Gorbachev gives Lithuanians 3 days to rejoin USSR, or ...

The Washington Post

MOSCOW — President Mikhail Gorbachev Friday gave Lithuanians three days to comply voluntarily with a resolution by the Soviet Union's highest legislative body invalidating its declaration of independence.

confronted Gorbachev with his first crisis since his election Thursday as the Soviet Union's first executive president. After arguing that the country needed a strong presidency in order to avert political and economic chaos, he is now under some pressure to demonstrate that he can act decisively.

Moves toward secession are also underway in the Baltic republics of Estonia and Latvia as well as the southern republic of Georgia. In a declaration earlier this week, the Georgian parliament described the republic's incorporation into the Soviet Union in 1921 as illegal and called for negotiations with Moscow on independence.

In an attempt to forestall further independence declarations, Soviet leaders persuaded the Congress of People's Deputies Thursday to adopt a resolution declaring that Soviet law remained in force in Lithuania. The resolution also instructed Gorbachev to ensure that the rights of all Soviet citizens are respected in Lithuania.

Lithuanian leaders have insisted that they will not back down. Interviewed on Lithuanian television Thursday night, Landsbergis said the congress's resolution was taken by a foreign power and is therefore "irrelevant" in Lithuania.

"It is not a problem that they do not recognize us now. The time will come when they will recognize us," the Lithuanian president said.

In addition to the prospect of the Soviet Union breaking apart, Gorbachev also faces the possibility of a mass exodus from the ruling Communist Party in the coming months.

Haunted by memories, E. Germans set to vote

Knight-Ridder News Service

LEIPZIG, East Germany — As East Germans approach Sunday's first free election since 1933, they are sometimes haunted by reminders of the party that came out on top in that earlier ballot—the Nazis.

terpart, has been banned, from Sunday's election and Schoenhuber is barred from entering the country, the Republican Party claims to have groups in 20 East German towns and cities totaling "thousands" of members. In conservative regions of West Germany, they recently won 14 percent of the vote, entitling them to a few seats in that nation's Parliament.

"I don't want another Adolf," Heitbrink shouted again as he walked away from the Leipzig Republicans.

Hostages

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Friends, family and fellow journalists offered prayers for Terry Anderson's freedom and rage that his captivity had lasted five years. Friday at a tearful, somber ceremony.

President Bush deplored the "merciless imprisonment" of U.S. hostages but offered no hope for a speedy end to their ordeal.

Bush promised Anderson's sister, Peggy Say, who has devoted the five years to bringing the journalist's captivity to the world's attention, that he would "take advantage of all legitimate opportunities" to free the captives.

16, 1985, in Beirut, where he had been reminding that city's chaos. His daughter was born shortly thereafter, and he has never seen her. Bush did not attend the ceremony at LaFayette Park, across the street from the White House, but sent Mrs. Say a letter saying, "I intend to keep open lines of communications with all parties, including Iran, who have influence over hostage takers."

Participants at the ceremony, some wearing yellow ribbons, some with tears in their eyes, heard prayers and songs on a warm, sunny day that contrasted with speakers' descriptions of dungeon-like conditions Anderson has endured.

Although its East German counterpart, has been banned, from Sunday's election and Schoenhuber is barred from entering the country, the Republican Party claims to have groups in 20 East German towns and cities totaling "thousands" of members. In conservative regions of West Germany, they recently won 14 percent of the vote, entitling them to a few seats in that nation's Parliament.

The president said he has a "heavy heart" when he thinks of the hostages — and said he thinks of them often. Among them is Jesse Turner of Boise, held since Jan. 24, 1987.

Senate panel endorses anti-abortion measure

The Associated Press

BOISE — Legislation advocates claimed would give Idaho the nation's toughest anti-abortion law cleared a state Senate committee late Friday.

Supporters were confident they had the votes to win its final legislative approval next week.

"Idaho is taking the step, and is willing to take the step, to lead the nation in protecting the life of unborn children," Kerry Uhlenkott of Right To Life of Idaho declared.

The State Affairs Committee voted 7-4 to send the ban on abortion as a means of birth control to the full Senate for final action, probably next Wednesday.

Supporting the bill in committee were Chairman Mark Bricks, R-Rexburg, and fellow Republicans Michael Crapo of Idaho Falls, Rod Beck of Boise, Lee Staker of Idaho Falls, Skip Smyser of Parma, and James Park of Blackfoot, who was sitting in for Jerry Twigg. Claire Wetmorel of Mountain Home was the lone Democrat to vote for the bill.

Child-care bill — A3 Anderson to run — B1

Democrats John Peavey of Carey, Bruce Sweeney of Lewiston, Marti Galabretta of Osburn and Mary Lou Reed of Coeur d'Alene opposed it.

The bill, patterned after a National Right To Life model rejected as too restrictive by other states including conservative Utah, bans abortion except in cases of nonstatutory rape reported within seven days, incest if the victim is under 18 years old, severe fetal deformity and a threat to life or physical health of the mother.

The anti-abortion and pro-choice camps agreed it would preclude over 90 percent of the estimated 1,500 abortions performed in Idaho each year.

In a second action, the committee on the same vote sidetracked a companion bill that would have repealed the state's so-called trigger law that would criminalize abortion if states ever received the authority to do that. The bill was sent to the floor for amendment, and pro-choice supporters said anti-abortion senators were ready to impose additional restrictions on doctors through amendments.

In the House, meanwhile, legislation was introduced to put the abortion issue to an advisory vote this fall. But with lawmakers pushing to adjourn in the next two weeks, chances for passage of a referendum were slim even though public opinion polls have shown nearly 80 percent of the people want a chance to vote on the issue.

Both camps had intensified their lobbying this week, and pro-choice spokeswoman Sally Trout said the campaign against the bill will be carried on through the final vote.

"The grassroots of support is growing against the legislation," Mrs. Trout said. "But we're dealing with a group of people who are intent to impose their will on all the other people."

Plan for vote brings foes into alliance $55 million school aid increase passes

The Associated Press

BOISE — An unprecedented $55.5 million increase in state aid to public schools was ratified by the Idaho Senate Friday to complete legislative action on the most significant pieces of the 1991 state spending blueprint.

The Boise Republicer's Panel voted to introduce her bill Friday, despite hearing only negative testimony for almost 90 minutes.

But the committee also decided to have the measure returned for further consideration rather than sending it directly to the House floor. Bengson said she was unsure when it would be taken up again as the Legislature enters its final days before adjournment.

"It's on the table, that's what I was hoping," she said afterward, clearly resigned to an uphill fight.

"Her bill would create a ballot measure asking voters in the Nov. 6 general election to pick one of four positions as most closely reflecting what they believe should be Idaho's abortion law."

The options include an absolute ban on abortion, outlawing abortion as a method of birth control, the current state law allowing abortion on demand through the first 24 weeks of pregnancy and a ban on any state interference in "a woman's decision to terminate a pregnancy made in consultation with her physician."

This referendum proposal is not expected to pass.

The Times-News and The Associated Press

"I think it will give us some extra money to deal with overruns," he said. "It won't take care of all of them." And it doesn't address the equity funding which would have helped Twin Falls.

The House-passed bill calling for $450.1 million in state education support was sent to Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus with just three dissenting votes on Friday.

"It represents a continuation of our commitment to excellence, to quality and most of all to our kids," Republican Floor Leader Rod Beck of Boise said.

The public school aid package exceeded the governor's recommendation by just $19,500, and accounts for more than half the general tax money being spent in the budget for the year that begins July 1.

Its passage completed legislative action on election-year education spending, and the Republican-controlled Legislature ousted the Democratic chief executive not only on public school aid but in support for both the four-year and community colleges.

"We have made strides, significant strides, and, yes, we have added dollars," floor sponsor Herb Carlson, R-Eagle, said. "But the job is just beginning."

The state aid for the 115 school districts, nearly $190 million more than it was just seven years ago, generally followed the governor's recommendations.

Money was provided to raise teacher salaries another 9.4 percent

TOLZIN

But several school officials interviewed Friday weren't sure how much control they will have in directing the increased funds into programs.

"I know there are some strings and that will be a big factor in how we can use it," said Bull Superintendent Eugene Lyles.

For Twin Falls Acting Superintendent Keith Tolzin, the 14.1 percent increase in public schools' spending is a step in the right direction, but wasn't the leap he was hoping for — an equity funding bill that was killed on the floor would have given Twin Falls schools an extra $1 million in state funds.

Bush seeks to block plant repairs

Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON — The Bush administration called on other industrial nations Friday to deny Libya the technology and equipment it will need to rebuild the fire-damaged factory suspected of producing poisons.
 "We (will) make known publicly through our diplomatic channels to everyone we can how seriously we view this plant," said State Department spokesman Margaret Tutwiler. "It is in no one's interest to see the plant rebuilt."
 Meanwhile, Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney, in a joint directed at Libyan leader Muammar Gadhafi, suggested that the fire was the result of blunders by the Libyan work force instead of sabotage, as Gadhafi has charged.
 "I am inclined to attribute it more to Libyan incompetence than anything else," Cheney said. Referring to Gadhafi, Cheney added, "He had better weeks; let's put it that way."
 The Rabta plant, about 60 miles southwest of Tripoli, was damaged extensively and apparently put out of operation by a fire that began Wednesday night.
 The factory was built largely by West German chemical company, Imhausen Chemie, and U.S. officials are convinced that Libya will be unable to repair it without Western technological assistance.

Although Gadhafi has insisted that the facility was designed to produce pharmaceuticals, U.S. officials said earlier this month that it had begun to produce limited supplies of deadly mustard gas and nerve gas.
 Tutwiler said that the administration has no idea how the fire started and repeated denials that the U.S. government had anything to do with it.
 But a well-informed, non-government source said that the Libyan plant was sabotaged by the French and German secret services. He said that a senior French intelligence officer had confided that the French had been sabotaging Libyan industry for years because of the war in Chad.

Since winning House approval by 11 votes a week ago, the bill banning abortion for birth control has been plagued by persisting questions about its constitutionality, and committee action originally scheduled for last Wednesday was delayed so members could question legal experts on the issue.
 But after more than two hours of testimony from six constitutional experts Friday, the outcome was unchanged from the predictions two days earlier. An attempt to open that bill up for amendments as well did not even come to a vote.
 "A handful of Senators are uncertain," Senate floor sponsor Roger Madsen of Boise said of the looming floor vote. "But even if the bill loses all the undecideds, we'll still win."
 Mrs. Uhlentkott conceded that

Shots leave bus drivers, riders edgy
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — A spate of shooting attacks against Greyhound replacement buses left some defensive and passengers eyeing the aisle seats Friday.
 "As union and company negotiators met separately with federal mediators, a striking driver was arrested in Connecticut in one of more than a dozen shootings apparently related to the two-week-old strike."
Roger D. Cavalier, 44, of Stratford was accused by police of firing a single shot from a large caliber semiautomatic gun sports the baggage compartment of a Greyhound bus outside Farmington on Monday. None of the 19 passengers was injured.
Airline fires 3 pilots over drinking
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Northwest Airlines on Friday fired three pilots accused of flying while legally intoxicated, saying the cockpit crew violated company rules by operating the jetliner within 12 hours of drinking.
 Each of the pilots on the 6:25 a.m. flight from Fargo, N.D., to the Twin Cities on March 8 had blood-alcohol levels exceeding .04 percent, a violation of federal regulations.

 "Northwest pilots have established a reputation for firmness and safety," company spokesman Alan Muncester said. "All of us at Northwest are now challenged to win back our reputation for flight excellence."
'Hardware' expected to fall to Earth
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department said Friday that "hardware elements" carried into orbit by space shuttle Atlantis last month are expected to fall from the sky soon.
 A terse statement said only that the mission "achieved its goal in association with a classified, DOD program."
 Atlantis was launched Feb. 28 from Cape Canaveral, Fla., on a secret military mission that, sources said, included the launch of sophisticated spy satellite.
 Pete Williams, the Defense Department spokesman, would not say where or when the hardware elements would plunge back toward the Earth.

 "A handful of Senators are uncertain," Senate floor sponsor Roger Madsen of Boise said of the looming floor vote. "But even if the bill loses all the undecideds, we'll still win."
 Mrs. Uhlentkott conceded that anti-abortion forces "have a tough fight ahead in the Senate."

 Gov. Cecil Andrus has not commented on the Legislature's abortion debate other than to reiterate his opposition except in the case of the mother in his State of the State message he only asked lawmakers to repeal the trigger laws criminal penalties that would take effect if the U.S. Supreme Court ever reversed the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision, legalizing abortions.
 Legal experts, including anti-abortion scholar Richard Wilkins of Brigham Young University, again advised the Senate committee on Friday that they could see no way the high court would uphold a law that included such a restrictive rape reporting requirement or precluded abortion in the case of a threat to the mental as well as the physical health of the woman.

 "Legislation that would do nothing but create a million dollar tax case is not in the best interest of the state of Idaho and in my opinion is detestable," University of Idaho Law School Professor James McDonald told the committee.

 in the continuing drive to close the gap between the national average and the average in Idaho, which still ranks near the bottom compared to other states despite significant strides in recent years.
 The package also includes $28 million for school improvements including reduction in class sizes to target of no more than 20 pupils per teacher and curriculum improvements. But the legislative plan makes $15 million of that amount one-time money that districts cannot count on in future budgets. Andrus had called for only $9 million in nonrecurrent aid.
 The larger legislative diversion from the state's record cash surplus was part of the campaign by budget writers to hold down spending commitments in future years when huge cash surpluses will not exist.
 Opposition came from newly announced Republican gubernatorial candidate Rashed Gilber, R-Boise, who blasted the support increase as "so excessive it has drained away any money for other problems, especially help for local governments."

 "We are not being fiscally responsible when we neglect the needs of cities and counties and give it all to public and higher education," said Mrs. Gilbert, who was joined in opposing the bill by Republican's Norris Hyde-of-Emmett and Rex Furness of Rigby.
 The budget committee, meanwhile, failed to complete its work as planned on Friday, but officials hoped to wrap-up deliberations on Monday.
 The Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee did finalize one of the state's largest public works programs, rejecting yet again an attempt by Sen. Ann Rydalen, R-Idaho Falls, to secure a $1.5-million-for development of a world-class kayak course in the Snake River just north of Idaho Falls.

 pro-life. This referendum proposal is not pro-choice," Bengson said. This referendum proposal is pro-life citizens."
 She said she has been deluged with requests from constituents and other Idaho residents for a chance to have a say on the abortion issue raging in the Legislature.
 The debate promises to continue months after the coming days, Bengson said, and an advisory vote would provide legislators a pre-emptive check of voter preference for the future.
 "I strongly believe that we have consulted every expert in the country so far. We have not consulted the Idaho electorate," she said. "I have faith in the Idaho electorate not to be fooled, not to have the wool pulled over their eyes."
 Bengson also pointed out that there likely will be a ballot measure on abortion no matter what the Legislature does. The National Organization for Women is spearheading a petition drive for an initiative that would bar the state from interfering in women's reproductive decisions through the first 26 weeks of pregnancy.
 But representatives of the American Civil Liberties Union and the Idaho pro-choice group Freedom Means Choice argued that a new binding referendum would only drag out Idaho's already divisive abortion debate.
 The ballot measure also would seek voters' opinions on options, a number of legal experts considered blatantly unconstitutional, they said, and would prompt anti-abortion groups to sue Idaho in an attempt to block the outcome.
 "Constitutional rights should not be decided on majority or plurality votes," said Jack Van Valkenburgh, an attorney for the Idaho chapter of the ACLU.

Leroy in line for nuclear waste negotiator

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Republican Lt. Gov. David Leroy of Idaho is reportedly the Bush administration's choice as the person to find an interim repository for tons of highly radioactive waste generated by nuclear power plants, the Washington Post reported Friday.

Industry sources said Leroy was the person Energy Secretary James Watkins was referring to recently when he told a Senate committee the White House had found a "temporarily qualified individual" to take the part-time job Congress created in 1987, according to the story.

both the Energy Department and the White House said they had no information on the appointment. But the Post said industry sources identified Leroy as the candidate.

"My only comment has been to decline to comment," Leroy said. Watkins did not name the candidate he discussed with Congress, and

"His name showed up a couple of days ago," said Scott Peters of the U.S. Council for Energy Awareness, a nuclear industry group. "There's been a slew of names flying around for a year or two. Nobody probably gave any more credence to this one." No one has been appointed yet to the post that will be automatically eliminated after 1991. Former Utah Gov. Scott Matheson reportedly was in line for the appointment but turned it down at the last minute. Leroy, 42, was the youngest man ever elected attorney general in Idaho when he won the office in 1978. Four years later, he was elected lieutenant governor, and in 1986 he lost his bid for governor by just 3,600 votes to Democrat Cecil Andrus, the former Carter administration Interior Secretary. He has been in private law practice in Idaho since then. The nuclear waste negotiator would be charged with finding a temporary storage dump for the commercial nuclear waste until the federal government finalizes plans for a permanent repository that it currently wants to locate at Yucca Mountain in Nevada.

House approves childcare clarification bill

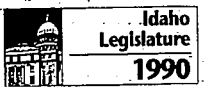

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho House has approved legislation aimed at clarifying state law regarding childcare facilities.

That's despite objections it would give the Department of Health and Welfare broad new authority over private religious schools and church camps.

"This piece of legislation is not perfect," its sponsor, Rep. Brent Brocksome, R-Boise, acknowledged Friday. "But it is in my opinion the very best solution to the dilemma we have been faced with."

Brocksome's main bill passed on a 56-23 vote after lengthy debate on whether it would restrict Health and Welfare's regulatory authority or enlarge it through the definition of a "children's treatment facility."

In the legislation, that category would include any children's institution not meeting the definition of a foster-home, group home, juvenile detention center, residential school or children's camp.

A follow-up bill addressing some of these concerns, but not to the satisfaction of opponents led by Rep. Elizabeth Allan-Hodge, was approved 65-2 immediately afterward, and both measures were forwarded to the Senate.

Mrs. Allan-Hodge said a number of operators of church camps where children stay overnight fear they might be considered treatment facilities subject to Health and Welfare licensing and disclosure requirements if they provide instructional or therapeutic programs.

Rep. Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley, agreed that the main bill used too broad a stroke to address questions about which facilities should fall under Health and Welfare oversight and which under the state Department of Education. "I have a problem with the Department of Health and Welfare being so big and being involved in every facet of our lives," Newcomb said. "I do have a problem when we start building atomic bombs to kill flies."

But Brocksome and the bill's cosponsor, Rep. Jim Hansen, D-Boise, said the intent actually was to narrow the range of facilities Health and Welfare may license and regulate to those providing long-term, 24-hour child care.

Hansen said home schools, day schools and children's camps providing continuous care for nine consecutive weeks or less in any one year would not be subject to Health and Welfare oversight, and accredited residential schools would fall under the jurisdiction of the Department of Education. In response to Mrs. Allan-Hodge's concerns about church camps offering therapeutic programs, Brocksome also had a letter of legislative intent read into the record later Friday regarding instruction or therapy, which should not be considered therapy.

Rep. Reed Hansen, R-Idaho Falls, chairman of the House Health and Welfare Committee, said the measure would codify the state's 1965 child-care law and a number of subsequent changes to resolve disputes over regulatory jurisdiction that have been allowed to "fester and fester."

If problems arise after the bill becomes law, Hansen said, the Legislature will have a chance to review Health and Welfare's implementing rules and regulations next year.

"Without this effort, we're back where we started," he said. "This is a genuine effort to shift, without question, Health and Welfare away from schools."

Auditor says college fees were properly spent

BOISE (AP) — An internal auditor for the Idaho Board of Education says matriculation fees charged students at the state's four-year colleges and universities were properly spent in the last fiscal year.

Last year, University of Idaho student leaders questioned whether a $50-a-year matriculation fee hike was legal because they believed it was spent on instructional costs.

State law prohibits the institutions from charging full-time, resident students for tuition, which is the cost of instruction.

But it allows the colleges and universities to charge full-time, resident students a matriculation fee, which is spent on the physical plant, student services and institutional support. The board's internal auditor, Stacy Pearson, reported Thursday UI collected about $3.4 million in matriculation fees in the last fiscal year.

Of that, about $2.8 million was spent on the physical plant, $400,000 on institutional support and $200,000 for student services, according to Pearson's audit.

Her audit indicated Lewis-Clark State College spent its $682,870 in matriculation fees on instructional maintenance in the last fiscal year.

"Although the four institutions account for the expenditures of these fees using different procedures and allocation methods, the detailed accounting records maintained at the institutions do provide adequate support to ensure that the fees were expended in accordance with board policy," she wrote.

To ensure general education fees including matriculation fees and tuition charged to out-of-state residents are spent according to state law and board policy, Ms. Pearson made a recommendation that the institutions provide the board with an annual report identifying their general education fee revenues collected and in which major areas they were spent.

The state board and college and university officials concurred with her recommendation. UI collected $3.4 million in matriculation fees and spent about $18.6 million on student services; institutional support and the physical plant in the last fiscal year, according to the audit.

Lewis-Clark State College charged $682,870 in matriculation fees and spent $3.5 million on student services, institutional support and the physical plant, according to the audit.

"Based on Stacy's audit of the actual collection, application and accounting of these fees at the institutions, it appears the fees in question are not being charged or applied for instruction and therefore are not illegal," the board's attorney, Bradley H. Hall, wrote in a memo to the state board.

Hansen says IRS treated him poorly

POCATELLO (AP) — Several Idahoans who have run afoul of the Internal Revenue Service, including former Congressman George Hansen, have vented their complaints nationally on the "Gerald" talk show.

Geraldo Rivera hosts a daily television talk show that examines social issues.

Hansen, Paul DesFosses, Pocatello, a former IRS employee; and Kurt and Christie Wadsworth, formerly of the Idaho Falls area, all spoke Thursday of the problems they suffered because of the IRS.

Hansen, who spent about a year in federal prison for submitting false financial disclosure statements to Congress, contended he was unfairly incarcerated.

"The agency should 'collect taxes, not souls,'" he said.

The IRS has a way of getting any politician who stands in its way, the Idaho Republican said.

DesFosses, an accountant, said he lost his job with the IRS because he attempted to blow the whistle on unfair practices.

The couple recalled that Kurt Wadsworth was violently arrested in his front yard by the IRS. That stress reportedly caused his wife to give birth to twins two months early. One died and the other is retarded.

Wadsworth claims they arrested him, although it was his father they said owed back taxes.

"No one from the IRS was present on the program, Rivera said he had invited IRS representatives, but they declined to appear."

Rivera repeatedly flashed a toll-free television number on the screen. The number is a direct line to the Treasury Department and callers' reportability can remain anonymous. It has been established to give the Treasury information about IRS abuses. The number is 800-526-0107.

Rivera said some $100 billion is lost each year in tax fraud.

Air quality tops list for new coalition

BOISE (AP) — An environmental plan created by Pocatello Mayor Peter Angstadt to improve the quality of life in town has held its first meeting to set objectives.

Representatives of local and state government, as well as industry and the Citizens Task Force on Air and Toxics, have formed the Regional Environmental and Air Quality Coalition.

Angstadt said air quality will likely top that list.

Other areas include local Superfund clean-up sites; groundwater concerns, the Portneuf River and use of mountain trails.

"We're here for one purpose, to improve the quality of our life and the quality of our environment," Angstadt said.

The group will have no regulatory powers, he stressed, but it will have the ability to dispel rumors.

Residents have expressed concern over air pollution by local phosphate plants during weather inversion.

Energy prices hold consumer index steady

WASHINGTON (AP) — Topsy-turvy weather is sending wholesale inflation on a roller-coaster ride so far this year, with prices unchanged in February after a steep increase in a month earlier.

A sharp drop in energy prices offset increases for other items and held the Labor Department's Producer Price Index steady overall last month, the government said Friday.

It was the best report in six months and welcome relief after the huge 1.8 percent rise in January. That increase, the largest in 13 years, was driven by a record gain in energy costs and a large jump in food prices.

Food costs rose substantially again in February, taken together, the two months represent an annual-wholesale inflation rate of 1.4 percent. But, many analysts believe prices are falling this month and predict the manufacturing slowdown will keep the rate for all of 1990 below the 4.8 percent price gain last year.

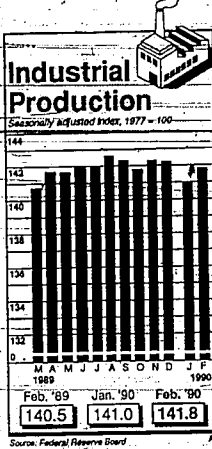

"Inflation has been capped but it hasn't been broken," said economist Robert G. Dedrick, of Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

Unusual weather — a deep freeze around Christmas — followed by unseasonably warm days — also contributed to sharp swings in other economic indicators.

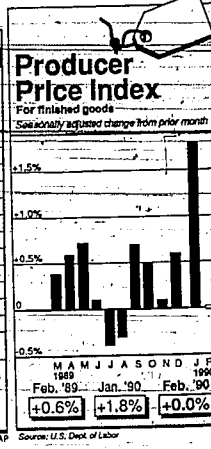

The Federal Reserve Board said industrial production, after slumping 0.6 percent in January, bounced back 0.6 percent in February. Output at utilities fell and rose with the temperature. A cutback in auto plants followed by a production rebound also contributed to the overall swing.

The operating rate at factories, mines and utilities, increased 0.3 percentage point to 82.3 percent of capacity in February.

Housing starts fell 7 percent in after shooting up 25.3 percent, the biggest increase and decrease since the department began tracking that price in 1973.

Gasoline prices fell 2.3 percent, recovering only partly from a 16.7 percent rise in January. Natural gas edged up 0.1 percent after jumping 3.2 percent in January.

"The fact that people are cutting prices like crazy to get rid of what they've got. But the gasoline people are anticipating the driving season and aren't unhappy to see inventories rising," said economist Donald Ratajczak of Georgia State University.

Food prices rose 0.9 percent, compared with a 2.1 percent jump in January, the biggest in six years. Vegetable prices last month shot up 23.3 percent, on top of the 58 percent rise in January.

The wholesale price of eggs plunged 24 percent and dairy costs fell 2.7 percent. Both items had been increasing for most of the previous year. However, chicken prices shot up 8.5 percent and fruit rose 8 percent.

"The revitalized Florida crops are coming back in and we should see those vegetable prices tumbling in March and April," Ratajczak said.

Clothing prices rose 1.1 percent for children, 0.7 percent for women and 0.6 percent for men. The strong dollar, which reduced the price of imports, should keep clothing prices for continuing higher.

In other categories, prices held steady for passenger cars, jumped 2.9 percent for tobacco products and plunged 5 percent for home electronic equipment.

The various changes put the index for finished goods at 117.4 in February. This meant that a hypothetical selection of goods sold for $100 in 1982, cost $117.40 last month, up from $111.70 a year earlier.

Irish Deputy Prime Minister Brian Lenihan presents President Bush with a bowl of shamrocks on Friday.

Bush calls for peace in Northern Ireland

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, issuing an appeal for peace in Northern Ireland on the eve of St. Patrick's Day, said Friday that there's "no place for violence" in that nation.

The president made brief remarks on the continuing strife in Northern Ireland as he received a bowl of shamrocks from visiting Irish Deputy Prime Minister Brian Lenihan at a Rose Garden ceremony.

"There is one thing all of us here, all Americans, are united in, and that is our desire for peace and tranquility in Northern Ireland," Bush said. "We can't forget the suffering and the tragedy that plagues St. Patrick's Island and there's no place for violence in creating a new future for Northern Ireland."

Lenihan presented the shamrocks to Bush, telling him "the shamrock itself, three leaves on one stem, is a symbol of unity — the essential unity between the American and the Irish peoples that has been celebrated in this manner since the time of the first president of the United States, George Washington."

Bush, wearing a bright green tie and a gray suit, reached into the bowl and scooped out a handful of shamrocks. He stuffed them "into his breast pocket like a shamrock relief."

First lady Barbara Bush, wearing a green dress, also attended the brief ceremony. "Your children are making Ireland a young again, creating hope and opportunity for the future, rebuilding a strong economy and a peaceful existence," Bush told Lenihan. "Here in the United States, 43 million Americans are of Irish ancestry and I expect many more wish that they were of Irish ancestry."

While Bush's ancestry is decidedly not Irish, he proclaimed: "Once you've had a glass of Guinness with a man in Ireland, as I have with Brian Lenihan, why can't we friends of a small group of English Protestant dissenters who lived in the Netherlands for more than a decade before setting sail for America in the early 17th century."

Washington (AP) — The ear-wash that illegally hired Matthew Garvey at age 13 was fined $400 after he lost a leg at the weekend job, the boy told Congress Friday as child labor victims called for stiffer penalties.

Garvey, using a cane to help him walk with an artificial leg, told the House Government Operations subcommittee on employment aid housing that he had landed the job easily and had not been asked for a work permit.

Now 16, the Laurel, Md., boy said the accident occurred in 1987, when he was sitting on a dryer that pulled his leg into the machine and severed it.

At the hearing, Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., called for mandatory six-month jail terms and fines of up to $100,000 for employers that repeatedly violate child labor laws. He also called for increasing the civil penalties for child labor violations from $1,000 to $10,000.

Schumer said that from 1987 to 1989 there were 128,000 minors who were injured and an estimated 59 killed in the workplace. The 37 employers who were cited for violations relating to those cases were fined a total of $27,000, he said.

The average penalty was a paltry $740 — $740 for a child's life in the United States, Schumer said. Suzanne Boutros, of Plainfield, Ind., said she was unaware until after her 17-year-old's death of delivering a pizza that it was illegal for youngsters to drive cars on their jobs. The $1,000 fine that the pizza shop was assessed was not enough, she said.

"The quickest way to get somebody's attention is through their pocketbook," Ms. Boutros said.

On Thursday, Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole announced that a three-day sting operation had uncovered 7,000 minors employed in dangerous jobs or working long hours in violation of child labor laws. The companies are expected to face civil fines totaling $1.8 million, she said.

The committee chairman, Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., called the operation a "spectacular public relations extravaganza," but said it had probably heightened the public's awareness about child labor violations.

Lantos noted that the General Accounting Office, Congress' investigative arm, has reported that the 1,000 federal labor law inspectors spend about 4 percent of their efforts on child labor investigations.

Satellite temporarily out of harm's way

WASHINGTON (AP) — Temporarily at least, engineers got a wayward private communications satellite out of harm's way and one aerospace company Friday offered just-finished equipment for a possible space mission by a space shuttle.

With the new orbiter NASA might be more amenable to talking about going after the Intelsat V1 satellite. But, a spokesman said, the space agency has not been asked to help in a rescue and would not comment until it has.

Intelsat, which owns the $150 million uninsured satellite, fired small onboard thrusters to raise the satellite's orbit by nearly 60 miles. That put the 5-ton satellite out of immediate reach of the atmosphere, which threatened to drag it back to Earth.

"This is very good news," said Tony Trujillo, spokesman for Intelsat, a 18-nation consortium. "We feel much better about the mission right now."

The satellite was placed in a useless orbit 90 miles altitude at its lowest point — when launched Wednesday aboard a commercial Titan 3 rocket from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

It can only operate properly at 22,300 miles, where its orbital spin matches that of the Earth below.

"Right now, we are concentrating discussing with NASA on the possibility of assistance," Trujillo said. Such assistance would have to come from the space shuttle.

Orbital Sciences Corp., a small Virginia aerospace company, sent a letter to various parties, including Intelsat and NASA, offering a newly developed rocket assembly that can be attached to a stranded satellite in orbit.

Center considers monkey import ban
ATLANTA (AP) — The national Centers for Disease Control is considering banning most U.S. primate importations after a rare, deadly virus turned up in monkeys in at least two laboratories, officials said.

In a letter to about 200 primate importers in the United States, CDC Director William L. Roper warned, "The health of your workers may be at risk."

Ebola virus — the deadliest virus known to man before the discovery of AIDS — was spotted in this country in November in three monkeys at a Virginia products testing center. In January, an Ebola-related virus turned up in a monkey at a Pennsylvania lab.

Teacher strike continues despite ruling
CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — A union leading a teacher walkout said the strike will continue despite a court ruling Friday upholding a back-to-work order and a warning that teachers who don't return could be fired.

The state Supreme Court on Friday upheld a lower court order that striking teachers in Jefferson County go back to work.

State School Superintendent Hank Marocke planned to appeal in circuit court in Charleston in an attempt to expand provisions of the high court's order to West Virginia's 54 other counties.

Despote Valdez, 1989 had few spills
BOSTON (AP) — The catastrophic Exxon Valdez tanker accident loomed over a year punctuated by oil spills; but a 12-year study shows 1989 had comparatively few spills although a record amount of oil was involved.

Five accidents involving oil spills of more than 10,000 gallons occurred last year, substantially less than the 16 accidents logged in 1979 and slightly below the average of six to seven a year, according to the study released Friday by Golob's Oil Pollution Bulletin.

Nation Quayle to rebels: go home

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Dan Quayle on Friday urged Nicaragua's U.S.-backed rebels to disarm and return home to help the newly elected government.

Quayle's rebel-tender aid support move hinged on the Sandinista militia laying down its arms as well.

"Now is the time to stop the fighting and begin the peace process," Quayle, just back from a week-long trip to South America, said at the start of a meeting with three representatives of the Contras. "We want to see the demobilization of the resistance."

He said the Bush administration supports President-elect Violeta Chamorro in calling for both Contra and Sandinista forces to demobilize. Chamorro, who is to assume the presidency April 25, is negotiating the transition with defeated President Daniel Ortega.

The leader of the Contra delegation said the rebels wanted to disarm and return home to farm but also wanted assurances... the Sandinista forces would demobilize too.

"What we need is total demilitarization," said the Contra representative, known only as Commander Franklin.

Quayle, who met with Ortega during his South American trip, conceded that mistrust between the Contras and Sandinistas was complicating efforts to reach agreement on repatriation of the rebels.

"The Contras don't trust the Sandinistas; the Sandinistas don't trust the Contras," Quayle said. But he also told reporters, "I am confident that Daniel Ortega will turn power over to Violeta Chamorro and our challenge now is to work on the transition so Mrs. Chamorro will have the best opportunity possible to govern."

To that end, Quayle urged Congress to act swiftly on the $300 million Nicaraguan aid package President Bush unveiled Tuesday. Quayle said the South American leaders with whom he had met exhibited "strong support" for the package and said the agricultural aid included would quicken efforts to repatriate the Contras.

"We'd like to see the democratic resistance now being farmers instead of fighters," Quayle said. "The transition will take some time but we need to begin now."

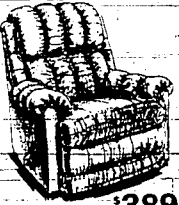

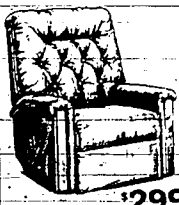

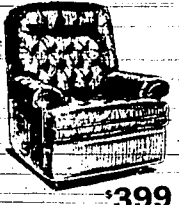

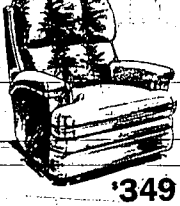

Quayle praised the Contras for their "valiant efforts" against the Sandinistas.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECASTS

IF MARCH 17 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Current cycle highlights greater awareness of appearance, weight, body image, social standing. Popularity is on the rise, you win friends and influence people. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life. Major domestic adjustment takes place before the month is finished.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You might want to go all-out in celebrating tonight but some restraints are necessary. Taurus, Scorpio persons present their questions/problems. Someone you find answers for, others. Heal thyself.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): You'll obtain facts, figures relating to accounting procedures, earnings, financial status of day, but also features physical attraction, intrigue.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Attention revolves around partnership, marital status, changing domestic environment. Focus on gifts, music, entertainment, sense of drama. Legal agreement involves money — take care.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Play waiting game. Someone wants you to "experiment" and this would not prove healthy. Focus on pets, dependents, finding right person for job. Pisces, Virgo natives play significant roles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis on power, authority, intensified love relationship. You'll have more responsibility and chance to hit financial jackpot. Older individual might say: "You've really got it made!"

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Wish comes true in connection with influence, prestige, ability to reach wider audience. Focus also on property repair, basic values, small print contained in legal agreement. Aries involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Greater freedom indicated, choice exists among three paths. Choose independence. Financial reward will follow. Family member will acquiesce to your desires. Leo will play important role.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): On this Saturday night you are provided information that could lead to considerable financial gain. Cancer, Aquarius persons play outstanding roles. Intuition serves as reliable guide.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You'll be saying, "It is as if a heavy weight had been lifted from my shoulders!" You'll shine at social affair, circle high; you'll win way to money and popularity. Gemini represented.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Those who thought you were defeated have lessons to learn — You'll make the best of "cramped quarters." Focus on security, ability to build on solid structure. You'll receive secret message.

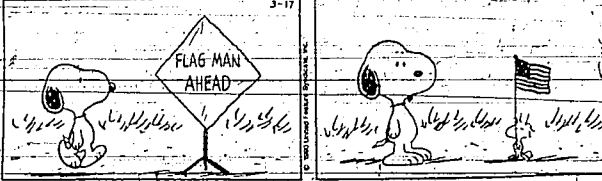

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Celebrate! Spotlight on speculation, friends, desires, fulfillment, communication. Door opens for romance, pleasure, reward as result of contact made 11 days ago. Sagittarius in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Individual usually a stickler for rules will "loosen." You'll have greater freedom as result. Focus on trips, visits, accelerated social activity. You'll say, "I'll enjoy this St. Patrick's Day!"

Atwater says benign brain tumor changed his political style

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Republican National Committee Chairman Lee Atwater says the discovery of a benign brain tumor caused him to tone down his pit-bull style of politicking.

"I can't imagine me getting back in the fighting mood... I don't see how I'm ever going to be mean," Atwater said in an interview published in The State newspaper Friday.

"It's going to be hard for me to be as tough on people," said Atwater, known for his aggressive style of politics and the successful negative campaign he waged for President Bush in 1988.

"What I'm going to do is take a new approach to how I proceed, because politics is people. I've always loved people. But I have a better sense of humanity, a better sense of fellowship with people than I've ever had before," he said Thursday from his telephone in Washington, D.C., on his way to the hospital for a daily radiation treatment.

Indonesians' chants show their love for Ali

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — More than 70,000 Indonesians chanted "We love you Ali," as former heavyweight champion

Muhammad Ali spoke to them before and after Moslem Sabbath services Friday.

Ali is in the country for a music and boxing extravaganza on Sunday. Former heavyweight champion Larry Holmes will meet James "Quick" Tillis in a six-round exhibition, and Tim Witherspoon fights Greg Gurnell in a scheduled 10-round heavyweight bout.

The crowd waiting to see Ali grew so great that security people kept the former champion in the mosque for an hour after the service and finally hustled him out through a way to

Burke gained weight to keep people distant

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Delta Burke, whose weight gain was fodder for supermarket tabloids, says putting on extra pounds was her way of keeping people particularly away.

The star of television's "Designing Woman" says she was molested when she was 4 and nearly raped while in her late teens. As a result, she became "absolutely terrified of men," she said in US magazine's April 2 edition.

Charles, Diana receive cheers from Nigerians

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Thousands of Nigerians cheered Britain's Prince Charles and his wife, Diana, as they made their way to Lagos' main teaching hospital to give it an incubator.

Health Minister Professor Okiyob Ransome-Kuti showed the royal couple through a children's ward of Lagos University Teaching Hospital and told them about the many medical problems facing Africa's most populous nation.

The incubator, part of Britain's $97.5 million 1990 aid package to Nigeria, will help fight one of the highest infant-mortality rates in the world.

Up to 90 of every 1,000 babies born in Lagos die and the deaths rise to 200 in 1,000 in rural areas.

Charles, the heir to the British throne, and his wife also presented $1 million worth of medication to the hospital.

Doolittle's Raiders return to Pendleton

PENDLETON, Ore. (AP) — Almost 50 years ago, 79 men were at the Pendleton Airport, training for a bombing raid on Tokyo that was to become famous.

On April 23, nine of the Doolittle Tokyo Raiders will return to their training grounds.

Airport Manager Mike Hatt said this will be the first time the raiders have returned to Pendleton.

"It's certainly the airport's greatest claim to fame," Hatt said. "These guys are bona-fide monster famous."

The Doolittle Raiders — named for their leader, Jimmy Doolittle, who at the time was a lieutenant colonel — trained in Pendleton in 1941 and during February and March of 1942, not long after the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor.

"The United States then was not having a good go of it in the Pacific," Hatt said. "The United States wanted to teach the Japanese a lesson and strike a psychological blow."

Enter the Doolittle Raiders. In the late winter of 1942, the raiders left Pendleton for special training in Florida and then flew to California. The group's 16 B-25's were loaded on board the aircraft carrier U.S.S. Horn and headed out to sea for the Pacific. On April 18 they made their historic mission to bomb Tokyo.

Hatt said the raid caused considerably less physical damage than subsequent ones, but it showed the Japanese they were not immune to attack.

According to Chamber of Commerce Director Harry Drew, 15 of the aircraft ended up over China; the crews of 11 planes bailed out and four ditched or crash landed.

Three men lost their lives the day of the raid and eight were captured by the Japanese. Of those captured, three died before a firing squad and one of a nutritional deficiency called beriberi.

But most survived and some get together annually to recall their flight and adventures.

Among those coming to Pendleton will be Gen. Doolittle's son, John Doolittle, a retired Air Force colonel.

Also present will be Robert Emmets, who landed in Russia and was a prisoner for 13 months before escaping to Iran, and David "Fischer" who was part of the "Raptured Duck" crew featured in the movie "Thirty Seconds over Tokyo."

Doolittle will not be here. Though he is still alive, Drew said, he's now in his 90s and no longer travels.

Drew gets most of the credit for bringing the Doolittle Raiders back to Pendleton after all these years.

He said he was at the Chamber one Sunday last April when he heard a knock on the door.

The visitor was none other than Richard Knobloch, a retired Air Force brigadier general and a lieutenant at the time of the Doolittle raid. He was looking for a map.

Drew said he treated Knobloch to some "good Pendleton hospitality" and invited him to bring the Doolittle Raiders here.

"Though they were booked for several years, they agreed to come for a dinner and dedication of a $600 bronze plaque at the airport April 23 and 24.

Mayor Joe McLaughlin, who was among those trying to bring the raiders back in 1979, said Drew "took the ball and went with it."

"Everybody's happy," Drew said. "I think it'll be great."

Governor plans string of Idaho appearances

TWIN FALLS - Gov. Cecil Andrus has planned a series of appearances across Idaho Monday and Tuesday he will announce a re-election bid.

One of Andrus' press conferences will be at 3 p.m. at the Norco Window plant on Washington Street South in Twin Falls.

Andrus is in his third term as governor. He was first elected in 1970 and was re-elected in 1974, but that term was interrupted when President Jimmy Carter appointed him to be secretary of interior.

Andrus, after leaving the federal post, was elected again to the governorship in 1986.

Gooding School District asks voters to renew facility levy

GOODING - The Gooding School District is asking voters to renew a 10-year plant facility levy that expires at the end of the current school year.

The first year of the new levy would be $91,562 - a cost of 97 cents per $1,000 of adjusted marked value of property. The amount will be about the same each year, with increases according to the 1 percent tax initiative.

Voting will be from noon-8 p.m. Tuesday at the district office, 507 Idaho St., and at the residence of Phil Beverly, 800 Four Mile Road, Shoshone.

Bonds from this levy may be used only for the district's buildings and grounds, not for school supplies or salaries.

County, court officials adopt new fine collection program

TWIN FALLS - Think twice before letting a court fine slide.

County and court officials have adopted a new collection program that could lead to the arrest, incarceration and prosecution of those who don't pay their due.

According to a press release from the 5th District Court, recent unpaid fines will be investigated through the new court computer system. Letters will be mailed the day a payment is missed as notification that a warrant will be issued for arrest if the fine isn't paid within 10 days. Prosecution will then be considered.

Unpaid fines older than one year will be turned over to a collection agency. Those fines amount to approximately $65,000.

Fire causes $2,500 damage to mobile home in Buhl

BUHL - A morning fire caused $2,500 damage to a mobile home but no injuries, Buhl Fire Chief Mark Grimes said.

The fire was reported at 9 a.m., Grimes said. When firefighters arrived at the home of John Pearson, Route 3, Melon Valley, the laundry room was on fire, he said.

The fire was rapidly extinguished, Grimes said, and most damage was caused by smoke.

Children playing with matches was probably the cause of the fire, he said.

Valley School District plans Centennial event Thursday

EDEN - Take a step into the past at Valley School District's Centennial program and learn how old-timers panned gold, made their own soap and crafted canoes during activities scheduled before the program.

The event will take place Thursday - not Monday as previously reported in The Times-News - beginning at 6:30 p.m. with various activities and demonstrations. The program, a series of skits and songs about Idaho's history, will begin at 7:30. Grades K-6 will participate in the program.

Various area schools send debaters to Class B finals

TWIN FALLS - Debaters from Twin Falls, Jerome, Valley and Wood River high schools are in Boise this weekend for the Class B state debate finals.

Some of those participating are: Mercy McDonald, Amanda Pennington, Kin Andrus, Karena Kohz, Xavria Schwarz and David Helwich, all of Valley High School; Jim Ohlenschlaen and Shane Cutler of Jerome High School; and Josh Walker of Wood River High School.

A story in Friday's Times-News listed only the names of Twin Falls students.

Informational meeting set to discuss Kimberly bond issue

KIMBERLY - An informational meeting is set for 7:30 p.m. Monday in the junior high school auditorium to discuss next month's $2.35 million bond issue to build a new middle school.

The district has set April 3 for the election. A new school is needed to handle the rising population growth, which has been 18 percent since 1982, school officials say.

Anderson decides to seek re-election

By MICHELLE COLE
 Times-News writer

BOISE - Sen. Larry Anderson, R-Eden, will seek a fourth term in the state Senate. After seriously considering leaving the Legislature, Anderson said Friday that he's decided to seek re-election to the District 25 (total area seat, which encompasses Blaine, Cassia, Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka and Twin Falls counties).

But Anderson, 36, said he will not run again after his 1992 seat is eliminated in the 1992 redistricting.

"For two more years, it just doesn't make sense for anyone else to hold the job," Anderson said.

He'll face former Rep. Russell Newcomb in a Republican primary. Sp. Rep. Robbins, D-Twin Falls, is considered to be a likely challenger in the November general elections.

Although he has two book offers pending from major publishing companies, Anderson said the fact that he could become chairman of either the Senate Transportation or Local Government and Taxation committees helped sway his decision. The chairman of both committees are leaving the Legislature to seek higher office.

"The kinds of things that need to be done for the Magic Valley need to be done by a Transportation Committee chairman - not a freshman," Anderson said.

Anderson is currently chairman of the Senate Health and Welfare Committee. This year he co-authored a bill transferring the responsibility for medical indigency cost from the counties to the state. The legislation won't be enacted for another year, but Anderson said he expects it will take a $13 million burden off property taxpayers.

ANDERSON

Peavey investigation - B2

Newcomb, a Twin Falls physician, was also active on health-related legislation during his two-year stint in the Idaho House. He announced his intention to run for the Senate late last summer.

Anderson said he'll debate Newcomb or any other challenger.

Fund-raising for a May primary won't be a problem, Anderson said, although he added that he's never spent more than $7,000 on a campaign.

Anderson ran unopposed in the 1988 primary. He faced Democrat Bill Chisholm in the 1988 general election, winning with 59 percent of the ballots cast. Anderson received 28,777 votes. Chisholm received 19,498.

Anderson is perhaps Magic Valley's most colorful legislator. A political conservative, he was once an aide to former Congressman George Hansen-Anderson and the controversial congressman collaborated on a book about the Internal Revenue Service titled, "To Harass Our People."

The outspoken senator is also an aspiring rock 'n' roll singer, musician and lyricist. In addition, he said publishers are interested in one of his children's books as well as another book about the Soviet Union's black market.

Last fall Idaho Republican Chairman Randy Ayre suggested Anderson may be spending too much time out of the state on business or personal excursions. During a newspaper interview, Ayre reminded Anderson to pay attention to his Magic Valley constituents.

Anderson bristled at Ayre's remarks. He said he was in California several times last summer delivering recreational vehicles for the family business, but never neglected his legislative duties.

Since then, Anderson and GOP leaders have made peace.

"I have the complete backing of the GOP leadership in the Senate," Anderson said Friday. "And I don't have any qualms about the Republican Party."

Jones wants studies on Nevada plant

By CRAIG LINCOLN
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - Concerned about the potential impact of a proposed coal-fired power plant near Elko, Nev., Attorney General Jim Jones said Friday he plans to inject himself into the public comment process.

He hasn't staked out a position yet, but says he wants the Bureau of Land Management to study options to the current proposal - eight coal-fired plants to be built by a consortium of eight corporations.

"While it appears that it could produce a number of jobs in Twin Falls," Jones said in a prepared release, "we also need to explore the potential downsides."

Jones said he's concerned about pollution and acid rain from the plant and wants it built with the best possible pollution-control technology.

In a press conference Friday, Jones also said the companies should consider nuclear power.

"In environmental circles, people are looking more and more at the viability of nuclear power," Jones said. "Quite frankly, if looking at large plants, then you have to look at the nuclear option."

A consortium of eight corporations has proposed a coal-fired power plant for a northern Nevada site near Elko. The consortium proposes to build eight, 250-megawatt plants over a 16-year period.

The plant would generate 2,000 megawatts of power if built, but has already generated opposition from several groups worried about pollution.

The Bureau of Land Management has issued a draft environmental impact statement on the project. Public comment will be accepted until April 11.

Jury deliberates in perjury trial of Jerome man

By ANITA DENNIS
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - A jury was deliberating Friday on whether a Jerome man perjured himself when he was on trial last spring for lewd and lascivious conduct.

Paul Eugene McBride, 28, who was acquitted at that trial, is the first person to be charged with perjury by Twin Falls County Prosecutor K. Ellen Baxter. Baxter was called to the stand four times at the perjury trial.

Special Prosecutor J. Scott James, of Blaine County, tried to show the jury of eight women and four men that McBride falsely testified at his May trial that he was out of state when the alleged sexual misconduct occurred, sometime between July 4 and Sept. 1, 1986. In fact, James charges, McBride was in the Payette County Jail from July 4 to July 8.

In his closing argument, defense attorney Tom Kershaw said it's true that McBride made an "inaccurate statement," but that doesn't constitute perjury because McBride didn't know it was false.

"The human memory is not a very accurate instrument at all times," Kershaw said.

Kershaw also argued that McBride's statement was not significant to McBride's original defense. That defense was based on inconsistencies between the statements of two alleged victims. A perjurious statement must be "material" to the trial.

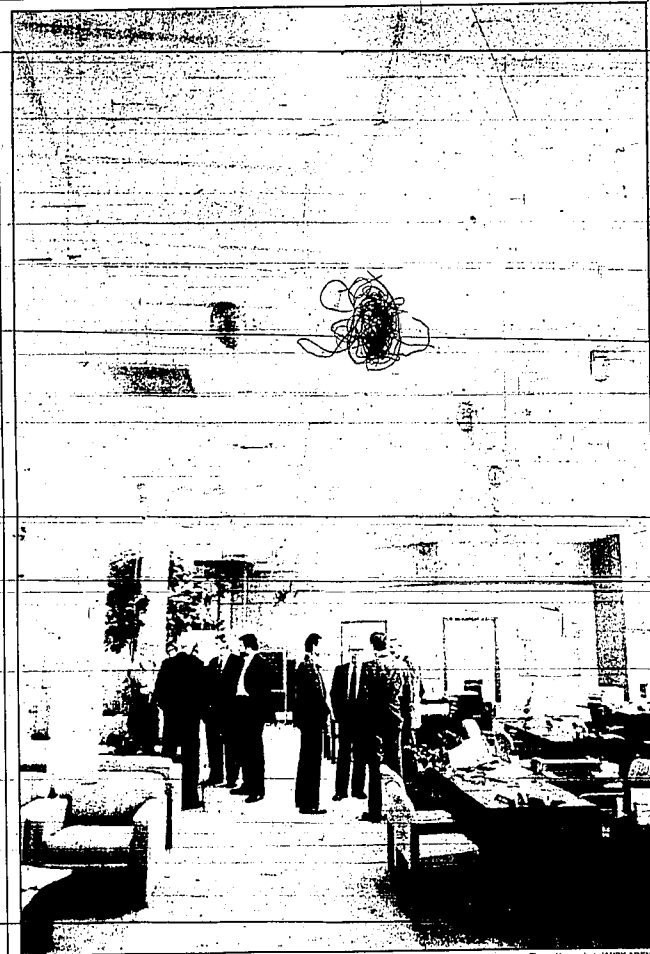

Kershaw asked in closing why McBride would have deliberately lied when the truth would have helped prove that he was not in Twin Falls when the alleged victims claimed he was.

Prosecutor Baxter testified that she also knew about McBride's arrest, but did not investigate whether he had been incarcerated until after the trial. She said she didn't know about the intent to perjure an alibi until he testified; and it was important that McBride was actually in Payette, not Texas, because he was "within striking distance" of Twin Falls.

In closing, James pointed out that while McBride originally gave a "crystal clear" account of his July 1986 trip from Texas to Jackpot, he omitted details of traveling to Oregon and Payette County.

"He can remember everything about that trip except the four days he spent in jail," James said.

Facing a life imprisonment sentence for the two lewd and lascivious conduct charges was motivation to lie, James said.

Move to bigger building seems a success for Key Bank of Idaho

By CRAIG LINCOLN
 Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - On a sunny spring day, the bank with a "snow-belt strategy" celebrated the move to a new, bigger building in Twin Falls.

Key Bank of Idaho had a grand opening celebration Friday in its new building at 103 Main Ave. E., the old Idaho First National Bank building. Key Bank's local branch was lo-ated a few blocks down Shoshone Street.

The move appears to be a success - branch Manager Kevin Guthrie said the bank has been receiving about $300,000 each day in new deposits since it opened its new location two weeks ago.

Key Bank is a subsidiary of the $15 billion financial services company KeyCorp, based in Albany, New York. The KeyCorp system includes more than 300 banks in eight states. The moves that brought Key Bank to Twin Falls, and eventually to a large bank building in the center of town, are part of an unusual marketing strategy. When KeyCorp decided to expand in Idaho, it found rough sledding in states surrounding its upstate New York base of operations.

"So we said, 'Let's go out and seek customers that we understand,'" Guthrie said.

Fire destroys Wendell principal's office

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
 Times-News correspondent

WENDELL - A fire at the Wendell High School Friday afternoon severely burned the principal's office.

"I left at 3:10 and there was no fire and at 3:40 there was a hell of a fire," Principal Doug Skinner said. "Smoke and flames were coming out of my office."

The office's also will have water damage, School Board Chairman Don Fowler said. "I think it's safe to say we're going to need a new office," he said. "It is gone."

Fire Chief Keith Hosack said the flames appeared to be confined to the office area, but the fire damage was "pretty extensive." He did not know the cause and could not give a dollar estimate of the damage.

Fireman Dennis Barr said he helped cut a ventilation hole in the roof after water was sprayed through the front windows of the two office rooms. He said hallways inside were filled with smoke. Flames scorched the trusses in the roof and smoke "barreled out" the vent hole.

Barr estimated the fire, reported at about 3:40 p.m., was extinguished early at 4:30 p.m. School was dismissed at 12:30 p.m. for an end-of-quarter work day for teachers.

Board approves pay hike for part-time teachers

BOISE (AP) — Full-time adjunct instructors at Boise State University will receive a 30-percent salary raise, the state Board of Education has decided.

The board on Thursday approved a motion to pay at least $17,000 a year to full-time instructors who are hired on a part-time, per-semester, per-class basis. That was $11,800 more than BSU administrators proposed.

University of Idaho spokesman Terry Maurer said the mandate would not significantly affect his school because few adjunct professors teach there full time.

Boise State Executive Vice President Larry Selland called the decision a "positive step" that assures the raises will take place in July.

The $133 million higher education budget before Gov. Cecil Andrus includes $1.7 million for "salary equity," which Selland said would be used to fund the 50 percent hike for 36 full-time adjunct faculty members.

A 40 percent salary hike for about 220 part-time adjunct teachers is contingent upon the governor signing the budget.

Bipartisan panel appointed to investigate Carey senator

By The Associated Press

BOISE — Concerned that no one doubts the fairness of the inquiry, Republican Senate President Pro. Tem. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho Falls, has made bipartisan the special panel investigating allegations of improper conduct against Sen. Joe Peavey, D-Corvallis.

"This isn't a witch hunt, and I don't want it to be a witch hunt," Crapo said Friday. "I want to assure there's every protection."

After setting up a five-man committee composed of three Republicans and two Democrats, Crapo said he decided to follow the congressional method of bipartisan ethics panels and added a third Democrat to even the sides.

Judiciary Chairman Denton Darlington, R-Deco, will head the panel, comprised of Finance Chairman Atwell Party, and Human Resources Chairman John Hansen, Idaho Falls, both Republicans.

The Democrats are Don Mackin of Moscow, Ralph Ray of Coeur d'Alene.

The committee will be looking into the allegations leveled by Lacey Anderson, R-Twin Falls, and Peavey violated Senate protocol and possibly federal law when he inspected Anderson's letters to constituents.

Peavey says he took them to his office only to count them after an audit. Democratic senator said it appeared Anderson was violating the new Senate guidelines on mailings. He said he apparently misunderstood those guidelines, replacing Anderson had not broken them.

The panel, which Crapo hoped would wrap up its work in a few days, will review the situation, determine what standards should have been followed and whether any were violated. Then it will make recommendations on what further action, if any, should be taken.

If the panel does make any recommendations, Crapo said, they would be forwarded to a regular standing committee for action.

It is the first investigation of its type in recent memory in the Senate, and it comes amid mounting debate over the state's inadequate or nonexistent government ethics and financial disclosure laws.

Labor department uncovers 18 violations in Idaho spot checks

BOISE (AP) — Operation Child Watch investigators in Idaho have discovered 18 violations of the nation's child labor laws, including eight among Boise businesses, a U.S. Department of Labor spokesman says.

It was the first nationwide investigation charged specifically with uncovering child labor violations.

Boise investigators found violations of the Fair Labor Standards Act at half of the 16 businesses they approached, said Wilbur Olson, regional director for Labor's wage and hour division. The spot checks, included businesses in "Boise," Caldwell, Nampa and Mountain Home.

"Most of the violations in Idaho are in restaurants, which includes the fast-food industry," he said. "We also found some motion picture theaters and one in a grocery store."

Idaho businesses cited by the department face fines of up to $4,000 total, he said.

Of the 18 minors, 15 fell in the 14- to 15-year-old age group and three were in the 16- to 17-year-old range.

The 15 younger minors were working for employers who violated sections of the act which limit the number of hours and the time in which the teenagers may be employed.

"Children can work and we encourage that," Olson said. "But if you're 14 years old, we think you should cease work at 7 p.m."

Minors in businesses other than agriculture are not allowed to work more than three hours during a school day and no more than 18 hours per week. In addition, the shift must be between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Violations involving the three older minors involved hazardous occupations, such as using paper-baling machines in a grocery store or meat slicers in a restaurant.

"The thrust of this was education," Olson said. "We want employers to know that what they're doing is wrong."

Some employees back to work after $3 million dairy plant fire in Utah

AMALGA, Utah (AP) — About half of the 300 employees at the Cache Valley Dairy Plant employees have returned to work following last week's $3 million fire.

Plant manager Rex Gleason said employees have "pitched in" to get the plant up and running. He predicts that by the end of next week about 90 percent of the workers will be back on the job.

Gleason said he doesn't believe there will be any permanent layoffs. About a third of the plant was destroyed in the March 8 fire, which officials say was apparently started by a cutting torch.

The facility is the largest cheese factory in Cache County and county executive Bruce King said the fire was a "tremendous blow" to the county.

"But in the long-term outlook I see Cache Valley Dairy coming back stronger than ever," he said.

The Cheese Chalet, the plant's retail store, was destroyed by fire and Gleason said the company is unsure when it will be rebuilt. Five employees will be put to work elsewhere in the plant, he said.

Loss of the Chalet may cut down on tourism, but it is unknown how this will affect cheese sales.

"Anytime there's a loss of a major employer, there's for a short period of time, there's some economic loss," said Bobbie Coury, director of Cache Economic Development.

Electricity was restored to the plant earlier this week. New gas lines need to be installed and the refrigeration system needs to be replaced before full production can resume.

Meantime, Gleason said employees will package cheese shipped in from other company-owned factories.

Trees will be planted to screen out prison yard

BOISE (AP) — Trees will soon be planted as a buffer between the prison and neighboring homeowners, although it may take some time for the screen to grow sufficiently, Corrections Department officials say.

At their Friday meeting in Boise, the state Board of Corrections learned the bids for the trees have not been approved since local residents complained about the problem last fall.

People along Dunlap Road have threatened said, because the prison yard is in full view of their homes.

They often are subjected to foul language from the inmates, as well as lights from security trucks at night.

"While the Dunlap residents have also suggested the state buy about eight of their properties for $1 million, the Corrections Department intends to plant a forest screen instead.

Police arrest 4 Move in connection with stabbing

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A 17-year-old boy was chased by a group of youths and stabbed to death outside his apartment complex, police said Friday. Four people were arrested.

The body of Michael C. Rosalez was found early Friday at the edge of the front parking lot of the English Village apartments, said Lt. Greg Surplus.

Rosalez lived in one of the apartments with his aunt and uncle, authorities said.

Rosalez was a party at one of the units a short time earlier and had a "run-in" with another youth in which he held a knife or ice pick to the youth's throat, Surplus said. The dispute may have been over a girl, police said.

The youth left and later returned with several friends. The group chased and beat Rosalez, and one of the assailants stabbed him, Surplus said.

Arrested were Joshua D. Frazier, 20; Kevin L. Bailey, 19; Joseph L. Rescor, 20; and Edward H. Fox, 18, all of Coeur d'Alene, police said.

Key Bank of Idaho. President Edmund J. Keane Jr. said: "The bank had been operating in upstate New York and Maine, areas dependent on farming and natural-resource industries.

The bank decided to seek similar areas with small businesses that weren't hotbeds of competition, Keane said.

That prompted the bank to jump across the country to northern tier states of the Pacific Northwest and to Alaska. Key Bank came into Idaho with the purchase of Idaho Bank & Trust in 1988.

"Canadian business has always been important to us, and the Pacific Northwest extends the Canadian connection," KeyCorp President Victor J. Riley Jr. said in a 1989 interview.

It dubbed its expansion across the nation's northern tier its "snowbelt banking strategy," Keane said.

And the bank feels its geographic diversity helps it with stand regional economic blows, although it isn't expecting opposition in the Magic Valley.

"I've seen it is positive in Idaho," Keane said.

And the only concern he has is production, especially in the potato market.

Overproduction this year, he said, could lead to a market downturn in 1991 — but said potato prices could increase even more before peaking.

That's good news for a bank with 35 percent of its loan portfolio in agriculture.

"It's almost too good to be true," Guthrie said.

Underground Catholics surfacing in Ukraine

Los Angeles Times

MSHANA, Soviet Union — For 44 years, the Catholics of Mshana have had no place to pray.

Like all other Ukrainian Catholic Churches, the tin-domed church of Mshana was absorbed into the Russian Orthodox Church in 1946, at the order of the dictator Josef Stalin, as part of his drive to eliminate Ukrainian nationalism.

"Our church has never been Orthodox, and it never will be," said Donko Kobliksky, a defiant Catholic farmer said recently, pointing with pride to the tiny, 200-year-old building.

In late February—the 1,000 Catholics of Mshana seized the church, becoming the latest in a wave of one-sect congregations of Catholic believers to occupy churches in the western Ukraine.

In Mshana, a farming village on the outskirts of Lvov, the Catholics drove out the Russian Orthodox priest, Father Igor Shvartz, and the church was sealed off by the police. Since then, the Catholic faithful have posted a 24-hour guard around the church to keep the Orthodox, who number about 200 in the village, from returning to claim the property.

"We are freezing, but we won't give it back," said an elderly woman in peasant shawl, padded coat and felt boots, as she knelt on the grass near the front door and made the sign of the cross. As in the past, despite sub-freezing temperatures, the congregation continues to worship in the woods next to the building.

Throughout the western Ukraine, Catholics are emerging after nearly 50 years underground, years spent praying and attending weddings in apartments, cemeteries and even in bitter conflict with the Russian Orthodox Church.

"The Orthodox won't give us back our churches," said Ivan Gel, a Catholic activist in Lvov. "They are being aggressive and offensive."

Archbishop Iriny, head of the Orthodox Church in Lvov, acknowledged in an interview that the situation is very tense between the two churches. He accused political organizations that are promoting Ukrainian nationalism of trying to co-opt the church issue, and whip up hatred.

"They claim that we seize Orthodox churches, but they were built by our grandfathers," Luba Dovga said. "They say Catholics seize Orthodox churches, but they are our churches."

—We studied 50 years underground and they failed to break us," said Evgeny Kotsky, a 73-year-old Catholic monk who at the height of the oppression of Catholics was forced to work on a collective farm. "They took our vestments and burned our books. If that didn't stop us, nothing will."

The Ukrainian Catholics follow the Byzantine or Greek Catholic rite. There are few differences between the Ukrainian Catholic services and Russian Orthodox services; both use the Ukrainian and ancient Slav languages. The primary distinction is that the Catholic Church pays homage to the pope, while the Orthodox Church follows its patriarch in Moscow.

The Catholics began coming out of their spiritual catacombs last year when it became clear that the authorities under President Mikhail S. Gorbachev would not retaliate. A public Mass was conducted outside a soccer stadium and 300,000 people attended.

On the eve of Gorbachev's historic visit to the Vatican last November, the Catholics of the Ukraine were told that they would be allowed to register as religious communities—the first step on the way to full legalization of the church. But so far they have not been registered.

Archbishop Volodimir Steynuk, 84, who presides over his Catholic flock from a one-room apartment without a telephone, complained that it may take many more months to get legal recognition and even longer to win back some of the churches that were seized in 1946. "Until we are registered and get back our property, we won't be satisfied," said Steynuk, who spent five years in prison for his church activities. "We don't have a secretary, and without one the church will die soon."

Pageant tells Miss America to stop singing Christian rap

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — An anti-discrimination group Wednesday welcomed an agreement by Miss America 1990 Debbye Turner to stop performing Christian rap songs before public school children.

The decision follows a complaint Feb. 12 by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith in New York, said pageant director Leonard Horn. Jeffrey Sinesky, the national civil rights director for the league, said pageant officials satisfied questions after seeing a newspaper article in Detroit about Miss Turner's appearance at a public school.

"She delivered an overt Christian message in terms of Jesus Christ being the truth, light and way," Sinesky said in a telephone interview from New York. "Children should receive these messages in their church, synagogue or home."

Mormon Church expects to double numbers in 90s

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Mormon Church expects to see unparalleled growth in the 1990s, thanks to the demise of decades-old religious repression in Eastern European countries now throwing off communist rule.

Richard G. Scott, of the Utah-based church's Council of the Twelve Apostles, predicts the number of Mormons will double to 14 million in the coming decade—and triple to 21 million by 2005.

Further, Scott said during a weekend address to the Washington Brigham Young University Management Society, the church expects to see its force of full-time missionaries nearly triple to 90,000 by 2000.

Scott said the unprecedented growth will bring challenges as the church adjusts to new cultures and works in regions where conflict and danger exist.

He said an example of the growth is the establishment of 27 new missions by July, including Mormon outposts in Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Poland.

However, Scott said the church still seeks to enter 91 more nations to spread the Mormon gospel to a combined population of more than 2.4 billion.

preparation necessary for the Crusade. Almost 400 people representing 40 area churches attended the banquet held Feb. 20 in Twin Falls. They enthusiastically received the main speaker, Bill Glass.

Glass, a former professional football player, played 12 years professionally and was a four-time all-pro defensive end for the Cleveland Browns during his career. He will also be the main speaker at the Celebration for Jesus Crusade to be held Aug. 5-12 at the Twin Falls High School stadium. The Crusade will also feature special platform guests on various nights, and a combined choir from local churches will sing nightly.

HAZELTON — The Valley Presbyterian Church in Hazelton will dedicate the new wing of the church at 3 p.m. Sunday and install a new minister.

The new wing will be named the Belmont Fellowship Hall in memory of Bertha Belmont, a contributor to the church who died in 1973. Ethel McDonald will also have a memorial for donating money specifically for the church's handicapped equipment.

The cost of the new hall was about $90,000, with about $70,000 from investments of Belmont's donation. Church members donated the remainder. The hall, built by local contractor Jim Wood, includes an entrance and bathroom facilities for the handicapped, a youth room and a church office.

The new pastor is the Rev. Weston Grey. He and his wife, Jeanne, will live in Hazelton. The Valley church has not had a full-time pastor since the departure of the Rev. Lawrence and Lorraine Vlatard, who left for California to be closer to family.

Chamber of Commerce presents For the record petition supporting resort plans

BOISE (AP) — Petitions with 1,081 signatures in support of a major four-season resort near Cascade have been presented to Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus by the Cascade Chamber of Commerce.

"We see Valbois as a viable project and a potential boon to our economy — if it's done correctly," said Tad House, chamber president. "To which Andrus, a Valley County property owner, responded, 'You've just said the magic word.' He is referring to the word 'correctly.'"

"I don't think you'll find anyone is opposed to increased tourism — it's one of the fastest growing industries in Idaho — but the key is how is it going to take place?"

The signature total represents approximately 25 percent of the adult population in Valley County.

House said all Valley County residents are concerned about how Valbois would change the character and social fabric of Long Valley. He noted that a strong tide of cynicism has swept Cascade, Donnelly and McCall as people try to visualize a world-class resort on West Mountain.

Valbois developers need federal, state and county approval of the $100 million project before they can proceed with construction. That could come this fall at the earliest.

Valley County Prosecutor Clayton Anderson, a skeptic, has filed a five-page Freedom of Information Act request with the Boise forest to verify information about the project.

"We're trying to get up to speed so we can answer the questions that people ask us," Anderson said. "We need more information to make an informed decision."

"People wonder what's going to happen to our scenery," said Chuck Hendrich, a Cascade sawmill employee and Lake Fork resident who has no firm opinion on the project.

"The people here want to see some kind of growth, but they wonder about the long-term effect. If the project is built in 1992, what happens in 1994? Who's going to get stuck with the bill for new police, fire and school services?"

"It's got to come out of taxes."

House said the 27-week petition drive was an attempt to bring skeptics and supporters together to show Valbois developers that people want the project, if it is completed in a manner that protects their quality of life.

"We think the general population is in support of Valbois," he said. "And we're not against anti-Valbois people. We think their input is absolutely necessary. We're just as interested in getting answers to questions as they are."

The development, currently under scrutiny by the Boise National Forest, would include a large ski area; a marina on the north shore of Cascade Reservoir, 18-hole golf course, horse stables, ice rink, tennis courts, more than 50 shops, international hotels and more.

Dennis Lee Taggart, Valbois president, said the showing of support was appreciated. "It was real pleased," he said. "I kind of got a lump in my throat."

Taggart, who has met personally with a number of skeptics in recent weeks, said the public's input will be solicited in every step of the approval process. The most detailed planning, he said, will occur in the formulation of a master plan for development.

Valbois hopes to establish a citizens advisory committee that will oversee detailed planning, he said.

"We'd like to work out the problems at a personal level, and avoid the bloody battles that tend to occur in public hearings," Taggart said.

Cascade Mayor John Cloninger said he thinks reasonable solutions can be found.

Valbois developers "have hung the carrot in front of us, and now we're saying, 'Tell us how you are going to make it fit.' If we go into it with a can-do type of attitude, I don't think there's any limit."

Peres victory signals turn toward greater Israeli flexibility

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Labor leader Shimon Peres' parliament victory that unseated hard-line Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir signals a turn toward greater flexibility in negotiations on the Palestinian question.

But both Israeli and Palestinian commentators doubt Peres' ability to make significant concessions or deliver a peace pact without a larger, more stable majority in parliament.

Peres said the government he hopes to form would hold a dialogue with Palestinians and that Israel will be able to keep our momentum toward peace.

His remarks indicated he would move quickly toward convening Israeli-Palestinian talks proposed by Secretary of State James A. Baker III.

The parliament, or Knesset, on Thursday sided with Peres in a 60-55 vote of no-confidence against Shamir, head of the right-wing Likud bloc. Shamir had balked at Baker's proposals, particularly over including Arabs from east Jerusalem in any dialogue.

Analysis

Even now, however, convening talks may not be possible for many months because of Peres' involvement in the lengthy process of horse-trading with small factions to build a new ruling coalition.

The 66-year-old Peres, who was prime minister from 1984 to 1986 and has served as foreign and defense minister, is a master tactician who enjoys the intricacy of diplomatic maneuvering.

Peres has dismissed as "antiquated ideas" right-wing fears that dialogue with Palestinians would encourage unrest or lead Israel into making territorial concessions.

But he may lack the backing from Parliament to make much headway. Even if he quickly patches together a coalition, it is likely the conservative religious factions would bolt over issues such as the status of Jerusalem.

Peres has six weeks to forge a coalition or lose the mandate to Likud.

If both parties fail, elections could be called or a new coalition sought with Likud. The process could take months, and in the event of new Israeli elections, scifibus peace talks would not be likely for months.

In addition, Mark Heller, a political analyst at Tel Aviv University's Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies, said the pressures on Peres will make it difficult to reach agreement in Cairo on Israel's proposal to hold elections in the occupied lands.

"If Peres heads a government, he

PERES

Israel has refused to negotiate with the PLO, which it calls a terrorist organization, and conservatives in Israel oppose allowing Arabs from east Jerusalem to participate in the proposed elections.

Peres has invested so much political capital in bringing down Shamir, that he has been forced into the defensive on these issues, Heller said. Without PLO flexibility, it would be difficult to come to agreement in Cairo, he said.

Furthermore, Heller said a Cairo meeting might intensify internal Palestinian debate, with factions using more violence to prevent concessions.

Writing in the conservative Maariv newspaper, commentator Moshe Zak also warned that unrealistic expectations had arisen in Israel that if the Cairo meeting took place, the 27-month-old Palestinian uprising would fade away.

"On the contrary, the PLO will try to accompany the meeting with increased actions of hate against Israel in order to press its claims and to break the national consensus in Israel on Jerusalem," he wrote.

At least 663 Palestinians and 43 Israelis have died in the uprising. The cost in extra Israeli military expenses and damage to the economy and tourism totals more than $1 billion.

Jamil Tarifi, a West Bank moderate mentioned as a possible negotiator, said it was a victory for PLO chairman Yasser Arafat's peace initiative to seek a Palestinian state through negotiations.

"This crisis in Israel is a result of a Palestinian peace initiative. Palestinians successfully played the game... I hope there will be less tension," said Tarifi.

But many other Palestinians were doubtful about how far Labor could go toward agreement without more support in parliament.

Sayed Kanaan, a businessman from the West Bank town of Nablus, and a pro-PLO moderate, said "with the existing parliament... it is hard to move forward."

"He said the Palestinian uprising would not slacken until there is a radical change in the public opinion in Israel."

Grenada swears in prime minister
ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — Nicholas Braithwaite, who led a 13-month interim government after the U.S.-led invasion of Grenada in 1983, was sworn in as prime minister on Friday following an indecisive national election.

British Governor General Sir Paul Scoon administered the oath of office to Braithwaite through his National Democratic Congress party wound up "one seat short of a parliamentary majority in Tuesday's election.

A party normally must have a parliamentary majority to form a government, but the governor-general has constitutional discretion to waive the requirement if he thinks enough legislative support exists to govern.

U.S. officials remove rice from exhibit
TOKYO (AP) — U.S. officials removed a small amount of American rice from an international food exhibition near Tokyo on Friday at the request of the Japanese government, because the rice violated Japanese trade law, officials said.

Also Friday, two Japanese automakers pledged to boost their purchases of American semiconductors after the U.S. commerce secretary took his appeal for more balanced trade directly to company executives.

U.N. announces Kenyan food package
NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A U.N. agency announced Friday an emergency food and financial package for a million people threatened with starvation this year in drought-stricken western Sudan.

In a statement released in Nairobi, the Rome-based World Food Program said the operation would feed 998,000 residents of predominantly arid Kordofan province.

Indian official resigns; triggers crisis
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Deputy Prime Minister Devi Lal resigned Friday, triggering a political crisis for the 3-month-old government of Prime Minister V.P. Singh and threatening to disrupt the governing National Front coalition.

Devi Lal, 75, resigned from the cabinet because he felt that some senior leaders in the coalition were trying to malign him and his son, United News of India said.

A letter of resignation was sent to the prime minister, the news agency said, but there was no word if the prime minister had accepted it.

Journalist's conviction raises questions
LONDON (AP) — Britain said Friday its outrage at Iraq's hanging of a London-based journalist was not diminished by news of his robbery conviction, but some lawmakers said it raises questions about his background and whether he was a spy.

"The questions of any incidents in the past are irrelevant to the charges he faced in Iraq," said a Foreign Office spokesman. "Our dismay at the execution has been made quite clear by the government and remains unchanged."

Irati president Saddam Hussein ignored international appeals for clemency and ordered 31-year-old Farzad Bazoft hanged for spying for Britain and Israel.

Cuban party won't ease grip on power

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Cuba's first Communist Party congress in four years will allow some debate but will not challenge the party's 31-year monopoly on power, the state news agency said.

Prensa Latina said the announcement of the congress, to be held next year, was made by Defense Minister Raul Castro, the brother of Cuban President Fidel Castro.

The report came Thursday, the same day Vice President Dan Quayle appealed to other countries to urge the Havana government to hold free elections.

Castro repeatedly has rejected Western-style balloting and said his country has no need for Soviet-style reform — despite pressure from Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and a drop in Soviet aid.

The party congress will be in the first half of next year, the dispatch said, without giving the date. The report was monitored in Mexico City.

The party said the meeting would not exhibit "unreal eagerness of unanimity — false, mechanical and formal."

However, the party, which seized power in a 1959 revolution, made clear its intention to retain full control of the Caribbean island.

"Our Communist Party, the base of political organization in our society, is perfecting itself to better complete its work of historical transcendence that we are setting up today," it said.

ANC leaders to meet with government

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — African National Congress leaders exiled for decades will return home for groundbreaking talks with the white minority government April 11, President F.W. de Klerk announced Friday.

Nelson Mandela, scheduled to arrive in South Africa on Saturday after a five-nation tour, is expected to head the ANC delegation at the discussions. They are designed to remove obstacles to formal black-white negotiations on a new constitution.

"The meeting is structured to address those things which are perceived to be stumbling blocks... toward negotiations," de Klerk told a Cape Town news conference after the announcement.

He said some leaders of the ANC's military wing fear arrest upon return to South Africa, and that could be one of the obstacles discussed at the meeting.

But de Klerk also said he hoped the ANC would drop its reference to continued "armed struggle" so all leaders could commit themselves to peaceful solutions.

There was no immediate comment from the ANC, the main black group fighting the white government.

Cynthia Clinger, right, had plenty of experience on championship teams before setting foot on the College of Southern Idaho

Winning is old hat for CSI's Clinger

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — There is a rule in college athletic recruiting that says if all things are equal, take the athlete from the most successful program.

If there ever was any doubt in College of Southern Idaho coach Bob Stupud's mind concerning that hypothesis, before last weekend's Region 18 women's basketball championship dispelled them.

"I was proud of the way everyone of our girls played. Everyone contributed to the victory. But in that championship game, Cynthia Clinger, Marcia Yastrop and Angie Olsen — they'd all played on state championship teams in high school — really came to the front. They were great. You could tell they'd been under championship pressure before."

Logically, then, it was no surprise when after the title game Clinger was named the tournament's most valuable player because her high school in Freedom, Wyo., had won state every year of her high school career and she started every game in three of those seasons.

"I was on the jayvees my freshman year but our school won the state championship," she immediately adds.

When her high school career was over, Cynthia wasn't ready to end her basketball playing. Several schools contacted her and for a while she was quite interested in attending Montana State.

"The only junior college I'd ever heard of was Ricks and I didn't want to go there," says Clinger, who is LDS. "I'd never heard about CSI—I didn't know they had this kind of program."

Stupud said Clinger was recommended to him by a Montana State assistant.

"The thing I like about Cynthia is that you could immediately tell she still wanted to play basketball and wanted to have fun with it." Stupud said. "Physically, the way she ran the floor and shot the turn-around jumper was more than enough to convince me she could help our program a lot."

At 6 feet, 2 inches, Clinger doesn't have a lot of girls looking her in the eye. Probably never in high school. Not often in junior college. And while she had her reservations at first about committing to junior college, she thinks it was absolutely correct now.

"I really didn't think college basketball could be as much fun as it was for me in high school. But it's been every bit as much fun and now going to the national tournament makes it even better," she said.

"I'd always thought that college basketball would be pretty much a job. I worried about whether it would be enjoyable enough to stick with it," she continued. "It is harder. It's more of your life than it is in

Twin Falls boys take 8-way track meet honors; Jerome girls breeze

The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — It was a pretty good bet that not even the coaches knew all the names of the participants on their team when eight teams got together Friday afternoon to kick off the track season—pretty well ahead of conditioning.

In the end the team scoring said Twin Falls had won the boys division handily and Jerome's girls had pretty well dominated their division. But there weren't a lot of major performances and times were pretty much no better than one would expect this time of year.

Perhaps the best was provided by Salmon pole vaulter Dave Duke who sailed 13 feet 6 inches—Twin Falls Coach Duane Stajkus was pleased with the 20-100.

7-inch long jump of senior Scott Edwards, noting "I've been trying for three years to get him out."

And Bruins junior Karl Kuepfer had a good 22.9 in the 200-meter dash plus second in the long jump and won the triple jump.

"I think the main thing we saw today is that there are some newcomers who proved they are willing to compete. Perhaps not in the same events they were in today and they can be expected to be moved around as we discover their strengths and weaknesses as the season progresses. But we hope some young people make some very dedicated performances. And we can build around that the rest of the season," Stands said.

N.C. State officials to meet

The Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — Amid allegations of point-shaving by former basketball players and uncertainty over Coach Jim Valvano's status, North Carolina State trustees have scheduled an emergency meeting next week.

A source at the school said interim Chancellor Larry Monteith planned to meet with all members of the Wolfpack basketball team individually before Tuesday's meeting—the Charlotte Observer reported Friday.

Monteith, who couldn't be reached for comment, is in the midst of review of the men's basketball program. That review is expected to be concluded in the next two weeks.

Trustees Chairman John Gregg of Wayne, Pa., ordered the emergency meeting on Thursday to discuss "personnel matters." Gregg refused to say why he had called the meeting.

Other trustees refused to say what is on their agenda other than a "personnel matter." But the meeting comes after talks over Valvano's contract with the school.

Baseball negotiations resume

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball union members Friday their new proposal to the players' franchise, and while it did not contain any changes on the key issue of salary arbitration eligibility, the sides agreed to resume negotiations immediately.

The parties had not met since March 7 and talks broke down last week over arbitration. The union is demanding that half the players with between two and three years of major league service be made eligible.

According to a source with knowledge of the new plan, Friday's proposal offered no change from the current agreement, which requires three years for arbitration eligibility.

Nevertheless, players union head Donald Fehr said he agreed to resume negotiations Friday night.

Fehr, without confirming the proposition's details, said it "represents movement in some areas."

Poky overwhelming favorite in Region III mat tourney

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

POCATELLO — Pocatello will win the Region III Class A-1 High School wrestling tournament here today, and quite possibly by the state A-1 title across town in Holt Arena next weekend.

So the only mystery here today involves how many wrestlers from Twin Falls, Minico, Burley and Highland will join the Indians there.

Pocatello will have top seeds in seven of 13 divisions when the regional tournament begins under way at 10 a.m. in the Pocatello High School gym. The preliminaries will conclude at 5 p.m., with the championship and consolation finals to begin at 7 p.m.

Minico should do better than the six wrestlers the Spartans sent to state last year, and Twin Falls will definitely improve its representation after being shut out last winter.

"We can't hardly help but do better," said Twin Falls coach Wiley Dobbs, who has seven wrestlers in the top three seeds.

"We hope to take those seven, and many four or five other kids as well."

The top three finishers in each division here earn an invitation to the state tourney.

The major loss will probably be defending regional champion Highland, which sent 12 wrestlers to Moscow last winter and finished second to Centennial. Although the Rams beat Minico and Burley head-to-head this season — Highland didn't wrestle Twin Falls in a dual match — they lost twice in convincing fashion to Poky.

That's no disgrace. The Indians are 12-1.

Pocatello is favored to defend its four individual championship—senior Travis Spahr (2-1) at 103 pounds, senior Monte (2-1) at 135, junior Josh Tolman (2-1) at 152 and junior Wade Bell (16-8) at 189 — and the Indians have the propior Jon to beat at 112 pounds, 145 and 160 as well — sophomore Eric Birch (15-10), junior Ryan Millward (9-4) and sophomore Gary Johnson (23-3).

Minico has three top seeds: defending state Class A-1 140-pound champion Dan VanTassel (wrestling at 145 in his senior year at Minico), senior Jodi Leoni at 135 and senior heavyweight Dee Armstrong, and three No. 2 seeds: sophomore Clint Serr at 125 pounds, senior Scott Thompson at 145 and sophomore Scott Pavolac at 189.

The Spartans, along with Pocatello, are the only teams in the tournament with seed-ed wrestlers in every weight class.

Twin Falls has five No. 2 seeds: sophomore Chad Kepner at 103 pounds, junior David Barker at 112, senior Darin Tucker at 119, junior Mike LaRay at 171 and senior Jon Lenker at heavyweight. Kepner will have his hands full with Pocatello's Spahr, but Barker and Tucker have lost close matches to the top seeds in their divisions.

Pocatello's Birch and Highland's VanTassel (wrestling at 145 in his senior year) are the top-seeded Joe Frasure this season, and Barker has beaten Minico's Armstrong, the No. 1 seed in his class.

The other No. 1 seed is senior Scott Keller of Highland at 125 pounds.

Burley has just four seeded wrestlers, the top one-being sophomore Nathan Nelsin, who is the No. 3 seed at 110 pounds.

Hale Irwin performs under the pressure of difficult conditions for Players lead

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — Hale Irwin found the difficult conditions he adores and responded with a solid 68 that produced a 1-stroke lead Friday in the second round of the Players Championship. "I like to see par be a good score," the two-time U.S. Open winner said. "I like for a golf course to be difficult, for the conditions to be challenging. "I can't really explain it, but I seem to respond better under those conditions," said Irwin, whose reputation as a master of the most difficult courses grew with his 1974 U.S. Open triumph at Winged Foot. He went on to collect 17 career titles, almost all of them on extremely tough courses: Riviera, Muirfield Village, HarborTown, Buir National, Pebble Beach. And the TPC at Sawgrass, the home course for golf's touring pros, fits into that category. It features humps and hillocks, woods and water, waste areas and mounds, trees and trouble. Lots of trouble. That, combined with bumpy greens and winds gusting to 35 miles per hour, was more than many of golf's great names could handle. Jack Nicklaus, for example, blew to a 78 and failed to qualify for the final two rounds with a 36-hole total of 153. "I hit it places I didn't know existed," said the holder of a record 18 major professional titles. From a shaft of the Test, British Open champion Mark Calcavecchia shot a 75 and was four back at 142. Greg Norman spent most of the windy day in the woods and emerged with a 76 and a 147 total. Tom Watson was within a single shot of the lead until he bounced his second shot off a tree and into the water on the 18th. He made double bogey and had to content himself with a par 72.

"I played defensive golf today, with the wind and the bumpy greens," Watson said. "The greens were very, very bumpy. Putting it mildly, it was a very difficult golf course." The problems were not restricted to the game's elite, however. Roger Maltbie withdrew after hitting three shots into the water on the par-3 17th. He made a nine on the hole and went home to see his newborn son. Phil Blackmar played the back nine in 51 — including a 10 on the 17th and an 8 on the 18th — and shot 87. Irwin, however, reached the halfway point with a 138 total, 6 under par. Jodie Mudd and Rocco Mediate shared second at 139. Like Irwin, they played in the morning half of the field before the winds reached full strength, and turned the tournament into a comedy-horror show. Mudd shot 72 and Mediate closed with a 67. Ken Green and Clark Burroughs were next at 140, two off the pace. Green shot 69, Burroughs 71. Watson was tied at 141 with Andy Bean, Davis Love III and Peter Jacobsen. Jacobsen shot 67, Bean 68, both in the more sedate conditions of the morning. Love had a 68 in the afternoon. Defending champion Tom Kite was at 70-142. U.S. Open titleholder Curtis Strange was at 71-143 and PGA champ Payne Stewart 73-144. Irwin, whose last victory came in 1985, went to 4 under par for the day with birdies on his 11th and 12th holes. He gave one back when he missed the green and bogeyed his 16th, but reclaimed sole control of the top with a 10-foot birdie putt on his final hole.

Hale Irwin can't watch as his birdie attempt on the 2nd green won't fall

Still, Douglas share Vantage lead

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Ken Still and Dale Douglas fired 66s and shared the lead after the first round of the Vantage Cup Senior PGA tournament at the Charles Owens was one stroke back at 67 and led the field in the Vantage Classic for players 60 years and older. Billy Maxwell and Dave Hill were next with 68s. Still birdied five of the last six holes for a 31 on the back nine. The start of Still's round was a contrast. He had a bogey on the first hole, and managed only two birdies on the front nine. He parred 10, birdied 11, and missed a six-foot putt for par on 12. "I was in the middle of the pack at that point, then the fire started," Still said. "All of sudden I started hitting my irons stiff on the back side. I was knocking them all within 10 feet of the cup." A 20-foot putt on 15 danced around the rim of the cup, forcing Still to settle for a par, and spoiling his chance of closing with six straight birdies. "I'm sure I have two more 66s in me," Still said. "The question is, will they come out Saturday and Sunday?"

Douglas had two front-nine bogeys sandwiched around four birdies. He missed a 10-foot putt on eight and an 8-foot putt on nine, both for birdies, finishing the front side with a 34. "I went out good," Douglas said. "With the exception of the two bogeys, I was glad with the way I played. I was putting well." Owens, who became 60 last month, and Maxwell, who will be 61 in July, are trying to become the first Classics players to win the regular portion of a Senior PGA Tour event. Mike Fetechnik is the oldest player to have won a Senior PGA Tour tournament, taking the 1985 Hilton Head Seniors International at 63. Owens, who got over the flu a week ago, was uncertain whether he would play until too late. "I'm not feeling well," Owens said. "I woke up with a bad headache this morning. I thought about blowing it (the tournament) off. But I'm content with the way I played." Maxwell said his strong first round could be a boost for the final two days of the tournament.

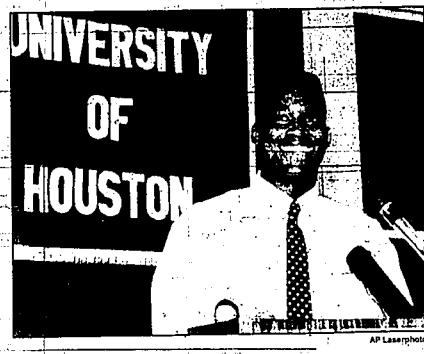

Rubin takes 1-stroke margin over Okamoto in Tuscon Open

TUSCON, Ariz. (AP) — Nancy Rubin shot a 2-under-par 70 on Friday to take the lead by one stroke over Japan's Ayako Okamoto after two rounds of the $300,000 Tuscon Open. Rubin, who had a share of the lead after Thursday's first round, survived her first 36-hole cut after missing the last three, posting a 7-under-par 137 on the par 72, 6,243-yard Randolph Golf Course. Okamoto, playing in only her second tournament in four months because of tendonitis in her left elbow, shot a 5-under-par 67 and is one shot back at 138. Colleen Walker is two strokes off the pace at 5-under 139, following a 4-under 68. Kate Rogers and Amy Benz are three away at 140 while Betsy King, the 1987 Tuscon Open winner, and Marta Figueras-Dotti, who shared the first-round lead with Rubin, are at 141. Defending champion Lori Garbacz shot a 73 and is seven strokes back at even par 144, along with third-ranked Pat Bradley, who had a 74. A Tucson victory would make Bradley the LPGA's 53rd million career winner. The 38-year-old is only $34,357 short. Temperatures reached into the 70s Friday with only a slight breeze, compared with Thursday, when afternoon scores soared because of winds gusting up to 25 mph. Rubin, who is seeking her first victory, having earned $121,668 in 10 years; drilled a 25-footer for birdie on the par-3, 152-yard 15th hole to wrestle the lead away from Okamoto. Rubin then sank another 25-footer from the fringe on No. 17, a par 4, before bogeying the final, par 5, 18th hole. Okamoto birdied four of the first seven holes on the back side, sinking putts from four-feet, on both No. 10, a par 4, and No. 16, a par 5. She had back-to-back birdies on 13 and 14, two-putting from 60-feet on the par 5, 13th and from 20-feet on the par 4, 14th. Seventy-four players made the 36-hole cut of 148 and will play Saturday and Sunday for the $45,000 first prize. Among those notables failing to qualify were 1984 Tuscon Open champion Chris Johnson at 149 and Tammie Green, who won Tuesday's Shootout at 151.

Ware sacrifices senior year for NFL draft

Andre Ware announces he will leave school for the NFL draft

HOUSTON (AP) — Heisman trophy winner Andre Ware will pass up his senior year and declare himself available for the NFL draft, the University of Houston quarterback said today. "This is by far the most difficult decision I have had to make in all my years. I have cherished my three years here, but for a variety of reasons, I am declaring myself for the NFL draft," Ware said in an emotional statement at a news conference. Ware said he would not discuss the information he used to make his decision but he felt he had made the right move. "I made the decision and I'll go with it 100 percent," he said. "It's not a hard decision either way. It was never my goal to be the No. 1 pick or go real high. The goal is to play pro football." (San Francisco) '49ers quarterback Joe Montana was the first-round pick and Houston Oilers quarterback Warren Moon was the even drafted and he's one of the best. There was no one factor I looked at," Ware said. Shortly after winning the Heisman Trophy on Dec. 2, Ware guaranteed he would return for his senior season with the Cougars. "Since Dec. 2 a lot of things have taken place at UH and in the NFL as far as allowing juniors into the draft," Ware said. "Yes, that statement bothered me a little, but you have to understand what all has happened since I made that statement." Houston Coach John Jenkins said Ware was in an elite group of players who could benefit from leaving school early, but it should be a message for all college players. "Young men who take this as a quick escape, let it be known that it's not," the coach said.

Oklahoma coach fires rounds at press, defends imaginary 'six-gun' used by player to shoot fans

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Coach Billy Tubbs took on his team's critics Friday, the day before his top-ranked Oklahoma Sooners take on North Carolina in the second round of the NCAA Midwest regional. Tubbs was particularly upset about stories he considered negative about Skeeter Davis, the Sooners' leading scorer and six-gun shooter. "You can write about me all you want to. Don't write about my players," Tubbs said. "You attack Skeeter Henley. Hey, don't do that, then you're gonna have to cross (me)."

Henry gets a lot of press because in addition to his scoring talent, he likes to shoot imaginary six-guns at opponents and fans after big plays. The gestures tend to irritate other teams and have been well-chronicled in Oklahoma's late-season climb to the top of the polls. But Tubbs thinks the press has taken one too many cheap shots at him. "Skeeter Henley's a good person," Tubbs said. "He's a guy you ought to be writing about doing a hell of a job turning around his life in the classroom, that he can get his degree, that (he) has a lot of respect because he's doing a hell of a job on the basketball floor this year and a hell of a job in the classroom. "Hammer me. Don't hammer my damn players," Tubbs said. "They're good people, and I resent it. If you can't find any other trash to write about, go down in the gutter or in the gutter's soap and find it." His scolding followed a question about the Atlantic Coast Conference, home of the Tar Heels. Tubbs, who joked earlier this year that people in the Big Eight watch Big East games as a cure for insomnia, was asked what he thought of the ACC. "I have no thoughts," he said. "I'm not gonna get into these game-theoretical debates again. You all have analyzed me enough." Tubbs and the two Sooner players at Friday's news conference, Smokey McCovery and Jackie Jones, spent just 12 minutes on the podium. The other three teams — North Carolina, Arkansas and Dayton — used the full 30 minutes allotted. Although Tubbs clearly was steamed, it's possible he was trying to motivate his team.

LSU coach encouraged Jackson to leave school

BAYON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Coach Dale Brown encouraged two-time All-American Chris Jackson to forsake his final two seasons of eligibility at Louisiana State and turn professional, the State Times reported. The afternoon newspaper quoted an unnamed source in the LSU basketball program as saying Brown also asked Jackson to make the decision before the beginning of the NCAA tournament and announce it to his teammates. Brown will not comment on Jackson's status or reports that have swirled since Wednesday that the high-scoring guard will turn professional. He has also forbidden his basketball team to talk about anything but basketball games.

In his Friday morning editions, the Morning Advocate quoted an unnamed source in the school's basketball program as saying there's no basis for rumors that 7-foot turn professional center Stanley Roberts will go to Europe and turn professional after this season. First reports of the unconfirmed defections came Wednesday from television station WBRZ, which said Jackson would get $10 million for five years by joining the NBA now. The station said Jackson, Brown, Jackson's mother and his former high school coach were involved in making the decision and that Jackson announced it to his teammates on Sunday. Jackson's high school coach, Bert Jenkins, denied any involvement.

Sports leagues demand public participation, in season or out

By JOE GERGEN
Newspaper

Those time bandits are at it again. Each year, it appears, they are determined to steal a few more hours, a couple of additional days, even an extra week from our lives. They appear to work independently but their overall impact is debilitating.

Once an individual sport was tied to a season, it wasn't only a figure of speech but a specific period of the year. Baseball was the summer game, football occupied the fall and basketball and hockey were reserved for winter. The spillover was so minimal that the two-sport athletes at the professional level were not treated as a freak of nature.

Yes, long before Bo, it wasn't a big deal to know about a lot of things. But then the sports entrepreneurs began to fiddle with the calendar. They added teams, they added games, they started their seasons earlier and they ended their seasons later. And thanks to television, which encouraged figure of everything, we began to get bombarded year-round with images of skywalkers and masked goaltenders and acrobatic receivers and hard-throwing left-handers, occasionally all on the same day.

There is no escaping now. Sports demand more of our attention, more of our time every year. Forget the status quo. It isn't a successful year for any professional sports organization unless it strengthens its hold on the public.

Sometimes, as in the case of the National Hockey League, the alteration is subtle. Three years ago, the NHL increased the first round of its four-round Stanley Cup playoffs from a best-of-five to a best-of-seven series. However, it continued the policy of no days off between games other than for travel. This year, they are dropping the other skate. There will be a day off between all games in the first round, days that will extend the season.

Not so subtle is the escalation announced last week by the National Football League.

The 1990 playoffs will be two games longer, thanks to the addition of a third wild-card team in each conference.

But that's only the beginning of a revamped NFL schedule calculated to give TV networks more opportunities to earn back the staggering sums they are being required to pay for broadcast rights. There will be 17 weeks of competition this year and next, although the number of regular season games played by each team will remain at 16. In 1992, the schedule will be stretched over 18 weeks, permitting two dark weeks for each team and two additional weeks for the networks to recoup their investment through advertising.

As a result, the Super Bowl, starting with XXVII at a site to be designated, will be pushed into the month of February. Now there's a breakthrough.

Consider that the championship game credited with launching the NFL into the national consciousness, the Baltimore Colts' 23-17 overtime triumph over the Giants in New York at the end of the 1958 season, was played Dec. 28. Until the advent of the Super Bowl following the 1966 season, the latest any championship contest had been held was Jan. 2.

And now the league is looking to score points in February, a slow month for sports on television.

As recently as 1977, the NFL was committed to a 14-game regular season schedule that began in mid-September and culminated with two weekends of playoff games building to the Super Bowl.

The championship game was played in mid-January. In 1978, the 16-game schedule was introduced and a second wild-card team was added to each conference, precipitating an additional weekend of playoff competition. The season began in early September and ended in late January.

Clearly, one of the best things about the North American sports calendar is its elasticity. Want to raise more money? No problem, just lengthen the season.

Twenty-five years ago, the NFL season ended in early May; now it's late May. The NBA championship that in 1965 was determined in late April will be crowned in June 1990.

And we have yet to hear from baseball, which once had a monopoly on springtime as well as summer.

Baseball in November? It almost happened last year as a result of the earthquake in the Bay Area.

Then again, it almost happened in 1986, when the worst natural disaster was a single day of rain. It will happen someday soon as sure as there is hockey in May, basketball in June and football in February.

As the proprietors of our games have indicated, there is a time and a place for each team sport. It is everywhere and it is anytime.

Dixon, Korte SCIC players of the year

JEROME — Jerome's Tracy Dixon and Buhl's Jamie Korte have been named the South-Central Idaho Conference basketball players of the year in a vote by the league's coaches.

Korte was also named girls' player of the year in the Cross State Conference.
