Officials discuss U.S. military base in Vietnam

The Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Vietnamese officials privately suggested allowing the U.S. military to return to the Cam Ranh Bay if relations between the countries continue to warm, says a congressman who recently met with them.
Rep. Thomas Ridge, R-Pa., said the extraordinary possibility was raised informally at a foundation-sponsored forum in Bali, Indonesia attended by several congressmen and a group of top-ranking officials of Vietnam's communist government.
A congressional delegation headed by the chairman of the House subcommittee responsible for overseeing U.S. military bases hopes to visit Cam Ranh Bay this week as part of a 10-day trip to Vietnam, Guam, Singapore and Indonesia.
The mission's purpose is to explore alternatives to U.S. military bases in the Philippines. Leases on six U.S. installations in the Philippines expire in 1991 and American officials anticipate difficult negotiations for continued base rights there.
The Soviet Union moved into the U.S.-built base at Cam Ranh Bay at the conclusion of the Vietnam War in 1975, but Pentagon officials said in January that the Soviets had withdrawn some fighter planes and bombers.
The possibility of the Soviets withdrawing completely from the base and Americans returning to it was one of the subjects at the Indonesia forum, sponsored by the Henry R. Luce Foundation, Ridge said.
That possibility was discussed and under the right set of circumstances I think the Vietnamese would welcome it, said Ridge, who saw Vietnam War combat as an enlisted man.

Retired chemist John Manning is a serious competitor in the sport which combines cycling, running and swimming 71-year-old an old pro at triathlons

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News writer
TWIN FALLS — In his mid-50s, John Manning was just another minute-aged, winded deer hunter.
He tripped the Adirondack Mountains of upstate New York every fall, and found that as the years passed it was harder and harder to keep up with his hunting pals.
So, like a lot of people, he started jogging.
Unlike most people, he never stopped jogging.
Now, at age 71, the retired Twin Falls chemist is a triathlete, and one of the nation's best in his age group.
At my age, if you finish the race they single you out and write you up, said Manning with a smile. Personally, I think it's a waste of newspaper.
Manning, a Twin Falls resident for almost a decade, has finished quite a few races since his first 5-kilometer run, the annual Downtown Fun Run, in the spring of 1984. He's finished first in Turley's annual Spudman Triathlon in the 60-plus division, second in the 60-and-over division at the Idaho Triathlon in Spokane, Wash., and second in the Boise Spudman triathlon. He capped last season by finishing second in the Hilton Head, S.C., triathlon one of the country's largest.
In all, Manning has participated in 13 triathlons since his first in 1987 at age 68. He's a member of Triathlon Today magazine's All-American team for his age group.
I worked my way up in distances, and after a while it didn't seem like that much of a jump to a triathlon, he said. I ran around town on my bike a lot and I swim when I can, so I decided to give it a try.
Triathlon is a sport — grueling is the adjective usually paired with it — that combines running, swimming, and cycling races of various distances. The international distance is a 24.8-mile bike ride, a 6.2-mile run and a half-kilometer swim, but it can vary widely from race to race.
The first one is still a painful memory for Manning.
When I got off the bike and started to run, I really didn't think I was going to make it, he said. If you ride a bike as hard as you can for six miles and get off and start to run, every muscle in your body is telling you to stop.
That notwithstanding, Manning's long-distance career — he runs the occasional marathon — has been largely injury-free.
I've been lucky, he said. I'm careful and work my way up gradually, but I really haven't had a serious injury.
I think the worst that's happened to me was during the Robie Creek Run (an annual 6.2-mile run in the hills outside Boise) soon after I first started running. My shoes were the right size, but I ended up losing two or three toenails from the pounding my feet took. But a moved up to a bigger shoe size, and I haven't had any problems since.
Manning is a dedicated trainer, running up to 22 miles a day several times a week, and cycling and swimming regularly, but triathlon isn't his whole life. He works part-time for Twin Falls allergist Dr. Greg Kadlec, and is helping Kadlec bring his new office computer system up to speed.
I work out when I can, he said. Right now it's a little less because I've been so busy at the office, but I'll pick it up as I get closer to my next triathlon.
As a devout triathlete, Manning is eager to spread the gospel of the sport.
I encourage people to try it if it's something they think they'd like to do, he said. Anybody who tries it should be vetted by a doctor pretty thoroughly first, but if you can work your way up to the distances, you can do a triathlon. Some people are intimidated by the thought of swimming that far in deep water, but if you're a reasonably good swimmer there's no reason to be afraid. Triathlons are so closely monitored that they're not going to let you get into trouble.
Manning's dream is the same as every other triathlete's: to participate in the Ironman in Hawaii, with a marathon and a mile swim tucked onto an expanded bike ride.
I think it would be fun to try, he said. There are triathlons that are Ironman qualifiers, so maybe someday I'll get the chance.

Judge bars officers from seizing photos

Los Angeles Times
CINCINNATI — A federal judge granted an injunction Sunday barring law officers from interfering with an exhibit of photographs by the late Robert Mapplethorpe that had brought about an obscenity indictment against a downtown museum and its director.
The Contemporary Arts Center sought the injunction because its officials feared police or sheriff's department officers might remove sexually explicit photographs that a Hamilton County grand jury determined Saturday violated Ohio obscenity laws.
After the injunction was granted by U.S. District Judge Carl Rubin at an unusual Sunday morning hearing, the exhibition opened to a large throng for a third day. The atmosphere was decidedly more relaxed than it had been on Saturday when police shut down the exhibit temporarily in mid-afternoon and when the arts center and its director were indicted on obscenity charges.
The air doesn't have as much tension in it, said Robert Allen of Lightbome Communications, the show's corporate sponsor, as he watched the long line of people that stretched out of the lobby, snaked through the building's atrium and continued outside around the block.
The show has broken attendance records since its private opening Friday night, when an estimated 2,000 to 6,000 people paid $10 each and stood in line in 40-degree temperatures for hours to view the exhibit. Arts center spokeswoman Amy Bannister said the usually free openings normally draw from 600 to 1,100 people.
Thousands more saw the show over the weekend.
Many people came because of the controversy, some because they feared that police would shut the show down for allegedly violating community standards of decency.
I talked to people yesterday and a lot of them were here for two reasons, Allen said. Some came because they wanted to see something happen and a lot of them were here to see the exhibit before, quote, it was closed down.

White loses struggle with AIDS

The Associated Press
INDIANAPOLIS — Ryan White, who won a long court battle to attend public school and overcome prejudice against himself and other AIDS victims, lost his 54-year struggle with the deadly disease on Sunday. He was 18.
White died shortly after 7 a.m. EST at Riley Hospital for Children, where he had been hospitalized since March 29 with an AIDS-related respiratory infection. He had been heavily sedated and on a ventilator.
White's mother, Jeanne, and sister, Andrea, 16, had kept a bedside vigil, joined at times by celebrities such as singer Elton John and the Rev. Jesse Jackson.
Dr. Martin B. Kleiman, White's physician throughout his illness, said death followed a slow deterioration that had begun Saturday.
At the end, his family and a few of the others who loved him were close to his side, Kleiman said. He never regained consciousness, and I am confident that he suffered no pain at the end.
Carrie Van Dyke, a spokeswoman for Mrs. White, said the family needed time to be alone, to recover, to grieve.
John, who stayed at the hospital with the Whites nearly a week, dedicated the song "Gandle in the Wind" to White during the Farm Aid IV concert Saturday night at the Hoosier Dome, about a mile from the hospital.
This one's for Ryan, John said to the cheers of 45,000 fans at the crowded raise funds for financially troubled farmers.
President Bush, who last week planted a tree in White's honor in downtown Indianapolis, said he and his wife, Barbara, were deeply saddened by White's death.
All Americans are impressed by his courage, strength and his ability to continue fighting, Bush said in a news release.

Myers Jr., former Indiana state health commissioner
Myers, who held that job during White's long court battle to return to public school, said White's death meant "his nation has lost one of its major leaders... a major spokesperson on the disease."
He called upon us all to educate one another, and to hate the disease with his wife, Nancy, at virus itself and the ignorance surrounding AIDS, instead of hating each other, said Dr. Woodrow A.

Ferry blaze smolders while exhausted firefighters bring out bodies

The Associated Press
LYSEKIL, Sweden — Exhausted firefighters braved metal-melting heat and poisonous smoke from a two-day-old fire Sunday to begin removing bodies of about 150 victims from the Scandinavian Star ferry.
Firemen struggled to reach cabins where victims burned to death or suffocated in the suspicious blaze. It began before dawn Saturday while the ship was in the North Sea carrying about 500 tourists and crewmembers on an overnight trip from Norway to Denmark.
The heat was so intense Sunday that it melted aluminum aboard the bridge of the Danish-owned ship. Firefighters in masks and breathing equipment fought through one corridor "until their gear started to burn," said fire consultant Ole Wennstrom. One firefighter was slightly injured, he said.
Firemen were seen leaving the ship in tears, during the night. Each firefighting team underwent psychological care after being relieved, officials said.
The fire spread early Sunday from the gutted middle section to the captain's bridge a few hours after the blackened ship was towed into port. The blaze, which finally was extinguished late Sunday, sent plumes of smoke over Lysekil, on Sweden's southwest coast, 250 miles southwest of Stockholm, the capital on the east coast.
Tugboats doused the ship with water. Holes were blasted into the side of the 100-ton ship to allow the water to drain out, for fear that the badly listing ship would topple onto the concrete dock.
Officials with YR-DANO, the company in Copenhagen that owns and operates the Bahamian-flagged ship, say the blaze was caused by arson, citing two fires that broke out at a short interval on two different decks.
District police chief Roar Onso, revising earlier figures, said 345 people survived the fire, which broke out about midway on the ship's 10-hour voyage from Oslo to Fredrikshavn. Ferry captain Hugo Larsen told police of 395 passengers and 97 crewmen. If his figure is correct, 147 people died, Onso said.
In Oslo, police said six Americans of a seven-member entertainment troupe perished — forming on the Scandinavian Star were among the rescued. A seventh member, Ruth Rome, 27, of East Lansing, Mich., was missing and presumed dead, said Rick Qualls, another member of the group, from his Oslo hotel room.
Onso said a burned passenger list was found in the debris but did not tally with the captain's account, and its accuracy was unclear.
Forty-three bodies were removed from the ferry before operations were suspended for the night. After a brief ceremony on the wharf, the victims were placed in a refrigerated truck and driven to Oslo for identification.
Trucks were sold to car passengers according to the size of the car, not the number of people each was carrying. Children traveling free would not appear on any passenger list.
Firemen found corpses in the corridors and cabins. A few drivers were found in their trucks on the car deck. Most victims were asphyxiated but some were charred beyond recognition.

officials said, "I can see the day when American ships are docked in Cam Ranh Bay." Ridge said, adding that the official letter specified that the meant warships "not for refueling," he said, "No, for repairs," Ridge said.

Ridge said conditions of the forum prevented him from identifying the Vietnamese official.

Rep. Chester Atkins, D-Mass., who also was at the meeting, said returning to Cam Ranh Bay "would require some major changes in the relationship between the United States and Vietnam."

But Atkins, who declined to discuss specifics of the meeting, also said: "I think the Vietnamese are desperate. Their economy is in a state of continued deterioration. I think they're willing to look at other things, anything that doesn't endanger their national security that would allow them to rejoin the economic community and modernize."

The United States and Vietnam have no diplomatic or trade relations. The State Department says it will consider relations only after verification of Vietnamese troop withdrawals from Cambodia, and after a process of internationally supervised elections in Cambodia is established.

Seven members of Congress hope to visit Cam Ranh Bay this week to determine the extent of the Soviet reductions there, said delegation leader Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., chairman of the House Armed Services subcommittee on military installations and facilities.

Such a visit will require both Vietnamese and Soviet approval "so I don't know if we'll get there or not," Schroeder said Friday.

While the delegation is interested in the status of Cam Ranh Bay, Schroeder emphasized that the purpose of the trip was obtaining a broader view of U.S. security responsibilities in the region.

"We in the U.S. Congress cannot negotiate with either the Soviets or the Vietnamese on Cam Ranh Bay, but it is a very important facility and it is in a country that appears to be in a positive transition more towards our side," Schroeder said.

Regardless of what happens with

Cam Ranh Bay, she said she wanted to uncover base alternatives because "some in the Philippines are demanding that we pay $2 billion a year in rent" to keep U.S. installations there.

In 1988, the Soviets offered to abandon Cam Ranh Bay if the United States did the same with its Philippines bases. The United States rejected the offer, saying it needed the Pacific bases to support its worldwide operations.

The State Department has received no offer from the Vietnamese about Cam Ranh Bay, according to a department official who spoke last week on condition of anonymity.

John Leboutillier, a former New York, state congressman from New York, said in a recently published book that Vietnamese officials told him they would be receptive to talking about Cam Ranh Bay if relations normalized.

Leboutillier said in an interview that he told the Bush administration about the conversations, but that he had no evidence that any action was

2 killed trying to outrun freight train
Caldwell (AP) — Two men out for a Sunday afternoon of fishing off a rail trestle over the Boise River north of Parma were killed when they tried to outrun a high-speed freight train, Canyon County officials said.

Canyon County Sheriff's Sgt. Steve Williams said names of the victims have not been released. He said they were 19 and 21 years old and were from Ada and Canyon counties.

Williams said the men were fishing off the railroad trestle north of Parma and about three miles from Nysa, Ore., where the Boise River meets the Snake River, when a witness heard someone yell "train."

Witnesses said the men began to run south on the open trestle, the same direction as the train was headed. Williams said the freight hit the men on the trestle. One was declared dead at the scene, and the other declared dead at a Boise hospital after being transferred by

Life-Flight Helicopter.

Proposed government taking shape
EAST BERLIN (AP) — Christian Democrat leader Lothar de Maiziere failed Sunday to form East Germany's first democratic government after a grueling round of talks with other parties.

The breakdown in talks came after Christian Democrat leaders said de Maiziere already had drawn up a proposed Cabinet that would have brought together the nation's leading political factions.

Despite widespread optimism that an agreement was near, Christian Democrats and the rival Social Democrats ended hours of discussions with no accord.

De Maiziere leads a three-party conservative alliance that holds the most seats in the 400-member Parliament but was trying to build a coalition broad enough to control the legislature.

Summary
The National Weather Service in Boise says it was cooler in Idaho on Sunday with rain over the southern portion and partly cloudy skies in the north.

An upper level disturbance moved through western and central Nevada and was expected to push into central Utah by nightfall. The northern edge of this storm produced rain over most of southern Idaho with some light snow above 7,000 feet.

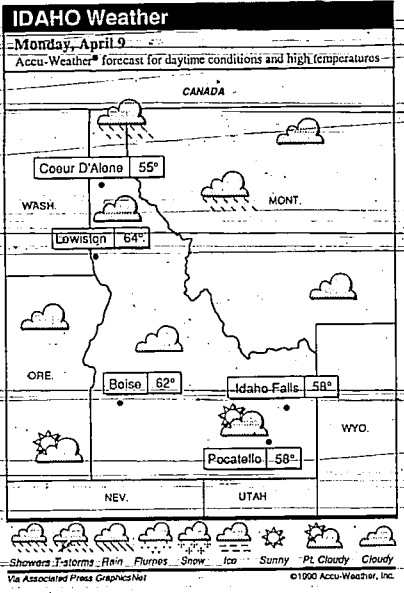

A weak upper level disturbance over southwestern Canada was expected to produce partly cloudy skies during the afternoon over northern Idaho with a slight chance of rain near the Canadian border.

Skies were expected to clear over southern Idaho Sunday night with sunny and warmer weather expected Monday. Northern areas were to remain partly cloudy through today with a slight chance of showers continuing near the Canadian border.

Lows Sunday morning were mostly in the 40s in the valleys and 30s in the mountains. The coldest minimum reported was 26 degrees in Dixie in the north central mountains east of Lewiston.

The warmest temperature in the state Sunday was 67 degrees at Caldwell. Yellowstone reported the coldest at 24 degrees.

Elsewhere in the nation Sunday, the highest temperature was 99 degrees at Las Lajas, Texas. The lowest was 16 at Elkhart, W. Va.

White was "a very brave young man" and extended his family's sympathy and prayers to the Whites.

"Although his courageous battle has reached its end, Ryan is now safe in the arms of God," Reagan said. "He and his family stand as a symbol of the need for greater tolerance and understanding toward those afflicted with AIDS."

White's schoolmates at Hamilton Heights High in Arcadia, were stunned by his death. "It's sad," said sophomore Bridger Benson, 15. "When I first heard about it, I didn't believe it. I didn't think he'd die."

"We weren't the best of friends," said freshman Anton Gilmore, 15, "but I'm shocked that he died. I hope they could find a cure before it was over."

"He was aware of what could happen. But I remember him saying that he's going to live for five years until they find a cure. And if they didn't, he'd live for five more, and keep going until they find a cure," he said.

Wayne Kitch, superintendent of the Hamilton Heights School Corp., said no decision had been made on what special activities might be conducted at the school Monday when classes resume after spring vacation.

"Kitch said: 'It's a real sorrow and sadness that he passed away, for our school system and our community.'"

Actress Judith Light, who played White's mother, Jeanne, in a television movie of his life, voiced her sympathy for her and her daughter, Andrea.

"Ryan has already, in his brief lifetime, contributed more nobility and dignity to the world than many people do in many decades," said the actress, a star of the hit television series "Who's the Boss."

Indians Gov. Evan Bayh ordered flags at the Statehouse flown at half-staff Wednesday; the day White's funeral is planned.

Bayh was an American hero," Ryan's mother said in a letter Sunday. "His life has become an international symbol of the tragedy that is AIDS, and of the fight for understanding and hope that its victims face daily."

Bayh said he hoped the family would find consolation "in the fact that had the world not known Ryan White, our understanding, treatment and concern for people with AIDS would be harsher and more judgmental."

statement. "Ryan's death reaffirms that as a people we must pledge to continue the fight, his fight, against this dreaded disease."

White, born Dec. 16, 1971, in Kokomo, was 13 when he was diagnosed with AIDS in December 1984. He had contracted acquired immune deficiency syndrome through a blood-clotting agent used to treat his hemophilia. It is estimated that more than half of the nation's 20,000 hemophiliacs were infected with the AIDS virus before better blood-donation screening procedures were adopted, and 1,200 have developed AIDS.

In 1985, White was barred from Western Middle School near Kokoona after school officials and parents rejected health authorities' reassurances that AIDS cannot be spread through casual contact.

After months of school board battles and court hearings, White won the right to attend school. However, pressures on his family later drove the Whites to the town of Cicero, and he enrolled at Hamilton Heights High School in nearby Arcadia.

In his new home, townspeople and fellow students rallied around him and befriended him.

He became a national spokesman for children with AIDS, appearing at congressional hearings and fund-raisers. He was on the cover of People magazine and made friends with such celebrities as John, Michael Jackson, former President Reagan, and Olympic diver Greg Louganis.

Michael Jackson arrived Sunday afternoon by private jet with developer Donald Trump to pay his respects to the family.

"He was a good friend of mine, and I'm too overcome with grief to talk about it," the reclusive Jackson said in a statement.

Three limousines took Jackson, Trump and her entourage to the Whites' home in Cicero, about 20 miles north of Indianapolis, where the car Jackson had given White was parked on the front lawn, surrounded by floral arrangements.

Jackson, Mrs. White and Andrea walked over to the car. Jackson sat in the back seat and Andrea started the car so that he could listen to the sound system.

White's legal and medical fight was dramatized in a 1989 television movie, "The Ryan White Story," in which he had a cameo role. He also helped develop an AIDS education program called "I Have AIDS - A Teen-Ager's Story," which won a Peabody award.

White's attorney, Charles Vaughn, called White a "courageous young man."

"He went through his case more for others, so that they wouldn't have to endure that he did for himself," Vaughn said. "He fought it to the end. There was no quit in Ryan White."

Dr. Woodrow A. Myers Jr., who as Indiana state health commissioner supported White during his legal battle, said his death meant "the nation has lost one of its major leaders in a major spokesperson for the disease."

"Through his eloquence, he showed all of us our true colors and showed all of us we had picked the wrong enemy," said Myers, now New York City health commissioner. "We should have been fighting all along against the disease rather than the people who had it."

In 1988, White spoke before the National Education Association and discussed his battle with AIDS.

"I stand before you to ask for your help," White told the teachers. "The many people against me said they weren't against me, but against my disease. Help me beat the virus and together let's educate and save the children of the world. By proper education, AIDS can be a disease, not a dirty word."

According to the federal Centers for Disease Control, more than 2,000 U.S. children have gotten AIDS since the epidemic began a decade ago.

White celebrated his 18th birthday in December in ill health, and was unable to attend school much of the time in his last year. He was taking the experimental drug AZT, and suffered from a variety of infections and other problems.

White's last public appearance was with Reagan and his wife Nancy, at an Oscar party for all children March 26 in Los Angeles. Reagan called White a "very brave young man" in a statement issued Sunday.

"Although his courageous battle has reached its end, Ryan is now safe in the arms of God," Reagan said. "He and his family stand as a symbol of the need for greater tolerance and understanding toward those afflicted with AIDS. We are deeply saddened by Ryan's death and extend our sympathy and prayers to his family."

Driver arrested after brandishing rifle.
 WASHINGTON (AP) — A replacement driver for Greyhound Bus Lines was charged Sunday with carrying a dangerous weapon after he brandished a rifle during a confrontation with striking bus workers, officials said.
 Charles E. King, 45, had just returned to the Washington terminal Saturday evening after a trip and was leaving at about midnight to go home when he discovered that his personal vehicle had been vandalized, George Gravelly, a company spokesman said from his Dallas headquarters.
 "He (King) came back and told his boss that his car had been vandalized, and the manager began making phone calls," Gravelly said. "King, upset, decided that things were not happening fast enough and went to get a weapon out of his truck and confronted picketers."

Violent crime rising faster than thefts
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Violent crime in the United States rose 5 percent last year while so-called serious property crimes such as burglary and theft were up only 2 percent, according to figures released Sunday by FBI Director William S. Sessions.
 Overall, the 3 percent increase in serious crimes from 1988 to 1989 was the same as the previous year, and compares with a 2 percent rise in 1987, a 6 percent jump in 1986 and a 5 percent rise in 1985, the FBI said.
 Cities with populations over 50,000 — places where approximately 80.9 million people live — showed a 3 percent increase in serious crime.

S&L bailout may require tax hike
 WASHINGTON (AP) — A tax increase will be needed at some point to pay for escalating losses among a third of the nation's savings and loan institutions, Comptroller General Charles A. Bowsher said Sunday.
 Bowsher said that past week raised the estimated price tag for the government's S&L bailout from $257 billion to $325 billion, with a warning that it could rise to $500 billion.

Budget committees ignore senators
 WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate budget committees are moving toward adoption of fiscal 1991 deficit-reduction plans that ignore eye-catching proposals by two of Congress's most influential members.
 The Democratic chairman of the two panels, which are well behind schedule, hope to produce separate $1.2-trillion spending blueprints for next year by late this month. But neither will reflect Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan's plan to cut the Social Security payroll tax or Rep. Dan Rostenkowski's call for a combination of widespread spending cuts and tax hikes.

2 more bodies found after hotel fire
 MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Searchers using dogs and heavy equipment found two more bodies and looked for others Sunday in the charred hulk of the Fontana Hotel.
 The death toll from the furious, fast-moving fire that swept through the 39-year-old, 102-room hotel Friday rose to six with the two discoveries, which officials said apparently lowered to eight the number of tenants unaccounted-for.
 More than a score of searchers, representing federal, state, city and county agencies, meticulously began their Sunday search at the top and along the sides of blackened rubble left as the fire gutted the building.

Prosecutors still searching for answers

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Poindexter faces a possible grand jury appearance after his June sentencing on Iran-Contra convictions, sources said, as prosecutors chase elusive information vital to writing a final report on the Reagan era scandal.
 New testimony from both Poindexter and former National Security Council staff deputy Oliver North could be compelled under a grant of immunity from prosecution, the sources said. They said the investigation is far from over.
 While such grand jury appearances might provide missing links to the cover-up and help prosecutors close the books on the more than 34-year-old scandal, new indictments would be unlikely, they added.
 That was the consensus drawn from a series of interviews with sources in and out of government in the wake of Poindexter's conviction Saturday on conspiracy, obstruction and lying to Congress.
 These sources, who discussed the case with The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, said Poindexter's weekend convictions are significant because they provide a focus for the next, and possibly final, phase of the Iran-Contra prosecutors' criminal probe.
 The conspiracy conviction was the first courtroom confirmation that Poindexter, North, late CIA director William J. Casey, national security adviser Robert McFarlane and others worked illegally together.

The conspirators' goals, the investigators have said, were to conceal from Congress evidence of the diversion of Iran arms sale money to the Contras, the U.S. role in a Hawk missile shipment to Iran and North's military support for the Nicaraguan rebels during a time when direct or indirect U.S. aid was banned.
 Iran-Contra prosecutor Dan Webb referred questions to Walsh. Mary Belcher, a spokeswoman for the Iran-Contra prosecutor's office, said Walsh would not comment on matters which may or may not pertain to grand juries.
 Nevertheless, North, Poindexter, and possibly former CIA station chief Joseph Fernandez, may be compelled to give grand jury testimony about the scandal, the sources said. All three testified to Congress after being granted immunity from prosecution.
 Getting immunity for North would give Iran-Contra prosecutors their first opportunity to conduct a wide-ranging interrogation of the former Marine officer outside the constraints imposed by a courtroom trial setting.
 Poindexter also is a candidate for a grand jury appearance, following his sentencing June 11, the sources said.
 The former national security adviser, like North, gave immunity testimony to Congress in 1987, saying he didn't inform President Reagan about the diversion of Iran arms sale proceeds to the Nicaraguan Contras rebels.

Spirits rise as Hubble satellite placed in shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — An upbeat mood settled over this launch center Sunday when crews finished installing the $1.3-billion Hubble Space Telescope in the space shuttle Discovery and said they were on track for a Tuesday morning liftoff.
 "This is a very important day for us," said William Taylor, the telescope's chief engineer. "Some of us who have been on the project for a while wondered if we would ever see this day, or the days to follow."
 Closing of the cargo bay, which holds the 43-foot-long telescope, was a milestone in the countdown for a launch at 8:17 a.m. EDT Tuesday. The telescope is the most expensive and complicated payload to be carried aboard the shuttle in 35 flights. It is being launched seven years later than originally planned.
 The weather predictions were good.
 Discovery's commander Loren Shriver and pilot Charles F. Bolden Jr. practiced emergency landings on the Kennedy Space Center runway Sunday, while mission specialists Bruce McCandless, Steven A. Hawley and Kathryn D. Sullivan

'Eruption' just an interruption of a controlled hearing

After reading The Times-News regarding my "eruption" at the Scoping Hearing on Tuesday night, I felt it was necessary to explain my position in a more measured way.

While sitting in the audience awaiting my turn to testify (I was No. 63 on the list) I became increasingly obnoxious to me that the Air Force was not here to hear public comment on the EIS they had drafted but they were there to rationalize and justify the conclusions to which they had already arrived.

In essence, the Air Force decided long before the EIS process that they wanted to increase the size of the Saylor Creek bombing range and to include supersonic flight as well as ordnance.

They first attempted an "end run" on the people of Idaho, and our initial public outcry prevented them from achieving their goal immediately. Consequently, they took two steps backward and made the decision to go through with a supposed rational and logical approach to the problem.

I participated in all the Scoping Hearings and became a member of the Saylor Creek Working Group, thinking that I might indeed have some impact upon the process and learn more to allay my fears regarding the Air Force's intent and motives. I have become increasingly frustrated with what I see as a relatively blatant attempt on the Air Force's part to wish away the concerns of the people of Idaho regarding their desires at Saylor Creek.

It is my belief that the Air Force attempted to structure a meeting on Tuesday night that would allow them again to have a public forum to present their side of the base expansion rather than to listen to input from the residents of Magic Valley. In addition, it is my belief that they couched with the business community of Mountain Home to interest an inordinate number of favorable testimonies on behalf of the Mountain Home business community.

That reality, coupled with the letter-writing campaign on the part of Mountain Home businessmen and retired Air Force personnel that has plagued the editorial pages of The Times-News for the past month, culminated in my coming to the conclusion that the Air Force was indeed subverting the process to achieve their own ends.

Unfortunately, I was involved in a "Catch 22" situation. If I allowed the Air Force to control the flow of the hearing in such a fashion as to give the majority of the Mountain Home Magic Valley residents then I, too, would be participating in the subversion.

The only way in which I could interrupt that process was to violate the rules the Air Force had set down and speak out openly before my audience for background. The National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) is designed to make the federal government honest evaluate "legislation and other major federal action." To inform legislators and citizens, they "must include... any irreversible and irretrievable commitment of resources that would be involved in the proposed action. Agencies are prohibited from taking any action that would either have an adverse impact on the environment or limit the choice of reasonable alternatives for the proposal." (40 CFR, Section 1506.11)

Tier 1, Tier 2 approach allows the federal government to finalize the plans moving to Mountain Home from California in June 1990. Yet, in the Tier 1 Draft EIS, it states several times Saylor Creek "is the smallest range in the Tactical Air Command. The present capacity of the SCR (3,700 range periods) is much smaller than the required capacity after realignment. Without expanded range capacity, there would be a 9,900 range period short fall."

So the Air Force admits more planes means more range.

Therefore, it appears the Base Closure and Realignment Act and the finalized EIS on base closures have sealed the deal. The spirit

Gail Ater

To the best of my ability, I attempted to point out that the Air Force was indeed controlling, manipulating and subverting the whole EIS process and not allowing us citizens as citizens to question the whole process as well as their conclusions.

Unfortunately, the manner in which I chose to confront the Air Force and our friends from Mountain Home led to an impassioned exchange in which the point was lost. Though I intend to continue to participate as a member of the Saylor Creek Working Committee and to attend all Scoping Hearings from now until this measure is defeated or substantially altered, it is my belief that allowing the Air Force to write the EIS, to control the nature of the hearings and to filter our comments through their incredibly warped perspective is to let the fox guard the chicken coop. I suggest that all of you who have comments about this process write directly to our congressmen if you truly want to be heard.

I am saddened that my behavior may have detracted from the well-reasoned, intelligent and articulate comments of many of the people of Magic Valley who share my opposition to supersonic flight and live ordnance. The Air Force has yet to prove a need for either one of these activities, let alone an increase in the size of the present range.

Let our friends in Mountain Home, I, too, share their concern about economic viability. I run a business in Gooding that is dependent upon a healthy economy throughout southern Idaho.

It has never been my intent to deny the people of Mountain Home a livelihood. However, I believe the Air Force is using the business community of Mountain Home as a bill of goods.

They are holding out the threat of a closure of Mountain Home Air Base should the range expansion not occur. I don't believe that is true, and I believe - again - that it is a crass manipulation on the part of the Air Force in order to get their way.

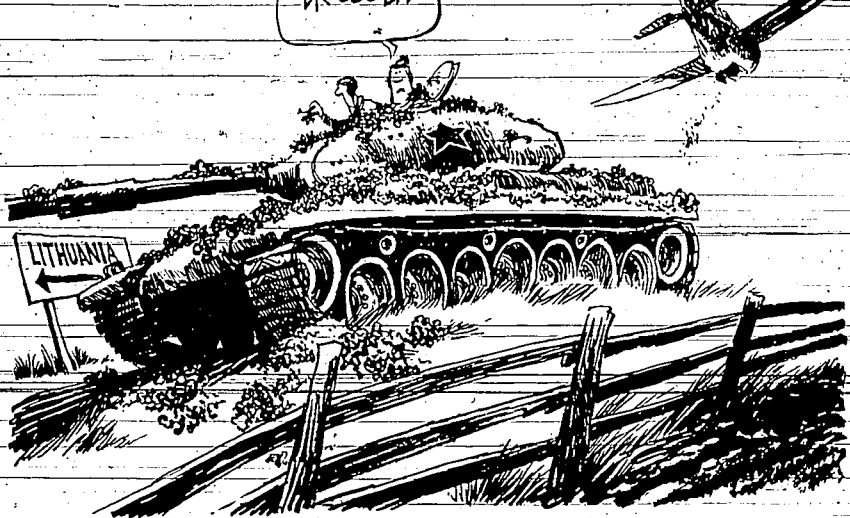

The article also gave the impression that I believe that the Bureau of Land Management is in collusion with the public and selling us a bill of goods.

That simply isn't true! It is my belief that our local Bureau of Land Management professionals know as well or better than anyone in the state the unique and special nature of the Brunau/Jaridge/Owyhee country. I have had several conversations with the Bureau of Land Management staffers who share the same concerns that I shared in Tuesday night's shouting-matching.

I am truly sorry for any confusion I may have brought to the issues, but I saw no other way to interrupt the controlled, manipulated and self-serving hearing on the part of the Air Force.

Gail Ater, Gooding is administrator of The Walker Center.

At the helm of an economic gamble

MOSCOW — Down the corridor from Mikhail Gorbachev's office on the third floor of the Kremlin sits a man called Sad Abalkin by his sympathetic colleagues.

Behind his thick spectacles, the reason for Leonid Abalkin's nickname is apparent — baggy eyes almost black with fatigue, and the burden of preparing the most momentous of perestroika's huge gambles. The plan this economist has prepared for Gorbachev can either transform the ailing Soviet economy into a free-market society or plunge it deeper into disastrous chaos.

Abalkin's sad eyes reflect his frustrating experiences with Gorbachev again and again. The Soviet president has pulled back from implementing Abalkin's counter-revolutionary plans. Fearful of the immense social and political fallout from the higher prices and unemployment they require for the short term.

Gorbachev may blink again, but during a meeting with Sen. Edward M. Kennedy here recently, Abalkin said the decision has been made to turn the Soviet system inside out between now and August, and that the first, purposely vague announcements to this effect will be made in a week or two.

The core of the program is the removal of the constraints and subsidies that keep prices from reflecting the market forces of supply and demand. Abalkin cited a constant topic of consumer exas-peration — meat. The fact there is no meat available on a given day does not mean there is no meat, he said. It simply means there is no meat at the state stores at the subsidized state price. The truth is that if one pays three to five times the official price, one can buy meat.

To make prices "free," he said, would double or triple the Soviet citizens' cost of living, as has been the case in Poland, whose bold moves last winter have been carefully studied here.

Just as painful would be the steps the government will have to take to avoid a ruinous hyperinflation in the wake of true price reform, including an opening of the Soviet economy to imports so that the supply of goods rises to meet huge, pent-up demands. One result, given the generally hideous quality of Soviet products, would be a rise in unemployment as previously sheltered domestic enterprises encounter competition.

For the majority of the Soviet people — more than 230 million out of nearly 290 million — Abalkin's plan offers freedom in return for their pain, the ability to work where they can find jobs and to start businesses if they can. To help them, reform means the establishment of the legal and financial foundations of capitalism: property laws, a stock market, a banking system, and, in stages, the convertible currency without which the country cannot attract foreign investment. At the same time, Abalkin intends that there be a large safety net to protect the tiny incomes of especially vulnerable people — the poor, the elderly, and large families. One of his many problems is that the larger the safety net the more danger there is that price reform will have no impact. Abalkin has no illusions that help from Europe and the United States can, or even should, shield the Soviet Union from the severe shock it must administer to itself. That should not, however, blind us to the things we can do. Once Gorbachev makes his move here, there is no reason not to celebrate the Soviet Union's integration into the mechanisms of the world economy.

It is also vital to organize and expand the current hodge-podge of efforts to help train and nurture a new generation of Soviet managers. And down the road, it also makes sense to help the country accumulate a large reserve of food and grant long-term credits to finance imports.

Nothing can happen, however, until Gorbachev makes his move. Political freedom without economic opportunity is meaningless. Just as the West cannot embrace a government that suppresses freedom in Lithuania, it cannot help an economy suffocated by its government.

Thomas Oliphant is a Boston Globe columnist.

Religious founders are 'Suns of Reality'

It was springtime in Baghdad in the year 1863; and the garden of Najib Pasha, henceforth to become known to the Baha'is as the Garden of Ridvan (Paradise), was aflame with the brilliant hues of roses. It was fitting for such a day, when nature was so glad and the hearts of people so filled with expectation, that it should also bring the joyous findings of a new Divine Springtime.

The first of Baha'ullah, Prophet-Founder of the Baha' Faith, wrote of that day: "The Divine Springtime is come, O Most Exalted Pen, for the Festival of the All-Merciful is fast approaching. Dearly thyself, and magnify, before the entire creation, the name of God, and celebrate his praise, in such wise that all created things may be regenerated and made new.

Baha'is believe that the spiritual energies released into the world through the revelation of Baha'ullah are ushering in a New Age. In time, these energies shall inspire an unparalleled flowering of arts and sciences in a supreme, world civilization.

The fundamental teachings of this New Age Faith — the essential oneness of mankind — will ultimately bring about the organizational and spiritual foundations for such a civilization. A world government was foreseen; a universal system of education; a world language and the harmonization of science and religion. The equality of men and women would be achieved and a political peace among all the nations of the world would emerge around the year 2000. The spirit of love that alone would make it worthwhile was released through the return of the Christ-Spirit.

This Baha'is, like Christians, celebrate an annual spring festival, the Days of Ridvan, from April 21 through May 2.

It is central to the Baha'is' view of history that the founders of all the great world religions, such as Buddha, Moses, Jesus, Muhammad and Baha'ullah, function in part as "Suns of Reality" for the world of humanity. Just as the solar cycle has its four seasons, the cycle of each Sun of Reality has its distinct and successive periods: Each brings its radiant season or springtime. When the Sun of Reality returns to quicken the world of mankind, a divine beam descends from the heaven of generosity. The realm of thoughts and ideals is set in motion and blessed with new life. As the Bible puts it: "All things are made new."

After the spring, summer comes with its fullness and fruition; autumn follows with its withering winds which chill the soul; the Sun seems to be going away until at last the mantle of winter overtakes, civilization declines and only faint traces of the effulgence of that divine Sun remain. But finally the cycle begins again, a new Heavenly Messenger appears to resurrect the souls of the children of the earth and a new springing appears.

The sacred writings of the Baha'is Faith pay tribute to many prophets of the past whose appearance is associated with other spiritual springtimes.

Thus, it is befitting during this Easter/Ridvan season to conclude this essay by sharing Baha'ullah's glowing tribute to the Author of the Christian Religion.

"Know thou that when the Son of Man (Jesus Christ) yielded up his breath to God, the whole creation wept with great weeping. By sacrificing himself, however, a fresh capacity was infused into all created things; its evidences, as witnessed in all the peoples of the earth, are now manifest before thee. The deepest wisdom, which the sages have uttered, the profoundest learning which any mind hath unfolded, the arts which the ablest hands have produced, the influence exerted by the most potent of rulers, are but manifestations of the quickening power released by his transcendent, his all-pervasive and resplendent Spirit."

We testify that when he came into the world, he shed the splendor of his glory upon all created things. Through him the leper recovered from the leprosy of perversity and ignorance. Through him the unchaste and wayward were healed. Through his power, born of Almighty God, the eyes of the blind were opened, and the soul of the sinner sanctified. He is He who purified the world. Blessed is the man who, with a face beaming with light, hath turned towards him!

This week, The Times-News is publishing a series of articles on the meaning of Easter. Today's article is by Bill Farnsworth, Twin Falls, who is director of the newly-formed Magic Valley Baha'is Institute.

No respect for Idaho land grab

An open letter to Attorney General Jim Jones:

Let me start by saying I have the deepest respect for people in the armed forces who lay their lives on the line to defend our country. But I have no respect for what the federal government is doing to Idaho in their land grab at Saylor Creek.

There's been a lot of talk about violating the NEPA law, so I consulted our attorney general's environmental lawyers. Lee Caldwell, former director of the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) is designed to make the federal government honest evaluate "legislation and other major federal actions." To inform legislators and citizens, they "must include... any irreversible and irretrievable commitment of resources that would be involved in the proposed action. Agencies are prohibited from taking any action that would either have an adverse impact on the environment or limit the choice of reasonable alternatives for the proposal." (40 CFR, Section 1506.11)

Tier 1, Tier 2 approach allows the federal government to finalize the plans moving to Mountain Home from California in June 1990. Yet, in the Tier 1 Draft EIS, it states several times Saylor Creek "is the smallest range in the Tactical Air Command. The present capacity of the SCR (3,700 range periods) is much smaller than the required capacity after realignment. Without expanded range capacity, there would be a 9,900 range period short fall."

So the Air Force admits more planes means more range.

Therefore, it appears the Base Closure and Realignment Act and the finalized EIS on base closures have sealed the deal. The spirit of the NEPA law have been violated by considering separately the base closures, then locking the planes into Mountain Home and then looking at the new needs!

To claim these are unrelated acts is like the people who teach the ins and outs of sex education without talking about pregnancy. If you let a traveling salesman lock himself in your daughter's bedroom to demonstrate his security system, don't be surprised if in about nine months, like a pregnant mother's waistline, we see some expansion and give birth to a new bombing range.

Since I am not a lawyer and may be all wrong, I called on Attorney General Jim Jones for a written explanation of why we can't sue for an injunction and reversal of base closures until the whole national land grab underlay is considered together, from closure to expansion.

If our troops are well trained today, are we just clearing the skyways of California for their business-booming future?

From the long distance coil burning to the "sonic" boom-town mentality, once again the government seems to be taking advantage of Idaho's patriotism. Ask not what our country can do for Idaho, ask what Idaho can do for those important people in California.

While many Idaho folks are thinking of passing down their family farms and ranches to their sons and daughters, the technicians in Washington, D.C., seem to have different thoughts for our future.

Letter shows no compassion

I am writing in reference to the letter from Homer and Betty Lou Cox from Rupert which appeared in the Mar. 29, 1990 edition of The Times-News.

They indicated such great hostility toward anyone who may be in favor of protecting the life of an unborn child — even resorting to the name calling. How intriguing to me that someone could react so bitterly toward others just because of a difference of opinion.

Yet, maybe I can understand their angry reaction — maybe they don't have much compassion within their hearts for the unborn or for their fellow man or woman.

After all, they did state they hope the threatened potato boycott really gets going good and they also stated they hope husbands and wives lose their jobs! (Their words, not mine.) How sad how pathetic to be so hateful, so critical toward others. And to hope for bad things to happen to good people is at the very least shocking.

If the letter Mr. and Mrs. Cox wrote is an example of pro-choice attitude, I can't see anything healthy or positive about it.

Conservatives gain in Greek election

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The conservative New Democracy party made slight gains Sunday in Greece's third national election in 10 months, but it needed more to break a debilitating political stalemate, according to partial returns.

National elections last June and again in November denied any party the parliamentary majority needed to govern the country and opinion polls indicated Sunday's balloting could also be inconclusive.

Returns from 4,189 of the 16,384 polling stations showed New Democracy with 48.3 percent of the vote. That would be enough to win if it held overall. But computer projections showed it was just a 0.5 percent higher than its total for the same polling stations in November and sliver of a majority.

The Interior Ministry computer projections showed the Panhellenic Socialist Movement (PASOK), Greece's second-largest party, running 2.2 percent behind November's totals. The Communist-led alliance of leftist parties, which finished third in the last elections, was 0.8 percent behind November's total.

Computer projections showed small parties and independents gaining the most with totals 2.5 percent higher than last time.

The New Democrats narrowly missed a majority in the last two elections and could seize control of the 300-seat single house Parliament with just a 1 percent increase in votes.

PASOK and a Communist-led alliance of leftist parties are not considered strong enough to win outright. But the two groups could win enough seats to prevent a conservative victory and form their own coalition government.

Urban workers in China on decline

BEIJING (AP) — China's urban workforce declined by 1.5 million in the first two months of 1990, with smaller collective firms showing the largest loss of workers, an official daily said Sunday.

The drop in working people continued a yearlong slump in the labor market caused by government austerity measures that have curbed inflation but brought economic growth to a standstill.

Millions of factories around the country have closed down or are operating at a reduced pace because of a lack of raw materials and operating funds.

The China Daily, quoting State Statistical Bureau figures, said the workforce stood at 136 million at the end of February, down 1.5 million from the end of 1989.

Soviet Georgians mark protest deaths

TBILISI, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Hundreds of Georgians marked the one-year anniversary of the slaying of 19 pro-independence protesters by bringing flowers and candles Sunday night to the square where they were killed.

"April 9 was the beginning of the national, democratic revolution of Georgia, which is continuing," Zviad Gamsakhurdia, the dean of Georgian dissidents, told reporters.

He was standing on the steps of the Georgian capital's Government House, overlooking the broad square where Soviet troops armed with sharpened shovels, clubs and toxic gas assaulted protesters last year.

Nineteen died in the clash and another was killed by troops in a separate incident. Thousands suffered ailments from the gas.

The incident caused a nationwide furor, raised doubts about President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's proclaimed policy against using force to stifle dissent, and brought many Georgians into the battle for independence.

Ferry disaster caused by storm winds

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — One of only 25 survivors rescued from a ferry that sank with about 240 people aboard said the boat went down minutes after being hit by gale-force winds, an official newspaper reported Sunday.

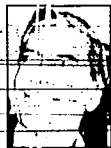

At least 30 people drowned and as many as 180 others were missing and feared dead after the double-decker ferry Sein San Pya overturned Friday afternoon in the southern Gyauing River, official radio reports said.

The latest radio report said 25 people had been rescued. The government-owned Working People's Daily quoted survivor Aung Mya Tint, a police inspector, as saying the vessel went down minutes after being struck by strong wind.

Projections: Llosa wins in Peru elections

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Celebrated novelist Maria Vargas Llosa won the first round of presidential elections Sunday, but he fell far short of the majority needed to avoid a runoff, according to unofficial projections.

Rebels trying to sabotage the elections attacked some polling stations in Lima with dynamite Sunday, but no one was reported injured. The attacks followed a day of guerrilla assaults in Lima and two other cities that killed at least two people and wounded 30. The Maoist Shining Path has assassinated six congressional candidates and killed or wounded dozens of other people in recent weeks.

Vargas Llosa, who is running on a free-market ticket, voted early and told reporters afterwards that he was "rejection all attempts by subversive groups to block the elections."

The novelist, running on a free-market ticket, captured 36.8 percent of the vote based on results from an exit poll by APOYO, a market research firm.

APYOYO said Alberto Fujimori, the son of Japanese immigrants, was in second place in its projections with 26.7 percent. Fujimori is a political independent who was virtually unknown to Peruvian voters as recently as a month ago. Peruvian Public Opinion projected 33.1 percent as Vargas Llosa's final tally and 26.2 percent for Fujimori.

APYOYO, one of Peru's most respected polling firms, said its results were based on the initial 51 percent of its total interviews done nationwide. It said that was a big enough sample to project a final

Conservatives capture majority in Hungary

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Voters choosing Hungary's first freely elected government in 43 years gave an overwhelming victory Sunday to Hungary's main conservative party.

"I am completely certain that we won the elections," Democratic Forum President Jozsef Antall told jubilant supporters crowding party headquarters six hours after polls closed.

But it is not we, but the Hungarian people who have won these elections," he said.

Final results for the 261 parliamentary seats at stake in runoff elections Sunday were not expected before Tuesday. But state television showed the conservative Hungarian Democratic Forum winning 41.8 percent of the vote, or 116 seats, while the 70 percent of the votes counted.

Their closest rivals, the liberal Alliance of Free Democrats, won 21 percent of the vote, or 58 seats.

The agrarian-based Smallholders party won 29 districts with 11.5 percent of the vote, while reform communists grouped in the Socialist party had won 18 with 8 percent.

Eight seats were still not determined.

It was the second conservative sweep in Eastern Europe in as many free elections. East Germans gave conservatives a clear victory in elections on March 18, relegating the communists to an opposition role.

Nepal gains multiparty system; King Birenda lifts 25 year ban

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — King Birenda on Sunday caved in to demands by pro-democracy leaders, establishing a multiparty system and lifting a 29-year-old ban on political parties following the bloodiest day in Nepal's modern history.

The stunning announcement was carried on government-run television in a special broadcast at 11 p.m. It was preceded by several hours of talks between opposition leaders and the Harvard University-educated monarch.

According to the announcement, the king removed the word "partyless" from the preamble of the constitution and scrapped an act that banned political parties.

Foreign Minister Pushpatai Rana said elections would be held soon, but he gave no date in an apparent deal the opposition said it would end its 50-day-old protest movement.

Several residents celebrated by climbing onto rooftops shouting "Victory, victory!" Others switched on all the lights in their houses.

A bus filled with tourists and expatriates living in Nepal made its way through the capital with armed soldiers aboard

Open street demonstrations were limited due to a 24-hour curfew, which Rana said would remain in effect until Monday.

While an announcer read the proclamation from the royal palace, the television showed scenes of the king meeting leaders of the Nepali Congress Party, outlawed for the last 29 years. The party was a leader of the recent protests.

"We talked with the king for an hour at the royal palace and the talks were very, very cordial," said Kirshna Prasad Bhattarai, a Nepali Congress leader. Pro-democracy leaders had expressed pessimism earlier in the day.

U.S. breaks ground for 'peace village'

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Ten Americans returned to a Vietnamese beach where U.S. forces landed 25 years ago, and laid the foundation for a "Peace Village" to assist victims of the Vietnam War, a participant said Sunday.

Gordon Smith, a Vietnam War veteran, said he and nine other Americans laid the ceremonies for the "village" on China Beach. Plans call for a rehabilitation center, orphanage, a medical center and trade school.

The ground-breaking ceremony, also attended by Vietnamese Red Cross officials, took place March 26.

On March 8, 1965, more than 3,500 Marines stormed onto the beach near the central Vietnam city of Da Nang in a major escalation of the war.

The project is led by Lt. Larry Hayslip, who initially collaborated with the Communist Viet Cong as a teen-ager. After a series of harrowing wartime experiences, she married an American and came to the United States.

Her autobiography, "When Heaven and Earth Changed Places," was published in the United States last year.

Ms. Hayslip's East Meets West Foundation has in recent years provided medical assistance to Vietnam through private funding, including contributions from Oliver Stone, the Vietnam veteran who has directed two major films on Vietnam, "Platoon" and "Born on the Fourth of July."

Ms. Hayslip, who lives in Escondido, Calif., was born in a small village near Da Nang.

Smith, of Monterey, Calif., said additional fund raising in the United States would be necessary before construction of the village could begin.

The center would help the handicapped who fought on both sides in the war, victims of land mines that continue to take their toll on civilians, and people suffering from ailments unrelated to the war, he said.

The China Beach project is one of a growing number of private American efforts to heal the wounds of the Vietnam War. These have frequently been initiated by war veterans.

The United States does not recognize the Hanoi government and it forbids commerce with Vietnam. American aid organizations must obtain permits from Washington and operate under certain financial restrictions in Vietnam.

Smith was involved in the building of a medical clinic by war veterans in the southern seaside town of Vung Tau. The clinic opened March 30, 1989, and it receives medical supplies obtained by veterans in the United States.

Lithuanians see better future in being small, free

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Many Lithuanians say their declaration of independence was like leaping for a lifeline to escape a sinking ship.

"Alone, we know it will be better in five years; with them, we don't," banker Gintautas Preidis said of the Lithuanian parliament's decision March 11 to cut loose from the Soviet Union and its economic and ethnic problems.

Lithuanians expect initial difficulties in switching from central planning and subsidies to a market economy in which prices are set by competition. The republic may also lose access to cheap Soviet resources.

"I visited a collective farm where they had 30 people as bookkeepers," said Joseph Kazickas, a Lithuanian who emigrated to the United States at the end of World War II and became a businessman.

He is back in Lithuania, arranging for experts to help reform the economy and working with Premier Kazimieras Pranskis to set up a system that would entice Western investment.

The Kremlin, which has used troops to take over Lithuania's prosecutor's office and has waged a war of nerves to keep the republic in its fold, is standing "in the way of some reform and could stifle other moves to revamp the republic's economy."

Mrs. Pranskisene has said Soviet Premier Nikolai I. Ryzhkov and his Cabinet refused to transfer most authority from Moscow to Vilnius.

For example, Pranskisene suggested that the majority of the 200-plus factories now run by ministries in Moscow be turned over to Lithuanian control. Ryzhkov and his ministers are willing to hand over only a few dozen.

Flutist Galway to play instrumental lead in upcoming opera

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Flutist James Galway's eyes sparkle with the mention of his operatic debut in the title role of Rossini's "The Thieving Magpie" in its first U.S. performance in this century.

"I didn't study birds for years to do this, I studied music," said Galway, 50, who is basing his stage movements on his observations of the chattering, black and white bird.

Rossini wrote the opera using an actor as the magpie who stole the silver spoon and caused a young servant girl to be sentenced to death, but the Opera Company of Philadelphia revised the role for a musician.

The rolling notes Galway plays as he flits about the stage were borrowed from passages Rossini wrote for the violin and flute as parts of the orchestra down in the pit.

Combs, released later at police headquarters, said the arrest, based on a private complaint, was his first and called it "the grossest injustice of human rights I have ever seen." He is scheduled to appear April 25 in Hamilton County Municipal Court.

He has filed a lawsuit accusing Charles Schneider and the House Inc., owner of the building, have not kept separate the CaddyCombs and Caddy clubs, and has failed to maintain and to pay half the profits of the comedy club.

William DeCenso, attorney for the House Inc. and Schneider, said his client did not want to comment on Combs' arrest.

Last year, the state GOP cut staff and expenses after officials discovered a former bookkeeper had failed to pay withholding taxes for about 16 months. The party had to borrow to repay taxes of about $150,000 and a $74,000 fine.

"One of my objectives is to make sure that things run as cleanly as possible," said Bush, who also will oversee the state party's fund-raising operations.

Bush replaces state Sen. Edwin P. "Eddy" Dalton of Henrico County, who was the party's unsuccessful candidate for lieutenant governor last year.

According to a publicity release for the TV show, as Llewelyn had his customary chat with the adversaries after the court battle, Dee-Oh-Gee sunk his fangs into Llewelyn's right knee.

A physician was called in to administer a tetanus shot.

The dog owners ruefully explained that Dee-Oh-Gee had never acted mean before being shot. Llewelyn, who has four dogs of his own, accepted their apology.

The dog owners won their case before Wapner, by the way, persuading the judge to put the bite on the neighbor boy's father for $300 in surgery costs for Dee-Oh-Gee.

Linda Stance, a clerk at the Harley-Davidson of Green River motorcycle shop, said Ford spent about 45 minutes Thursday buying a 1990 black and cream Heritage model Harley.

Stance said Ford, who owns land near Jackson, called earlier in the week to ask if the shop carried the motorcycle. Told the bike was available, he said he would fly to the Rock Springs Airport and would need it left to the shop.

Linda Laughlin, the shop's owner, gave Ford a ride from the airport to Green River, a community of about 10,000. At the shop, he posed for pictures with workers before he rode his new Harley out of town.

Urtz said Sunday morning that he did not know how Lee fell except that the appalling stunt "was part of the routine." It was not immediately known if Lee would be released later Sunday, he said.

Ogden woman says cat can talk, is local celebrity

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — The 20-year-old talking cat didn't exactly talk.

More like moored, to be honest. Just about Eileen Edwards nuts, here she had talked the newspaper about Ming Sue, saying the cat was turning 20 years old in a couple of days. She said Ming Sue was a special cat.

Said the cat could talk.

Edwards sounds more like a cat than her cat does she has a high, trilling voice that can warble like Roger Rabbit's. When she talks to the cat, her voice goes up another octave, and she can purr and meow with the best of them.

Which was more than could be said for Ming Sue on a recent afternoon. Ming Sue tried to sneak out the door when Edwards opened it, but Edwards grabbed her.

"We're talking about you," she told the cat, to which the cat meowed in a hurt sort of way, one of two times the whole afternoon the feline made a noise.

Ming Sue is famous, Edwards said. Several years ago, when Edwards was living in Salt Lake City, Ming Sue was a regular caller on "Nitecapers," a late-night radio talk show hosted by Herb Jepko.

"Herpe would call in just to hear her go, 'Meow,' and carry on," she said.

Jepko, contacted this week in Salt Lake City where he is reviving his Nitecapers program, said he doesn't specifically remember Ming Sue or Edwards. But he's confident she was one of the thousands of callers he had back then.

In fact, Jepko said, Edwards called last week and put the cat on the phone.

"She gave the cat the phone and the cat talks to me," he said. "I'd say something and then it would say something. I guess if you stretched the conversation a little bit, it did talk to me."

The cat's vocabulary is limited to about six or seven words, Edwards admits. "I'm in the habit of saying, 'Not now! Not now!' and she picked it up."

She can also say, "Uh uh," and "OK," Edwards said.

Ming Sue is part seal-point Siamese, part who knows. Small for a cat, her coat isn't as smooth as it once was. And, as became abundantly clear, she's fond of afternoon naps.

Edwards, turning her attention to the snoozing feline, shook Ming Sue's head and her voice got even higher.

"Hey, you know we got company!

Eileen Edwards says her 20-year-old cat Ming Sue says things like "OK" and "not now"

Man sentenced for dog beating

LOWELL, Mass. (AP) — A teenager was sentenced to six months in jail as a result of a neighbor taking photographs of him beating his family dog, authorities said.

Animal rights advocates said it was the first time in at least 20 years that anyone in Massachusetts had been imprisoned for abusing an animal.

This shows that something can be done in cases like these, and it certainly sends a message to people that animal cruelty will not be tolerated," said Allan Davidson, director of the Lowell Humane Society, where Champ is in protective custody.

Kevin Deschene, 19, of Lowell, was sentenced Thursday on a conviction for a misdemeanor complaint of cruelty to animals.

Deschene's neighbor, Jim Molloy, said he had seen Deschene on several occasions beating and kicking the German shepherd while it was chained to a post.

Molloy took pictures of Deschene kicking and beating Deschene's family's dog, named Champ, with a probe last fall.

"I had no idea that beating the dog was a crime when I took the pictures," said Molloy. "I just hoped they would take the dog away and save the poor thing."

Deschene and his family have contended the teen-ager was disciplining the dog for tearing up garbage.

Deschene's attorney argued in

Kevin Deschene, 19, was caught viciously beating the family dog, Champ, by neighbor Jim Molloy court that, as in domestic disputes involving people, there should be no conviction because the victim was not seriously injured.

Judge James Killam said Champ was helpless and was without the option of leaving or obtaining a restraining order, as do people in abusive situations.

Shriver quits 'Sunday Today' job

NEW YORK (AP) — Maria Shriver returned Sunday to co-anchor NBC's "Sunday Today" only to say she's leaving, she cited travel and motherhood as reasons.

Shriver, who is married to actor Arnold Schwarzenegger, gave birth to their first child, a daughter, in December.

On her return from maternity leave, she told viewers that Sunday was her last day on the show she has anchored since its inception in 1987.

She also will be giving up her anchor job on the Saturday edition of "NBC Nightly News," but will stay at NBC News, doing a series of prime-time news specials and special segments for NBC's weeknight news program.

No replacement for her in either anchor job was immediately announced.

Published reports have speculated that Mary Alice Williams, who also recently returned from maternity leave, will succeed Shriver on the Sunday show. But NBC spokeswoman Peggy Hubble declined to comment on that.

"We're in discussions with Mary Alice about her role at NBC and we'll have an announcement later," Hubble said Sunday.

70-year-old woman jumps from bridge

TWIN FALLS — A 70-year-old woman died Sunday morning after jumping off the Perrine Bridge.

The Jerome County sheriff's office said the Shoshone woman, who parked her vehicle in a parking area at the north end of the bridge, walked 60 to 80 feet on the west side of the bridge before jumping about 10:25 a.m.

The sheriff's office didn't release her name, pending notification of her relatives. Officers from the Jerome and Twin Falls sheriff's offices as well as the Jerome County Search and Rescue Team responded, finding the woman dead on a ledge 300 feet below the bridge.

Boy who saved friend's life to receive lifesaving award

TWIN FALLS — A boy who saved a friend's life after a 30-foot fall into Rock Creek Canyon will receive a national Veterans of Foreign Wars lifesaving award Thursday.

U.S. Rep. Richard Stallings will present the award to Matthew Hancey, 11, for saving 7-year-old Stevie Fisher's life two weeks ago after Fisher fell on lava boulders in Rock Creek Canyon.

Fisher will receive a plaque and a $100 savings bond. His brother, Ben Hancey, will also receive a certificate and $50 for running for help.

Mayor Tom Condie has declared Thursday "Matthew Hancey Day."

Stallings will also present Twin Falls resident Jeanne Myer with a flag once flown over the U.S. Capitol. Her own flag that was given to her on behalf of her father, who was declared missing in action, was stolen last year.

Stallings will also give a humanitarian award to Vickie Edwards, a Magic Valley Regional Medical Center nurse, for helping to arrange the flight of cancer patient Domingo Castillo last week to his home in Lubbock, Texas, so he could be with his family.

The ceremonies are sponsored by the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Kimberly firm enters lowest bid for overpass rebuilding

HEYBURN — Idaho Construction Co. Inc., of Kimberly, is the low bidder for the reconstruction of the Interstate 84 overpass near here that was damaged two years ago.

The company's bid of $804,097 was the lowest of the four bids received, the Idaho Transportation Department announced.

Work should begin at the end of this month to replace the span with one supporting pillar and could be completed in October, according to the department.

Eastbound and westbound lanes will remain open throughout construction.

The overpass was damaged in July 1988 when a tractor-trailer slammed into one of the supports, killing the driver.

Environmentalists to fight Bliss, Shelley dam projects

IDHAHO FALLS — Environmentalists are promising to fight to the bitter end hydropower projects near Bliss and Shelley.

But Idaho Falls city leaders maintain the dams near the two towns, although on sensitive stretches of the Snake River, are needed to meet the community's need for additional electricity.

"I think you're making a foolish mistake," countered Jerry Jayne of the Idaho Environmental Council at a recent meeting. "I intend to resist as long as you try to build them."

The city recently joined forces with Tacoma, Wash., to build an 86-megawatt dam at the A.J. Wiley site near Bliss, which is currently under a legislative moratorium on development while the Water Resources Board considers whether it should be made permanent.

Mayor Tom Condie and City Councilman Wade Deist said not many acceptable alternatives exist to fill the city's growing need for power.

Friends of stroke victim plan fund drive for medical costs

HAZELTON — Friends of a Hazelton woman who suffered a severe stroke recently have begun a fund drive to raise money to help with her medical costs.

Alice Long, wife of Dave Long, pastor of the Assembly of God Church in Hazelton, suffered a stroke March 29 and the family has no health insurance.

Possible fund-raisers include car washes and a dinner, said Jetton Torix, a family friend. And donations can be sent to West One Bank Box 158, Hazelton, Idaho 83335.

The Longs recently moved to the area with their two children—Alice Long probably will have to go to Boise to Pocatello for rehabilitation, Torix said. She currently is at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

Funding for new Jackpot church drying up

By MICHELLE COLE
Times-News writer

JACKPOT — Although the nickels and dimes may be flowing at Jackpot's four casinos, funding for another church has all but dried up.

After pouring their prayers, plans and donations into the project, Jackpot's Catholics and Protestants spent Christmas and now it looks like they'll spend Easter — without a suitable place to worship.

The tiny border town currently has a Lutheran Synod, a Baptist Church and an LDS stake, but residents say Jackpot is just too small to attract another mainline Protestant church — like the United Methodist or Presbyterian. Jackpot's Catholics weren't faring much better as they joined forces with the Protestants four years ago to build a church they could share.

It looked like their prayers had been answered last fall when Idaho's Catholic Archdiocese donated an old church building from Eden.

But the 1,800-square-foot bulk fell off the trailer during its 67-mile journey across the border. And the Jackpot Community Church has spent the past six months repairing and refurbishing.

"It just needed a lot more work than we thought it did," said Julie Klekas, president of the church board.

"We were a little discouraged that we didn't get it open by Christmas," she said. "Nobody on the board had much experience in construction."

So far, members — with the help of a hired contractor — put a new roof and entrance on the old structure as well as removed asbestos siding.

"Since then we haven't had a lot of money to do much with it," Klekas said. The church still needs extensive interior work before services can be held and Klekas worries that the money for those repairs won't come until the community sees the church opened.

"We're going to find the funds somehow," she said.

Klekas and her group can count on some divine inspiration this Holy Week.

The Twin Falls County Association of Churches, which has nurtured the project over the years, plans to donate offerings from this week's Good Friday eucharistic service to the Jackpot church board.

The service will be held at noon at the First Baptist Church on Shoshone Street in Twin Falls. The Rev. Tom Tucker, of the Twin Falls First United Methodist Church, said another countywide offering is planned in May.

"Hopefully they'll say a lot of prayers," Klekas said.

Fighting child abuse

Participants in Sunday's "Out of the Darkness" program "break the chain of child abuse" on the courthouse steps in Twin Falls. About 50 people turned out for the event that included candle-lighting and a march to the courthouse where Mayor Tom Condie spoke. The event was held in conjunction with "The Healing Piece," a show at New Beginnings featuring art created by survivors of child abuse or incest, marking this week as Child Abuse Awareness week.

City Council to consider fee increase

By JENNIFER KAUTH
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The City Council hasn't decided yet whether to raise gate fees for all Shoshone Falls Park visitors or just for those who plan to swim in Dierkes Lake.

The money will be used to develop the 100 city-owned acres above the lake.

The council last week approved spending up to $10,000 for a rough access road so city workers can get back to the area to pick up litter and maybe do some landscaping.

The City Parks and Recreation Commission has not made a final decision, however, to move ahead with plans for an arboretum and botanical gardens on the site.

The parks commission will address the matter at its Tuesday noon meeting at City Hall.

Meanwhile, the City Council today at its 4 p.m. session at City Hall will discuss raising fees and how to monitor such an increase.

Though the council must have a public hearing on the matter before issuing a final decision, council members have several suggestions:

- Mayor Tom Condie supports a $1 increase on admission to the entire area. That would raise the cost of admission to $2 per vehicle. Bike riders and those on foot would pay $1.

With 1 week left, IRS urges taxpayers to action

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

Valley incomes - B3

TWIN FALLS — Although taxpayers have one extra day to work on their returns this year, that day is only one week away.

Because the traditional tax deadline, April 15, falls on a Sunday this year, the Internal Revenue Service has extended its deadline to midnight on April 16.

Still, said IRS Boise District Director Jack B. Chesky, "They definitely need to get cracking."

They won't be alone. About 50 percent of the nation's returns are filed in the final two weeks of the tax season, IRS spokeswoman Merry Trudeau said.

Chesky, recently appointed to head the Boise-IRS office, advised procrastinating taxpayers to mail in an extension, Form 4868. But that only means the taxpayer can file his return late — taxes still must be estimated and paid in full by April 16.

"Estimate high, if you have to estimate," said local accountant Marvin Chamberlain. The IRS will penalize taxpayers who don't send in enough money by the deadline.

Local H&R Block manager Royce Abernathy said business has been running steady, perhaps even a little busier than last year, at his office.

"My suggestion is to get filed as early as possible," Abernathy said.

The IRS's electronic filing system is seeing a lot of demand, Trudeau said. Abernathy said it is a smashing success — his customers are getting refunds in three days.

But to get any refund, a taxpayer must get his ducks in line.

"The best suggestion is to get organized," Chamberlain said. Taxpayers who haven't filed yet should gather information on medical expenses and insurance premiums, mortgage interest payments, personal interest and other deductions.

For taxpayers who can't itemize, the only tax-reduction strategy left is an Individual Retirement Arrangement, commonly called an IRA. Not everybody qualifies for one, but it's the best way to reduce a taxes at such a late date.

Checklist for a speedy return

- The IRS reminds taxpayers to check these items to speed return processing:
  - ✓ Are your name and Social Security number on each schedule?
  - ✓ Are the names of all dependants on your return?
  - ✓ Are the Social Security numbers of all dependants at least 2 years old on your return?
  - ✓ Have you double-checked all arithmetic?
  - ✓ Have you entered the correct standard deduction, if you are claiming it?
  - ✓ If somebody else can claim you as a dependent, have you checked the appropriate box?
  - ✓ Have you checked to see if you qualify for the Earned Income Credit — aimed at workers who earn less than $19,340 and have a child living with them?
- Are your entries for any estimated tax payments on the Form 1040?
- ✓ Are all entries on the proper line and legible?
- ✓ Are all W-2 forms attached?
- ✓ Are all schedules and forms in the proper order?
- ✓ Are all taxpayers' signatures on the form?
- ✓ If you must write a check, did you write your Social Security number, daytime phone number and "1989 Form 1040" — or other appropriate form number — on your check?
- ✓ Did you use the peel-off label, clearly corrected if necessary?
- ✓ Did you keep a copy of your return?
- ✓ Did you attach enough postage to the envelope?

College to help fur students in fight over machines

HEYBURN — They once learned to cut mink pelts into long, thin strips. Now, the students and their instructor are cutting each other to shreds, and the College of Southern Idaho has stepped in to stop the verbal blood-letting.

"We feel like she used us just to benefit herself," said Bonnie Hutchison of Elba, one of 10 students who purchased industrial sewing machines through their instructor, Ruth Honeycutt of Rupert, in 1989.

"I did them a favor," Honeycutt said. "They made my life so miserable."

At issue is $26,000 that Honeycutt collected from students and sent to New York to purchase 16 rebuilt sewing machines.

The students contend that Honeycutt acted as a sales agent of Hi-Tech Machines and pressured them to buy useless, dilapidated machines.

Honeycutt insists there was no pressure and the machines work just fine.

"The students came to me and asked me to get prices and they asked me to order for them," Honeycutt said. "I think the machines are just as good as my machines. My machines are 65 year old and they're rebuilt!"

money," said Orval Bradley, dean of CSI's vocational-technical division.

All parties agree that when the CSI class began in October 1988, students were told not to purchase machines until graduation, when they would become eligible for low-interest small-business loans from the Idaho Department of Agriculture.

The class was a joint effort of Moyle Mink of Heyburn and CSI, using a Region IV Development Association grant, Bradley said. The intent was to teach people to sew fur garments in their homes as independent contractors.

"Our dream was and still is to produce fur coats in Idaho," said Marta Moyle of Moyle Mink.

But the various parties agree on little else.

The students say that after the class began, Honeycutt told them they could get more class work done if they bought their own machines.

"The machines available (in the Moyle's classroom) were really more than adequate," Marta Moyle said. "We went and bought four more precisely because we didn't want the students to spend their money."

Susan Rucker of Rupert, one of Honeycutt's students, believes Honeycutt acted as a sales representative for Hi-Tech Machines of New York. Rucker offered a facsimile of Honeycutt's order letter to the company as evidence.

"Here are the checks we talked about on the phone," Honeycutt wrote to Jim Mackler at Hi-Tech on Jan. 16, 1989. "Like you said as per our last phone conversation a sales manager gets 6

Fight between representatives over power plant plan continues

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Rep. Wayne Owens of Utah is continuing his battle with Nevada U.S. Sen. Harry Reid over a massive power-plant project sought for northeastern Nevada, saying Reid is putting jobs ahead of the environment.

"I'm looking long-term," Owens said on Friday. "Reid is thinking about jobs."

Owens and Idaho Rep. Richard H. Stallings, both Democrats like Reid, have taken their political and geographic ally to task over his support of the proposed $4 billion, coal-fired Thousand Springs power project southeast of Jackson.

The two congressmen contend Nevada would reap the benefits. California would get the electricity and Utah and Idaho would receive the air pollution from the planned 2,000-megawatt plant.

Owens told the Sparks Tribune Friday that he was more concerned with the environmental problems the plant would generate than Nevada employment.

And while Reid argued that Sierra Pacific has invested as much as $75 million in the proposed project northeast of Wells, Nev., Owens said the country can't be held liable for the utility's decisions.

"Sierra Pacific will have to figure out its own power problems," he said Friday. "We can't be responsible for bad judgment and investment decisions by Sierra Pacific."

Owens said he and Stallings would look at any changes in the proposed plant that would reduce air pollution.

"But we're more concerned about the environment than money," he said.

The two denounced the proposal in a joint Washington news conference last week.

"We would never permit a 1,000-mile sewer pipe to be built to pollute our waters in Utah and Idaho, and we can never permit it to happen to our air," Owens said.

The two congressmen signed a letter to Bureau of Land Management Director Cy Jamison at Tuesday's news conference questioning his agency's draft environmental impact study on the project and asking him to deny a transfer of public lands from the BLM to Sierra Pacific Resources.

The Reno-based utility company is a major player in the consortium of eight investors which seeks to develop the 2,000-megawatt coal-fired plant over a 16-year period on 15,960 acres of BLM land near the Utah and Idaho borders.

Owens and Stallings asked Jamison to block the exchange of federal land for 13,410 acres of private property offered by the Thousand Springs Generating Co. partnership.

Reid responded on Thursday that the congressmen were overlooking the jobs and tax revenues the plant would produce.

Idaho high in uninsured children rankings

BOISE (AP) — Idaho is among the highest states in the nation with the number of medically uninsured children, but that situation will change this month.

Until now, nearly 200,000 Idahoans — 20 percent of the population — have lacked health insurance.

But federal law now requires Idaho and other states to expand Medicaid to cover more pregnant women and preschool children. Medicaid is a publicly funded health program for low-income people.

The new law is expected to cost $30 million a year in Idaho — for which $7.9 million has been appropriated by the Legislature.

It would boost the number of Idaho people receiving Medicaid to 200,000.

State officials and public-health advocates praised the expansion. Some are holding their breath.

However, to see how many Idahoans will swallow their pride and apply for the services and how many doctors will take on new Medicaid patients.

Not only will the program help catch small health problems before they become large ones, but it can cut taxpayers' expenses as well.

For example, she said, children born to low-income mothers who received no pre-natal care are more likely to develop health problems.

foot would still enter for free.

Councilman Jim Vickers, however, has proposed charging only those who swim at Dierkes Lake an extra 50 cents per person.

He has said he does not support raising toll for those who only want to use the Legislature.

If the latter proposal wins out, the city could install a second gate at the roadway entrance to Dierkes Lake. The ticket-taker at the top could issue a special token to operate the second gate once everyone in the vehicle has paid the 50-cent fee.

Or the city could install a turnstile in the fence between the parking lot and the actual Dierkes Lake park area. The city would have to extend the fence that lines only part of the area but the same token concept could be used — pay at the gate and insert the token to make the turnstile move.

The council has also discussed selling some kind of season pass for boaters, and others who use the park often.

percent, I will leave it up to you to do the right thing by me."

The order letter was written on Moyle Mink letterhead. It was not signed, but the name "Ruth" was typed at the bottom of the note to Macker.

Ruth Honeycutt acknowledges receiving $1,400 from the sales transaction — roughly 5% percent of the sewing machines' purchase price.

But she insists that Macker was the "sales manager." The letter was intended as a reminder to him that she had requested a discount for her commission, she said. She said she intended to subtract her phone call expenses from the $1,400 and distribute the remaining money to the students.

But after the students began bothering her, she kept the money to hire a lawyer, she said.

Last week, Knicker's phone at Hi-Tech Machines was answered by a tape recorder. He did not return a phoned request for comment.

Honeycutt's attorney, Roger Ling of Rupert, said he saw nothing wrong with Honeycutt keeping the money.

"She had made no commitment to give it back," Ling said. "What did they expect — that the teacher was going to incur all those costs on her own?"

Marta Moyle insisted she knew nothing about the students' order.

until March, when students began asking where the machines were.

"We were very surprised," Marta Moyle said. "We had advised (the students) against spending all of their hard-earned money."

Rucker, a sometime employee of the J.R. Simplot Co. plant in Burley, signed up for the class in 1988 because, "I was hoping to start a business in my own home and be with my family," she said.

She brought $975 to Honeycutt in November 1988 for one machine. Later, she brought $1,975 for a second machine to sew heavier furs.

She decided to get the second machine after Honeycutt told her the prices would go up soon, she said.

Rucker and her husband Don, a farm manager, borrowed $2,950 for the two machines. Honeycutt said she still owe a local lender for part of that — at 32 percent interest, she said.

"I've been paying for this loan since over a year ago," she said.

The class was a total failure for all of the students. Irene Dye and her cousin took the course, bought $4,080 worth of machines through Honeycutt, took a Department of Agriculture loan, and started their own business. They have sold garments to out-of-state furrers.

"But they are not happy with the machines."

"They weren't anything like we thought we were getting," Dye said. "We wanted our money back."

Students have complained of missing parts, worn-out mechanisms and noisy motors. They also complain that the machines took too long to arrive and that they never got receipts for their money.

Hutchison said her machine was too noisy to use for any length of time.

"It was the only one that took the machine up to the classroom. Nobody could stand it (the noise)."

As far as the purpose that I bought it for I haven't used it."

Not all of the students bought machines. Frances Hayden believes the other students blundered when they just trying to exact revenge because Honeycutt graded too stringently.

"It's a question of getting back (at Honeycutt); it seems to me it's what they're wanting to do," said Hayden, who now works for Honeycutt at Furs by Design.

"None of this was because I was going to flunk the class," Rucker said. "It's because I'm out of

Per capita income in Sun Valley is highest in Idaho

By The Associated Press and The Times-News

BOISE - Sun Valley had the highest per capita income in Idaho in 1987, according to Census Bureau data released this week.

The Canyon County town of Wilder was among the southwestern Idaho communities at the low end of the list, the agency said.

The rest of the Magic Valley fell somewhere in between.

But people in Wilder and Sun Valley said the figures are not what they seem.

Sun Valley's figure does not mean citizens are living in paradise, residents said. Housing costs are astronomical and a lot of the money in the city is earned outside Blaine County.

"It would be a badge of honor if it didn't also reflect the cost of living. If we had Wilder costs and Sun Valley incomes, that would be fun," said Jack Brown, city administrator for Sun Valley, population 800.

Wilder came in at $3,936 for every person in the town of 1,300, while Sun Valley came in at a whopping $28,010 for each man, woman and child.

"I would say that Wilder is not on the endangered species list," said Doug Amick, Wilder's mayor.

"We're in bottom gear for as the (business) cycle is concerned," he said. "We're on our way back up."

However, three Owyhee County communities had per capita incomes lower than Wilder. Grand View, population 366, had the lowest average income at $2,970; Homedale, population 2,078, was next at $3,475; and Marsing, population 786, was third lowest at $3,653.

Per capita income for the state was $9,159. By comparison, the Boise figure was $12,319. The U.S. figure was $11,923.

Wilder and Sun Valley are more than a couple of hundred miles apart. They are worlds apart, and Amick said that's just fine.

"I've never lived in a place like that, and I don't want to," he said. "I visited there once, and I didn't like it. The pace of Wilder is just slow. But (in Sun Valley) everybody's in a hurry. Sun Valley is just a rat race."

Ore-Idaho plant cited 4 times since 1986

BOISE (AP) — Ore-Idaho Foods Inc.'s Ontario, Ore., plant has been cited four times since 1986 for insufficient record keeping and violating pollution standards, the Environmental Protection Agency says.

One citation involved a Dec. 6, 1988, incident when the potato and vegetable processing operation dumped wastewater containing 51 percent more solids than allowed into the Snake River.

The EPA currently is investigating allegations of other possible violations and assertions that pollution monitoring records have been falsified, but no charges have been filed.

Ken Brooks, director of the agency's Oregon Operations Office, said it was uncertain whether the earlier incidents are part of a longstanding pattern.

"That's part of the investigation to determine what exactly has occurred and for how long," Brooks said. "There are lots of uncertainties right now, and I'm anxious to learn more, too."

But Shirley Kengla, a the EPA's Idaho Operations spokeswoman for the Oregon Office, Department of Environmental Quality, said the Ontario plant has a relatively good record of complying with its discharge permit.

Boise-based Ore-Ida was cited for three violations in December 1988 and once for failing to properly monitor wastewater discharge in April through November 1986.

"They really don't (have a bad record), particularly in the records they have given us, there is no history of problems," Ms. Kengla said.

The situations that led to the violations have been corrected, she said. None of the citations resulted in fines.

Jim Linford, general manager of engineering for Ore-Ida, would not comment about the citations Friday, formally known as notices of violation.

In a related development, an investigation of records at Ore-Ida's plant in Burley on Thursday turned up no problems, said Warren McFall, acting director of the EPA's Idaho Operations Office.

Make this one of your outstanding projects of the year and have fun at the same time. We're celebrating Earth Day and National Science & Technology week with a Kite Flying Contest. You're invited to be a part of this important time.

A good planet is hard to find. At some point in the next century, our earth's population will have doubled. Even now we are polluting and depleting its resources at an unprecedented rate. This week is dedicated to encouraging everyone to think about the individual decisions that must be made to save our planet. THINK GLOBALLY ... ACT LOCALLY!

THERE ARE NO OFFICIAL ENTRY BLANKS ... NO RULES. JUST BRING A KITE (made from The Times-News) AND SHOW UP FOR THE FLY-IN ON SUNDAY, APRIL 22nd. For your convenience... here's some simple directions on building a kite from an old newspaper. You are not required to stay with this design - but if it will help - you are welcome to use this method of building your kite.

THEISEN MOTORS is overstocked with the most beautiful line of new cars in America...to make it short and sweet, we ordered too many! Frankly, we have broken all sales records for the month of March. The factory built all our April production in March. Now we have a serious problem - finding somewhere to park them! So with Ford Motor Co.'s assistance, we will - we must - move more new cars this month to make room. In addition, you will receive one of the finest 10 speed bikes made with the purchase of every new car, regardless of make, model, color, or style.

Newspaper Kite Instructions

INSTRUCTIONS:

- Gather all of the needed materials. Make a pattern for the kite from the illustration. Cut out the kite. To strengthen the edges of the kite, reinforce them with a binding of tape.
- Cut six 3"x1.5" bridling points from paper or plastic remnants. (This is where the dowels or string will be attached.)
- If you want to decorate the kite, do so now. Turn your kite face down. Place four pieces of 2" tape at the four corners where the dowels will be secured. Place the dowels over the tape, secure with four of the bridling attachments and securely tape the strips of paper in place, making certain that the tips of the dowels also are taped in place.
- The remaining two bridling points will hold the string. Cut two 18" lengths. For extra strength, sew the string through the bridling pieces with a darning needle, then tape in place. Attach as shown in the illustration.
- In order to balance the kite, you need to locate the center of the bridle. To do this, hold the two strings, letting the kite dangle. Tie them at the point where the kite is level, using a loop knot. Attach the main kite string at this point, also.
- To fly the kite, place it face down on the ground and step back about 15 yards. Now you can run like crazy, but all you really need to do is jerk the line gently and the kite should rise. At this point, you may want to step into a slow slide. The rest is a breeze. Enjoy.

MATERIALS:

- A roll of masking tape
- A roll of 8-lb. cotton line and a kite spool
- Scissors, Magic markers, yardstick, darning needle, and a smooth cutting surface.
- One full center (double) sheet of The Times-News
- Two 1/8"x16" dowels

Reactions in tanks a mystery to agency

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — The U.S. Department of Energy knows what it's pouring into giant nuclear waste storage tanks at the Hanford nuclear reservation.

But the agency doesn't always know how the chemicals, byproducts of nuclear weapons production, will react together in the tanks. New findings indicate some of those wastes could explode.

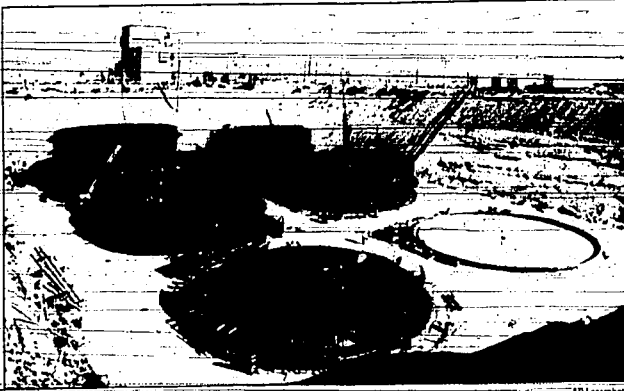

That has prompted criticism from Congress and a citizen watchdog group, which contend the department knew about the danger years ago. Energy Department officials say the danger from the gas only became apparent two months ago.

The dispute illustrates how mysterious and volatile nuclear waste can be. A veritable witches' brew, the wastes are trapped inside huge storage tanks, surrounded by steel and concrete and buried under several feet of earth at temperatures of 140 degrees.

The insides of the tanks are far too lethal for human entry. All scientists can do is monitor the temperature and vapors escaping through filtered vents, and occasionally send a probe into the muck. But the probe work is expensive and tanks can go for years without anyone looking inside.

Hanford has 177 storage tanks and probing has stopped at the 20 that may contain hydrogen in the waste, the Energy Department said. Officials fear a spark from a probe could trigger an explosion.

"We've got good data on what went into those tanks," Don

This file photo shows six giant nuclear waste tanks in construction in Hanford

Wodrich, a scientist with contractor Westinghouse Hanford Co., said last week. "But over the years it blended together and mixed. Now it's more complicated."

The Energy Department announced March 23 that hydrogen building up under the waste crust inside some storage tanks could trigger an explosion, perhaps had enough to release radioactivity into the atmosphere.

But coupled with the warning was a unique admission that DOE really isn't sure how dangerous the situation is, and that it will likely take until June to come up with a plan for a solution.

The agency will not even have a safety analysis completed for two weeks, although officials have stated repeatedly that the explosion risk is low.

Ken Morgan, a spokesman for the agency, has said there is more danger to the public from a gas leak than from the tanks, and called the controversy the "Gold Fusion" of disasters.

That has infuriated a citizens watchdog group.

"They don't fully accept their responsibility to protect public health and safety," said Jim Thomas of the Hanford Education Action League in Spokane.

Resolute sides hammer out Idaho trail agreement

MOSCOW (AP) — Although efforts to create an Idaho Centennial Trail seemed to be leading nowhere, the two resolute sides may reach a compromise by backpacking season.

Idaho Parks and Recreation Director Yvonne Ferrell and Jack Trueblood, a member of the state Centennial's Lasting Legacy Committee, on Thursday hammered out a tentative agreement. But neither will say specifically what that is.

"It all looked so easy at the beginning. We were all surprised at how hard it's been," Trueblood said. The concept of a 1,200-mile path from the Canadian border to Nevada as a monument to Idaho's first century was adopted by the Centennial Commission's Lasting Legacy Committee in 1987.

The scheme, however, included trail segments running through the Frank Church-River of No Return and Selway-Bitterroot wildernesses, which would have banned motorized vehicles.

Parks and Recreation then suggested multiple routes in central Idaho: one through the wilderness and one or more circumventing it to allow other conveyances.

C of I endowment tops $28 million

CALDWELL (AP) — The College of Idaho's permanent endowment fund has gotten another donation, raising the fund's total to near $28 million.

American Stores Company, of Salt Lake City, has contributed $25,000 to the liberal arts college's endowment fund.

Dennis Bergvall, dean of development at the college, said the grant will establish a named scholarship and award benefiting students attending the J.A. Albertson School of Business.

In making the gift, American Stores Board Chairman L.S. Skaggs, and J.L. Scott, the company's vice chairman and chief executive officer, said the gift was "in recognition of J.A. Albertson's vision, talent and leadership in creating one of America's most successful retail chains."

Idaho Falls man buys 110,000th plate

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — An Idaho Falls man has purchased the 110,000th Centennial license plate.

Jeff A. Ammon bought the plate for his motorcycle. At a special ceremony in Idaho Falls, Centennial Commissioner Robb Brady, retired publisher of the Idaho Post Register, presented Ammon with a boxed set of all seven Centennial commemorative silver medallions as part of a promotion campaign for the plates.

Natural fires will burn in wilderness

BOISE (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service says it will allow prescribed natural fires to burn in the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness, but under more strict guidelines.

The change in policy was made in the recently revised fire management plan approved by Forest Service regional foresters in the Northern and Intermountain Regions.

The Forest service said in a news release the Church-River of No Return Wilderness management plan was evaluated and revised "incorporation improved standards in areas of public information, weather considerations and socio-economic factors."

Board accepts petition from state

LEWISTON (AP) — An interim protected status for segments of the Boise River's North and Middle forks has been approved by the Idaho Water Resource Board meeting in Lewiston.

The board's move Friday drew immediate cheers from the Idaho Conservation League, which had backed the move.

The panel approved a petition filed by the Idaho departments of Fish and Game, and Parks and Recreation seeking such a status.

"The Boise is vitally important to the Boise area for providing a variety of recreational opportunities and we think the board's action in favor of protecting the river is appropriate. We're very excited about it," said Ed Cannady of the league.

Depression a treatable disorder

"It can steal up as insidiously as a November fog, chilling the heart, sapping the will even to get out of bed in the morning," says one author.

It is not a known clinical depression — and it is not to be confused with the everyday "blahs" that most people encounter at one time or another. Clinical depression is something else, a full-scale tumble into the void. It can last for months and recur over years with — at its worst — devastating effects.

"I wonder how much more often we would seek treatment of depression if, when we had it, our skin turned green," says a victim.

But, since our skins don't turn green, the next best option is to become well acquainted with symptoms of depression. If you wonder if you or someone close to you has clinical or chemical depression, look for the symptoms identified on the following checklist.

As you review this list, consider the number, duration and intensity of symptoms, and the toll they are taking, in such forms as missed days at work, wear-and-tear on relationships, or withdrawal from life activities.

The Depression Checklist

1. Sleep disturbance, which may take the form of insomnia, early morning awakening, or chronic oversleeping.
2. Loss of interest in life activities; with little ability to experience pleasure, including pleasure in sex. Difficulty laughing, being cheerful, or finding humor in situations.
3. Nausea or digestive disorders, headaches, backaches, or other chronic pain.
4. Significant anxiety, worry, or nervousness. Sometimes anxiety is accompanied by panic attacks, with such symptoms as feelings of error, hyper-ventilation, heart palpitations, and increased perspiration.
5. Low energy level; fatigue; faintness; dizziness.
6. Restlessness; irritability; low stress tolerance.
7. Rapid mood swings; explosive outbursts; or simply feeling "down-in-the-dumps" and "on the brink" all the time.
8. Excessive emotionality, sometimes with unexplainable crying jags, and/or a pervasive numbness that keeps one from experiencing normal feelings of empathy, caring, or grief.
9. Difficulty concentrating, organizing, or making decisions; poor memory or memory lapses.
10. Difficulty completing tasks, chores or assignments.
11. Withdrawal or isolation from friends, family, or social situations. Withdrawal from a spouse is common, with a victim often questioning whether he or she really still "loves" the other person.
12. Constant over- or under-eating or appetite fluctuations; significant weight gain or loss.

Surgery benefits outweigh scoliosis consequences

By JOAN BEAN Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — To look at 26-year-old Leslie Sims' straight posture it is hard to imagine her spine at one time was curved into an "S" shape because of scoliosis.

When Sims was about 12 years old, she noticed while looking in the mirror that her shoulders were uneven. She was also experiencing severe back pain on a regular basis.

Then at a family gathering at her mother's home in Twin Falls on Christmas, her stepmother noticed that something seemed to be wrong with Sims' back. The young girl was sitting on the floor in front of her, and she could see Sims' right shoulder blade protruding to a marked degree.

After the holiday Sims went to live with her father and stepmother at their home in Salt Lake City, so that if her back required attention she would not be far from the University of Utah Medical Center. At the age of 13, she was examined by Dr. Harold Dunn, chairman of orthopedics at the university, who said she had scoliosis, so severely it required surgery.

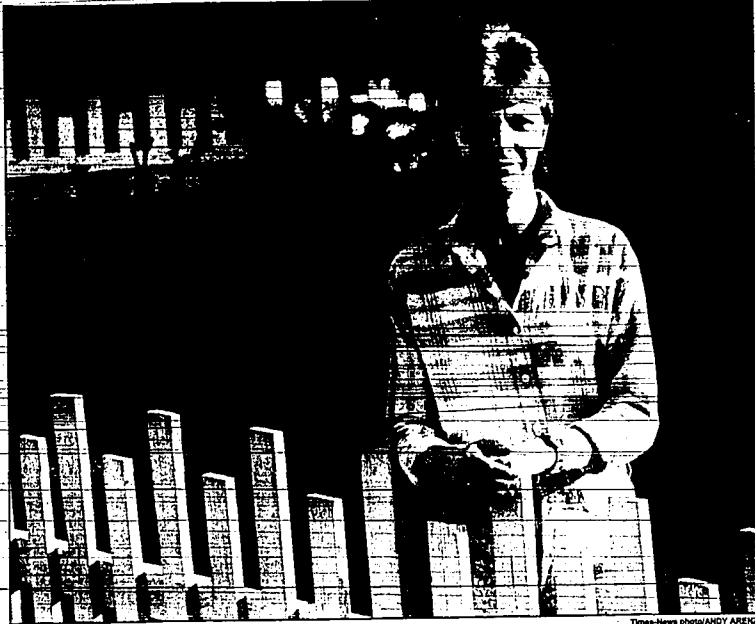

For three months before the operation, she was required to do exercises designed to build up her back muscles. She also had to wear a body brace — an uncomfortable, specially fitted device made of plastic, that went from neck to hips, with a steel rod just below her chin.

Then came the operation to straighten out her back. Her spine was fixed to a stainless steel rod which extends from just below her neck to the lower part of her back. She then wore a body brace for six months.

Sims eventually returned to Twin Falls, and had no further problem with her back until recently, when she began having some pain and stiffness in her neck. "So I had a doctor check it out," she says. "And he said they can't tell for sure from the X-rays, but it could be from the rod being in there for so long that it could be causing some inflammation around it. But it's not all that serious."

Because of the rod, she can only bend from her hips down, cannot slump or crouch down, must sit in straight back chairs, can't lift anything heavy or participate in contact sports. All of this is a small price to pay for what could have occurred if "I was already starting to slump over, and my ribs were starting to cave in," she says. "And if that would have happened, I was told it could have eventually punctured a lung or damaged my heart."

Sims was adjusted to the rod and the limitations it imposes, and she says it does not interfere with having a good life and having fun. And on the plus side, she says she receives compliments because her back is so straight and her clothes fit so well. "There are benefits," she says. "I'm just grateful to be alive — I really am."

Corrective surgery has allowed Leslie Sims to live a near-normal life after being stricken with scoliosis

Twain Falls pediatrician, Dr. Ron Miller, defines scoliosis as a curvature of the spine. "The spine not only curves, but it twists on its axis," he says. "It's that twisting action that causes the spine to curve."

"The most common variety of scoliosis, idiopathic scoliosis, is found at the time of the adolescent growth spurt. There is generally no obvious reason for it to occur — underlying illness.

Twin Falls orthopedic surgeon Dr. Fred Surbaugh, says about 2 percent of the population has a curve of the spine of 10 degrees or less, and that is considered normal. After 20 degrees, he says a brace is used. If the curve can't be held in the range between 20 and 30 degrees, and if it goes over 30 degrees, surgery is sometimes necessary.

Surbaugh says the surgical treatment of scoliosis is a subspecialty of orthopedic surgery. "We brace the children here, and if they are severe enough they need surgery, we refer them to Boise, Salt Lake or Portland for it."

"The public health programs that have been developed to detect scoliosis are aimed at detecting that kind of curvature before it becomes severe, so it can be treated with a brace rather than with surgery," he says.

Scoliosis is generally not noticed by parents. Surbaugh says, because it comes on at a time when children become shy, and do not want to appear undressed in their presence. So, many children are missed, because their parents never see their bare backs — unless they happen to be wearing a swimming suit.

There are subtle signs a parent might watch for, says Kim Kravac, public health nurse with Public Health District-5. She

Study: Acne drug suppresses pre-cancerous growths

The Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — An acne drug can suppress pre-cancerous growths in the mouth for up to a year, a study said.

The work is aimed at suppressing white patches in the mouth called leukoplakia, which can be a precursor of cancers in the mouth, pharynx, larynx and esophagus. Altogether, those cancers afflict 50,000 people a year.

The drug, called isotretinoin or Accutane, shrunk growths significantly for three months and largely prevented progression during the following nine months, said Dr. Scott Lippman.

Lippman, of the M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston, presented his results at a science writers seminar sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

He stressed that his work does not involve women of childbearing age, because of isotretinoin's risk of causing birth defects.

The study, still in progress, has included 58 patients. About 60 percent of patients showed shrinkage of at least half their growths after three months of taking isotretinoin orally every day, Lippman said. After three months, they and the non-responders were randomly assigned to a follow-up therapy of either a lower dose of isotretinoin or doses of another substance called beta carotene.

The two follow-up groups obtained equal shares of non-responders, Lippman said.

In the beta carotene group, 54 percent relapsed over the following nine months. A relapse was defined as growth of the mouth lesion or appearance of new ones.

That relapse was significantly better than what another study found with no follow-up treatment at all, Lippman said.

In contrast, only one relapse has been seen so far among participants in the low-dose isotretinoin group, he said. Sixty percent of these participants improved after

Looking good

Some fresh fall highlights

Chicago Tribune

NEW YORK — An orange chemise — very bright, quite short — may be the easiest way to make a fashion statement come fall.

Fall is really all about how things are put together, unorthodox mixes of fabrics and unexpected combinations: fuzzy fabrics for day-active outerwear, such as parkas and anoraks for night; strapless dresses in the type of beefy wool plaids usually used for daytime suits; sequins on tweed; a checked riding jacket over a lace T-shirt.

It's a story about mixed fabrics in rather simple shapes: long slim jackets or tunics, tarty or straight coats, slim or pleated skirts, sarong draping. The A-line and flared skirts that looked almost radical when Karl Lagerfeld introduced them in Paris just weeks ago look less surprising now, but they are still the newest (and youngest) silhouettes around.

Highlights that look freshest:

- Double duty: Lots of coats or coats, dresses over dresses over bodysuits, shells over fur over jackets over sweaters.
- An emphasis on dresses: Chemises, T-shirt dresses and a continuation of slip dresses.
- The pattern parade: Plaids and checks, sometimes together, appear in every size; other patterns (serrolly, Byzantine, paisley) are more often reserved for beading and evening.
- Black with gold.
- High heels: Especially surprising after Europe, where flats reigned, shoe-hoos with very high heels and short skirts look really racy.

Coats to brighten a gray day

By The Baltimore Sun

When the skies are dripping, your hair is wilting and water is seeping through the soles of your shoes, a basic beige trench coat is not going to do much to lift your spirits.

But one of the new, light, colorful coats — a lavender, fuchsia or a sunny yellow sweep-of-fabric that billows in the wind — could brighten the grayest day.

A model poses in a body hugging two-piece outfit by designer Oscar de la Renta

Now that color is chic once again, designers are putting bright splashes into such formerly sober areas as accessories. Much like the explosion of watches as fashion accessories, raincoats are becoming items to be purchased in multiples — an understated hunter green for the office, a red polka-dot number for fun on the weekends, something elegant in metallic for night.

Available now in the lightest nylon fabrics, the

Senior programs at hospitals

Hotels and cruise lines aren't the only ones offering discounts to senior citizens these days. Many hospitals, too, have programs geared to the elderly, and some have even introduced special membership clubs.

Although the names of hospital clubs vary, they offer many of the same services, according to the American Hospital Association, including monthly newsletters, free checks for blood pressure, breast cancer or osteoporosis, and help filling out Medicare, physician and supplemental insurance forms. Participants may also be able to attend free or discounted health and fitness programs; some clubs offer discounts at the hospital pharmacy, vision center, cafeteria and gift shop, or even reduced rates on trips provided by local travel agencies.

At least one hospital senior-club offers more — the LIFEPASS program at Baptist Medical Center of Oklahoma. (City) Inc. assigns each member an adviser, who is on 24-hour call, to help with medical and non-medical problems. Frequent requests include helping medical problems, frequent requests include helping meals. Baptist Medical Center also has an arrangement with a local taxi company to offer discounts on transportation to the hospital.

Call the public relations or community services office of your local hospitals to find out about their senior programs.

Warding off tooth fractures

Television and radio commercials and print ads make sure we know how to prevent the two most common dental problems — tooth decay and gum disease. But what can be done to ward off the third most common problem, tooth fracture?

Fractures are a major reason patients must have their back teeth, or molars, restored with artificial crowns, says Warren S. Eakle, DDS, associate professor of restorative dentistry at the University of California, San Francisco, School of Dentistry. But recent research done by Eakle and colleagues points to a solution.

In a laboratory study, the UCSF researchers prepared seven pairs of extracted premolars with a silver filling, or amalgam, which was bonded in place with a plastic cement, and seven pairs with amalgam and no cement. They then subjected the teeth to three common stresses: pressure, by means of a mechanical device to simulate biting; temperature extremes, and water submersion. The teeth bonded with cement were able to withstand a significantly greater load of pressure before they fractured than teeth with no bonding treatment.

According to Eakle, plastic cements, or resins; like the type used in the study, help strengthen a tooth by providing both a simple "mechanical attachment" between the filling and the tooth and a "chemical attachment," in which chemical properties of the resin, tooth and filling interlock.

"The lab tests show we're heading in the right direction in making filled teeth more resistant to breaking," concluded Eakle. "Now we need to move on to clinical tests, which we hope to do in the next couple of years."

Diabetes camps for children

Campfires, canoe rides and crafts classes — the thought of summer camp conjures up a rush of memories for many of us. For children with diabetes, the experience can mean all those things and more — a chance to learn about living with their disease in the company of others who share the condition.

About 10,500 young diabetics attended camps across the country last year, according to the American Diabetes Association. The ADA recently announced the availability of its 1990 Camp Directory, which lists 58 resident camps sponsored by ADA affiliate associations and accredited by the American Camping Association. Each of the camps passed a rigorous review by both the ACA and ADA. Trained health personnel are on site to provide and teach up-to-date diabetes management to the campers.

Call your local ADA affiliate or chapter for information on camping programs, including local day camps, and financial assistance ("camperships"), as well as other ADA services. For a free copy of the directory or for a referral, call toll-free (800) ADA-DISC (in Virginia and metropolitan Washington, D.C., call 703-549-1500).

Improve appearance with weightlifting

Aerobic exercise performed at moderate intensity at least three times a week for no less than 20 minutes each session will improve your cardiovascular system and burn fat. But what about toning-up those trouble spots or adding muscle definition to your arms and legs?

Bodilessons

You might want to consider adding weight training to your exercise routine. Weightlifting can enhance your appearance, as well as add strength. Not only will the physical rewards of weight training lift your spirits, but pumping iron can help relieve anxiety and depression.

Rebecca Brown, a professor of physical education at Keene State College in New Hampshire, and Joyce Harrison, a professor of physical education at Brigham Young University, studied 43 women who did weight resistance training for 12 weeks. They found that unlike aerobic exercise, which is believed to lift spirits by increasing endorphin production, weight training has a psychological, rather than physiological effect on mood.

"Although most of the women could feel only marked differences in their bodies, they felt better immediately," says Brown. "Their posture improved, their strength improved, and their self-confidence grew." When you do weight training at home, incorporate this exercise into your program. Push-ups are a great exercise because you can use the weight of your torso as a resistant force and no special equipment is needed.

Reverse push-up described here can be done with or without the aid of a chair or step.

→ Face away from the chair for step.

- Bend your knees and place your hands on the edge of the seat. Your weight should be distributed evenly between your hands and feet.
- Bend your elbows so your body dips downward.
- Straighten your arms so your body returns to the starting level.
- Repeat the movement 10 times. Do not try these movements if you feel discomfort in either the shoulder joints or wrists.

In contrast to unipolar depression, which involves only one pole, bipolar depression involves cycles of depressive lows, alternated with dramatic highs.

The symptoms of bipolar depression in the elation phase include marked and extended elation, severe insomnia, increased talking, disconnected and racing thoughts, increased sexual drive, markedly increased energy, poor judgment, grandiose notions, and inappropriate social behavior.

Note that the elation phase of bipolar depression can be distinct and easily recognizable or, in some cases, may be masked, with bipolar depression presenting as unipolar depression.

If you have long-standing, serious depression, it's wise to solicit both medical treatment and therapy. Experts generally agree, in fact, that both are needed to combat severe depression.

"When a person suffers from a chemical depression, the brain's chemicals are imbalanced... (and in such instances) the brain, as an organ, needs medication just as the liver, heart, or lung needs treatment when there is a problem with them," says Dr. Susan Mithow, a Salt Lake City psychiatrist.

In medicating a depression, Prozac, the first of a new generation of antidepressants out on the market, is a medication to consider. For more information, see a lead article in the March 26, 1990, issue of Newsweek, which features Prozac as a "breakthrough drug for depression."

going on the low dose, he said. Side effects from the initial high-dose treatment included dry skin and lips and an eye condition called conjunctivitis, he said. They were less severe and less frequent on low doses, he said.

The work was financed by the National Cancer Institute. Dr. John Laszlo, the cancer society's senior vice president for research, said the results look promising.

Further work might produce drugs that work as well without isotretinoin's side effects, which can include harm to the liver, he said. Because of side effects, he said he would be worried about people using isotretinoin on their own for fighting cancer.

Dr. Arthur Mashburg of the Veterans Administration Medical Center in East Orange, N.J., said he believed the focus of the study was incorrect. Leukoplakias usually do not progress to cancer, he said, so the leukoplakias that shrink under therapy may not have actually been premalignant.

In a second presentation, a researcher said his work suggests a way to identify breast cancer patients who would not need follow-up treatment after surgery.

Scoliosis

says when a mother finds her daughter's skirts and notices one side always requires a two-inch hem and the other only an inch in order for it to hang straight, this could be a tip-off.

Kvale says in the past the public health nurses in contracting schools have screened sixth- and eighth-graders for scoliosis. And, each year, from about 10,000 kids they examine, only about 10 or 12 are referred to private physicians. "It's a pretty low number... a tremendous amount of time for a low number," she says.

For the screening, Kvale says the child's shoulders and shoulder blades are checked for evenness. And with his arms resting at his sides, the distance is checked between the waist and hanging arms. This is because a child with scoliosis sometimes tips to one side, and one arm will hang out further than the other, resulting in a wider space between the waist and that arm.

They also take a look at the hips to see if they are the same length, because sometimes one leg is longer than the other. This is called compensatory scoliosis, which means the body's trying to compensate for the feeling of tipping over, leans in the other direction to maintain balance.

The person doing the examination has the child put the palms of his hands together as if to dive into a

'Bodies in Motion' starts session

TWIN FALLS — The city-sponsored "Bodies in Motion" exercise class will begin a new six-week session today. The class will be from 6:45 to 7:45 p.m. Monday through Thursday at the Robert Stuart Junior High School gym.

The cost is $20 per person or $10 per couple. A couple may include a parent and a parent-sponsored child. All ages and fitness levels are invited to participate and the first class is free.

The class is instructed by Jacqui Schneidermann who is certified by the I.D.E.A. For more information, call Schneidermann at 473-1796.

Prepared childbirth class offered

TWIN FALLS — A prepared childbirth course for parents due in late May or early June will be Thursday at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

The Lamaze-based series of six classes will be from 7 to 9:30 p.m. in the Women's Health and Education Center conference room, second floor. The course fee is $30.

Designed to prepare parents for childbirth and early parenting, the course includes films, slides and physical question and answer sessions. The expectant mother is asked to wear comfortable pants and to bring two pillows. A support person is encouraged to attend.

Pre-registration is required. To pre-register or for more information, call the Women's Health and Education Center at 737-2900 weekdays, between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Cesarean childbirth class offered

TWIN FALLS — The Magic Valley Regional Medical Center will hold a Cesarean childbirth class from 7 to 9 p.m. April 16 in the conference room, second floor.

The program, designed to help parents learn more about Cesarean childbirth, features a one-session class offered the third Monday every other month. Classes for the rest of the year are June 18, August 20, Oct. 25 and Dec. 10.

Topics covered include the medical indications for a Cesarean birth, hospital procedures, delivery and recovery. The cost is $5. To pre-register, call the Women's Health and Education Center at 737-2900, weekdays between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Recreation registration planned

FILER — The Filer Community Recreation District will hold registration for its summer recreation program from 6:30 to 9 p.m. April 17 and 18 at the Filer Elementary School in the fifth grade activity area.

The summer recreation program will offer baseball, tennis and swimming. The cost is $10 per activity plus the cost of insurance, if needed. The cost of insurance is $8.50. Each participant must bring their birth certificate or proof of age. The cost of each activity after the registration date will be $12.50.

Family communication classes offered

TWIN FALLS — Biweekly classes for "Families in Crisis" will begin Tuesday at the Personal Achievement Center, 128 N. Locust St.

The classes are intended for families that are having a difficult time communicating, who are constantly fighting or who are in the midst of their own "Cold War."

Don Spencer of the Personal Achievement Center says participants will learn the rules to fighting fair, how to listen without being judgmental and how to love without hurting or manipulating one another. Families of all sizes are welcome. The first session is slated for 6 to 8 p.m. Tuesday. A $5 donation is requested per family.

Spencer's Hypnotism Training Institute also plans a seminar, "The Firewalk Experience," on Friday from 6 to 9:30 p.m. According to Spencer, participants will learn to control their emotions, gain confidence, act from choice instead of fear and overcome the fear of change.

Fee for the seminar is $75, with a $25 deposit due Tuesday. Visa and Mastercard are accepted.

For more information on either program, call 734-1237.

Age no handicap in pursuit of advanced degree

DEAR ABBY: I can top both Danny and Patricia, the college dropouts who in their middle years went back to college, picked up where they left off and finally graduated.

At age 66, determined to graduate from college, I went to school evenings and during the summer. Shortly before my 65th birthday, I earned my college degree and teaching credentials. (I had six grandchildren at the time. Now I have nine.)

I taught kindergarten until I was forced to retire because of age requirements. I immediately went to work as a medical insurance clerk. I will be 80 on my next birthday and I'm already looking for places to work as a volunteer when I retire.

Last fall I took a course in sign language at our local university because I would very much enjoy working with hearing-impaired persons. Abby, please continue to encourage older people to keep on learning. It's never too late.

— MARGARET M. HILL, VICTORIA, TEXAS

DEAR MARGARET: With your

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

energy, ambition and charitable attitude, you will never be "over the hill." (Sorry, I couldn't resist it.) Congratulations, Margaret. Better to wear out than rust out.

DEAR ABBY: Although I missed the letter that inspired all the others concerning tall women and their attitudes toward shorter men, I have read many letters since then and can't understand the animosity some tall women and short men feel toward each other.

I am an average-sized man and, at one time or another, I've been out-run, outlived, outswam, outtalked and outsmarted by a member of the opposite sex. I'll admit that at the time, I was humiliated, but as I grew older and wiser, I became fascinated by what remarkable creatures women are, and I finally had to recognize that women should be treated as equals. I must admit that my relationships with women have vastly improved since I came to this realization.

I have always been physically attracted to women who were stronger, faster, smarter or taller than I. My most memorable sexual experience occurred after my wife beat me in a long-distance foot race! Please let exceptionally tall women know that there are small and average-height men who would be honored to be in their company.

— 5 FOOT 9 1/2 IN. N.Y.

DEAR 5-9: Thanks for the reaffirmation. I recently had a letter from a 5-foot-7 man who had a crush on a 5-foot-11 co-worker, but he was reluctant to ask her out because he felt sure she would turn him down. Well, she asked him out, and it was instant shooting stars, Roman candles and love in bloom!

DEAR ABBY: I am making a scrapbook for my son. I have a box full of newspaper clippings and pictures from his high school days. He and his wife were divorced eight years ago, and I am wondering if it would be proper to include the clippings and pictures of his wedding, honeymoon, etc.

He doesn't have anything to do with his ex-wife now, except dealings concerning their daughter.

DEAR WONDERING: How wise and considerate you are to "wonder." I suggest you ask your son how he feels about it.

DEAR ABBY: I couldn't feel very sorry for "Nobody's Valentine," the woman who complained because in the three years they'd been married, her husband had never given her anything for St. Valentine's Day. I wonder what she gave him? Nothing, probably.

As a veteran wife of six years, I can give lessons on how a wife can get what she wants. It's just like making love: Do to him what you want him to do to you.

What's what

Best seat on plane?
That place in the airplane where you're least apt to suffer from sickness is the aisle seat on the right side of the forward edge of the wing. Or so contends an expert.

"Yo Yo" used to be a trademarked name. Not anymore. Now anybody can use it. To promote a toy. Describe an elevator. Nickname a nephew. Whatever.

Ballet has a basic law. It's "aplomb." In that, "aplomb" means perfect balance.

Can't tell you the all-time favorite song in China. but one of the favorites over the years has been Stephen Foster's "Swanee River."

Q. What do Eskimos use for tooth-picks?
A. Walrus whiskers. Or once did.

Pinnacot 1652 as the start of this country's dairy industry. The Dutch brought over the first Holstein cows then. Now 90 percent of our dairy cows are Holsteins. Some year-in Paris, entrepreneurs set up the world's first department store, the Bon Marche. And more fresh immigrants got here than in any other year.

"NESTING"
Q. In air travel, what's "nesting"?
A. Buying two round-trip excursion fares, each pair requiring a layover. No. 1 from home to destination, No. 2 from destination to home. The "nester" goes on the first half of No. 1 and comes back on the first half of No. 2. And still has a second-half pair for another trip. Or for sale. Whichever.

In an eyeball-to-eyeball confrontation with a snake, you'll be the first to blink. "A snake can't."

Get the correct time in Boston, you can dial N-E-R-V-O-U-S.

Among those birds that survive on worms is the Cactus Wren. Invariably a late sleeper, please note.

A horsepower is about the power of a horse and a half, actually.

PAINTER

It's reported the American artist John Marin roughed in brayon images with the left hand while brushing on color with the right, eagerly painting with both hands. I've seen babies eat cookies that way. Remarkable.
