U.S., Soviets appear close to strategic arms cut pact

Los Angeles Times

MOSCOW — Following unexpected progress on key issues, U.S. and Soviet negotiators appear to have broken the back of the last three major obstacles to a strategic arms reduction treaty, Secretary of State James A. Baker III indicated Friday.

Baker told a midnight press conference that the three areas in which unexpectedly swift progress was made in the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty talks were sea-launched cruise missiles, air-launched cruise missiles and Soviet "linkage" of offensive nuclear weapons and anti-missile defenses, specifically the U.S. space-based missile defense system commonly known as "Star Wars."

"If you ask me if I am pleased at what we are able to do here, I am very pleased," Baker said. The arms talks here "moved progress very, very smartly toward a START treaty" this year, he said. Such a treaty would reduce U.S. and Soviet offensive nuclear arsenals by about half.

The secretary of state said he believed the talks had moved the United States and the Soviet Union another step away from the era of confrontation.

"I think the relationship is in better shape than it has been in the past," he said.

In another major development during Baker's two-day visit here, Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev made a counterproposal to President Bush's offer to cut U.S. and Soviet military manpower in Europe. He called for equal ceilings for the two superpowers on the continent at either 195,000 or 225,000 troops — both figures are in Bush's proposal. His plan implicitly rejects a 30,000-man disadvantage that the American position would impose in practice on the Soviet side.

Baker declined to respond to Gorbachev's proposal before taking it up with NATO foreign ministers next week in Ottawa, Canada. But initial indications were that the Soviet leader's problems with the Bush proposal could be resolved and that, as a result, prospects for reaching agreement this year to radically cut U.S. and Soviet conventional forces in Europe have been improved.

The U.S. and Soviet negotiating teams also reached agreement on destroying virtually all of their stocks of chemical weapons over an eight-year period. The remainder, reportedly about 2 percent, would be destroyed over the two years after that if all other states capable of producing chemical weapons join the agreement, Baker said. The text of the agreement was not immediately available.

Baker met for a total of almost four hours with Gorbachev Friday. Besides talking about reducing nuclear weapons and conventional forces, the two also discussed a "wide array of regional issues." At the press conference, Baker had these comments on those issues:

On Germany, Baker said that when East and West Germany are reunified, they should continue to be "members in or asso-

Delegation backs creek protection

Idaho Legislature

BOISE — The Magie Valley legislative delegation has teamed up to support a bill that would protect Devil's Corral Creek east of Twin Falls.

But the man who owns the surrounding property as well as the water rights says he doesn't want — or need — the Legislature's intervention. Push him too far, and he says he'll sell the land to a condominium developer.

"We bought this property to protect it and I would resent anyone who would try to interfere with the Devil's Corral," said Robert Erkins, who recently refused to protect his water rights on the stream. Erkins has maintained the water rights on the stream and could, if he wanted to, build a fish hatchery there.

The bill, introduced Friday in the Senate Resources and Environment Committee, calls for two years of interim protection from in-stream development at Devil's Corral — one of two spring creeks still undeveloped along the Snake River stretching from Hagerman to Murtaugh.

A committee will hold a public hearing before the bill can be debated on the Senate floor. If the legislation passes, the Idaho Water Resources Board would hold its own public hearings and study the stream for permanent protection as either a recreational or natural river.

The Legislature would have final approval before the board's findings are enacted.

"This comes to you from a rather extraordinarily united group of legislators representing the Magie Valley," said Resources and Environment Committee Chairman Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly.

"What we're trying to do is protect the water and the resource," said Rep. Ralph Peters, R-Jerome, who attended the committee meeting along

Reagan to deliver video testimony

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former President Reagan on Friday agreed to answer questions about his role in the Iran-Contra affair.

He will do it in videotaped testimony for the upcoming trial of John Poindexter.

Reagan said he will respond to questions from Poindexter, but said he or the Bush administration could invoke executive privilege to avoid answering specific questions during the deposition.

The ex-president proposed in a court filing that he give the videotaped deposition in Los Angeles Feb. 16, four days before the scheduled start of Poindexter's criminal trial.

U.S. District Court Judge Harold Greene scheduled a hearing for Monday to consider the timing and circumstances of the videotaped deposition.

On Monday, Poindexter was given approval by a federal judge to ask Reagan 154 questions about the Iran-Contra affair. Greene gave Reagan until Friday to decide whether he would invoke a claim of executive privilege in an attempt to avoid giving the deposition altogether.

Reagan "recognizes that this court has a considerable responsibility to protect and preserve the rights of the defendant in this case as well as to be sensitive to the interests of the former president and the constitutional rights and duties of the presidency," Reagan's lawyers said in court papers.

Hundreds help mop up oil on California beach

Knight-Ridder News Service

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. —

Hundreds of southern Californians helped mop up across area beaches Friday to help rid gobs of oil and patrol for seabirds greased and grounded by a 295,000-gallon spill off the coast.

About 100 gallons of Alaskan crude oil from the American-Trader washed ashore early Friday, soiling spots along several miles of beaches 35 miles southeast of Los Angeles. Coast Guard Rear Adm. William Kime said the soiled shoreline measured 1/2 mile at Huntington and three-quarters of a mile at Newport Beach.

The spill stretched 5 miles by 7 miles from Bolsa Chica State Beach to Newport Beach. It was headed out to sea Friday, amid fears that winds could change again, pushing the oil landward to Laguna Beach.

At least 50 birds were recovered by mid-afternoon Friday, 20 of them dead, but fishermen reported hundreds more offshore soaked with oil that leaked through the ship's pierced hull Wednesday.

Meanwhile, a second and possibly a third hole have been found in the hull, raising fears that another 2-million-gallon compartment could be spewing out oil. Divers have been unable to tell whether the second compartment is leaking, Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Alan Carter said.

The spill has prompted hundreds of area residents to offer assistance in the cleanup. Many hit the beaches at dawn Friday in dungarees and sweatshirts, stooping down to mop up the oil with paper sponges that resembled giant disposable diapers.

Later in the morning, however, companies hired to do the work asked volunteers to leave the beaches because they lacked protective clothing.

Meanwhile, at Huntington State Beach, volunteers reported to the main lifeguard station to help rescue seabirds. Inside the lifeguard station, workers were letting the birds rest before beginning the arduous process of removing oil from their feathers with a mild detergent.

At sea, skimmer boats had recovered 47,000 gallons of the spilled oil.

Cold heats inflation in January

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Record price increases for vegetables and fuel oil combined in January to produce the highest monthly wholesale inflation rate in 15 years.

It was a temporary spurt economists attributed to the holiday cold snap.

The Labor Department's Producer Price Index soared a seasonally adjusted 1.8 percent last month, the sharpest rise since a 2 percent gain in November 1974, in the midst of the OPEC oil embargo.

January energy prices rocketed 13.6 percent for the largest monthly gain on record since the department began tracking the sector in 1974. Food costs jumped 2.1 percent, the biggest increase in six years.

The month's overall price climb was triple the steady 0.6 percent gain in December and far above economists' December forecast of about 1.2 percent.

If wholesale inflation persisted at the January pace, it would produce an annual price rise of 24.1 percent in 1990.

However, economists expressed little worry and stock and bond prices rose immediately after the report because the "core rate" of inflation — prices of goods excluding food and energy — rose a slight 0.1 percent. The core rate is viewed as a better measure of underlying inflationary pressure.

Economists warn that the wholesale food and energy jolt is filtering through to consumers and is likely to push up the Consumer Price Index, the best-known inflation measure, but the effect at both the retail and wholesale levels will be temporary, they said.

Analysts are predicting the wholesale inflation rate, which more than doubled between 1988 and 1989 from 2.2 percent to 4.8 percent, will retreat to about 4 percent this year.

"Without food and energy, commodity price inflation was very low" in January, said economist Allen Sinai of the Boston Co. "The report suggests much of the activity was weather-related and will diminish in coming months."

As temperatures plummeted, fuel oil prices rose a startling 25.3 percent, the biggest jump on record. As refineries switched production to fuel oil, supplies of gasoline grew short, sending those prices up 16.7 percent. Natural gas costs rose a brisk 3.2 percent.

The price of fresh and dried vegetable rose 58 percent for the month, the largest seasonally adjusted gain recorded since the department began tracking that category in 1967. Egg, fruit and fish prices also rose, while rice, pasta, chicken and turkey costs fell.

In other categories, wholesale prices rose 2.9 percent for children's clothing, 0.8 percent for men's and women's clothing, and 0.9 percent for home electronic equipment.

More abortion bills tossed into hopper

Rules review - A3

BOISE — The Idaho Legislature is moving toward a decision on abortion issues, and lawmakers will have a wide variety of anti-abortion and pro-choice bills to debate.

Five more abortion bills were approved for introduction on Friday, bringing to 11 the number of bills before the House and Senate. The two Senate bills, however, are duplicated in the House and will not come up for consideration because legislative leaders decided earlier that the first decisions on abortion will be made in the House State Affairs Committee.

That panel gave quick preliminary approval to the latest proposals, three proposing putting the abortion question before voters on the November general election ballot. Two others want to ban abortions as a means of birth control, retaining stiff penalties for any woman who has an abortion except for specifically approved

Galileo swings around Venus in 'billiard shot'

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The Galileo spacecraft swooped near Venus Friday so the solar-wind-shielded planet could act as a gravity sling-shot to help hurl the craft toward its 1995 rendezvous with Jupiter.

Engineers at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory planned to work late into the night, awaiting confirmation of the 2.8-hour spacecraft's closest approach to Venus.

The approach was expected at 10:59 p.m. MST, at a distance of 1,028 miles above the planet's hellishly hot surface.

"The Venus encounter is our first major milestone in the mission," said Galileo project scientist Torrence Johnson. "After the encounter, we have gained enough energy-out of this celestial billiard shot to get the energy we need to make it all the way to Jupiter."

The power the spacecraft gains in the fly-by is triple the energy of its propellant supply, said mission director Neal Aulman.

The $1.35 billion mission will let Galileo examine Earth, its moon and one or two asteroids before the spacecraft arrives at Jupiter, the solar system's largest planet, after a 2.4-billion-mile trip.

Briefly

Coast Guardsmen to face questions
ANCHORAGE (AP) — A judge cleared the way Friday for Joseph Hazelwood's lawyers to blame U.S. Coast Guard negligence rather than the skipper for the nation's largest oil spill.

Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone said he had decided to allow cross-examination of two Coast Guard traffic monitors on the role the agency's Vessel Traffic System played in the March 24 grounding of the 987-foot tanker Exxon Valdez.

After brief legal arguments, he allowed for the monitors to be questioned about how closely they were watching radar and whether they had a duty to notify Hazelwood that his ship was approaching rocky Blythe.

However, Johnstone refused for now to admit in evidence a blood alcohol test given to one of the monitors 13-15 hours after the disaster at sea.

Jury acquits 'Dapper Don' in slaying
NEW YORK (AP) — John Gotti, the reputed boss of the nation's most powerful crime family, won his third victory over government prosecutors Friday with an acquittal on charges he ordered the shooting of a union official.

Gotti, the "Dapper Don" who favors $1,800 suits and pinky rings, left the Manhattan courthouse without comment after the verdict. His supporters applauded loudly as the verdict was read, with one man shouting, "Yeah, Johnny!"

Gotti-kissed his lawyer, Bruce Cutler, after the anonymous jury foreman announced "guilty" on the assault and conspiracy charges against the alleged Gambino family head. Gotti's co-defendant, Anthony Guercio, was also acquitted on the same charges.

An angry Acting Justice Edward McLaughlin silenced the courtroom cheering by threatening a 30-day jail term for anyone who continued applauding.

Pact with NATO. "Pressed on whether he meant a united Germany might have a less binding association with NATO than West Germany's present membership, Baker said he did not mean to signal any change in U.S. position but only to reflect the possibility that the character of the alliance may change in the future to adopt a greater political role with less emphasis on security matters."

On Afghanistan, the United States presented a subtly different approach to attaining a peaceful settlement there. It proposed that Afghan President Najibullah, who is supported by the Soviet Union, peace talks with the Mujahideen rebels; if the rebels agree. But he must agree to give up power once a solution is reached. Baker said. Earlier, the United States had insisted that Najibullah leave office before talks begin.

On the Middle East, the United States refused, contrary to a Soviet report Thursday, to join in a statement condemning Israel for recent West Bank Baker said it "would be productive" to condemn a U.S. ally, but he repeated that the United States opposes such a settlement policy.

Gorbachev also discussed with Baker this week's special meeting of the Communist Party's Central Committee, in which a new party platform with fundamental changes was approved for submission to a full party congress in June.

Although the platform calls for permitting a multi-party system here, Gorbachev emphasized the restructuring and reordering of the (Soviet) executive branch," Baker said. Soviet officials have indicated that the new platform allows for development of a Soviet chief executive along the lines of an American-style executive presidency.

Although Gorbachev has the title of president, his position does not have the power of the American presidency.

with other Magic Valley legislators. Devil's Corral Creek rises from the Snake River Plain aquifer and flows into the Snake River through canyon's rugged north side; about two miles above Shoshone Falls. It is a favorite hiking and fishing spot for many Magic Valley residents. Erkin's was so angry when he heard about the proposed legislation that he threatened to close off the land completely.

"We may start action immediately," he said. "This is a typical example of trying to steal something from private ownership."

"If they think I'm going to fold over on this, they're wrong," he said.

Noh said the proposed protection legislation is "in no way intended as a punitive act against Mr. Erkin's, who may own the land, but not the water."

All of the citizens of the Magic Valley would want to work with him on this, Noh said.

The Idaho Conservation League supports the Devil's Corral Creek protection bill, said William Whelan, a league spokesman.

"There aren't many places like Devil's Corral left," he said. "We've got to act now to protect it."

Erkin said he offered the land to the state Department of Parks and Recreation and to the Department of Fish and Game for protection several years ago. The offer was turned down.

Since then, Erkin said, he's had other offers from people who want to build a fish hatchery on the property. Others have wanted to turn Devil's Corral Canyon into a real estate development.

On Friday Erkin said he might even agree to the idea of a Devil's Corral-condominium complex.

Is he kidding?

No, Erkin said. "I'm not enough fed up to sell it."

reasons.

House State Affairs Chairman Pam Bengson, R-Boise, brought the referendum bills before the committee.

She said it was not an attempt by herself or anyone else to duck the issue, but an attempt to find out what the people want.

"I'm not certain I really know what 51 percent of the people in District 20 (the one she represents) think about abortion," she said.

"It certainly is an issue of individual responsibility. I want it discussed around every breakfast table," she said.

The deadline for introduction of abortion bills is Monday. And on the following Monday, Feb. 19, the committee will begin two nights of public hearings, eight hours in all, on abortion.

Starting Tuesday, the Legislative Information Center will begin taking reservations from people who want to testify. Bengson said it is anticipated that several hundred people will sign up; so each witness will be limited to three minutes of testimony.

"We will accept written statements submitted to the committee and they will be entered into the record," she said.

Reservations will be accepted from individuals only. Bengson said reserve blocks of time for members to testify.

Boise business executive enters race for Congress

PARKINSON

BOISE (AP) — Ward Parkinson says he wants to bring a fresh perspective as a businessman who has not been part of Idaho's government or politics in the past, to his campaign for the Republican nomination for Idaho's 1st District congressional seat.

Parkinson and his brother, Joe, founded Micron Technology Corp., a manufacturer of computer microchips.

"I am proud of my success," he told an announcement gathering in Boise on Friday. "I again, my intent in being here today is to offer a relatively unique background in science and engineering to face the coming problems of the decade."

That sets up a battle between Parkinson, with extensive business and foreign trade experience and little political experience, and state Sen. Skip Smyser of Parma, who has an extensive government and legislative background and who has been active in Republican Party politics for years.

It also offers a clear choice on abortion. Parkinson said he is pro-choice and Smyser is anti-abortion. Parkinson, 44, was announcing his formal entry into the race for the GOP nomination at four stops up and down the 1st District that covers western and northern Idaho. Just a week ago, Parkinson issued a statement saying he had decided not to seek national office.

On the Democratic side "in the campaign to replace Republican Larry Craig, who is running for the U.S. Senate," Boise stockbroker Larry LaRocco and former state Rep. Jeanne Givens of Coeur d'Alene have entered the primary race, and Agriculture Director Dick Rush was expected to join that campaign by the first part of March.

LaRocco also plans to make a series of formal announcements across the district next Thursday.

Parkinson said he is a genuine Republican. He said he was listed as donating $1,400 to Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus last year because he paid for a dinner to honor top college students.

Micron Technology's 1988 contributions to Democratic candidates didn't come up at his announcement Friday, but he has said in the past it was because of he and his brother Joe's concerns about the future of education in Idaho.

On Thursday, former Deputy Attorney General Pat Kole became the first, and possibly only, Republican to enter the campaign to succeed GOP Attorney General Jim Jones, who is running against Craig for the seat of retiring Republican U.S. Sen. James McClure.

Senate majority adopts rules alternative

BOISE (AP) — A bill giving lawmakers oversight over thousands of administrative government regulations via annual legislative review has been sent to Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus.

The move Friday came after Senate Democrats rejected a deal Andrus and Republican leaders worked out to resolve the controversy.

On a straight party-line vote, the Senate on Friday gave final approval to the House-passed bill that will make every government rule or regulation in effect on July 1, 1991, expire on that date unless reinstated by the Legislature.

After the deadline, all rules will expire annually if lawmakers do not pass a bill keeping them in effect.

"If we don't have the oversight ... we're faced with a situation where rules and regulations having the force of law are written by bureaucrats without any input from the legislative branch," Republican Senate President Pro Tem Michael Crapo of Idaho Falls said.

The Democratic minority warned that the scheme would create extreme insecurity among the state's businessmen, who would see administrative rules and regulations they have lived with for years "go up in smoke every year."

Although Andrus has also opposed the concept, administration officials said he has indicated to legislative leaders he might let the bill become law without his signature to put the issue to rest, at least for this election-year session.

Democratic Ron Beitelbacher of Grangeville predicted the scheme would create so many problems for the part-time Legislature that it would eventually be repealed.

But the GOP majority maintained the Legislature had to find some way to get a handle on the myriad of rules and regulations executive agencies issue to implement the technical aspects of bills passed by the Legislature and signed by the governor.

Assistant Republican Floor Leader Jerry Twigg of Blackfoot acknowledged that putting a one-year life span on rules was not the majority's preferred solution to the debate over whether lawmakers have authority to review and veto administrative regulations.

But the deal GOP leaders negotiated with Andrus a week earlier was rejected by all but one of the Senate Democrats. It called for submitting to voters in the fall a constitutional amendment clearly giving the Legislature authority to veto administrative rule by a majority vote without the involvement of the governor. Also included was a bill, contingent on voter approval of the constitutional amendment, to limit the veto period to the first five years a rule is in effect.

Sen. Brian Donesley of Boise was the only Democrat to support the constitutional amendment. His party colleagues, some apparently miffed they were left out of the direct negotiations with the governor, claimed there was no need to change the constitution to solve something that has not been a major problem.

Legislative authority over administrative rules, an issue that first surfaced in the early 1980s, came to a head last year when the Health and Welfare Board challenged the Legislature's veto of regulations on septic tank installation. That case is currently pending before the state Supreme Court, another reason Democrats used to try to slow action on the GOP plans.

But while many lawmakers believe the Legislature is on the losing side of that legal argument, they expect the high court to void the veto for reasons other than the constitutional claim that the method violates the separation-of-powers doctrine.

Pocatello teacher wins fellowship

BOISE (AP) — A high school teacher from Pocatello has been selected to receive this year's Idaho fellowship in honor of Christa McAuliffe, the teacher-astronaut killed in the 1985 explosion of the space shuttle Challenger and legislative budget writers have agreed to pay the bill.

A special panel on Friday selected Marilyn McCurdy, who teaches at Highland High School, as this year's recipient of the $31,000 fellowship. She said she will use her one-year sabbatical to develop a learning laboratory for science classes.

Budget writers again reject financing to implement water quality legislation

BOISE (AP) — Legislative budget writers, striving to protect the state's record cash surplus, have again rejected emergency proposals for money to implement two water quality laws enacted last year.

On a series of votes Friday, the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee rejected scaled-back requests from the Division of Environmental Quality for money to begin implementing a groundwater protection program and a mandate for regional management plans to halt nutrient enrichment in streams and lakes.

A similar stand was taken on an Agriculture Department request for money to begin regulating the application of farm chemicals through irrigation systems.

Opponents of the special budget measures that would have provided cash to get work under the two 1989 laws giving this winter argued that financing could wait until the new state budget for the year beginning in July is written later this month.

The majority ignored pleas from Rep. Ken Robison, D-Boise, that lawmakers "have an obligation to see this legislation is carried out. It's already been delayed some considerable time."

But critics maintained there was little the agency could do over the next several months that could not begin this summer. A majority agreed, however, to provide $6,500 so a 20-member Groundwater Quality

Council could hold two meetings this spring to get a jump on work that must be completed by mid-1991.

Last March, after the two bills were enacted, the agency sought some $700,000 to enact the groundwater protection program, but that bill died. The current request for emergency funds was scaled back $403,000, still to no avail.

Gov. Cecil Andrus did not recommend emergency funding for the water quality programs, apparently in response to the Legislature's refusal to provide any money after they were enacted in the 1989 session. Andrus has proposed a total of $1.3 million to implement the bills in the new budget year.

Committee unanimously approves shifting responsibility of poor care

BOISE (AP) — A move to shift health-care responsibility for the indigent poor from the counties to the state has won unanimous approval from the House Health and Welfare Committee.

The measure, sponsored by Rep. Brent Brocksome, R-Boise, and Sen. Larry Anderson, R-Twin Falls, would cut property taxes by about $13 million. Ada County taxes would drop $2.6 million, because property taxes would no longer be levied to pay for health care.

The bill has the support of the Idaho

Association of Counties and the Idaho Hospital Association.

About $7 million can be saved because some poor patients would be eligible for federal Medicaid payments if the state takes over. State general funds would make up the difference.

Brocksome said another benefit of the bill would be the uniform eligibility standards for those seeking health care.

"This is the first step in developing a safety net for our citizens," said the nursing home operator.

The fellowship, offered by every state to at least one teacher, has traditionally been financed by the federal government. But because of confusion of a change in application and nomination dates this year, Idaho was the only state in the nation to miss the deadline for receiving the federal money to finance the grant.

Gov. Cecil Andrus, angered by the foul-up, proposed the state use money from its record cash surplus to finance the fellowship this year so Ms. McCurdy would not be penalized because of the mistake, and the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee agreed.

State officials guaranteed the committee there would be no problem obtaining the federal money to finance future fellowships.

Bill pushes garbage reduction, recycling

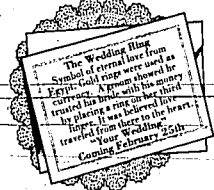

BOISE (AP) — A bill requiring municipal governments to prepare plans for reducing garbage and increasing recycling has been introduced by Sen. Ron Beitelbacher, D-Grangeville.

The measure, introduced in the Senate Resources and Environment Committee on Wednesday, originally was authored by Rep. Deanna Vickers, D-Lewiston, who will back the measure in the House.

The Solid Waste Planning and Recycling Act would give cities and towns $600,000 for garbage and recycling plans, as well as provide a "blueprint" to follow, Mrs. Vickers said.

The bill requires cities of 8,000 people or more to provide recycling opportunities at least once a month.

Free tax counseling available for seniors

TWIN FALLS - Free tax counseling for senior citizens and low-income people is available through April 15 at selected locations in the Magic and Wood River valleys, mostly at senior citizens centers.

Anyone needing help should call to make reservations and bring all the necessary information, such as 1099 forms, tax forms, last year's return and any other information showing income earned or other tax information.

For more information call the senior centers in area cities and towns or Blaine Linford, at 734-3809. The service is sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons and American Association of Retired Taxpreparers.

Idaho senator backs export enhancement portion of bill

WASHINGTON - U.S. Sen. Jim McClure likes at least one of President Bush's proposals for a five-year Farm Bill - extension of the Export Enhancement Program.

"If there's one provision of the 1985 Farm Bill that's made a difference, it's been the Export Enhancement Program," McClure said. "It's been the big stick behind our statements that we're serious about fair trade when it comes to free-trade negotiations."

The program provides agricultural exporters with commodities held by the U.S. government to help maintain foreign markets.

McClure was less certain about other aspects of Bush's Farm Bill, saying, "I'll have to take a close look at the details before I give it final approval."

4-car accident in Twin Falls leaves 5 people hurt Friday

TWIN FALLS - A four-car accident in Twin Falls injured five people Friday evening.

The accident occurred in the 1100 block of Addison Avenue East at 5:30 p.m., according to a police report. The driver of a westbound car, Bradley Andersen, 36, of Twin Falls, had a seizure and accelerated, hitting the car in front of him, which struck a third car, which struck a fourth car, Patrol Officer Dan Chatterton said.

Andersen and his wife, Laura, 35, were taken to the Twin Falls Clinic & Hospital. The driver of the second car, Iona J. Lehmann, 30, of Buhl, was treated and released from Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, a hospital spokeswoman said. Lehmann's passenger left the scene before police arrived, Chatterton said.

The driver of the third car, Rosi Webster, 41, of Twin Falls, and her passenger, Ashley Preece, 10, sought treatment from their private physician, Chatterton said.

The driver of the fourth car, Marlys A. VanHoozer, 31, of Twin Falls, and her passenger and fiancé, Twin Falls police Sgt. Jim Massey, refused treatment, Chatterton said. The two were headed for a Caribbean cruise to Saint John, where they are to be married, Chatterton said.

Police shooting review due for completion next week

TWIN FALLS - An independent review of a police shooting should be completed next week, Twin Falls police Capt. Bob Hodge said.

The department is reviewing an incident Monday in which Patrol Officer Dan Chatterton and a state police officer chased a man through town who had refused to accept a traffic citation. At a parking lot on Shoup Avenue West, the driver got out of the car carrying a gun. He refused to drop it, and Chatterton shot three times at the man and missed.

The man was then chased on foot and arrested. Nobody was injured.

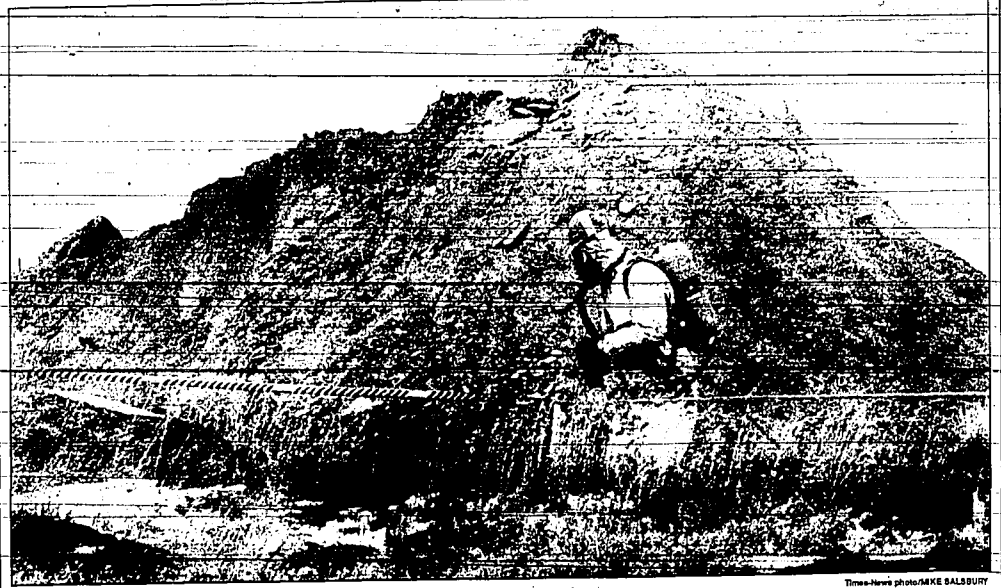

Hodge said the shooting will be reviewed by a committee of three: an officer from the Idaho police training academy, an officer from Burley and a county prosecutor from outside Twin Falls. He expected the review to only take a few hours, and he hoped it would be conducted on Wednesday.

Kimberly, Jerome citizens reapointed to state boards

BOISE - Two local men have been reapointed to state boards.

Kent Taylor, a local attorney who lives in Kimberly, was reapointed for another three years to the Governor's Advisory Council, which advises the Education Department on allocating federal funds for educational programs.

Clair Jerome was reapointed to the State Brand Board, which fixes the rate of tax levies on livestock and regulates the fund generated from those taxes.

Contractors start Murtaugh dump investigation

MURTAUGH - An expanded investigation of the Murtaugh dump started this week. It has revealed more possible contamination than previously suspected, a federal official said.

International Technology Inc. of Colorado, contracted by the Bureau of Land Management to investigate the site, has found more chemical containers than BLM officials originally believed were buried in trenches at the dump.

The contractor has found several small pesticides and herbicides drums in addition to more than 2,000 empty 55-gallon drums that once contained the insecticide Disonon.

Two wells also were drilled this week to test and monitor ground water near the old dump for chemical contamination.

Cleanup is expected to exceed $300,000.

Locals consider bid for high school rodeo finals

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS - A group of Twin Falls-area businessmen and civic leaders is considering making a bid for the National High School Finals Rodeo.

Kent Just, executive vice president of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, said a 40-member host committee would be formed by the first of March to decide whether to bid to host the event for three years, starting in 1993, at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds in Filer.

"We've had an exploratory committee working on this for three or four months," Just said. "We even sent a three-man delegation to Oklahoma to get an idea of what it would involve. We're going to expand the committee, inviting people from Filer, Jerome and other areas to get involved in it."

The rodeo, which is held in July, would draw 1,200 competitors from throughout the United States and Canada and about 5,000 out-of-town spectators. Contracts to host the rodeo are awarded for a three-year period.

Just said bidding for the rodeo would require a guarantee of $300,000 per year, and he estimated it would take a total commitment of between $1 million and $1.2 million.

"The money is a big consideration," Just said. "That's a lot of money to come up with, but there are other considerations too. They would need 800 motel rooms, we would have to set up an RV city in Filer for 500 units as well as laying out most of the other RV spaces in the immediate area and we'd have to find the space to stall 1,400 horses."

But Just said the economic returns would be substantial. "They claim $15 million, but I'm sure that includes a multiplier," he said. "It would actually be under $5 million a year, I would guess, but that's still a pretty fair return."

Just said one of his biggest concerns would be the timing. "I have a commitment for 200 rooms, and we have enough rooms in the area to accommodate them, but it would pretty much tie up every room during a time of year when there are already a lot of rooms being used."

Just said forming the host committee and deciding whether to make a bid would not be a chamber project, but would involve groups and individuals from throughout the Magic Valley as well as the Twin Falls County Fair Board.

"We've gotten a lot of reaction to the idea, ranging from 'Are you crazy?' to 'Let's go for it,'" he said.

The rodeo made one previous appearance at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds, in the summer of 1971. But it involved far fewer contestants and spectators than it does now.

"From what I understand, it went pretty well," Just said. "But you're comparing apples and oranges with what would be involved with hosting it now."

The host committee will have until July to decide whether or not to make a bid.

"I would guess they have a decision before that," Just said. "They should have a pretty good idea within a month or two of whether or not they want to make a bid."

Air Force bomb range tour leaves most VIPs feeling better about proposed expansion

By N. S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A tour of two Air Force bombing ranges answered some questions, raised others and left most feeling better about a proposed expansion of the Saylor Creek Bombing Range.

"Arizona isn't Idaho, and Florida damn sure isn't Idaho," Three-Creek rancher Randall Brewer said after a tour of the Barry M. Goldwater Range in Arizona and the Avon Park Air Force Range in Florida.

"I don't know that it answered all our questions, and maybe it raised some," he said.

About 45 Idahoans this week were treated to a VIP tour arranged by the Air Force to show how it operates at two other bombing ranges.

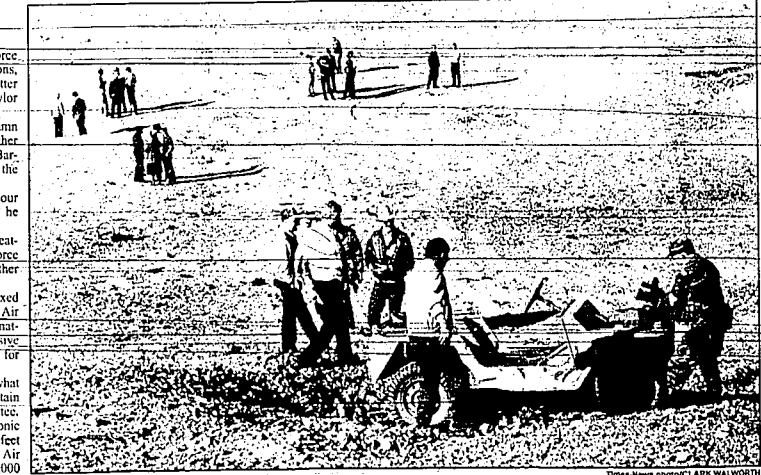

The group returned Friday with mixed feelings. Many were reassured by the Air Force's apparent success at managing natural resources, but were still apprehensive over the uncertainty of Air Force plans for the Owyhee desert.

"The Air Force still hasn't told us what they want," said Bill Ward of the Mountain Home Economic Development Committee.

During a demonstration of supersonic flight in Arizona at 10,000 and 20,000 feet above the ground, ranchers asked the Air Force to demonstrate such a flight at 5,000 feet.

But the Air Force was unable to comply.

Norco rehires all but 15 workers laid off in December

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS - Norco Windows Inc. has rehired most of its workers laid off in December, a company spokesman said.

"We have all of them back except 15," said Howard Linskey, local plant manager. An increase in orders for the company's wood windows spurred the rehiring.

Seasonal increases in construction orders brought about the increased demand, Linskey said. "As we get closer to spring, certainly it's going to help more."

Norco's parent company, meanwhile, announced record sales but a 14 percent reduction in earnings for 1989.

Sales for TJ International Inc., a Boise-based manufacturer of specialty building materials, increased to $351 million from $315 million in 1988.

But net income decreased to $15.2 million from $17.8 million in 1988, partly due to higher wood costs, a lagging northeast new-housing market, and quality and machinery problems at one of the firm's plants, TJ International President Walt Minnick said.

Minnick also announced the retirement of Arthur L. Troutner, 68, co-founder of Trus Joist Corp. Trus Joist recently changed its name to TJ International.

Troutner was a TJ International vice president. He also spearheaded research leading to many of the firm's laminated-wood products.

"Art's creative genius spawned much of the company's structural product line," Minnick stated in a press release. "He will be very much missed."

INEL faces corrective actions to avoid risk to health, environment

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — A Federal inspection of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory last June found emergency telephones and radios not working, alarms ignored by workers and waste labeled or unchecked. After five days, Environmental Protection Agency inspectors found 28 hazardous waste violations at the INEL. While the U.S. Department of Energy site is not subject to EPA fines, the same violations at a private site could result in about $400,000 in fines.

An EPA "notice of noncompliance," sent to the Energy Department last week, describes hazardous waste violations at six major INEL facilities:

EPA and INEL officials have said the violations pose no immediate danger. But in a Jan. 29 letter to acting INEL Manager Phil Hamric, EPA Hazardous Waste Division Director Charles Findley said corrective actions "are necessary to avoid risk to human health and the environment."

The EPA says it found violations at Argonne National Laboratory-West, the Central Facilities Area, the Idaho Chemical Processing Plant, the Radioactive Waste Management Complex, Test Area North and the Test Reactors Area.

At a Chem Plant storage bay, emergency containment equipment was found to be inoperable during the inspection. A telephone was disconnected and a check of an emergency radio "failed to receive a response," the EPA notice said.

Elsewhere at the Chem Plant, workers ignored an alarm indicating that hazardous waste was in a containment area in violation of EPA regulations, the notice said.

Workers had not been tested at several INEL facilities, and workers did not know whether the contents were hazardous. At one fire training area, EPA inspectors found an abandoned waste drum.

The INEL designated some wastes for recycling without a feasible plan to do it at several facilities. No waste was being recycled in some of those areas, but was instead being kept in unpermitted storage areas, said Jeff Rodin, an environmental scientist in the EPA's Seattle regional office.

The federal agency's notice spells out 11 short-term steps—the Energy Department must take to meet hazardous waste laws. For example, it must immediately set up a plan to ensure that hazardous wastes are not kept outside permitted storage areas for longer than 90 days.

The department must install all emergency equipment required for storage areas within 30 days. It must have a plan to analyze waste before it's treated, stored or disposed of within 45 days.

The INEL has declined to comment on specifics of the inspection. Site spokesman Nick Nichols called the inspection a legal matter between the INEL and the EPA.

The INEL has said it has already taken care of some violations, and will meet with EPA officials as soon as possible to discuss the inspection.

Washington's Adams wants hearing on proposed railroad abandonment

SPOKANE (AP) — Federal regulators should schedule a hearing in Whitman County on Union Pacific's proposal to abandon 69 miles of railroad track on the Palouse, U.S. Sen. Brock Adams says.

Adams, D-Wash., is asking the Interstate Commerce Commission to review Union Pacific's plan to abandon its Tekoa and Pleasant Valley branch lines.

The dry pea and lentil industry is particularly concerned because 98 percent of the crop is located in the Palouse area, Adams said. He letter Thursday to ICCT chairwoman Herbert H. Gold.

Pea and lentil growers contend the abandonment would raise their shipping costs by 10 percent, said Adams. Union Pacific contends the 100-year-old line is unprofitable and the impact would be much less.

"An oral hearing would allow witnesses from the dry pea and lentil industry, county officials and UP representatives to cross-examine the opposing party and allow all the information to be publicly examined," Adams said.

Union Pacific's initial petition to abandon the track was rejected by the ICC last summer because of filing mistakes. Union Pacific filed a new request in January.

Ced Trandahl, a Union Pacific spokesman, said the railroad anticipates losing more than $95,000 a year on the line, based on losses between October 1988 and September 1989.

An ICC spokesman said the commission would decide by early March whether to schedule a hearing on the abandonment, after it has reviewed all protests filed against the request.

Bangerter says Utah creative in education

WASHINGTON (AP) — Utah Gov. Norm Bangerter says his state's educational problems from large student populations and limited resources have forced creativity that others want to copy.

Bangerter spoke to an Allstate Insurance Public Issues Forum with several hundred government and business leaders about how Utah has tried to improve education.

"Utah probably has, as we all know, the highest education formula to deal with. And so new ideas, innovation and cooperation are probably more important to a state like Utah with limited resources and high student population," he said.

"So we've got people at the forefront of trying to deal with those (problems) ... because we will likely hit a bump in the road before others will," he said.

The specific program Bangerter explained was the Utah Partnership for Educational and Economic Development — which he said was the only statewide program in the nation designed to form a partnership between business, government and education to solve educational problems.

"The leaders from education, government and business realized that the success of each entity was linked to the success of the others," he said.

Bangerter said the groups came together in the Utah Partnership to form task forces to address the issues of training, basic education needs, research, resources and improving the state's image.

The Utah Partnership later submitted 59 specific recommendations to the governor, the State Board of Education and the Board of Regents.

Among them, he said, was a program for the state to spend $30 million to $50 million on new equipment such as computers for classrooms over the next four years to be matched by up to $100 million from private businesses.

Groups would make contributions according to their multiple agendas. "The goal of this partnership is to bring all groups to one agenda," Bangerter said — the state is also urging similar business-government partnerships on local levels.

"The doors of communication have been opened, the sharing of resources is evident and the future for Utah children and the work force is better than it has ever been before," he said.

Supreme Court overturns drug conviction

BOISE (AP) — Ruling that Geronio Carrasco was told but may not have understood the consequences of pleading guilty, the Idaho Supreme Court has overturned his conviction on two counts of delivering heroin and cocaine.

The unanimous decision issued Friday reverses rulings by 7th District Judge Grant Young and the Idaho Court of Appeals denying Carrasco's motion to withdraw his guilty plea.

The case was returned to Young for a trial.

Carrasco was a 29-year-old citizen of Durango, Mexico, when he was arrested with two other men in Madison County in 1986. He neither spoke nor understood English.

After pleading guilty to selling cocaine and black tar heroin to undercover agents, Carrasco was sentenced to up to 30 years in prison. That later was reduced to 20 years by the Court of Appeals.

On appeal, Carrasco argued that Young had not fully informed him of his rights or of the consequences of a guilty plea. The Supreme Court agreed, ruling that the record of the case "did not support a finding that WASHINGTON (AP) — Idaho said Bert Brackett, Idaho Cattle Association president. The Air Force has proposed a 5,000-foot floor for supersonic flight at Saylor Creek.

Bob Salter, a Meridian conservationist, said the trip left him a little less apprehensive about the proposed expansion.

"I'm more confident that they can perhaps have some expanded range and still not put a crimp on some of the historical uses," Salter said.

Brewer said the Air Force's efforts to work out differences with livestock owners who lease grazing land at the Florida range.

He was less impressed with Arizona's Goldwater range, where grazing was phased out about 40 years ago to protect native endangered species.

"I can see where the livestock operators might have paid the Air Force to take the land," Brewer said. "I've never seen anything so desolate."

Brackett said the trip increased his understanding of how the Air Force operates. Air Force management appeared to have improved conditions at both ranges, he said.

He was not sure, however, just how the two ranges would relate to Idaho. Differences among the place are significant.

"But here we've got a pretty good situation," he said. "Anything they do, we'll be losing."

Wendell within the Avon Park range are leased out to livestock owners, but live bombs or sonic booms are not allowed. For that part of their training pilots go to Goldwater or Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada, Brackett said.

Avon Park is used much more intensely than Saylor Creek. Though both are about the same size, Avon Park manages to squeeze in 25,000 training periods compared with 6,000 of time at Saylor Creek.

To accommodate the heavier use, Avon has more target areas. Increasing target areas at Saylor Creek could be accomplished by changes in the withdrawal legislation that established the range. Military withdrawals are renewed every 15 years, he said.

"They've got to be doing a pretty good job or they would have to face the music," Brackett said.

"Though the ranchers have gone with the Air Force on the tour, he said, the Air Force hasn't walked the ground with the ranchers in Idaho.

"A land-use management plan and an environmental impact statement for that plan already have been done in the area the Air Force wants to expand, Brackett said.

The Air Force should try to fit into rural, rather than trying to tell other users to adjust to Air Force needs, he said. Otherwise the existing environmental impact statement and the area management plan will have been a waste of time and money.

Tom Reincker, chief of the state Fish and Game Department's wildlife bureau, preferred not to comment because he felt it was premature to determine how Avon Park and the Goldwater range relate to

Former Priest River man will face murder trial

SANDPOINT (AP) — David Robertson will face a murder trial in the Idaho state court for the slaying of Penny Christensen, the woman's bloody body was found along a snowy rural road north of Priest River.

But prosecutors dropped the charge less than a week before Robertson's trial was scheduled to begin because a judge suppressed much of the evidence against the man, including a confession to police that the judge said was coerced.

Robertson was arrested again last month in Las Vegas. New evidence against him — largely comments Robertson allegedly made to other inmates while he was held in the Bonner County Jail — was presented to the magistrate at Thursday's hearing.

One inmate, Robert Hendricks, testified that Robertson told her she stabbed Ms. Christensen to death, and that she asked him why he did it.

Free tax counseling available for seniors

TWIN FALLS — Free tax counseling for senior citizens and low-income people is available through April 15 at selected locations in the Magic and Wood River valleys, mostly at senior citizens centers.

Anyone needing help should call to make reservations and bring all the necessary information, such as 1099 forms, tax forms, last year's return and any other information showing income earned or other tax information.

For more information call the senior centers in area cities and towns or Blaine Linford, at 734-3809. The service is sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons and American Association of Retired Taxpreparers.

Idaho senator backs export enhancement portion of bill

WASHINGTON — U.S. Sen. Jim McClure likes at least one of President Bush's proposals for a five-year Farm Bill — extension of the Export Enhancement Program.

"If there's one provision of the 1985 Farm Bill that's made a difference, it's been the Export Enhancement Program," McClure said. "It's been the big stick behind our statements that we're serious about fair trade when it comes to free-trade negotiations."

The program provides agricultural exporters with commodities held by the U.S. government to help maintain foreign markets.

McClure was less certain about other aspects of Bush's Farm Bill, saying, "I'll have to take a close look at the details before I give it final approval."

4-car accident in Twin Falls leaves 5 people hurt Friday

TWIN FALLS — A four-car accident in Twin Falls injured five people Friday evening.

The accident occurred in the 1100 block of Addison Avenue East at 5:30 p.m., according to a police report. The driver of a westbound car, Bradley Andersen, 36, of Twin Falls, had a seizure and accelerated, hitting the car in front of him, which struck a third car, which struck a fourth car, Patrol Officer Dan Chatterton said.

Andersen and his wife, Laura, 35, were taken to the Twin Falls Clinic & Hospital. The driver of the second car, Iona J. Lehmann, 30, of Buhl, was treated and released from Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, a hospital spokeswoman said. Lehmann's passenger left the scene before police arrived, Chatterton said.

The driver of the third car, Rosi Webster, 41, of Twin Falls, and her passenger, Ashley Peerce, 10, sought treatment from their private physician, Chatterton said.

The driver of the fourth car, Marlys A. Vanhooser, 31, of Twin Falls, and her passenger and fiancé, Twin Falls police Capt. Jim Massey, refused treatment, Chatterton said. The two were headed for a Caribbean cruise to Saint John, where they are to be married, Chatterton said.

Police shooting review due for completion next week

TWIN FALLS — An independent review of a police shooting should be completed next week, Twin Falls police Capt. Bob Hudge said.

The department is reviewing an incident Monday in which Patrol Officer Dan Chatterton and a state police officer chased a man through town who had refused to accept a traffic citation. At a parking lot on Shoup Avenue West, the driver got out of the car carrying a gun. He refused to drop it, and Chatterton shot three times at the man and missed.

The man was then chased on foot and arrested. Nobody was injured.

Hodge said the shooting will be reviewed by a committee of three: an officer from the Idaho police training academy, an officer from Burley and a county prosecutor from outside Twin Falls. He expected the review to only take a few hours, and he hoped it would be conducted on Wednesday.

Kimberly, Jerome citizens reapointed to state boards

BOISE — Two local men have been reapointed to state boards.

Kent Taylor, a local attorney who lives in Kimberly, was reapointed for another three years to the Governor's Advisory Council, which advises the Education Department in allocating federal funds for educational programs.

Ike Muir, Jerome, was reapointed to the State Brand Board, which fixes the rate of tax levies on livestock and regulates the fund generated from those taxes.

Gary Hecox documents and takes samples of hazardous materials at the Murtaugh dump Thursday afternoon.

Contractors start Murtaugh dump investigation

MURTAUGH — An expanded investigation of the Murtaugh dump started this week has revealed more possible contamination than previously suspected, a federal official said. International Technology Inc. of Colorado, contracted by the Bureau of Land Management to investigate the site, has found more chemical containers than BLM officials originally believed were buried in trenches at the dump. The contractor has found several small pesticides and herbicides drums in addition to more than 2,000 empty 55-gallon drums that once contained the insecticide Dieldrin. Two wells also were drilled this week to test and monitor ground water near the old dump for chemical contamination. Cleanup is expected to exceed $300,000. Twin Falls county leases land for the Murtaugh dump from the Bureau of Land Management.

Locals consider bid for high school rodeo finals

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — A group of Twin Falls-area businessmen and civic leaders is considering making a bid for the National High School Finals Rodeo.

Kent Just, executive vice president of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce, said a 40-member host committee would be formed by the first of March to decide whether to bid to host the event for three years, starting in 1993, at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds in Filer.

"We've had an exploratory committee working on this for three or four months," Just said. "We even sent a three-man delegation to Oklahoma to get an idea of what it would involve. We're going to expand the committee, inviting people from Filer, Jerome and other areas to get involved in this."

The rodeo, which is held in July, would draw 1,200 competitors from throughout the United States and Canada and about 5,000 out-of-town spectators. Contracts to host the rodeo are awarded for a three-year period.

Just said bidding for the rodeo would require a guarantee of $300,000 per year, and he estimated it would take a total commitment of between $1 million and $1.2 million.

"The money is a big consideration," Just said. "That's a lot of money to come up with, but there are other considerations, too. They would need 800 motel rooms, we would have to set up an RV city in Filer for 500 units as well as tying up most of the other RV spaces in the immediate area and we'd have to find the space to stall 1,400 horses."

But Just said the economic returns would be substantial. "They claim $15 million, but I'm sure that includes a multiplier," he said. "It would actually be under $5 million a year, I would guess, but that's still a pretty fair return."

Just said one of his biggest concerns would be the timing. "I have a commitment for 200 rooms, and we have enough rooms in the area to accommodate them, but it would pretty much tie up every room during a time of year when there are already a lot of rooms being used."

Just said forming the host committee and deciding whether to make a bid would not be a chamber project, but would involve groups and individuals from throughout the Magic Valley as well as the Twin Falls County Fair Board.

"We've gotten a lot of reaction to the idea, ranging from 'Are you crazy?' to 'Let's go for it,'" he said.

The rodeo made one previous appearance at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds, in the summer of 1971. But it involved far fewer contestants and spectators than it does now.

"From what I understand, it went pretty well," Just said. "But you're comparing apples and oranges with what would be involved with hosting it now."

The host committee will have until July to decide whether or not to make a bid.

"I would guess they have a decision before that," Just said. "They should have a pretty good idea within a month or two of whether or not they want to make a bid."

Air Force bomb range tour leaves most VIPs feeling better about proposed expansion

By N. S. NOKKENTVED
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A tour of two Air Force bombing ranges answered some questions, raised others and left most feeling better about a proposed expansion of the Saylor Creek Bombing Range.

"Arizona isn't Idaho, and Florida damn sure isn't Idaho," Three Creek rancher Randall Brewer said after a tour of the Barry M. Goldwater Range in Arizona and the Avon Park Air Force Range in Florida. "I don't know that it answered all our questions, and maybe it raised some," he said.

About 45 Idahoans this week were treated to a VIP tour arranged by the Air Force to show how it operates at two other bombing ranges.

The group returned Friday with mixed feelings. Many were reassured by the Air Force's apparent success at managing natural resources, but were still apprehensive over the uncertainty of Air Force plans for the Owyhee desert.

"The Air Force still hasn't told us what they want," said Bill Ward of the Mountain Home Economic Development Committee.

During a demonstration of supersonic flight in Arizona at 10,000 and 20,000 feet above the ground, ranchers asked the Air Force to demonstrate such a flight at 5,000 feet.

But the Air Force was unable to comply. • See TOUR on Page A5

Norco rehires all but 15 workers laid off in December

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Norco Windows Inc. has rehired most of its workers laid off in December, a company spokesman said.

"We have all of them back except 15," said Howard Linskey, local plant manager. An increase in orders for the company's wood windows spurred the rehiring.

Seasonal increases in construction orders brought about the increased demand, Linskey said. "As we get closer to spring, certainly it's going to help more."

Norco's parent company, meanwhile, announced record sales but a 14 percent reduction in earnings for 1989.

Sales for TJ International Inc., a Boise-based manufacturer of specialty building materials, increased to $351 million from $315 million in 1988.

But net income decreased to $15.2 million from $17.8 million in 1988, partly due to higher wood costs, a lagging northeast new-housing market, and quality and machinery problems at one of the firm's plants, TJ International President Walt Minnick said.

Minnick also announced the retirement of Arthur L. Troutner, 68, co-founder of Trus Joist Corp. Trus Joist recently changed its name to TJ International.

Troutner was a TJ International vice president. He also spearheaded research leading to many of the firm's laminated-wood products.

INEL faces corrective actions to avoid risk to health, environment

—IDAHO FALLS (AP)—A federal inspection of the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory last June found emergency telephones and radars not working, alarms ignored by workers and waste unlabeled or unchecked.

After five days, Environmental Protection Agency inspectors found 28 hazardous waste violations at the INEL. While the U.S. Department of Energy site is not subject to EPA fines, the same violations at a private site could result in about $400,000 in fines.

An EPA "notice of noncompliance," sent to the Energy Department last week, describes hazardous waste violations at six ma—jor INEL facilities.

EPA and INEL officials have said the violations pose no immediate danger. But in a Jan. 29 letter to acting INEL Manager Phil Hamric, EPA Hazardous Waste Division Director Charles Pridley said corrective actions "are necessary to avoid risk to human health and the environment."

The EPA says it found violations at Argonne National Laboratory-West, the Central Facilities Area, the Idaho Chemical Processing Plant, the Radioactive Waste Management Complex, Test Area North and the Test Reactors Area.

At a Chem Plant storage bay, emergency communication equipment was found to be inoperable during the inspection. A telephone was disconnected and a check of an emergency radio "failed to receive a response," the EPA Notice said.

Elsewhere at the Chem Plant, workers ignored an alarm indicating that hazardous waste was in a containment area in violation of EPA regulations, the notice said.

Waste containers had not been tested at several INEL facilities, and workers did not know whether the contents were hazardous. At one fire training area, EPA inspectors found an abandoned waste drum.

The INEL designed some wastes for recycling without a feasible plan to do it at several facilities. No waste was being recycled in some of those areas, but was instead being kept in unpermitted storage areas, said Jeff Rodin, an environmental scientist in the EPA's Seattle regional office.

The federal agency's notice spells out 11 short-term steps the Energy Department must take to meet hazardous waste laws. For example, it must immediately set up a plan to ensure that hazardous wastes are not kept outside permitted storage areas for longer than 90 days.

The department must install all emergency equipment required for storage areas within 30 days. It must have a plan to analyze waste before it's treated, stored or disposed of within 45 days.

The INEL has declined to comment on specifics of the inspection. Site spokesman Nick Nichols called the inspection a legal matter between the INEL and the EPA. The INEL has said it has already taken care of some violations, and will meet with EPA officials as soon as possible to discuss the inspection.

Washington's Adams wants hearing on proposed railroad abandonment

SPOKANE (AP) — Federal regulators should schedule a hearing in Whitman County on Union Pacific's proposal to abandon 69 miles of railroad track on the Palouse, U.S. Sen. Brock Adams says.

Adams, D-Wash., is asking the Interstate Commerce Commission to review Union Pacific's plan to abandon its Tekoa and Pleasant Valley branch lines.

The dry pea and lentil industry is particularly concerned because 98 percent of the crop is located in the Palouse area, Adams said in a letter Thursday to ICC Chairman Howard Callahan.

Sen. and lentil growers contend the abandonment would raise their shipping costs by 10 percent, said Adams. Union Pacific contends the 100-year-old line is unprofitable and the impact would be much less.

"An oral hearing would allow witnesses from the dry pea and lentil industry, county officials and UP representatives to cross-examine the opposing party and allow all the information to be publicly examined," Adams said.

Union Pacific's initial petition to abandon the track was rejected by the ICC last summer because of filing mistakes. Union Pacific filed a new request in January.

Ed Trandahl, a Union Pacific spokesman, said the railroad anticipates losing more than $95,000 a year on the line, based on losses between October 1988 and September 1989.

An ICC spokesman said the commission would decide by early March whether to schedule a hearing on the abandonment, after it has reviewed all protests filed against the request.

Robertson was arrested again last month in Las Vegas. New evidence against him — largely comments Robertson allegedly made to other inmates while he was held in the Bonner County Jail — was presented to the magistrate at Thursday's hearing.

One inmate, Robert Hendricks, testified that Robertson told her she stabbed Mrs. Christensen to death, and that she asked him why he did it.

Bangerter says Utah creative in education

WASHINGTON (AP) — Utah Gov. Norm Bangerter says his state's education problems stem from a shortage of students and limited resources have forced creativity that others want to copy.

Bangerter spoke to an Allstate Insurance Public Issues Forum with several hundred government and business leaders about how Utah has tried to improve education.

"Utah probably has, as we all know, the toughest education formula in the country. And so new ideas, innovation and cooperation are probably more important to a state like Utah with limited resources and high student population," he said.

"So we've got people at the forefront of trying to deal with those (problems) ... because we will likely hit a bump in the road before others will," he said.

The specific program Bangerter explained was the Utah Partnership for Educational and Economic Development — which he said was the only statewide program in the nation designed to form a partnership between business, government and education to solve educational problems.

"The leaders from education, government and business realized that the success of each entity was linked to the success of the others," he said.

Bangerter said the groups came together in the Utah Partnership to form task forces to address the issues of training, basic education needs, research, resources and improving the state's image.

The Utah Partnership later submitted 59 specific recommendations to the governor, the State Board of Education and the Board of Regents.

Among them, he said, was a program for the state to spend $30 million to $50 million on new equipment such as computers for classrooms over the next four years to be matched by up to $100 million from private businesses.

Groups would make contributions according to their multiple agendas.

"The goal of this partnership is to bring all groups to one agenda," Bangerter said.

The state is also trying similar business-government partnerships on local levels.

"The doors of communication have been opened, the sharing of resources is evident and the future for Utah children and the work force is better than it has ever been before," he said.

Supreme Court overturns drug conviction

BOISE (AP) — Ruling that Gorgonio Carrasco was told but may not have understood the consequences of pleading guilty, the Idaho Supreme Court has overturned his conviction on two counts of delivering heroin and cocaine.

The unanimous decision issued Friday reverses rulings by 7th District Judge Grant Young and the Idaho Court of Appeals denying Carrasco's motion to withdraw his guilty plea.

The case was returned to Young for a trial.

Carrasco was a 29-year-old citizen of Durango, Mexico, when he was arrested with two other men in Madison County in 1986. He neither spoke nor understood English.

After pleading guilty to selling cocaine and black tar heroin to undercover agents, Carrasco was sentenced to up to 30 years in prison. That later was reduced to 20 years by the Court of Appeals.

On appeal, Carrasco argued that Young had not fully informed him of his rights or of the consequences of a guilty plea. The Supreme Court agreed, ruling that the record of the case "did not support a finding that Carrasco's guilty plea was entered voluntarily, knowingly and intelligently."

"A judge cannot assume from the fact that the defendant had been informed of the consequences of his plea that he understood the nature of the charges," Justice Larry Boyle wrote.

"Although he was provided with an interpreter, the language barrier, coupled with his lack of experience with our court system, may have made it difficult for Carrasco to grasp the importance of the information provided at his first arraignment."

said Bert Brackett, Idaho Cattle Association president. The Air Force has proposed a 5,000-foot floor for superionic flight at Saylor Creek.

Bob Salter, a Meridian conservationist, said the trip left him a little less apprehensive about the proposed expansion.

"I'm more confident that they can perhaps have some expanded programs still not put a crimp on some of the historical uses," Salter said.

Brewer said he was encouraged by the Air Force's efforts to work out differences with livestock owners who lease grazing land at the Florida range.

He was less impressed with Arizona's Goldwater range, where grazing was phased out about 40 years ago to protect native endangered species.

"I can see where the livestock operations might have said the Air Force take the land," Brewer said. "I've never seen anything so desolate."

Brackett said the trip increased his understanding of how the Air Force operates. Air Force management appeared to have improved conditions at both ranges, he said.

"He was not sure, however, just how the two ranges would relate to Idaho. Differences among the place are significant.

"But here we've got a pretty good situation," he said. "Anything they do, we'll be losing."

Lands within the Avon Park range are leased out to livestock owners, but live bombs or sonic booms are not allowed. For that part of their training pilots go to Goldwater or Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada, Brackett said.

Avon Park is used much more intensively than Saylor Creek. Though both are about the same size, Avon park manages to squeeze in 25,000 training periods compared with 6,000 training periods in the same amount of time at Saylor Creek.

To accommodate the heavier use, Avon has more target areas. Increasing target areas at Saylor Creek could be accomplished by changes in the withdrawal legislation that established the range. Military withdrawals are renewed every 15 years, he said.

"They've got to be doing a pretty good job if they would have to face the music," Brackett said.

"Though the ranchers have gone with the Air Force on the tour, he said, the Air Force hasn't walked the ground with the ranchers in Idaho."

A land-use management plan and an environmental impact statement for that plan already have been done in the area the Air Force wants to expand, Brackett said.

"The Air Force should try to fit into that plan, rather than trying to tell other users to adapt to Air Force needs, he said. Otherwise the existing environmental impact statement and the area management plan will have been a waste of time and money.

Tom Reincke, chief of the state Fish and Game Department's wildlife bureau, preferred not to comment because he felt it was premature to determine how Avon Park and the Goldwater range relate to Saylor Creek.

Former Priest River man will face murder trial

SANDPOINT (AP) — David Robertson will face trial in the January 1988 stabbing death of an elementary school teacher.

At the end of a six-hour preliminary hearing Thursday in which 13 witnesses testified, 1st District Magistrate Quentin E. Harden ruled there was enough evidence for Robertson to be tried for first-degree murder.

Robertson, 41, formerly of Priest River, was initially arrested and charged a day after the Jan. 20, 1988 killing of Penny Christensen, the woman's bloody body was found along a snowy rural road north of Priest River.

But prosecutors dropped the charge less than a week before Robertson's trial was scheduled to begin because a judge suppressed much of the evidence against the man, including a confession to police that the judge said was coerced.

awarded a contract to begin building the laboratory and township facility in Los Alamos. He moved to Santa Fe, N.M., and commuted to Los Alamos where the crews were working 10 hours a day, seven days a week.

Novello closer to Surgeon General post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Antonio C. Novello said Friday that he would have a voice for those who can't communicate for themselves if confirmed as Surgeon General.

Novello also said he would speak out against tobacco companies that target minorities.

"I have always felt that I am here to speak for people who have never been able to communicate for themselves," Novello told the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources.

"And, as a pediatrician, I have been the doctor of little people who have no voice in society."

Novello would be the first woman, Hispanic and Puerto Rican to serve in that position. The 45-year-old native of Fajardo would succeed the outspoken C. Everett Koop, who served for seven years.

Committee Chairman Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said he supported the confirmation, and was especially pleased at her answer when asked whether she would speak out against tobacco companies that target minorities as did Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan.

"Absolutely," she said. "I feel as irate as Dr. Sullivan when advertising is used to make a target for people who cannot take care of themselves."

U.S. troops show commitment to NATO

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senators told Bush administration officials Friday that deepening U.S. troop strength in Europe.

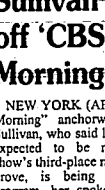

"The logic of all this is getting very hard to explain to taxpayers," Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., told William H. Taft IV, U.S. ambassador to NATO.

Taft told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that American forces in Europe's central zone will not be reduced below 195,000, even if the Soviets pull back every soldier they have in the region.

Even without a direct and immediate Soviet threat, he said, U.S. troops are needed as a visible sign of continued American commitment to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and European security.

Singer Shannon found shot in head

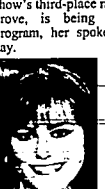

SANTA CLARITA, Calif. (AP) — Del Shannon, whose distinctive falsetto style on such rock classics as "Runaway" and "Keep Searchin'" pushed him to the top of the charts in the 1960s, was found dead in his home from an apparent self-inflicted gunshot wound, authorities said Friday. He was 35.

SHANNON

Shannon's wife, Bonnie, found her singer-songwriter husband's body about 11:25 p.m. Thursday with a bullet wound to the head, said Los Angeles County sheriff's Deputy Roger Hom.

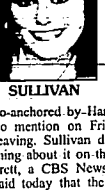

A .22-caliber rifle was found next to Shannon's body in the den, Hom said. He said the death was being investigated as a possible suicide, but the exact cause of death had not been established by coroner's officials.

U.S., Andean nations agree on anti-drug pact

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration has completed a drug-summit agreement with three South American countries.

It commits the United States to broad economic and military assistance to counteract the Latin nations' economic reliance on drugs, an official said Friday.

In addition to the $423-million anti-drug package President Bush is proposing for Peru, Bolivia and Colombia, the administration will pledge to help track illegal export of U.S.-produced firearms used by drug dealers and crack down on drug-related chemical exports, officials said.

The four-nation pact also calls for Bush to press other Western nations to provide economic aid to the three Andean countries, said a South American diplomat familiar with the document.

The presidents of the four countries are expected to sign the agreement when they meet at the Feb. 15 drug summit in Cartagena, Colombia.

"We've got agreement" on the final wording, said Michael Skol, deputy assistant secretary of state for South American affairs.

He described the agreement as "a very comprehensive document of cooperation on the drug issue," significant for its recognition of rights and responsibilities of producer and consumer countries "without finger-pointing."

The U.S. portion of the document closely tracks Bush's national drug strategy plan, Skol said. The agreement deals with the general categories of interdiction and military cooperation, economic alternatives to the drug trade and efforts to get other countries' aid in the anti-drug effort.

"There's a promise of asking for increased spending" by Congress, but no dollar amounts in the document, he said.

For the second year of his national anti-drug strategy, Bush last month proposed $423 million for fiscal 1991 in total drug-related spending for the Andean countries — in military, law enforcement and economic assistance.

Some $206 million of that is an increase in spending as part of a five-year $2.2 billion plan.

Skol said the communicate will discuss money-laundering, arms exports, and extradition as well as military assistance and economic aid — including such matters as balance of payment assistance and substitute crops to make up for destruction of lucrative fields of coca, which is used to make cocaine.

He described the weapons-export provisions only by saying that they discuss cooperation among countries on the process to "make it work better."

The drug-summit communicate does not spell out details of U.S. military assistance to the Andean countries, but the Latin has insisted it be restricted to equipment and training rather than direct U.S. military involvement in interdiction, said the South American diplomat.

Fifty-eight percent of Colombians but only 25 percent of Americans said the Colombian government is winning its war against the drug cartels.

Senators facing '90 vote build bulging war chests

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of the 37 senators up for re-election in November began the year with bulging campaign war chests, with nearly half having at least $1 million on hand and one a whopping $5 million.

The fund-raising kingpin was Republican Phil Gramm of Texas, who has raised more than $10 million since his 1984 election and began the year with $6.1 million, according to reports filed with the Federal Election Commission.

An analysis of those reports, released Friday by Common Cause, said political action committees have played a significant role in helping incumbents gain huge fund-raising edges over most potential challengers.

Indeed, 25 of the 31 senators facing re-election this year have accepted PAC donations that would exceed PAC contribution limits included in a campaign finance reform proposal being pushed by the public interest group.

The closest senator to Gramm in terms of fund-raising progress was New Jersey Democrat Bill Bradley, who is expected to coast to re-election and is often mentioned as a possible presidential contender in 1992.

Bradley told the FEC he had $4.1 million on hand as of Dec. 31.

The poorest of the 31 was Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum, R-Kan., who has raised just $90,860 since 1984 and began 1990 with $157,817 in campaign funds.

A breakdown of PAC donations provided in the Common Cause analysis supports the organization's claim that PACs are providing hefty assistance to most incumbents.

Of the 14 senators who began the year with more than $1 million, Democrat David Boren of Oklahoma was the only one who has not accepted any PAC donations. Of all

Drug policy director blasts District of Columbia officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — Drug policy director William J. Bennett on Friday accused District of Columbia officials of lackluster efforts in the war on drugs and a Bennett aide said the city let $2.4 million in federal funds slip away.

"I don't know why it's here when I say it," Bennett told the Senate Budget Committee. "Everybody in this town knows that this government is not fulfilling its responsibilities to its citizens."

The testimony came at a hearing in which Democrats on the Senate Budget Committee queried Bennett about efforts to combat drugs in the District of Columbia.

Chairman Jim Sasser, D-Tenn., sought to spotlight the rampant problem in this city, whose mayor, Marion Barry, is in a Florida alcohol and drug clinic after his arrest on a cocaine possession charge. An aide has said Barry is being treated primarily for alcoholism.

Sasser reminded Bennett that when he became drug policy director a year ago he promised to make Washington a test case in the fight against drugs that still can be bought on street corners "only blocks from this Capitol."

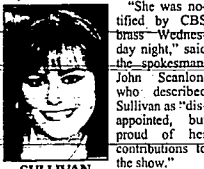

Bennett said action by federal officials "cannot take the place of local initiatives," federal initiatives cannot replace local initiatives.

"We're tired of being bogged for a problem that is not of our making," Bennett told the committee.

District police estimate that more than 60 percent of the record 438 murders recorded in the nation's capital last year were drug-related.

Sullivan taken off 'CBS This Morning' show

NEW YORK (AP) — "CBS This Morning" anchorwoman Kathleen Sullivan, who said last year that she expected to be replaced if her show's third-place ratings didn't improve, is being taken off the program, her spokesman said Friday.

SULLIVAN

"She was notified by CBS brass" Wednesday night, said the spokesman. John Scanlon, who described Sullivan as "disappointed, but proud of her contributions to the show."

The program, co-anchored by Harry Smith, made no mention on Friday that she is leaving. Sullivan did not say anything about it on the air. Terry Everett, a CBS News spokeswoman, said today that the network "can't confirm or deny" reports that she is leaving.

The anchorwoman, whose CBS contract expires in November, did her part of Friday's show from Atlanta. Everett said the anchorwoman had gone there on personal business. Scanlon said no decision has been made yet on when Sullivan will leave "CBS This Morning," but that she will help the transition process and "be looking forward to discussing other possibilities at CBS."

There have been reports that her successor will be Paula Zahn, anchorwoman of ABC's "World News This Morning." Sullivan co-anchored that program and news segments of ABC's "Good Morning America" before joining CBS News in 1987.

De Klerk warns of race war

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — President F.W. de Klerk accused his right-wing opponents Friday of stirring up black-white animosity that could plunge South Africa into a race war.

In Johannesburg, police beat blacks with batons and chased hundreds through downtown streets to break up a peaceful anti-apartheid demonstration in which they marked their first week of new freedoms.

And 22 senior anti-apartheid leaders met with Nelson Mandela but said the jailed African National Congress leader had no information on his release, which is widely expected this month.

De Klerk, responding to his critics in the pro-apartheid Conservative Party, said his National Party "talks renewal and courage, and they talk racism and aggression."

On Feb. 2, in a speech that launched a new era in South Africa, de Klerk lifted restrictions on more than 60 opposition groups, including Mandela's ANC "guerrilla" movement, and pledged to free Mandela soon.

plunge this country into a racial war," de Klerk told Parliament. But he added, "The government and I will not allow anyone or any party to set fire to this country."

Iranian leader: Rushdie must be killed

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Salame Rushdie must be killed, as the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ordered — for blaspheming Islam and the prophet Mohammed — in his novel "The Satanic Verses," Iran's new spiritual leader said Friday.

In Britain, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said the announcement by Ayatollah Ali Khamenei was "much to be regretted." A friend of the British novelist called it a rejection of "Rushdie's recent peace overtures to Moslems."

There was no immediate comment from Rushdie, who has been in hiding since Khomeini declared the novel blasphemous and decreed on Feb. 14, 1989, that faithful Moslems should kill its author. Several Iranian leaders put a price on the writer's head of $5.2 million. Khomeini died in June, but the death sentence was not lifted. On Friday, his successor as spiritual leader of Iran's Shiite Moslems said the religious decree "about the writer of the blasphemous book 'The Satanic Verses' is still valid and must be implemented."

prayers on the Moslem sabbath. Rushdie, who was born in India to Moslem parents, said this week he had considered appearing in public to deliver a lecture on censorship, but his police guards dissuaded him.

In a 7,000-word essay published in the British newspaper Independent on Sunday, and in an interview earlier this week with Newsweek magazine, Rushdie expressed regret for the pain the book had caused but said he stood by it.

He said he was pressing for a paperback edition and declared that charges of renegeing on his faith were invalid because he had not been a practicing Moslem for years.

South Korean parties' merger forms majority

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The governing party and two opposition groups completed a merger Friday that gives them a huge majority in Parliament, and radical students responded with protests, firebombs and rocks.

Kim Dae-jung, who leads the leftist Party for Peace and Democracy, the largest opposition faction, called the merger "a kind of coup d'etat that reversed the people's will."

The new Democratic Liberal Party, a conservative group, will have at least 210 of the 299 seats in the single-house National Assembly, well over the two-thirds needed to pass constitutional amendments. Kim Dae-jung's party and the two defecting opposition groups previously held a majority.

Buhl forces rubber match for girls' title in District 4 action

By JEFF HOSKISSON
Times-News writer

BUHL — Defense and turnovers dominated the fourth meeting of the Jerome Tigers and Buhl Indians here Friday night in the championship game of the District 4 Class A-2 girls' basketball tournament.

For the third time this season, it was the Indians who came out on top, 45-36, forcing a second title game tonight to decide which team advances to next week's state tournament in Nampa.

Tipoff time is 8:30 p.m. in the Buhl Middle School gym.

"It was a good game. Both teams played well," said Indians coach Joe Shepard. "We had some good hustle and finally got some shots to fall in the end."

In a game mired by fouls — 34 between the two teams — and turnovers, 28 combined, the Indians found an unlikely hero in junior Tanya Eckert.

"Eckert was forced to take charge of the Indians' offense and defense when Jamie Korte ran into foul trouble early."

"Tanya had the type of game she's capable of," said Shepard. "She helped put the pressure on up front defensively—and it seemed to take them out of their offense a little bit."

The biggest contribution from Eckert though—was on the offensive end. She was able to handle the Jerome full court press enabling the Indians to get things going on the offensive end.

Both teams opened the game a little tense, with each shooting less than 30 percent from the floor.

Jerome opened the scoring on a 10-foot jumper from Ginny Keys. Keys followed that up with one form 4 feet to give the Tigers a 4-1 lead.

Buhl then scored 5 unanswered points before the Tigers got 4 more making it 8-6. The Indians ended the quarter with Heather Hale hitting from the inside to tie the game at 8-8.

The offenses got going during the second quarter and started putting points on the board.

Jerome got the first break on a Liz Gilbert lay-in and when Keys tipped in a missed Tiger shot, Jerome extended its lead to three points, matching its biggest margin of the night, to 12-9.

The Indians came charging back. Led by Korte, the Indians outscored the Tigers 11-4 over the next four minutes to take a 40-26 lead.

Hagerman pushed that to as much as 20 points in the fourth quarter as the Hornets were never able to get their inside attack going.

The Pirates will play the winner of Friday's late semifinal game, between Plummer and Boise's Maranatha Christian Academy for the state title at 8:45 p.m. MDT tonight in the Lewiston High gym.

Oakley will play the Plummer-Marathath loser for third place at 1:30 p.m. MDT.

Hagerman coach Jerry Diehl said he felt the inside game was the difference this time around, noting "we made some good defensive adjustments that took away their inside attack while ours worked against

4th time is charm for Hagerman against Oakley

By LARRY HOVEY

LEWISTON — The Hagerman Pirates took advantage of their fourth chance Friday night, beating the Oakley Hornets 53-36, to advance to the championship game of the Idaho Class A-4 girls' basketball tournament.

The end came for Oakley, which had beaten Hagerman for both the Magic Valley Conference and District 4 Class A-4 Southside Subdistrict championships Friday.

It helped that we had never shot this well before too," he added with a smile.

The Pirates feasted on the turnaround jump shooting of Tanja Eichelberger and Julie Thompson, who had 14 and 11 points, respectively. But the sophomore Andrus was the hero as she scored 18 points and handled the ball almost flawlessly in the face of Oakley's trap press.

"We were able to spread the floor and then let Andrus take over," said Diehl. "There are not many girls in this state who can stay with her one on one."

Oakley coach Don Tompkins said the previous three games — including a 19-point win in the Southside Subdistrict title game 12 days ago — were probably his team's biggest disadvantage.

"The mental edge simply was not there, and it actually was over before it started," said Tompkins, whose ballclub had won 20 straight games against MVC opponents since losing to Shoshone late in the 1988-89 season. "They did everything they had done in the past and we just really didn't show up."

tyson just using Douglas to warm up for Holyfield

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
The Associated Press

TOKYO — To promoter Don King, Mike Tyson's most credible opponent is Evander Holyfield — and the most promotable is George Foreman.

To Tyson, however, an opponent is simply an obstacle to be removed and his next fight will be James "Buster" Douglas at the Tokyo Dome on Sunday.

The fight will be broadcast by HBO, beginning at 8:30 p.m. MDT tonight.

"I don't care who I fight," the unbeaten heavyweight champion said Thursday. "I don't care what fights they're talking about. I don't discriminate."

Tyson already is signed to fight the unbeaten Holyfield on June 18 at Atlantic City, N.J., and Douglas is given little chance to upset that schedule.

"No fight in the history of mankind is going to be bigger than Tyson-Holyfield," King said.

More than a few boxing observers, however, feel that a bigger fight would be one between the 23-year-old Tyson and the 41-year-old Foreman, a former champion who has won 20 straight fights since ending a 10-year retirement in 1987.

Declo moves into A-3 final; Pilots lose in semifinal bout

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

LEWISTON — The best news for Declo was that the game was going to be decided at the guard line, giving the Hornets the major advantage because of Thais Kidd.

The rest of the story also gave Declo control of the boards, so it was no problem for the unbeaten Hornets to climb past Butte County of Arco 51-32 here Friday and into the championship of the Idaho Class A-3 girls' basketball tournament.

But it won't be an all-Magic Valley matchup, Sugar-Salem saw to that by downing Glenns Ferry 52-51 in Friday's other semifinal.

That means that Declo and Sugar-Salem will settle the state championship at 7 p.m. MDT in the Lewiston High School gym, Glenns Ferry and Butte County will decide the third-place trophy at 3:30 p.m. MDT.

In reality, Butte is basically a one-girl offensive team; that being Sharlee Keller. So when Declo coach Lynn Payne stunk the kiddo on her, limiting Keller to 12 points, the game was quickly over.

The other thing that hurt Butte's hopes was early foul trouble that took Nikki Ginn out of the game early and made backboard control almost automatic.

Kidd ended the game with three three-point goals in the first two minutes and scored eight points in the first quarter when the Hornets were picking up a 14-4 lead. That mushroomed throughout the second quarter to 28-12 and there was really no contest at any part of the game.

Wood River beats Indians, 58-51; Tigers get top seed in district A-2

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Wood River rallied from a six-point deficit to beat Buhl in the regular-season District 4 Class A-2 boys' basketball championship.

That means the defending district champion Tigers, who will end the regular season against Buhl in Buhl next Friday, will get the top seed and first-round bye in the district tournament, which will begin later this month in the College of Southern Idaho gymnasium in Twin Falls.

Jerome 3-30 against District 4 competition: Buhl is 1-2 and Wood River 1-3.

The key play for Wood River came with 5 minutes, 2 seconds left when guard Phil Morry stole the ball, scored a field goal, was fouled and hit the ensuing free throw, giving the Wolverines a 3-point lead.

Baseball owners move ahead with lockout plans

By BEN WALKER
The Associated Press

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Baseball owners Friday reiterated their plan for a spring-training lockout, but seemed to soften their hard-line stance.

"There is no change in our strategy," Milwaukee owner Bud Selig said. "But there is going to be another meeting with the players on Monday, and this is going to be a day-by-day negotiation."

Camps are scheduled to open next Thursday.

Clubs have been told by the owners not to start spring training unless an agreement is reached with players on a new contract.

Selig, chairman of the owners' Player Relations Committee, tried to avoid the word "lockout."

When pressed, he said, "nothing has changed."

tended the two-hour meeting with owners, said he hoped something could be accomplished in next week's bargaining sessions.

"I'm eager to find a resolution to this problem. I am trying, in a way I hope is relevant, to be useful," Vincent said.

"I am convinced that the efforts will be very intensive to reach an agreement in the nearest possible time frame. Will that happen? I have no idea."

Donald Fehr, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, was about to enter a meeting with players in Phoenix when owners announced their decision.

"It's so unnecessary," said Fehr, who had met with 50 players in Los Angeles on Thursday night. "This is a lockout in an industry that just signed a billion-and-a-half dollar television contract. It's going to be very difficult to generate any kind of sympathy."

St. Louis Cardinals manager Whitey Herzog said Thursday he's heard that a lockout "will be lifted before March 15."

Chuck O'Connor, management's chief negotiator, said, "the clubs are not free to go to camp on Feb. 15. The status quo remained."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"Celebity is never more admired than by the negligent!" - Shakespeare

Years ago, when many traveled on commuter trains in the Northeast, the game of goulash was quite popular. To create fast-paced excitement, players did not shuffle the cards. The dealer distributed five cards to each player for two circuits and finally three to each player. Wild distributions were accompanied by wild bidding, but above all, everything was quick. Looking at all four hands, try your luck at this goulash hand posed by the late Victor Mollo on one of his bridge cruises.

On the lead of a diamond, the quick jack is to ruff in dummy, cash the club ace and then proceed to crossruff for all 13 tricks.

This plan gets scuttled early. West ruffs the club. The result is only 11 tricks (six trumps in dummy, four in hand and the spade ace). Do you see a way for South to win 12 tricks?

The solution is not to ruff the diamond lead in dummy, but to throw the ace of clubs. As the cards lie, South can now crossruff safely for the remaining tricks — he does not need dummy's ace of spades, but cashes his diamond king instead. What if East had held a trump and returned it after winning his diamond ace? South would still succeed. He would win six trumps in dummy and four in his hand, to go with dummy's spade ace and his diamond king.

Is Mollo's suggestion an ironclad play? No, but it's highly dramatic. Problems will ensue if East started with both outstanding trumps and a void in spades.
