version is intended to serve as a guide for catechisms in various regions of the world.

"It's a long document, and a lot of both positive and negative elements are seen in it," said the Rev. Thomas J. Reese after reviewing comments from a dozen church scholars.

As coordinator of a symposium on the proposed document Jan. 27-28 at the Woodstock Theological Center in Washington, he said papers prepared for it indicate "a number of difficulties with the catechism."

He said shortcomings are seen in its compartmentalizing of aspects of faith—in its tendency to separate the spiritual from the natural, in its "poor use" of the Bible and its sexist language.

Reese, a Jesuit theologian-political scientist and research fellow at the center at Georgetown University, expressed doubts that bishops could meet the May 31 deadline set by the Vatican for their reactions to the 434-page draft.

"The bishops need a lot more time to examine such an important document and to consult with theologians about it in formulating their comments," he said.

"This is the most important document to come out since Vatican II," he said. "It will set the parameters of how the Catholic faith is taught in the 21st century."

Pope decries citizens' forced moves

MINDELO, Cape Verde (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Friday decried the hardships that have forced hundreds of thousands of citizens of this African archipelago to emigrate to the United States and Europe.

In a speech to tens of thousands of people gathered on a dirt soccer field, the pope said the former Portuguese colony had been "greatly tried by suffering" as a result of its harsh climate, scarce natural resources and problems of hunger and malnutrition.

"In this situation, the lack of real prospects for the future lead many of your brothers and sisters to a forced emigration toward other nations and continents, with all the problems involved," he said on the second day of his eight-day, five-nation African tour.

leave your own land?" he said, speaking in Portuguese.

John Paul urged all institutions dealing with emigration to "safeguard personal dignity (of emigrants) and favor their free and responsible participation in community and social life."

While expressing understanding and solidarity with Cape Verdeans living abroad, the pope urged them not to forget the country and the families they left behind.

Up to 700,000 Cape Verdeans nearly double the current population of 300,000 — live and work abroad, mainly in the United States, Portugal, France, The Netherlands and Italy. There are an estimated 350,000 to 400,000 Cape Verdeans in the United States mostly in Massachusetts and Rhode Island. The biggest community is found in New Bedford, Mass.

The Rev. Paulino Andrade, a Franciscan priest, attending the Mindelo service, said his sister moved to Massachusetts eight years ago and his two brothers were planning to join her soon.

"Life is better there," he said. "There is more work and better salaries. There is no comparison to life here."

As a light rain fell in Cape Verde's cultural and economic capital on Sao Vicente Island, the pope said the people were trying to adjust to a new society without losing one's cultural identity.

"Who knows how many of those of you here haven't already had the difficult experience of having to

Gay ministers cause trouble for churches

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Formal disciplinary charges have been lodged against two Lutheran congregations that violated church policy by ordaining three gay ministers who have refused to renounce sexual relations.

St. Francis and First United congregations face punishment ranging from censure to expulsion from the Evangelical Lutheran Church in American for "willfully disregarding" membership requirements.

The organization, the largest American Lutheran denomination, bans ordination of "self-avowed practicing" homosexuals. The congregations have said they are prepared to accept expulsion.

All three ministers, who were hired in November by their congregations, were removed from a list of ordainable clergy after they refused to agree to celibacy. The practice is often required of known homosexual pastors but not of heterosexual ones in the Lutheran tradition.

Jeff Johnson, 27, was ordained Saturday as assistant pastor at First United, a working class congregation with no acknowledged homosexual members. Also ordained were Ruth Ernst, 42, and Pyllis Zillhart, 32.

They were ordained at St. Francis, the predominantly gay Castro neighborhood.

"We find ourselves in a very unpleasant situation forced upon us by circumstance," said Synod Bishop Lyle Miller in a statement issued Friday. He had warned the congregations they faced possible expulsion.

"I very much support our church's ministry to and with gay and lesbian people. I have strived to maintain a pastoral relationship with these two congregations and continue to care for them," he added.

A consultation team of three pastors and two lay people will be named to meet with the congregations. If the group cannot resolve the dispute, a 12-member disciplinary committee will review the charges.

The Rev. John Frykman of First United said last week both congregations are prepared to accept expulsion if necessary.

Women are said to do well as detectives in New York City. And as reporters, too. Because so many people there are afraid to talk to men but not to women. Twenty percent of New York City's private investigators are women.

Redskins owner ordered to pay $29,000 child support yearly

WASHINGTON (AP) — A judge has ordered Washington Redskins owner Jack Kent Cooke to pay his ex-wife $29,000 a year to support the couple's 2-year-old daughter, far less than the $110,000 she had requested.

"It means I'm going to appeal," a tearful Suzanne Martin Cooke told The Washington Post in an interview Thursday from her home in Fauquier County, Va. "It means I'll have to move to D.C. ... It means I've got to go to work."

Cooke's attorney, however, had a different opinion of the decision handed down this week after a drawn-out and rancorous child support battle in Fauquier County Circuit Court.

The legal battle began shortly after the two were married in July 1987, when Cooke discovered his pregnant wife had not had the abortion she'd promised, according to court testimony. He locked her

Paul Newman eligible for Social Security

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's hard to imagine, but Paul Newman can become eligible for Social Security on Friday.

The ageless actor with the cobalt-blue eyes said he planned, to celebrate his 65th birthday by having "a quiet dinner with my lady," according to his publicist, Warren Cowan. The lady is his wife and frequent costar, Joanne Woodward.

On Thursday, Newman was doing what he loves best: racing fast cars, this time at Daytona, Fla. "Joanne is tolerant of my racing," he once remarked, "especially since I repay her by going to the ballet."

A dozen years ago, Newman lamented, "if only I had started racing 10 years ago, I would have been a national champion by the age of 50."

The actor portrayed two real-life figures: Gen. Leslie Groves, head of the atomic bomb project, in "Fat Man and Little Boy"; and Gov. Earl Long, the hell-raising Louisiana governor in "Blaze."

Shatner says woman who sued was a friend

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Star Trek" actor William Shatner said a woman suing him for paternity is an longtime friend trying to make some money off of his stardom.

Vira Montes, 28, contends in a lawsuit filed by celebrity divorce lawyer Marvin Mitchelson that she was the 58-year-old Shatner's "companion, confidante and homemaker" from 1984 until earlier this month.

Fast-food group pays quick cash to Reagan

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Former President Reagan will receive $1,000 a minute for a one-hour talk to owners of Hardee's franchises meeting in Orlando next month.

"We had our sights on him before he was even out of office," said spokesman Ted Schlutow of the fast-food restaurant chain. "Our biggest growth pattern was during the Reagan years."

Schlutow said he didn't know what Reagan's topic would be when he speaks Feb. 5. The convention, expected to attract 1,400 Hardee's owners, will also feature a speech by Vol Hotez, Notre Dame University's football coach.

21 indicted in huge cactus rustling sting

Knight-Ridder News Service

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Twenty-one people have been indicted in the thefts of huge saguaro cactuses — including some rare created ones worth as much as $15,000 — in the biggest crackdown on cactus rustlers ever mounted, federal officials in Phoenix said.

The indictments resulted from a four-year undercover investigation that operated out of a fake North Scottsdale cactus business run by federal investigators.

During that time, about 150 saguaros and thousands of other protected cactuses and plants were stolen across Arizona, U.S. Attorney Stephen McNamane said Thursday.

Many of the saguaros were hundreds of years old, and most ranged from 12 to 20 feet tall. Healthy saguaros often sell for as much as $100 a foot.

"We think these indictments are going to have a significant impact on the market for stolen cacti," McNamane said.

The investigation was undertaken, he said, because protection of the environment is a top priority with federal officials.

"We live in a very fragile environment in Arizona, and we intend to do what we can to maintain that environment," McNamane said.

"We intend to prosecute vigorously anyone involved in stealing cacti," McNamane said. The stolen cactuses were sold to nurseries, landscapers, homeowners and collectors in Arizona, California, Nevada, Kansas and elsewhere.

Often, out-of-state markets will pay up to four times the price cactuses sell for in Arizona. Arizona officials have described the legal harvesting of Arizona cactuses as a "big business," involving several-million dollars' worth of plants annually.

But the marketing of stolen cactuses also has been called a "big business." Officials said they have seized six rare crested saguaros and hope to seize more as the investigation continues.

The tops of crested saguaros spread into fans or crests as large as 12 feet across.

Four of the crested saguaros were seized from a Scottsdale residence, and two were seized in Kansas City, Kan., but officials declined to disclose details of the seizures.

The cactuses were taken primarily during the night, according to Richard Marks, head of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's enforcement branch.

The government's undercover operation was named Rio Escondido, he said.

Saguaros are found principally in the Sonoran Desert in southern Arizona and Mexico. They are difficult to replace because they take decades to grow to maturity.

The characteristic arms usually do not appear until a saguaro is 75 to 80 years old; and many of the saguaros found in Arizona are hundreds of years old.

All of the suspects were indicted by federal grand juries in Phoenix and Tucson, McNamane said.

Ex-cop who was murder suspect dies

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A former Spokane police detective described by one investigator as "the prime suspect" in a 54-year-old slaying has died in Montana, authorities confirmed Thursday.

Fend Oreille County Sheriff Tony Bampton has said he believes the 93-year-old man took part in the 1935 fatal shooting of George Conniff, town marshal of Newport, about 60 miles north of Spokane.

Conniff was shot to death when he came upon three men burglarizing a Newport creamery in the Depression days when dairy products were scarce and fetched high prices on the black market.

The sheriff said Thursday he was disappointed that the former Spokane officer steadfastly refused to talk about the case.

"The prime suspect is dead, so there's no reason to continue the investigation at this point," Bampton said. "The case is closed."

The former officer was admitted to Missoula Community Medical Center last Friday and died Tuesday, nursing officials said. Linda Cowley, a Missoula County Health Department official, said the elderly man died of natural causes. She did not specify what they were.

The former officer, through his lawyer, had repeatedly denied he was involved in the shooting.

No one was ever charged in Conniff's death.

"It's all hogwash," the man said on his front porch last summer when asked about the allegations.

Funeral director William "Gig" Riddle said the man's family did not want to speak with reporters.

"The final years of (his) existence would have been a lot more peaceful if he hadn't been implicated in that murder-by-those-yo-yos-over-there," Riddle said.

But others with knowledge of the 1935 killing — including two other former Spokane police officers — implicated the man and two others in Conniff's death.

The investigation was reactivated last year when Bampton, while doing work on a master's thesis about law enforcement, came upon new leads in the Conniff case.

One former Spokane police officer told Bampton that a package containing what was believed to be the murder weapon was tossed off a downtown Spokane bridge and into the Spokane River, under the orders of a police boss, shortly after Conniff's killing.

Last summer, when the water level of the river was lowered, Bampton found a rusty .32-caliber revolver at the site where he had been told the weapon was dropped. Bampton believes the revolver was the same one used to shoot Conniff.

TWIN FALLS — To say "uneasy rests the head that wears the crown" would be a major understatement.

The College of Southern Idaho's Golden Eagles remain No. 1 ranked and undefeated right now for only one reason — free throws.

Hitting 35-for-47 from the line, CSI was able to turn back the inspired North Idaho Cardinals 91-85 in overtime Friday night in a Region 18 men's basketball game, but only after trailing most of the game and then blowing an eight-point lead in the final minutes.

"I feel very fortunate to win this one," said Coach Fred Trenkle, who took the assault a lot better than a majority of the fans, particularly the woman who bounced a wadded-up Dixie cup off official Kay Engelking after he made a traveling call on CSI with the score tied at 85 in overtime.

"Things don't get any easier tonight — for the Eagles, Trenkle or that woman — as Ricks comes in for its annual appearance. The women's game will begin at 5:15 p.m. with the men's game to start about 7:30 p.m.

"The victory left the Eagles, ranked No. 1 in the country by the National Junior College Athletic Association, 20-0 for the season and 8-0 in Region 18, two games ahead of runner-up Ricks, which beat Treasure Valley Community College 100-83 on Friday. NIC dropped to 16-5 overall and 5-3 in the region.

CSI's lack of inside players was painfully obvious in this one as 67 of the point came from the guards and a good part of the rebounds. And, CSI didn't see the use of Cardinals either.

Airton Dudzevich, the region's leading rebounder and the team's second-leading scorer, fouled out with 17 minutes, 25 seconds left in the second half, leading scorer Felix McGowan sustained a sprained ankle and left just three minutes later and North Idaho lost John Patton to fouls early in overtime.

A big crowd was fairly perplexed in seeing their Eagles so easily handled inside and further chagrined by what CSI was doing individually.

For instance, leading scorer David Anderson missed his first 10 shots

Castleford in MVC catbird seat

By RON GATES, Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — The Castleford Wolves brought their half-court trap into play at just the right moment, then got hot from the free throw line to win Friday's showdown of Magic Valley Conference boys' basketball frontrunners 68-56 over Hagerman.

In beating the Pirates for the second time this season — Castleford prevailed 58-48 at home on Jan. 2 — the fourth-ranked Wolves remained perfect at 8-0 in conference and stand 13-2 overall.

At 6-3 and 11-4, respectively, fifth-ranked Hagerman — effectively tied with Shoshone's 5-3 Indians in the loss column — trails Castleford by 25 games with three league contests remaining.

Ryan Pharis' three-point play ended a 6-0 Hagerman run with 4 minutes, 20 seconds left in the third quarter that fashioned a 39-all tie. It was virtually the last time the Pirates were in serious contention.

Castleford coach Andy Wiseman abandoned the fullcourt press in favor of a 1-3-1 half-court zone trap and Erik Alfred and Russell Hulse took it back out to 47-41 by the end of the period and Bill DeBoer's two charifits with 3:06 on the game clock ended all suspense at 60-50.

"The full-court press sometimes fails to show its effects early," said Wiseman. "But we were pretty effective with both our press and the half-court trap tonight."

Shoshone to move from MVC to Northside Conference

By LARRY HOVEY, Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — For the second time in five years, Shoshone High School will make a major conference move.

The Idaho High School Activities Association's board of control this week approved Shoshone's application to move from the Magic Valley Conference to the Northside Conference for all sports except football. The school will participate in the Sawtooth Conference for football and drop from an 11-man to an eight-man program.

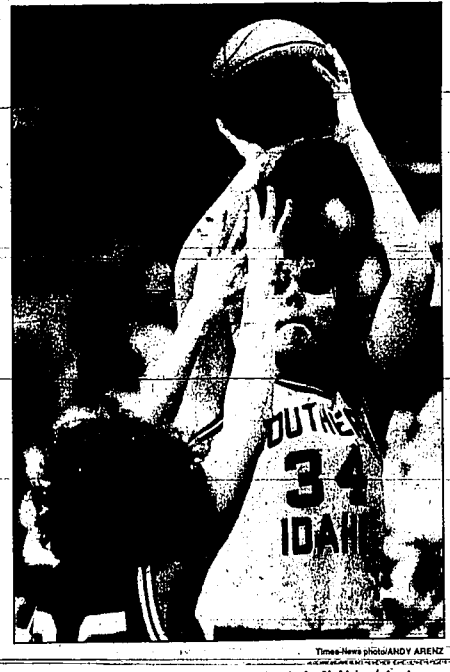

That means Shoshone will compete with its Lincoln County neighbors Richfield and Dietrich, as well as Camas County of Fairfield, Carey, Bliss, the Idaho State School for the Deaf and the Blind in Gooding and Ketchum-Sun Valley Community School in the Northside Conference.

The football-only Sawtooth Conference includes Richfield, Dietrich, Carey and Camas, as well as Clark County of Dubois, North Gem of Bancroft and Rockland, three eastern Idaho schools.

Like the Magic Valley Conference, the Northside and Sawtooth conferences are in Class A-4.

Shoshone petitioned for the move because its enrollment is declining, leaving it closer in size to its Northside Conference neighbors. The change fits Shoshone better geographically since Hagerman and Mackay are the only other members of the eight-

Eagle women roll to first place in northern division

By LARRY HOVEY, Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho women's basketball team didn't live up to the early promise of a lopsided rout Friday night, but they rallied well enough in the closing seconds to notch a 73-51 regional victory over the North Idaho Cardinals.

The victory slipped CSI ahead of North Idaho in the northern division of Region 18 with a 6-2 record with Ricks (5-2) coming to town at 5:15 today.

North Idaho fell to 5-3.

CSI broke away from an early 4-4 deadlock to assume a 27-6 lead before North Idaho got its third field goal of the game with 8 minutes, 37 seconds remaining in the first half. CSI went on to maintain that 21-point advantage.

But in the second half, North Idaho came up with a 10-0 run that chipped CSI's lead to 44-32. Sophomore Angie Olsen got the Eagles off 44 and then Candace Lynds came up with six of her 18 points to start expanding the advantage again.

"I thought in the first half we played defense really well. And for a while we executed our offense just as well," said Coach Ben Strand. "But in the second half, we brought out a different

How Denver could win

By CHARLES BRICKER, Fort Lauderdale News & Sun-Sentinel

NEW ORLEANS — The Denver Broncos' best hope to pull one of the biggest upsets in Super Bowl history might be in that 30-yard area coaches call The Red Zone.

That's where the Denver defense can make its stand against the San Francisco offense and make the 49ers settle for field goals instead of touchdowns.

Thirty yards is the distance between the back of the end zone and the 20-yard line.

"No question that area is going to be critical, very critical," Broncos' cornerback Tyrone Braxton said.

Why? Because when the San Francisco 49ers get down to or inside the 20, the Broncos have to defend only a limited space and the 49ers have less field to work with.

It's certainly not Denver's game plan to entice the Niners down to the 20, but it might turn out that way. No one has stopped the 49ers offense.

"They're going to make plays. We know

Idaho State's malaise goes from bad to worse

They're planning to retire Merrill Hoge's number at Idaho State University next weekend. The fortunes of the school's athletes have fallen so far that the exploits of an alumnus in the Pittsburgh Steelers' backfield is the biggest story in ISU sports this year.

Idaho State's athletic program is in trouble. How much trouble? The basketball team is 4-14, the football team went 3-7, the athletic director quit in December to become the assistant director of housing and the school's lawyer is running 14 sports programs.

ISU's football team went 42-64-1 in the '80s; the basketball team was 125-156.

ball attendance. ISU's sports football radio network has shrunk from five stations in 1982 to one today, and the school is one of two Big Sky member institutions without a contract with a commercial TV station.

It would be nice to report that there is at ISU at least an awareness of the problem, but the university's president, Richard Beardsley, was quoted in an interview last year as saying, "We're losing, but at least we're losing honestly."

That's where the school built the country's first indoor football facility on a college campus. It produced two of the nation's collegiate Division I basketball scoring leaders in 13 years (Dave Wagnon in 1966 and Lawrence Butler in 1979). It had, until Boise State passed it several years ago, won more championships in more sports than any school in Big Sky history.

This is the school that went from 0-11 to a national Division I-AA football championship in two seasons and beat a UCLA team led by Marques Johnson and coached by John Wooden in the NCAA Tournament. Its alumnus included the two winningest college basketball coaches in Idaho (Fred Trenkle at CSI and Bobby Dye at Boise State).

Coalition warns of telemarketing scams Market

WASHINGTON (AP) — Crooks and con artists are updating their scams for the 1990s and "if you own a telephone, then you are a potential victim," a group that says it is dedicated to fighting telemarketing fraud said Tuesday.

The decade's new con jobs include bogus offers that "guarantee" — for a hefty fee — to help sell that vacation timeshare you were stuck with in the 1980s.

In another, mortgage acceleration scammers promise to help homeowners save money by paying off their loans early but actually wind up costing the homeowners money.

Many of these schemes are variations on old swindles, said the Alliance Against Fraud in Telemarketing, which released a list of the scams that are generating an increasing number of complaints.

"With each change in technology, there's a new twist," said Linda F. Goldolier, executive director of the National Consumers League, one of the 60 consumer groups, trade associations, government agencies, businesses and labor unions that make up the alliance.

Mike McCarry, associate director for consumer protection at the Federal Trade Commission, estimated that telemarketing fraud has cost consumers $1.1 billion a year for the last five years.

Kansas Securities Commissioner Doug Mays went even further, saying telephone fraud in the securities area alone amounts to more than $10 billion a year.

"These people are crooks. Their weapons are telephones, not guns," he said, adding, "If you own a telephone, then you are a potential victim for these people."

Goldolier, McCarry and Mays all spoke at a news conference at the National Press Club, led by Richard Barton of the Direct Marketing Association, a trade group of about 3,000 telemarketers.

Goldolier said his organization hopes to curb companies that commit fraud over the telephone and "programs which may mislead but not defraud."

The alliance' watch list of schemes aimed at relieving people of their money includes "1-900 long-distance telephone numbers that charge callers even when they are not talking to a salesperson who could get free elsewhere."

"The industry is trying very hard to police our end of it, but we're only one part of the equation," said Ken Griffin, a spokesman for the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. He conceded that AT&T screens potential 900-service customers for credit background and other routine information but not for how they will use the service.

He also said there is no federal regulation requiring companies to tell consumers how much they are being charged to call a "1-900" number.

Although there are numerous legitimate telemarketers, "we want to warn consumers that con artists are making these types of offers through high-pressure sales pitches providing

The figure was a bit stronger than some analysts had projected. But observers noted that it was magnified to a great extent by increases in inventories, which is usually interpreted as evidence of weakness in business activity.

A seasonal report showed a 2.5 percent rise in new factory orders for durable goods in December.

In the bond market, where traders are especially sensitive to even slight changes in the perceived pace of the economy, interest rates rose after the figures crossed financial news wires.

At its lowest levels of the day, the Dow Jones industrial average was off more than 30 points, before some late "bargain hunting" helped blue chips to rebound.

American Telephone & Telegraph, which warned that it might find it hard to match last year's earnings growth rate in 1990, fell 2 to 39 1/2.

AT&T's statement prompted selling of several other telephone issues. United Telecommunications dropped 1 to 33; Telecom USA 1 1/2 to 17 1/2; and MCI Communications, traded in the over-the-counter market, fell 2 to 33 1/2.

Gainers among the big-name insurance and finance subsidiaries included General Electric, up 1/2 to 62 1/2; American Business Machines, up 1 at 96 1/2; Procter & Gamble, up 1/4 at 63 1/2; and McDonald's, up 1 1/2 at 37 1/2.

Teledyne climbed 1 1/2 to 34 1/2. The company declared a 5-for-1 stock split and cleared a previously announced paid-up stock dividend. General Electric and finance subsidiaries, including Bell Marketing, an American Stock Exchange issue, fell 5 1/2 to 18 1/2 on a quarterly earnings increase that fell short of some traders' expectations.

As measured by Wilshire Associates, an index of more than 5,000 actively traded stocks, the market lost $10.72 billion, or 0.34 percent, in value.

Other scams cited by the alliance:

• Bogus health-care promotions for phony arthritis treatments, sex aids and "weight-loss plans."

• Limited-use credit cards, deceptively promoted as all-purpose bank credit cards but actually good only for purchasing goods from a specific department store or catalog.

• Look-alike envelopes marked "open immediately" or "important notice" that appear to be from government agencies such as the FBI or the Internal Revenue Service but which contain promotional material and a toll-free phone number from private companies whose initials mock the federal agencies'.

"A fraud artist is limited only by his imagination," said Tom McClure, a spokesman for the U.S. Postal Inspection Service.

Soft paper prices reduce firm's income from 1988

BOISE (AP) — Boise Cascade Corp. earnings last year declined from their 1988 peak because of a soft paper market, but still hit their second-highest level in company history.

Net income for 1989 was $268 million, or $5.70 a share, compared with $289 million in 1988, or $6.15 per share. Fourth-quarter 1989 results were well below the year before. Income for the fourth quarter was $51 million, while it reached $76 million in the three months of 1988. "Paper-segment earnings declined throughout the year, reflecting weakness in our major grades, but the company's office product and building product segments both reported very strong performance for 1989," said John Fry, company chairman.

Paper grades have dropped in price, while wood chips available in the Pacific Northwest have jumped sharply. In addition, unusually cold weather resulted in increased energy and maintenance costs at several Boise Cascade paper mills.

The company's office products arm reported a record performance last year. Sales volumes for the year exceeded $1 billion for the first time. Operating income increased 7 percent over 1988 to reach a new high. Operating income for the building products segment also hit its highest level in 11 years.

"While we're optimistic about the outlook for Boise Cascade and the paper and forest products industry in the 1990s, we expect the company's earnings to be down in 1990 compared with those in 1989," Fry said.

"We expect 1990 to bring continued difficult market conditions for coated and uncoated white papers and newsprint, which are important grades to us. ... The outlook for 1990 is more positive in the office products market, where we expect continued growth in consumption."

First Interstate Bank says earnings were record high

BOISE (AP) — First Interstate Bank of Idaho has reported a jump in fourth-quarter profits and record annual earnings for last year, despite problems for its parent company.

Net income for the "three months" that ended Dec. 31 was $2.7 million, the bank reported Monday. That's compared with $921,000 for the corresponding quarter in 1988. However, the fourth-quarter figures from 1988 were depressed by a one-time $2 million write-off.

Jim Curran, chairman and chief executive officer of Idaho's third-largest bank, said last week that First Interstate would achieve the earnings record.

Curran partly credited First Interstate's 53 percent increase in net income for 1989 to favorable interest rates, lower levels of nonperforming assets, improved productivity and continued growth rates for loans and deposits.

For the 12-month period, net income hit $10 million, compared with $6.4 million for all of 1988. The bank's return on assets — another measure of a bank's health — rose from 0.76 percent to 1.15 percent for the year.

First Interstate also reported loan totals as of Dec. 31 at $581.2 million, up from $567.8 million at the same time in 1988. Year-end 1989 deposits totaled $783.7 million, compared with 1988's $753.1 million.

Meanwhile, First Interstate Bancorp, the Los Angeles-based holding company of First Interstate Bank of Idaho, reported a net loss of $344.3 million for the quarter that ended Dec. 31. That's compared with a $144 million gain for the same period a year earlier.

For the year, the holding company reported a loss of $124.5 million, compared with net income of $129.4 million for 1988.

U.S. West reports increase in earnings for 4th quarter

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — U.S. West Inc. reported an increase in fourth-quarter earnings but said profits dropped slightly for the year.

"We ended the year on a very positive note financially, and as a whole," said Jack MacAllister, chairman and chief executive officer of the company. "Our business is more exciting than it's ever been — we're truly becoming a global communications company."

In the fourth quarter, which ended Dec. 31, U.S. West reported a net income of $344.4 million, or $1.84 a share, compared with the 1988 fourth-quarter net income of $271.7 million, or $1.49 per share.

The results were due to an increase in revenues for the local service and long-distance telephone, and the cellular and paging unit and its directory publishing operation, the company said. It also cited a property sale and a change in accounting for income taxes.

For the year, the company's net income totaled $1.11 billion, or $6.02 a share, compared with $1.13 billion, or $6.17 per share, in 1988.

The 1988 results include a non-recurring after-tax gain of $88.7 million, or 48 cents per share, from the second-quarter sale of 9.66 million shares of Class A common stock by the company's cellular and paging subsidiary, the U.S. West New Vector Group. U.S. West said. Excluding this gain, the company had a 1988 net income of $1.04 billion, or $5.69 per share.

U.S. West, based in Englewood, owns U.S. West Communications and other firms involved in communications, data solutions, and marketing and financial services.

Paper operations the key to Potlatch's record year

LEWISTON (AP) — For the fourth consecutive year, Potlatch Corp. has reported record earnings.

Corporate officials are attributing the success primarily to Potlatch's pulp and paperboard operations.

In a report released Wednesday, Potlatch officials said net earnings for 1989 were $136.7 million, compared with $112.4 million in 1988. Earnings per common share were $4.79, or 19 percent ahead of the $4.04 reported in 1988. Sales of $1.23 billion were 14 percent over the $1.08 billion mark of a year ago.

"Nineteen eighty-nine was a good year for Potlatch in Idaho, especially on the pulp and paper side," said Michael D. Sullivan, a spokesman for the corporation. "Pulp and paper's performance was strong in spite of the fact we had record high raw material costs and some softening of markets toward the end of the year."

Sullivan said demand for tissue products made at Lewiston also was excellent.

Overall, Potlatch wood products group earnings increased to $131.1 million from $3.2 million in 1988. Earnings for the fourth quarter of 1989 were $8 million, compared with a loss of $1.3 million during the fourth quarter of 1988.

The Pulp, Paperboard and Packaging group and the Consumer Products Division reported 1989 earnings of $167.2 million, a 24 percent increase over the $134.6 million in 1988. The company said the significant rise in earnings was due primarily to "substantially higher sales realizations for pulp, bleached paperboard and tissue products."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® BOBBY WOLFF

"Whenever a man's failure can be traced to management's mistakes, he has to be kept on the payroll."
— Peter Drucker.

Today's South had the right idea in his play of the slam. His mistake was that he didn't carry it far enough.

Dummy's club ace won as South discarded a diamond; he then ruffed a low club. South led a trump to dummy to ruff the last club, he then cashed the top hearts. South ruffed a heart in dummy; led a trump back to his ace and ruffed his last heart in dummy. The North and South hands were each left with one trump together with three diamonds. South then led a low diamond from dummy, intending to insert his eight to endplay West, but East didn't cooperate. East alertly put up his jack, and South could not avoid losing two diamond tricks.

South was right about endplaying West, but he should have relied upon both red suits instead of only one.

After discarding a low diamond on dummy's club ace, South should ruff a club, lead a trump to dummy and ruff the last club. Another trump to dummy exhausts the trumps, and South leads a heart from dummy, inserting his nine. West wins and the endplay succeeds. A lead of either red suit yields trick 12 via a three finesse; and a club lead yields a ruff and discard.
