Boise students protest abortion law with sit-in

The Associated Press

BOISE — More than 50 junior high school students staged a brief sit-in in the office of Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus on Friday.

They were protesting the legislature's passage of the state's most restrictive state abortion law and demanding the governor to veto it.

"Idaho was one of the first state's to give women their rights, and now they want to take them away from us," said 15-year-old Michele May. "We can't let them do that."

Within five minutes after beginning the sit-in shortly after noon, local and Idaho State Police officers coaxed the teen-agers out of the office. Andrus, who has remained silent on his intention for the bill, had left for lunch and an afternoon off about 30 minutes earlier.

The students from nearby North Junior High School were moved out on the west steps of the Capitol. There, four Democratic state-senators who opposed the abortion-bill now headed for the governor's desk urged them to become part of the coalition that continues to fight the legislation banning more than 90 percent of the 1,500 abortions performed in Idaho each year.

"We want to win the war," Sen. Ron Beitel, speaker of Grangeville, told them. "You don't help the cause by marching into the governor's office and refusing to leave."

"First off you got a lot of attention today," Beitel said. "Now the best thing to do is to take the energy you have and channel it in a positive way: The

Soviets increase pressure on breakaway Lithuanians

The Associated Press

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. — An armored column of almost 100 military vehicles rolled through the center of the Lithuanian capital before dawn Saturday.

It apparently was another bid by the Kremlin to further unnerve leaders of the breakaway republic.

Earlier Friday, Lithuania's president accused Moscow of waging psychological warfare against his small Baltic republic with an escalating series of military maneuvers and demands.

Soviet officials turned the pressure against the republic that declared independence on March 11 a notch higher, with the Tass news agency saying the situation was approaching "anarchy in all its manifestations."

Nervous legislators passed a resolution transferring power to the senior diplomat of independent Lithuania in Washington in case of emergency, and several of them, walked about 100 yards from legislative chambers to a highway overpass to watch the column rumble through the city at 4 a.m.

One Lithuanian legislator who talked to paratroopers in the column said he was told the armor was on the move from Jonava, a city 45 miles northwest of Vilnius to a military base at Siaurės Miestelis, on Vilnius' north side.

The convoy moved along the main highway through the heart of Vilnius in the early morning dark, without stopping. Only the handful of people on the street at that hour stopped and watched them pass.

"There was absolutely no confrontation," said Julius Palunas, a spokesman for the Lithuanian legislature's press office.

He said he drove to the military base about six to nine miles from downtown and saw the column pulling in.

Audris Butkavicius, a Lithuanian deputy who said he talked to some Soviet soldier stands guard outside his military base in Vilnius Friday as tensions rose of the soldiers, said they told him there were about 1,000 paratroopers in the column.

There were at least 22 tanks and armored personnel carriers and dozens of green military trucks.

Deputies, who were still meeting in the Supreme Council legislature to finish forming their independent government, said they had not been notified in advance of the convoy's movement. After deputies checked out the column's movement, they broke up and began to go home.

When night fell Friday, the republic had been calm, keeping the demeanor of its determined drive to restore the independence lost to Stalin's army in 1940. Soviet officials on Friday continued to increase their pressure on Lithuania to renounce its declaration of independence from the Soviet Union.

Activists threaten Gem spud boycott

The Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — Women's groups nationwide will be asked to boycott Idaho potatoes if Gov. Cecil Andrus signs a restrictive abortion bill late this week, an abortion rights leader said Friday.

Anne Nicol Gayler, administrator of the Madison-based Women's Medical Fund, Inc., advised Andrus in a letter that such a boycott would be successful because "everyone buys potatoes (and) most potato buyers are women."

It will be easy for buyers who favor abortion rights to simply avoid buying Idaho potatoes, Ms. Gayler said.

"Women can fight back," she said. "We do not have to beg and plead for our rights any more."

Ms. Gayler said the Women's Medical Fund has assisted many women and children in obtaining abortions, including 11-year-old children, homeless women and in one case, a woman who was in her 15th pregnancy.

She told Andrus the more than 30,000 women she has spoken with "in need of abortion care" have convinced her of the need for abortion rights.

A bill passed by the Idaho Legislature would make abortion illegal except in cases of non-avoid buying Idaho potatoes, Ms. Gayler said. • See BOYCOTT on Page A2

Warning follows ouster order to diplomats

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. diplomats were ordered out of Lithuania by the Soviet Union on Friday, the White House said, as President Bush cautioned the Soviets that using force against the breakaway republic would be "bound to backfire."

U.S. officials said other foreign diplomats and some journalists also had been told to leave the Lithuanian capital.

Bush declared that the United States stands with "the brave men and women of Lithuania" in their struggle for self-determination.

And, in his strongest words yet on the situation, he said, "Any attempt to coerce or intimidate or forcibly intervene against the Lithuanian people is bound to backfire. That is ineluctable."

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the United States would comply with the order for its two diplomats to leave but would formally protest to the Soviet Union. "This action certainly adds to our concerns," Fitzwater said.

"The situation appears to progressively get worse," he said. "Indeed, late in the day the Soviets

Tass news agency said the situation was "approaching anarchy in all its manifestations," the sort of language that the press has been used to prepare Soviets for major actions.

The U.S. diplomats, Douglas Wake and Jon-Parnell, said Friday night in Vilnius that they had heard nothing about the order for them to leave.

Fitzwater said the diplomats, both State Department foreign service officers, were in Lithuania only temporarily in any case. They were returning to the U.S. consulate in Leningrad.

The spokesman said, "It is unclear what specific actions have been taken against journalists. But we are opposed to any infringements on freedom of the press."

Other U.S. officials, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said other foreign diplomats and journalists had been ordered out of Lithuania.

Fitzwater said the "deputies committed" of high-ranking officials of the Pentagon, State Department, CIA and other agencies was keeping track of developments in Lithuania, but "it's not being treated in a crisis-like way from our standpoint."

U.S. options, beyond appeals for a peaceful settlement, are limited, and the administration wants to "keep the door open to a negotiated end."

Meanwhile, Soviet Ambassador Yuri V. Dubinin said after a meeting with Deputy Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger that he had no information from Moscow about the expulsions.

He indicated that Eagleburger raised the issue but that the problem generally was being handled by the Soviet Foreign Ministry and the U.S. Embassy in Moscow. His meeting with Eagleburger had been arranged before the expulsion order became known.

Earlier, Bush said at a luncheon meeting with out-of-town news media representatives, "We know that the Soviet Union has a long-standing interest in Lithuania, but those interests can only be addressed through dialogue and negotiation."

Fitzwater said the two U.S. diplomats had arrived in Vilnius, the Lithuanian capital, only Tuesday and had planned to leave on Sunday. They were given 12 hours to leave, and "they will comply," he said.

Hazelwood must pitch in on cleanup, pay $50,000

The Associated Press

ANCHORAGE, Alaska. — Former Exxon Valdez Capt. Joseph Hazelwood was sentenced Friday to help clean up Prince William Sound, was also ordered to pay $50,000 in restitution by a judge seeking to soothe outrage over the nation's worst oil spill.

Superior Court Judge Karl Johnstone, in sentencing Hazelwood to 1,000 hours of community service by cleaning beaches, said he was disappointed that the fired skipper had not publicly apologized for his role in the disaster.

"I'm sure deep down he is very shame and full," the judge said. Johnstone, however, acknowledged that Hazelwood had been advised by his lawyers to keep silent because of the many civil lawsuits he still faces.

Hazelwood's attorneys said they thought the sentence for a single misdemeanor conviction of negligence would be overturned on appeal, in part because the order pay $50,000 in restitution to the state was illegal.

The defense attorneys said Johnstone chose an arbitrary figure without measuring Hazelwood's ability to pay.

The judge also gave Hazelwood the maximum jail term of 90 days and fine of $1,000, but suspended both sentences, saying he felt prison would not deter Hazelwood.

"Imprisonment is not going to restore the environment," the judge said. "But there is community outrage and something has to be done to provide condemnation and reaffirmation."

Jacklin Seed looking for another site for its processing plant

By MARK KIND and CRAIG LINCOLN. Times-News writers

JEROME — Jacklin Seed Co. is withdrawing its request for a permit to build a lawn-seed processing plant that had been opposed by some of its neighbors south of Jerome.

The company withdrew its request on Friday even though the Jerome County commissioners had granted the special-use permit on March 16. And the company's decision could mean its processing plant, with its projected 20 jobs, may be located, in some other part of southern Idaho.

"Due to a sincere desire to remain good neighbors, we have withdrawn our request for a special-use permit," Vice President Don Jacklin said in a prepared release. "In recognition of the concerns of over 60 residents who expressed written opposition to the facility being located at the Con. Endless site, we will begin a search for a new site immediately."

"I'm shocked," said Jerome resident Karen James, who lives near the site Jacklin Seed had proposed. She and other area residents had been preparing for an unappreciated hearing on Monday.

James said she had given up on persuading the county and company to locate the plant north of the Interstate 84 in the city's industrial site. But residents wanted Jacklin Seed to put in a turning lane or widen the street in front of its proposed location, south of town on Lincoln Street.

"What we wanted now was to say, 'You need at least a turning lane, and it's your responsibility if you locate there,'" she said.

"I have no qualms about them coming in as far as the grass seed and everything, I just felt they should locate north of the interstate," Don Jacklin said.

Don Jacklin was unavailable for further comment Friday. Although the prepared release didn't specifically state where Jacklin Seed was looking for a new site, it did say the company was beginning a new search "within the Snake River Plains area."

Jerome County Commissioner Carl Montgomery he was aware of only a few protests that were filed against the plant.

James said an unannounced petition against the plant's location gathered 60 signatures.

He said the commissioners approved the permit for the company to build its $3.5 million plant with just one amendment — a 15-day appeal period for the public to protest.

The hearing Monday was to hear from county residents who had filed appeals.

But Montgomery said he had heard rumors that Jacklin Seed Co. may pull out if any protests were filed.

"It wasn't a big surprise," he said.

Snow falls across wide stretch of U.S.; some areas see record temperatures

By The Associated Press

Snow fell from the Northwest across the Plains on Friday while cold air pushed southward, starting up in Utah and Colorado, dumping a foot of snow on Montana, but temperatures hit record highs in Arizona and Connecticut.

At midday, snow was falling across north-central Oregon, south-central Washington state, the Idaho Panhandle, north-central Utah, Wyoming, Montana, northern Colorado, southern and western Nebraska, western South Dakota, northern Kansas, southwestern Iowa, northern and west-central Missouri, and west-central Illinois, the National Weather Service said.

Southern Montana suffered the worst of the storm, with Red Lodge reporting 12 inches of snow. Morning temperatures were no higher than the mid-teens. Billings had a record low of just 7 degrees and Jordan had a morning low of just 1 degree.

Northerly wind gusting to 30 mph produced a wind chill effect of 32 below zero at Dillon, Mont.

Northern Missouri got 5 inches of snow Friday, with several more inches forecast for Saturday. One traffic death was blamed on hazardous driving conditions, which also prompted officials to close some rural schools.

"We had literally hundreds of calls off the road and lots and lots of fence breakers," said Missouri highway patrol Sgt. Myron Garrett at St. Joseph.

Almost 2 inches of snow overnight and freezing temperatures created hazardous driving conditions on many roads around Spokane, Wash., and state police reported many minor accidents.

The heaviest snowfall during the six hours up to noon was 3 inches at Norfolk, Neb., and 2 inches at Cheyenne, Wyo.; Helena, Mont.; Lincoln, Neb.; and Walla Walla, Wash.

Winter-like weather was expected to force its way as far south as Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle, with gusty wind pushing temperatures 30 to 40 degrees lower than those of the past several days.

To the east, snow was scattered around the Great Lakes and in parts of Vermont and New Hampshire.

Start of the snow belt: Arizing rain extended over northwestern Oklahoma, the northern Texas Panhandle, southwestern and central Kansas, and southeastern through-east-central Colorado.

The collision of the cold air with warm air produced thunderstorms Friday over Utah and a rare tornado flipped off a storage shed roof near Vernal, in northeastern Utah, and slammed it through a bedroom wall.

"When it hit our trailer, it felt like an earthquake had hit," said Tina Harrison, whose mobile home was damaged by the twister.

"We were waiting for it to knock our trailer off its cinder blocks. It was scary."

Showers and thunderstorms also reached from north-central and south-western Oklahoma, the southern Texas Panhandle and northeastern New Mexico.

Thunderstorms produced half-inch diameters of sleet in Guthrie, Okla.

Weather was warmer east and west of the advancing cold wave. Bridgeport, Conn., hit a record high of 68 and Tucson, Ariz., hit a record high of 91.

Environmentalists to block startup at Savannah River plant

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department plans to restart a Savannah River nuclear weapons reactor this year without bringing it into compliance with the nation's main water pollution law, two environmental groups said Friday.

The Natural Resources Defense Council and the Energy Research Foundation made the allegation in a letter to Energy Secretary James D. Watkins.

The groups notified the department that they would sue if Watkins carried out his restart plan.

travel for Poles and Lithuanians across the border, the official Tass news agency said.

President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's military adviser indicated the army would seek out Lithuanian soldiers who had defected until after next week's spring break, "even if some people don't like it."

A military helicopter with a Soviet red star emblazoned on its side dumped leaflets on downtown Vilnius containing a copy of Gorbachev's directive that the republic of 3.8 million respect Soviet law.

Foreign Ministry officials said Soviet embassies would review foreigners' visa applications to travel to Lithuania, to keep out people "inclined to engage in illegal activities," Tass said. It did not elaborate.

The Soviet Union forcibly annexed Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia a half-century ago as part of an agreement with Josef Stalin and Adolf Hitler.

More than a dozen armored personnel carriers and military trucks moved into Vilnius on Thursday in what was regarded as a show of strength by the Soviet military.

"New troops and maneuvers suggest that this is a psychological war," Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis told a session of the Legislative Council parliament.

But Landsbergis told legislators he still trusted Gorbachev.

"Maybe his choices are limited, maybe there are obstacles around him," he said.

best way to do that is to get together with the freedom of choice groups and work with them."

North Junior High Registrar Marge Williams said all the students will be considered truant, but resolution of the matter will be delayed until after next week's spring break.

The protest came less than 24 hours after the state Senate sent Andrus the bill that the National Right to Life Committee drafted as a direct assault on the U.S. Supreme Court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion.

It bans abortion except in cases of nonstatutory rape reported within seven days, incest when the victim is under 18, severe fetal deformity, and a threat to the life or physical health of the woman.

If signed, the law would take effect July 1, and abortion rights groups have promised a quick court challenge.

In recent days, Andrus has vehemently resisted his longstanding opposition to abortion except in cases of rape, incest and to save the life of the woman, but he has refused to discuss the bill beyond saying he understands the arguments surrounding it. Depending on when the Legislature adjourns next week,

Andrus could have until about mid-April to act on it.

The votes in both houses were close enough to indicate there would be even if the legislative session ran long enough to allow one.

The pressure from both sides on the governor has been intensifying in the last week with hundreds of telephone calls and thousands of messages and letters flooding the office daily. Some have come from throughout the nation.

"I don't think there could be any more calls, physically," Andrus spokesman Marc Johnson said.

The junior high school students' protest began shortly after noon when they invaded the Capitol and marched to the fourth floor where the legislative galleries are allocated, chanting "Pro-choice now."

Their brief sit-in there ended after Assistant Senate Sergeant-at-Arms Peggy Christian told them the abortion issue is beyond the Legislature now. It's down to the governor's office.

After the meeting with the abortion rights senators, the students moved to the main steps of the Capitol where they sat and sang the "Star-Spangled Banner."

Jacklin Seed Co. began contracting with farmers in the Magic Valley last fall as it began a planned 20,000-acre expansion. In January, the company requested a special-use permit for land it hoped to buy from Con Paulus Chevrolet-Pontiac & GMC Trucks.

One week later, the company requested a 30-day delay in the planning and zoning hearings to launch a public relations campaign. The company said public concern over smoke from annual burning of grass fields prompted its campaign.

But Montgomery said the burning was not the issue he heard raised at planning and zoning meetings. Instead, residents south of the site were more concerned about heavy truck traffic on surrounding roadways.

"From what I've heard it's a nice industry," Montgomery said. "It's something we'd like to have in the county."

Although Jacklin Seed's plans for its plant aren't certain, the company says its agricultural plans haven't changed.

"We remain strongly committed to the same agriculture goals for the area," the company said. "As always, we will work closely with the community to create an agricultural program which is mutually beneficial, both economically and environmentally, to all of us."

Idaho House amends King holiday bill, keeps voters at bay

BOISE (AP) — Advocates of a bill designating a state holiday honoring slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. have won at least a partial victory in the Idaho House, rejecting a proposal to submit the question to voters.

The decision came Friday after the House had already agreed on an unrecorded standing vote to an amendment changing the name of the proposed holiday from Martin Luther King Jr. Day to Martin Luther King Jr. Idaho Human Rights Day.

"This, I suppose, puts a homey touch to the name of the day," said Rep. L. Ed Brown, R-Pocatello, who introduced the amendment as a way of heading off more drastic changes proposed to the bill he cosponsored on the House floor. "I think it will add a fine Idaho touch to the name."

Final House action on the Senate-passed measure will have to wait until next week and the Senate then must agree to the change. But adopting an amendment-keeping King's name in the title was about the best sponsors could have hoped for.

It amounted to a compromise solution to what had become a debate over whether it will cost Idaho more to add a 10th paid holiday or to perpetuate an image it has acquired in recent years as a haven for racists.

"I'm really pleased," said Marilyn Shuler, executive director of the Idaho Human Rights Commission. "I think they hit the bullet today and did what they came here to do."

Opposition still seemed strong Friday to removing Idaho from a list of only four states not recognizing the federal holiday for King on the third Monday in January. But House Speaker Tom Boyd, R-Genese, has indicated it is one of the few issues that must be addressed before adjournment sometime next week.

Besides Idaho, only Arizona, Montana and New Hampshire have not yet adopted state holidays corresponding with the federal designation. The Idaho Legislature made the third Monday in January a state commemorative day in 1987, and a bill creating a state holiday died in a House committee last year.

Opponents led by Republican Reps. Dean Hangerson of Coeur d'Alene and Jo Ann Wood of Rigby sidetracked this year's bill on Wednesday by winning approval of holding it for possible amendment.

On Thursday, legislators shot down an attempt to add Idaho Human Rights Day to the name and trade the holiday for Columbus Day on the list of paid state holidays before constitutional questions about Mrs. Wood's proposal to put the issue on the Nov. 6 ballot stalled the amending process.

Andrus signs tank insurance law

BOISE (AP) — Legislation to help Idaho owners of underground fuel tanks meet stringent new federal guidelines has earned the signature of Gov. Cecil Andrus.

The House measure establishes the Idaho Petroleum Clean Water Trust Fund, financed by fuel taxes. Owners of "mom-and-pop" gas stations and others complained the federal regulations going into effect until the end of the decade could put them out of business.

"This legislation is designed to assist small, primarily rural owners of underground tanks, many of whom are facing tremendous liability insurance costs," Andrus said Friday in signing the bill. "This legislation should go a long way in easing that financial burden."

Those regulations require tank owners to get a minimum $1 million in liability insurance coverage for the event fuel leaks into the ground and affects the groundwater.

The rules also require leaky tanks to be removed or fixed, and monitoring devices to be installed in some cases. State officials speculated Idaho's petroleum trade would be hurt because of travelers' perception fuel was hard to come by on rural highways.

The insurance fund will receive $1 million from taxpayers to get started. The money should be repaid within 18 months, supported by a fee imposed on fuel wholesalers when they receive their product.

Obviously, Mr. Shurtliff performed much more admirably than on Monday," Sen. Laird-Noe, R-Kimberly, said.

"But it seems to me the board is very much in need of leadership, strong leadership, and I'm not sure he's going to provide that."

Noe opposed the committee recommendation along with Republicans Roger Madsen of Boise and Jerry Hornig of Nampa, but he left open the possibility of supporting the nomination when it comes to a final vote on the floor.

Senate wants a wilderness mediator

BOISE (AP) — An attempt by the Republican legislative leadership to spur resolution of Idaho's long-running wilderness debate has won approval from the state Senate.

Despite a number of concerns about the proposal, the Senate approved the measure on Friday on a 34-6 vote, sending it to the House for final action.

It calls for hiring a private mediator to bring all the parties in the wilderness controversy together in hopes of reaching an agreement on how much more land should be preserved from development.

"Most of the parties, if not all the parties in this issue, at one time or another have said they were interested in talking this thing out," Senate Republican President Pro Tem Michael Crapo of Idaho Falls said. "If we don't do that, it's likely we'll be faced with out-of-state interests deciding this issue without Idahoans involved."

A private negotiator has been used over the last three years to settle disputes involving water quality and big game development. Crapo and House Speaker Tom Boyd of Genese proposed the wilderness scheme earlier this month now that it appears the compromise wilderness bill drafted by GOP U.S. Sen. James McClure and Democratic Gov. Cecil Andrus has died in Congress. But the Idaho Conservation League has objected to the proposal as being premature and too narrow. League officials maintain any negotiations should be delayed until after the November elections when the makeup of the congressional delegation is known.

Senate OKs Shurtliff for schools post

BOISE (AP) — After a sputtering start earlier in the week, Boise attorney M. Karl Shurtliff won endorsement from the Senate Education Committee for his appointment to the state Board of Education.

After conducting a second interview with Shurtliff Friday morning, the committee voted 7-3 to recommend that his appointment be confirmed by the full Senate.

The nomination of Gov. Cecil Andrus had run into stiff opposition during the week after what committee members of both parties agreed was a lackluster presentation by Shurtliff on Monday.

Rather than recommending that the full Senate reject the appointment, the panel agreed to give Shurtliff a second chance to explain away the impression several members had that he lacked any real commitment or interest in education.

PUC approves phone service for rural area

BOISE (AP) — The application of Rural Telephone Co. to serve the Salmon River country around the Lemhi County community of Shoup has been approved by the Idaho Public Utilities Commission.

Residents along the "River of No Return" historically have received telephone service from a single, magnifying-powered line obtained from the Forest Service and maintained as the North Fork Telephone Corp.

There are 17 customers on the line, which is connected to the Century Telephone Co. at North Fork with the assistance of an operator.

In the past, Century provided operators to connect calls to and from Shoup under contracts with AT&T and US West Communications. When those contracts expired and the companies decided to provide their own long-distance operators, Century found it uneconomical to still provide operator service.

Rural, which serves other remote areas in Idaho and Nevada, estimated initially it would serve about 40 customers on the Shoup line, with the potential of about 55 within five years. Rural estimates it would cost about $312,000 to install modern service, and $10,000 annually.

New pact will open Japanese market to U.S. supercomputers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators on Friday reported the first breakthrough in a contentious trade dispute with Japan, an agreement designed to open the Japanese market to American-made supercomputers.

Officials at the U.S. trade office said they had achieved major concessions that should boost supercomputer sales in the important Japanese government market, estimated to total about $130 million annually.

Terms of the agreement were hammered out late Thursday following a two-day bargaining session. The U.S. side had demanded that the Japanese remove various restrictions that impeded exports of U.S. computers from selling supercomputers to Japanese universities and other government agencies.

"We believe the results reached last night, when finalized, should give us full and effective access" to the Japanese government market, said U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills.

The accord reached on supercomputers marked the first resolution of a variety of trade disputes straining relations between the two economic giants. It gave U.S. officials hope that progress will be made in other areas in coming weeks.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady was in Los Angeles on Friday for talks with Japanese Finance Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto, who reportedly wanted to brief the Bush administration on Japanese efforts to lessen trade tensions between the two countries.

The discussions were a followup to a hastily arranged summit meeting earlier this month between President Bush and Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu.

Bush pressed the Japanese government to do more to open their markets to U.S. products as a way of reducing America's $49 billion trade deficit with Japan, accounting for almost half of the U.S. deficit.

The Japanese are facing a June 19 deadline to show a willingness to open their markets or face the prospect that the administration will retaliate by raising tariffs on Japanese products sold in America.

The talks on specific industries are being conducted under a section of the 1988 trade law known as Super 301. The administration also is conducting separate discussions aimed at eliminating broader structural impediments to trade that make it difficult for U.S. firms to get their products to Japan.

Government asked to bar ads equating pork with fish, chicken

WASHINGTON (AP) — The pork people say their products are just as nutritious as chicken, turkey and fish, but a private group says that's hogwash and is asking the government to do something about it.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest says an advertising campaign by the National Pork Producers Council — it touts pork as "the other white meat" — is "deceptive and dangerously misleading."

"The pork industry is trying to dupe consumers into thinking that pork is as healthy as chicken, turkey and fish," said Bruce Silverglade, CSPI legal director.

His group, which also has criticized producers and sellers of other foods on nutrition issues, filed a petition Friday asking the Federal Trade Commission to stop the pork council's claims and require advertising corrections.

But industry representatives say there's no problem to clean up.

"We're confident that our advertising is accurate and can be backed up by substantial scientific evidence," said Barry Pfouts, director of marketing for the council.

"All we have said all along is that our products are nutritionally comparable to other accepted white meats," Pfouts added in defending the ad campaign.

The center says the industry has gone too far in claims that pork products are "low in cholesterol," "low in calories" and "low in fat."

"Government data show that almost all cuts of pork are consistently higher in fat, saturated fat and calories," said Silverglade.

But Mike Simpson, executive vice president of the Pork Board, said current nutritional assessments of pork are based on decade-old data that don't take into account recent research and improvements in breeding.

Newer information does indicate the fat content in pork is getting smaller, said Ruth Mathews, who heads the Agriculture Department's nutrient data research division.

Tribe settles dispute for $162 million

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — An Indian tribe gives final approval Saturday to the second-largest native land settlement in U.S. history, ceding claims to 20,000 acres of Tacoma's industrial heart in exchange for jobs and education for its people.

Tribe officials will sign documents giving up their claims to urban and industrial lands that were once their reservation, from Tacoma's harbor to the city of Puyallup (pronounced pew-al-up).

In return, the Puyallup tribe will receive a $162 million package that includes just 900 acres of land, up to $5,000 cash to each of the tribe's 11,500 members, and trusts that promise a future of jobs, education and security.

"For years, we have been told we owned the land, but it was of no use to us," said tribal manager Frank Wright Jr. "Now we have parcels of land in our own backyards and the money to develop them. This agreement is for our children."

Not every member of the Puyallup tribe is pleased with the settlement. "I think these non-Indian people got away very, very cheap and we are the ones who are going to pay for it," said Debbie Joseph.

Cristina Martinez, who voted against the settlement, said the Port of Tacoma, built on claimed lands, entitled tribal members to $500,000 each. But he said he could see benefits for fisheries, housing and other tribal programs.

Even those Puyallups who voted in 1988 to approve the settlement are not fully satisfied. Some maintained the claims should have gone to court for a full airing and the hope the tribe could regain its lands.

Alcoholism, poverty and unemployment that have kept the American Indian legacy continues to follow many Puyallups. The tribe's unemployment rate is 60 percent.

Leo Whiteford, program manager of the tribe's treatment center, said the urban tribe has been affected by crack cocaine and heroin, as well as alcohol.

He said the $20,000 one-time payment is a potential problem, particularly to those with drug and alcohol problems. "That's a huge amount," he said. "A lot of people have not had that much before at one time."

Bush's disgust with broccoli not like most

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is out of the mainstream when it comes to broccoli. People love broccoli, and government statistics prove it.

"We called it the vegetable of the 80s," said Agriculture Department economist Gary Luecier.

He said broccoli consumption more than doubled in the United States between 1980 and 1988, going from an annual average of 3 pounds per person to 6.8 pounds.

Back in 1970, Americans on average were eating only 1 1/2 pounds of the vegetable each year.

Both fresh and frozen versions move quickly off the supermarket shelves, although most people prefer it fresh, according to statistics.

Luecier said health concerns played a major role in the big jump.

Broccoli is high in vitamin C and has a substantial amount of Vitamin A, says a pamphlet from the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association.

Bush's distaste for the food was revealed last week when he banned it from Air Force One's galley.

A flour bomb explodes as police face protesters in Amsterdam

Dutch protesters throw paint bombs at American consulate

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Demonstrators protesting the United States' "interventionist conduct" in Central American hurled paint bombs at the U.S. Consulate on Friday, and two people were arrested, police said.

One policeman was slightly injured in scuffles that broke out during the incident. Police spokesman Klaas Wiltzing said about 200 people took part in the protest.

He said one or two paint bombs hit the consulate building near Amsterdam's famous Rijksmuseum.

A spokesman for the demonstrators said the protest was aimed at recent U.S. interventionist conduct in Nicaragua, Panama and an imminent action in El Salvador.

The spokesman was referring to U.S. government support for the anti-Sandinista forces in Nicaragua and the U.S. invasion of Panama in December.

In El Salvador, the United States backs the government in its civil war with leftist insurgents.

The spokesman did not elaborate on his claim of "imminent action" in that country.

Thatcher's party keeps policies despite loss

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Friday she will press on with unpopular anti-inflationary policies despite her Conservative Party's most stunning by-election defeat in 50 years.

"We are not a fair-weather party. We are not for trimming and turning," Mrs. Thatcher said in a letter to party chairman Kenneth Baker after Thursday's upset. The letter was released by the party headquarters.

The opposition Labor Party scored a landslide victory in the previous Tory stronghold of Mid-Staffordshire in central England. Labor leaders declared that 11 years after being ousted by Mrs. Thatcher they are on course to return to power.

In Mid-Staffordshire, Labor candidate Sylvia Lical, a social worker, took 49 percent of the vote. The Conservatives' Charles Prior got 33 percent while other parties took the rest of the votes.

The one-seat loss scarcely dented Mrs. Thatcher's control of the 650-member House of Commons, where she has an overall 100-seat majority. But the by-election roused new uncertainties about her political future.

Recent straw polls have indicated a significant minority of the Tory members of the House of Commons who elect the party leader each or less.

Her party and personal ratings are slumping largely because of soaring home loan rates and a new local tax, which will replace property taxes starting April 1, and increase what many Britons pay the government.

"The government has got to be a lot more sensitive ... there have got to be changes in the community charge," said Tory legislator John Lee in a radio interview.

Lee's north England district, Pendle, is among 76 highly vulnerable Tory constituencies held by majorities of few thousand votes.

Contras set conditions to demobilize

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Nicaraguan rebels set their conditions for disbanding Friday, including simultaneous demobilization of the Sandinista army, an internationally supervised cease-fire and the right for returning Contras to reclaim confiscated property.

The U.S.-backed guerrillas known as Contras proposed the 13 conditions to Nicaraguan Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo and representatives of President-elect Violeta Barrios de Chamorro, who came here to persuade the rebels to disband before the April 25 inauguration.

An estimated 5,000 of the 12,000 rebels are in Nicaragua and the rest in camps on the Honduran side of the border.

Haitian terror continues with 17 dead, 20 injured

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Gunmen and soldiers shot to death 14 members of civilian self-defense groups and angry mobs captured and killed three thugs in a night of terror in Haiti, radio stations said Friday.

Sporadic gunfire was heard in many parts of the capital during the night. The state hospital said it treated at least 20 people for gunshot and machete wounds.

Since Sunday, at least 40 people have been killed in nightly shootings widely blamed on gangsters and those still loyal to ousted leaders Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril and Jean-Claude Duvalier.

Until late Thursday, soldiers had tolerated the newly formed civilian defense groups, known as "vigilance brigades."

The Unity Assembly, a coalition of civic and political leaders, has attributed the violence to rightist thugs angered by last week's shift in power from the military to civilians.

After this night of intimidation, the army-high command owes the people an explanation, center-leftist politician Dejean Belizaire, a member of the coalition, told The Associated Press.

The coalition, which led protests that caused Avril's downfall March 10, urged residents to form the "vigilance brigades" due to the near absence of police protection.

Before dawn, soldiers attacked a neighborhood self-defense group in the capital's St. Joseph slum, killing three. Shortly after midnight in separate attacks, soldiers killed two other self-defense group members.

Trucks transport food to Ethiopians

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A convoy of trucks carried 110 tons of emergency food Friday to a war zone in the northern part of Ethiopia, but a damaged bridge prevented it from carrying all its planned load.

The bridge was not strong enough to handle trucks with trailers attached, so each truck carried just 10 tons of food instead of the 22 tons that would have been possible with trailers, said Yohannes Abraham. Abraham is an official of the Catholic Relief Services in Ethiopia. Eleven trucks made the 74-mile journey from the provincial capital of Dessie over a mountainous road to Kobo. Another convoy of 11 trucks covered the same route Monday in what relief officials said was a trial run. Its drivers reported the damaged bridge.

Judge sets aside Guam abortion law

AGANA, Guam (AP) — A federal judge Friday issued a temporary restraining order allowing women in this U.S. territory to seek abortions despite a law banning the procedure.

The order resulted from a lawsuit filed by Janet Benshoof, director of the American Civil Liberties Union Reproductive Freedom Project. Rachael Pine, staff attorney for the project, said from New York. Pine provided The Associated Press a copy of U.S. District Judge Alex R. Munson's order.

Munson scheduled a hearing for Monday at which he will decide whether to issue a preliminary injunction against enforcement of the law until the lawsuit is heard in court, according to Pine. The law prohibits abortions except when a pregnancy endangers the life of the mother.

Mongolian Communists set elections

ULAN BATOR, Mongolia (AP) — Mongolia's Communist legislators formally abolished their party's guaranteed monopoly on power Friday and approved of elections with more than one candidate.

However, the election law was drafted before Mongolia's recent pro-democracy protests and does not mention a role for opposition parties, officials said.

The 370-seat Hural, Mongolia's parliament, voted 324-10 in favor of amending two sections of the constitution that say the ruling Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party is the leading force in society and the state. The other deputies abstained.

Iacocca gets 'rapped' on visit to alternative school in Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Chairman Lee Iacocca went to school, he wanted to groove on that golden rule.

Got to mopping with the gang And the Rich Academy guys gave him some slang:

"He left Ford Motor Company with a plan on the double. Became Chrysler's CEO, found out they were in trouble. He designed a new automobile, they called the 'K'."

TRUMP

His new car and charming wit surely saved the day.

Student Chris Longino got in the entrepreneurial way:

"I'm going to keep this (song). I might make some money off this one day."

Translated: The Chrysler Corp. chairman visited the 9-year-old alternative school on Thursday. During his visit, Iacocca and fellow student Aaron Bolton performed their "Iacocca Rap."

ordered the ex-manager, Frank Weber, to pay the singer $2 million that Joel contended was stolen from him. Lehner also said Joel was entitled to go to trial on another set of claims against Weber.

Joel contends that Weber took $30 million from him in unauthorized management commissions, investments in companies Weber controlled and other alleged embezzlements.

Joel also is seeking $60 million in punitive damages from Weber, according to Joel's lawyer, Leonard Marks.

In the written opinion Thursday, Lehner dismissed Weber's claim that he had an oral agreement to pay $2 million back to Joel.

Marks said he contacted Joel in London and told the singer of the judge's decision.

Donald could subject me and the children to such shameful behavior," Mrs. Trump said, according to gossip columnist Liz Smith's account in the Daily News.

Ms. Maples moved into the building in December, Smith said, and has evaded the past 5½ weeks of intensive media scrutiny by using a side entrance and taking the service elevator directly to her 63rd-floor apartment.

After Trump's separation from his wife became public in February, Trump moved in across the hall from Ms. Maples, Smith said.

It was reported Thursday that Trump was "dropping" Ms. Maples. But Smith called this a ruse designed to "soften up" Mrs. Trump and prevent her from making legal moves that might embarrass the billionaire tycoon before he goes before the New Jersey Casino Control Commission on Thursday.

'The Wall' brings teens to terms with death

BOSTON (AP) — The kids go to Chez Vous to roller skate and gossip, to share sodas and stories.

And for a safe haven from the gunfire of the streets.

Now they also come to weep at "The Wall," a stark memorial inscribed with the names of 65 teenagers who have died in recent years on Boston's streets.

"They come over and see the names of friends and relatives," said Dorcas Dunham, who with her husband runs the inner-city roller skating rink. "They're staring to see the reality and they're crying out."

"They're seeing death in a black-and-white list that grows longer every day, a list that includes the names of gang members gunned down by their rivals and innocent kids caught in the crossfire.

The war has claimed 28 lives in Boston already this year. If the pace continues, The Wall will soon be filled. No one wants to start another.

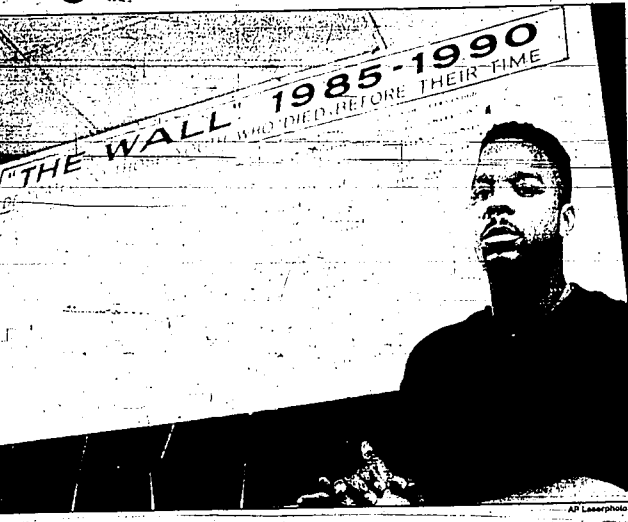

The memorial hangs in a corner at the 50-year-old rink in the city's Dorchester section. It's housed behind a reinforced door and around the corner from one of the city's busiest police precincts. The teenage skaters are all frisked for weapons and agree to play by the rules: no gun, no smoking, no fighting, no profanity.

The Rev. Bruce Wall, a minister and youth counselor, tacked the names of four more victims to the list this past Saturday afternoon.

"When the kids came in Saturday night, they looked 8 feet up and noticed the additions.

"They come in and go for their skates and start looking for their friends," said Wall, who is also juvenile court clerk magistrate. "Then they stop and stare ... and stare."

"Faces go with these names. It's like you can almost see the kids remembering them, their classmates and friends," said John Dunham, who with his wife keeps tabs on as many as 350 teen-agers on a busy night at the rink.

John Dunham (shown) and wife Dorcas created this memorial to 65 teenagers who died violently in Boston.

"They're overwhelmed and then they seem, like, broken with despair," said Dunham. "They're tired of seeing friends' faces on the evening news and hearing 'that another one bit the dust,' he said."

Dunham said he sees it in the way the kids' shoulders slump as they read the words scrawled across the memorial: "Dedicated To Those Youth Who Died Before Their Time."

"Sometimes he stands back a few feet and just watches the emotions and tears wash over the teen-agers' faces."

"Some of them don't even come to skate anymore. They just come to look at The Wall," Dunham said. "They're learning about respecting life ... and that there are no second chances."

Audrey Moore knows there are no second chances. Her 11-year-old sister, Tiffany, is on the list. Tiffany was shot down by a stray bullet one summer day two years ago as she sat on a mailbox in her neighborhood.

Dunham said he thinks the message is getting through. He watches the kids leave the rink at night, cutting a wide path around the groups that hang outside looking for trouble after closing.

He has seen fights start erupting inside the rink and has seen them cut short when a kid stands up and points toward The Wall.

"They say, 'Don't you all see that? Look at all our friends — dead,' and then things get real quiet," he said. "We're planting a seed of hope here."

That's what it's all about, activists said. The memorial is about dealing with death and staking a claim to life. It's one piece of a bigger effort to turn things around in these tired communities, where people sleep on their floors to stay out of the line of fire at night.

The effort includes an anti-drug hotline, crime watches and classes on civil rights for the youngsters.

Pryor stable after heart attack

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — Comedian Richard Pryor was in good spirits and making jokes about his plight Friday after being hospitalized following a minor heart attack, his agent said.

Pryor, 49, was listed in stable condition at Westley Hospital, hospital spokeswoman Janice Wyatt said.

"Obviously, something like this tempers anyone," his agent, Guy McElwaine, told Australian Associated Press.

But he's in good spirits and making a few jokes.

"He said to me: now you'll see what I'll go through to create new material."

Pryor was admitted to the hospital three days ago suffering from chest pain and was later diagnosed as having suffered a minor heart attack, Wyatt said.

She did not say when he would be released, but McElwaine said he expected Pryor to be out by early next week.

AAP said that before being admitted to the hospital, the comedian had been staying at the plush Sanctuary Cove resort, near the famed Gold Coast strip in northeastern Queensland state.

McElwaine, Pryor's agent for 15 years, denied reports the comedian collapsed on a golf course.

Andrus next to get school accounting bill

BOISE — A bill requiring Idaho school districts to adhere to stricter accounting practices with accounts fueled by money collected at sporting events, club fundraisers and school vending machines is on its way to Gov. Cecil Andrus.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Laird Noh, R-Kimberly, passed the House Friday 53-21. The measure passed the Senate earlier this month.

During Senate debate, Noh said certified public accountants studying Idaho school activity accounts found some of these accounts topped $700,000 in the state's larger districts.

Special education proposal dies in House committee

BOISE — A bill requiring Idaho school districts to spend at least 10 percent of the money they receive from the state on special education died in the House Education Committee Friday.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Doug Jones, R-Filer, said the 10 percent requirement would have simplified funding for special education programs and held school districts more accountable for their spending.

Idaho law does not require school districts to spend a certain amount of money on special education.

Districts receive state money for special ed through three separate channels. Under the current plan, school districts are able to charge parts of the heating and lighting bills; administration and janitorial services to special ed accounts.

A local attorney has taken the Twin Falls School District to task recently for failing to spend all the money generated by special education students under the current state funding formula last year.

Amended railcar memorial suffers defeat in House

BOISE — A memorial petitioning the Interstate Commerce Commission to investigate how the Union Pacific Railroad Co. allocates railcars to grain shippers has died in the Idaho House.

Members voted 18-65 late last week against the measure. Among the 12-member Magic Valley delegation, only Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls; Rep. Mack Neibaur, R-Paul, and Rep. Gary Robbins, D-Twin Falls, voted in favor of the memorial, which was passed by the Senate earlier as a response to recent railcar shortages.

An original memorial, proposed by Sen. John Peavey, D-Carey, was amended in the Senate Agriculture Affairs Committee to exclude a request for the ICC to look into the railroad company's pricing structure and for Congress to revisit its decision to deregulate the railroads.

Negotiation training session planned at Wendell school

WENDELL — Teachers, administrators and school board members are invited to attend the second joint negotiation training session at 7:30 Monday at Wendell Elementary School's cafeteria.

Fifth District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt Jr. will represent the essential negotiator in his monthly file on the Professional Negotiating Act and good faith standard.

For more information, call 734-5015.

Blaine County plans hearing on Saylor Creek expansion

HAILEY — Blaine County residents aren't going to let the Air Force tell them where to hold a hearing on the Saylor Creek Bombing Range expansion.

City and county governments have scheduled a hearing from 6-10 p.m. Wednesday at the Wood River High School in Hailey. They plan to record all testimony and enter it into the Air Force's official record on the environmental impact statement for the bombing range expansion.

The Air Force refused to schedule a hearing in Blaine County, according to the alliance.

For more information, call the Snake River Alliance at 726-7271 or the Idaho Conservation League at 726-7485.

Dual donors bolster fund for Kimberly scholarships

KIMBERLY — Two local donors recently gave Kimberly High School $386,728 for a trust fund to be used for college scholarships.

Frank Walton and his sister Clara Walton, both of Ketchikan, donated the fund for Kimberly High School seniors. The money was put into a trust account and only the interest — about $5,000 each year — will go for the scholarships.

Applications for the 1989-90 scholarships, now available, are due April 30.

Measles in Minidoka

Although immunizations have been increasing, school district reports 3 cases

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Three cases of measles have been reported in Minidoka County despite school officials' efforts to beef up their immunization percentages.

One child is in the hospital, and the unvaccinated school where all three children are students will be closing its doors to unimmunized children as of Monday.

"We're recommending to people to look at their records and see if they have had a measles vaccine," said Cheryl Becker, an epidemiologist with the South Central District Health Department.

"We have no idea where this 'came from,'" Becker said. "And that's always bad

How to spot the measles

- Runny nose
- Cough
- Eyes sensitive to light
- Red blotches soon appear, beginning usually around the hairline and or on the face. Unlike chicken pox, they are not raised, do not itch or develop scabs.
- High fever, usually exceeding 101 degrees
- General malaise

for us because there could be more cases we aren't aware of. It shouldn't just pop up in the middle of the town like this."

Parents should call their physician or the health department if their children have not been vaccinated.

Parents who suspect their children may have measles should also call. Becker urges parents not to take a child to a doctor's office or the health district without prior warning, because others in the waiting room could then catch the disease.

The unnamed Minidoka County school will exclude about 30 students who have not yet shown proof of immunization, Becker said. The students will have to stay at home until the disease has run its course and no longer poses a threat to those children.

Those children don't necessarily have to become immunized. Under Idaho law, parents may receive immunization waivers for their children for a number of reasons, Becker said. The closed doors are in no way meant to be a punishment for those children.

"Obviously those children are susceptible," she said. "We want to protect them."

Keeping unimmunized children from contacting the highly contagious disease will also prevent the three cases from becoming an epidemic, Becker said.

Minidoka County schools did a good job of enforcing immunizations this year, Becker said, or this outbreak could have become an epidemic. The district brought its immunization level up to 93 percent.

State tries to boost Centennial visitation

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Idaho Department of Commerce wants to enlist the help of about 1 million people to persuade tourists to visit during the state's Centennial year.

Starting Monday, the Commerce Department, with the help of several business sponsors, is holding a sweepstakes. They hope Idahoans can invite all their friends and family to the state to celebrate the centennial.

Idaho residents can enter by picking up a postcard, with detachable coupons, at sponsoring businesses.

When the Idahoans mails the postcard to an out-of-state friend or family member, he can fill out a detachable coupon and mail it to the department. The coupon has spaces for his name and the name of the friend or relative he sent the card to.

On May 16, the department will hold a drawing, and the winners get a week's vacation at Elk Horn Resort with access to the resort's facilities. During that week, the winners can go on a guided rail trip and a fly-fishing outing, soar over Bald Mountain in a glider and, if they're ambitious, take a half-day guided mountain bike trip.

The winners also get a free rental car and $500 in spending money.

Both the sender and the recipient of the postcard win the prizes.

The department will mail a centennial-promotion package to all the friends and family who got postcards.

Such a program can be the most effective tourist promotion the state can organize, Carl Wilgus of the Commerce Department said Friday at a press conference.

Nearly 50 percent of all vacations come from the decision to visit friends or family, Wilgus said.

The program is sponsored in part by the Idaho State Broadcasters Association, the Idaho Centennial Commission and the Idaho Travel Council. The postcards will be available at West One Bank branches, McDonald's Restaurants, ShopKp stores, Elk Horn Resort and other sponsors.

Requiem for a reptile

Jerome High School students carry boa constrictor Clyde in a makeshift coffin to his grave on the east side of the campus.

Elderly boa Clyde is buried

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

JEROME — Clyde stopped eating around Thanksgiving. And after months of being fed, he finally died Thursday morning.

During a special service Friday, Jerome High School students and teachers paid their last respects to their 9-foot-long friend — a boa constrictor who may hold the all-time record as the oldest such snake.

"A lot of people are going to take this as a joke," said Dick Jordan, the Jerome biology teacher who purchased Clyde in 1968. "But I think all life should be respected, even the 'kreepy crawlies.'"

Jordan estimated Clyde was about 25 years old and said the classroom snake probably just died of old age.

Clyde was handled by thousands of Magic Valley kids during his lifetime, Jordan said. And he made a lot of people think differently about snakes.

"Kids have to hold a snake to get over their fear," Jordan said.

No one shed a tear at Clyde's funeral, but all the kids wanted their chance to throw a shovelful of dirt over the shallow grave east of the high school.

Jordan said he and his students thought Clyde might be most comfortable buried in a carpet tube, but they opted for an insect display box instead, and looped him inside three times.

Candidate McDevitt speaks in Burley

By DONNA SCHORZMAN
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — "A high tax rate is the 'greatest illness' facing the United States," Congressional candidate Sean McDevitt said in Burley Friday.

"I have some real concrete solutions," McDevitt said. "First we've got to stop the Congress spending. We've got to enact a law that requires Congress not to spend more than they take in."

He said that the Gramm-Rudman, competing spending cuts, didn't work, but that in principle it can be done. "For an example, I suggest you look to Boise," he said. "It can work and we need to work it on a national level."

The 26-year-old Republican candidate is running for Idaho's Second Congressional District seat. Incumbent, Democrat Richard Stallings, has said he'll seek another term.

McDevitt, a Poocatello native, has said he would oppose any tax cuts.

He said during a speech to the Burley Lion's Club that savings accounts should not be taxed, which would encourage business and personal savings.

The Japanese save 25 percent of their income, while Americans on the average save only 3 percent. "We need to get out of this credit society," he said.

He also would like to raise the individual deduction to $5,000 from $2,000, he said, to "affect the working man."

"Idahoans with money in their pockets

can solve their own problems better than those people in Washington," McDevitt said.

McDevitt talked about his experiences as a U.S. Army captain in a special unit during the recent invasion into Panama.

He spent about 45 days in Georgia planning the operation and the training in four different states. "In the end, the president decided we weren't going and they sent us home," he said. "I had been home for twenty minutes and I got a call. Eighteen hours later I was on the plane heading for Panama."

Contrary to some rumors, McDevitt said that Panama was not tipped off about their arrival. "They knew 30 seconds before we hit that we were coming," he said.

He also talked about his experiences when his unit hit deposed dictator Manuel Noriega's beach house. "This guy was really in love with himself," McDevitt said. "There were multiple pictures of him."

Land exchange for expansion of Moritz Hospital won't fly

By ROBERT DOYLE
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — A land trade to enable the city-owned Moritz Community Hospital to expand its overcrowded facilities has reached a dead end.

New Sun Valley City Councilman Hughes Brown, who also sits on the Moritz Community Hospital Board, told Mayor Ruth Lieder and the City Council Thursday that his attempts to arrange a land exchange with the Sun Valley Co. appeared to be going nowhere.

The hospital currently sits on a 3-acre site adjacent to the Sun Valley Inn. The hospital wants to exchange those acres with Sun Valley Co. for 10 acres the company owns in the City of Sun Valley.

Brown said he has been trying for 14 months to arrange a meeting with Sun Valley owner Earl Holding through company General Manager Wally Huffman.

Huffman, who attended the meeting, said Holding "chose not to open these discus-

Jerome County Clerk Watts intends to run for re-election

By H. K. WEIXEL
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — County Clerk Cheryl Watts will seek re-election to the post on the Republican ticket.

Watts, an 18-year veteran in Jerome county government, said her experience is an asset.

"I know the functions of the county government system very well, having worked my way up through the ranks," she said.

The county clerk position serves primarily as the clerk of the district court, auditor and recorder. The position is also clerk for the county commissioners, chief election officer and budget officer.

The clerk's office has 10 employees who handle such matters as child support, marriage licenses, divorce decrees, auditing and recording.

"At sometime or other everybody comes to the clerk's office for something," Watts said.

She has been county clerk for eight years, following 10 years as deputy clerk and other positions in the clerk and prosecutor's offices.

During her two terms as county clerk, Watts said she's helped eliminate the office costs debt. She has kept costs down despite an increased court workload that required hiring another employee, she said.

Watts received the Distinguished Service Award from the judges of the 5th District Court and serves on an interim committee of clerks across the state studying how to improve services to the court system.

A life-long resident of Jerome, Watts said she wants to continue in the office and improve its ability to serve the public.

Watts is running on the Republican ticket against Lynn Wisner from Eden.

Members voted 18-65 late last week against the measure. Among the 12-member Magic Valley delegation, only Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls, Rep. Mike Neibaur, R-Paul, and Rep. Gary Robbins, D-Twin Falls, voted in favor of the memorial, which was passed by the Senate earlier as a response to recent railcar shortages.

An original memorial, proposed by Sen. John Peavay, D-Carey, was amended in the Senate Agriculture Affairs Committee to exclude a request for the ICC to look into the railroad company's pricing structure and for Congress to revisit its decision to deregulate the railroads.

HAILEY - Blaine County residents aren't going to let the Air Force tell them where to hold a hearing on the Saylor Creek Bombing Range expansion.

City and county governments have scheduled a hearing from 6-10 p.m. Wednesday at the Wood River High School in Hailey. They plan to record all testimony and enter it into the Air Force's official record on the environmental impact statement for the bombing-range expansion.

The Air Force refused to schedule a hearing in Blaine County, according to the alliance.

Measles in Minidoka

Although immunizations have been increasing, school district reports 3 cases

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

RUPERT - Three cases of measles have been reported in Minidoka County despite school officials' efforts to beef up their immunization percentage.

One child is in the hospital, and the unnamed school where all three children are students will be closing its doors to unimmunized children as of Monday.

"We're recommending to people to look at their records and see if they have had a measles vaccine," said Cheryl Becker, an epidemiologist with the South Central District Health Department.

"We have no idea where this came from," Becker said. "And that's always bad

How to spot the measles

- Runny nose
- Cough
- Eyes sensitive to light
- Red blotches soon appear, beginning usually around the hairline and on the face. Unlike chicken pox, they are not raised, do not itch or develop scabs.
- High fever, usually exceeding 101 degrees
- General malaise

for us because there could be more cases we aren't aware of. It shouldn't just pop up in the middle of the town like this." Parents should call their physician or the health department if their children have not been vaccinated.

"Parents who suspect their children may have measles should also call. Becker urges parents not to take a child to a doctor's office or the health district without prior warning, because others in the waiting room could then catch the disease."

The unnamed Minidoka County school will exclude about 30 students who have not yet shown proof of immunization, Becker said. The students will have to stay at home until the disease has run its course and no longer poses a threat to those children.

"Those children don't necessarily have to become immunized. Under Idaho law, parents may receive immunization waivers for their children for a number of reasons, Becker said. The closed doors are in no way meant to be a punishment for those children.

"Obviously, these children are susceptible," she said. "We want to protect them."

Keeping unimmunized children from contracting the highly contagious disease will also prevent the three cases from becoming an epidemic, Becker said.

Minidoka County schools did a good job of enforcing immunizations this year, Becker said, or this outbreak could have become an epidemic. The district brought its immunization level up to 93 percent.

State tries to boost Centennial visitation

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS - The Idaho Department of Commerce wants to enlist the help of about 1 million people to persuade tourists to visit during the state's Centennial year.

Starting Monday, the Commerce Department, with the help of several business sponsors, is holding a sweepstakes. They hope Idahoans can invite all their friends and family to the state to celebrate the centennial.

Idaho residents can enter by picking up a postcard, with detachable coupons, at sponsoring businesses.

When the Idahoans mails the postcard to an out-of-state friend or family member, he can fill out a detachable coupon and mail it to the department. The coupon has spaces for his name and the name of the friend or relative he sent the card to.

On May 16, the department will hold a drawing, and the winners get a week's vacation at Elkhorn Resort with access to the resort's facilities. During that week, the winners can go on a guided raft trip and a fly-fishing outing, soar over Bald Mountain in a glider and, if they're ambitious, take a half-day guided mountain bike trip.

The winners also get a free rental car and $500 in spending money.

Both the sender and the recipient of the postcard win the prizes.

The department will mail a centennial-promotion package to all the friends and family who get postcards.

Such a program can be the most effective tourist promotion the state can organize, Carl Wilgus of the Commerce Department said Friday at a press conference.

"Nearly 50 percent of all vacations come from the decision to visit friends or family," Wilgus said. The program is sponsored in part by the Idaho State Broadcasters Association, the Idaho Central Commission and the Idaho Travel Council. The postcards will be available at West One Bank branches, McDonald's Restaurants, ShopKo stores, Elkhorn Resort and other sponsors.

Jerome High School students carry boa constrictor Clyde in a makeshift coffin to his grave on the east side of the campus.

Elderly boa Clyde is buried

JEROME - Clyde stopped eating around Thanksgiving. And after months of being forced, he finally died Thursday morning.

During a special service Friday, Jerome High School students and teachers paid their last respects to their 9-foot-long friend - a boa constrictor who may hold the all-time record as the oldest such snake.

"A lot of people are going to take this as a joke," said Dick Jordan, the Jerome biology teacher who purchased Clyde in 1968. "But I think all life should be respected, even the creepy crawlies."

Jordan estimated Clyde was about 25 years old and said the classroom snake probably just died of old age.

Clyde was handled by thousands of Magic Valley kids during his lifetime, Jordan said. "And he made a lot of people think differently about snakes."

"Kids have to hold a snake to get over their fear," Jordan said.

No one shed a tear at Clyde's funeral, but all the kids wanted their chance to throw a shovelful of dirt over the shallow grave east of the high school.

Jordan said he and his students thought Clyde might be most comfortable buried in a carpet tube, but they opted for an insect display box instead, and jumped him inside three times.

Candidate McDevitt speaks in Burley

By DONNA SCHORZMAN
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT - A high tax rate is the "greatest illness" facing the United States, Congressional candidate Sean McDevitt said in Burley Friday.

"I have some real concrete solutions," McDevitt said. "First we've got to stop the Congress spending. We've got to enact a law that requires Congress not to spend more than they take in."

He said that the Gramm-Rudman, compelling spending cuts, didn't work, but that in principle it can be done. "For an example, I suggest you look to Boise," he said. "It can work and we need to work it on a national level."

The 26-year-old Republican candidate is running for Idaho's Second Congressional District seat. Incumbent, Democrat Richard Stallings, has said he'll seek another term.

McDevitt, a Pocatello native, has said he would oppose any tax cuts. He said during a speech to the Burley Lion's Club that savings accounts should not be taxed, which would encourage business and personal savings.

The Japanese save 25 percent of their income, while Americans on the average save only 3 percent. "We need to get out of this credit society," he said.

He also would like to raise the individual deduction to $5,000 from $2,000 - the way, he said, to "affect the working man."

"Idahoans with money in their pockets

can solve their own problems better than those people in Washington," McDevitt said. McDevitt talked about his experiences as a U.S. Army captain in a special unit during the recent invasion into Panama.

He spent about 45 days in Georgia planning the operation and the training in four different states. "In the end the president decided we weren't going and they sent us home," he said. "I had been in the 'lively' states and I got a call. Eighteen hours later I was on the plane heading for Panama."

Contrary to some rumors, McDevitt said that Panama was not tipped off about their arrival. "They knew 30 seconds before we hit that we were coming," he said.

He also talked about his experiences when his unit hit deposed dictator Manuel Noriega's beach house. "This guy was really in love with himself," McDevitt said. "There were multiple pictures of him."

Land exchange for expansion of Moritz Hospital won't fly

By ROBERT DOYLE
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY - A land trade to enable the city-owned Moritz Community Hospital to expand its overcrowded facilities has reached a dead end.

New Sun Valley City Councilman Hughes Brown, who also sits on the Moritz Community Hospital Board, told Mayor Ruth Lieder and the City Council Thursday that his attempts to arrange a land exchange with the Sun Valley Co. appeared to be going nowhere. The hospital currently sits on a 3-acre site adjacent to the Sun Valley Inn. The hospital wants to exchange those acres with Sun Valley Co. for 10 acres the company owns in the City of Sun Valley.

Brown said that he has been trying for 14 months to arrange a meeting with Sun Valley owner Earl Holding through company General Manager Wally Huffman. Huffman, who attended the meeting, said Holding "chose not to open these discus-

Jerome County Clerk Watts intends to run for re-election

By H. R. WEIXEL
Times-News correspondent

JEROME - County Clerk Cheryl Watts will seek re-election to the post on the Republican ticket.

Watts, an 18-year veteran in Jerome county government, said her experience is an asset.

"I know the functions of the county government system very well, having worked my way up through the ranks," she said.

The county clerk position serves primarily as the clerk of the district court, auditor and recorder. The position is also clerk for the county commissioners, chief election officer and budget officer.

The clerk's office has 10 employees who handle such matters as child support, marriage licenses, divorce decrees, auditing and recording.

"At sometime or other everybody comes to the clerk's office for something," Watts said.

She has been county clerk for eight years, following 10 years as deputy clerk and other positions in the clerk and prosecutor's offices.

During her two terms as county clerk, Watts said she's helped eliminate the office costs debt. She has kept costs down despite an increased court workload that required hiring another employee, she said.

Watts received the Distinguished Service Award from the judges of the 5th District Court and serves on an interim committee of clerk's across the state studying how to improve services to the court system.

A life-long resident of Jerome, Watts said she wants to continue in the office and improve its ability to serve the public.

Watts is running on the Republican ticket against Lynn Wiser from Eden.

Minidoka board approves spring break after conducting poll

By BARBARA WARD
Times-News Correspondent

RUPERT—Students will have their usual spring break next year. The Minidoka School Board voted 3-1 recently to set aside March 25-29, 1991, as spring break.

School children before spring choices begin. Mrs. Fisher, fiscal affairs director for the district, said those responding to the poll had four choices: Feb. 25-March 1, March 25-29, a split spring break with a couple of days off during each of the two weeks or and an alternative of the respondent's choice.

DOE warns of potential for explosion at Hanford reservation

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP)—Hydrogen gas building up in nuclear waste storage tanks at the Hanford nuclear reservation could explode, possibly spreading radioactivity into the atmosphere, the U.S. Department of Energy warned Friday.

The DOE storage building has been spotted in 20 storage tanks at Hanford and is the result of the decomposition of organic wastes introduced into the tanks in the 1970s, said Hanford manager Mike Lawrence.

Lawrence insisted Friday, but added scientists do not know enough about the problem to rule it out. "We taken every precaution we can take of it but I can't give you an absolute guarantee," Lawrence told a hastily called news conference.

After the 3-1 board vote, board Chairman Russ Holland said, "I'm not completely happy with it, next year I propose we compromise on a spring break date earlier in March."

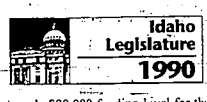

Church owns large weapons cache

LIVINGSTON, Mont. (AP)—Church Universal and Triumphant members owned substantial weaponry as far back as 1973, and security officers prepared memos for church leaders on the subject, two newspapers reported Friday.

From a military standpoint, I would want to have superiority rather than merely an equality," church member Vernon Hamilton wrote in a memo outlining apparent security plans for the group's underground fallout shelters.

Haagenson gains legislative OK for more water council funding

BOISE (AP)—Thanks to a backdoor move by Rep. Dean Haagenson, northern Idaho's Clear Water Coordinating Council still has a chance for another year of funding.

The Coeur d'Alene Republican won a House majority on a vote Friday for his bill appropriating up to $100,000 to the council from the state's Water Pollution Control Account.

Haagenson said the money would allow continuation of a pilot program started last year to coordinate the actions of Panhandle residents with local state and federal officials in improving the quality of lakes in the state's five northernmost counties.

Union. A 1989 Tass report said 10,000 people were evacuated after a 1957 explosion. But earlier reports of a 1957 mishap indicated hundreds died.

The Hanford danger came to light in a study performed by the Westinghouse Hanford Co., main DOE contractor at the reservation. The study was prompted by concerns raised by Congress late last year about the possibility of ferrocyanide exploding in the tanks.

Hamilton was arrested last July in Spokane, Wash. Federal officers said he was carrying a shopping list of weapons and ammunition to outfit stores of men. They later identified him as the church security chief, but church officials have said the church has no security force.

Methodist bishop leads battle against drugs

The Associated Press

The former prostitute and drug addict was testifying about her life at a Washington church when she turned and shook her finger at the leader of the United Methodist Church's battle against drug and alcohol abuse.

"This is a spiritual problem, and if you're here to talk about social programs, then I don't think we're going to get to first base," the woman told Bishop Felton E. May, selected by the Council of Bishops to head an anti-drug initiative in the 8.9 million-member denomination.

The next morning, May heard a similar refrain from a hospital chaplain, who told him doctors, psychologists and others were agreed drug addiction is a spiritual problem.

"I just said, 'I'm in the right place in the right time,'" May recalled in a recent interview.

While President Bush has declared war on drugs, the denomination decided to undertake an initiative of its own by appointing May to lead the church's attack on drug and alcohol abuse.

Although authorized by church law, the denomination had never before assigned a bishop to a special issue.

Still, "even some" of the most committed to the drug fight within the denomination are skeptical about whether members of local churches are going to be willing to move over in their pews to make room for addicts.

"The church often has so caught up in systems, in bureaucracy, that what it misses is taking a risk," said the Rev. Cecil Williams of Glide Memorial United Methodist Church in San Francisco.

"Addicts have to have a place. Pushers have to have a place. Drug abusers have to have a place they can trust."

The church often has not been that place, some of the 700 recovering addicts who regularly meet at Glide Memorial have told Williams.

"They often say: 'All they want to do is preach us to hell.' Our pain is not their pain," he said. "Until their pain becomes our pain, the church is not the church as far as I'm concerned."

The 54-year-old May, who said when he took the job that he was worried the church would "shrug its shoulders" at the initiative, said after a couple of months on the job, he believes United Methodists are ready for action.

"I see a church that has consistently been involved through resolutions and pronouncements. The day has come to act on those resolutions and pronouncements, and that is happening now."

May and Williams are planning a national conference on drug abuse in November, and the Health and Welfare Department of the Board of Global Ministries recently organized an advisory panel on the public health aspects of the drug crisis.

In Dallas, the Rev. Patrick Williams of Crest-Mare King United Methodist Church is leading an effort to persuade area churches to establish four-block "drug-free zones."

The 54-year-old May said there are reasons for optimism in battling drugs in the '90s.

With the growing recognition the United States is an "addictive society" and the failure of other initiatives in the battle against drugs, there is greater openness to a spiritual approach that emphasizes the value of each individual, he said.

In its own war on drugs, May has said, "I think the church must be reminded of the weapons that are at its disposal: truth, righteousness, salvation, faith and peace."

Williams, who said his church has helped more than 4,500 people on crack cocaine the last four years, agreed the denomination can be in the forefront of battling drug abuse.

"I did it in my church first, and now that, I know, I am convinced that the United Methodist Church, with the appointment of Bishop May, can step ahead of the fray," he said.

"The United Methodist Church can do it if it really wants to."

May has asked all United Methodists to light candles in the windows of their homes each evening as a symbol of hope for "those who are hurting and suffering" and to pray daily for them.

BYU misuse of tithings charge being investigated

PROVO, Utah (AP) — The Utah County Attorney has agreed to conduct a preliminary investigation into allegations of misuse of church tithings to fund commercial film projects at Brigham Young University, school officials said.

BYU spokesman Paul Richards said County Attorney Steve Killpack and school officials met Wednesday and agreed that an investigator should interview seven former employees of the BYU Film Development Co., to see if there's any evidence of a crime.

If evidence is found, Richards said, a full-scale investigation will ensue.

Deputy County Attorney Kay Bryson said earlier Wednesday that the investigation was being handled by BYU police and that his office would only screen the case.

Richards said school officials prefer that an independent agency conduct the probe.

"For us to do it looks like we're asking the wick to investigate the theft in the chicken pen," he said.

Kurt Vreeken, former director of development for the film company, claimed last weekend that tithing money was used to finance three film ventures and that the studio's director, Peter Johnson, had lost millions while producing private films.

Richards has said that $4 million was used to produce three films through a private production company, but he said the money came from discretionary donations and involved no tithing money paid by church members.

Members are asked to contribute 10 percent of their earnings to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints as tithing. Church leaders have deferred any comment on the matter to BYU.

Richards and Johnson suggested that the allegations may stem from the layoff of a month ago of Vreeken and several other employees.

Vreeken said he was laid off when he brought his concerns about the money to school officials.

Richards said he finds the situation ironic because the school would be the victim of any losses and that school officials have both known about and approved all of the film expenditures.

"Everybody is shooting at Peter Johnson but we gave him the money to do this," Richards said. "It's hard to have a crime if you don't have a victim."

El Salvador bishop remembered, local church asks for sainthood

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — This weekend's commemoration of the 10th anniversary of the murder of Monsignor Oscar Romero will be the last public religious ceremony honoring him for decades.

The local Roman Catholic Church hopes Romero will follow the path to sainthood of the only other archbishop assassinated at the altar — Thomas Becket, stabbed to death by Henry II's advisers 820 years ago.

Pope Urban VIII decreed in the 17th century that public ceremonial tribute to a candidate for sainthood would diminish the nominee's chances.

In announcing plans to propose Romero for beatification, the first step toward sainthood, the church has instructed its officials to ensure observation of the "non cultus" rule.

Father Rogelio Pedraz, a close friend and colleague of Romero, says canonization, which could take up to 30 years, would be a formality.

"Monsignor Romero is already a saint for the people of Latin America. What the Vatican does would be a recognition of his popular canonization," said Pedraz, director of the publishing house of the Jesuit-run Central American University.

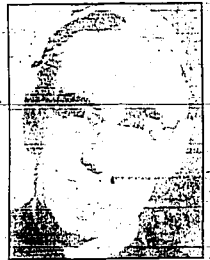

The ceremonies, which began Thursday and continue Saturday with religious dignitaries from North and South America and Europe, mark a sort of resurrection of Romero, who was slain by a single bullet through the heart as he said Mass at a hospital chapel, March 24, 1980.

"What Monsignor Romero finally leaves us as a lesson is that it is not possible to kill him," said Juan Jose Garcia, director of the university's human rights institute.

The figure of Monsignor Romero does not end when he dies. There begins the process of his resurrection, a resurrection that means his return to life in today's circumstances.

To the despair of 5 million Salvadorans, today's circumstances do not differ greatly from those of 1980, when the country was descended into fratricidal war.

It is a great sadness that, 10 years after the murder of one who spoke with such passion of the need for peace, El Salvador is still locked firmly in the embrace of mutual enmity and fierce civil war," said the New York-based rights organization American Watch. The group commented in a report titled "A Year of Reckoning: El Salvador a Decade after the Assassination of Archbishop Romero."

MONSIGNOR ROMERO slain a decade ago

of being mastermind of the conspiracy to kill Romero.

D'Aubuisson denies involvement in the murder.

Despite evidence incriminating several alleged members in a far-rightist plot, no one has been arrested or tried for the slaying. Some officials have called the case closed.

The anniversary comes just four months after another heinous crime against men of the cloth.

Before dawn on Nov. 16, army troops broke into the residence of six Jesuit professor-priests at Central American University, roused them from their beds, forced them to lie face down on the lawn and shot them in the head. Then they killed the priests' housekeeper and her daughter.

These two events — the murder of Archbishop Romero in 1980 and the slaying of the Jesuits in 1989 — stand as bookends to the decade offering harsh testimony about who really rules El Salvador and how little they have changed," Americas Watch said. "Ten years later, priest-killing is still a preferred option for those who simply will not hear the cries for change and justice in a society that has had too little of either."

Romero and the Jesuits exercised what in modern theology has come to be called "the preferential option for the poor." They lived humbly and I described and condemned exploitation, inequality, oppression and repression. For their outspokenness, they were labeled subversives by the radical right.

Romero "was a pastor, a prophet, a friend, a brother and a father to the entire Salvadoran people, especially the poorest, the weakest and most downtrodden," the local church said in a publication dedicated to his memory. "He was the voice of those without voice."

The day before he was killed, in his final homily, Romero issued an impassioned appeal to soldiers to disobey orders to torture and murder.

"In the name of God, in the name of this suffering people whose cries rise to heaven more loudly each day, I implore you, I beg you, I order you in the name of God: Stop the repression," he said.

The government and rebels in recent weeks have talked separately with a representative of U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar about resuming peace talks broken off last November.

"We hope that in the year of this 10th anniversary the war ends," said Monsignor Gregorio Rosa Chavez, auxiliary bishop of San Salvador. "Because it is possible to end this war this very year, the year of the beginning of his canonization. He told us how we could have avoided all this suffering, but his voice was not heeded. We hope that now, with more serenity, his voice will be heeded and that finally the violence will end and peace will arrive."

Stock market rises modestly

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stock market rose modestly Friday, recovering from three straight days of declines.

Analysts said the market was bolstered by a moderate gain overnight in the Tokyo stock market and an advance Friday in the U.S. bond market.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks gained 8.56 points to 2,704.28. The blue-chip barometer slipped from its levels earlier in the day, however.

Advancing issues outnumbered declining ones by around 3 to 2 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 884 up, 571 down and 527 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board totalled 132.07 million shares, down from 175.93 million in Thursday's session.

Sugar, stock prices eased but managed to finish modestly higher, ending a week of heavy losses on an up-note. The Nikkei index of 225 selected issues, which had lost nearly 6 percent Thursday by rebounding to end the day with a 3.1 percent gain, added 1.77 percent Friday. The index added 528.82 points to close the week at 30,397.16.

Wall Street declined on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, partly in response to the Japanese slide.

The report that U.S. orders for "big-ticket" durable goods rose 3.3 percent in February lifted stock and bond prices, since the increase was smaller than most economists expected.

The perception that inflation is under control in the United States was one of the factors supporting Wall Street's recent impressive rally. It was reflected in the dollar's strength against other major currencies such as the Japanese yen.

as those of Japan and West Germany, where faster economic growth has fueled inflation fears lately.

Among actively traded issues on the NYSE, AT&T was up at 41 1/2. Philip Morris rose 3/4 to 39 3/4. General Electric gained 7/8 at 63 1/2 and Exxon edged up 1/4 to 46 1/2.

IBM was down 1/4 at 105. A newspaper report said the computer giant has told customers it won't deliver an upgrade to its line of mainframe computers this year. Amoco declined 1/2 to 52 1/2 and Ames Department Stores was unchanged at 47.

Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and off-the-over-counter market, totalled 158.55 million shares.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"The more we see, the more we must be able to imagine, and the more we imagine, the more we must think we see." - Gotthold Ephraim Lessing.

Put yourself in East's seat and plan your defense against South's heart game. Remember, if you don't know what your objective is, you're not likely to put up an imaginative defense.

A lazy East returns either a diamond or a heart at trick two. Either way, South has little trouble making the game. East gets his two aces, and West gets his trump king. That leaves 10 tricks for South, giving him game and rubber.

An imaginative East knows that he needs four tricks to beat 500. He realizes that he can get a game and a rubber. Hoping for West to lead two trump tricks borders on the absurd, so the most reasonable hope is to find West with one trump trick and a doubler club...

At trick two, East should shift to a low club. Dummy wins and the trump finesse loses (ace and another trump help). The club return to East's ace nets the club ruff for one down.

What if West had held a singleton club instead of a doubler? West would have probably led his singleton if he held it, but it he didn't, East's imaginative play would have missed the mark. As a consolation, at least the low club shift would have been aimed in the right direction.

ANSWER: Two diamonds. A choice between two spades and two diamonds. The six-card suit and the singleton heart pit the scales in favor of aggression.

New Mexico makes NIT quarterfinal play
ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Luc Longley and Kurt Miller each scored 19 points and New Mexico ended its NIT quarter-final round drought with an 80-58 victory over Hawaii on Friday night.
The Lobos, who lost at home in the quarter-finals the past two years, advanced to Monday's semifinal round in New York.

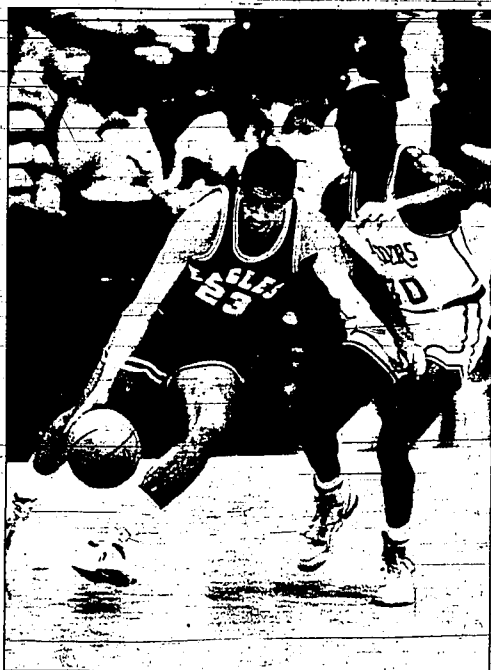

New Mexico (20-12) will face St. Louis (20-11) with Vanderbilt (19-14) meeting Penn State (24-8) in the other semifinal.

Longley, the 7-foot-2 Olympian from Australia, hit eight of 10 shots and blocked seven shots while Miller was 9-for-14 and pulled down 11 rebounds.

The Lobos, in control after the opening four minutes, ended any speculation of another NIT collapse by hitting 10 of their first 14 shots in the second half to widen a 37-32 lead into a 59-42 cushion. New Mexico shot 62 percent in the first half and 59 percent for the game.

CSI Eagles face one last, big hurdle: Connors State

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — There's no doubt in anybody's mind, least of all College of Southern Idaho coach Fred Trenkle, that the Eagles' opponent in tonight's National Junior College Athletic Association men's basketball tournament final will be all the Eagles can handle.
"The big-factor we have going for us tomorrow night is that nobody in the place — including Connors State — expects us to win," said Trenkle in the wake of CSI's semifinal victory over Three Rivers on Friday.

Connors State, ranked fourth by the NJCAA, will be 35-2 coming into tonight's final, the same record as CSI. It destroyed third-ranked Champlain in Friday's other semifinal and will be easily the most athletic power team the Eagles have faced this year.

"Connors State's a big-time ballclub," said John Cooper, sports editor of the Muskogee, Okla., Phoenix and Times-News and Connors State's beat writer. "They have size and quickness and they've beaten some good teams this year. They beat (No. 1-ranked) Mesa here, came close to beating Weyburn (of Arkansas) when they were ranked No. 2 and now they have a chance to beat Southern Idaho, which is ranked No. 2."

CSI's problems will start with 7-foot-11-inch sophomore Elmore Spencer, who is averaging 20 points and 9 rebounds a game.

Spencer signed with Georgia, but didn't get along with Coach Hugh Durham and left last spring. He's being courted by Louisville and Nevada-Las Vegas.

"He has great size and mobility for a big guy," said Cooper. "He blocks a lot of shots, but he doesn't block them out of the gym. He's smart defensively."

Then there's 6-6 sophomore forward Sebastian Neal (16 ppg, 7 rebounds) and 6-5 sophomore forward Reggie Tinsch (12.0 ppg, 9 rpg), who also originally signed with Georgia.

Neal is headed for Tulsa, Tinsch for Dayton.

The three-guard backcourt rotation consists of Mike Allen, a 6-0 freshman (16.0 ppg), Angelo Hamilton, a 6-5 freshman (17 ppg) and Aaron Sutherland, a 6-0 sophomore (9.0 ppg).

"The major question Connors State will have to answer is are they disciplined enough and willing to play 30 seconds of defense every time down?" said Trenkle. "From what I've seen of Southern Idaho,

I think Connors State will match up very well with us," said Cooper. "They're unusual in that their quickness is as important as their size."

What Connors doesn't have is national tournament experience.

His last visit to Hutchinson was 1976, before that it had been here just twice.

Connors plays in tough Region 2, which includes defending national champion Northeast Oklahoma and perennial power Westark.

"Connors beat NEO three times this season and beat Westark for the regional title," said Cooper.

"It sounds like they're a lot like Southern Idaho in that they tend to win big, usually by at least 8 to 10 points, and they haven't played that many close games this season. I guess the difference in the championship game will be which team can turn it up a notch."

CSI women sent home by 5th-ranked Louisburg

By PAUL STONE
Special to The Times-News

FYLER, Texas — A valiant comeback effort by the College of Southern Idaho fell short here Friday as national power Louisburg College of Louisburg, N.C., posted an 86-75 victory over the Eagles in a consolation semifinal contest at the National Junior College Athletic Association women's basketball tournament.

With the defeat, CSI ended its season with a 22-7 record. The Eagles were making their first-ever appearance at the national tournament, winning one of three games.

Fifth-ranked Louisburg improved to 28-3, and now faces Moberly Area Community College of Moberly, Mo., at 11 a.m. MST today for the tournament consolation championship.

After trailing by as many as 21 points in the first half, Southern Idaho pulled within five points on five occasions during the middle stages of the second half.

The Eagles had one opportunity to cut their deficit to three points with 10 minutes, 47 seconds remaining, but Suzanna Tautouli could not find the range on a 14-foot jumper.

With 6:01 left, Marcia Yastrop came through with an impressive drive to the bucket as CSI pulled within five points, at 68-63.

Louisburg answered the Eagles' final call with a 10-foot fadeaway jumper by Rhoda Smith, an off-balance layin by Valerie Williams and a right-side bank shot by Lisa Lange to pull back ahead by 11 points, 75-63, with 4:27 to go.

The Eagles could get no closer than nine points the rest of the way: The Louisburg trio of Lange, Williams and Smith combined for 28 of the Lady Hurricanes' 37 second-half points.

"They definitely showed a lot of character, a lot of guts in the second half," said CSI coach Ben Stroud of his club's comeback effort. "There's definitely no quit. Defensively I thought we did a great job in the second half."

Lange had 23 points and 13 rebounds to lead Louisburg, while Williams and Carolyn Brown chipped in 17 and 15 points, respectively.

Southern Idaho was led by Cynthia Clinger's 19 points. Other Eagles in double-digits were Angie Oken with 16 points and Yastrop with 11.

Yastrop also grabbed a game-high 16 re-

Burley 9 strikes Pocatello in Region-III baseball opener

The Times-News

BURLEY — Burley High School's baseball team beat Pocatello here Friday for the first time since moving up to Class A-1 four years ago.

The Bobcats hammered defending the Region III champion Indians 16-4, ending the game after 4 1/2 innings under the 10-run rule.

"I think what really helped us was playing in the Kickoff Tournament in Boise last weekend," said Burley coach Doug Bailey, whose Bobcats went 0-4 in that tournament to start their season. "A lot of people wondered why we went up there against such good teams, but there's no question it helped us improve."

mond, who started on the mound because of injuries to Burley's top three starters, scattered 10 hits over five innings and struck out five. Ormond also had a three-run home run in the second inning to give the Bobcats a commanding 9-0 lead.

Sophomore shortstop Paul Rasmussen added a homer in the fourth to ignite a five-run inning.

Ormond and Rasmussen accounted for five of Burley's seven hits. Rasmussen was 2-for-4 with three runs batted in and Ormond 3-for-4 with four RBIs.

The Bobcats broke the game open early when Pocatello right-hander Scott Welch Welch walked Darin Solomon and gave up a double to Rasmussen, pilting runners on second and third. Jason Allen walked to

6 local wrestlers in finals

By RON GATES
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — Six Magic Valley wrestlers moved into the championship finals of the state high school wrestling tournament Friday night.

David Barker, seeded third at 112 pounds in Class A-1, became the first Twin Falls grappler to vie for a state title in about as far back as anyone on hand can remember.

"We came here with some expectations and we by far exceeded them," said Bruin coach Wiley Dobbs, who also has four wrestlers in the consolation bracket.

Minico's Don VanTassel, the state A-3 140-pound champ a year ago, followed with a lopsided decision to remain unbeaten at that weight in the A-1 145-pound division. The Fourth District's other unbeaten seed, Wood River senior 130-pounder John Pascoe had his hands full with No. 3 Brad Harmon of Kellogg in their A-2 semifinal with Pascoe winning 5-4 on a late escape.

Perhaps the highlight came in the A-2 189-pound classification, where despite the presence of four of last year's top five finishers, unseeded Jeff Pedrow of Jerome came from behind to beat No. 2-seed Charlie Bjor of Snake

Miffed umpires say they'll boycott spring training in protest

PHILADELPHIA — It comes the players, out to go the umpires. Miffed at not having a say in the revised regular-season schedule, major league umpires said Friday they would protest by not working spring training games.

Richie Phillips, head of the umpires' union, called it "a very, very symbolic protest." He said its intent was to prod owners to resolve differences over compensation for canceled exhibition games and other matters arising from the 32-day lockout. Phillips said the protest would not affect the regular season and that umpires would be ready to work on opening day April 9.

"Our primary fight is over the lack of respect on the part of the owners and the callous attitude they have toward the umpires," Phillips said at a news conference. Lou Gorman, Boston Red Sox general manager, called the umpires' move "hard to believe. It's ridiculous." Phillips said he filed an unfair labor practice charge with the National Labor Relations Board, saying the owners hadn't bargained in good faith and changed working conditions without consulting the umpires.

"They are willing to suffer (a) loss of pay for the spring training games in order to level this protest with the owners," he said. The union encouraged minor league umpires to work the spring training games, which start Monday.

Phillips said there would be no picketing at the game sites. "We don't consider this a strike. It's not a boycott," Phillips said. "It's a refusal on the part of the umpires to be recalled." Phyllis Methige, a spokeswoman for the American League, said: "We're not making any comment right now except to say that any way or the other professional umpires will work the games."

Katy Feehely, a spokeswoman for the National League, also said "professional" umpires would be on hand for Monday's games. Ed Lawrence, head of minor league umpire development, said his staff was "preparing to fill the void."

"Any umpire who is not under major league contract can work," Lawrence said. "But personally, I hope all the differences are resolved and we can get back to normal by Monday."

Phillips said he last talked with representatives of the owners Thursday afternoon and told Commissioner Fay Vincent of his pending action Thursday night.

"If they sat down and bargained in good faith, we could probably settle in a half hour," he said.

Baseball announced Thursday that it will play a full 162-game schedule, extending the season for three days and making up during the year other games lost to the lockout.

Phillips said this probably meant fewer off-days for umpires, but already have previous work and travel schedules. He said he thought umpires should be compensated for the living expenses they incurred while standing by during the lockout.

He also said he hoped owners could be persuaded to allow eight umpires—who were usually demoted to the minors early in the season to stay in the big leagues "to spell the regular umpires."

Friday's action, he said, is "a request to the owners that they wake up and recognize the umpires as a viable force in baseball."

"They have to recognize that they have an obligation," he said. "They have to bargain with us and they have to make adjustments."

Umpires signed a four-year contract just before the start of the 1987 season. They went on strike three times in the previous nine years, the last during the 1984 postseason. Amateur umpires were used for a few playoff games, but not in the World Series.

Bills extend Kelly's contract 7 years for $20 million

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Quarterback Jim Kelly became the NFL's highest-paid player Friday for the time being when he signed a seven-year extension with the Buffalo Bills that will pay him a reported $20 million.

"I just want to be considered up in the elite ... whether I was the highest-paid player or the sixth-highest-paid player," Kelly said at a Rich Stadium news conference.

Kelly, 30, will earn an average of more than $3 million a year when the $14 million he is owed for the last year of his current five-year contract is included. Philadelphia Eagles quarterback Randall Cunningham, at an average $2.6 million a year, had been the NFL's salary leader.

But it may not last long. Joe Montana, who won his third Super Bowl MVP this year, is currently negotiating his $9.95 million, 5-year deal and is likely to go beyond that.

Bill Polian, the Bills' general manager, declined to detail the terms of Kelly's contract but said the pay was commensurate with what other quarterbacks in the league are getting.

"You have to pay the market rate," Polian said. "If a Cadillac costs $15,000, that's what you have to pay for it."

Polian said the contract is intended to keep Kelly with the Bills for the rest of his career. Kelly said he was content with that prospect, even though he has had a difficult relationship with the fans since coming out of college. Buffalo was "my first choice," Kelly said.

"But Buffalo is better than everybody portrays it. I wasn't happy with Buffalo, I wouldn't have signed."

"I'm sure there are people out there who are not going to like what I'm earning, especially since Buffalo is such a blue-collar town," Kelly said. "The way I look at it, I earned exactly what I'm going to get. I hope nobody expects me to go out and throw 45 touchdowns a year," he said.

"A game," Polian interjected. Kelly led the AFC statistically early last season but was injured in the fifth game against Indianapolis and was not as effective after returning from a three-game layoff.

In fact, he was 6-7 and replacement Frank Reich 3-0 as the Bills won the AFC East with a 9-7 record but lost to Cleveland in the first round of the playoffs.

Kelly, who took questions from the media for the first time since a midseason squabble with running back Thurman Thomas, said he was not dwelling on past disputes.

"Last year's past. It's gone," Kelly said. "I've grown up just like everyone else has. I'm only looking to bigger and better things."

Polian and Coach Marv Levy said they did not expect Kelly's teammates to be jealous because the Bills have a policy of paying the market rate for a handful of franchise players.

Polian said he would expect more jealousy to result from the signing of a Plan B free agent at an inflated salary.

"If a guy that doesn't produce gets paid a lot of money, as a player I'd get upset and so would you," Polian said.

The Bills lost punter John Kidd to the San Diego Chargers and wide receiver Flip Johnson to Green Bay under Plan B.

"Polian said he remains unhappy with the system, which allows each team to protect 37 players and leave the rest unprotected."

Bears' Anderson joins NFL elite with 4-year, $6 million contract

CHICAGO (AP) — Neal Anderson, who led the Chicago Bears in rushing and receiving last year, on Friday signed a contract that a source said would top $6 million over four years, making him the NFL's highest-paid running back.

Anderson was fourth in the NFL with 1,275 yards rushing last season. He also led the team with 50 receptions and 15 touchdowns and went to the Pro Bowl for the second straight year.

"It feels good," Anderson said. "It's good to have it all done and over and behind me and to know that I'm going to spend my next four years in Chicago, and hopefully end my career with the Chicago Bears."

Anderson more than $5 million over the four years.

A source close to the negotiations who spoke on condition his name not be used said the total actually would be more than $6 million.

That would make Anderson the highest paid running back in the league on average salary per year. Eric Dickerson of Indianapolis made $1.3 million last season.

Bears spokesman Bryan Harlan, who did not disclose a salary figure, said the deal would make Anderson the highest-paid player in the team's history.

Steve Rappenecker, Anderson's agent, said from Gainesville, Fla., that the agreement would be more than $6 million.

Under NFL rules, Anderson had until April 1 to solicit offer sheets from other teams, but his agent said none materialized.

Because he is a restricted free agent, the Bears would have the right to match any offer or get two first-round draft choices in return if Anderson signed with another team.

Three weeks ago, Anderson threatened to seek other bidders after the Bears withdrew a four-year offer worth an estimated $3.6 million.

Marino wants Dolphins to trade him

MIAMI (AP) — Quarterback Dan Marino said he doesn't know whether he will play for the Miami Dolphins in 1990 and acknowledged for the first time that he has asked to be traded.

All-Pro career was cut short by a 1987 knee injury. The public appearance was Marino's first since his desire to be traded was reported earlier this month.

"I don't want to get into all that," he said. "Shula refused to discuss possible trade talks."

"It's been discussed, put it that way," Marino said.

The seven-year veteran said he has talked about the matter with Coach Don Shula and club president Tim Robbie.

"That's all confidential," he said. "I've said all I have to say on the Marino situation."

Marino made his comments Thursday night in an interview at a banquet to honor former Dolphins center Dwight Stephenson, whose Heavos declined to explain why he is interested in a trade, although he has acknowledged frustration over Miami's four-season playoff drought.

Shula briefly sat beside Marino on the dais Thursday, and the two shared what appeared to be a comfortable conversation. They will be together again Sunday night in Pittsburgh, where Shula will be a speaker at a roast of Marino.

Ailing Hoch takes lead at Bay Hill tournament

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Scott Hoch, playing despite tendinitis in his left hand, shot a 4-under-par 68 on Friday to take the second-round lead in the Nestle Invitation.

Hoch, a five birdies and a bogey despite "miss-hitting the ball all over the place" and was at 7-under-par 137 after two trips around the 7,114-yard Bay Hill course. That was one shot better than Jay Don Blake, Larry Nelson, Corey Pavin and Billy Andrade.

Nelson shot a 71 to go with his first-round 67. Pavin shot his second straight 69 while Andrade, a third-year pro, had 70.

Hoch and five birdies and a bogey despite "miss-hitting the ball all over the place" and was at 7-under-par 137 after two trips around the 7,114-yard Bay Hill course. That was one shot better than Jay Don Blake, Larry Nelson, Corey Pavin and Billy Andrade.

Hoch, who suffered a "torn ligament" earlier this year, said his hand hurts after every swing "but I'm playing through it. My doctor said to stop if the pain gets too bad."

"That's just went right for me today," said Blake, whose best finish was a tie for third in last year's Atlanta Classic.

Blake, starting his fourth year on the PGA Tour, had the day's best score, a 66 which included eight birdies — including five straight starting on the 10th hole.

Hoch lives at Bay Hill but said he doesn't play the course often.

Nelson, starting his 17th year on the tour, was so disgusted with his putting that he gave his putter to a little boy behind the 18th green and went shopping for another one.

Jones takes 1-stroke Turquoise lead

PHOENIX (AP) — Rosie Jones sank a 17-foot birdie putt on her last hole Friday to cap a 3-under-par 70 and take a one-shot lead over Donna White and Kristi Albers after Friday's second round of the LPGA Turquoise Classic.

White, who was one stroke off the lead after an opening round 69, shot a 71 Friday for a 6-under 140 total on the 6,514-yard Moon Valley Country Club course.

She birdied her first two holes to go to 7-under, then bogeyed Nos. 8, 9, 10, 11 and 13 before doubling on the par-4 13th.

After bogeying Nos. 16 and 18, she birdied Nos. 2 and 4 before her decisive putt off the fringe at No. 9 for a 7-under 139 total at the halfway mark.

She is seeking the fourth title of her 14-year career and first since 1983.

Defending champion Allison Finney shot a 78 and missed the cut here at 152.

Jones, who finished fourth last year, is seeking the sixth title of her nine-year career.

Paul Bradley, Betsy King, Shirley Furlong and Japan's Ayoko Okamoto were two shots back at 139.

Okamoto, in an 18-way tie for 23rd place after the first round, carded six birdies to take over the lead at 7-under before bogeys on the 16th and 17th holes.

Albers, a non-winner in five years on the tour, shot a bogey-free 70 to take the early second-round lead.

Bradley, trying to become the tour's first $3 million winner, shot a second-round 71 while King had a 72 and Furlong and Okamoto both shot 69s.

King, the 1985 Turquoise Classic champion, was at 6-under before bogeying the par-4 sixth hole.

She started the day in a five-way tie for ninth place and her best career finish is a tie for third at last year's Tucson Open.

Vicki Ferguson, who had a 68 Thursday to share the first-round lead, skied to a 76.

Bradley, who won this event in 1987 among her 24 tour victories, made the cut at 6-under but bogied No. 16.

Search ends for 9 missing from sunken trawler

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — The Coast Guard on Friday suspended its search for the bodies of nine men presumed drowned after their fishing trawler capsized and sank in the Bering Sea.

Fishing vessels rescued 22 crew members who had abandoned the sinking ship on life boats. They were reported in good condition aboard a trawler that was taking them to Dutch Harbor, about 250 miles southeast of the accident site.

The nine, including a federal fisheries observer, were lost Thursday when the 162-foot

Aleutian Enterprise sank, according to the Coast Guard, which said there was little chance their bodies would be found.

"We had a very good search yesterday," Lt. Brian Flory said Friday in Juneau. "We think we would have found anyone who was afloat."

Several fishing vessels remained in the area to look for bodies, said Dan Roberts, executive vice president of Arctic Alaska Fisheries Corp. in Seattle, which managed the Aleutian Enterprise.

The cause of the sinking was unknown, said Christopher Haley, a Coast Guard spokesman. Weather was reported to be fair when the early afternoon accident occurred.

"We haven't had enough information from the survivors yet," Haley said.

The Aleutian Enterprise was part of a fleet of so-called factory trawlers that fish for cod and pollock in the remote Bering Sea between Alaska and the Soviet Union.

Federal magistrate rules against Air Force secrecy

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A federal magistrate has ruled in favor of a military watchdog group's effort to find out why the Air Force had apparently rejected sites other than western Utah for a now-shelved electronic warfare testing range.

The Air Force recently announced it was abandoning the project because of defense funding cuts.

Although Downwinders sought the information under the Freedom of Information Act, the Air Force claimed certain documents didn't have to be disclosed because they were prepared before any decision was made.

U.S. Magistrate Calvin Gould's ruling is in the form of a recommendation to U.S. District Court. It supports the Downwinders in their 1989 suit seeking information on the now-

GOP senate foes hold 1st debate

BLACKFOOT (AP) — Both Jim Jones and Larry Craig — campaigning in the Republican primary for the Senate seat being vacated by James McClure — focused their debate Friday on a central theme: Thursday when they met for their debate of the primary race.

Craig, the U.S. First District Congressman, and Jones, Idaho's attorney general, met head-to-head at the debate sponsored by a local Republican Women's organization.

Both candidates were critical of Congress' inability to balance the federal budget and cut the deficit.

Craig said he realized Congress lacked fiscal responsibility when he started in the U.S. House in 1984 and he said, "I became a leader in the sponsoring of a constitutional amendment to balance the budget."

During his six years in the House, he said, he has always voted for spending cuts, but never for tax increases.

As a result of the government's debt, Craig said the U.S. is going to Japan, Germany and other foreign governments, asking them to help keep treasury notes afloat, and the result has been a rise in prime rates to "hike those foreign governments' demands on the treasury."

Jones said the federal deficit is the number one problem, but said, even now, Congress is debating programs that will cost money that is not available.

"I just think we've got to get a handle on it or we're going to get a giant economic crisis," Jones said.

He suggested any funds made available through military cuts should go toward reducing the federal deficit or to domestic programs. But he warned military cuts should be made very carefully.

Andrus says rail transport vital to state

BOISE (AP) — Railroads' abandonment of branch lines in the state is a chief reason for Gov. Cecil Andrus' creation of an Idaho Railroad Advisory Council.

The new council will consist of the directors of the departments of Commerce and Transportation, the president of the Idaho Public Utilities Commission and other people to be appointed by the governor.

"A unified system of rail transportation throughout the state of Idaho is critical to the state's economy," Andrus' executive order said Friday.

"The subject of railroad abandonment is of significance to Idaho and particularly to its more sparsely populated rural areas," he said.

The Interstate Commerce Commission recently reversed its earlier decision that prohibited Union Pacific Railroad from abandoning its 30-mile branch line in eastern Idaho's Teton Valley.

Local farmers said the line was essential to bring their crops to market, and Andrus agreed.

Gas leak cited as likely cause of explosion

CRESTED BUTTE, Colo. (AP) — A leaking propane gas line is the likely cause of an explosion that killed three people and demolished the Crested Butte State Bank on March 6, investigators have concluded.

Test drilling near the bank turned up traces of propane in the soil at five of six sites, and the gas was similar to propane found in a ruptured gas line near the bank, Colorado Geological Survey director John Rold said Thursday.

Also Thursday, the Environmental Protection Agency ordered Salgas, Inc., the town's propane gas supplier, to repair pipeline leaks and vent pockets of propane found near the explosion site.
