Idaho Senate endorses holiday honoring King

By The Associated Press and The Times-News

BOISE - Moved by the perception that Idaho's stand on human rights is being tarnished, the state Senate has voted to join nearly every other state in the nation by designating the third Monday in January as Martin Luther King Jr. Holiday.

"Idaho has been a leader in human rights, and yet we lack in joining to celebrate it as a holiday," co-sponsor Lee Staker, R-Idaho Falls, said Friday as the chamber approved the new holiday on a 28-13 vote.

Sen. Denton Darrington, R-DeLoe, and Sen. Joyce McRoberts, R-Twin Falls, voted against the King holiday. Sen. Larry Anderson, R-Eden, Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, and Sen. Lynn Tominaga, R-Rupert, voted in favor of the proposal.

The bill now goes to the House, which should take final legislative action within the next five weeks.

Gov. Cecil Andrus called for the action in his State of the State address when lawmakers convened last month. Idaho, Montana, Arizona and New Hampshire are the only states without an official holiday recognizing the slain civil rights leader.

"If Martin Luther King's birthday is a national holiday, when is Idaho going to join the nation?" supporters again asked, quoting a young school girl who joined the lobbying effort for the bill.

Tilty maintained that while the state has taken a lead in legislative initiatives to guarantee and protect human rights for all minorities, the existence of the white-supremacist Aryan Nations Church in the Panhandle and the lack of a King holiday have undermined those efforts and created the wrong public perception.

"A nation and a state are judged by the symbols they honor," Sen. Michael Blackbird, D-Post Falls, said. "I'm frankly quite sick and tired of having Idaho being held as the symbolic home of the Aryan Nations, if a Martin Luther King Holiday will change that, I'm for it."

Joining the floor debate in favor of the bill, Anderson spoke of his adopted 11-year-old son, who is black. After the vote, Anderson said the world is changing and racism and sexism no longer have a place. Some critics argued that there should be a "Civil Rights Day" honoring all minorities rather than just one man, but Staker said King's name was synonymous with civil rights.

It would be the 10th state holiday, still leaving Idaho behind the national average in

House mulls altering levies on property

The Associated Press

BOISE - The House Revenue and Taxation Committee has begun considering two measures that would fundamentally change the way perennially unpopular property taxes are levied in Idaho.

And as might be expected, both are complicated and controversial.

One offers some relief to local taxpayers through a revenue sharing increase to cities and counties, and the other would cut the property tax cost for landfills and renters by shifting more to homeowners and others.

The committee voted Friday to recommend full House approval of a bill that would remove the state's "50-50" property tax exemption for owner-occupied homes, but only on any new tax levies approved by local voters starting next year.

The 50-50 rule exempts from property taxes the first 50 percent or $50,000 of assessed value of owner-occupied homes. But the exemption does not apply to property not occupied by the owner, including rental property, so those taxpayers pay a propor-

Quick agreement on aid to schools

The Associated Press

BOISE - Legislative budget writers Friday reached quick agreement on a $450.1 million package in state aid for public schools, beating the recommendation of Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus by a scant $20,000.

The Republican-backed plan on the high-profile budget issue also complied with Republican legislative leaders' wishes to hold down the state's continuing financial commitment to public schools.

The bill, which now goes to the House and Senate for final action, would increase state aid to schools about 14 percent over this year's allocation. It provides the same 9.4 percent pay raise for teachers Andrus had proposed and it effectively matches the money he earmarked for school improvements like reduced class sizes, new materials and equipment and development of innovative learning programs. But the major difference is that the committee's alternative designates $15 million of the school improvement money as one-time from the state's record cash surplus, meaning districts cannot be sure it will be provided in future budgets.

Nicaragua freezes out conservative observers

The Associated Press

MANAGUA, Nicaragua - The red carpet is out for sympathetic celebrities invited to observe the general election, but on Friday observers from the most conservative group still awaited visas from the leftist Sandinista government.

The Washington-based Center for Democracy, which acted for the U.S. Senate in observing the 1986 Philippine elections and the 1989 Panamanian elections, says it has become an outsider in the monitoring process. Insiders include people like actor Ed Asner, a longtime critic of U.S. policy in Central America, and British singer Billy Bragg, whose latest album is 'Workers Paradise.'

Asner, a former president of the Screen Actors Guild, Bragg, singer Jackson Browne and actor Robert Foxworth had just finished an hourlong meeting with Vice President Sergio Ramirez and were late for a meeting with the interior minister.

But Allen Weinstein, president of the Center for Democracy, could only gaze out his window across the street to the Foreign Ministry, which hasn't issued visas for 25 Americans on the center's team.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Mercedes Borge said the ministry didn't know anything about the visas and referred inquiries to the Supreme Electoral Council. The council spokesman was not available for comment, a secretary said by telephone.

Weinstein has issued a statement saying the "integrity of the entire international observer process" has been jeopardized by the visa problems and electoral council refusal to let his observers watch the votes being counted.

He had been hoping to field 100 observers but will end up with fewer than 30.

Sunday's election will still be one of the most closely watched in history, with one observer for about every 850 voters.

Census Bureau sees 25% Gem growth

By ERIC ANDERSON
 States News Service

WASHINGTON - Depending on how you figure it, Idaho's population will decline by roughly 3 percent over the next two decades or grow by one-quarter, according to new U.S. Census Bureau projections.

Idaho's population could range from 985,000 to more than 1.3 million in the year 2010, according to four extended projections released Friday by the bureau.

The bureau's predictions were extrapolated from past migration rates of U.S. citizens, and from the state. The population projections varied depending on how far back the bureau studied migration patterns. The bureau studied periods from three to 13 years.

All four projections suggest that migration by U.S. citizens into Idaho will remain nearly stagnant or decline over the next 20 years. Still, the state's high birth rate and low death rate could keep the population growing at a healthy rate far into the future, the study said.

Next to Utah, Idaho has the second highest birth rate in the nation, the Census Bureau report said. Both states have a high percentage of Mormon families, which are typically larger than the

Airlines' smoking lamp goes out Sunday

Knight-Ridder News Service

WASHINGTON - Smoking on commercial flights is about to go the way of the prop airplane in the United States. As of 12:01 a.m. Sunday, smoking will be banned on 99 percent of domestic flights. Those who fail to resist the temptation to light up could find the trip expensive; violators can be subject to fines up to $2,000.

The new ban supersedes an April, 1988, prohibition against smoking on all domestic flights of two hours or less. Northwest Airlines took advantage of the new rule to make all of its flights smokeless.

Passed by Congress in December, the new ban covers all domestic flights within the 48 continental states. Smoking still may be permitted on flights to Alaska and Hawaii that last longer than six hours, although many carriers are planning to keep those trips smoke-free as well. The bottom line is that only about two dozen of the 18,000 daily domestic flights will allow smoking. Smokers flying to Canada, Mexico or the

Tobacco-sports link under fire

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Health and Human Services Secretary Louis W. Sullivan Friday denounced the sponsorship of a professional women's tennis tournament by the tobacco giant, Philip Morris Co.

Continuing his campaign against the targeted marketing of cigarettes to women, Sullivan told a news conference that the Virginia Slims tennis tournament, under way at George Washington University here, was Caribbean also may be out of luck. Even though the rules do not cover those flights, many carriers voluntarily are banning cigarettes on them. On international flights, the "No Smoking" light will go on during legs between U.S. cities. And many foreign carriers already have their own bans; Canada will prohibit smoking on all overseas flights, beginning July 1.

The anti-smoking lobby has taken some pity on the airborne smokers, however.

The American Heart Association, the American Lung Association and the American Cancer Society suggested these "survival" tips for smokers who fly:

- Travel in the morning, when the urge to smoke is lowest.
- Carry cigarette substitutes, like gum, candy, fruit, popcorn, pumpkin or sunflower seeds or carrot sticks.
- Don't skip meals, but avoid spicy and sugary foods that boost cravings to smoke.
- Drink fluids, but not alcohol or drinks with caffeine.
- Chew on toothpicks, cinnamon sticks or straws.
- When the urge to smoke becomes intense, take a deep breath and exhale slowly.
- Keep your hands busy.

Abortion resolution splinters ABA

NEW YORK (AP) — A pro-choice resolution approved by the American Bar Association's governing body is dividing the lawyers group and testing its members' capacity for professional detachment.

Despite opposition from the ABA's president, president-elect, secretary and treasurer, its governing body last week approved a resolution opposing a woman's right to an abortion.

"Some of the very best people in the ABA are in agony over this resolution, and I'm sorry for that," said Sandy D'Albortre, a supporter of the measure who probably will become ABA president next year.

"Among the 'best people' she referred to are:

- Treasurer Joseph Nolan, who resigned from the Chicago-based ABA, saying he could not reconcile his Roman Catholic beliefs with a resolution "that advocates abortion on demand."

Secretary Tony Palermo, who said he will seek the resolution's repeal at the ABA convention in August on the grounds that abortion is a personal and political issue, not a legal one. If he fails, he may quit.

President-elect John Curtin, who says he will not sign his name to ABA friend-of-the-court briefs in abortion cases.

- Texas Bar Association President Darrell Jordan, who hints that his and other state groups might pull back from the ABA.
- Pennsylvania Bar Association President-elect John Carpenter, who said Friday he had resigned from the national group's governing body, the ABA House of Delegates.

The resolution also was criticized by Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, who contended that it raises questions about the ABA's ability to honestly render advisory opinions on the professional competence of judicial nominees.

The resolution says the ABA opposes legislation or other government action that interferes with the confidential relationship between a pregnant woman and her physician or with the decision to terminate the pregnancy at any time before the fetus is capable of independent life."

As a result, ABA groups will be able to file briefs in abortion cases and work against proposed state laws that would restrict abortion rights. But Richard Collins, an ABA spokesman, said abortion has not yet been added to the association's list of legislative priorities.

So far, the resolution's greatest impact has been on the ABA itself.

tionally larger share of levies on the total assessed value of their property.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. L. Ed. Brown, R-Pocatello, is aimed at easing what he contends is an unfair burden on landlords and, since their higher tax costs generally are passed on, to renters.

But while Brown calls it an "I'm for the people" measure, he acknowledged it probably will be unpopular with homeowners fearing the tax bill will skyrocket.

"The only way they could go up under this bill is if you approve it as a voter," he said, since levies already in place, or approved before the change takes effect, would not be applied to the full value of owner-occupied homes.

A number of representatives of rental organizations testified for the bill Friday, calling it a long-overdue adjustment and an equitable way to broaden the tax base. Mark Dunham, who represents 23 local boards of realtors in Idaho, said it would increase the availability of affordable housing by helping landlords keep rental rates low.

"It's going to bring some responsibility to the system," he said.

But Gene Price, representing the Senior Citizen Lobby, said Brown's bill is an unnecessary change in a tax system that already is well balanced.

"We do not oppose this bill because it raises taxes," he said. "We oppose it because it only raises the taxes of homeowners."

Even more contentious surrounds the other measure Revenue and Taxation considered Friday. Put together by the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho and the Association of Idaho Cities, the proposal would give cities and counties an economic shot in the arm with a higher portion of the revenue-sharing money the state distributes from sales tax receipts.

They currently are apportioned 7.75 percent of those receipts, or about $26 million during the current budget year. The money is split evenly between cities and counties, then distributed to members of each group according to a formula.

The measure, sponsored by Revenue and Taxation Chairman Steve Antone, R-Rupert, would increase the allocation to 10 percent. Based on revenue estimates for the spending year that begins July 1, that would amount to more than $34 million, or about a $7.7 million increase over this year.

However, Rep. Stan Hawkins, R-Ucon, effectively scuttled that plan by winning committee approval for introducing it but with a change boosting the amount of the extra money cities and counties would be required to pass along in the form of local property taxes.

Hawkins moved successfully to increase that figure from 10 percent to 30 percent. Bill Jarocki, executive director of the Association of Idaho Cities, said that would leave local governments with about $2.5 million less than they would gain from the revenue sharing increase.

"I wanted more property tax relief," Hawkins said afterward. "We have to oppose it now," said Jarocki. "It's our bill and we oppose it."

for schools a year ago, conceded the legislative support for the concept in this year's budget but limited his designation to just $9 million.

Another potential problem could be the fact that the spending proposal is premised on passage of a revision in the school aid distribution formula aimed at eliminating mounting complaints that the current formula is inequitable. That bill would shift several dozen of the state's 115 districts to only 4 percent increases no matter how much additional money is provided. That bill is awaiting action in the House.

But it was the higher level of one-time money that prompted the committee's Democratic minority to oppose it. The committee rejected the governor's plan on a straight party-line vote.

"The school districts need something permanent that they can depend on year to year," argued Assistant Senate Democratic Floor Leader Marguerite McLaughlin of Orofino.

But Republicans contended the difference in one-time money between the two versions was minuscule in a $450 million budget but was important in holding down future increases in public school aid in years when the state's financial position may not be so strong.

"A dollar is a dollar is a dollar, whether it is one-time money or ongoing," Assistant Senate Republican Floor Leader Jerry Twigg of Blackfoot. "The one-time money will be spent."

Alan Porter of the Idaho Department of Commerce said such a decline, the most pessimistic scenario of Idaho's future, is unlikely. "We'd have to have incredible

Democrats suggest change in tax law for upper-income earners

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic leaders said Friday that Congress may consider cutting income taxes on "upper-middle-class" families but raising taxes on the richest Americans.

However, House Speaker Thomas S. Foley, D-Wash., and Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, acknowledged there is little Congress can do to make the tax law more equitable unless President Bush goes along.

"There's not going to be a Democratic light-cavalry charge on that (tax) issue," Mitchell told reporters.

Foley said he thinks Congress will consider ways to remove a feature of the 1986 tax law that imposes a lower marginal tax rate on the wealthiest people than is paid by those with somewhat less income.

The marginal rate is the rate paid on the next dollar earned. For example, under the new law a person with a $150,000 income would pay $330 tax on a $1,000 pay raise while a person with $1 million income would pay $280 on the same raise.

Adjusting the tax system to get rid of that "quirk" does not constitute necessarily a raising of taxes," Foley said. That presumably means it would not violate Bush's pledge not to raise taxes.

"Within a revenue neutrality (that is, without affecting the federal deficit) you could perhaps provide a more equitable balance between tax rates paid by what I would call 'upper-middle-class-income taxpayers' and the very highest-income taxpayers," Foley said.

"I don't think the (top) bracket will be raised above 33 percent," he said.

Mitchell added: "For the first time in American history since the income tax was introduced, the marginal rate at which income is taxed declines as income rises above a certain level."

Winners in any such tax change would be single people with taxable incomes (after exemptions and deductions) between roughly $45,000 and $93,100, and couples between $75,000 and $155,300. Higher taxes would be paid by singles above $93,000 and couples above $155,000.

Foley and Mitchell emphasized their irritation that Bush and his predecessor, Ronald Reagan, have convinced the public that they will not accept higher taxes.

The best evidence of Reagan's political skill, Mitchell said, was that he "proposed, supported and signed into law 13 tax increases ... (yet) convinced everyone in America that he was against all of them."

"President Bush has got the words down," he said.

right, but it remains to be seen if he has the political skill to pull off the same result," Mitchell said.

Mitchell noted that Bush approved a $6 billion net tax increase last year, and in the budget he sent to Congress last month proposed tax increases totaling $15.7 billion, though no general increase in income taxes.

Bush wants "new taxes by anybody's definition," Foley said.

Mitchell said that despite a big tax cut in 1981, federal taxes are about the same as 10 years ago and the burden has shifted from high-income to middle-income people. "It is that which we believe should be corrected," he said.

Bush, Kohl to discuss 'where things going' on reunification of Germany

WASHINGTON (AP) — West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl joins President Bush at Camp David, Md., this weekend to discuss "where they think things are going" in the surging drive toward German reunification.

Both U.S. and German officials are promoting the meeting, away from the formalities of Washington, as symbolizing a personal relationship between Bush and Kohl, both proponents of reunification.

Kohl, just back from a visit to Moscow, was flying to Washington and on to the presidential retreat Saturday to go over the recent Ottawa agreement for reunification, face to face.

The two presidents will discuss such questions as when implementation meetings should begin among East and West Germany and the agreement's four other parties — the United States, France, the Soviet Union and Great Britain — said one official. They will also discuss the future of U.S. troops in Europe.

White House Press Secretary Martin Fitzwater said the two leaders would discuss "the full range of issues related to changes in Eastern Europe," including reunification, a U.S. proposal on reducing conventional forces in Europe, and the future of NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

"We don't anticipate any new agreements or announcements," Fitzwater said. He characterized the weekend, when Bush will be accompanied by Secretary of State James A. Baker III, National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft and Chief of Staff John Sununu, as "an opportunity for the two leaders to discuss the status of events, where they think things are going."

Fitzwater said West Germany's newly announced plans for a one-to-one currency exchange with East Germany probably will be one topic.

Kohl also will give Bush a first-hand account of his meeting with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, who is talking now of a slower approach to reunification.

The Camp David agenda could also include an issue that has caused consternation on the part of at least one of Germany's neighbors. Poland is worried that a reunified Germany might become aggressive about reclaiming territory that was part of Germany before the World War II victors carved new boundaries.

The Poles seek a public statement by German leaders and the four other countries to respect the postwar boundaries. On Wednesday, Polish Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki stepped up the pressure by calling on the two Germans to sign a treaty guaranteeing Poland's current borders.

Kohl, who has not made a public statement about the matter, is under pressure from West German conservatives who want to regain the territory.

The separate states of East Germany and West Germany recognized Poland's boundaries under the 1975 Helsinki Act on European Security and Cooperation signed by 35 nations.

Asked about the matter last month, Bush said, "We have learned nothing from Helsinki existing borders, and I have no problem reiterating that." But he said he had "no judgment" on whether there should be multilateral action to reaffirm the borders.

Coming on the heels of Kohl's Moscow trip and the German reunification agreement reached Feb. 13 in Ottawa, Kohl's visit with Bush highlights "a very important historical turning point for Germany and Europe in general," said a U.S. official, commenting only on condition of anonymity.

West German government spokesman Hans Klein said it showed "the close friendship and responsible partnership between Germans and Americans."

Cutbacks cause GM to lay off 4,200

Detroit (AP) — General Motors Corp. will shut down parts of three assembly plants Monday, laying off 4,200 people as part of the wave of cutbacks by major automakers attempting to weather a season of slow sales.

"There's an air of despondency," said Guy Messina, an autoworkers' union officer at the GM plant in Linden, N.J., where Chevrolet Corsica and Beretta cars are made. "It finally sunk in that these are their last days."

The layoffs have been planned for some time, but the workers' last days coincided with the gloomy announcement Friday that the Big Three automakers' sales slumped in mid-February.

GM, Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. said North American sales of cars and light trucks during the Feb. 11-20 period ran 15.8 percent behind last year's pace.

Officials fail to arrange peace meetings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Arens failed Friday to arrange an opening round of Mideast peace negotiations, but left the impression of eventual success.

"It was a very constructive and hopefully a very productive meeting," Baker said after talking to Arens for 90 minutes.

Arens agreed, saying "we had a good, constructive conversation." He then flew to New York, planning to go on to Jerusalem on Saturday at the end of the Jewish Sabbath. He will brief Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and the Israeli Cabinet on Sunday.

On Monday, Arens is due in Warsaw to oversee a resumption of diplomatic relations with Poland after a 23-year lapse.

Weather postpones shuttle mission

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Atlantis' commander got over his cold Friday but the weather remained bad, forcing NASA to postpone for the third time the launch of the shuttle on its secret military mission.

Shuttle managers slipped the launch 24 hours to Sunday morning after weather forecasters predicted high winds and thunderstorms in the hours leading up to a Saturday launch.

The forecasters said the cold front causing the problems would move out by Sunday and there was an 80 percent chance of favorable weather at the scheduled liftoff time of about 1 a.m.

Los Angeles Harbor shuts down

LOS ANGELES Times

LOS ANGELES — Los Angeles Harbor was shut down Friday after a leaking one-ton canister of highly flammable trifluoropropene gas on a cargo ship forced the U.S. Coast Guard to close the main channel to shipping.

Officials said that the threat of fire or explosion meant that parts of the surrounding communities might have to be evacuated if the Coast Guard decided to tow the ship past them out of the harbor to unload the vessel at sea. Los Angeles Fire Department officials conferred with the Coast Guard during the day to determine the best way to proceed.

There was no estimate on when the harbor would be reopened.

Washington castration measure fails

Knight-Ridder/News Service

OLYMPIA, Wash. — While a bill cracking down on sex offenders is at last about to clear the Washington state Legislature, a measure allowing castration of those offenders has died in a House committee.

A state Senate-approved castration bill expired quietly when House Judiciary Committee Chairman Martin Applewick refused to give it a hearing during the last scheduled committee hearing Thursday.

Applewick, a Seattle Democrat, also succeeded in getting a proposed University of Washington study on the effectiveness of castration removed from the sex-offenders bill.

"Reason prevailed," said Applewick of the bill that has won a place for lawmakers in international headlines and comedians' monologues.

11 servicemen die in training mission

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two U.S. Army helicopters crashed during a training mission in Panama, killing all 11 servicemen aboard, U.S. military authorities said Friday.

The U.S. Southern Command in Panama said the aircraft encountered thunderstorms Wednesday night while flying on the Atlantic side of the isthmus, but gave no other details about the circumstances of the accidents.

U.S. search teams found an Army OH-58 observation helicopter Thursday morning in heavy jungle terrain near Punta Diego, about 50 miles southwest of Colon.

The other, a UH-1H Huey helicopter, was discovered about four miles away Friday afternoon. All four crew members and five passengers in the Huey were dead, the Southern Command statement said. Names were withheld until relatives had been notified.

Both occupants of the observation helicopter also were killed. They were identified as Warrant Officer James W. Carl, the pilot, and Capt. Richard D. Tyndall. Carl was assigned to the 228th Aviation Regiment at Fort Kobbe in Panama. Tyndall was from the 7th Infantry Division at Fort Ord, Calif. Both helicopters were based at Fort Kobbe, adjacent to Howard Air Base.

Bush names Arthur Fletcher to head Civil Rights Commission

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush selected Arthur A. Fletcher to be chairman of the Civil Rights Commission on Friday and Bush's spokesman said his first assignment would be to reinvigorate the embattled panel.

"We think they can do a better job," said White House Press Secretary Martin Fitzwater.

Fletcher, 65, is a Republican moderate who runs a consulting business in Washington. An early black supporter of Bush's, he has served in three previous GOP administrations.

Bush sought to give him the post nearly a year ago, but the chairman of the commission, William B. Allen, at the time declined to resign.

The commission has been under mounting criticism from civil rights groups and from Congress, stemming from a series of positions it adopted during the Reagan administration, including opposition to affirmative action programs.

Bonn official says E. Germany may choose immediate union

BONN, West Germany (AP) — East Germany may be too divided after the March elections to agree on a government and could opt for immediate union with West Germany, a Cabinet minister said in a newspaper report published Friday.

Die Welt of Bonn said Interior Minister Wolfgang Schaubele expressed his theory to U.S. officials. Ministry officials confirmed the account.

Last Germany's economic crisis has accelerated in recent weeks, forcing the government to end food subsidies and prompting speculation it is near bankruptcy.

German reunification, and the economic and political questions it poses, are expected to dominate discussions this weekend when Chancellor Helmut Kohl of West Germany meets with President Bush at Camp David, Md.

According to Die Welt, Schaubele told Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Brent Scowcroft, the national security adviser, that East Germany's first free elections may not produce a leadership that could agree on an economic rescue plan.

"It is conceivable that there will be no more (East German) government after March 18," he said.

Several recent polls, however, have indicated East Germany's Social Democrats will win more than 50 percent of the vote.

Communist candidates are expected to fare badly because of the once-omnipotent party's role in creating the economic crisis. Premier Hans Modrow, the most trusted Communist politician, has not decided whether to lead the party ticket.

Pro-democracy opposition parties are numerous, poorly organized and inexperienced, which has led to a near-takeover by sister parties in West Germany.

The 400-member parliament to be elected March 18 vote is supposed to choose a government to succeed Modrow's transitional administration. If the seats are spread too broadly among the many parties, members may be unable to agree on a leadership that could work with Bonn on an economic recovery plan.

Schaubele said he considered an inconclusive vote the "more probable" outcome of the elections, Die Welt said.

Interior Ministry spokesman Willi Hausmann, who confirmed the account, said Schaubele outlined several possible unification plans during a visit to Washington.

Die Welt said he met with Baker and Scowcroft to discuss anti-drug policies, but the U.S. officials were more interested in discussing German reunification.

Soviets step up security amid fears of violence

MOSCOW (AP) — The Interior Ministry said Friday it was placing one-third more police on duty nationwide to keep order amid widespread fears of violence at weekend street protests, but organizers rejected an appeal to call off their "peaceful February revolution."

Teachers warned children to stay off Moscow streets on Sunday, when the rallies are scheduled, and doctors who normally have the day off were told to report to work, capital residents said.

The official news agency Tass said meetings were held at Moscow businesses Friday to emphasize the need to prevent destabilization.

Rumors of violence swept the country in advance of Sunday's planned pro-democracy rallies and counter-demonstrations but spokesmen for the Interior Ministry and KGB security police said they had no reason to believe them. Some groups, however, responded by canceling rallies.

The demonstrations grew out of the success of a protest Feb. 4, when tens of thousands paraded through Moscow demanding the Communist Party give up its grip on power.

Three days later, led by Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the party Central Committee voted to renounce its constitutional monopoly on power, paving the way for a multiparty democracy.

Organizers Yuri Afanasyev and Gavril Popov, both parliamentarians, said in leaflets distributed Friday on Moscow's Pushkin Square that Sunday's rallies for "radical democratic changes" are in line with public protests that have led to ousters of more than a dozen local party chiefs nationwide.

Arianespace reassures customers

EVERY, France (AP) — The president of Arianespace said Friday a panel of experts will be named to determine why an Ariane rocket exploded shortly after takeoff and to reassure customers of its reliability.

Fredenc D'Allest, head of the European consortium, said he hoped the failure Thursday of the unmanned Ariane 44-Lor would not destroy customer confidence in Arianespace, which holds more than half the world's commercial satellite business.

While the investigation is under way, all Ariane launches will be suspended, D'Allest told a news conference at the space center in Kourou, French Guiana. The news conference was also relayed to reporters at Arianespace headquarters in Evry, near Paris.

Twelve to 15 experts will be named to investigate the incident and issue a report within two months giving "all the details of our findings so they (clients) can ... be comfortable that we can resume flights safely," D'Allest said.

"If the cause is clear and precise and the problem corrected, we should rapidly regain the confidence of our clients," he said.

The rocket was carrying two telecommunications satellites for the Japan Broadcasting Corp. and Space Communications Corp. when it exploded over the Atlantic Ocean about 7 1/2 miles from the launch pad at Kourou.

The investigative panel, to be appointed early next week, must determine why one of four strap-on boosters that power the rocket experienced a sudden drop in pressure just 6.2 seconds after the end of the countdown.

Peace Corps program set up in Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The first Peace Corps program in Poland was established Friday as U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger continued talks with Polish officials on American aid for economic reforms.

Eagleburger, appointed by President Bush to coordinate aid to Poland, also heard Poland's demands that its western border be assured before German reunification.

The two-day trip that began Thursday was described as a "working visit" by U.S. officials, with a series of closed-door meetings between Polish finance officials and the U.S. delegation, which included Deputy Treasury Secretary John Robson.

Under the Peace Corps program, about 60 volunteers will begin arriving this summer, mainly English teachers to train Polish instructors.

Earlier this month, the Polish Education Ministry announced that Russian study would no longer be required in schools. But officials said the introduction of Western languages to the schools would be slowed by the lack of qualified teachers.

The Peace Corps has launched similar language training in Hungary, but U.S. officials said the Polish effort may be expanded to include agricultural assistance and other Peace Corps programs usually offered to developing nations.

Eagleburger also met with President Wojciech Jaruzelski and leaders of the Roman Catholic church, which is distributing some U.S. aid.

Economic help for Poland, especially to lighten the weight of Poland's $40 billion debt to the West, was to be the key agenda topic.

Defense chief confirms Asian troop cuts; Soviets not impressed

TOKYO (AP) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney announced Friday the Pentagon wants to bring about 12,000 U.S. troops home from Asia, but a ranking Soviet official said the plan was nothing to "brag about."

Cheney, ending a two-week visit in the Pacific Rim with a major policy address before the National Press Club, said that during his tour he discussed a range of cuts "on the order of 10 percent, scattered about the region."

He said the first phase could take three years.

Gennady Gerasimov, head of the Soviet Foreign Ministry's Information Department, criticized the proposed reductions as "small-scale" when compared to Soviet efforts.

"The plan is not much to brag about," said the Soviet official, who is in Tokyo to wrap up an Asian tour of his own. "It was the natural result of fiscal policies and modernization."

Both superpower officials arrived in Tokyo from Manila. Japanese Foreign Ministry spokesman Taizo Watanabe said Gerasimov is a guest of Kyodo News Service, not the government, and the "simultaneous visits are simply accidental."

Final decisions on the troop reductions will be made after further discussions with the military commanders and Congress, the U.S. secretary said. Congress has pressed Cheney to slash his defense budget and reassess the reasons for keeping 120,000 U.S. troops in Asia.

Cheney, however, said it would be a mistake to reduce the U.S. presence in Asia just because of eased tensions in Europe, and America must "look at the region on its own terms."

He also said that despite calls from some lawmakers for 20 percent to 30 percent cuts, he believes Congress will maintain "a major U.S. presence in the Pacific."

"In the future, if there are solid indications that regional stability will not be threatened, we may — in consultation with our allies — make other adjustments, that would be appropriate," he said.

However, Cheney said a total U.S. pullout would open "a vacuum" in the region, leading to destabilizing arms races, regional tensions, "and possibly conflict."

Cheney, who toured South Korea, the Philippines and Japan, said the Soviet Union hasn't acted to reduce tensions in Asia as it has in Europe, and called on Moscow to help calm the region's flashpoints.

But Gerasimov, speaking to reporters at the National Press Club just hours after Cheney, argued that Moscow has already made substantial reductions, including the mothballing of 50 ships in its Pacific Fleet and the recent withdrawal of aircraft from Cam Ranh Bay in Vietnam.

"Our presence in Cam Ranh Bay will be replaced by mosquitoes and grasshoppers," he said.

"Such large reductions as we have carried out were the product of new thinking ... and cannot be explained by modernization" as American military officials have charged, he said.

Ex-Salvadoran president dies of cancer at 64

SAN SALVADOR — El Salvador (AP) — Former President Jose Napoleon Duarte, whose quest for democracy in an oligarchic society was thwarted by a disastrous civil war, died Friday of cancer. He was 64.

Duarte died at his home in the capital's fashionable San Benito neighborhood, said Dr. Jose Luis Saca.

Doctors at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington diagnosed the cancer in May 1988 and removed 60 percent of Duarte's stomach, but it had spread to his liver. They gave him from six to 18 months to live.

Duarte was president of El Salvador from 1984 to June 1989, when he was succeeded by Alfredo Cristiani of the rightist Arena party, supported by the oligarchy Duarte had fought for so long.

Nearly a generation ago, Duarte was arrested, beaten and exiled for his fidelity to democracy. He called his inauguration in 1984 "a light in the long night of horror," and likened himself to Moses delivering his people.

His role in replacing an authoritarian, semifeudal system with the beginnings of democracy was critical, but he finished his term, and his life, burdened by failure, compromise, frustration and dashed hopes.

The war with the leftist Farabundo Martí Liberation Front is 10 years old. Poverty remains endemic in this small Central American nation of 5 million people, whose economy depends on U.S. aid.

A high-ranking U.S. diplomat who served in El Salvador during most of Duarte's term said of him: "He didn't work miracles, but he must be credited with instituting the democratic system itself. His great legacy is the transition. The rest pales by comparison."

Opponents criticized Duarte's bombast and messianic attitude; supporters praised his idealism and fighting spirit. Both agree his role in El Salvador was historic.

"One must acknowledge President Duarte's democratic vocation," Cristiani said just before taking office June 1. "He has, with his aptitude and positions, promoted the advance of democracy."

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., a chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee before Republicans lost control of the Senate in 1987, called Duarte "a good friend" and added: "He epitomized democracy and the growth of democracy in this hemisphere. So we salute him, and are very saddened by his death."

Duarte was born in San Salvador Nov. 23, 1925, the second of three sons. His father was a tailor and his father a dressmaker.

He graduated from the University of Notre Dame in 1948 with a degree in civil engineering, married childhood friend Ines Duran, and worked in her family's construction business. They had six children.

The barrel-chested engineer joined half-a-dozen other Roman-Catholic professionals in 1960 to found the Christian Democratic Party. Most were young liberals hoping to put the church's social doctrine into practice through government.

Kenyan foreign minister's funeral ends in violence

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The funeral of the slain foreign minister ended in violence Friday as riot police beat back a huge crowd of wailing, stone-throwing mourners with nightsticks and tear gas.

Scores of people were injured by rocks and sticks, and reporters said they saw police club and arrest dozens of others before the spontaneous demonstration of grief and rage was brought under control.

Cabinet ministers, leading politicians and foreign envoys were caught up in the melee, which erupted moments after President Daniel arap Moi left the grounds of the Valley Road Pentecostal Church in his official limousine.

No deaths were reported.

AROUND THE VALLEY

Burley teen, sheriff revive elderly man

BURLEY - A teenager and sheriff's deputy kept an elderly man alive Thursday evening until an ambulance could get him to the hospital, according to Cassia County Undersheriff Terry Bingham.

Dispatcher George Warrell received a 911 call at 6:50 p.m. from Luke Mays, 17, Heyburn, who said his grandfather had collapsed and was turning purple. Bingham reports. When Warrell asked Mays said his grandfather, Earl Rose, wasn't breathing. Mays said he couldn't find a pulse.

Warrell instructed Mays on clearing Rose's airway and giving mouth-to-mouth. Bingham reports. Warrell and Mays continued for four minutes until Heyburn police and an ambulance arrived.

Rose started breathing again, and was taken to Cassia Memorial Hospital, where he was in stable condition in intensive care on Friday, Bingham reports.

Wyoming youths steal pickup from Burley house

BURLEY - Two Wyoming youths were on the run Friday in a pickup stolen from a Burley residence, Cassia County Sheriff's Sgt. Alan Smith said.

The pickup, stolen from 1038 Yale Ave., is the sixth the boys have stolen since leaving Gillette, Wyo., Smith said. The boys first went to Montana, Smith said.

Thursday they were in a high-speed chase with Montana officers, until they crashed into a fence and fled on foot, Smith said.

They eluded officers, who had dogs, and stole two cars before heading into Idaho, Smith said.

Friday morning, deputies found an abandoned car, stolen from Mogana, in the 300 block of West Fifth Street at about the same time the pickup was reported stolen from Yale Avenue, Smith said.

2 hospitalized following collision south of Kimberly

KIMBERLY - Two people were hospitalized Friday after two cars collided southeast of Kimberly.

Timothy A. Cummins, 38, Kimberly, was in stable condition and Sara Summers, 9, Hansen, was in serious condition at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Friday afternoon, a nursing supervisor said.

Cummins was driving north on 3600 East at 7:43 a.m., Twin Falls sheriff's Deputy Dave Cline said. Debbie Summers, 36, Hansen, was headed west on 3500 North, Cline said, when the front end of her vehicle struck Cummins' passenger side.

Summers, as well as her two sons Michael, 5, and Joshua, 7, were also transported to Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, Cline said.

Summers will be cited today for failing to stop, Cline said.

Only Cummins wore a seat belt, Cline said.

Twin Falls man renamed to transportation board

BOISE - The Senate on Friday confirmed the reappointment of Twin Falls resident Harry Merrick to the Idaho Aeronautics and Public Transportation Board.

Merrick was confirmed by a unanimous vote. His term ends Jan. 31, 1993.

Pocatello woman stable after crash near Hollister

HOLLISTER - A Pocatello woman was hospitalized Friday following a car accident about eight miles north of Hollister.

Evelyn Prescott, 63, was in stable condition at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center on Friday afternoon, a spokeswoman said.

The accident occurred about 11:44 a.m., an Idaho State Police dispatcher said. Prescott was riding south on U.S. Highway 93 in a vehicle driven by Dale Kidney, 57, also of Pocatello, she said.

The car collided with a vehicle driven by Lori Hurley, 23, Filer, who was driving west on 3400 North, the dispatcher said.

Kidney's car rolled once off the road, the dispatcher said.

Hurley will be cited for no insurance, failing to yield at a stop sign and failing to use child restraint, the dispatcher said. Hurley had two children in the car; no one in the Hurley car wore seat belts and no one was injured, the dispatcher said.

Kidney and Prescott both wore seat belts, the dispatcher said.

Tominaga gets blame for water quality fund cut

By MICHELLE COLE
Times-News writer

Idaho Legislature 1990

BOISE - Environmentalists and Democratic lawmakers are boiling mad over Republican budget writers' vote Friday to chop the governor's requested funding for the Bureau of Water Quality by more than half.

And they're blaming Republican Sen. Lyan Tominaga of Rupert.

After studying the state's water programs and the various agencies who are charged with monitoring water quality, it was Tominaga who pushed through a budget for the Bureau of Water Quality that is more than $900,000 less than the governor recommended.

Some called Tominaga's proposal "emasculating." Others accused him of taking a "butcher knife" to the state's water programs.

Tominaga's budget recommendation allocates $755,700 in state money to monitor and improve "non-point source" pollution, groundwater quality, nutrient management for lakes and safe drinking water programs.

Budget writers went along with Tominaga's suggestion that the bureau's "source point" pollution program not be funded.

"It's barely a damp spot where there needs to be a whole damn lake," said Sen. Ron Beitspacher, D-Grangeville, who spluttered and protested during the Joint Finance and Appropriations Committee deliberations.

Citing groundwater problems in Minidoka County, Beitspacher hammered Tominaga for not protecting his own backyard.

"I'm deeply disturbed," said Will Whelan, policy analyst for the Idaho Conservation League, following the vote. "We feel that JFAC's decision in a good budget year is irresponsible."

Whelan contends that the new budget could mean Magic Valley's Billingsley Creek, portions of the Snake River, the Big Wood River and the Little Wood River won't receive the monitoring local residents have demanded.

"I'm concerned as anybody about groundwater," said Tominaga, who was once a lobbyist and analyst for the Idaho Water Users Association. "But I'm not afraid to take a stand for something I really believe in."

The Bureau of Water Quality is responsible for administering water quality laws passed by the Legislature in the past two years.

Tominaga contends that the various state agencies charged with monitoring and improving water quality haven't coordinated their efforts.

He wants a team of University of Idaho policy analysts to take a look at the overall plan make some recommendations for next year.

"There were a lot of numbers we didn't have a good handle on," he said.

Gov. Cecil Andrus had requested $1.6 million in his 1991 budget for the Bureau of Water Quality, far less than the agency's requested $3,423,200.

But a motion in JFAC to adopt the governor's budget recommendation failed. Tominaga's $755,700 recommendation passed by 14-10.

Democrats are flaying Tominaga for his proposal.

And the Republican caucus chairman admitted there are some with reservations even within his own party.

Senate Resources and Environment Committee Chairman Sen. Laird Noh, R-

Kimberly, said the agencies and the government officer "dropped the ball" in convincing lawmakers of the Bureau of Water Quality's needs.

"Certainly there is adequate revenue to move forward with all water-quality programs," Noh said, although there may not be enough money to move ahead as fast as some would like.

Since the groundwater monitoring program is still in its early stages, Noh said it should be adequately funded under Tominaga's plan.

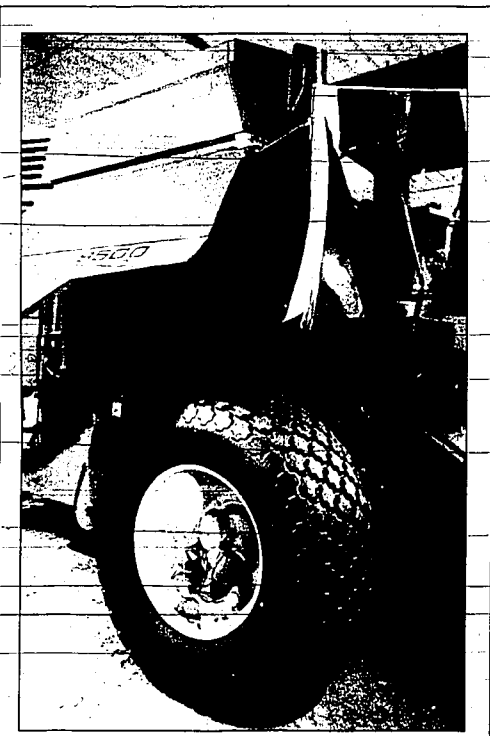

But he is concerned that the state's anti-degradation program might have benefited from further funding.

And, as someone who has advocated water-quality legislation for several years, Noh said he is disappointed that the scaled-down budget means that the Water Quality Bureau won't be able to afford a specialist to work with Magic Valley trout and dairy industries on point source pollution.

Beitspacher and Whelan said they'll try to marshal the forces to amend the budget once it hits the floor. But they hold out little hope.

Noh said he'll vote for the budget Tominaga outlined.

He predicts the budget will pass - by a narrow margin.

Committee exonerates officer who shot at man

By ANITA DENNIS
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - An outside review committee exonerated Patrol Officer Dan Chatterton, acted properly earlier this month when he fired three times at a man who had leveled a rifle at him.

"They found he did everything he could do for the situation he was in," Capt. Bob Hodge said.

In a written report to be submitted next week, however, the committee will recommend that Twin Falls' police department improve its record-keeping for training, Hodge said.

The night of Feb. 5, Chatterton and an Idaho State Police officer chased a driver who refused to accept traffic citations. After a cross-town chase, the driver pulled into a parking lot on Shoup Avenue West, got out of his car and aimed a rifle at the officers.

From 40 yards away, Chatterton shot three bullets from his 9mm semiautomatic Glock sidearm and missed.

The man was arrested shortly after he fled on foot.

The police department asked Cassia County Undersheriff Terry Bingham, Buhl Police Chief Les Cochran and Buhl Prosecuting Attorney John Melanson to review the incident.

Although officers nationwide fire an average of only twice during their careers, guns are drawn on many occasions, Public Safety Director Paul Du Fresno said.

Routine training is essential so that in real life, concentration and accuracy won't be distracted by adrenaline, stress and other adverse conditions.

Before the department switched to semiautomatic guns last spring, training took place about every six months, Du Fresno said.

Now, everyone except secretaries and dispatchers must pass a handgun marksmanship test four times a year, he said.

"No one leaves the range without extra coaching," Hodge said.

who don't pass, but so far it hasn't been necessary, Du Fresno said.

Passing requires 80 percent accuracy, which is 10 percent higher than nationwide standards, Du Fresno said.

This week's review committee found no problems with the department's training, Hodge said. It just wants the record-keeping updated, he said.

Once or twice a year, Twin Falls police take a version of the standard state Peace Officers Standards and Training test.

The test involves shooting six rounds from 25 yards in 30 seconds; 12 rounds from 15 yards in 30 seconds; six rounds from seven yards in 15 seconds; and six rounds from three yards in 10 seconds.

Du Fresno said Twin Falls officers have an advantage because they shoot semiautomatics in a test designed for revolver.

Once a year, officers qualify at night, when they are three times as likely to fire on the job, Du Fresno said.

Firearms instructors Cpl. Brick Wells, Cpl. Jim Munn Jr. and Patrol Officer Steve Ryan design a four course, which could involve moving, barricades or decision-shooting.

Officers are also routinely tested with shotguns and any personal, off-duty weapons they carry, Du Fresno said.

Quite a few officers needed extra coaching to get used to the Glock, Du Fresno said, but once they adjusted, "we saw a much better success with the average shooter," he said.

For night shooting, the Glock is equipped with a glow-in-the-dark site picture, Du Fresno said.

Canyon View again accepting custody patients

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Canyon View Hospital is once again accepting patients for 24-hour protective custody.

"As far as I'm concerned, the issues I was worried about were dealt with," Canyon View Administrator Ken Deibert said Friday.

Canyon View, the area's only psychiatric hospital, recently had told Twin Falls officials it would no longer accept patients for 24-hour protective custody.

Deibert said he was concerned about two issues. A delay seemed to be developing in the handling of involuntary commitments, and there seemed to be confusion over how the hospital would be paid.

"Every time there's a concern that gets raised, we've found ways to resolve it," Deibert said. "I think all parties should be complimented for it."

Police can take a person into 24-hour custody if they believe the person would be a threat to himself or others.

But a court hearing and an evaluation by two doctors is required. For a longer, involuntary commitment.

"We just went through it again to make sure everybody was clear on how it was to be happening," Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter said.

Twin Falls' police and fire chief, Paul Du Fresno, said Canyon View would normally be paid through the county's indigent fund.

In some cases, the city may have to pay for patients the police detain but who aren't committed by a court.

"Canyon View was quite concerned about the payment issue, and there is in place a system to do it," Du Fresno said.

Jerome school officials cite need for new building

By H.R. WEIXEL
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - Current and expected future population growth in town will require a new elementary school, Superintendent Richard Kugler told a small group of local residents this week.

Just 35 people attended an informational meeting Wednesday for residents of Jerome, Gooding and Lincoln counties on the proposed construction of a new elementary school in the northeast section of town.

School board members and representatives from First Security Bank and Leatham and Krohn Architects, Boise, talked about the plans and answered questions.

In addition to the lack of space,

Washington Primary School is old and does not meet some state codes, Kugler said. Also, playgrounds were inadequate for use by elementary school children, he said.

"We want our educational system to be one of the best," Board Vice Chairman Ben Neff said. "When you look at our students' achievements, both scholastically and athletically, Jerome is always in the forefront. We want to support our students and a new school will help do that."

Voters will cast ballots March 13 on a $3.4 million bond issue to pay for a new elementary school for grades kindergarten through fourth. Plans are to have the school ready for the 1991-92 school year.

The bond issue would cost local property owners about $2.12 for every $1,000 in property value for the first three years and $1.68 for the following 12, the district estimates.

Taxes would not rise much, if any, because the payments would replace a supplemental levy nearly paid off, Kugler said.

Kugler spoke of the expected growth in Jerome's population with new industries such as Spears Manufacturing Co., Marshall's Potato Processing Plant, the Jacklin Seed Co. facility and Keeblers Distribution Center.

Jim Rigby, financial advisor from First Security Bank, said he takes phone calls weekly from businesses interested in moving to Jerome and they invariably ask about the school system.

Resident Glenn Ellwell asked where the district would get the estimated $120,000 a year needed for operation and maintenance costs.

Neff and Kugler said the district will have those funds when Washington School is closed.

Ellwell questioned whether that would free up $120,000 since offices in the school would remain open and the Magic Valley Alternative High School might move in.

Ellwell, the county planning administrator, also asked who would fund the extension of East 10th Street to the new school.

The district hopes the city, county or highway district would construct the extension, Kugler said.

The district probably won't receive any funds to build a new school from the lottery, Kugler and Rigby said.

Kugler said he felt the low attendance Wednesday indicated local residents generally support the plan.

2 salmon runs could disappear without new dam, panel claims

BOISE (AP) — Without the proposed Galloway Dam on the Weiser River to flush young salmon and steelhead downstream with its water, two chinook salmon runs could become extinct in short order, a task force has told the Idaho Water Resources Board.

Adequate water to carry the smolts toward the ocean in the spring is the most important factor in maintaining the runs which have suffered from Snake River hydroelectric dams and drought years, Terry Holubetz of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game told the water board meeting Friday in Boise.

Both the Snake River spring and summer chinook runs have steadily declined and could reach extinction by the end of the century. "It is clear if we don't seek some kind of provisions for water, these runs will become extinct," he said. The task force also includes Veri King of the Water Resources Department, Joe Jordan of Morrison-Knudsen Engineers and Ed Chaney of Chinook Northwest Inc., which supports anadromous fish runs. The proposed dam would store upwards of 900,000 acre-feet of water until the spring, when its supply would be released to wash the smolts through the Snake and

Columbia river dams. Those extra flows will reverse the decline of the runs, Holubetz said. "The people in the region are not going to stand idly by and watch those fish disappear," Chaney said. If wildlife interests succeeded in having the salmon declared a federal endangered species, that could have a disastrous impact on water rights on the Snake River, upstream logging and many other interests, he said. "What an incredible effect that would have on Idaho irrigation," said J.D. Williams, state assessor and water board member. "It would be in the billions of dollars." The water board has considered assuming sponsorship of the project. Gov. Cecil Andrus' 1991 budget proposal before the Legislature includes $263,200 for continued studies on the Galloway 40 answer the task force's questions. The reservoir could flood out the railroad line to the upper valley and logging mills, critics say. The Evergreen Forest timber mill and other oppose the reservoir. They cite state and federal reports that the benefit-to-cost ratio of building the dam is overly optimistic, the recreational and hydropower offerings are not as great as imagined, and the dam site consists of lava rock, which would necessitate expensive grouting to anchor the dam to the rock walls.

"They're talking about spending $120 million on the dam. Condemning the ranches upriver, inundating the valley and destroying a way of life is not a good idea," said attorney William von Tagen, representing Evergreen Forest. Residents around Midvale, Cambridge and Council prefer smaller dams in their areas for flood control and irrigation water, but they would go by the wayside if Galloway was constructed, von Tagen said.

Ada super-landfill request withdrawn

BOISE (AP) — Developers seeking to open a 10-square-mile super-landfill 20 miles east of Boise County officials, but they say the project is not dead. "Not by any means," James Ballantyne, vice president of Orchard Ranch Corp., said Thursday. "We're gathering more information and contacting more people and continuing to evaluate our situation."

All three Ada County commissioners were adamantly opposed to the Orchard Ranch project, named for its location near Orchard just south of Interstate 84. The commissioners would make the ultimate decision on whether the county would allow the project. The 6,100-acre site would receive municipal solid waste from an area stretching from Mountain Home to Weiser. "The Boise corporation had sought a conditional-use permit for the facility. A hearing was scheduled for Thursday before the county Planning & Zoning Commission but was called off. "I think the (developers) saw the light," said Commissioner Bill Johnson, who had opposed the would not "turn Ada County into a dump for Idaho and the Northwest." The commissioners said they are satisfied the county's hidden Hollow landfill will last for decades. Johnson said Elmore County has acquired a large landfill site; and he noted that six southwestern Idaho counties, including Canyon, are working in together on a regional landfill. Ballantyne had suggested that the commissioners might change their minds when the time comes for Idaho communities to meet tough new federal landfill regulations which could greatly boost costs. Ballantyne said Orchard Ranch will talk to other southern Idaho municipalities about their landfill needs. "We anticipate (reapplying) before the year is out," he said.

Jerome officers release police sketch of suspected rapist

The Times-News

JEROME — The Jerome County Sheriff's Office has released a sketch of the man believed to have raped a Jerome woman two weeks ago.

"Anyone who can identify him or who has information about the incident, is asked to call Undersheriff Mito Alonzo at 324-8844.

"Alonzo said he has received numerous tips and is still following up on some leads. Two men gave a ride to the 21-year-old about midnight Feb. 4 on Idaho Route 25 near Hazelton. The passenger in the pickup allegedly raped her.

The pickup is described as older, green and white, a 4-wheel drive, and possibly a Dodge. It had three antennas and a 21 license plate.

The driver is described as heavy-set, with possibly dishwasher-blond hair.

The passenger, depicted in the sketch, is described as tall, with short blond hair, an acne-scarred face, bushy blond eyebrows and dirty teeth from chewing tobacco.

He wore Wrangler jeans, a baseball cap and a tan brown down jacket.

Information that leads to an arrest can be rewarded through the Crime Stoppers program, Alonzo said.

Mormon station pulls PBS show

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Citing unaccepted nudity and rough language, Mormon Church-owned Brigham Young University has pulled PBS' "After the War" off of its television station; KBYU. KBYU station manager Mel Rogers said he will not run the final three installments of the eight-part series currently being shown on "Masterpiece Theatre," because KBYU is unable to keep up with editing needed to do to make the series meet its standards. "Up to this point, we've been doing a pretty skillful job of editing offensive material without compromising the artistic integrity of the piece," Rogers said. "But the sexuality has been getting more explicit as the series goes on, and it's come to the point where we just can't be true to our values and to the artist at the same time. "So, we feel it is everyone's best interest if we just not continue the series," he said. "We hate having to do this, especially having to stop in the middle of a series. But our viewers trust us to provide television that is thoroughly compatible with local community values and standards. And we take that responsibility very seriously." Rogers reminded viewers that the remaining episodes of "After the War" can be seen in their undedited entirety on KUED, the University of Utah's PBS outlet, Sundays at 9 p.m. Rogers said that PBS programming officials usually give local affiliate stations some indication of sexual or violent content prior to a new program.

St. Anthony residents fight work camp

BOISE (AP) — After losing their campaign in the Idaho House, St. Anthony residents against a proposed minimum-security-prison work camp in their town say they will give up trying to win in the Legislature. "Bonnie Bowen, one of about 30 residents making the trip to the Boise Statehouse, said passage of a $360,000 appropriation for camp start-up costs appears to be a foregone conclusion in the Senate.

"And they'd think they're doing us a favor," Ms. Bowen said after the House vote. She said the group was pleased Reps. Stan Hawkins, R-Ucon, and Golden Linford and Dick Davis, both R-Rexburg, argued against the work camp; but found that other lawmakers were not listening. "They were reading newspapers ... they didn't care," Bowen said. "I wish I would have been impressed; but I wasn't." Prison opponents will place their efforts in getting an initiative on the ballot, with an eye toward overturning the lease agreement the city has with the Department of Corrections; she said. Rep. Cyril Burt, R-St. Anthony, said in debate he felt most St. Anthony residents backed the camp because of its economic benefits.

Twin Falls Fair Board to saddle for pageant use

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Fair Board agreed Friday morning to pay for Miss Rodeo Idaho's saddle for the 1990 pageant.

Chairman Roy Jessor said the Fair Board would continue to allow the pageant to use stalls at the fairgrounds as well. Earlier this month pageant Director Sheri Prescott said the committee was considering moving the pageant to another fair and it is unclear whether that is still the case. Prescott did not return phone calls Friday. "We'd like to have the pageant here," Jessor said.

Paul youth arrested in ski theft from Pomerelle

By The Times-News
Kirby Harkness said. POMERELLE — A 17-year-old from Paul was arrested late Thursday night in connection with the theft of a pair of skis from the Pomerelle ski area. The youth was charged with grand theft, Cassia County sheriff's Sgt.

The skier was reported stolen to the sheriff's department at 10:50 p.m., Harkness said. While he responded to the call, another deputy pulled over a car for speeding three miles south of Declo on state Highway 77, Harkness said.

The deputy noticed the driver's ski tags and asked to look in the trunk where he found the matching description of the stolen skis, Harkness said. After a positive identification was made, the youth was arrested; Harkness said.

TWIN FALLS — Church Women United is sponsoring the annual World Day of Prayer on Friday, March 2. This is a global event that once a year unites women of faith in 170 countries and regions of the world to share in a common worship experience and pray the same prayers for peace with justice for all people on this planet. The 1990 service was written by Christian women of Czechoslovakia and brings Christ's message of equality as it was brought to that country over a thousand years ago. This year's theme, "A Better Tomorrow: Justice for All," reflects the positive changes toward justice being felt in Czechoslovakia today. World Day of Prayer celebrations will be held at the three following Magic Valley locations: In Twin Falls, at 1 p.m. Friday at the United Methodist Church, Corner of Shoshone and Fourth Avenue East. A special meditation will be presented by Lily Catania, a recent emigrant from Romania. The worship will be held in the church's Fireplace Room (use the side entrance nearest the mortuary). For more information, call Joan Huston at 733-3796. In Jerome, at 1:30 p.m. Friday at the First Christian Church, 229 East Ave. B. Participants at this celebration will include women from the Church of God and the Catholic, First Baptist, Methodist, First Christian, and Presbyterian Churches. For more information, contact Emma Coupe at 324-4612. In Buhl, at 2 p.m. Friday at the Presbyterian Church on East Main Street. Local Czechoslovakian women will present the liturgy that was prepared by the women of Czechoslovakia. Soloists will be Carol Barsness, who will sing the Czechoslovakian National Anthem in Czech and Dale Bostock. Contact Virginia Ash at 543-4503 for more information. World Day of prayer has grown throughout its 103-year history into a worldwide, sisterhood for justice. Its motto, "Informed prayer and prayerful action," articulates the spirit of 14 Czech women from eight denominations who poured their thoughts, prayers and faith into the creation of worship materials that will be translated into countless languages and shared this day. These women's hearts and words are unified as they call for greater efforts worldwide to live out a commitment to justice and human dignity, challenging those in power to create a new world order to provide for all people.

Farmers against federal water controls

POCATELLO (AP) — American farmers, who found federal price supports and commodity programs linked to soil conservation in 1985, may see Congress taking a similar approach to water quality in the new farm bill.

Wittmeyer, agriculture assistant to Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said a movement is afoot to have farm programs tied to ground and surface water protection from chemical contamination. Farmers are less than enthusiastic about that idea.

"This is going to be a highly contentious area that could have a dramatic impact on the way you farm," she told a group of barley growers in Pocatello on Thursday.

Ms. Wittmeyer said environmental groups such as the Natural Resources Defense Council,

The Wilderness Society and Audubon Society want to tie a farmer's eligibility for federal programs to protection of water resources from pesticides and fertilizers.

Congress took a similar tack with soil conservation when it passed the Food Security Act, requiring farmers who till highly-erodible land to have conservation plans in place to qualify for farm subsidies.

Farm officials oppose placing groundwater and surface water provisions in the 1990 Farm Bill.

Jim Yost, an Idaho Farm Bureau spokesman, said such efforts are unnecessary because they would duplicate existing environmental laws, and impractical because they would be costly for farmers.

"It's an impractical program if they expect to tie water quality and monitoring to each individual farm," he said. "That may happen in some areas, but for a state as large and diverse as Idaho, it is an impractical solution."

He said the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act, the Clean Water Act, and the state groundwater and anti-degradation laws are sufficient to protect water.

"It's not that we don't approve of environmental programs," he said. "We do approve of those, and we are trying to adjust to those in the federal and state legislation that is already adopted."

Will Whelan of the Idaho Conservation League disagreed. He said more must be done to protect the nation's water resources.

"If the taxpayers are funding farm subsidy programs, then I think it is appropriate that farmers do something to protect public resources such as groundwater," he said.

In addition, Whelan said if the Farm Bureau is truly committed to environmental protection, it would be lobbying for a funding increase, rather than a decrease, for water quality monitoring.

He said the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee voted Friday for a reduction in Gov. Cecil Andrus' funding recommendation for water quality monitoring, a position supported by Farm Bureau.

Meanwhile, Ms. Wittmeyer said the biggest problem in dealing with water quality is lack of information. She said there are at least 13 federal agencies, in addition to state agencies, that have some purview over water. But it is still difficult to obtain data on water pollution.

Andrus gives up on wilderness bill

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus says he has severed ties on the 1.5-million-acre Idaho wilderness bill with Sen. Jim McClure, R-Idaho.

Andrus said Thursday "our agreement has expired." He said the Senate bill was "dead ink."

Andrus has distanced himself from the bill since McClure devised new language on forest roads in a Senate committee last fall. He said that language was the chief reason he divorced himself from the bill.

"It's not the same bill that we agreed on" in late 1987, the governor said during a talk to the Southwest Idaho Press Club.

The bill, which also calls for the designation of 660,000 acres of special management areas, awaits action on the Conservation League. "I think it changes spokes to none."

Added Joe Hinson, a timber industry spokesman, "The bill needed a constituency and it didn't have one. If it's dead, our period of mourning will be short."

H. D. Palmer, McClure's press aide, said he was surprised that Andrus broke with Idaho's senior senator without informing him first.

"I find it awfully disturbing and surprising that the governor would not contact the senator himself," Palmer said.

The roads provision creates a five-year U.S. Forest Service study of the bill's 18 proposed wilderness areas to ensure that no maintained jeep trails or dirt roads are included in wilderness boundaries. By definition in the original 1964 Wilderness Act, wilderness areas should not include roads.

The language directs the Forest Service to rewrite boundaries to exclude roads and provides a two-year appeal process.

Andrus said only Congress has the responsibility for establishing wilderness boundaries under the Wilderness Act.

Palmer said he did not see a big difference between the original roads definition in the bill and the new roads language.

Senate panel approves income tax cuts

BOISE (AP) — Over $13 billion in corporate and personal income tax cuts has been sent to the Senate for a vote in a move that has left GOP legislative leaders concerned about spending prospects in a session that has already seen a number of tough budget decisions despite a record surplus.

"We better lower taxes right now while we have a chance and give these people a breather," Sen. George Vande Putte said, "because it won't be too long before we hit them again."

On identical 7-2 votes Friday, the Republican-led Senate Finance Committee and the House Taxation Committee cleared the two controversial tax-cut measures for floor action. They roll back corporate and individual tax rates to their 1986 levels, the year before lawmakers raised taxes to meet an anticipated deficit.

At the same time, however, the committee rejected the most extensive piece of Chairman Daniel Gribble's tax-cutting plan — a $37.6 million exemption of food from the sales tax.

"This is a way to help low-income families share in the state's economic recovery," she said, calling the food tax "the worst tax in the state, the most regressive."

But the majority said it would cause major problems for food retailers, backing instead an increase in the grocery credit against state income taxes. They also cited public rejection of the exemption in 1984 by over 23,000 voters.

Oddly enough, the sales tax exemption was the only piece of the package to garner support during a marathon hearing on the bills last month, and it was endorsed only by individuals and organized labor. Local governments objected strongly to it because they would lose over $8 million a year in state revenue sharing, forcing a new burden onto property tax payers.

In addition, the majority declined to recommend that the full Senate pass the corporate and individual income tax reduction bills, and several members who supported the motion to clear the bills for action said they would probably vote against both bills on the floor. Mrs. Gilbert failed to cajole the Republicans on the committee to take at least the same tack on the sales tax bill.

"I didn't expect they'd come out," a surprised Republican President Pro Tem Michael Crapo of Idaho Falls said. "I want to take the weekend to think about it. I want to see what impact it has on our financial situation."

The revenue loss, $11.1 billion on the individual income tax and $2.6 billion on corporate taxes, would dramatically reduce the Legislature's ability to underwrite many of the programs both GOP leaders and Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus have promoted since before the session opened.

But even if the cuts could make it through the Senate, their prospects were uncertain in the House, which has taken a dim view of tax measures being originated by the Senate, and Crapo acknowledged that could serve as a safety valve.

The state constitution requires all revenue-raising measures to begin in the House. Mrs. Gilbert has shrewdly argued that requirement off, maintaining her bills cut revenues, but a recent attorney general's opinion cited federal court rulings that similar constitutional provisions in other states cover any tax measure, whether raising or lowering revenues.

Twilegar picks up endorsements from legislators

BOISE (AP) — Downplaying his role in former Governor John Evans' decision to get out of the race, Ron Twilegar's supporters are painting a picture of Democratic unity behind his U.S. Senate candidacy.

Twilegar was finishing up a three-day swing through seven northern Idaho counties Friday, 17 current and former Democratic state legislators called a Boise news conference to endorse the former state Senate minority leader and Boise City Council member.

Among them was Senate Democratic Caucus Chairman John Peavey of Carey, who had considered and decided against seeking the party's nomination to succeed retiring Republican Sen. James McClure.

"The Democrats want to rally around and support who's running," Peavey said.

The chairman of Twilegar's exploratory committee, Boise City Councilman Mike Wetherell, said the formal announcement will be March 6. But the Boise businessman has been stumpeting actively for weeks, and Evans cited some of Twilegar's campaign material in an endorsement Feb. 9 that he would not enter the primary race.

The former governor said he wanted to avoid another campaign filled with the kind of negative rhetoric that characterized his unsuccessful 1986 challenge of Republican Sen. Steve Symms.

A letter circulated by Twilegar asserted that even if he won the May 22 primary, Evans could not defeat Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, the GOP frontrunner over Attorney General Jim Jones in the race for McClure's U.S. Senate seat.

On Friday, Wetherell dismissed the idea that Twilegar was responsible for dissension among Idaho Democrats.

"I don't think that this campaign has anything to be ashamed of in terms of discussing electability," Wetherell said. "Ron has always been a gentleman, and governor Evans has been a gentleman."

Besides Peavey, Democrats endorsing Twilegar Friday included Senate Minority Leader Bruce Sweney of Lewiston, Assistant Senate Minority Leader Marguerite McLaughlin of Orofino and Sen. Mary Lou Reed of Coeur d'Alene, as well as former legislators Gail Bray of Boise and Cy Chase of St. Maries.

Elderly protester begins 30-day jail term

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A 79-year-old protester from Spokane has begun serving a 30-day jail sentence after being convicted of trespassing during an Idaho abortion protest last spring.

After finding Wilbur Lane guilty of trespassing at a Feb. 6 hearing, 1st District Magistrate Judge Wilbur

Lane delayed sentencing because he was not sure if the Kootenai County Jail would be safe for a man legally blind and hard-of-hearing.

Marnao said he has visited the jail and is confident Lane will not injure himself in a special cell for the handicapped-with padding in some places.

Clint Eastwood files suit against weekly tabloid The Globe

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Clint Eastwood has sued a weekly supermarket tabloid, alleging that it falsely claimed extremists threatened to kill him for refusing to speak at a convention of white racists.

The lawsuit, filed Thursday in federal court, alleges the Jan. 2 article in The Globe, headlined "Nazi Thugs Put Bounty on Clint — But Dirty Harry Won't Lay Low," was false, inflammatory, and constituted invasion of privacy.

Comedian Foxx spent cash on wine, women

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Comedian Redd Foxx was paid $500,000 for his role in the movie "Harlem Nights" and spent $373,000 of it on "wine, women, song and gambling," the Internal Revenue Service says.

Such expenditures make it unlikely the IRS can reach agreement with Foxx on his tax troubles, IRS attorney Rollin Thorley told a federal bankruptcy judge Thursday.

Foxx, who gained fame playing a junk dealer on the TV show "Sanford and Son" and currently performs at a Las Vegas resort, filed for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the bankruptcy law in 1983. He owes the IRS more than $900,000 in taxes, penalties and interest.

The earnings on the recent movie were revealed as Foxx appeared in court to try to block a public auction of more than 400 items of personal property seized in an IRS raid in November.

The items, including his Las Vegas home, several cars and jewelry, were to be sold last month. The sale was delayed while a federal judge tried to decide whether the IRS or the bankruptcy court had first claim on the property.

Bankruptcy Judge Clive Jones ordered the property seized by the IRS to remain "in limbo" for 60 days while lawyers try to reach agreement.

Foxx failed in bids to "block the IRS from seizing his paychecks for back taxes."

Impressionist Little seeks custody of child

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Impressionist Rich Little is seeking custody of his 1-year-old daughter, whose mother is fighting him over child support.

Little's lawyer, Gerald Z. Berkowitz, says he succeeded in having the child support argument heard in Delaware, where the mother, Laletta Cottrell, and child, Lindsay, live, rather than in California, where the comedian lives.

Little is willing to pay support but wants an amount "consistent with the needs of the child," his lawyer said. If the case were heard in California, Little would have to pay from $5,000 to $10,000 a month, he said.

"I don't think the Delaware courts would give her that," Berkowitz said. "And I don't think a child needs $5,000 to $10,000 a month."

Little, of Los Angeles, also filed for custody because Cottrell has "refused permitting him to visit his daughter," Berkowitz said.

Cottrell and her lawyer, Daniel F. Kelleher, would not comment.

Tammy Faye Bakker renounces drivers license

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP) — Tammy Faye Bakker has renounced her South Carolina driver's license, a right reserved for state residents, but refused to say whether she is moving back from Florida to the state where PTL was based.

Mrs. Bakker told reporters she did not want to talk about why she got the license renewed Thursday. The state requires that a person get a license within 30 days after moving to South Carolina, but it must be returned if the person establishes an other residence.

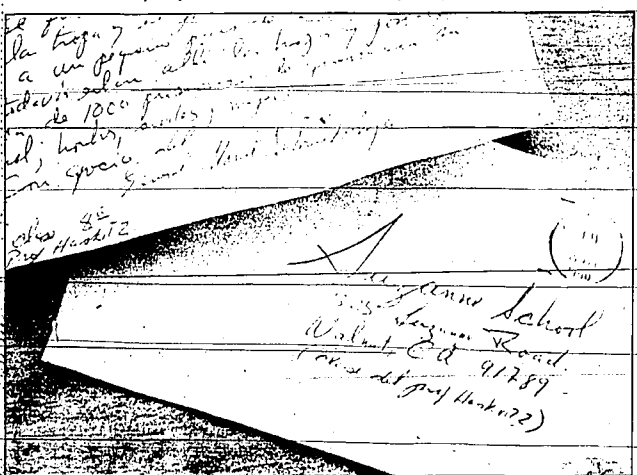

Mrs. Bakker has been conducting a ministry in Orlando, Fla.

The story, attributed to unidentified sources "close to the actor," reported that Eastwood became a target after turning down a speaking invitation by the Aryan Nation.

Eastwood ignored the threats, saying, "I've never shied away from a fight and I won't start now," according to The Globe.

Court papers filed on behalf of the 59-year-old actor and filmmaker say he never received such an invitation, never received any death threats and never uttered that quote.

Eastwood is asking for $2 million in general damages and $20 million in punitive damages for intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress through incitement to violence and for invasion of privacy.

A copy of part of a letter and envelope sent to students at Suzanne Middle School in Walnut, Calif. by deposed Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega

School says it has letter from Noriega

WALNUT, Calif. (AP) — Manuel Antonio Noriega, writing to teen-age students from a Florida jail, claimed that thousands of innocent Panamanians were killed by the U.S. invaders of his country last December, school officials said.

"That was the Christian Christmas that the troops and government of your country gave to a small country of 2 million people," says a letter apparently signed by the deposed Panamanian leader.

Written in Spanish on a single sheet of yellow legal paper, dated Dec. 31 and postmarked Miami, the letter condemns the United States "for killing thousands of children, men, women, old people and people from the Army, innocents, in my country on Dec. 20."

U.S. officials put casualties at 500. The letter was a response to a request from eighth-grade students at Suzanne Middle School in Walnut, 25 miles east of downtown Los Angeles.

"It's really wild for the kids. For the first time in their lives, they're in contact with someone in the news, so they're in shock, but they're starting to feel good about it," teacher Alan Haskvitz said Thursday.

Haskvitz said he didn't attempt to authenticate the letter that arrived Tuesday, but he believes it is genuine because "the tone of the letter sounds like him."

Noriega, who surrendered to U.S. forces Jan. 3, is held at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in Dade County, Fla. His March 5 trial date on drug conspiracy charges has been delayed indefinitely.

Calls to the jail and Noriega's attorneys to confirm he sent the letter weren't immediately returned Thursday. Defense attorneys were in Geneva conferring with the International Red Cross on Noriega's prisoner-of-war status.

"We are interested in getting your side of the story on the Panama invasion," the social studies class wrote. "Would you please tell us what happened, how you plan to escape jail (sentence), how is the food and your family?"

The response was translated into English by student Patricia Garcia, 14, who also rendered the students' letter in Spanish, Haskvitz said.

The letter thanked the students for their interest, defended Noriega's actions and complained about negative publicity he's received.

"The press of your country has misinformed and distorted the image of a nationalistic and patriotic leader who struggled, struggles and will struggle for the sovereignty of his country, Panama," the letter said.

The letter said there are 1,000 prisoners of war, including civilians, under U.S. control.

U.S. authorities said anyone detained by U.S. troops were either released or turned over to Panamanian authorities.

Student Lisa Isomura, 14, said the correspondence was a valuable lesson.

"Mr. Haskvitz told us there are two sides-to-everything, but most of us didn't really know what was going on until we got the letter," she said. "Now, we know Mr. Noriega's side as well."

Singer Johnnie Ray in critical condition after liver failure

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Johnnie Ray, whose string of hits in the early 1950s served as a precursor to rock 'n' roll, was in critical condition in a coma Friday after suffering liver failure, a hospital spokesman said.

Ray, 63, was not expected to live, according to a statement issued late Thursday by Alan Eichler Associates, a public relations firm.

Ron Wise, spokesman at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, said he did not know what caused Ray's liver failure or when he was admitted.

Ray's first major record release, "Cry," with "The Little White Cloud That Cried" on the flip side provided him the No. 1 and No. 2 songs in the country in 1950.

Atlanta snaps Detroit's winning streak

ATLANTA (AP) — Moses Malone led a balanced attack with 20 points and 10 rebounds as the Atlanta Hawks snapped the NBA's longest winning streak of the season at 13 games with a 112-103 victory over the Detroit Pistons Friday night.

The Pistons, losing for the first time since a 107-97 loss to the Los Angeles Lakers on Jan. 21, fell behind in the second quarter when they scored only 10 points — tying the second lowest one-period total in franchise history.

The Hawks, who surged to a 99-81 lead on Dominique Wilkins' 3-point basket with 4:56 remaining, snapped a four-game losing streak in winning for only the third time in their last 14 games.

The Pistons built a 33-26 lead in the opening period, but Alexander Volkov keyed a 12-0 Atlanta burst in the second quarter that erased a 37-33 deficit and gave the Hawks the lead for good.

Volkov had six points and Kenny Smith four in the run, with Volkov breaking a 37-37 deadlock with a rebound layup six minutes before halftime.

Seattle 97 Sacramento 85
SEATTLE (AP) — Quintin Dailey scored 20 points in his first start and Michael Cage had 15 points in 20 rebounds as the Seattle SuperSonics rolled to a 97-85 victory over the Sacramento Kings Friday night.

Dailey was signed to a contract for the remainder of the season Thursday and responded by making 10 of 17 shots from the field.

Cleveland 123 Orlando 96
RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — John Williams scored the first eight points of a 12-0 Cleveland run in the second quarter, and the Cavaliers started the second-half with an overwhelming 28-4 surge Friday night to put away the Orlando Magic 123-96.

Orlando, losers of five straight, trailed by 41-37 after Sidney Austin hit a 15-foot jumper with 6:50 left in the first half. Williams, however, scored the next eight points on a layup, a dunk and four free throws. A follow shot by Brad Daugherty

Jack Sikma hit a pair of free throws with 41 seconds left to give the Bucks a 99-96 lead, and Alvin Robertson, Pierce and Jay Humphries all contributed free throws to hold off the Hornets, who have lost 15 of their last 16 games.

Dallas 102 Indiana 91
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Sam Perkins matched his season high with 24 points, 13 of them in the third period, leading Dallas to a 102-91 victory over Indiana Friday night.

Perkins scored all the points in an 8-0 run late in the third quarter, giving the Mavericks their biggest lead, 85-67, with 2:10 left in the period.

The Pacers trailed 61-54 at halftime, but shot just 28 percent in the third quarter, a 5-for-18 effort, and went 6:10 without a field goal.

Knicks trade Strickland for Cheeks

NEW YORK (AP) — Rod Strickland got his wish on Wednesday: He was traded.

The New York Knicks dealt Strickland to the San Antonio Spurs for veteran guard Maurice Cheeks.

Strickland, a second-year guard, had expressed unhappiness with his role as a backup to Mark Jackson earlier this season and asked to be traded earlier this season. He also showed up an hour late to practice on Monday.

On Feb. 1, Strickland was removed from a game against Sacramento at Madison Square Garden and kicked Coach Stu Jackson's towel while returning to the bench.

union's belief that the contribution to the players' benefit plan historically has been one-third the national television package.

The new package is from between $1.4 billion and $1.5 billion a year, the owners have offered $179 million.

Ownership has been adamant about creation of a joint-economic study committee that would include neutral parties, and the ability of either side to re-open negotiations in two years.

Fehr said the training camp lockout could eventually ease the (lockout) make (negotiations) harder, Fehr said. "The longer it goes on, the less likely it is a study commission and two-year re-opener is going to be of interest to the players. If there's a long shutdown now, and we have to fight the battle now, there will be no inclination to even suggest ... that at the club's inclination in two years."

Gene Orza, counsel to the players association, said the players have two key demands for the re-opener proposal. They want a defined period for the regular-season season in which a work stoppage could be called and an assurance that financial losses suffered because of a lockout in 1992 will be based on the player's 1990 salary if a player currently has a contract that runs through 1992.

Toolson's 22 leads BYU past Wyoming, 75-64

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Twin Falls' Andy Toolson scored 22 points while guard Marty Haws and center Steve Schreiner added 18 and 17, respectively, to lead Brigham Young to a 75-64 Western Athletic Conference basketball victory over Wyoming Thursday night.

BYU (10-4, 20-6) used a 12-0 run in the second half to take control of the game. Toolson keyed that spurt with five points.

Wyoming (5-8, 13-12) led 47-43 with 7:42 left in "his zone" after Quintonia Hays got a hip-inj.

But Toolson came back with a 3-point basket to start BYU's run. Toolson hit another basket from the free-throw line with 11:25 left in the game to put BYU ahead for good.

After the run, BYU led 55-47. Wyoming closed to within 55-50, when Tim Brien got a hip-inj.

But the Cowboys hurt their comeback effort, however, by missing their next six free throw attempts.

Wyoming did close to within 69-64 with 25 seconds left when Breau hit a 3-point basket.

But the Cowboys' Reggie Slater was whistled for an intentional foul seconds later. Toolson converted both free throws to give BYU some breathing room.

The Cougars then added four more free throws as the Cowboys fouled in an attempt to get the ball.

Breaux led Wyoming with 19 points. Higgins added 15.

Shoshone

A three-pointer by Alex Ugaldie took that out to 10-6 and Shoshone led 16-10 at the end of the first eight minutes.

"I think the kids were a little tight coming into this one because the kids see the kids from Dietrich all the time and there's a rivalry," said Coach Messick. "We wanted to come out and box them off the boards, but we really didn't do a very good job of that. We did a better job against them defensively after we got loosened up a little."

As it has for much of the season, Shoshone's three-point shooting broke the ice. Joe Messick hit two of them in a 100-second span of the second quarter to take Shoshone from a five-point lead to a nine-point advantage. From that point, the Indians went on a 14-1 run over the last 4:07 of the first half to blow the game wide open.

Shoshone shot well in the first half, 16-for-26, but held a 13-5 advantage on the boards, which kept Dietrich from getting enough second shots to mount a comeback. The Indians finished the game 29-59 from the field and 11-for-23 from three-point range.

Joe Messick had 21 points on 7-for-13 shooting, while Alex Ugaldie had 17 points, hitting 6-for-12 from the field and five three-pointers. Center Kevin Swainston scored 15 points and hauled down 11 rebounds.

As a team, Dietrich was just 12-for-42 from the floor, led by Craig Sorensen's 17 points.

E. Washington 73 Nevada-Reno 65

RENO, Nev. (AP) — David Peed hit 73 points as Eastern Washington downed Nevada-Reno 73-65 in a Big Sky game Thursday night.

The victory gave Eastern Washington a 16-9 overall record and 10-4 league record.

Nevada-Reno fell to 13-11 overall and 7-6 in the Big Sky.

Eastern Washington raced to a 17-point basket in the game and led 31-27 at the half.

Joining Peed in double figure scoring for Eastern Washington were Brian Sullivan with 17 and Ron McMahon with 11.

Montana 65 Weber St. 63

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — Roger Fasting hit four free throws in the last 25 seconds as Montana held off a Weber State rally for a 65-63 Big Sky Conference victory Thursday night.

Montana now is 8-6 in the league and 16-10 overall, while Weber slipped to 6-7 and 11-13.

The Grizzlies held a 13-point edge at 57-38 with 8:06 to go, but Weber State's Michael Outland tossed in 12 of his game-high 24 points down the stretch to bring the Wildcats back.

Turner Broadcasting signs deal with NFL

NEW YORK (AP) — Turner Broadcasting Systems and the NFL agreed Thursday to a four-year, $450 million contract to show 47 prime-time games on SuperStation WTBS, beginning this fall.

The agreement calls for WTBS to televise three preseason games each year, plus regular-season games in the first nine weeks of the 1990, 1992 and 1993 seasons and the first eight weeks of the 1991 season. Most of the games will be on Sunday night.

"The NFL is among television's most elite programming. We are extremely pleased with the addition of their NFL to our sports telecast line-up," Terence F. McGuirk, president of Turner Sports, said in a statement. "This increased distribution of the NFL games will benefit TBS and fans of the NFL as well."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® BOBBY WOLFE

"Our plans miscarry because they have no aim. When a man does not know what harbor he is making for, no wind is the right wind." — Seneca.

Today's South knew he would have to take the heart finesse sooner or later, and he opted for later. This misguided planning paid off with the loss of his ice-cold game.

South won the first club, led a diamond to dummy's ace and a low diamond back to his queen. This sequence would allow South to pick up the suit if West held J-x-x; however, it lost the game since East had J-x-x.

South was able to take one heart finesse and then concede a diamond, but that left him one short. He won four diamonds, two hearts and two clubs, and the defenders took five tricks.

South makes the game if he takes a heart finesse after winning the first diamond in dummy. After the first trick, South leads his diamond queen, overtaking in dummy when West discards. A second heart finesse wins to ensure three heart winners, and South then leads his last diamond to cinch four winners in that suit. East wins and knicks out dummy's club king, but all is well. Accurate timing gives South four diamonds, three hearts and two clubs; game and rubber instead of one down.
